Part III.

TOWNS AND TOWNSHIPS.

A town is a political, a township a physical, division. They are often confounded, and in deference to popular custom townships have been, in some instances, referred to as towns in this history. Townships are squares of land, each containing thirty-six sections, laid off by United States surveyors for convenience in describing land. So far as this governmental survey is concerned, they have no names, and are designated only by their distance from principal meridians and base lines. Towns, on the contrary, have come to us from the political system of New England. They are units of government. Whenever a county adopts township (really town) organization three commissioners are appointed to lay out the towns. Then the voters in each town meet and choose a town name. Therefore, in naming their towns the voters simply named the townships in which they lived. Thus Indian Point town exactly coincides with Township 9 North, Range 1 East. Yet it is absolutely incorrect ever to speak of Indian Point township, or of town 9 North, Range 1 East.

Knox County contains twenty townships, and for some years had the same number of towns. But, owing to the division of Galesburg into the town and city of that name, it now has twenty-one.

RIO TOWNSHIP.

By E. H. Goldsmith.

This portion of Knox County is situated in the extreme northwest corner, the greater part of it consisting of good farming land, being well drained by Pope Creek, which flows through the northern tier of sections, and various branches of Henderson River. About one-fourth of the township was originally composed of timbered land, that bordering on Pope Creek being rather poor in quality, while, on the contrary, the timber along Henderson River was excellent. Coal has been mined to a limited extent in this locality. Stock-raising was formerly the principal agricultural pursuit, but of late years that industry has been superseded by the raising of grain, there being at present 19,800 acres of improved land, much of which has been increased in value by tilling.

From all available records it would appear that Joseph Rowe was the first white man to settle in the township, his arrival being closely followed by Reece Jones and Joseph Halliday, while John Cresswell came to Section 27 in 1832. A stockade, the erection of which was made necessary by the Black Hawk War, was, in honor of Mrs. Cresswell, called "Fort Aggie." John R. Woolley located a claim here in 1832, and Samuel Brown arrived in 1834. The latter states that very little land was under cultivation at that time. The following pioneers settled in the township in 1836: Isaac M. Wetmore; John F. Wikoff, who journeyed from Ohio on horseback and erected a cabin in the woods west of the present homestead; George W. Weir; Elsie Robertson, who once saw a drove of more than fifty deer in this vicinity; Larkin Robertson; Nelson and Lewis Coe; Samuel Melton; and P. W. Epperson. Luther Fitch came in 1840, Eber Moor and John L. Bloomfield arrived in 1845, and the Maxwell family were also early settlers. John B. Edar first located in Knox County in 1832, removing to Rio in 1867. Alexander Heflin was born in Rio, and Mrs. Heflin's grandfather, John McMurtry, participated in the Black Hawk War. Among the pioneer business men were the Robson brothers, who were engaged extensively in cattle raising. Their sales averaged $400,000 annually for seven years.

April 5, 1835, witnessed the birth in the township of the first white child, Thomas Marion Goff. On December 29, 1836, was celebrated the first marriage, that of Allen S. Brown and Mary (Polly) McMurtry, the latter of whom still survives. The first death was that of Mrs. Mary Williamson McMurtry.

This part of Knox County was at one time called North Prairie, but when the citizens met on January 14, 1850, to name the township, Rio Grande was on every tongue—the Mexican War having just come to a successful termination—and the first part of that name was suggested as being appropriate to this region, more particularly so by reason of the numerous streams with which it abounds. The meeting, however, adjourned, leaving the question to be decided by the county officials, and they, at the solicitation of Lewis Coe, determined on Rio as their choice.

The first town election was held April 5, 1853, one hundred and four votes being cast for the following successful candidates: Reuben Heflin, Supervisor; Paul Hahn, Clerk; Lewis Goff, Assessor; Daniel Robertson, Collector; Josephus Hahn, Overseer of the Poor; Larkin Robertson, Justice of the Peace; W. D. Epperson, Constable; Samuel Brown, John Gibson and T. J. Jones, Highway Commissioners.

The first school in the township was taught by Mrs. Cresswell, at her home. There are now nine school districts, comprising one graded and eight ungraded schools, each of them having a library. Of the former Miss Mary E. Maley is principal, and Miss Mary A. Hurst assistant, the enrolment numbering fifty pupils. The nine frame buildings devoted to educational purposes are valued at $5,560, and the libraries at $287. Of three hundred and fifty-nine persons under twenty-one years of age, one hundred and eighty-seven attend the public schools.

VILLAGES.

Rio Village was platted in 1871 by William Robinson, and was first called Coburg, in honor of the Coe brothers. The pioneer store was built and conducted by Messrs. Schroeder and Owens. The postoffice was originally called North Prairie, Nelson Coe being the first postmaster. The present incumbent of that position is Frederick A. Landon, a very efficient and courteous official. The business interests of the village are in the hands of competent and energetic merchants. H. F. Schroeder and Company have a fine line of dry goods and groceries, while Sexton and Landon have been in the same business for about five years. Lobar and Junk supply the people with hardware and furniture; S. S. Bair conducts a grocery and notion store; James G. Mansfield deals in lumber and hardware; C. F. Peters carries on a restaurant; Mead and Mead, a meat market; and the Misses Junk and Fisher a millinery establishment. The Rio Hotel is under the management of J. Van Arsdale; David Eiken is the village smith, and also keeps a wagon shop; and the elevator, which does an extensive business, is operated by Fraser and Graham.

Fraternally, Rio Township is well represented. Blue Lodge, No. 685, A. F. and A. M., was chartered October 1, 1872, by D. C. Cregier, G. M.; O. N. Miner, Secretary; Robert Deatherage, Master; Alexander Heflin, S. W.; William Hair, J. W.; and the following charter members: Joshua Bruner, M. Conley, F. A. Landon, Robert Robson, W. D. Wright, J. B. Edgar, D. Robertson, C. I. Epperson, G. M. Wetmore, J. Shankholtzer, R. Allgeyer, and M. S. Shepherd. The present officers are: M. Dickerson, Master; Dr. J. N. Cox, S. W.; D. L. Rowe, J. W. There are sixty-eight members.

Horeb Chapter, No. 4, A. F. and A. M., was organized October 14, 1850, with these officers: G. C. Lanphere, High Priest; E. S. Cooper, King; J. M. Witt, Scribe. The charter was issued by W. B. Warren and J. E. Anderson. The present officers are: L. J. Smith, High Priest; Frank Campbell, King; N. Moody, Scribe. The membership numbers one hundred.

The Rio Lodge I. O. O. F., has twenty-five members and occupies its own hall. The first officers were: L. S. Whitcomb, N. G.; H. E. Whipple, V. G.; William Van Tassell, Secretary; J. C. McMurtry, Treasurer. The officers now serving are: D. Deatherage, N. G.; S. Lovis, V. G.; G. A. Wier, Secretary; A. Larson, Treasurer.

Rio Camp, Modern Woodmen, holds its meetings in Odd Fellows Hall. The charter members numbered sixteen and the initial officers were: E. H. Schrieber, V. C.; C. F. Peterson, C.; B. G. Peterson, B.; J. C. Egan, W. A. The present officers are: E. J. Tye, V. C.; C. F. Peterson, C.; J. W. Epperson, B.; Monie Almgren, W. A. The Camp now has twenty-five members.

Chapter No. 313, O. E. S., was organized August 2, 1895, with twenty-one members and these officers: Lizzie Schreiber, W. M.; J. P. son, Secretary; Josephine Smith, Treasurer. The present officers are: Mary McMurtry, W. M.; Adam Littlefield, W. P.; Josephine Smith, A. M.; Lois Epperson, Secretary; Ella Bair, Treasurer. There are now fifty-two members, who meet in the Masonic Hall.

The Home Forum has a flourishing Camp in Rio.

ONTARIO TOWNSHIP.

By A. D. Metcalf.

Lying in the northern tier of townships in Knox County, Ontario, stretches out, a broad expanse of almost unbroken prairie. There are few streams, and the only hill is Pilot Knob. This rises to a considerable elevation above the surrounding country, and probably received its name from the circumstance that it can be seen for a distance of several miles. A grove of about eighty acres nearly covers it, and is the only growth of natural timber found in the township. Notwithstanding the fact that it lies some two miles to the south of the "Galena Trail," the number of arrow heads found in the vicinity has given rise to the belief that this hill was once a favorite camping ground for the Indians.

The first settler was Alexander Williams, who broke and fenced in twenty acres of land on the northwest quarter of Section 30, in 1833. This property was subsequently purchased by I. M. Wetmore. In 1833, also came George W. Melton, who took up his home on Section 31, living on the same farm for nearly sixty years, and dying there in 1891. Three years after his arrival he married, and his daughter, Elizabeth—now Mrs. Ralph Voris—was the first white child born in the township. Other early settlers were the families of the Wetmores, Cranes, Chapmans, Camps, Hollisters, Savages, Mosher, and Powells most of whom had emigrated from Oneida County, New York.

Rude as were their surroundings, these pioneers did not lose sight of the paramount importance of education for their children, and as early as 1839 the first school house was built. It was known as the "Camp school-house," and was located on the northwest quarter of Section 22. Its first teacher was Sally Ann Belden, of Center Point, and among the earliest pupils and teachers were Loula Burt, James Hammond and Harvey Powell, with the lady who is now Mr. Powell's wife. The building was also utilized for the holding of religious services, Rev. S. G. Wright usually officiating. A Sunday school was also taught here, being first organized in the Spring of 1841 and Ward K. Hammond being its first Superintendent.

Prior to 1840, the people depended upon Knoxville for both the receipt and sending of mail matter. In that year the first postoffice in Ontario township was opened, with Edward Hollister as postmaster.

Trading facilities in those early days were decidedly poor. Farmers hauled their grain to Peoria by wagon, and frequently drove their live stock to Chicago on the hoof. A general store was opened in the southeast quarter of Section 30 about 1840; and in 1845, I. M. Wetmore opened a store for the sale of dry goods only on the same section, driving to New York the year before and bringing back his stock by teams. The building in which Mr. Wetmore conducted his business is still standing, on the farm of Norman Fay. Another general store was opened about 1853, by Miles and St. John. Its original location was at the point known as Ontario Corners, but in the Autumn of the following year the firm removed to Oneida. Their first store building is now owned by L. B. Shedd.

A noteworthy occurrence in the township's early history was a violent disturbance of the elements, which is still well remembered by many of the older citizens as "the great storm of June 5, 1844." Nearly every house was unroofed, and it is said that on the farm of T. E. P. Wetmore only two fence posts were left standing, while throughout the entire region the loose soil which had been turned over by the plowshare was sent swirling through the air in eddying, blinding clouds. One eyewitness, Ezra Chapman, describes the storm's general appearance as resembling a wheel, about one hundred feet in diameter, rapidly rotating and advancing at the same time.

Township organization was effected April 3, 1853, at a meeting where I. M. Wetmore was Moderator and W. J. Savage, Clerk. Previous to that time Ontario had been associated with Rio as a voting precinct. The first election resulted in the choice of Edward Crane as Supervisor; E. P. Brott, Collector; W. J. Savage, Clerk; John Burt, Assessor; T. E. P. Wetmore, Overseer of the Poor; G. W. Melton, James Hammond and John Powell, Commissioners of Highways; J. W. Crane and E. C. Brott, Constables; Ezra Chapman and S. E. Mosher, Justices of the Peace. The first officer to dispense justice in a minor court had been Royal Hammond. The name "Ontario" was selected in memory of the lake near whose bosom many of the early settlers had had their home in childhood and youth.

The present officers are: G. L. Stevenson, Supervisor; L. W. Ewing, Clerk; L. E. Olson, Assessor; C. E. Bennett, Collector; G. E. Fredricks, John M. Peterson and C. B. Wetmore, Commissioners of Highways.

It is a fact worth mentioning that the roads of this township, with one exception, are all on the center lines.

Reference has already been made to the anxiety of the settlers to establish schools. They were no less ready to make sacrifices for the advancement of religion. The first church organization to be formed was that of the Presbyterians, in 1840, but this is now extinct. A Congregational Church was founded August 12, 1848, with seventeen members, the first pastor being Rev. D. Todd. A building was erected, and dedicated (November 4) in 1851. The congregation also owns a comfortable parsonage. Rev. Charles Slater is the present pastor. In 1851, a "Union" church edifice was erected, which, three years later, passed into the hands of the Baptists, who still control it. Rev. R. M. Wilbur was the first, and Rev. William H. Dickman is the present, pastor. In 1866, the Christian denomination built a church edifice in Section 2, at a cost of two thousand dollars. This was thirteen years after the organization of the society, by Samuel Croy. A parsonage is situated conveniently to the church, and the minister in charge of the fold is Rev. G. A. Brown. Some detailed reference to the churches in Oneida will be found in the paragraphs devoted to the history of that city.

The township is strongly republican in politics, and in the ante-bellum days was intensely anti-slavery in sentiment. The old "underground railway" ran through it, Galesburg and Cambridge being important stations on the line. In Ontario, Horace Powell, and C. F. Camp may be said to have occupied the positions of conductor and depot-master respectively.

During the War of the Rebellion the people were fervently loyal. One hundred and ninety-six men went to the front from Ontario Township. Several of them achieved distinction, and many never returned. Some of the commissioned officers who rose from lower places were Brevet Brigadier General F. S. Smith, Brigadier General David R. Clendenin, Colonel N. H. Walworth, and Captain O. Powell, while to give a detailed record of individual valor would be well-nigh tantamount to duplicating the roster of enlistment. The women of the township were no less devoted than the men, and Ontario gained an enviable prominence in the record of hospital supplies sent forward to the defenders of the integrity of the Nation.

The following named citizens of the township have represented the legislative district in the General Assembly: A. S. Curtis, 1878-80; O. P. Cooley, 1884-90; Frank Murdoch, 1892-98.

ONEIDA.

The city lies in the southeastern part of Ontario Township. Charles F. Camp may be said to have been its first resident, and it was he who platted the original village, on September 1, 1854, in connection with B. S. West and S. V. R. Holmes. Before Christmas of that year it had become a railway station, and a hotel was built the same winter. The first house in Oneida, however, was built by Jackson Rogers, and is now owned by Rev. Mr. Swansen. The growth of the early town was very gradual, there being only eight resident families at the end of its first year. These were those of C. F. Camp, J. J. Rodgers, C. W. Robertson, John Kenny, S. Cooley, John Eckley, M. Osgood and E. Child. The promoters of the enterprise, however, were not idle. A monster Fourth-of-July picnic was held in 1855, at which between nine and ten thousand persons were present, and dinner was free to all comers.

The question of incorporation as a village was agitated early, having been discussed at a meeting held on December 3, 1858. It was then resolved to submit it to popular vote on December 24, and the ballot stood forty-seven in favor of and eighteen against incorporation. On January 7 following, trustees were elected as follows: C. F. Camp, H. L. Sage, J. M. Brown, J. M. Henning and W. B. LeBaron, the gentleman last named being subsequently chosen president of the Board by his fellow members.

In 1869 the General Assembly incorporated Oneida as a city, with greatly extended municipal limits. The officers chosen at the first charter election, held April 5, 1869, were: F. G. Jelliff, Mayor; George H. Vorce, City Clerk; J. A. Pratt, Police Magistrate; and G. L. Stephenson, Marshal. The first Board of Aldermen was composed of D. D. Martin, R. Bristol, E. J. Petersen and E. Bennett. One of the beneficent provisions of the charter was the prohibition of the sale of liquor within the city limits, the good effect of which is shown in the character of the residents who have been drawn to the city and in the good order which prevails. The present city officers are: L. M. Nash, Mayor;

James W. Crane

and L. W. Ewing, Clerk. Aldermen: Frank Hosler, Frank Epperson, James McGrath, T. Haon, William Stephenson and Dr. Z. H. McClanahan. A Board of Education is also in office, composed of D. McConchie, President; F. S. Stephenson, Secretary; J. R. Mitchell, D. W. Westland and H. W. Crane.

Oneida was made a postoffice in 1854, with C. F. Camp as postmaster. The first school house was built in 1855, Mary Allen West being the teacher. It was known as the "South" School, and the building was used for all sorts of purposes. In fact, so various were the uses to which it was put that it came to be popularly called "Freedom Hall." On week-day evenings it was always available for political meetings, singing schools or itinerant shows; while on Sundays the members of three different denominations praised God—with more or less regular alternation—beneath its roof. The building was ultimately bought by the Adventists, who used it as a house of worship for several years, until their organization disbanded.

Something has been already said in reference to the church history of the township, but it may be supplemented by a very brief reference to churches in Oneida. On May 4, 1863, a Presbyterian church was organized, under authority of the Presbytery of Schuyler, at the school house in District No. 3. In 1865, it was reorganized at Oneida. The congregation erected a house of worship, which was blown down in 1868 but soon afterwards rebuilt, and a parsonage added. In all, Oneida has had five churches, three of which are still extant. The Lutherans organized a church there in 1863, with Rev. S. G. Abraham as pastor. It had once twenty-five members, but has ceased to exist. The Universalists developed some strength as the town grew, but their house of worship was burned in January, 1867. It was rebuilt, but was later destroyed by a tornado. The same storm lifted the Baptist meeting-house from its foundation, and neither of these structures was ever repaired. A Congregational church was organized on December 22, 1852, by a council consisting of J. Blanchard, who presided; Rev. Dr. Edward Beecher, Rev. Jeremiah Parker and others. A church building was erected in 1855 at a cost of about four thousand dollars, and the congregation has since built a parsonage, at an outlay of twenty-five hundred dollars. The first pastor was Rev. H. C. Abernethy, who remained in Oneida for ten years. Rev. W. S. Pritchard is the present minister.

The Methodists formed a church organization, under the direction of Rev. R. N. Moore, but did not build a church until 1863. The structure then erected cost three thousand, five hundred dollars. Rev. L. P. Crouch was the first, and Rev. Mr. Graves is the present pastor.

The city supports an excellent graded school, which enjoys a well deserved reputation for the character of the work done. The building is of brick, two stories in height, with a basement of stone, and is heated by steam. It was erected in 1870, at a cost of fourteen thousand dollars. R. V. Field is the Principal, and the corps of assistants is composed of Misses Ella Rowe, Lizzie Talbot and Mary Gavin.

There are two grain elevators, one of which is owned and operated by G. W. Barnett, while the other (known as the Farmers' Elevator) is owned by farmers and conducted by L. B. DeForest, under a lease.

Banking facilities are afforded by the Oneida State Bank and the firm of Anderson and Murdoch. The former was incorporated under the State banking law in 1891, with a paid-up capital of $25,000. Its stockholders number twenty-three. A. D. Metcalf is President; G. K. Pittard, Vice President; and W. D. Patty, Cashier. The old Oneida Exchange Bank was a private institution, and was founded in 1857 by O. Sharp. He soon disposed of his banking business by a sale to W. L. Hubbard. The latter removed to Chicago in 1867, and the bank passed into the hands of J. B. Conyers, who sold it, in 1872, to J. N. Conger. In 1877 it was bought by A. B. Anderson and Frank Murdoch, who have conducted it ever since under their firm name.

The people of Oneida are both enterprising and prosperous. Three times the business part of the city has been laid in ashes, and three times the courage of the citizens has proved equal to the task of restoration. Pleasant, well-cared for homes are numerous, and the inhabitants exhibit great interest in preserving the reputation for beauty which the place enjoys.

The history of journalism in Oneida is of especial interest. The first paper to appear was the Oneida News, which was started, in 1876, by a boy named Arthur W. Ladd, and the issue was "run off" on a three dollar press. In 1882 J. C. Montgomery began publishing the Oneida and Neighborhood News. In 1883

T. B. Phillips bought this paper, and changed its name to the Oneida News. Three years afterward he recovered it to Montgomery, and subsequently it was discontinued. The Oneida Dispatch was founded by O. B. Kail and D. C. Porter in 1880. In 1882 Kail (who had bought Porter's interest in the business) began the publication of the Woodhull Dispatch. In 1886, M. A. Chesly bought out Mr. Kail; and in 1894 he took B. J. Dunlap into partnership, and in 1895 the name again became the Oneida Dispatch. In 1897 Chesly and Dunlap sold out to Burgess and White.

Various societies have lodges, or branches, at Oneida. The Masonic Order established its first lodge on March 26, 1860, and is in a flourishing condition. The lodge owns the fine brick building in which its handsomely furnished hall is situated. The present officers are: F. Murdoch, M.; John Anderson, S. W.; Albert Miller, J. W.; Frank McConchie, S. D.; Thomas Hosler, J. D.; A. J. Miller, Secretary; A. B. Anderson, Treasurer; and R. Mihoy, T.

The I. O. O. F. first appeared on October 15, 1857. The charter was surrendered in 1861, but the lodge was reinstalled June 3, 1874. The present officers are: O. L. Higgins, N. G.; Nels Newlander, V. G.; L. W. Ewing, Secretary; A. B. Anderson, Treasurer.

The order of the Eastern Star also has a flourishing lodge, chartered January 15, 1889, with twelve members. The present membership numbers thirty-five. The first officers were: Miss Kittie Brainard, W. M.; C. G. Graved, W. P.; Mrs. Eliza Hosler, A. M.; F. T. Prouty, Secretary. The present officers are: Mrs. J. B. Colton, W. M.; E. Marche, W. P.; Mrs. E. L. Miller, A. M.; G. L. Stephenson, Treasurer; W. A. Brainard, Secretary.

The Oneida Camp of the Modern Woodmen of America was chartered May 25, 1888, with nine members. This membership has been increased to eighty. The first officers were: A. McConchie, V. C.; G. E. Barnett, W. A.; Henry Clifford, E. B.; S. C. Whitcomb, C. The present officers are: H. W. Crane, V. C.; J. W. Talbot, W. A.; L. E. Olson, E. B.; W. S. Crane, C.

There is also a branch of the Home Forum at Oneida. The charter members numbered twelve, and the present membership is seventeen. The officers are: G. L. Stephenson, President; S. C. Whitcomb, Vice President; F. Whitcomb, Historian; S. C. Whitcomb, Medical Examiner; A. R. St. John, Secretary.

JUDSON WRIGHT ALLEN.

Judson Wright Allen, son of Barber and Mary (Chappel) Allen, was born in Cayuga County, New York, June 14, 1830. Barber Allen was born in Massachusetts, and was a soldier in the War of 1812. J. W. Allen received his education in Galesburg. His first effort at self-support was when, in the early pioneer days, as a teamster he hauled pork from Galesburg to Peoria. He afterwards bought a farm of four hundred acres in Ontario Township, part of which he later disposed of, and bought land near Oneida, to which he gradually added, until he owned a farm of 330 acres of improved land. Mr. Allen was married in Knox County December 4, 1856, to Nancy W. Kiger. Four children have been born to them: William L.; Mrs. Mary Mitchell; Mrs. Jessie E. Kourthour; and Mrs. R. Rose Brainard, who died at the age of twenty-one. Mr. Allen is a well informed and broad-minded man. Among his many interests, aside from his duties as a progressive and up-to-date farmer, may be mentioned the subject of education, to the advancement of which he has given much time and attention. He is a member of the Congregational Church, of which he was a trustee for twelve years. In politics, he is a republican, and was Supervisor for four years, 1882 to 1886, during which period the present handsome court house at Galesburg was erected. He has been Alderman of Oneida for twelve years, which is but one of the many evidences he has received of the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens.

HENRY WETMORE CRANE.

Henry Wetmore Crane, son of James W. and Cornelia L. (Wetmore) Crane, was born in Ontario Township, Knox County, Illinois, July 7, 1859. The family is of English descent, their history in this country dating back to early times in New England. The parents of James W. Crane were born in Connecticut, and settled, immediately after their marriage, in Oneida County, New York. James W. was the fourth child and second son in a family of six children. The family came to Ontario Township in June, 1837, and settled on an unbroken prairie, where they made a farm, and where the father of James W. died in 1848, and the mother in 1854. The parents of Cornelia L. Wetmore lived and died in New York State, where her father was a successful merchant. She came to Knox County about two years before her marriage.

Henry W. Crane was the oldest son, and was educated in the Oneida High School, and in Knox College, Galesburg. He was married in Henry County, Illinois, September 25, 1882, to Carrie Wood Stickney; they have three children: Zina S., Mary Ann and James Henry. Mrs. Crane's parents were Henry and Mary (Wood) Stickney, old residents of Henry County, now deceased. Mrs. Crane was born in Henry County, and received her education in Knox College, Galesburg.

Mr. Crane was one of the organizers of the Oneida State Bank, and has ever since been on its Board of Directors and also a member of the Finance Committee; he is also a farmer, or, more especially, a manager of farms, as he rents his own farm and that of his wife, and resides in Oneida, of which place he has been a prominent citizen since 1888. He keeps his land in a high state of cultivation by rotation of crops, having always at least one-third of the area in pasture, or meadow, and taking a share of the crop instead of a money rent, has proved for him an element of success.

In politics, Mr. Crane is independent. He has been a member of the Board of Education, an Alderman and Mayor, to which office he was elected in 1895, and which, by re-election, he has held to the present time. He is a member of the Baptist Church of Ontario, and is a thoroughgoing, progressive, public spirited citizen.

JAMES WILSON CRANE.

James Wilson Crane, son of Zina and Harriet (Hall) Crane, was born in Marcy, Oneida County, April 20, 1829. His parents were born in Durham, Connecticut, and died in Knox County, the father aged sixty-three and the mother fifty-eight years. His paternal grandparents were Frederick and Anna (Babcock) Crane, and on his mother's side, Luther and Harriet Hall, all of whom were born in Connecticut.

Zina Crane, before coming West with his family in June, 1837, purchased three hundred and twenty acres of unbroken prairie land in Knox County, to which he added one hundred and sixty acres of timber land. In coming to Knox County he followed the example of Rev. George W. Gale, of Oneida County, and one of the founders of Galesburg. He assisted in the organization of Ontario Township, and was interested in educational matters, and with Charles F. Camp, now deceased, built the first school house near Ontario Corners. In politics he was a whig.

