Delaware and West Virginia Day, August 23, 1893 at the Worlds Columbian Exposition, Chicago.

Delaware and West Virginia united in a celebration, dividing the honors equally. Governor R. J. Reynolds, of Delaware, and Governor W. A. MacCorkle, of West Virginia, were present with their staffs.

DELAWARE STATE BUILDING.

Both presided at the ceremonies at Festival Hall in the afternoon, alternately introducing the speakers from their respective commonwealths. Among the latter were the Hon. Stephen B. Elkins, of West Virginia, and Senator Anthony Higgins, of Delaware. Colonel J. W. St. Clair represented the National Commission from the former State, and Judge George V. Massey from the latter. In the evening brilliant receptions were given at both State houses. The peach growers of Delaware sent seven hundred and fifty baskets of their finest fruit, which was distributed to all comers.
