College-Fraternity Day, July 20, 1893 at the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago

The delegates from the College-Fraternity Congress, meeting at the Art Institute on Michigan Boulevard in Chicago, set apart this day for a visit to the Fair, and the woman members of the congress entertained the visiting Greeks at a reception in the afternoon at the New York Building.

In the evening all gathered around the music pavilion on the Lake Front, where college songs were sung, society calls were shouted, and college airs were played by the Cincinnati band. About one thousand delegates were present, nearly every college in the United States being represented.