James W. Crane came with his father to Knox County and became a farmer and stock-raiser. He attended the common schools for a short time, but received the principal part of his education by his own efforts. He was married in Ontario Township, May 29, 1854, to Cornelia L. Wetmore, daughter of Jesse and Louise (Holmes) Wetmore. She was born in Oneida County, New York, September 5, 1833. They have three children, Henry W., now living in Oneida; Frank, a resident of Cummings, Traill County, North Dakota; and Carl S., now living at the old homestead.

In early times Mr. Crane drove his stock to Galena, thirty or forty days being required to make the trip. He at one time added one hundred and fifty turkeys to his drove of hogs which were killed and sold to the miners. It is said that Mr. Crane is the oldest resident of Ontario Township; he is certainly one of the best known and most influential farmers in Knox County. He has a farm of two hundred and forty acres of choice land, a fine residence, and convenient farm buildings. He has been very successful in his business, and formerly had large land interests in North Dakota, which he sold to his son Frank, who resides in that State.

In politics, Mr. Crane is independent. He is an attendant of the Unitarian Church. He has traveled extensively in the United States, is broad and liberal in his views, and is greatly respected and honored wherever he is known.

JOSEPH FISHER.

Joseph Fisher, son of David and Jane (Morris) Fisher, was born May 27, 1831, in Somersetshire, England. His parents were of English birth, and came to Summit County, Ohio, when Joseph was three years old. In 1838 the family removed to Mercer County, Illinois, and in 1841 they settled in Clover Township, Henry County, where the father ran a saw mill. After the death of his father, and his burial in Andover Cemetery, which occurred in January, 1844, Joseph and his mother came to Knox County, settling first in Sparta Township, but later purchased a farm of eighty acres in Ontario Township, where the mother died, aged seventy-four years.

Joseph Fisher was educated in the common schools of Ohio and Illinois. He was married October 20, 1852, to Emily, daughter of Woodford Fisher, of Kentucky, who was an old settler of Knox County. She died November 15, 1888, aged fifty-four years, leaving an adopted daughter, Nellie.

Mr. Fisher was again married, October 30, 1890, in Knox County, to Elizabeth, daughter of Vile and Jane (Kember) Pittard, who came from England to Chicago in 1854, and in 1855 removed to Knox County, where they died in Ontario Township.

Mr. Fisher and his wife own eighty and one hundred and sixty acres of land, respectively, in tracts adjoining each other, making a fine farm of two hundred and forty acres. He has been a farmer all his life. He is a republican and has held several local offices. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher attend the Ontario Congregational Church, of which Mrs. Fisher is a member.

GUSTAV ERIC FREDERICKS.

Gustav Eric Fredericks, son of Charles and Inga Charlotte Fredericks, was born October 23, 1852, in the Province of Ostergotland, Sweden. His parents were both born in Sweden, his father in Ostergotland. He came with his parents to this country, reaching Knox County, Illinois, July 17, 1857. They lived two years in Galesburg, and then moved to Soperville, Henderson Township, where they resided on a timber farm from 1859 to 1867, when they removed to Log City, remaining there until 1870, then they removed to Ontario Township, where they bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres for $13,000. In 1878 the parents removed to Altona, Walnut Grove Township. Gustav E. bought the farm on Section 11, adjoining the old homestead, in 1896, where he now resides. The father was a very successful farmer, and owned five hundred and twenty acres of land. He lives in Altona, aged eighty-two years, respected and honored by all who know him. His wife died January 11, 1892, aged seventy-four years.

Gustav E. Fredericks was married in Ontario Township, February 26, 1876, to Ida Matilda Walgreen, daughter of Nels P. and Johanna Walgreen, who were prominent among the farmers of that vicinity. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Fredericks were: Mrs. Clara A. Swanson, Mollie C. O., Fanny C., Jennie, Emma R., Minnie, Henrietta, Hilda C., Clarence N.; Herbert A. and Carl E., both deceased.

Mr. Fredericks has been one of the most progressive farmers in the county. He bought the first self-binder, and the first traction engine in Ontario Township. He is considered one of the best threshers of grain in that part of the country, having been engaged in the business since he was fourteen years of age. He has threshed the grain on some farms in his neighborhood for twenty-seven years, and has made a careful study of all kinds of farm implements and machinery.

Politically, Mr. Fredericks is a republican, and has been Road Commissioner twelve years. In religious belief he is a Lutheran, and has been a trustee of the Lutheran Church at Altona.

JAMES HAMMOND.

James Hammond was born July 7, 1824, in Medina County, Ohio. His father, Theodore Hammond, was born near Hartford, Connecticut, and his mother, Rebecca (Farnham) Hammond, was also a native of Connecticut; her grandfather was John Farnham, of the same State; she died November 4, 1824. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hammond moved to Summit County, Ohio, in 1810, and Mr. Hammond removed to Illinois in 1844. The grandparents of Mr. James Hammond were Jason Hammond, of Bolton, Connecticut, and Rachel (Hale) Hammond, of Glastonburg, Connecticut.

Mr. James Hammond was reared on a farm, and was educated in a log school house at Hammond Corners, Bath, Ohio. At the age of twenty years he came to Knox County, Illinois, in the company of Royal Hammond, a cousin of his father. He located in Ontario Township, and herded sheep. In 1850, he bought one hundred and sixty acres of land of Knox College, in Section 33, Ontario Township, and converted the tract into a model farm on which he has spent most of his time for the last half century. He was married in Ontario Township, October 7, 1847, to Susan Porter Powell, daughter of John and Maria (Wilson) Powell. Mrs. Hammond was born near Utica, New York, and in 1836 came to Knox County with her uncle, Charles F. Camp, a prominent and enterprising citizen. She died March 16, 1897, aged seventy-five years. She was an estimable woman, a member of the Congregational Church, in Ontario Township, which she helped to establish; she was charitable, a good neighbor, and a loving, faithful wife and mother. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hammond were: Park Henry, deceased; Charles Camp, deceased; Edwin Powell, deceased; Ella M.; Fannie C.; and Ira E. Fannie C. graduated from Knox College in June, 1881.

Mr. Hammond has been a hard worker, frequently doing two days' work in one, and he soon became an influential citizen. In 1867 he built a most substantial dwelling of brick, with double walls, selecting the wood for the inside, oak, ash and curled walnut, from timber cut on his own farm. Much of the furniture was made to order, and the whole establishment is the pride of the county as well as of the township. He has never speculated, but has been uniformly successful in his operations, and he attributes his good fortune to frugality and hard work. He raised fine stock, and had one of the first herds of Galloway cattle in the county. He has been a prominent figure among the farmers of Knox County for many years. He was Supervisor several years and has held different school offices. In politics he is a republican, and in his church relations a Congregationalist.

Mr. Hammond has traveled extensively in the United States, and spent two and a half years in Tehama County, California, where he owns a fruit farm.

HUGH M. MITCHELL.

Hugh M. Mitchell was a native of Ohio, and was born in Harrison County, May 25, 1820. His father was John Mitchell, who lived in his early years in Washington County, Pennsylvania. He was a man of strong intellect and was educated in the common schools of his native State. At an early date, he went to Ohio, and married Margaret McGee, a native of Jefferson City, Ohio. Both parents were of Irish descent, and after marriage settled in Harrison County, when it was almost an unbroken wilderness. Here they lived long and industrious lives, and at last, transformed the wild land on which they had settled into a fine farm. They raised a family of eleven children. Mr. Mitchell was a soldier in the War of 1812.

Hugh M. Mitchell partook of some of the marked characteristics of his father. He was endowed with a good intellect and a sound judgment. He was educated in the common schools, showing the same perseverance there as was exhibited in the business affairs of his after life. He remained on the home farm until he was twenty-four years of age, when he married and settled on a forty-acre tract of broken, hilly land. By his industry and economy, he prospered, and saved a sufficient amount of means to purchase a large farm, on which he moved in 1847. To his farming, he added, in 1853, the business of keeping a tavern for the accommodation of travelers, which proved to be very lucrative. Here a small village sprang up, and after the Post-office was established, he was appointed Postmaster, holding the office for twelve years.

Mr. Mitchell was not pleased with this double-headed business of keeping an inn and farming. He had a great fondness for the farm. So he resolved to engage wholly in that occupation. He sold out and came to Knox County in the Fall of 1864. He bought a farm in Sparta Township, where he lived until 1871, when he removed to Ontario Township. Here he purchased a farm of about three hundred acres, making his landed possessions in the two townships of Sparta and Ontario about six hundred acres. At the same time he owned a nice residence in Oneida. Thus from small beginnings, he became one of the wealthiest farmers in Knox County.

Mr. Mitchell was no ordinary man. Endowed with a good intellect and trained in the habits of industry and economy, he soon rose to a condition of affluence. His business judgment was unerring and his attention to duty never flagged. The path of rectitude he saw before him, and from it, he never turned aside. He was just and generous, and lived a life that becomes a man. His religious faith was Presbyterian. Both he and his wife were members of that church. Politically, he was a Jeffersonian democrat. He firmly believed in the principles of that party.

Mr. Mitchell was married March 19, 1844, to Nancy Nash. Her parents were farmers in Pennsylvania, and when she was but a child, removed to Harrison County, Ohio, where they lived and died. They had a family of seven children, consisting of two sons and five daughters. The wife of Hugh M. Mitchell, was a most estimable woman and was born August 9, 1820.

To Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, were born six children, five sons and one daughter. Three sons and the daughter are deceased. John R. is a resident of Oneida, Illinois, and owns a farm in Ontario Township; Samuel P. resides on a farm north of Oneida; Hugh Parks was a farmer in Gage County, Nebraska, for a number of years, but later was in the employ of the Iowa Central Railroad Company; and J. Calvin was the founder and editor of the Keithburg Times. The greatest legacy that Mr. Mitchell left his children was a good education. They attended either Knox or Monmouth college. He died November 2, 1898.

JOHN RAYMOND MITCHELL.

John Raymond Mitchell, son of Hugh M. and Nancy A. (Nash) Mitchell, was born August 13, 1847, in Harrison County, Ohio. The Mitchell family were emigrants from the North of Ireland, and of Scotch descent. Hugh M. Mitchell was born in Harrison County, May 26, 1820, and was married, March 14, 1844, to Nancy A. Nash, born in the same county, and daughter of William and Hannah (Drummond) Nash, of Pennsylvania. He came to Knox County in the Fall of 1864, and located in Sparta Township, a mile and a half east of Wataga. He resided there from 1864 to 1871, and then moved to Section 23, Ontario Township, where he had a large farm. He afterward went to Oneida, where his death occurred November 2, 1898. The paternal grandparents of John R. Mitchell were John and Margaret (McKie) Mitchell, both born in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and settled in Harrison County, Ohio, when the country was a wilderness.

The education of John R. Mitchell was begun in the common schools of Ohio, and completed in Wataga, Illinois, to which State he came with his father in the year 1864. He was brought up a practical farmer, and owns a very fine farm of three hundred and twenty acres in Ontario Township. He was married in Oneida March 23, 1876, to Anna Jennett Muir, daughter of Thomas and Martha J. Finley (Heagy) Muir. They have four children, Vida May, Maurice Finley, Anna Myrtle and Nannie Grace. Mr. Muir was born in Creighton, Scotland, December 12, 1826, and emigrated to Knox County, Illinois, in 1839 with his mother and stepfather, Samuel McCornack. The family settled first near Knoxville, where they had a saw mill. Mr. Muir was a clerk in the store of John Johnston, a well known merchant of Knoxville. He was married October 24, 1853, lived in Nebraska City, Nebraska, a year, and returned to Oneida, where, after an active and useful life, he died, aged fifty-eight years. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church at the age of twenty-five; a Sunday school superintendent, and leader of the choir many years. His children by his first marriage were Anna Jennett and Thomas F. By a second marriage, to Mrs. Sarah Hutchinson, there were two children, Sarah Louisa and Mary Ella.

In politics, Mr. Mitchell has been a republican since 1869, casting his first vote for General Grant, and is a firm believer in republican principles. For many years he has been an active member of the Presbyterian Church, and has, for a number of years, taken especial interest in educational matters in Oneida. At present Mr. Mitchell rents his farm and quietly enjoys the results of his previous labor.

WILLIAM J. MOSHER.

William J. Mosher, son of S. Emerson and Mary (Crane) Mosher, was born in Paris, Oneida County, New York, August 9, 1841. His paternal great-grandparents were John Mosher, born in New London, Connecticut, and Elizabeth (Lawrence) Mosher, born in Groton, Massachusetts, and on his mother's side, Henry and Jerusha (Parmalee) Crane, born in Durham, Connecticut. His grandparents were Josiah Mosher, born in Pepperell, Massachusetts, and Rebecca (Doolittle) Mosher, born in New London, Connecticut, and on the mother's side, Henry and Octavia (Hungerford) Crane, the former born in Durham, Connecticut, the latter in Litchfield, New York. His parents, S. Emerson and Mary (Crane) Mosher, were born in Oneida County, New York. They were married in Paris, Oneida County, where they resided till 1851. He was a carpenter, and was also interested in a saw mill and grist mill. He was a school teacher twenty years, a captain in the militia, and was always known as "Captain S. E. Mosher." He was a man greatly respected for his integrity. His father, Josiah, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and served in his brother John Mosher's company. Captain S. E. Mosher removed to Illinois, the family arriving in Galesburg, May 6, 1851, where many of the pioneers were known to them. They soon settled in Ontario Township, locating on Section 32, and brought under cultivation the farm now owned by William J. Mosher. S. E. Mosher was Justice of the Peace many years, holding that office to the close of his life. He died in Galesburg, February 23, 1867, aged fifty-nine years. His wife died March 10, 1857, aged forty-two years.

Mr. William J. Mosher was educated at Knox College and at the Business College of Galesburg, and of the latter institution he was the first graduate. He was married in Ontario Township, November 26, 1868, to Sarah E. Wetmore, daughter of Theodore P. Wetmore. Three children have been born to them: Grace Eveline, Cornelia Alice and George Emerson. Grace E. graduated from Knox Conservatory in 1898.

Mr. Mosher is a republican, and has been School Trustee twenty-one years. He is owner and manager of the factory of the Ontario Cheese Company, located on his farm, which was established by Samuel Chapman, who sold out to the present company.

WILLIAM J. PITTARD.

William J. Pittard, son of Job and Mary (Thomas) Pittard, was born in Ontario Township, March 14, 1850. His parents were born in Summerton, England, and came to the United States in 1847, arriving at Chicago, May 22. After having lived two years in Chicago they settled on a farm in Knox County, Illinois, where they became prosperous farmers. They made additions to the eighty acres of land first purchased, until they owned three hundred and twenty acres of farm land, and several town lots in Oneida. They moved to Oneida, and, after residing there about two years, went to the home of their son, William J., where they both died, aged seventy-two and seventy-one years, respectively. Politically, Mr. Job Pittard was a republican. He was a Congregationalist, and a deacon in the church of which he was a worthy member. He became paralyzed, and was for several years attended by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary A. Pittard, who nursed him most faithfully through all his suffering. Her own parents also died at her home, and were ministered to by her with loving care.

Mr. William J. Pittard was educated in the common schools of Knox County. He was married in Knox County, March 29, 1879, to Mary A. Green, daughter of Daniel and Amy (Dewitt) Green. Mr. Green was a native of the State of New York. Mrs. Pittard was born in Henry County, Illinois, March 4, 1854. They had three children: Josie A. (who married Charles Brown), Frank C. and Edith Leona.

Mr. Pittard was a man of unimpeachable honor, and highly respected by all. In religion, he was a Presbyterian. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. In politics, he was a republican. He died January 2, 1893.

Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Pittard, with the assistance of her son, has managed the farm consisting of about one hundred and ten acres; she owns another farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Ontario Township.

ALVAH REYNOLDS.

Alvah Reynolds was born in Bedford, New York, May 22, 1830. His father, Enoch Reynolds, was born in Lewisboro, New York, in 1794, and removed to Somers in 1811. He was married in 1819 and in 1827 removed to Bedford, where he died at the age of eighty-four years. His paternal grandfather, James Reynolds, was a soldier in the Revolution, and drew a pension. After the war he was a farmer in New York State, and died at Crossriver (now known as Lewisboro), New York. Maria Reynolds, the mother of Alvah, was born near the east line of Westchester County, New York, and died in Bedford, New York, aged forty-five years. Her father, Nathaniel Reynolds, was a soldier in the Revolution, and drew a pension. He was a prisoner on Long Island. He died at Crossriver (now Lewisboro), New York.

Mr. Alvah Reynolds was brought up on a farm, but was apprenticed to a carpenter at the age of sixteen, and followed the trade thirteen years. He was married in Henry County, Illinois, May 10, 1859, to Susannah Hayden, daughter of Jonathan and Hulda (Reeves) Hayden, pioneers of Henry County, where they settled in 1853. Mr. Hayden now lives at Blairstown, Iowa, and is ninety-one years of age. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds are: Mrs. Orlena F. Tracy, Mrs. Ida A. Crandall, Arthur A., Charley C., Anna A. and Jennie May.

In politics, Mr. Reynolds is a republican, and in religion a Christian. He has been a school director thirty-six years. He bought one hundred and sixty acres of land in Ontario Township, Knox County, which is now in a high state of cultivation. He has been very successful and added to his farm from time to time until he owned seven hundred and twenty acres of land in Ontario Township, and in 1893 gave each of his six children an eighty-acre farm, and has a good farm left for himself. His farm was excellent for stock raising, and Mr. Reynolds is considered one of the most successful stock raisers in the county; his success may doubtless be attributed to industry and strict economy. He is progressive, and has a wide influence in the church and in the community.

ALLEN, WILFORD L.: Farmer; Ontario Township; born October 31, 1857; educated in Oneida, Knox County. He was married to Gertrude L. Finley, in Ontario Township, February 20, 1890. Mrs. Wilford Allen is a daughter of J. Alexander Finley, a representative citizen of Ontario Township. Mr. Allen has been a farmer all his life. In religion, he is a Congregationalist. He is a republican.

ANDERSON, ANDREW BORLAND; Banker; Ontario Township; born September 10, 1832, in Scotland, where he was educated. His parents were James and Mary (Borland) Anderson, of Ayrshire, Scotland. His grandparents were James Anderson, born near Glasgow, Scotland, and Andrew Borland, of Ayrshire, Scotland. He was married to Mary A. McQuile at Oneida, Illinois, December 21, 1860. They have three children: William H.; John H.; and Mary E., who is the wife of Dr. A. F. Stewart. At the age of eighteen, Mr. Anderson came to America and located at Paris, Ontario, where he worked at his trade of blacksmithing. In 1852, he came to Victoria, Knox County, Illinois, and in 1857, to Oneida, where he opened a shop. In 1864, he bought a half interest in a hardware store which he managed for five years. In 1874, he began private banking, and in 1877, formed a partnership, and operated under the firm name of Anderson and Murdoch, of the Oneida Exchange Bank. Mr. Anderson became a member of the Masonic fraternity in Oneida in 1861, and is a member of the I. O. O. F. Oneida Lodge. He has held many offices in these orders. In politics, Mr. Anderson is independent.

ANDERSON, REUBEN BALLOU; Oneida, Ontario Township; Harnessmaker; born April 20, 1838, near Dayton, Ohio. He is of Scotch-Irish descent on his father's side, his great-grandfather and great-grandmother being Scotch and Irish respectively. His grandfather was born in South Carolina and was married to Mary Penny, a native of the same State. His father, John P. Anderson, was born in Glasgow, Kentucky, and was married to Anna Markham, who was born in Tennessee, and was a daughter of Beverly Markham, who was born in England, and of Elizabeth (Ward) Markham, of Hanover County, Virginia. Elizabeth Markham was a first cousin of Henry Clay and was his first teacher. Mr. John P. Anderson came to Galesburg, Illinois, October 30, 1848, with his family. After a residence here of ten years he moved to Lowell, Des Moines County, Iowa, where he died in February, 1861, at the age of fifty-six. His wife died in Galesburg in August, 1852. Mr. Reuben B. Anderson was educated in Knox County and married Marietta Grosscup, August 17, 1862. Jonathan Blanchard, formerly President of Knox College, and now President of Wheaton College, performing the ceremony. Eight children were born to them: Frank F.; Alice F.; Charles L.; Ira R.; Anna R.; Kate C., deceased; Carl; and Mary E. Ira R. Anderson is now on the United States cruiser Prairie. Until the age of twenty, Mr. Anderson was engaged in farming. He then learned the harnessmaker's trade at Oquawka, and practiced it for a short time at Quincy and Burlington as a government employe. Returning to Galesburg, he engaged in business until August 11, 1862, when he joined Company D, One Hundred and Second Volunteer Infantry. He served until the end of the war, participating in the battles of Resaca, New Hope Church, Peach Tree Creek, and was in the siege and battle of Atlanta, at Aversboro and at Bentonville. He marched with Sherman to the sea and through the Carolinas, and took part in the grand review at Washington. After two years of business life in Galesburg, he went to Oneida, where he engaged in his trade until May 16, 1898, when he went to Rock Island to work in the harness department of the United States arsenal, where he is now employed. He is a member of the Congregational Church. In politics, he is independent.

BROWN, CHARLES M. C.; Farmer; Ontario Township; born September 3, 1874, in Oneida, Illinois; educated in Knox County. His parents were Benjamin F. Brown, of Albany, New York, and Jennie (McCornack) Brown, of Scotland. Mr. Brown was married to Josie Pittard, in Knox County, December 25, 1895. They have two children, Eva and Benjamin.

CLEARWATER, ABRAHAM S.; Farmer; Ontario Township; born May 3, 1818, in Montgomery County, New York; educated in New York State. His father, Jacob Clearwater, born in New York, was of German descent, while his mother, Esther (Shealy), also born in New York, was of Scotch descent. April 13, 1856, Abraham S. Clearwater was married to Margaret Jane McGregor in Ontario Township. Two children were born to them, Clark A.; and Carrie L., wife of Charles Moore. Margaret Jane McGregor was born in Matilda, Canada; she was the daughter of John and Jane (Wood) McGregor, who were natives of Canada; they were of Scotch descent. Abraham S. Clearwater came to Knox County in the Fall of 1843, and bought eighty acres of land in Section 30, which he converted into one of the best farms in the township. Later he added one hundred and three acres in Section 29, besides timber land in Rio. A farmer all his life, he's only official work was in some local offices. His word was as good as his note. He was a man of sterling traits of character, a good husband and father, of quiet disposition, and ever willing to aid a neighbor. He united with the Baptist Church in 1837. In politics, he was a republican. He died April 29, 1898.

COX, LEVI J.; Farmer; Ontario Township, where he was born on Section 21, January 1, 1849; educated in Knox County. His parents, James R. and Emma (Pittard) Cox, were born in Somerton, Somersetshire, England, where they were married. They came to the United States in 1848, with his grandfather, Joseph Cox, who was also born at Somerton, but died in Kansas at the age of ninety-eight. The latter's wife, Sarah Davis, as well as Emma Pit-tard and her father, were natives of Somerset. James R. Cox was born in 1815, and died May 13, 1897, at the home of Levi J. Levi J. Cox was reared on a farm, and at twenty-five years of age he had only three hundred dollars. He bought forty acres of land on Section 16 for two thousand dollars, upon which he made a small payment. By industry and economy he soon paid for his farm, and now owns four hundred and fifty-nine acres of land, one hundred and twenty acres of which he inherited from his father. September 3, 1873, he was married to Elizabeth West, in Galesburg. They have two children, Arthur B. and Stewart J. Mrs. Cox's father was Samuel West, a farmer of Green County, Pennsylvania. He moved to Morgan County, Ohio, and died there when seventy-eight years old. His wife, Catherine Anderson, was of Scotch descent. She died in Ohio, and her daughter came to Illinois with her brother, Isaac P. West, and lived in Woodhull, Henry County, until her marriage. Samuel West's father, John, was kidnapped in Glasgow, Scotland, before the Revolution, and brought to the colonies, where he was sold to a Quaker near New York. He enlisted in the Colonial Army, hoping to come across the sea captain who had sold him. He settled in Green County, Pennsylvania, where he died. Levi J. Cox is an A. F. and A. M., Oneida Lodge, No. 337. In politics, he is independent.

Mr. Mitchell came to Sparta Township when ten years of age. He became a practical and successful farmer. In 1884, he went to Columbus, Kansas, where for three years he was an extensive dealer in farm lands. He also spent a winter at Pasadena, California, and for a year engaged in the milling business at Columbus, Kansas. He returned to Oneida, Knox County, and located on a farm of eighty acres. He is now managing his father's estate. Mr. Mitchell is an Elder in the Presbyterian Church, and is also Sunday School Superintendent. In politics, he is a republican. He has served as School Director of his township.

MURDOCH, FRANK; Banker; Ontario Township; born September 2, 1842, in Ayrshire, Scotland; educated in Ohio and Illinois. His parents, Thomas D. and Janet (Snithers) Murdoch, and his maternal grandparents, James and Mary (Watson) Struthers, came from Scotland, as did his paternal grandparents, Francis and Janet (Nimo) Murdoch. His parents came to Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1852, and to Knox County, Illinois, in 1857. They bought land in Sparta Township, and died in Oneida, aged eighty-two and seventy-two years, respectively. Mr. Murdoch was married to Alta, daughter of Alvah and Jerusha (Stevens) Wheeler. His second marriage was with Mary Ellis in Oneida, June, 1877. Their children are: Myrtle, Alta, Maud, and a nephew, William B. Hurst, whom Mr. Murdoch has adopted. Mr. Murdoch came to this country with his parents, and was a farmer until 1873, when he became Cashier of the Oneida Exchange Bank. In 1876, he became sole owner of the bank, and formed the now existing partnership with A. B. Anderson. Mr. Murdoch is a Mason and a member of the Oneida Lodge, No. 337, and of the Galesburg Commandery, No. 8. K. T. He served three years as Eminent Commander, is a member of Oriental Consistory and the Mystic Shrine, Chicago, Illinois. Mr. Murdoch is a republican, and was elected to the Legislature in the years 1892-94-96; during these three terms he served on many important committees. Mr. Murdoch was for four years a member of the Knox County Central Committee, and for two years was its Chairman; he served eight years in the National Guard; was Brigade Commissary of Subsistence with rank of Captain on the staff of J. N. Reece, of Springfield. Mr. Murdoch is a Presbyterian.

STEPHENSON, GEORGE LOWRY; Ontario Township; Merchant; born October 20, 1838, in Kirkcudbright, Scotland. His father, George Stephenson, was born in North, and his mother, Isabella (McMillan), in South Scotland. They were Presbyterians, and died in this country. October 26, 1865, Mr. Stephenson was married in Copley Township to Grace L. Stewart, of Glasgow, Scotland. They have five children: Frank S., Milton J., Grace D., Jessie I., and George Harry. In 1850, Mr. Stephenson came with his parents in a sailing vessel to the United States, the voyage lasting five weeks. They landed at New Orleans, and an additional two weeks were required to reach St. Louis by steamboat. After a month they came up the Illinois River to Peoria, and from there by team to Knox County. They settled on a farm in Copley Township, and soon owned eighty acres of improved land. Here the parents died, and Mr. Stephenson grew to manhood and acquired his education in the public schools. In 1863 he became a merchant in Oneida, selling first, groceries, and then men's furnishing goods. In 1872, he started a dry goods store which is his present occupation. Mr. Stephenson is a member of the Presbyterian Church. In politics, he is a republican. The reading of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Thaddeus of Warsaw" made him an abolitionist, and he was an ardent supporter of Lincoln, rendering valuable service to the cause. In Oneida, he has been Constable, Collector, City Marshall, Alderman and Mayor. In his township he has been School Director, President of the Board of Education, Supervisor for eighteen years, and for thirteen years chairman of the County Board. Mr. Stephenson has been an auctioneer. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. (ancient), and has been a Mason since 1862. In Galesburg he joined Chapter No. 48, now of Oneida; also Galesburg Commandery No. 8. He is also a member of Medina Temple, Chicago. In 1898, Mr. Stephenson received unanimous nomination for State Representative, but refused to run because the Senate had refused to reapportion the State.

where they were farmers. Mr. Van Auken was educated in Monroe County, New York; he is a successful farmer, and owns three hundred and sixty acres of valuable land. He is a democrat in politics.

WETMORE, CHARLES BRIDGE; Farmer; Ontario Township; born on the Wetmore homestead in Ontario Township, September 23, 1844; educated in Knox County. His parents, Theodore P. and Eveline C. (Morse) Wetmore, were natives of New York State; the former from Yorkville, Oneida County; the latter from Herkimer County. His maternal grandparents were Horace Morse, a native of Massachusetts and a soldier in the War of 1812, and Thirza (Underhill), born in the State of New York. His maternal great-grandfather was a Revolutionary soldier. His paternal grandfather, Ezra Wetmore, was born in Connecticut, while his wife, Susan (Palmer), was a native of Rhode Island. Susan Palmer's father was Pones Palmer, a Revolutionary soldier from Hopkins, Rhode Island. The paternal great-grandfather, Captain Amos Wetmore, was a soldier in the Revolution; his wife was Rachel Parsons. Mr. C. B. Wetmore's father died August 16, 1876; his mother, May 29, 1892, aged respectively sixty-six and seventy-eight years. Mr. Wetmore was reared on the homestead which he bought from the heirs; the farm consisted of one hundred and sixty acres of land and nineteen acres of timber. August 5, 1862, he enlisted in Company E, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteers, and was wounded at the second battle of Port Donelson, February 3, 1863. He was discharged from the hospital at Paducah, Kentucky, in April, 1863. He has never fully recovered, and draws a pension. He was Postmaster at Oneida for two years. January 22, 1868, he was married, in Knoxville, to Thirza M. Moore. There are three children: Eveline M., Theodore L. and George E. Eveline M. married Birney W. Adams; Theodore L. and George E. are at home. Mrs. Wetmore is a daughter of Lyman K. Moore, a pioneer of Rio Township, and granddaughter of Holland Moore, a soldier of the Revolution. In politics, Mr. Wetmore is a republican. He has been Road Commissioner and Township Collector. He is a member of the A. F. and A. M., Oneida Lodge, No. 337.

WALNUT GROVE TOWNSHIP.

By J. F. Hubbell.

This is one of the most desirably situated townships in the county, its surface being chiefly rolling prairie. It is well watered, by Walnut Creek and several tributary branches; its soil is unsurpassed in fertility, and fine farms, with substantial buildings, are to be seen everywhere within its limits. It is in what is called the "Military Tract," a section of the State selected as bounty land for soldiers, because of its fine soil and undulating surface.

affording an abundance of water courses and excellent natural drainage.

The township derived its name from extensive groves of walnut timber growing near its center. Another, Turkey Hill Grove, lies on the northwest quarter of Section 26; and these two include all its timber lands, with the exception of a small tract in its southern end.

There is one village in Walnut Grove, which has borne various names its final appellation being fixed as Altona, when the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad was built through the place.

The first white men who undertook to make settlements here were Messrs. Jones and De Hart, who built a cabin on Section 21, but became alarmed at the hostility of the Indians, and left at the time of the Black Hawk War. The ruins of their cabin were still standing in 1838. In 1836, came John Thompson, the first permanent settler, who moved here from Pennsylvania, with his wife Catherine, and located on Section 16; though a Mr. Smith, a Mormon, built the first frame house, on what was originally called the Snow, and afterwards known as the Wisegarver farm. Mr. Thompson also planted the first crop—a field of sod corn—in 1837, fencing it in with the first rails split in the township.

Mr. Thompson and Mr. Copps, two of the first settlers, had been soldiers in the War of 1812; and the father of Mr. Allen, one of the pioneers of the township, had served in the Revolutionary War. After Mr. John Thompson, Levi Stevens was the next to arrive, and Abraham Piatt the third.

Mr. Amos Ward soon followed (in 1838), and was, in 1839, elected the first Justice of the Peace. Township organization was effected in April, 1853.

As has been already said, Elder M. Smith, of the Mormon Church, built the first frame house, in 1840, on Section 15, and in 1842 several hundred of his co-religionists had located here. They designed building a temple, on Section 5, but, before carrying out their plans, left for Hancock County, on the advice of Joseph Smith. As they had entered and possessed themselves of nearly all the timber land, and designed building up a community of their own faith, the other settlers were not sorry to see them depart. Since then, settlement has been rapid, and there is nowhere to be found a more flourishing and intelligent community than that now living in Walnut Grove.

The first boy born in the township was John Thompson, Jr.; the first girl was Helen Ward, now Mrs. A. P. Stephens. The first couple married were Austin Frederick and Elizabeth Finney. The first death was that of Mrs. Hinsdale, a sister of Amos Ward, who died in August, 1838, at the residence of Abram Piatt, on Section 15, where she was also buried.

In 1844, John W. Clarke was appointed the first postmaster. He was succeeded by S. Ellis, in 1845, and he by Amos Ward, in 1846.

The first school house was built on the southwest quarter of Section 16, in 1840, and Miss Robey Tabor, a Quakeress from Massachusetts, was the first teacher. She married afterward, moved to Henry, and died in 1896. Another early teacher was E. L. Gross, afterwards a distinguished attorney of Springfield, and editor of the Illinois Statutes.

Elder Samuel Shaw organized the first church (after that of the Mormons). It was known as the First Baptist Church, and had eight members, with a place of worship on Walnut Creek. There are now eleven schools, one of which is graded, with two hundred and eighty-four pupils out of four hundred and fifty persons under twenty-one years of age. The eleven school buildings have cost nearly ten thousand dollars.

The first township officers, elected April 5, 1853, were Amos Ward, Supervisor; A. F. Ward, Clerk; H. L. Sage, Assessor; James Livingston, Collector; H. L. Collinson, Daniel Allen and C. Copps, Highway Commissioners; Reuben Cochran, Overseer of the Poor; Amos Ward and David Livingston, Justices of the Peace.

The population of Walnut Grove was, in 1860, eleven hundred and twenty; in 1870, nineteen hundred and sixty; in 1880, seventeen hundred and eighty-one; in 1890, thirteen hundred and fifty.

Altona, the only village in the township, is situated on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, about eight miles from Galesburg. Around it lies as rich a farming country as is to be found in Illinois; and the village itself is the center of a considerable trade, being one of the most prosperous in the county. While the Central Military Tract Railway (now called the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy) was being built, in 1853, many laborers employed on the road came and camped in the edge of the wood, near the railroad line. To supply their wants Cyrus Willard and J. S. Chambers built a store, eighteen by thirty-six feet in size, near the center of Section 16, on the northeast quarter of that section, on land then owned by Daniel Allen. This was the first building erected in Altona, and was the pride of the community, as it was the only store between Galesburg and Kewanee. The second store, built the same year, was owned by Samuel Whiting. Altona was, for several years thereafter, a good business point, there being no other villages sufficiently near to compete with it in trade. In 1854, Nils P. Peterson, of Moline, built a flouring mill, with a distillery in connection with it; the latter, being in opposition to the popular sentiment, was discontinued after one year. The mill, however, continued in successful operation for ten years, and was the only mill or factory ever constructed in the village. In 1855 an elevator was built. In 1854, Needham Rogers built the "Walnut Grove House," which is still run as a hotel. The second hostelry, the "Altona House," was constructed and opened by Mrs. McKee, a year or two after.

Altona was laid out and platted in 1854, by John Piatt, for the heirs of John Thompson. The same year, E. B. Main and Daniel Allen, on whose land the first building of the village was erected, laid out an addition, just northeast of the first location. The place was then called LaPier. After the railroad was completed, however, at the instance of the railroad officials, the name was changed to Altona. The name of the postoffice, however, being Walnut Grove, a confusion resulted, and an attempt was made, in 1863, to change it; and the name of Reno was chosen, in honor of the famous general of that name. But about that time three desperadoes by the name of Reno, who had made the patronymic decidedly unsavory, were lynched in Indiana; so that the citizens rejected it, and united on the name of Altona for village, station and postoffice.

The village was incorporated, by special charter, in 1856, and under the general law in 1862, and again in 1874.

Altona has always been noted for the excellence of its schools. There has been a good graded school there since 1858. The local sentiment of the place and surrounding country has always been strongly in favor of temperance. During the intense excitement attending the agitation of the slavery question, the opposition to the extension of a system of human bondage was so pronounced, that the place was reputed a "hot bed of abolitionists," a term considered much more opprobrious in those days than now. It has been always noted for intelligence and education, and, being the center of a prosperous farming community, has shared in the prosperity of the rich agricultural locality in which it is situated.

The population of the village was, in 1870, nine hundred and two; in 1880, eight hundred and sixteen; and in 1890, six hundred and fifty-four.

Altona has five churches, a bank, a newspaper and several societies.

Of the churches, the first to be organized was that of the Methodist Episcopal denomination, in August, 1853. It had a membership of thirteen, and was under the pastoral charge of Rev. James Quimby. In 1857, a church edifice was erected, and later a parsonage. The two are valued at five thousand dollars. The present pastor is Rev. A. M. Barlow, who also has charge of the Nekoma Church, in Henry County. Their joint membership is ninety. The Congregational Church was founded February 21, 1857, with nine members, under the charge of Rev. A. Root. A building costing four thousand dollars was dedicated November 9, 1866. The present membership is forty-nine, but the congregation has no pastor, and worships with the Presbyterians. George A. Ward is Clerk. Revs. I. N. Candee, D. D., T. S. Vaill and J. T. Bliss organized the Presbyterian Church (Old School), on April 25, 1857, there being twenty-one members. Rev. J. T. Bliss was the first pastor, and Rev. J. Rugh is at present in charge. The formation of the Lutheran Church took place in 1859. In 1869, the congregation erected a building costing four thousand dollars, and later a parsonage. The first pastor was Rev. Philip Direll. The denomination has steadily grown in numbers, there being at present three hundred and twenty-five communicants and one hundred and thirty-five in the Sunday school. Rev. J. G. Dahlberg is the pastor. A Swedish Baptist Mission was opened in 1876 by Rev. J. W. Stromberg, but no church was built, and the flock is at present without a pastor.

The first bank in the village was an outgrowth of the general mercantile business of A. P. Johnson and Company, which was started in 1854. They cashed checks to accommodate their customers, and from this practice the bank gradually grew into existence. Until 1890, when Mr. Johnson left the place, his was the only bank in Altona. Then the Bank of Altona, incorporated under the State Banking Law, was organized, with A. M. Craig as President; C. S. Clarke, Vice President; George Craig, Cashier; and J. M. Nickle, Assistant Cashier. In January, 1896, J. M. McKie was elected to the position made vacant by George Craig's death, and O. E. Peterson was made Assistant Cashier. It has a capital of $50,000, a surplus of $27,000, deposits of about $80,000 and loans amounting to some $15,000.

Among the societies is the Altona Forum, which meets at Peterson's Hall, and has twenty-three members. As its first officers, it elected Dr. W. B. Gray, President and Medical Examiner; Mrs. C. C. Geiler, Secretary; L. K. Byers, Treasurer. Its present officers are: B. W. Crandall, President; C. McGrew, Secretary; L. K. Byers, Treasurer; Dr. W. B. Gray, Medical Examiner. There are also lodges of the Odd Fellows and of the Order of the Rebekahs. A Masonic Lodge was organized October 1, 1860, which now owns its own Masonic Hall, on Main street, and has a roster of fifty-four members. The first officers were Hiram Hall, W. M.; A. P. Stephens, S. W.; G. D. Slanker, J. W.; J. N. Brush, Secretary; J. S. Chambers, Treasurer; B. H. Scott, S. D.; George McKown, J. D.; O. S. Lawrence, T. Those holding office at present are: R. C. Sellon, W. M.; D. U. McMasters, S. W.; J. W. Mount, J. W.; W. M. Stockdale, Secretary; G. O. Snyder, Treasurer; E. S. Keyes, S. D.; C. W. Main, J. D.; Thomas Craver, T. A chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star—organized in 1892—has forty-six members, and meets in Masonic Hall. The first officers were: Mrs. C. C. Givler, W. M.; W. H. Givler, W. P. At present the list includes Mrs. A. A. Culbertson, W. M.; C. W. Main, W. P.; Mrs. L. K. Byers, Secretary. The Modern Woodmen also have a camp here.

Altona can boast of a fine public library, which is highly prized and in constant use by its intelligent citizens and by the dwellers in the country around. With its educational advantages, its fine location and its superior railroad facilities, it is one of the pleasantest residence villages in the county, as it is one of the most prosperous business towns.

REV. JOHN G. DAHLBERG.

Rev. John G. Dahlberg, Altona, Walnut Grove Township, Knox County, Illinois, was born in Hvetlanda, Sweden, March 28, 1862, and came to the United States in 1880. During the years 1880-1882 he worked on farms in Montgomery and Page Counties, Iowa. In 1882 he entered Augustana College and Theological Seminary, Rock Island, Illinois, and graduated in the classical course in 1889. In the Fall of 1889 he entered the theological school of the same institution and graduated in 1891.

Mr. Dahlberg was ordained a minister of the Lutheran Church at Chicago Lake, Minnesota, June 21, 1891, having previously been called as pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Church of Altona, Illinois. Besides the pastorship of this important church, he is a member of the Board of Directors of Augustana College and Theological Seminary, and Secretary of the Board, and is also Secretary of the Illinois Conference of the Augustana Synod. In 1899 he was elected a member of the Board of Home Missions of said Synod and was afterwards made Treasurer of this Board.

Mr. Dahlberg has remained with his first charge, although he has had numerous flattering calls elsewhere. In 1889 he was twice called to the principalship of Immanuel Academy, Minnesota. In 1893 he received a call to the chair of Swedish Language and Literature in Augustana College, Rock Island, Illinois. The Lutheran Church of Princeton, the Lutheran Church of New Windsor, Illinois, and Zion Lutheran Church of Rock Island have all extended calls to him to become their pastor. These invitations he has felt constrained to decline. In the Spring of 1899 he had a call to the Lutheran Church of Bertrand, Nebraska, which he declined, but later did accept a second call to the Zion Lutheran Church of Rock Island, Illinois.

Before Mr. Dahlberg was set apart to his sacred calling by ordination, he had served as pastoral supply in various places. He had also taught school and had been an instructor in Augustana College.

His first wife was Emily C. Envall, of Galesburg, whom he married in November, 1891. She died November 8, 1892, leaving a son, Carl Johan Emil, now living in Galesburg.

During the year 1896 Mr. Dahlberg visited England, Germany, Holland, Denmark and Sweden. June 22, 1898, he married Miss Josephine Nelson, of Altona.

JOHN MILLER McKIE.

John Miller McKie was born in Copley Township, Knox County, Illinois, June 4, 1844. He is of Scottish descent, and the son of William and Margaret (Miller) McKie, who came from Scotland about the year 1840, and settled in Copley. His parents were an industrious and frugal people, and brought up their children with correct habits and right ideas of economy.

His father was a farmer, and it was on the farm that the son had his first experience in earning a living. His early educational advantages were somewhat limited; but by close application in the common schools, by reading books and the general literature of the day, he acquired a thorough practical education.

His first occupation on leaving school was teaching. He pursued this but a short time, when he engaged in farming until the year 1876. He then became a dry goods merchant at Altona, Illinois, and continued in that business for two years. He then took the position as bookkeeper for a large grocery firm, which place he held for eight years. For the next two years, he became a member of a firm dealing in groceries and hardware, which ended on account of a fire which swept through the town, January 2, 1888.

During all these years, Mr. McKie was diligent in business, and success seemed to crown his efforts. He possessed the power to turn even misfortune to his advantage. In 1889, he aided in organizing the Bank of Altona, and was elected its first Assistant Cashier. Afterwards, he was elected Cashier, which position he still holds. For four years, from December, 1894, to December, 1898, he held the office of County Treasurer of Knox County, being elected on the republican ticket. He has also held at Altona several other minor offices,—such as School Treasurer, School Director, Village Clerk, and Tax Collector.

Into whatever position Mr. McKie has been called by the confidence and suffrages of his fellow citizens, he has filled it most acceptably and with high commendations. The office has been honored by his official connection. As a citizen, he has shown himself worthy of the friendship of others and worthy of public trust. In all his public and private relations, he is honest, faithful, and true, and is a good exemplar for others to follow. He is kind in his intercourse with others, benevolent in disposition, and wears in his countenance and demeanor the marks of a Christian gentleman.

In religious faith, Mr. McKie is a Presbyterian. He belongs to the republican party and is a constant and ardent supporter of republican principles.

Mr. McKie was united in marriage, February 22, 1872, to Jeannette Gordon McDowell. Her parents came from Scotland and were early settlers in Knox County.

Mr. and Mrs. McKie were the parents of two children: Margaret, born January 30, 1873, died March 7, 1880; and Mary, born October 9, 1880, died September 15, 1882.

GEORGE W. SAWYER.

George W. Sawyer was a farmer in Walnut Grove Township, Section 9. He was a notary public and insurance and real estate agent in the town of Altona, and he so conducted his business as to gain the respect and esteem of his fellow-townsmen.

He was born in Fergusonville, Delaware County, New York, August 5, 1828, and received his education in the common schools. His ancestry on the paternal side was English, and his mother was of German descent. His parents, Henry and Margaret (Multer) Sawyer, were natives of the State of New York. Mrs. Sawyer's father, Mr. Multer, was a native of Germany. Henry Sawyer's life was spent in Fergusonville, but his wife, after her husband's decease, came to Illinois and died at the home of her son, George W., October 26, 1885, at the age of eighty.

It was in 1856 that Mr. Sawyer came West and settled at Galesburg, Illinois. He had learned the carpenter's trade from his father, and this trade he followed in Galesburg for one year, when he removed to Minneapolis, where he spent another year. After spending some months in Wisconsin, he returned to Galesburg and took up teaching, which he had followed in his native state, where his first pay as a teacher was only ten dollars per month. For nearly two years, beginning with 1859, he was identified with the nursery business, after which he resumed his trade for a short time.

December 9, 1859, in Quincy, Illinois, Mr. Sawyer was married to Sarah Cleveland, a native of Schoharie County, New York; they had five children: Lucinda, deceased; Mrs. Ida S. McMaster, deceased; Charles C. of Altona; Lillian, deceased; and Henry J. of Galesburg. Mrs. Sawyer's parents, Asa and Cynthia (Childs) Cleveland, although natives of Schoharie County, New York, were of English descent.

After a visit in the East, Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer settled in Walnut Grove Township on 160 acres of land near Foreman Creek, which they sold after a few years and went to Quincy, Illinois. Later they returned to Altona, where Mr. Sawyer conducted a very successful lumber business, and finally secured the farm of 260 acres North of Altona, which subsequently sold for $100 per acre.

Mr. Sawyer died April 2, 1890. He was a Mason. In politics, he was a republican, and held many township offices.

ANDERSON, ANDERS J.; Merchant; Altona, Walnut Grove Township; born in Sweden, March 27, 1843; educated in the common schools. He came to America in 1852, and to Altona in 1857. He resided in Pennsylvania for five years and after his return to Victoria, his wife died in 1867, leaving two children, George E. and Mary E. Mr. Suydam went to Altona in 1870 and engaged in the insurance business; he served as Justice of the Peace for ten years, and was a member of the Library Board, of the Village Board, and of the Masonic Order. He married for his second wife, Catherine M. daughter of Henry Sawyer; their only son, Henry S., died when nine years old. Mr. Suydam is, in politics, a republican. He is a member of the Presbyterian church.

TORNQUIST, JOHN A.; Carriagemaker; Altona, Walnut Grove Township, Illinois; born November 16, 1874, at Keitsville, Missouri. His father, John F. Tornquist, was a carriage-maker near New Windsor, Illinois. Mr. Tornquist was educated in the Business College at Rock Island, Illinois. He was married in New Windsor, January 25, 1895, to Hannah E. Lindstrom; their children are Paul A. and Wendell E. Mr. Tornquist learned his trade at his home in New Windsor, and set up business for himself in Altona, Illinois, in 1895. He is a blacksmith and carriagemaker, and turns out twenty to thirty fine buggies yearly.

WALGREEN, JOHN P.; Farmer; Walnut Grove Township; born in Sweden December 27, 1848. His father, Nels P. Walgreen, was born in Sweden and came to America with his father in 1864. John Walgreen was educated in the common schools. After working by the month, he settled in Ontario Township, where his father located in 1866. He was married to Anna Fredericks in Altona, March 28, 1872. Their children are: Delphia, Amelia, Mabel, Della, Laura, Anna, Fred, and Floyd. Mr. Walgreen was a successful farmer in Ontario Township until 1897, when he removed to Altona, where he built a fine residence, and where he is a Director of the Altona Bank. Mr. Walgreen is a member of the Lutheran Church. In politics, he is a republican.

WARD, FRANK; Farmer; Walnut Grove Township; born November 4, 1830, in Litchfield County, Connecticut; educated in the common schools. He is a son of Amos Ward, who came to Knox County in 1838. Amos Ward was County Commissioner and Justice of the Peace for many years. Frank Ward was married in 1857, to Masha Eels; they had one child, now Mrs. M. H. Mather. His second marriage was in Walnut Grove Township November 9, 1861, to Cornelia S. Abernethy; their children are: Fred F., George A. and Edith M. Mr. Ward is a republican, and an earnest worker in town affairs. He is a Protestant.

LYNN TOWNSHIP.

By J. A. Beals.

The northeast township of Knox County is and will be, because of its location and environment, a township of farms. In the early days some effort was made to attract the merchant and mechanic to a point on the south line, called Centerville (afterward platted as Milroy), but it failed of success, and there has never been a postoffice, a church building, or a village within the limits of Lynn. Galva, Altona, Victoria and Lafayette are near at hand, and furnish all the trading points required by the people.

Great is the contrast between the landscape of to-day, dotted with well-improved farms, with their commodious dwellings and barns, and that of 1828, when Michael Fraker, with his family, came to Section 23, to find the tract of land he had purchased in Kentucky in the possession and occupancy of the Indians. The braves were away hunting, having left only the old men, women and children to contest his claim. So the white man made himself at home. But the returning hunters disputed his title, claiming that theirs came from the Indian God and was long prior to that of the new settler. Mr. Fraker thought diplomacy was better than valor. He was adroit; he had tact and genius, and was kind and helpful. He was a blacksmith, and could mend their guns. They took him to their hearts, and helped him build his cabin, but could see no necessity for his making tight joints between the logs. But his trust in his newly-found friends was not wholly without reservation,—bullets had a better chance where the cracks were large. They finally left him their wigwams and council house, and made new homes at Indian Creek, seven miles east, returning yearly as friends at the sugar season. A granddaughter of Mr. Fraker says she has heard her grandmother say that the only white women she saw for four years were those of her own family, and those who came with them. A fairly-sized band of Indians lived and roamed from Spoon River to the Mississippi, their trails being distinctly perceptible long after they had left the country. A clear, flowing spring on the east side of Fraker's Grove had trails from all directions centering there. Some of the early settlers now living remember the friendly visits of the chief Shaubena after the Black Hawk War.

Mr. Fraker was a middle-aged man when he came from Kentucky. He had buried two wives and was living with his third, and was the father of twenty-four children. He was regarded as an exemplary Christian, a member of the Methodist Church, just and kind, and endowed with qualities that adapted him to pioneer life and made him serviceable and agreeable to others. His mechanical talent was displayed in the construction of a hand grist mill with two burr stones, of the kind called hard heads, or pudding stones, found on the prairies. The upper one was made to revolve by means of a pin set in the outer rim. All of the old settlers that were then boys and girls remember this primitive contrivance and were familiar with its working, especially two daughters of Mr. Fraker, who were not at all pleased to see the arrival of a grist unless the owner was to do the grinding. Mr. Fraker died in 1848, aged seventy-nine years. His grave is marked with a marble stone and enclosed by a picket fence, and is situated in the middle of the road running south from a point near his early home.

George Fitch, a son-in-law of Mr. Fraker, settled near by soon after the Frakers, and was the first school teacher and Justice of the Peace in the settlement. His son, Luther, is reported to have been the first white child born here. The first marriage was that of William Hitchcock and Julia Fraker. John Essex was the first settler on Walnut Creek, in 1830. His wife was the daughter of Jacob Cress, who, with his family, settled on Section 24, in 1831. These were the only persons living in Lynn before the Black Hawk War. During that struggle they went to Forts Clark and Henderson for safety.

About 1834, William Dunbar bought the improvements of one of the Frakers on a portion of Section 13, and entered the land, going to Galena by wagon, with two yoke of oxen, to do so. He came from Kentucky, and, being a hatter by trade, furnished fur hats to the neighborhood, peddling them on horseback. Mrs. Theodore Hurd says that when she, a girl of twelve years, came here with her father (Luther Driscoll) in 1836, they found twelve families here, the settlement being known as Fraker's Grove; not all of it in Lynn, however, as the east township line ran through the middle of it.

In 1836, on Walnut Creek there were only John Lafferty, on Section 36; the Montgomery boys, on Section 35; Samuel Albro (who was a soldier of the War of 1812 and settled on the land patented to him for his military service), on Section 34; John Essex and the Talors, south of the creek near Centerville; and Hugh and Barney Frail, on Section 31. Mrs. Hugh Frail was the pioneer sister of the Cravers and Collinsons, who followed, from time to time, settling that corner of the township. By 1838 the population had increased considerably. Jonathan Gibbs came then, and purchased the Montgomery property on Section 35, where he lived until his death. He was always a leading man in the township, a Justice for twenty-five years and Supervisor for half that period. About this time also came Ellison Annis, who settled on land patented to him for service in the War of 1812; Solomon Brooks, John Sisson, Ralph Hurley and Elder Shaw, all from Ohio and originally from Maine. They were old neighbors, and were members of the Free Will Baptist Church. Soon after coming they organized the Walnut Creek Baptist Church, Elder Shaw and Luther Driscoll for years acting as pastors. It is now extinct.

Peter Hagar, Simeon Colinson, the Snlders and Edward Selon were early settlers. Mr. Selon had been mate on an ocean vessel and in one of his last voyages across the ocean the Charles family were passengers on his ship. One of them he soon after married. Another daughter is Mrs. Ira Reed, of this township; and Mr. Charles, of Round Grove, Henry County, who was the first man married on the Stark County side of the Fraker settlement, is a member of the same family. In 1836, there was a rather large immigration from Goshen, Connecticut, for which Goshen Township, in Stark County, was named. Captain Gere, and William and Ira Reed were among these settlers. In 1840, came a considerable number of Mormons, but most of the latter remained only a short time.

The first tavern opened was that of Mr. Dunbar, who so used his own house, but in 1846 Nathan Barlow opened the "Traveler's Home," on Section 24. It was on the Chicago trail and the stage road, and hence afforded accommodation much needed at the time.

Population increased slowly until the railroad was projected. That was the ending of the old, and the beginning of the new, era in the history of Lynn. The writer's relation to the township began in this transition period. Proximity to the railroad influenced his selection of a small piece of land for a future home, on the then unbroken prairie. The following Spring his wedding trip from the home in Vermont was begun by rail, and finished by stage at Victoria. The ending was a little analogous to the overturning of the old by the new. It was a frosty March morning when the stage stopped at Victoria, with two newly wedded couples, the destination of one of which was Galesburg. The wife whose journey had ended and the husband who had yet to reach Galesburg both stepped out. The driver had dropped the reins and was at the boot, removing the baggage. The horses, impatient with cold and excited by their drive, suddenly started on the run and made a short turn to the Reynolds barn. In a moment's time the startled travelers were standing on their heads (to judge from the way they felt and looked afterwards) inside the coach. The shock was but for a moment, though the impression was that we were being dragged, and that something was yet to happen; the side door was above us, and open; the hind wheel was revolving, and the head of the young wife was soon at the opening inquiring if we "were hurt in there." The stage had uncoupled in the overturn, and three horses had dragged the fourth and the front wheels to the barn.

The first physician at the Fraker settlement was Dr. Nicols; at Centerville, Dr. Spaulding. Mr. Leek built the first saw mill, in 1837, at Centerville, and later Jonathan Gibbs put up a second. The first log school house, used also for meetings, was built prior to 1836, by volunteer labor, near the home of the Dunbars, in the edge of the grove. Squire Fitch and Maria Lake were the earliest teachers. Later, a school house was built near Fraker's. Dr. Nicols is said to have been one of the first teachers. One of the early pedagogues at the Centerville school was a boy of eighteen, who, in 1863, became General Henderson, and afterward was a member of Congress. Anna Shaw, Betsy Smith and Catherine Annis were early residents, the last named teaching for a time in a log house near the Frails'. In 1841, James Jackson was appointed school trustee, and made two districts of the township, which till then had formed but one. There are now eight frame school houses, worth about nine thousand dollars. None of the schools are graded, and the aggregate attendance is about one hundred and seventy-five pupils.

Besides the regular services provided at Centerville by Revs. Shaw and Driscoll, there were circuit ministers, who had regular appointments to meet the people. Jonathan Hodgson, one of the earliest settlers at the Grove, became a local Methodist preacher. He was a man of influence in the settlement, a Probate Justice while a resident of the State, and a radical anti-slavery man. At the time of the Kansas struggle he cast in his lot with the free-soilers. He became so much interested in the work of Jonas Hedstrom, at Victoria, that he learned enough of the Swedish language to preach to people of that nationality in their own tongue. Edward Selon also became a minister, and Rev. Alba Gross preached as well as farmed, until called to the Baptist Church in Galva in 1857. Though there has never been a church building in the township, the school houses have been freely opened to Sunday schools and religious meetings; and now there is a good-sized town hall in the southwest corner of Section 15 that is available for all public gatherings. The standard of morals of the people is exceptionally high. There has never been a person fined in the town for a violation of law, and never an indictment found in the Circuit Court for an offense in Lynn. The nationality of the people has largely changed in the last fifteen years, but it has not proved perceptibly detrimental to the cause of good morals.

In the presidential election of 1840, the polling place for both Lynn and Walnut Grove was at Centerville; four years later at the school house near the Frails', Squire Ward being one of those in charge. The practice of betting on elections dates back at least to this time, for James Jackson lost and Dr. Nicols won a pair of trousers on that election.

The grist mill and the market involved much labor and forethought for the early settlers. The first grist which William Dunbar sent away went as far as Tazewell County; and in 1833 the nearest points of shipment were Canton and Moline. After getting to the mill one often had to wait for two weeks for his turn to grind. It can be imagined what a convenience was even the little hand mill of Mr. Fraker.

One winter Jonathan Gibbs contracted to deliver a drove of hogs at Peoria on a certain date. Deep snow came, and in order to fulfill his agreement he made a snow plow, of two planks, set on edge and wedge-shaped. A yoke of oxen was hitched to this and driven ahead, making a path in which the pigs could walk.

Recreation was not entirely neglected. Social life, where there were so few, perhaps meant more than it does now. A wolf hunt took not only the men, with their guns, but the women, with their kettles, chickens and potatoes, to make chicken pies for the tired hunters. The pies were baked out of doors in twenty-five gallon kettles, set over the coals.

Mrs. Jonathan Gibbs is now the only survivor of the settlers of 1838. Mr. and Mrs. William Smith were the two oldest at the time of their death. Mr. Smith was ninety-seven, and his wife more than one hundred years old. They had lived together as husband and wife for seventy-one years.

About one-half the original timber land has now been cleared.

Lynn was organized in 1853, by the election of Jonathan Hodgson, Supervisor; I. S. Smith, Clerk; William A. Reed, Assessor; A. Gross, Collector; Erastus Smith, Overseer of the Poor; S. G. Albro, John Lafferty, and H. A. Grant, Highway Commissioners; John Hodgson and John Gibbs, Justices; John Snider, Constable.

The population according to the United States census: In 1860, nine hundred and sixty; in 1870, nine hundred and sixty-six; in 1880, nine hundred and sixty-four; in 1890, seven hundred and forty.

GIDEON A. BARLOW.

Prominent among the successful farmers of Knox County was Gideon A. Barlow, who resided in Lynn Township, where he had an excellently improved farm of six hundred acres. He was born in Sullivan County, New York, July 18, 1833. His parents, Nathan and Athalia (Gillett) Barlow, were natives of the State of New York, and came to Illinois in 1838. They settled in Lafayette, Stark County, and two years later removed to Lynn Township, and located on Section 24. Nathan Barlow erected a country tavern at Fraker's Grove, known as the Travelers' Home, a great resort in 1849-50-51 for travelers on their way to the gold fields of California. In 1852, he sold the Travelers' Home, went to Lafayette, and conducted the Lafayette House until 1862. His wife having died in 1859, he lived with his son, Gideon A., until his death February 16, 1867.

Gideon A. was the second of three sons who lived to manhood. He was educated in the common schools of Knox County. May 20, 1856, in Toulon, Stark County, Mr. Barlow was married to Martha Peterson, who was born in Sweden, October 8, 1835. Mrs. Barlow came with her parents to the United States when she was but seven years of age. Her parents were connected with the Johnson colony, but left it and settled in Copley Township, Knox County. Her mother died in Copley Township, and her father removed to Henry County.

Mr. and Mrs. Barlow had eight children: Amos A., William F., Gideon B., Mrs. Ada L. Swickard, Edgar S., John Franklin, Forest S. and Lewis W. Lewis W. and John Franklin reside in St. Joseph, Missouri; Amos A., in Galesburg; Edgar S. is in the grocery business in Galva, Illinois; Willard F., Gideon B., Ada L., and Forest S. in Lynn Township. It was when Mr. Barlow was twenty-three years old that, taking his father's advice he entered upon the task of making a farm from eighty acres of unbroken land, which his father had given him in Lynn Township. His faith and enthusiasm gave him perseverance and courage, and his small beginning became one of the best farms in Knox County.

Mr. Barlow was a member of the Baptist Church. Politically, he was a republican, and held many local offices. His death occurred December 10, 1898.

Mr. Barlow's third son, Gideon B., was born in Lynn Township, Knox County, October 4, 1862, and received his education in Galva, Henry County, Illinois, and in Davenport, Iowa.

February 16, 1888, in Galesburg, he was married to Carolina Peterson, who was born January 5, 1859; they have had four children: Ada Louise and Ernest Austin, born September 10, 1890; Willie F., born June 6, 1893; and George Gideon, born March 23, 1895. He is a farmer and stock raiser, feeding about twenty-five head of cattle and a hundred head of hogs. In religion, he is a Methodist. In politics, he is a republican, he has held the office of school director.

Mr. Barlow's sixth son, Forrest Samuel, was born March 5, 1874, on the old Barlow homestead, and received his education in the common schools of Knox County, and at the Galva, Henry County, High School. January 16, 1895, he married Nellie, daughter of Richard Payne of Galva; they have two children: Amy A. and Richard P. Politically, he is a republican.

JOHN ASHLEY BEALS.

John Ashley Beals was born in Wells, Rutland County, Vermont, February 9, 1828. The Beals family came from England to America in 1638, and settled in Massachusetts. Mr. Beals' paternal grandfather, Caleb Beals, was a native of that State, as was also his father, David Beals, who was born in Plainfield, Massachusetts. His mother, Sarah, daughter of David Keyes, was born at Middleton, Vermont.

Mr. Beals received his education at Castleton Academy, Castleton, Vermont, and in 1850, was appointed by the American Board of Foreign Missions, to whom he had offered his services, manager of the Indian farm at Iauuba, now Stockbridge Station, Indian Territory, where he was employed from 1850 to 1853. These years, spent with the Indian Nation of the Choctaws, were three of the most interesting of his life. It was on his return from the Indian Territory to Vermont, that he passed through Knox County and stopped at Victoria, where his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bissell, former teachers among the Indians, resided; and it was then that he determined to return to Knox County and make it his home.

March 2, 1854, in Castleton, Vermont, Mr. Beals was married to Jane E., daughter of Alvin Loveland, a merchant and manufacturer of boots and shoes. Mr. Beals had been reared upon a farm, and as soon as he was married, started at once for Knox County, where he finally settled upon a farm of eighty acres on Section 7, Lynn Township, to which he added another eighty, and later, forty acres more. Mr. Beals has prospered as a farmer, and his life and character has been above reproach; he is respected and honored by all who know him. In religion, he is a Congregationalist, and has given much time and wise effort to the Sunday school work. He is now President of the Lynn Township Sunday School Association. In politics, he is a republican.

Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Beals, five of whom are now living: Mrs. Emily Hunting; Mrs. Alice L. Foote; Mrs. Mary E. Foster; Mrs. Hattie Betts; William E.; and Arthur R., deceased. Mrs. Beals died July 2, 1891, aged sixty-three.

JOHN SPARE COLLINSON.

John Spare Collinson was born in Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, January 28, 1850, the son of Charles and Catharine A. (Spare) Collinson; the father was a native of Yorkshire, England, born May 14, 1826, died January 17th, 1889, at the age of sixty-two; the mother was born in Luzerne County, August, 18, 1824, died March 27, 1899. His paternal grandparents, Thomas and Hannah (Codlin) Collinson, were natives of Yorkshire; his maternal grandparents, John and Catharine (Cline) Spare, were born in Pennsylvania, and were of Dutch descent.

Mr. Collinson's parents were married in Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania, July 18, 1847, and came to Knox County, October 15, 1852, the trip requiring thirty-eight days. They settled in Lynn Township, where they bought two hundred acres of land, which they improved and enlarged. They were industrious and prosperous, and highly respected in the community. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. The father was a democrat, and held local offices. They had eleven children, ten of whom are now living, six sons and four daughters, all of whom reside near the old homestead, excepting one son and one daughter. There were fifty-three grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren.

Mr. John S. Collinson was raised on the old homestead, and received his education in the common schools. January 1, 1872, he married Mary E. Carver, at the home of the bride's parents in Lynn Township; seven children were born to them: Nora A., born August 21, 1873, died March 7, 1887; Dennis A., born July 20, 1875; Katie R., born March 25, 1879, died September 13, 1895; Wiley A., born August 8, 1882; Judge T., born July 31, 1884, died March 3, 1886; Cora S., born August 5, 1886; and Grove C., born July 26, 1888, died December 3, 1889. Dennis, Wiley and Cora are at the old home with their parents.

Mrs. Collinson, one of eleven children, was born October 13, 1852, and is the daughter of Thomas and Rebecca (Cameron) Craven, who came from Carbondale, Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, and settled in Lynn Township in 1856. They purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land and afterward bought one hundred and sixty acres additional on Section 28. They now reside in Altona, Walnut Grove Township. They are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Collinson has been very successful. He has a farm of three hundred acres in Lynn Township, and eighty acres in Victoria Township. He is a breeder of fine stock, and is one of the largest hog raisers in Knox County. He is one of the directors of the Knox County Fire Insurance Company, of Knoxville, Illinois. He and his son, Dennis A., are members of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 511, Altona. Mrs. Collinson is a member of the Order of Rebeccas. He is a democrat in politics, and has been School Director for a number of years.

John G. Emery

JOHN G. EMERY.

John G. Emery, was born in West Jersey, Stark County, Illinois, September 24, 1839. His parents were Frederick W., born July 14, 1808, and Hannah (Gaffney) Emery, born in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, in 1814. His father was of Scotch-English, and his mother of German descent. They went to Ashland County, Ohio, where they were married in 1834. They moved to Fulton County, Illinois, in 1835, and to Stark County in 1839, where the father died in 1846; his wife died in Galva, Henry County, in 1888.

John G. was next to the youngest in a family of five children, four sons and one daughter. His youngest brother, William E., was killed at the battle of Murfreesboro, Tennessee, December 30, 1862. Another brother, David H., was wounded at the battle of Missionary Ridge in 1864. John G. worked on his mother's farm, and attended school until he was twenty-one years of age, when he went to Henry County, Illinois. He was married December 24, 1862, to Ruth A., daughter of Jacob J. and Fanny (Knable) Friend. She was born in Fulton County, Pennsylvania, March 20, 1844, and was nine years of age when her parents came to Illinois and finally settled in Henry County. Her father was a native of Maryland; he died in 1891. Her mother is living. Mr. and Mrs. Emery are the parents of seven children: William E., Fred W., Charles L., George F., Edwin A., Burtis C., and Rollin G. Charles L. died in 1869, aged sixteen months. Burtis C. died March 21, 1899. Three sons are married: William E., who resides in Wisconsin, and is traveling salesman for the American Book Company; Fred W., who is in business at Morris, Illinois; and George F., who resides at Slater, Missouri, and is Chief Train Dispatcher for the Chicago and Alton Railroad. Edwin A. is an electrician. Rollin G. is at home.

After his marriage, Mr. Emery lived for two years in Stark County, one year in Henry County, and two years in Elba Township, Knox County. In the Spring of 1868, they removed to Lynn Township, and settled on the northeast quarter of Section 2, which is their present home.

In religion, Mr. and Mrs. Emery are Methodists. In politics, Mr. Emery is a republican. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1860. He was Supervisor for eight years, Road Commissioner for six years, and is now serving his second term as Justice of the Peace.

Mr. Emery is a successful farmer, and a prominent and influential man in the community.

JOHN MILTON SIPES.

John Milton Sipes was born January 31, 1840, in Fulton County, Pennsylvania. His father, General John Sipes, was a farmer, and a son of George and Catherine Sipes of Pennsylvania. His mother was Mary (Burton) Sipes of Bedford County, Pennsylvania. General Sipes was married to Mary, daughter of Noah and Mary (Crumb) Barton, of New Jersey. General Sipes represented Bedford County three terms in the legislature, and was a man of marked ability. He came to Illinois and settled in Galva in 1857, and died on his farm January 14, 1881, at the age of eighty-two years.

Mr. J. M. Sipes came to Illinois with his parents when seventeen years old, and remained on his father's homestead until his marriage in Galva, Henry County, December 20, 1876. His wife, Emma A. Howard, was born in Lawrence County, Ohio, September 11, 1852. She was the daughter of O. J. and M. Howard of Ohio, who came to Illinois in 1865, and lived in Victoria and Walnut Grove townships, Knox County, and in Henry County, Illinois, finally locating in Harvey County, Kansas. Mrs. Sipes received a good education, and was a school teacher from 1874 to 1876. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sipes are: John M., born December 25, 1877; William F., born February 20, 1878; Mary Olive, born March 29, 1881, died March 5, 1890; Charles, born January 14, 1883, died January 24, 1883; Ava Jane, born February 20, 1891; and George Milton, born September 5, 1896. Mr. Sipes is a member of the Methodist church. In politics, he is a democrat, and has held many important offices, including that of Justice of the Peace for eight years, School Trustee for the same length of time, Constable, and Collector of taxes.

Mr. Sipes has a fine farm on Section 2, and is interested in general farming, the raising of Holstein cattle, and a high grade of swine. Mr. and Mrs. Sipes are members of the Home Foreign Association.

AUSTIN SMITH.

Austin Smith, son of William and Lorinda (Badger) Smith, was born in Marathon, Cortland County, New York, October 16, 1823. His parents were married in Cortland County. His maternal grandfather was Edmund Badger.

Mr. Smith's family history is one of much interest. His paternal grandparents, Robert and Grace (Braithwaite) Smith, were natives of England, the latter born near Leeds. They were married in the old country, and came to America at the outbreak of the War of the Revolution. Robert Smith at once enlisted in the colonial service, and served the entire seven years of the struggle for independence, most of the time in the rank of Orderly Sergeant; wintered at Valley Forge; took part in the principal battles, and was present at the surrender of Yorktown. He served throughout the war without a wound, and at its close received a grant of land in Cincinnati, Cortland County, New York; he died in Virgil, New York, at the age of eighty-four; there were eight children, five sons and three daughters.

William Smith was born in Schoharie County, New York, but moved to Cortland County with his parents, where he was reared on a farm. There were ten children, seven sons and three daughters, two of whom died in New York. The parents came to Illinois in 1844, and settled on Section 27, in Township of Lynn, Knox County. Although he had not had the advantages of the schools, he was a good business man and prosperous farmer. He was a deacon in the Baptist Church. He died at the age of ninety-two. His wife lived to the great age of one hundred years and three months, having been born December 15, 1790.

Austin Smith married Sarah McNaught in Toulon, Stark County, Illinois, January 10, 1855; they have four children: May C., Ruth B., Addie F. and Charles A. Mrs. Smith is a daughter of Thomas and Eliza (Custer) McNaught, early settlers of Illinois, having located at Fraker's Grove about 1840. Mr. McNaught died at Centerville, Lynn Township.

Mr. Smith was raised on the farm, and has been engaged in farming all his life, excepting six years when he was in the hardware business in Henry, Marshall County, Illinois. On account of his health he returned to farming, and now owns one hundred and twenty acres of land. He was made a Mason in Henry Lodge, No. 19, Henry, Illinois. His father, William Smith, was also a Mason.

Mr. Smith is a Prohibitionist and Democrat, and has held local offices.

HEMAN P. SMITH.

Heman P. Smith was born in Marathon, Cortland County, New York, November 14, 1833. His parents were William Smith, born in Schenectady, New York, August 21, 1787, and Lorinda (Badger) Smith, born near Coventry, New York, and the daughter of Edmund Badger of Becket, Massachusetts. His grandfather, Robert Smith, came with his bride to America from Manchester, England, in 1776, landing at New York, when Washington was organizing his army at White Plains. He immediately enlisted and served in the Revolutionary War seven years and eight months, during part of which time he was a commissioned officer on detailed duty. During the war, his wife lived on the Mohawk Flats, at Fort Stanwix. At the close of the war he located at Schenectady, New York, where he resided until 1794. He was a man of strong character, and felt the military services he rendered was a duty he owed his adopted country, and they were cheerfully performed. He led essentially a farmer's life. He removed from Schenectady to Cincinnati, Cortland County, and settled on the six hundred and forty acres allowed him by the government for his services in the war. That section of New York State was at that time almost a wilderness, and his nearest neighbor was sixteen miles distant. After a residence here of fourteen years, he removed to Marathon, where he spent the remainder of his life. He had a liberal English education, and while residing in Schenectady, was honored by being elected to several municipal offices. He had five sons and three daughters. The sons were: John, Isaac, Robert, William, and Abraham.

Heman P. Smith came to Knox County with his father, June 19, 1844, and settled in Lynn Township, on the farm which he now occupies and where his parents died, the father at the age of ninety-two, and his mother at the remarkable age of one hundred years and three months. Mr. Smith was educated in the common schools of Knox County, and at Beloit College, Wisconsin, from which he was recalled to take charge of the home farm. He enlisted in the Civil War in 1862, Company G of the Eighty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, and served until February, 1865, when he was discharged for disability, three months before the disbanding of his entire regiment. He was in all the engagements of the regiment, which had some of the most severe encounters of the war, and took part in fifteen pitched battles. He was in the front rank during the charge up Missionary Ridge, and spent nine months in the hospital.

May 25, 1865, Mr. Smith was married to Harriet E. Thompson, in Lynn Township. They have seven children: LeMont, born December 6, 1866; Letha, born April 7, 1870; Fred, born July 8, 1873; Abbie and Addie, born September 5, 1880; Urban, born June 5, 1882; and Bertha, born October 31, 1885.

In politics, Mr. Smith is an independent democrat, and has held most of the township offices, including that of Assessor, and School Director. He is a very successful farmer, and owns three hundred and fifty acres of land, including the old Smith homestead.

A. A. SNIDER.

A. A. Snider was born in Stark County, Illinois, November 29, 1849, and received his education in the common schools. His father, John Snider, was born in Ohio, and his mother, Susau S. (Wright), was a native of New York State. His paternal grandparents were William and Mary Snider.

Mr. A. A. Snider is the oldest of a family of six children. His brothers are: L. W., William E., and Elmer B. His sisters are both married: Mary M., married Call Salisbury; Emma, married John Cunningham. January 13, 1872, Mr. Snider married Martha J. Mahaffey, in Henry County, Illinois. Mrs. Snider was born in Peoria County, October 22, 1849. They have two children: Minnie M., born in 1876; Perry O., born in 1882. Mrs. Snider's parents were Nain and Deborah (Wright) Mahaffey; her father was born in Ohio; her mother, in New York State. It was early in the history of Peoria County that her father, a stone mason by trade, settled there. They had four children. Mr. and Mrs. Mahaffey are now deceased.

Mr. Snider lived with his parents until he was of age. For about six years after his marriage, he made his home in Stark County, on a farm East of La Fayette. He then purchased land in Section 1, Lynn Township, Knox County, Illinois, where he now has a fine farm of two hundred and seventy-two acres.

Mr. Snider is a member of the Masonic Order. He and his wife are members of the Eastern Star. In religion, Mr. and Mrs. Snider are Methodists. He is School Director, and has been Road Commissioner several terms. In politics, he is a republican.

WARFIELD B. TODD.

Warfield B. Todd was born in Frederick County, Maryland, February 23, 1837, and was educated in the common schools of his native State. He came to Illinois with his parents, Vachel H. and Susan (Brown) Todd, in 1851, and he is the eldest of their three children now living. They settled first in Stark County, but in 1855, located in Lynn Township, Knox County.

In the City of Chicago in March, 1862, Mr. Todd was married to Euphemia Lafferty, who was born in Lynn Township, Knox County, October 23, 1838, and is a daughter of John and Sallie (Slocum) Lafferty. Mr. and Mrs. Todd have had twelve children: John; Susan; Anar; Jennie; Charles; Nellie; Benjamin J.; Upton B.; Emma, who died January 23, 1895; and three who died in infancy. John married Emma Reed. Susan is now Mrs. F. L. Hilliard, and Anna was the wife of John Dryden, a farmer in Stark County, who died February 22, 1899. Mr. Lafferty was a native of Pennsylvania, and eight years after his marriage came from Ohio and settled in Lynn Township, where he was a farmer until his death in July, 1867. Mrs. Lafferty was a native of the State of New York, and still resides upon the old homestead.

In September, 1861, Mr. Todd enlisted in Company B, Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, and was Orderly Sergeant for seven months, when he was discharged for physical disability. In June of 1862, he enlisted again, this time in Company D, Sixty-ninth Illinois Volunteers, and was elected First Lieutenant, in which capacity he served four months, when he was discharged and returned home. In 1864, he was drafted and was assigned to Company A, Thirty-sixth Illinois, went to the front, and was in the battles of Spring Hill, Franklin and Nashville. He served until 1865, when he was discharged and returned to Lynn Township, where he has since been engaged in his calling as a farmer. His farm consists of three hundred and twenty acres of good land, under excellent cultivation.

Mr. Todd is a democrat, and has always taken an active interest in politics. In 1857, he was elected Constable, and in 1879, Supervisor, which office he held for six years. In 1898, he was again elected to the same office, which he now holds. He has been Assessor and Collector, and was a School Director for eighteen years. Mr. Todd is a member of the Masonic order, Kewanee Chapter, No. 47, and of Lafayette Blue Lodge, No. 501.

ALBRO, ALEXANDER W.; Merchant and Farmer; Galva, Henry County, and Lynn Township, Knox County; born November 23, 1824, in Warren County, New York. His parents were Samuel and Polly (Green) Albro. His father was a soldier in the war of 1812, and secured 160 acres of land in Lynn Township on a soldier's warrant, which he settled upon and improved, coming to Knox County in 1835, the first settler south of Fraker's Grove on Walnut Creek. Mr. Albro was married to Emily Spaulding February 19, 1846. They have two children living: Esther Ann, wife of Job Babbett; and Hattie H., wife of Chauncy Beadle; both reside in the State of Nebraska. It was in June, 1855, that he became a resident of Galva. He kept hotel, store, and livery barn, was prosperous in his business, and became one of Galva's prominent citizens. He is also one of the directors and principal stock holders of the Galva Gas Works. In Douglas County, Nebraska, he has 440 acres of land and another farm in Saunders County of the same state. In 1862, Mr. Albro enlisted in Company G One Hundred and Twelfth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, and was captain of the Company, Colonel Thomas J. Henderson, now General, commanding the regiment. After serving nearly two years, he resigned on account of the death of two of his children. Mr. Albro is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. In politics, he is a republican. He was Revenue Assessor for two years after the war, during the time of "income taxation."

APPELL, CHARLES LAWRENCE; Stockman and Farmer; Lynn Township; born in Sweden, June 7, 1836; educated in his native land. His parents, Peter M. and Anna (Hendrickson) Appell, were natives of Sweden. Mr. Appell came to America with his parents and six brothers and sisters in 1852, landing in New York City. They were nine weeks in a sailing vessel. The father and two children died of cholera in Chicago, where they had been only one week. Two other children died after the family had reached Victoria, Knox County, Illinois. The family lived three miles East of Victoria and depended much upon Charles L., as the oldest, for support. Later the mother made her home at his house where she died in 1889, honored and respected, nearly eighty years of age. For nearly ten years, Mr. Appell worked for others, though part of this time he worked with his brothers, Alfred and Andrew, upon eighty acres of land which his mother bought with money she brought from the old country. In 1862, the family moved to Indiana, where Mr. Appell teamed for more than three years, and where he met the one who became his wife. November 11, 1863, he was married, in Attica, Indiana, to Johanna Sophia, daughter of Lars and Anna (Johnson) Anderson, who came to the United States from Sweden in 1852, settled in Indiana, and died in Paxton Illinois, where they had moved to educate their children. Mr. and Mrs. Appell have had eleven children: Lydia, wife of Rev. G. A. Brandelle, Denver, Colorado; Alfred, a Lutheran minister in Peoria, Illinois; Hanna Charlotte; Carl John, an attorney; Amanda Sophia; August Louis; Edward Joseph; Alfrida Henrietta; Ferdinand Laurence; Martin Philip; and Edith Wilhelmina. After the war, Mr. Appell returned to Lynn Township, where he has been a successful farmer; he is one of the largest land-owners in the county. In religion, he is a Lutheran. He is a republican.

VICTORIA TOWNSHIP.

By J. W. Temple.

The surface of Victoria Township is somewhat broken, in some parts running down into timber land toward the south. It is well watered and drained by branches of Walnut Creek and tributaries of Spoon River. Some of its prairie land, however, is equal to the best in the county, and this comprises about two-thirds of its entire area. The larger portion of its timbered land is underlaid with a fine vein of coal. Stock farming has also been extensively and successfully conducted.

The early settlers chose to locate farms in or near the timber in preference to the prairie, because of the shelter, fuel and building material afforded.

The pioneers in Victoria Township began to arrive in 1835. Among them were John Essex, Edward Brown, Moody and Moses Robinson, Passons Aldredge and one or two others, who located farms in the "timber." Others followed the next year, among them being Deacon George H. Reynolds, who built the first house on the prairie. He was also the first postmaster in Victoria and the first tavern keeper, if we except a small hostelry kept for a few years at the old site of Victoria village. The first child born in this township was Sarah, daughter of Moody Robinson, who first opened her eyes on November 16, 1836. The first marriage was that of Peter Sornborger and Phebe Wilbur, in 1836, on Section 39. The first sermons preached were by Revs. Z. Hall and Charles Bostwick. Passons Aldredge was the first Justice of the Peace and Henry Shurtleff the first Constable. Both were elected in 1837. Mr. Shurtleff was also the first school teacher in the township teaching, in 1838, in a log school house in a grove of timber on Section 21. Most of the school houses in this early day were built of roughly hewn logs. There are now nine substantial frame school buildings in the township. One of the schools is graded, and the enrollment is two hundred and eighty-eight. These houses cost nearly six thousand dollars.

Many of the first settlers of Victoria were from the South; the Robinsons coming from Tennessee, which State they left because of their conscientious objection to slavery. This family appears to have been of exceptional longevity, one member having reached the age of one hundred and four; another, a lively old lady, still a resident of the village, is past ninety-nine and seems likely to live for several years more. Another, familiarly called "old Uncle Moses Robinson," lived till past ninety-four. This town is rather noted for the number of extremely old persons in its limits, not a few having lived past the age of ninety years.

The population of Victoria is peaceful, law-abiding and industrious. They have two churches; and in addition to the religious training given in these, services are held in many of its school houses. Among its citizens is a large percentage of Swedish birth or descent, who here, as everywhere, prove to be a valuable addition to the population; and by their thrift and industry many of them have become wealthy and solid citizens. The first pioneer among these was Rev. Jonas J. Hedstrom, who settled in the town at an early day, and succeeded in drawing after him a numerous immigration from Sweden.

In the early settlement, many of the farmers were compelled to haul their wheat to Chicago, a distance of over one hundred and sixty miles. Wheat was then worth but thirty cents for choice fall varieties. On the return trips they brought home lumber, salt and dry goods.

The population of the township has remained nearly stationary for forty years, being, by the census of 1890, eleven hundred and seventy-nine; in 1860, it was eleven hundred and twenty; in 1870, the returns showed eleven hundred and ninety; and in 1880, twelve hundred and fifty-two.

The first town officers elected (in April, 1853) were J. L. Jarnigan, Supervisor; J. F. Hubbell.

Clerk; B. Youngs, Assessor; C. A. Shurtleff, Collector; Alex Sornborger, Overseer of the Poor; A. B. Coddling, Peter Van Buren and J. W. Mosher, Highway Commissioners; Peter Van Buren and Moses Robinson, Justices of the Peace; C. A. Shurtleff and Seneca Mosher, Constables.

VICTORIA VILLAGE.

By J. W. Temple.

The village of Victoria, one of the very few towns in Knox County until lately lacking railroad facilities, yet which persistently went on and prospered without them, is located on the high ground of a beautifully rolling prairie, partly in Copley and partly in Victoria townships. It was first laid out May 11, 1849, by A. A. Denny, then County Surveyor, for John Becker, J. W. Spaulding, J. J. Hedstrom, J. Halstrom, W. L. Shurtleff, J. Freed and G. F. Reynolds, A. Arnold and J. Knapp. It was at first platted on Sections 7 and 16 of Victoria Township, but soon spread until it covered parts of Sections 12 and 13 of Copley. The village originally started one and one-half miles southeast of its present location; where those pioneers of a new settlement, a store, a tavern, and a blacksmith shop, strove to become the nucleus of a future town. But the Chicago road ran through the present site, and George F. Reynolds kept his house here open as a tavern, and the village gradually formed around its present position, presumably to be nearer a good tavern and an important road. This hypothesis accounts for the number of proprietors when the place was finally platted. They had come there and actually started a town before it had been laid out at all, so that nearly all the residents may be reckoned among the early owners of desirable village lots.

The present village of Victoria boasts of over three hundred inhabitants, and is the center of a flourishing farming community and of a considerable local trade. Its first, and for many years its only, store was conducted by John Becker. Early in 1899, it had four, besides a postoffice, which distributed more reading matter in proportion to the population than any other in the county. The last mentioned circumstance affords an index to the average intelligence of its people. In the Summer of 1899, the Galesburg and Eastern Railroad was extended into the township and village, thus furnishing a fresh impetus to business prosperity. Lumber yards, stock yards, elevators and a bank are now among its commercial institutions, and these improved trade facilities have wonderfully added to the growth and importance of both village and township.

Victoria also has a well conducted graded school and three churches—Methodist, Congregational and Swedish Methodist.

Of these, the first, in order of time was the Congregational Society, which was originally organized as a Presbyterian body, but subsequently changed its affiliations. It dates its existence from May 30, 1841, and became identified with the Congregational communion on April 25, 1849. On August 12, 1852, a church edifice costing twelve hundred dollars was dedicated, and the congregation subsequently built a parsonage, valued at eight hundred dollars. The number of communicants is eighty-nine, and there are ninety pupils in the Sunday school, while the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor has a membership of sixty-five. The first pastor was Rev. S. G. Wright, and the present incumbent of the office is Rev. James J. Watson. N. B. Ives, Jr., is Superintendent of the Sunday school.

The Methodist Episcopal denomination has a church membership of eighty-seven, and a Sunday school attendance of fifty. A house of worship was erected in 1855, at an outlay of three thousand dollars. The present pastor is Rev. W. S. Porter, who also has charge of the Maxey chapel, in the township of Persifer. The latter is a branch, or mission, of the Victoria church. It has thirty-nine members and a Sunday school attendance of fifty.

In that part of the village lying in Copley Township may be found the first Swedish Methodist church ever organized. It was established on December 15, 1846, with only five members, by Rev. J. J. Hedstrom, the founder of Swedish Methodism. A church edifice was erected in 1854, and a parsonage built three years later, the denomination's real property being at present valued at three thousand five hundred dollars. It conducts a mission church at Center Prairie, in Victoria Township, where a house of worship costing fifteen hundred dollars has been built. There is but one Board of Trustees for both bodies, the two branches virtually constituting one church. The Center Prairie branch was organized in 1869, by Rev. Peter Newburg. The aggregate membership of both churches is one hundred and fifty, and of the Sunday schools, eighty. The first permanent pastor was Rev. H. O. Wester, who came in 1857. The present minister in charge is Rev. Otto Raba.

Popular sentiment has always been intolerant of the saloon, and there are no licenses granted for the sale of ardent spirits.

Victoria has many societies. The G. A. R. has a flourishing post, the village having furnished many gallant volunteers to the national forces during the War of the Rebellion. Victoria Lodge of the Odd Fellows' fraternity is a thriving society here. The Masonic brotherhood has a hall and a large membership. The Modern Woodmen have a large and flourishing camp, and, with the Rebekahs and Odd Fellows, occupy a fine hall.

GEORGE W. REYNOLDS.

Captain George W. Reynolds was born in Milton, Massachusetts, July 15, 1826. He is the son of George F. and Abigail (Locke) Reynolds, who were natives of New Hampshire—the father having been born at Barington, in 1799; the mother in the same town, in 1804. They had a family of four children: George W., Charles C., John W., and Julia A. They came to Illinois in June, 1835, when George W. was only nine years old, and settled for a short time in Tazewell County. They came to Knox County in 1836, settling on a farm in Victoria Township, which has been known for nearly two full generations as the "Reynolds Farm." Here the father lived, and died at a ripe old age, reaching within seven years of the century mark. He was Victoria's first Postmaster; was Justice of the Peace for many years; and was one of the first organizers of the town, which stands mostly on his land.

Captain Reynolds' early school advantages were not at all satisfactory. He remained on the home farm until 1853, attending the district school as much as his farm duties would permit. Schools throughout the State had not then been organized, and here and there, the little log school house stood as the precursor of the better structures of to-day. The school was three miles distant, and George availed himself of all the instruction that the little log cabin afforded. At the age of eighteen he attended Knox Academy for one year, paying his board by working nights and mornings, and Saturdays. He then returned to the old homestead, remaining until 1847, when he took a trip to the New England States. In the Spring of 1848, he returned to Illinois and took his father's farm on shares until 1854. His next adventure was to California by the overland route, in search of gold. After remaining there for two years, he returned by the way of Panama and New Orleans, and settled on the farm which he subsequently purchased, and where he now lives.

Captain Reynolds is imbued with a good degree of patriotism and served his country faithfully during the late Rebellion. In 1862, he enlisted in Company K, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteers and was chosen Captain. He served through the war and was mustered out in June, 1865. He returned to his home in Victoria, receiving the plaudits of his fellow townsmen for his meritorious services. He then engaged in farming and stock-raising.

Captain Reynolds has always had the confidence of his neighbors, and the citizens generally. He was elected Town Clerk for several years, was Township Treasurer of the School Fund for about ten years, and has been School Director for a long time. The village of Victoria was organized in 1887, since which time he has been Village Treasurer. In religious belief, he is a Congregationalist, and has always done active work for the church. In politics, he is a true republican, believing thoroughly in republican measures and principles.

Captain Reynolds has been twice married. His first wife was Mary C. Hotchkiss, a native of New York. They were married in February, 1849, and the union was blessed with one son, Lewis M., born October 26, 1849. Mrs. Reynolds died in 1858, and a second marriage took place in 1859, to Elizabeth Swickard, a native of Wayne County, Ohio; they have one daughter, Jennie M., born November 1, 1868, and now the wife of James McMaster. Mr. and Mrs. McMaster have one daughter, Ethelyne, born in 1896.

BECKER, JOHN; Merchant (retired); Victoria Township; born June 10, 1811, in Osego County, New York. His father was Philip Becker; his grandfather, Jacob Becker, came from Germany, and was a soldier in the Revolution. Mr. Becker was educated in the common schools. He was married in Victoria, October 12, 1845, to Mary J. Smith, daughter of an 1839 settler of Victoria, and a sister of Judge A. A. Smith, of Galesburg. Their children are: Hannah, Emma, Ella, Carrie, and Sue L. Mr. Becker came to Victoria in 1844, and was a merchant for twenty years. He moved to Galesburg, where he was prominent in banking circles, and was Alderman of the Third Ward. In 1892, he returned to Victoria Township, and settled on a farm which he owned in 1845. In religion, Mr. Becker was a Methodist. He was a republican.

BULSON, FREDERICK; Farmer; Victoria Township; born July 10, 1820, in Osego County, New York; educated in the district schools. His father, Isaac Bulson, of Rennselaer County, New York, was a farmer and settled in Osego County. Frederick worked on the farm till 1846, when he came to Victoria Township. In the Spring of 1847, while on a visit in Pike County, he enlisted for the Mexican War in Company K, First Regiment Illinois Volunteers. He marched to Santa Fe, New Mexico, and after a service of twenty-one months returned to Illinois and was discharged. He soon after bought the farm on which he lived for half a century. He now owns 600 acres of land in Copley, Victoria, and Lynn townships, besides a large tract in Nebraska. He was married in March, 1850, to Mary, daughter of John

Geo. W. Reynolds

Hainline. They had three sons and five daughters: George H. (deceased), Ira, Abram (deceased), Sarah E., Hannah A., Susan E., Alice and Mary. Ira is a farmer in Copley Township; Abram died August 10, 1889, aged twenty-three years; George H. died at the age of five years; Susan E. is Mrs. W. A. Shaw of Nebraska; Sarah E. is Mrs. O. C. Bradley of Iowa. Mr. Bulson died January 9, 1892. Mr. Bulson was a democrat and served as Road Commissioner and School Director.

COLEMAN, JAMES; Farmer; Victoria Township; born December 27, 1830, in Mercer County, Pennsylvania. His father, Samuel Coleman, came to Victoria Township in 1855, and died in 1875; his mother came from Ireland. He was educated in the common schools. Mr. Coleman was thrice married. His first wife died in Pennsylvania; his second in Illinois; he married as his third wife, Eliza Kane, of Victoria. Mr. Coleman came with his father from Pennsylvania, and located on a farm near him. He finally moved to the homestead where he now lives. He has been School Director for twenty-one years. His children are: Lincoln, John, William, Clyde, Francis J., Lotie, Ada F., and Susie B.

DEWOLFE, CLAYTON A.; Farmer; Victoria Township; born April 30, 1845. He was the son of Joseph DeWolfe, and Mary Ann, daughter of Martin Gibbs, one of the early settlers. Mr. DeWolfe was educated in the common schools. He was married to Lucetta, daughter of Joseph Atherton, March 7, 1867, at West Jersey, Illinois. They have four children: Burton A., Ernest C., Ethel N., and Louise. One son is a farmer, the other a carpenter, both of whom are members of the Grange. Mr. DeWolfe went to Iowa in 1880, and in 1889, he returned to Illinois and settled in Goshen; in 1890, he moved to Victoria Township. In 1894, he was elected Road Commissioner and served three years; he has also been School Director for several years. In religion, Mr. DeWolfe is a Protestant.

ERICSON, ERIC; Farmer; Victoria Township; born in Farla, Soken Lane, Helsingland, Sweden, March 2, 1836; educated in his native land. His father was John Ericson of Sweden, who died at the age of eighty-six years at the home of his son, Eric; his mother was Segridd Munson. His paternal grandparents were Eric and Margaret (Peterson) Ericson; his paternal great-grandfather was John Ericson. The family is an old and honored one in Sweden. Mr. Ericson came to the United States with his parents in 1850, and settled in Manitowoc, Wisconsin. In 1864, he came to Knox County with his wife and settled in Victoria Township, Section 10, where he bought seventy acres of land; he now owns 320 acres, besides timber land. In Manitowoc, Wisconsin, Mr. Ericson was married to Christina Bloom, February 6, 1862; they had one son, John E., born May 27, 1866. Mrs. Ericson died March 4, 1896, at the age of fifty-nine. John E. Ericson was married, January 18, 1888, to Amanda, daughter of John A. Johnson, a blacksmith in Victoria; they have four children: Edna Christina, Alice Maurie, Earl John, and Carl Magnus. Mr. Ericson is one of the best farmers in the township, and was for six years Road Commissioner. He is a member of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a republican.

HARDINE, SVANTE B.; Farmer; Victoria Township; born September 10, 1858, in Sweden, where he was educated and learned the carpenters' trade. He was married to Mary Nelson, in Victoria, December 30, 1881; their children are: Earl M., Raymond B., Hazel N., Esther M., Ethel J. Mr. Hardine came to Galesburg in 1880, and worked at the carpenters' trade for two years; he then located on the farm in Victoria Township, on which his father-in-law, B. Nelson, settled in 1868, which he afterwards bought. In 1890, he removed to Galva, Illinois, where he died in 1891. Mr. Hardine is a member of the Lutheran Church. In politics, he is a republican.

HEDSTROM, CHARLES O.; Farmer; Victoria Township; born in Walnut Grove Township, January 29, 1868. His father, Nels Hedstrom, was an early settler and prominent farmer of Walnut Grove Township. Charles O. Hedstrom was educated in the common schools, and began farming in 1892, with his brother. In 1894, he located on a farm in Victoria Township, where he now resides. He was married to May Herald, of Victoria, July 28, 1892. They had three children: Cecil C., Hester and Josephine. He is a republican, and a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He is one of the leading farmers of his township.

HEDSTROM, JONAS; The precise place of Mr. Hedstrom's birth cannot be certainly told, but it is believed to have occurred on the Island of Oland, Sweden, August 13, 1813. His brother, Olof, who was ten years older, had as early as 1825 arrived in New York, and within a decade had become a Methodist minister. In 1833 Olof visited the fatherland, and on his return to America was accompanied by Jonas. The first few years of his residence in this country Jonas Hedstrom passed in the States of New York and Pennsylvania, and worked at his trade, as a blacksmith. When a family named Sornberg moved west to Victoria, Illinois, the young smith was irresistibly led to follow them, in 1838. The reason was made clear when he shortly married one of the Misses Sornberg. He took up his abode with his wife at Farmington. During his residence in the East, he had become converted to Methodism, and in 1839 he commenced to preach in the Salem school house, a little way east of Victoria, still continuing to work at his forge, as his regular occupation. His sermons were in English, and were listened to by many of the settlers thereabouts. However, believing that many of his countrymen would soon cross the ocean and find a home on the western prairies, he obtained from his pastor, Mr. Clark, a testament with the English and Swedish text in parallel columns. Thus he renewed his knowledge of the Swedish tongue, which he had almost forgotten. The preparation was timely. Swedish immigrants came, many of them directed to Illinois through Rev. Olof Hedstrom, who was conducting a mission for them in the Bethel ship at New York. In 1845 Olof Olson, who had been sent by the Jansonists of north-central Sweden to secure a suitable site for the colony, was directed to Jonas Hedstrom, and by him assisted in purchasing the first land for the Bishop Hill colony. In July, 1846, Eric Janson, and a band of followers, came to Victoria, and were hospitably entertained by Mr. Hedstrom, after which they were piloted to their destination.

On December 15, 1846, Jonas Hedstrom organized, in his log-cabin at Victoria, a Swedish Methodist Church, with a nucleus of five members. This was the first Swedish Methodist organization in the world. The small beginning grew and flourished, and Mr. Hedstrom was led to join the Peoria conference in 1847. Thenceforth he devoted his time entirely to the ministry, becoming an indefatigable worker. He traveled extensively over a wide circuit, and established churches at Andover, Galesburg, Rock Island and Moline; and assisted in forming a church at New Sweden, Iowa, and a Norwegian organization at Leland, Illinois. His strong constitution finally succumbed to the severities of "circuit" life. In the Fall of 1857 he retired, and on May 11, 1859, went to his heavenly reward, at the age of forty-five. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. W. P. Graves, and the remains interred in Victoria cemetery. In 1874 his wife passed away. Of his five children, two are living—Luther Hedstrom and Mrs. Becker, of Victoria.

JARVIS, SAMUEL; Farmer; Victoria; born December 5, 1829, at Long Island; educated in the common schools. He was married to Mary E. Dean in Victoria in 1857. Their children are: Fannie, Jennie, and Hetty; his second marriage was with Hannah Sornberger in Victoria. They have one child, Lena. Mr. Jarvis learned the carpenters' trade in New York City, and came to Victoria in 1855. He worked at his trade and farmed for several years, and then moved into the village. Mr. Jarvis is a republican. In 1888, he was appointed Postmaster and held the office till 1893; he was deputy for three years, re-appointed, and now holds the office at the present time. He is a prominent Mason, and was Master for ten years; Deputy Grand Master for the Thirteenth District of Illinois; Deputy Grand Lecturer of the State, and has been Assessor and School Director. Mr. Jarvis is a member of the Methodist Church.

LARSON, JUSTUS A.; Farmer; Victoria Township; born June 14, 1858, in Copley Township, Knox County, Illinois. His father, Lewis Larson, was born in Sweden and came to Copley Township in 1844. There were four sons and one daughter: Henry G.; Justus A.; John W., deceased; Victor T.; and Ida M. Mr. Larson was educated in the Galesburg Business College. He was married to Elizabeth Challman in Walnut Grove Township, October 10, 1888. There was one son, Paul K. Mr. Larson has always been a leader in town affairs. He is Highway Commissioner of Victoria Township. He is a republican.

OLMSTED, AARON W.; Liveryman; Victoria; born July 5, 1851, in Otsego County, New York; educated in the common schools. His parents were Henry B. and Catherine (Wilder) Olmsted. He was married to Etta Robbins in Oneida March 24, 1874. Their children were: Lester; Claud, deceased; Harry; Paul; Hazel; Rex; and Don, deceased. Mr. Olmsted moved with his family to Marceline, Missouri, in September, 1892. They returned to Galesburg in December, 1893, where his wife died January 24, 1894. Her parents were Rubin and Mary (Mayo) Robbins. His second marriage was with Lone E. Sornberger, June 15, 1895; they have one son, Winthrop A., born March 8, 1896. Her parents were Anson and Catherine (Wilbur) Sornberger, of New York. Mr. Olmsted followed farming until 1895, since which time he has been engaged in the livery business. In politics, he is a republican.

ROBINSON, CHARLES S.; Merchant; Victoria; born June 4, 1845, at Victoria, Illinois; educated in the Business College of Davenport, Iowa. He was married to Emily Bristol in Galesburg, in 1869. Their children are: Grace E. and Gertrude. Mr. Charles S. Robinson is a son of Moses Robinson, a farmer, who came to Victoria Township in 1836, and engaged in the mercantile business in 1866. Moses Robinson died January 2, 1898, at the age of ninety-three. Charles S. Robinson began business with his father in 1867. He was afterwards in business in Beatrice, Nebraska, and Greenfield, Iowa. He returned to Victoria in 1883 and engaged in the mercantile business with E. Coleman. He sold out in 1896, and a year later engaged in the same business with George M. Sornberger. Mr. Robinson is a democrat and was the first President of the village.

SAYRE, CHARLES A.; Druggist; Victoria; born August 9, 1844, at Rushville, New York; educated in the common schools and Rushville Academy. His father was John Sayre. Mr. C. A. Sayre was married to Mary E. Young, in Victoria, February 28, 1884. They have one child, Gertrude Peabody. Mr. Sayre enlisted in April, 1861, in Company E, Twenty-eighth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry for two years; then re-enlisted in Company C, Fifteenth New York Cavalry, and served until June, 1865, as first Sergeant. September 4, 1865, he enlisted in Company F, Fifteenth United States Cavalry, and served as Sergeant for three years. Mr. Sayre spent four years in Minnesota, where he was for a time Deputy Clerk of the District court. In 1875, he came to Victoria. He is a member of Village Board, and Commander of P. G. Tait Post, No. 698, G. A. R. Mr. Sayre is a democrat.

SILEN, JOHN E.; Farmer; Victoria Township; born in Sweden April 3, 1825, where he was educated. In July, 1858, he was married to Catrena Patronella, who died March 18, 1876. January 19, 1878, he was married to Matilda

Rodine. By the first marriage, he had four children: Arthur E., of Nebraska, grocer and farmer; Sophia; Emma; and Lorena. Mr. Silen came to America in 1846, and lived at Bishop Hill one year, when in company with George Challman he went to Galesburg and worked at the carpenters' trade. In 1850, he went to Peoria, where he remained until the Fall of 1851, when he moved to Victoria, and began buying stock. In 1852-3, he worked at his trade of carpenter. In 1859, he moved upon a farm that he purchased the year before and on which he still resides. In 1863, he built a house of lumber hauled from Peoria. Mr. Silen has been a very successful farmer. In politics, he is a republican.

SORNBORGER, CHARLES D.; Farmer; Victoria Township; born in Victoria in 1843; educated in the common schools. His father was Anson Sornborger, an early settler. Mr. C. D. Sornborger was first married, in 1870, to Marion Clark, who died leaving two sons: Clifford F., and Clide W. His second marriage was with Irene Brown, in 1885. Mr. Sornborger is a republican and has been active in public affairs; he has been School Director for four years, and has also been Town Treasurer. In 1868, he settled on the farm where he now resides. Mr. Sornborger is in religion a Protestant.

SORNBORGER, GEORGE M.; Farmer; Victoria Township; born April 1, 1841, in Victoria, Illinois; educated in the common schools. He was married to Frances E., daughter of John T. Suydam, October 12, 1865, in Copley Township, Illinois. They have eight children: Clarence T., George A., Lolette K., Mary E., Claud, Floyd, Grace F., and Fern L. Mr. Sornborger's father was Anson Sornborger, who came from Dutchess County, New York, in 1838; he had nine sons, and one daughter, now the wife of Aaron Olmsted; and two brothers, Alexander and Peter. George Sornborger, the father of Anson, was a soldier of the Revolution; he died in Victoria in 1841. Anson lived in Victoria until 1859, when he removed to Copley Township and engaged in farming. George M. remained at home until 1862, when he enlisted in Company K, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteers; he served one year and then returned to Copley, having been discharged for disability. He settled in Copley in 1866 on a rented farm. In 1868, he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land in Victoria Township, where he now resides. Mr. Sornborger is a charter member of P. G. Tait Post, No. 698, G. A. R., a charter member of Walnut Grange, No. 1653, a charter member of Knox Henry Pomona Grange, No. 837, and a member of the Illinois State Grange. In politics, he is a republican, and has held the offices of Collector and Assessor.

WOOLSEY, THOMAS; Farmer; Victoria Township; born January 30, 1848, in Sycamore, DeKalb County, Illinois; educated in the common schools. His parents were Deo and Minerva (Olmsted) Woolsey, of New York. He was married in Victoria, September 10, 1871, to Mary H., daughter of Dr. John L. Fifield, of Victoria. Their children are: Ralph B., Ross A., L. Eselwin, and Robert C. Mr. Woolsey's father came from New York to DeKalb County, and later moved to Victoria, where he died in 1853, leaving his wife, who died in 1867, and four sons, W. McKindry, John A., Russell, and Thomas, and one daughter Hannah. Dr. Fifield was born in New Hampshire in 1805, and came to Victoria in 1837. He was a practicing physician for many years and died in 1890. Mr. Woolsey enlisted in 1861, in Company B, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Illinois Volunteers, and served till the close of the war. He is living on the Fifield homestead. He is, in religion, a Congregationalist. In politics, he is a republican.

COPLEY TOWNSHIP.

By J. W. Temple.

The surface of Copley Township, so named from a prominent family of that name at one time residing in it, consists chiefly of fertile prairie land, just sufficiently rolling to ensure good drainage; though in its southern part there is some broken ground, probably one-fourth of its area having been originally timber land. There are in the township eighteen thousand acres of improved farm land. It is well watered and drained by branches of Walnut and Court creeks, as well as by other smaller streams.

The first settler in the township was a Mr. Berry, who, in 1836, located near the present village of Victoria, which lies partly in this and partly in Victoria Township. Matthew Herbert and Larkin Robinson followed, the next year. In 1839, the first members of what soon became a thrifty Scotch colony began to settle on some of the best lands; and the descendants of these sons of "Auld Scotia" are now men of wealth and high moral standing in the community. The Gordons, Cooks, McCornacks, Taits, McKies, Leightons, McClymonts, McMasters, McDowells, Stevensons, Milroys, McQuarries, and others, with their numerous and thrifty progeny, being among the most prominent citizens of the township. Later, its rich lands have attracted a large number of Swedes, whose thrift, industry and probity have made of these first immigrants wealthy farmers and landholders. Their descendants, by intermarrying with the native population, are fast becoming a homogeneous, as they are a patriotic, body of American citizens; while their success is due to brain no less than to brawn.

When the first settlers arrived, a small tribe of Indians still inhabited a grove, now known as Foreman Grove, near the northern limits of the present township.

The first child born in Copley was a son of Matthew Herbert, in 1838. The first death was that of Harriet Foster, in 1842. Rev. Charles Bostwick and Mrs. Hurr were the first couple to be married, and Rev. Mr. Bostwick preached the first sermon in 1840, in a log school house.

The first school was taught by Miss Mary J. Smith, afterwards Mrs. John Becker, in a log cabin, one and one-half miles northwest of Victoria. There are now nine school districts, each with a neat, and some with costly school houses; and there are few townships where the value of education is more genuinely appreciated than here; the result being shown in the exceptional intelligence and culture of its citizens.

The first saw mill—that of Jeremiah Collinson—operated by horse power, was put up in 1850. Mr. Berry was the builder of the first frame structure, on Section 9, in 1840. Now, some of the finest residences in the county are to be found on its prairie farms.

Copley Township has lacked railroads, and by reason of that want has no large towns. In 1894, however, to reach the extensive coal fields of this and Victoria townships, a railroad was built from Wataga, on the line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, running through nearly the center of the township, to a mining village called Etherly, located on the eastern boundary of Copley. This village was laid out on the southeastern quarter of Section 35, on August 10, 1894, by Samuel L. Charles. Owing to legal complications, which prevented for a time the operating of the road, the village is yet without many inhabitants. It is believed, however, that, under altered conditions, a thriving mining town will soon be built up to develop the rich, unworked coal deposits which underlie nearly all the southern part of Copley. This railroad has been since extended into the village of Victoria, which, with its natural advantages of situation, has heretofore only lacked railroad facilities to become one of the most prosperous villages in the county.

The first town officers elected, in 1853, were: J. O. Stanley, Supervisor; N. Kelsey, Clerk; J. M. Perkins, Assessor; Austin Gaines, Collector; Isaac Copley and A. W. Buckley, Justices; A. A. Smith, S. McCornack and J. Sirie, Commissioners of Highways, and J. Collinson, Overseer of the Poor.

Its population in 1860 was one thousand and ten; in 1870 it was twelve hundred and nineteen; in 1880 it had fallen to one thousand and seventy-six, and in 1890 was nine hundred and ten.

The township has three churches; a Methodist Episcopal and a Swedish church are located in the village of Victoria, and a Scotch church three and one half miles west of that place. All are well attended, the religious sentiment among all the inhabitants being very strong. The Scotch church is Calvinistic in creed, and affiliated with the Presbyterian denomination. It is known as the John Knox Church, and was organized in 1854, with twenty-five members, by Rev. R. C. Matthews, D. D. and S. Vaill. Rev. J. T. Bliss was its first pastor, his place being now filled by Rev. John Pugh.

PETER GORDON.

Peter Gordon, son of James and Jean (Heron) Gordon, was born in Creetown, Scotland, May 19, 1819. In 1840 he came to this country and finally settled in Copley Township, Knox County, Illinois. He began working by the month, but later bought a farm and was so successful in his chosen occupation, that, in 1885, when he moved to Victoria, he had greatly increased his possession.

In 1845 Mr. Gordon was married in Copley Township to Mrs. Mary Ann (McDowell) Tait, who was born in Scotland, January 24, 1814, and was the daughter of John and Anna (Livingston) McDowell. Her mother died in Scotland in 1824, and her father came to America in 1839 and settled in Copley Township. Mr. McDowell died in 1867. Mr. William Tait, Mrs. Gordon's first husband, died in 1843, leaving her with four sons: John, William F., Peter G. and Houston P. In 1862 these four sons enlisted in Company G, Eighty-ninth Illinois Volunteers, Colonel Hotchkiss commanding. John died at Chattanooga from wounds received in the fighting at Dalton. Peter G. rose to the rank of lieutenant and fell at the battle of Nashville. William and Houston P. survived the war. The former is a physician in Galesburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon have four children: James, Elizabeth M., Alexander H. and Albinus N. James has a farm in Walnut Grove Township; Alexander H. has one in Copley Township; Albinus is on the home farm; Elizabeth M. married William Robson, of Wataga, Illinois.

From the humble beginning in 1840, Mr. Gordon's possessions grew to more than fifteen hundred acres, and he gave each of his four children one hundred and sixty acres of land. He has also a handsome residence in Victoria. For many years he has been an active member of the Presbyterian church, and is always interested in whatever contributes to the welfare of the community in which he lives. For twenty years he has been a School Director, and he is looked up to by all as one of the most substantial men of his township. In politics, Mr. Gordon is a republican.

BECKER, FREDERICK; Farmer; Copley Township; born October 29, 1840, in Otsego County, New York; educated in the district school, Charlottesville Seminary, Fergussonville Academy (New York), and at a select school in Illinois. His parents were Frederick and Catharine (Tenbroeck) Becker. The ancestors of the Becker family came from Germany, settled in New Jersey, removed to Albany County, New York, and thence to South Worcester, Otsego County. The father of Mr. Becker died February 8, 1841, aged thirty-one and a half years. Mr. Becker came to Victoria in the Spring of 1857; he taught school in the winter and clerked and engaged in farm work in the summer. In 1868, he rented a farm, and in 1869, purchased the farm on Section 13, where he now resides. He was married to Jane, a daughter of Rev. J. J. Hedstrom. Mr. Becker said: "I have lived in Copley Township about forty years and have been associated with a thrifty, energetic and ambitious class of farmers; one of the important lessons to be learned in life is, 'do something with energy.'" Mr. Becker has filled official positions in the township, and for several years has been a member of the Board of Supervisors.

LEIGHTON, WILLIAM H.; Farmer; Copley Township; born October 8, 1835, in New York City. His parents were William and Isabel (Ironside) Leighton, who came from Scotland to New York in 1832, and to Knoxville, Illinois, in 1837. Mrs. Leighton died in 1840. In 1847, Mr. Leighton moved to Copley Township, and then to Sparta Township, where he died in 1861, leaving three sons: William H., John A., and James. William H. was educated in Knoxville. He was married to Jannette McKie in Copley Township, December 1, 1864. Their children are: Charles H., Margaret, May, and Isabel. Mrs. Leighton was born July 13, 1842, and was a daughter of William and Margaret (Miller) McKie. Mr. Leighton came with his father to Knoxville in 1837, and settled in Copley Township in 1847, where he is now living. He is a member of the Presbyterian church. In politics, he is a republican, and held the office of Supervisor from 1871-3, and from 1880-8. He has been Road Commissioner and School Trustee for many years.

TEMPLE, JAMES W.; Printer and Farmer; Copley Township; born April 13, 1828, in Ohio; educated in Meadville, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania. His parents were Alexander and Sarah (Allen) Temple of New York; his paternal grandparents were Alexander, born in Scotland, and Marie Flaasborough, born in Holland; his maternal grandfather was Hezekiah Allen of New York. Mr. J. W. Temple was married October 29, 1854, in Truro Township, Illinois, to Bessie P. Cook. They have six children: William C., Thomas C., Joseph W., Mary A., Susan A., and Ellen E. Mr. Temple came to Illinois in 1847, and, after making the overland trip to California, returned to Illinois in 1854. July, 1862, he enlisted in the Eighty-third Illinois Regiment and served in the War of the Rebellion. He was made a Captain in 1864, and discharged from service in August, 1865. In religion, Mr. Temple is a Universalist. In politics, he is a republican. In 1868, he was elected Circuit Clerk of Knox County, and served as Supervisor for several years.

SPARTA TOWNSHIP.

By E. H. Goldsmith.

This township was organized April 5, 1853, at the home of Thomas H. Taylor, on Section 14, and the following town officers were elected: T. H. Taylor, Supervisor; Asaph DeLong, Clerk; Stephen Smith, Assessor; Charles W. Rhodes, Collector; D. Reed, Stephen Russell and Peter Davis, Highway Commissioners; Morvan Baker, and Hugh Ferguson, Justices of the Peace; and Marshall P. DeLong, Constable. Mr. DeLong afterwards served the town as Justice of the Peace for twenty-five years. S. G. Deau served eight years, and one of the present incumbents, John J. Sutor, six years. The Supervisors have been: T. H. Taylor, two years; Peter Davis, John Gray, A. Ebright, H. P. Wood, and M. P. DeLong, one year each. The last incumbent, William Robson, has held the office for the past twenty years, the longest continuous service of any Supervisor in Knox County. From its position Sparta Township forms the watershed dividing the water courses feeding the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, thus giving it almost perfect immunity from damaging floods, and as rich land as is found in the State. A good vein of underlying mineral makes it well worthy of the classic name given it by Amos Wilmot. While Hezekiah Buford has the credit of being the first settler by building on Section 23, in 1834, the Wilmots have a record for longest continuous residence on the same land, for Amos Wilmot built a log cabin in June, 1836, on Section 6, in which he lived for fifteen years. He then built a house, where he lived until his death in 1878, since which time some member of the family has occupied the home. Sidney L. Wilmot is now the owner, but resides on Section 5. He has, lying around his home, ash posts which have been cut for sixty-one years. Very soon after his arrival came Reuben, Cyrus and Edward Robbins, brothers, and Levi Roberts, a cousin. The first of these is about the last of the early settlers and is now in his eighty-fifth year. To him we are indebted for some of the information given in this sketch. From the fact of Levi Robbins having raised a large orchard and other trees "Robbins' Grove" was for many years a noted land-mark and people came long distances for apples, as well as to hold picnics. In 1836 Asaph DeLong (who built the first house between Knoxville and Henderson timber), Luman Field and William Heath settled on Section 31. The latter was married at Knoxville to Lucinda Field in 1837, and "hung up" housekeeping in their log cabin, a picture of which Mrs. Heath still preserves. In a northeast direction they had but one neighbor nearer than Victoria. Mrs. Heath is in her eightieth year (1899) and has lately been made a member of the society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, she being a granddaughter of Elisha Field, Jr., and a great-granddaughter of Elisha Field, Sr., both of whom fought in the Revolutionary War. She is in possession of papers showing the entire war history of her illustrious ancestors. Her grandchildren presented her with the badge of the society, which is an old-fashioned spinning wheel with beautiful surroundings and inscription.

James Neely settled on Section 30 in 1838, and Abram Neely on Section 5 a few years later. Other early settlers were: B. Ely, Thomas and George W. Faulkner, Booker Pickrel and C. C. West. Among those who came subsequently and who, with those already mentioned, as well as those who will be noticed hereafter, have been influential in the political and religious prosperity of the township, are Solomon Lyon, J. V. R. Carley, Schuyler Goldsmith, A. F. Adams, William E. Morse, Henry Rommel, L. W. Olson, Oliver Stream, Joseph Masters, J. H. Merrill, James Paddock, Edmund Kennedy, James Barry, William S. Patterson, William A. Lee, Jr., D. W. Nisley, R. W. Hulse, Vickrey Nation, Ransom Babcock, F. Z. Wikoﬀ, G. S. Hawkins and John Taylor. The latter has been assessor for thirty-one years.

As an indication that Sparta is a rich agricultural locality, capable of producing a great quantity as well as a great variety of crops and having in it many enterprising stock-raisers, besides being well watered by natural streams and springs, may be noted the fact that A. N. Phelps' two-hundred acre farm, now owned by William Robson on Section 8, took three first prizes from the State Agricultural Society. The southeast portion, though more broken, is nevertheless fully as valuable in that it has been, and is yet to some extent, covered with an excellent growth of white and hurr oak timber. But the chief value lies underneath, in the form of shale, from which, to quite a large extent, paving and building brick is being manufactured by the Galesburg Vitriﬂed Brick Company. The coal industry from this fourth vein has also been quite large, and at one time as many as fifteen carloads per day were shipped from here, being handled principally by J. M. Holyoke, R. M. Campbell and Peter Dolan. At present the trade consists in supplying the demands from the brick plant and the farmers in the vicinity, besides what is taken to Galesburg by teams.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy passes through Sparta in a diagonal line from near the northeast to the southwest corner. In November, 1894, the Galesburg, Etherly and Great Eastern Railroad was opened, running twelve miles east, ostensibly to strike a great coal belt of some eighty-two sections, the center of which is Etherly, where the company placed a shaft costing $30,000. This company suspended operations September 7, 1895, but resumed December 7, 1897, under the name of the Galesburg and Great Eastern, with Edward J. Harms as manager.

The educational institutions of Sparta consist of one graded school, of which Professor O. H. Newman is now principal, and eight district schools, all of which are well sustained, the general policy being to employ competent teachers for the three hundred and ninety-five pupils now in attendance. The buildings cost a total of over $8,000. It is worthy of mention that in District No. 2 R. W. Robbins gave the site for school purposes, and here Mary Allen West, when in her fourteenth year, taught her first term of school. Later she was the honored superintendent of schools of Knox County.

The well improved highways of the township are due to the wise business management of Sparta's road commissioners, seconded by her voters, for, in addition to being well graded and properly tiled, a large proportion of the bridges are substantially built of stone.

Prairie fires in early days were beautiful to witness and oftentimes to be dreaded. The writer has seen on his own farm, on Section 4, prairie grass (blue joint) six feet high on fire, the flames traveling at a rapid rate and with a dreadful roar. At one time a fire which is said to have started at Red Oak, in Henry County, threatened to devastate the farms of the new settlers, but warning was given those in the southwest part of the township by Maria.

daughter of Luman Field, in time to avert the approaching catastrophe.

Sparta, both before and during the Civil War, contained quite a number of abolitionists, among whom was Abram Neely, a conductor on the underground railroad. Some of the old citizens still remember his hiding fugitive slaves at his home and taking them a night's ride north to the next station.

The population of Sparta Township, according to the United States Census, has been as follows: 1840, 113; 1870, 1,950; 1880, 1,682; 1890, 1,293.

WATAGA.

Wataga was platted in the Spring of 1854 by J. M. Holyoke, Silas Willard and Clark M. Carr, and was incorporated by a special act in 1863. The first village election was held September 19, 1863. In 1874 it was re-incorporated, under the general law, with Section 16 as the village territory. J. M. Holyoke was the first resident and postmaster, and also built the first store, in conjunction with A. P. Cassel. This was operated by Willard and Babcock. The only bank in the place was started in 1863 by H. P. Wood and is still run by him. The depot was built in 1856, and in the same year the Wataga House was erected and operated by Garrett Post for one year, when Loren Smith bought and conducted it one year, since which time it has been the property of C. H. Norton. The Wataga mill was built by William Armstrong in 1856, and soon afterwards was damaged by an explosion in which John Armstrong was seriously injured. George F. and David P. Niles, now extensive farmers and fine stock-raisers, bought the mill in May, 1867, and ran it very successfully for eight years, patrons coming long distances with their own wheat and receiving entire satisfaction. Among those who have since owned the mill are: William and M. O. Williamson, who introduced expensive modern machinery, and Frank Darst, the present owner, who has also put in improvements and is doing excellent work.

The First Congregational Church was organized June 10, 1855, and the church society October 27, 1856. The church organization was led by the Rev. S. G. Wright. The first meeting was held in the depot, where the first sermon was preached. Subsequent services were held in the newly completed school house until 1860, when a substantial church, costing over $3,000, was erected, to which, in 1876, a parsonage was added at a cost of $2,000. The original members were: A. P. Babcock, William S. Farnham, Mrs. Maria S. Farnham, Mrs. C. F. Farnsworth, Benjamin Gardner, Mrs. Abigail Gardner, Miss Sarah Gardner, Mrs. Minerva Holyoke, Charles W. Rhodes, and Mrs. Jane Rhodes. Mrs. Charlotte Farnsworth, daughter of William S. Farnham, who served as a deacon for thirty years, and Amos P. Babcock are the only ones now known to be living. James Hastie also served as deacon until his demise in 1879 and was succeeded by Amos S. Fitch, the latter holding the office until his death in 1882. Among the secretaries of the society have been Hon. John Gray, of Jefferson, Iowa; the late J. M. Holyoke and E. H. Goldsmith, the latter of whom held that office twenty-four years and was church clerk for thirty years. This church has had seventeen pastors. Among those who have faithfully served in that capacity may be mentioned the Revs. Azariah Hyde, William W. Wetmore, Hiram P. Roberts, Prof. Willis J. Beecher, of Auburn (New York) Theological Seminary, and William R. Butcher, the last named serving six years. The present pastor is the Rev. O. C. Bedford. The Sunday school records show that on December 26, 1869, the membership was two hundred and the average attendance one hundred and forty-eight. John Hastie was the secretary and E. H. Goldsmith the superintendent, the latter holding that office for twenty-five years. The present secretary is E. Percy Robson and the membership is now ninety-one and the average attendance fifty-nine. The late George P. Holyoke and William M. Driggs, with their wives, rendered valuable assistance in former years.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1856 by the Rev. William M. Clark, whose circuit consisted of Oneida, Wesley Chapel and Wataga. He made his journeys on foot. Mr. Clark gave the site of Gilson camp ground to this district. Among the early members were S. F. Spaulding, John Gaddis, B. W. Foster, Lucius Vail and S. G. Dean, with their wives. The latter couple are the only ones now living here. Mr. Dean is seventy-nine and his wife eighty-one years of age. They have been and are still staunch pillars of this church. Mr. Dean was the first Sunday school superintendent, serving four years, and he was succeeded by S. F. Spaulding, who, for nineteen years, gave his best services to the school. L. W. Peterson is the present superintendent. Among the pastors were: G. W. Brown, N. T. Allen, William Watson, D. Ayers, N. G. Clark, G. P. Suedaker and the present incumbent, C. F. W. Smith. The church was completed and dedicated in 1867 under the pastorate of J. W. Coe, the presiding elder being W. H. Hunter.

The Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church was organized in 1856, the first pastor being the Rev. T. N. Hasselquist. In 1860 the society commenced building a church, having formerly worshipped in private houses and school buildings. This church was struck by lightning and burned in 1875, but in the same year the present tasteful edifice was erected. The Rev. N. Nordgren, the present pastor, has acceptably served this people for some ten years. The membership of the church is about one hundred and forty, and that of the prosperous Sunday school one hundred and fifteen.

The Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1857 with the Rev. V. Witting as the pastor. The keeping up of regular services and of the Sunday school has been largely due to the untiring efforts of Oliver Stream. The present pastor is the Rev. John P. Miller.

The Wataga Christian Church, costing $2,000, was erected in 1875, but was torn down in 1896 and the church organization no longer exists.

The Wataga Catholic Church was erected in 1877 at a cost of $2,000. The Rev. P. McGair was its first pastor. The church is now connected with that of Galva and services are held once a month.

Wataga Lodge No. 291, A. F. and A. M., was instituted August 17, 1858, with S. G. Dean, W. M.; J. H. Thorpe, S. W.; Septimus Soper, J. W. The lodge has now a membership of thirty-two and its officers are: C. W. Merrill, W. M.; J. H. Merrill, S. W.; Hamilton Taylor, J. W.; C. H. Norton, Treasurer; J. M. Churchill, Secretary; Charles Dennison, J. D.; J. M. Cooper, S. S. H. H. Marsh, J. S.; John Wiles, Tyler.

The Order of the Eastern Star was organized February 22, 1888, and being the first chapter in the county it had many members from the surrounding towns, there being at one time seventy-four names on the roll. Other chapters having been organized in every town from which this drew its followers, it has now only twenty-seven members. The first officers were: Mrs. S. C. Slater, W. M.; H. H. Marsh, W. P.; Mrs. Merinda Dennison, A. M.; Miss J. Curry, C.; Miss E. Dolan, A. C. The present officers are: Mrs. M. Dennison, W. M.; Dr. A. S. Slater, W. P.; Miss McClanahan, A. M.; Mrs. Mary Dennison, C.; Mrs. J. C. Cooper, A. C.; Carl Merrill, Secretary; J. H. Merrill, Treasurer.

Wataga Lodge No. 509, I. O. O. F., was organized January 10, 1876, by A. W. Berggren. Its first officers were: W. N. Thomas, N. G.; J. E. Thomas, V. G.; L. S. Whitcomb, Secretary; P. A. Smith, Treasurer. Other charter members were P. A. Smith and John McConchie. They meet in Masonic Hall.

Rebecca Lodge No. 48 was organized October 20, 1891, with ten members, which number has been increased to twenty-two. The first officers were: John Deming, N. G.; Mrs. Nancy Deming, V. G.; Oliver Stream, Secretary. Meetings are held in Masonic Hall.

Wataga Camp No. 3229, Modern Woodmen, was organized September 24, 1895, with eighteen charter members. The camp, though not having made much growth, is in a very healthy condition, having now twenty-one beneficiary and five social members.

The Wataga Nickle Plate Band is under the leadership of Anvern Thomas, and comprises the following members: D. M. Cooper, Carl Johnson, C. W. Huston, Edward Williamson, Fred Mallin, Earl Curry, John Whitehead, Frank Cooper, Eric Severin, George Curry, Carl Merrill, Will Thomas and Charles Marsh. They have been faithful and efficient in serving the public for very little compensation.

The United States census returns give Wataga the following population: 1860, 1,538; 1870, 1,205; 1880, 734; 1890, 586.

THOMAS CARTER DUVAL.

Thomas Carter Duval, son of James and Judith (Jennings) Duval, was born in Bath County, Kentucky, February 28, 1802. His father was of French descent, was born in Virginia and was a soldier in the War of 1812. Mr. Duval was reared to manhood in Kentucky, where he learned the cooper's trade, which he followed both in his native State and in Illinois. He was married in Bath County, April 2, 1822, to Nancy Shumate, who was born in Virginia, August 19, 1804, and died at Wataga, March 2, 1888. Ten children were born to them: Barryman, Elizabeth, Martha, James, William, Mary, Helen, Ellenor, Daniel J. and Ann.

Ellenor (now Mrs. S. S. Soper, of Wataga), who places a portrait in this volume in memory of her father, was born in Henderson Township, Knox County, May 3, 1839. She received her education in a district school, and always lived on a farm. She was first married to David Temple, and had one child, Thomas F. She was married to Mr. Soper, in Henderson Township, in October, 1861. They have five children: George T., Mary E., Septimus S., Edward D. and Nettie May. Thomas F. is a farmer in Boone County, Iowa; George T. is a farmer in Clark County, Missouri; Mary E. is Mrs. Mary E. Russell, of Wataga, Knox County, Illinois; Septimus

G. M. Faulkner

Henry Gehring

S. is in the Klondike gold fields; Edward D. is a farmer near Wataga, and Nettie M. is Mrs. Nettie May Jacobson.

Mr. Thomas C. Duval came to Illinois in 1835, settling first in Warren County, near Robinson's Point, and removing to Henderson Township, Knox County, in 1836. He brought to Illinois his wife, six children and one hundred dollars in money. He invested the money in land in Henderson Township, and his industry and good management insured success. When corn sold for a dollar a bushel he invested the proceeds in land, and, in 1869, owned about two thousand acres in Sparta and Henderson townships. In politics, Mr. Duval was a republican, and he was a member of the Christian Church. He was a good and an upright citizen, ever ready to help others with money as well as advice. He was especially lenient to his tenants, sometimes giving them a second chance if crops failed, and, in one case at least, aiding a tenant, who was unable to pay his rent, to weather the storm and finally secure a farm of his own. Mr. Duval was kind-hearted and true, a kind father, a good neighbor, a man whose place could not easily be filled. His death occurred in Wataga, September 25, 1890.

BOANERGES ELY.

Boanerges Ely was born at Cumberland Gap, Claiborne County, Tennessee, December 21, 1821. His parents, Solomon and Rachel (Turner) Ely, were both natives of East Tennessee. His paternal grandfather, Isaac Ely, was born in West Virginia; his grandmother, Katherine, came from Germany. His great-grandfather, Isaac Ely, was born in England, and his great-grandmother, Jessie Hopper, was born in Ireland. On his mother's side the grandparents were William and Susanna Turner, born in Virginia, the latter near Richmond.

Solomon and Rachel Ely came to Illinois in 1834, just at the close of the Black Hawk War, and settled in what is now De Witt County, where they lived on a farm, and reared a family of ten children, four of whom came to Knox County. They were devoted members of the Christian Church, and died where they first located, aged sixty-nine and forty-seven years respectively. He was of a poetic turn of mind, and was accustomed to write verses upon the events of the times and the affairs of the neighborhood.

Mr. Boanerges Ely came to Knox County in 1845, and settled on Section 16 in Sparta Township. He first bought forty acres of timber on Section 24, and then bought eighty acres of government land at government price, and afterward bought forty acres at two dollars an acre. He now owns a farm of three hundred and fifteen acres near Wataga. He was married in Henderson Grove, November 3, 1850, to Mary M. Duval, daughter of Thomas Carter and Nancy (Shumate) Duval, both of whom were born in Kentucky. Mrs. Ely was one of a family of ten children. Her father settled on a farm in Warren County, Illinois, in 1835, and came to Knox County in 1836, locating at Henderson Grove in Henderson Township. In politics, he was a republican. He was a member of the Christian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Ely have three children: Nancy Ann, wife of J. H. Denning; Ella J., wife of Samuel Temple; and William L., who is a farmer at Mayville, Traill County, North Dakota.

Mr. Ely is a republican, and in religion, a Christian. He was successful in business, and is counted among the prominent and substantial citizens of Sparta Township.

GEORGE W. FAULKNER.

George W. Faulkner, of Sparta Township, was born November 13, 1827, in Orange County, New York, and was educated in Oakland County, Michigan. His ancestral record is most interesting. His paternal great-great-grandfather was a Huguenot minister who fled from France to Scotland in the days of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. His paternal grandparents were Colonel William Faulkner, of Orange County, New York, and Ann (Rogers) Faulkner. Colonel William Faulkner served under General Putnam and had a fine record as a soldier; he was twice wounded, and drew a pension. His maternal grandfather was James Bushfield, who was born in Ireland, and was of Scotch descent.

His parents were William J. and Isabelle (Bushfield) Faulkner, the former born in Orange County, New York, the latter born in New York City. William J. Faulkner was a soldier in the War of 1812, and drew a pension; he died in 1875, at the age of ninety; he was a good man and citizen. Mrs. W. J. Faulkner died February 17, 1863; aged seventy-nine. She was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, a noble Christian character and much beloved. Seven children were born to them: William J., deceased; Mrs. Catherine A. Sweet; Thomas B., deceased; Gardener S., deceased; Mrs. Esther E. Poyer, deceased; George W.; and Mary J., deceased.

George W. Faulkner came to Knox County with his parents in 1839, at the age of twelve. November 12 of that year they settled ten miles northwest of Galesburg, and the next spring moved to Henderson Township, and for one year rented land of Major Thomas McKee. They then moved to land in Warren County, for which they had exchanged their Michigan property. In 1848 they bought one hundred and sixty acres of land in Sparta Township, where David Niles now lives (Section 19), which they subsequently sold, and bought one hundred and sixty acres of prairie land in Section 29. This they improved, and it is now one of the very best farms in the county.

Mr. Faulkner was married in Knox County, March 17, 1864, to Bertha Emerson, who was a native of Norway, a member of the Congregational Church, and an exceptionally fine woman. She was educated in Galesburg and was a successful school teacher, and it was while teaching at the military school that she met and married Mr. Faulkner. Mrs. Faulkner died October 24, 1872, at the age of thirty-two. They had two children, George Emerson and Kate; the latter married Mr. L. W. Peterson, and they have two children, Harry and Edith; George Emerson married Mary Rommel, daughter of Henry Rommel, deceased, and they have three children, Henry G., Nellie and Janet.

After his marriage Mr. Faulkner remained on the home farm, and was in partnership with his brother, Thomas E., until 1890, when they divided the property. He has two hundred acres of good land, the result of industry, economy and careful business management. His neighbors are his best friends, a fact that speaks volumes for his character. He is a republican in politics, and is Assessor and School Director, having held the latter office for twenty-five years.

HENRY GEHRING.

Henry Gehring, is the son of Xavier and Elizabeth (Heminger) Gehring, both natives of Germany, the former having been born near Baden, February 9, 1825. Xavier Gehring was one of a family of nine children, and his parents were Bennet and Elizabeth (Closman) Gehring. He received an education in the common schools of his native land, and left home to work out when he was eighteen years old. He continued in this position two years, when he was drafted into the German army and served three and one-half years. In 1850, when he was twenty-five years old, he came to the United States, landing in New York City with only one dollar in his pocket. There he worked as a coachman and in other positions four years, and there, in 1853, he married Elizabeth Heminger. In 1854, he came to Knox County and began farming, buying thirty acres of land on which he now resides. He was a good farmer and stockman, one of the most successful in the county, and increased his holdings to about eight hundred acres of land, which he partially divided among his three children. He has been School Director, and has taken a great interest in education. He has lived an honest and upright life, and is an example to his posterity. His first wife died July 2, 1878. Afterwards he married Mrs. Mary A. (Leighton) Stevenson.

Henry Gehring was born August 29, 1858, in the old Gehring homestead, then a log house, and received his education in Knox County. His home is in Sparta Township. He is a successful stock-raiser, and now owns four hundred and eleven acres of land. On his farm is located the famous Gehring Coal Bank, from which hundreds of families derive their supplies of fuel.

In Knox County, March 3, 1887, Mr. Gehring married Carrie Benson, who was born March 4, 1864. They have two children: Earl Raymond, born January 5, 1889; and Webster Henry, born August 9, 1893. In religion, Mr. Gehring is a Methodist. In politics, he is a republican. He is a School Director and Road Commissioner, having held the latter office for eight years.

EDWARD HOWELL GOLDSMITH.

Edward Howell Goldsmith was born at Mecklenburg, New York, December 20, 1834. He was the son of Schuyler and Catherine E. (Howell) Goldsmith. Schuyler Goldsmith was the son of Daniel and Sarah (Brewster) Goldsmith; his wife, Catherine, was the daughter of Caleb and Martha (Halsey) Howell, both of whom were born on Long Island, although the Howells were of Welsh ancestry, and Caleb Howell's father was born in Wales. The Goldsmiths were natives of New York.

Schuyler Goldsmith, who had been a farmer in New York, removed his family to Illinois in 1855, and bought a farm in Knox County, near Wataga, where he lived until his death in 1861, his wife, Catherine, having died in 1850.

Edward H. Goldsmith was brought up on the farm in New York. He received his education in the common schools, his training there being supplemented by much hard study at home. Although his early opportunities were limited, Mr. Goldsmith is at once recognized as an educated man, in whom the effect of strong self-discipline is evident. In addition to his intellectual pursuits, he diligently applied himself to the management of a farm, and in time became an experienced and successful agriculturalist. From 1860 to 1876, Mr. Goldsmith was engaged, during the winter terms, in teaching school. In this line of work he was especially successful, both as teacher and disciplinarian, his pupils taking high rank when they entered higher institutions of learning. With all his varied interests, Mr. Goldsmith has traveled quite extensively, and in 1895, accompanied by Mrs. Goldsmith, who was in failing health, he spent several months in the West, visiting the Pacific coast and many of the intervening States.

March 8, 1859, Mr. Goldsmith was married to Anna Maria Whiteford, daughter of William and Margaret Whiteford, of New Jersey. Their marriage took place at Mecklenburg, New York. They have had three children: Julia Elizabeth and Catherine Howell, deceased; Edward Whiteford, a farmer in Sparta Township.

GEORGE F. NILES.

George F. Niles, son of Sill and Louisa (Olmsted) Niles, was born at Hillsdale, Columbia County, New York, August 25, 1827. He received a common school education, which was supplemented by an academic course. His father was born at Spencertown, New York, in 1795, and died there, March 7, 1872; his mother was the daughter of Stephen Olmsted, of New England. Eight children were born to them, six of whom lived to the age of maturity. His grandfather, Thomas Niles, was born in Connecticut in 1760, and died at Spencertown, New York, December 25, 1844. His grandmother, Rhoda (Phelps) Niles, was born in Connecticut in 1765, and died at Spencertown November 21, 1819. The Niles family is of English descent.

Mr. Niles arrived in Wataga, Knox County, Illinois, in May, 1857, and with his brother, David P. Niles, bought the Wataga Flouring Mill. They did an extensive business, and their brand of flour was well known and popular. Much of their business was from the surrounding country to a distance of twenty-five miles. In 1864, they exchanged the mill for three hundred and sixty acres of land in Henry County, which they soon sold. From 1867 to 1871 they were in the mercantile business at Altona, Illinois. The business interests of the brothers have been largely conducted under the firm name of Niles Brothers. They came to Knox County with very little money, but they had youth and energy, they were honest and industrious, and soon had the good will of the community. In 1862, they bought one hundred and sixty acres of land in Sparta Township, Section 19, where David P. Niles now resides. They owned eight hundred and forty acres of land in Sparta and Henderson Townships, which remained undivided until 1893. They also own one thousand and ninety-two acres of land, in one tract, in Page County, Iowa, which is known as the Niles Stock Farm, and is located three miles south of Villisca, on the Nodaway River. Never did two brothers plan and work together in greater harmony.

The principal business of Mr. George F. Niles was farming and the raising of stock, and his herd of short-horn cattle was one of the best in the county. In 1866 he bought three hundred and twenty acres of land in Sparta Township, Section 21, where, in 1871, he built a fine residence which he has since greatly improved and now occupies.

Mr. Niles was married in Wataga, April 1, 1866, to Ella Josephine Wood. Two children were born to them: Charles W., born May 15, 1867, died January 15, 1883; and Marian Ella, born April 8, 1873. Marian Ella graduated at Knox College in June, 1894. October 2, 1895, she was married to George W. Hayden, of Oak Park, Illinois, and they have one son, George Niles Hayden, born July 24, 1897.

Mrs. George F. Niles was born at Westford Hollow, Chittenden County, Vermont, May 19, 1846, and was educated at Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois. She was the daughter of William S. and Phylena (Smith) Wood. Her maternal ancestors were English. Two of her ancestors, Colonel Seabody and his son, were in the Revolutionary War, and gave largely of their property to the cause of independence.

WILLIAM ROBSON.

William Robson, son of John and Mary (Brown) Robson, was born near Newcastle, Durham County, England, September 5, 1831. His parents were born near Newcastle, his father in Northumberland County. His paternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth (Stohart) Robson, the former having been born near Manchester, England. On the mother's side, his grandfather was James Brown, and his grandmother's maiden name was Armstrong.

Mr. Robson received his education—and a very practical education it was—in a select school in England, and also in the cattle business in Newcastle. He came to the United States with his parents, and lived first at Beaver Point, Beaver County, Pennsylvania. The family arrived in Knox County, Illinois, early in the Spring of 1850, and lived on a farm south of Galesburg till the year 1854, when they removed to Rio Township, where some members of the family still reside. His mother died in 1853, and his father died in Galesburg, aged eighty-seven years. Mr. John Robson was a thoroughly trained English farmer, and reared his children in the most practical manner; he lived a retired life; politically he was a republican.

Mr. Robson remained in Galesburg several years, where he learned the building trade. He was first married in April, 1857, to Miss Jane Goff, daughter of Mr. Louis Goff, who was one of the early settlers of Knox County, and held the office of Justice of the Peace in Rio Township for many years. There are two children, born of this marriage, Cora Alice and John L.; John L. married Miss Jessie Murdock, of Galesburg, and resides in Omaha, Nebraska. Mrs. Robson died in 1867.

In November, 1871, Mr. Robson was married to Miss Elizabeth Gordon, daughter of Mr. Peter Gordon, of Copley Township, who, although yet living (1899), was one of the early settlers, and became one of the largest land owners and most influential farmers of the county. Of this marriage three children were born: Gordon, who died in October, 1881, at eight years of age; Edward Percy, and Henry Stewart, now living.

Mr. Robson has been actively engaged in farming most of his life. His first farm of one hundred and ninety acres was located in Rio Township on Section 11, on which he erected buildings with materials hewed and sawed from native timber. He moved to this farm in the Spring of 1857, and resided there till 1861, when he bought three hundred and twenty acres of prairie land of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company at Wataga. This tract he improved, making it his home, and, being very successful, added to it five hundred and eighty acres and he now has a farm of about nine hundred acres, lying in one body near Wataga, Knox County. Between Galesburg and Henderson he owns another farm, thought by some to be the oldest in the county, a part of it having been cultivated by the Indians. Roundtree, a Kentucky farmer, located upon the tract, and was undoubtedly one of the first white settlers in this part of the country. As a feeder of cattle for profit, Mr. Robson is perhaps the most successful in Knox and Mercer counties.

A remarkable instance of fraternal confidence is the fact that Mr. Robson and his brother, John, were associated for twenty-one years in raising stock and in large farming operations, with never the "scratch of a pen" between them by way of keeping accounts. About the year 1884 they determined to divide their property, which consisted of nearly two thousand acres of land, in different farms in Knox and Mercer counties, with hundreds of cattle and hogs at various feeding yards. Starting out on horseback one morning, they "finished at noon," giving each other "quit claim" deeds, in connection with which no dissatisfaction has ever arisen.

Though a very public-spirited citizen, Mr. Robson has shown no ambition to hold office. Possessing the confidence of the citizens of his town, which his success in business and strict integrity in public matters naturally created, he was called to fill the useful offices which afford remuneration only in the credit for having well performed their important and sometimes difficult duties. As School Director and Highway Commissioner, he rendered valuable services. He was year after year an influential representative of his town, and often of his county, in political connections. The County Board of Knox County ranks among the very first in the State for able and honest administration. In creating and sustaining that character the Town of Sparta has done its full share, and more, in the choice of its representatives, but never did better, if so well, as when in 1818 it elected Mr. Robson Supervisor and retained him till 1899, when, justified by the condition of his health, he declined to serve longer. Bringing to the discharge of his duties the business habits and the methods with which his own business had been so successfully conducted, with a thorough knowledge of the county, and the character and habits of its people, his services were at all times valuable. On all questions his influence was profitably felt. In all building construction during his official service, including the Court House and the Alms House, he had a prominent part, his knowledge of the building trade giving him especial qualifications. But most important were his services on the Committee having charge of the Alms House, and all public charities, of which he was twenty years chairman. On no other committee rests greater responsibility: nowhere else is so much required of sound judgment and careful, laborious, painstaking consideration. To his firmness, integrity, impartiality and adherence to correct business methods, the admirable management of those interests is to a great extent due. He assisted in the organization of the Galesburg National Bank, has been a Director ever since, and the Vice President for several years. Indeed, it may be said that William Robson is one of the most useful citizens of Knox County.

JOHN JAMES SUTOR.

John James Sutor, son of John and Martha (Lytle) Sutor, was born in County Monaghan, Ireland, January 25, 1849. His paternal grandparents, Martin and Jennie (McDonald) Sutor, were both of Scotch descent. His parents came to America in 1852, when he was only three years old, and settled in Haldimand County, Province of Ontario, Canada. There they lived until 1858, when they moved to Knox County, Illinois, and rented a farm in Galesburg Township, southwest of the city of Galesburg. In 1864 they bought eighty acres of land in Sparta Township for three thousand dollars, to which they subsequently added another eighty. Of the nine children born to them four sons survive: William, John J., Martin and Henry T. The father, John Sutor, died November 14, 1874, aged fifty-eight. In religion, he was a Presbyterian, and he was highly respected. The mother, Martha (Lytle) Sutor, survived her husband and kept house for her son, John J., until her death, May 28, 1895. She was born in 1817 in County Cavan, Ireland, and was of that sturdy Scotch-Irish stock of Presbyterian faith, which has set its mark on the world's history for honesty, perseverance and thrifty industry. She was a worthy member of the race, truthful, inflexibly honest, and of a very devout disposition, a good wife, mother and citizen, honored and respected by all who knew her.

John J. Sutor was educated in the schools of Knox County, and by faithful attendance and careful improvement of the advantages they afford secured a good general education. His young manhood was spent at home assisting his father, and, when the latter died, he was ready and qualified to carry the burden that had fallen upon him. In 1875, twenty years before his mother's death, Mr. Sutor, with his brothers, Martin and Henry T., had built a pleasant and comfortable residence upon the farm, valued at two thousand, seven hundred dollars. Beside the home farm they have a large stock ranch in Rooks County, Kansas, comprising five and one-quarter sections of land, or three thousand three hundred and sixty acres. His two brothers, Martin and Henry T., are associated with him in business.

Mr. Sutor is a man of influence in his township, and in 1890 was elected Justice of the Peace, which office he has held to the present time. He was elected Assessor in 1898 and now holds that office. In politics, Mr. Sutor is a republican.

SWAN W. SWANSON.

Swan W. Swanson, son of Swan and Bengta Peterson, was born in Oenestad, Christianstad Laen, Sweden, June 14, 1833. His parents were natives of Sweden, and died in that country, aged eighty-four and sixty-five, respectively. Mr. Swanson was educated in Sweden, and was nineteen years of age when he left his native land and came to the United States. The journey across the ocean was made in a sailing vessel, a "Liverpool Packet," which had for a cargo, in great part, rails for a railroad. After twenty-two days of fine weather and uninterrupted sailing, he was landed at New York City, in October, 1852. He came directly to Knoxville, Illinois, traveling a part of the way on the Hennepin Canal. He had but a little money, which was stolen from him, so that he was penniless and homeless. To pass the time while looking for work, he hunted with a gun which he had bought in Hamburg. At last he found work with Lorentus Conger of Galesburg, at seven dollars a month. The following summer he worked for Isaac V. Gilbert, and farmed successfully.

Mr. Swanson was married April 3, 1865, to Nellie Truedson, who was born in Troedstorp, Ignaberga Soken, Sweden; her parents were John and Ingra Truedson. Mr. and Mrs. Truedson came from Sweden, and arrived in Knox County, October 1, 1852, but a few days before the coming of Mr. Swanson. Their children were Nellie, Carrie, Ellen, Trued and Bennett. The parents died in Galesburg. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Swanson are Hannah, Samuel R., Joseph O., David B., Mary C., Emelie E. and Winifred I., Mary C., who was married to L. O. Williamson of Galesburg, was graduated from Knox College in 1883, and Winifred I. in 1898. Samuel R. graduated from the Galesburg Business College.

Mr. Swanson conducted a dairy, and for seven years furnished milk to the people of Galesburg. He later settled upon land of his own, and, assisted by his wife, became an independent and prosperous farmer. He bought forty acres of land within the limits of the City of Galesburg, which he afterward sold, buying other land, which he exchanged for a farm on Section 32, Sparta Township. This farm, with slight additions soon made, contained three hundred and twenty acres. Mr. Swanson improved it by the erection of excellent buildings, and soon found himself the proprietor of one of the best farms in the county. He now owns five hundred and twenty acres of arable land, besides one hundred and seventy-four acres of woodland in Knox Township. The foundation of his success in acquiring a competence was laid in farming, and especially in raising broom corn; his success was assured by his industry, honesty and good management.

In politics, Mr. Swanson is a republican. He has been Road Commissioner many years, and was elected Supervisor of Sparta Township April 4, 1899. He and his family are Lutherans, and he has been a Trustee of the Lutheran Church in Galesburg.

FREDERICK ZINA WIKOFF.

Frederick Zina Wikoff was born in Rio Township, December 27, 1846, and was the son of John and Cornelia (Crane) Wikoff. His paternal grandfather was Zina Crane. The name of his paternal great-grandfather was Van Wikoff, and the family was of Dutch descent. His father, John Wikoff, came from New Jersey to Knox County in the Fall of 1836, making the trip on horseback from Ohio. He devoted himself to farming, and took up one hundred and forty acres of land in Section 36, Rio Township. He improved the land, and built a comfortable home, where he lived for fifty-four years, and in which he celebrated his golden wedding; his death was the first that occurred in the house. He was a successful farmer, and accumulated considerable property, becoming in every way an influential citizen, honored and respected not merely by all the people of the township, but also by those of the county. He was Supervisor for Rio Township. He died April 30, 1897, aged eighty-four; his wife survives him. They had five children: Gertrude A., wife of Hiram Colby; Frederick Z.; Harriet E., wife of G. H. Pratt of Hastings, Nebraska; Carrie F., wife of S. T. Howell of Woodhull, and Mary M., who married Oswald Oliver and died in January, 1896.

Mr. Frederick Z. Wikoff married Ida M. Conger, daughter of John N. and Elizabeth (Wheeler) Conger, in Oneida, September 16, 1874, and they have four children: Winn C.; Gem, wife of W. B. Nelson; John N., a student at Galesburg, and Cornelia. Mrs. Wikoff's paternal grandfather was Uzziah Conger, who came to Knox County in 1838, and settled in Cherry Grove; her paternal grandmother was Hannah (West) Conger; the aged couple lived to celebrate their golden wedding. They had ten children: Lorentus; Genette; Lauren; Lucien; Crayton; Norman; J. Newton; Edward; Lois, wife of J. S. Wilcox; and Harvey, all of whom lived at one time in Knox County. Mrs. Wikoff's father, John Newton Conger, was a native of New York, her mother, Elizabeth (Wheeler) Conger, came from Connecticut. Her maternal grandparents, Alvah and Jerusha (Stevens) Wheeler, came from Connecticut and settled in Knoxville, Illinois, in 1838. Alvah Wheeler was a carpenter, and assisted in building the first court house (still standing at Knoxville) in Knox County. In early years, while in Bridgeport, Connecticut, he built the first peanut stand for P. T. Barnum. "America's Greatest Showman." Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler: LeRoy; Mrs. Elizabeth Conger; Mrs. Mary Conger; Frederick C.; Mrs. Harriet B. Shaw; Mrs. Helen Conger; Mrs. LaVantia Conger, and Mrs. Alta Murdoch. Mrs. Wikoff had one sister, Eva Conger, now deceased.

Mr. Wikoff was educated in Knox and Hedding Colleges; he is a capable business man, and has been very successful. He has a fine, well improved farm of two hundred and forty acres in Sparta Township. In politics, he is a republican.

JONAS WILLIAMSON.

Jonas Williamson, son of William and Margaret (Olson) Williamson, was born in Sweden, February 22, 1836. His education he received in the land of his birth. In 1850 the family came to America and located in Sparta Township, Knox County, Illinois. Other children besides Jonas were William, Peter, John, Maggie and Moses O. Jonas loved his home and, even when he was a boy, could seldom be lured away from it. Losing his father when he was only fifteen years old, he contributed to the support of the family, and in every way led an exemplary life. Mr. Williamson was exceptionally temperate and did not indulge in stimulants or tobacco. Although his opportunities for acquiring an education were but limited, he nevertheless accumulated a large amount of useful knowledge. He was very industrious and an excellent business manager.

Mr. Williamson's first wife was Christine Anderson, whom he married in Wataga. Of this union there were two children, John E. and Lotta. The latter was married to Thomas Rommel. Mrs. Williamson died in 1875, and four years later, May 29, 1879, Mr. Williamson married again. His second wife was Anna M., daughter of Mattas and Martha (Hanson) Hedberger, who came from Sweden with their infant daughter in 1857. The family settled in Galesburg and lived there until 1867, when they removed to Wataga, where they have since resided. Mr. Hedberger is a tailor by trade and has followed the business many years. Their daughter, Mrs. Williamson, is one of a family of five children who reached maturity. She owns the fine farm of eighty acres of well improved land, which was her husband's homestead.

Jonas Williamson was a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and was honored and respected by all who knew him. In politics he was a republican. He died April 30, 1893.

WILLIAM WILLIAMSON.

William Williamson, son of William and Margaret (Olson) Williamson, was born in the North of Sweden, October 10, 1833, and the little education it was his privilege to secure was gained in his native land. He was the oldest of seven children, five sons and two daughters, and came to this country with his parents in 1850. In October of that year, after traveling some time in Wisconsin, the family reached Knox County, Illinois. The father was so affected with consumption that he was unable to do the least work after reaching America, and died in 1853.

As the oldest of the family of children, although himself a mere boy, Mr. Williamson was early compelled to shoulder a man's responsibilities and to do a man's work. He gave all his time and his earnings to the support of the family, until the younger boys got started and could manage the small farm of sixty acres of timber land, for which they paid one hundred dollars, and upon which they built a log house. He was young and strong and could do the work of two days in one. An old Pennsylvania miner taught him how to dig coal, and Mr. Williamson became an expert miner and followed the business for fifteen winters. A character developed by such faithful devotion, by consciousness of responsibility, and by the habit of hard work is a reward in itself, and brings the reward of subsequent business success. Mr. Williamson was finally able to buy sixty acres of land where he now resides, and, as fortune smiled upon him, to add thereto from time to time, until he now has four hundred and forty-seven acres in one body. He owns another splendid farm of one hundred and eighty-eight acres near Henderson. In Kansas he has one thousand six hundred acres in one piece. In Clay Center he has large financial interests; he controls the waterpower, has built a grist-mill of two hundred and fifty barrel capacity, and also a large electric plant. In these improvements he has invested more than $50,000. Stock-raising and farming have been his principal business, and his success demonstrates his character as a business man. In politics, he is a republican, but he has held only local offices. In religion, he is a Lutheran.

September 28, 1855, in Galesburg, Illinois, Mr. Williamson married Catherine Olson. Ten children have been born to them, five of whom are still living: Joseph Henry, a resident of Longmont, Colorado; Amanda C.; Edwin P., who manages the Henderson farm; Frederick Leonard, and Alvin Luther. The deceased are Mrs. Mary J. Danielson; Margaret Amelia, who was the wife of Rev. A. Nelson; Lars Olaf; Martha and George. Frederick L. is a graduate of Knox College; he is manager of Mr. Williamson's extensive business interests in Clay Center, Kansas. Amanda C. and Alvin Luther are at home. Mr. Williamson's mother survived his father many years, dying in 1886 at the age of seventy-three.

HANNIBAL PARISH WOOD.

Hannibal Parish Wood was born in Vermont, September 12, 1818. His father, William Wood, was of English descent and was born in Lanesboro, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, August 24, 1790, and died at Westford, Vermont, April 5, 1845. His mother, Hannah (Parish) Wood, daughter of Nathan and Hannah Parish, was born in Brookfield, Orange County, Vermont, March 7, 1795, and died in August, 1883.

Hannibal P. Wood was reared and educated in Vermont. He was married in Westford, Vermont, September 28, 1841, to Hannah M. Bowman. Two children were born to them: William H., of Wataga, Illinois, and Emma J. Wood, who died in Wataga in January, 1899, aged fifty-four years. Mr. Wood was married a second time, January 1, 1876, in Wataga, to Mrs. Mahlah (Phelps) Watkins, who was born in Enfield, Tompkins County, New York, May 14, 1834.

Mr. Wood was in the mercantile business in Westford, Vermont, many years, and in 1850 removed to Boston, Massachusetts, where he was a commission merchant for about five years. In the Spring of 1856 he came West and settled at Wataga, Knox County, Illinois, where he has since resided. He bought the store in Wataga, which was owned by Silas Willard of Galesburg, and continued the business with his partner, Amos P. Babcock, whom he bought out five years later. For some years the business, that of a general store, was conducted by Mr. Wood alone, and later with the assistance of his son, William H. Wood. During the Civil War, about the year 1863, he opened a bank which he has conducted to the present time.

As a republican, Mr. Wood represented his district in the Legislature in the years 1880-82. He was Chairman of the Committee on Public Charities, and was a member of the Committee on Banks and Banking. He was for many years a member of the Board of Supervisors of Knox County, during which time the county seat was removed to Galesburg. He has belonged to various temperance organizations, and is a member of the Masonic Fraternity. For four years he was a Trustee of the Asylum for the Blind at Jacksonville, Illinois. He has been a Trustee and the Treasurer of the Congregational Church at Wataga, of which he is a member, and has been Township School Treasurer for about thirty years, which office he now holds.

Mr. Wood achieved success as a merchant and banker, and in the service of the public, and has exerted a wide influence for good wherever he has been.

ADAMS, ALEXANDER FRANK; Farmer; Sparta Township; born in Henderson Township, Knox County, March 7, 1842; educated in common schools. His parents were James Adams, of North Carolina, and Sarah (Miller) Adams of Indiana. He was married in Lewis County, New York, to Elizabeth Woolworth. Their children are, Birney H. and Fred C. His parents settled in Rio Township in 1841, and entered Government land in the Military Tract and paid for it twice. The father was a successful farmer and died on the homestead July 1, 1879, aged seventy-three years; the mother died in 1846, aged forty-five years. The father was three times married. He was a republican. In religion he was a Methodist. The children by the first marriage are: Wilson, Caroline, William, John, Lucinda, Alexander Frank, Phelps and Sarah Adams; the children by his marriage with Melba Haynes are: James, Lida and Julia. Mr. Alexander F. Adams has a fine farm of one hundred acres, and is a successful farmer. He paid $60 an acre for his land, which was entered by his uncle Ruben Robbins in 1837. Mr. Adams belongs to the church of the Second Adventists. In politics, he is a republican.

BARRY, JAMES; Farmer; Sparta Township; born in Limerick, Ireland. His parents were John and Mary (Healy) Barry of Limerick, they attained the age of ninety-three years; his grandfathers were James Barry, and Patrick Healy. He was educated in select schools in Ireland. He was married at Edwards' Homestead Knox County, December 15, 1864, to Frances, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Wayland) Edwards. Their children are: John W.; George Henry; Lillie C., wife of George Rockwell of Galesburg; Mary E.; Lucy I., wife of H. Welsh; Winnifred; Morris J.; Frances F. C., who died in infancy. Mr. Barry came to New York in May, 1854, at the age of nineteen and remained there for three years. He came to Knox County in the Fall of 1858, and worked by the month. He owned many horses and bought and sold farms. He remained for nineteen years on one farm in Ontario Township. In 1884, he moved to the farm of three hundred and twenty acres where he now lives; he owns in all nearly one thousand acres of land. He has been an extremely successful stock raiser. His success is due to his persevering industry and to the assistance and good management of his wife. In religion, Mr. Barry is a Catholic. In politics, he is a democrat, and has been a School Director for many years.

BENSON, TUFVE; Farmer; Sparta Township; born near Christianstadt, Sweden, August 27, 1838. His parents were Bengt and Hannah Nelson of Sweden. At the early age of sixteen, in 1855, he came to Warren County, Illinois, where his brother Olof had preceded him. After spending five years as a farm hand, he purchased sixty acres of land in Warren County and began farming for himself. April 11, 1861, he was married in Monmouth to Catherine Ellison, daughter of Nels and Permelia Ellison, she having emigrated from Sweden with her parents in 1851, when ten years of age. Three children, Samuel David; Carrie, wife of Henry Gehring; Hannah, wife of George Behringer, were born to them in Warren County. In 1867, Mr. Benson, with his family, moved into Knox County, and settled south of Wataga. Here Edith (deceased), Ida May, and Ira Edward were born. In 1875, Mr. Benson bought a farm of one hundred and twenty-nine acres on Section 8, Sparta Township, where he now resides. At this place three children were born to them: Harvey Russel, Jeannette, and Hazle June. Samuel D. is a successful merchant in Chicago, and owns five hundred acres of land in Marion County, Illinois. Ira E. is a former railroad employe, and when a soldier in the late war, was stationed in Porto Rico. Jeannette is a Normal student at Austin, Minnesota. Mr. Benson has been successful, and is a highly respected farmer. In religion, he is a Lutheran; in politics, a republican.

CAMPBELL, GEORGE HENRY; Farmer; Sparta Township; born in Wataga, September 28, 1866; his parents were Robert M., and Catharine (Dolan) Campbell of Ireland. He is of Scotch descent. Mr. Campbell was married to Mary A. Tiernay, in Galva, Illinois, October 26, 1892; they have one child, George Henry, born September 8, 1894. Mrs. Campbell is the daughter of James and Mary Tiernay of Knox County. Mr. George Henry Campbell was reared a farmer, and educated in the common schools. In 1890, he located on a farm, which contains one hundred and sixty acres of choice land. Mr. Campbell became a Mason in 1887, and is a member of Wataga Lodge, 591, A. F. and A. M. Mr. Campbell is a republican.

GEHRING, ALEX; Farmer; Sparta Township; born December 1, 1844, in Germany; educated in Germany and the United States; his parents, Anthony Gehring, born March 12, 1821, and Mary (Mosier) Gehring, born June 24, 1823, came from Germany to Sparta Township in 1857; his paternal grandparents were Bennet and Elizabeth (Clossman) Gehring; his great-grandparents, Mattice and Susan Gehring, and his maternal grandparents, Jacob and Mary Mosler. Mr. Gehring was married May 30, 1867, in Sparta Township, Section 33, to Jerusha, daughter of Ira and Caroline (Stewart) Squires of Ireland and Scotland, respectively. Mrs. Gehring was born August 1, 1847, in Vienna, Trumbull County, Ohio. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Gehring are: Mary Alice, born October 29, 1871; Sarah Luella, born October 9, 1874; Carrie Lenora, born April 6, 1877, and Ira Anthony, born December 15, 1879. Mary Alice was married June 11, 1890, to James Parkinson; they have two sons, Archie, born January 30, 1893; and Frank Donald, born September 10, 1896. Mr. Gehring is a member, and has been a Trustee and Steward of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a republican and has been School Director and Pathmaster.

GEHRING, JOSEPH; Farmer; Sparta Township; born March 16, 1856, in Knox County, where he was educated. His father, Xavier Gehring, was an early settler. He was married January 29, 1880, to Cora, daughter of O. Peterson. Four children were born to them: Adella Maud, Edna May, Arthur J. and Myrtle Irene. Their mother died May 15, 1895. Mr. Gehring's second marriage occurred March 25, 1896, with Harriet, daughter of Peter Knight, a native of England. They have one son, Frank Earl. Mr. Gehring has a valuable farm of one hundred and seventy-seven acres besides one hundred acres of pasture and timber land. He has been School Director in Wataga for twelve years.

GILES, DR. HENRY WYLEY; Physician; Wataga, Sparta Township; born in Peoria County, March 28, 1861; his grandfather was an English soldier, and one of the guards of Napoleon Bonaparte on the island of St. Helena. He came to America in 1824. He studied for the ministry, and had charge of a Baptist church. He and his wife died in Peoria County. They had five sons and two daughters, all of whom, except Sarah, who was killed by lightning, have, by hard work and economy, accumulated considerable property. They are also very widely and favorably known throughout Peoria County. Thomas, the oldest child, was born on the island of St. Helena February 28, 1814. He moved, with the family, to England and from there, when he was but ten years of age, to this country, the family settling at Utica, New York, where they lived until 1836, when they moved West, settling at Peoria. He followed steamboating for two summers, then, with his brothers, William, Joseph, and Nathan, manufactured brick until 1849, when the two brothers, William and Nathan, went to California, while Thomas bought land six miles north of Peoria, which he cleared and occupied until 1882, when he retired and bought a home on the Bluff in Peoria, where he died September 7, 1893. He was the father of Dr. H. W. Giles and six other children, two of whom died in infancy, the other four now live in Peoria and vicinity, one of whom, Dr. W. N. Giles, is practicing medicine in that city. The mother of Dr. H. W. Giles was Margaret (Poplett) Giles, of Knox County; her father was Thompson Poplett. The Poplett family came to Illinois from Indiana in 1835, settling in the northwest corner of Sparta Township, where they lived for about twelve years, making farming their occupation. They moved to Peoria County. Mrs. Margaret Giles was born in Indiana June 15, 1828, and died in Peoria County, August 7, 1875. Dr. H. W. Giles was educated in Peoria County. He was married to Christine Schildwachter in Peoria, November 26, 1891. Their children are: Clark Webster, William Thomas, Ruth Helena. Before attending medical college Dr. Giles was in the employment of Allaire Woodward and Co., of Peoria, Illinois, in the Medical Laboratory.

Although his father was well able to furnish the necessary funds to carry him through college, he chose rather to be independent, and by persistent effort and strict economy he was enabled to keep his little home, which he had paid for in addition to his college course. Dr. Giles graduated at Keokuk, Iowa, Medical College, class of 1895, and practiced for nine months in Iowa. He located in Wataga, Illinois, and has built up a good practice, and is a careful and conscientious physician. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Galesburg Medical Society, the Military Tract Medical Society, and Illinois State Medical Association. Dr. Giles is a member of the Methodist Church. He is a prohibitionist.

LEE, WILLIAM AUGUSTUS, JR.; Farmer; Sparta Township, where he was born March 5, 1858, on the old Lee homestead, Section 6; educated in Knox County. His parents, William A. and Betsey (Knowles) Lee, were natives of New York State; his paternal grandfather was Amos Lee. His father settled in Knox County at an early day, and the son was reared on the farm where he became a practical farmer and stockman; he received a good business education at the Galesburg Business College. When he was married he lived on Section 5, where his father formerly resided, and in 1882, moved to his present farm of one hundred and sixty acres. September 9, 1880, Mr. Lee was married to Jennie May Patterson, in Sparta Township. There are four children: Freddie P., Bessie K., Jennie May, and George Edward. Mrs. Lee's father, William Stephen Patterson, came at an early day from Ohio to Knox County and settled at Henderson with his parents. There he learned the cooper's trade, but after his marriage he became a farmer and stockman and was very successful. He gave his daughter, Jennie, the advantages of an education at St. Mary's, Knoxville. Mrs. Lee is not only an accomplished and talented lady, but also a devoted mother. Mr. Lee is a republican. He holds the office of School Director.

MASTERS, WILLIAM; Farmer; Sparta Township; born in Ontario Township, March 5, 1855; educated in Oneida. His parents were Joseph and Phebe (Fookes) Masters; they were born in Somerton, Somersetshire, England. Mr. Masters was married to Lida Nation, in Wataga, December 27, 1883. Their children are: Fred. N.; and Don C., died May 22, 1896. Mr. Masters is a republican. He has been School Director for thirteen years.

NILES, DAVID PRATT; Sparta Township; Farmer; born in Columbia County, New York, October 20, 1824; educated in New York. He was married July 9, 1870, in Knox County, Illinois, to Helen C. Johnson; she was born in Smaland, Sweden, and is a daughter of John Swanson and Helen Johnson. His parents were land-owners whose ancestors had, for several centuries, lived on the same farm. The family were Lutheran in religious belief. Mrs. Niles was educated in Sweden and came to the United States in 1869. Mr. Niles worked on the home farm in New York till in 1856, he came West with his brother,

H. P. Wood

Wm Williamson

George F., and they bought a mill in Wataga. They made a fine quality of flour, and had a large patronage from the surrounding country. They traded their mill for land in Henry County, Illinois, and engaged in farming near Wataga, where David Niles owned three hundred acres of land which he bought in 1862 and 3. He continued farming and stock raising and in 1874 entered into partnership with his brother with a herd of seventy-five short-horns. They conducted a large and profitable business until 1893, when the partnership was dissolved so far as stock and lands in Sparta Township were concerned; they retained, however, over one thousand acres of land south of Villisca, Iowa, and a quarter section of land in Henderson Township, Knox County, Illinois. In politics, Mr. Niles is a republican.

OLSON, JONAS; Farmer; Sparta Township; born Jefeberg Lan, Sweden, December 31, 1841, where he was educated. His parents were Olaf and Elizabeth (Larson) Nelson; his grandfathers were Nels Olson and Jonas Larson. Mr. Jonas Olson was married in Knox County, February 5, 1869, to Anna C. Donaldson. Their children are: Elizabeth L. (Mrs. Williamson); Ansfried (deceased); William C.; Alvin Arthur; Andrew E. Mr. Olson came from Sweden with his parents at the age of fifteen and settled on a small farm, afterwards moving to a farm of sixty-two acres. The father died within a year, leaving seven children largely dependent upon Jonas. He bought his farm before his marriage, and has greatly improved it. Mr. Olson is a man of good standing in the community. He has been a member of the Lutheran church for forty-one years. He is a republican.

PATTERSON, WILLIAM STEVENSON; Sparta Township; Farmer and stockman; born near Columbus, Ohio, December 13, 1825. His parents, John S. and Mary (Stevenson) Patterson, were natives of Washington County, Pennsylvania, and were married March 8, 1824. Mr. Patterson was reared in Ohio, and came to Knox County November 7, 1838, with his father and stepmother. They settled at Henderson, where he learned the cooper's trade, which he worked at until he went on a farm. September 30, 1846, in Henderson, he married Matilda Miller, after which he bought three hundred and twenty acres on Section 18, where James Barry now lives. He was prosperous and owned a large tract of land. He was one of the best known men in Knox County, where he bought and sold and shipped stock on a large scale. He finally moved to Stockham, Hamilton County, where he engaged in the same business with his usual success. His children received most of their education in Galesburg. His accomplished and talented daughter, Jennie May, was educated at St. Mary's, Knoxville, and has decided artistic talent. She is a devoted mother and is an influential member of society. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson had four children who reached maturity: Edwin W., Mrs. Clara Smith, Mrs. Wm. A. Lee, Jr. (Jennie May), and Fred A. With the exception of Mrs. Lee all are residents of Nebraska. Mr.

Patterson received his education in Ohio and in Knox County. In politics he is a democrat.

REED, JAMES DURHAM; Farmer; Sparta Township; born in Kentucky, June 27, 1825; died in Wataga, December 8, 1883; his parents, Jonathan and Polly (Newell) Reed, came from Kentucky to Knox County at an early day, and died at an advanced age in Henderson Grove. He was married in Knox County, August 22, 1847, to Martha A. Duval. She was born April 27, 1831. Their children are: Mary S., deceased; Mrs. Nancy E. Haver; Mrs. Helen M. Andrews; Mrs. Sarah E. Langless; Frances A.; Mrs. Rosalla A. Temple, deceased; Mrs. Polly E. Slabaugh; James A. I.; and Dora E. After his marriage Mr. Reed lived in Henderson Grove. For fifty years he worked a farm of two hundred and twenty acres near Wataga, where Mrs. Reed now lives. He greatly improved his farm and had fine out houses. He built a fine residence in 1888. Mrs. Reed is a member of the Christian church. Mr. Reed was a democrat.

STREAM, OLIVER; Farmer; Sparta Township; born in Sweden December 4, 1833, where he received a limited education. His father was Olof Stream, who was a soldier in the Swedish army for twenty-five years; his mother was Betsy (Isaacson) Stream. Mr. Oliver Stream was first married to Margaret Donaldson, of Sweden, in July, 1855, emigrated to America the same year, settling in Knox County, where he has since resided. Their children were: John, Mary, Frank, Albert, Olive, and Willie. His first wife died in Rio Township in 1871. Mr. Stream's second marriage was with Mrs. Martha Johnson, in Knox County, February 13, 1872. They have one daughter, Carrie. He is a member of the Methodist church. In politics, he is a republican, with prohibition sentiments. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

WEED, HARRISON T.; Farmer; Sparta Township; born in Delaware County, New York, March 18, 1840; educated in his native state. His parents were James Weed, born in the state of New York, and Abigail (Terry), a native of New Hampshire. His paternal grandfather was Lewis Weed. Mr. Weed came with his parents to Belvidere, Boone County, Illinois. There his parents died, and the son at the age of twenty went to Wisconsin. He came down the Wisconsin and Mississippi rivers with lumber to Burlington, Iowa, where the lumber was sold, and young Weed went by steamer to St. Louis, where he remained one winter and part of the next summer. He was twenty-one years of age when he reached Knox County; he spent nearly all of the first year in Henderson Grove splitting rails. He then went to Harrison County, Missouri, and taught school about a year and a half, till the breaking out of the war, after which he taught during one winter, five miles west of Galesburg. He next farmed near Oneida seven years, and was enabled to make a payment on his present farm of eighty acres, on Section 27, where he now resides. December 11, 1862, he married Sarah J. Conley.

who died July 23, 1875. They had two children: Mrs. Harriet E. Vaughn and Ada M. Weed. October 19, 1846, Mr. Weed was married to Susan A. Faruham, at her home near Wataga. They have two children: Abbie M. and Charlotte A. In religion, he is a Congregationalist, and has been for many years a Deacon and a Trustee in the church. In politics, he is a republican. He has been a School Director for seventeen years.

WILLIAMSON, JOHN EDWIN; Farmer; Sparta Township, where he was born April 21, 1861; he was educated in Knox County, and is a graduate of the Western Business College. His parents, Jonas and Christine (Anderson) Williamson, were natives of Sweden. When fourteen years old, Jonas Williamson came to the United States with his parents and settled in Sparta Township. He died in 1893, at the age of fifty-seven years; his wife died in 1875; at the age of thirty-five. They left two children: Charlotta Margarette, wife of T. H. Rommel; and John Edwin. September 18, 1884, John Edwin Williamson married Christine Hanson in Lynn Township. They have seven children: Mabel E., Florence V., Minnie C., Axel Wesley, Mary Edith, Emma L., George E. Mrs. Williamson is a daughter of Olaf and Elizabeth (Anderson) Hanson, who settled in Sparta Township before the war. Olaf Hanson served through the war and draws a pension. He is a successful farmer in Lynn Township, near Galva. In religion, Mr. Williamson is a Methodist, and has been a Trustee in that church. In politics, he is a republican and has held the office of School Director.

HENDERSON TOWNSHIP.

Henderson was the first township in Knox County to be settled by white men. In February, 1828, Daniel and Alexander Robertson came to Section 15. They were soon followed by others, and by 1830, a good many people had settled within its boundaries. [Much of Henderson's early history will be found in the articles on Knox County and County Government.]

Henderson is well watered by the branches which make up the head waters of Henderson River. Along these creeks originally stood one of the finest bodies of timber in Illinois. It was a favorite resort for Indians, who, on Sections 23 and 26, had extensive fields of corn. A well was dug at an early day on Section 30, near the creek. At a depth of sixty feet ashes, stumps, a red cedar log and general rubbish were found in as perfect a state of preservation as though the fires had just gone out. Until the Black Hawk War, the Indians were very friendly, remaining in their wigwams and helping the settlers in sugar making, but at the outbreak of that disturbance they went away, but without committing any depredations.

The prairie land which comprises about one-half the township, is very good. Along the edge of this prairie, and near to the timber, the first settlers located. For their mail they had to go to Rushville, seventy-five miles away. In 1833, a postoffice, with John G. Sanburn as the first Postmaster, was established in the settlement. The postoffice, under the same name, "Knox Court House," was afterwards moved to Knoxville. In 1830, the first "corn-cracker" was put up, and in 1837, Silvanus Western, William and Olmstead Ferris put up a steam saw-mill, and not long after added mill-stones, grinding corn and making unbolted flour.

Rev. Jacob Gum preached the first sermon, in 1829, at the house of John B. Gum. F. B. Barber taught the first school, in a log shanty near the grove, in 1830. Mr. Barber afterward moved to Texas, where he died. In 1833, Harmon G. Brown opened a school, on Section 31. At present there are four hundred and seventy-seven persons under twenty-one years of age in the township, of whom two hundred and fifty-nine attend the twelve public schools, one of which is graded. The school houses are frame structures and are worth seven thousand, three hundred dollars.

The first settlers were fond of hunting, and devoted much of their time to the chase. One of the disastrous prairie fires was discovered by H. G. Brown, Peter Frans and Ben Brington while out hunting. They returned home from their quest for game to engage in fighting the flames during an entire night.

Only one village, Henderson, has ever been started in the township. [See Henderson Village for the industries of the township other than farming and stock-raising.] One of the farmers, Henry M. Sisson, has made the township famous by his fine hogs, which he has shipped all over the country. His biography may be found on another page.

At the first town election, April 5, 1863, one hundred and fifty-five votes were cast, resulting in the election of Peter Frans, Supervisor; Martin W. Gay, Clerk; James McMurtry, Assessor; C. G. Dean, Collector; Thomas McKee and Abraham Jackson, Justices.

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows have a Lodge here.

A brief record of the church history of the township will be of interest. The first church edifice was built at Henderson, and was the result of the efforts of Baptists and Methodists, jointly. In 1874, the Methodists erected a structure of their own. The first pastor was Rev. Mr. Waters, and at present the congregation is under the pastoral charge of the minister residing at Wataga. The Baptists have not now any distinctively sectarian place of worship. A Lutheran church was organized at Soperville, in 1870, and a building erected in 1881. Rev. Mr. Westerdahl was the first pastor, and the present occupant of the pulpit is Rev. H. Olson. There are some two hundred and twenty-five communicants. At one time there was a Christian (sometimes called Campbellite) church in the township, but it no longer exists. The same statement may be predicated of the "Church of Latter Day Saints" (Mormon), which flourished at Soperville in the early days.

HENDERSON VILLAGE.

The village known by this name was laid out June 11, 1835, by Parnach Owen, for Calvin Glass, on Section 14 of Henderson Township. It was incorporated in 1838, an election being held March 7, at which twenty-eight votes were cast for the measure and none in opposition.

In early days it was a flourishing place, with five general stores, besides a number of other shops. Gardiner and Chapin built the first store. Between 1840 and 1850, over thirty coopers were employed here in making pork and whiskey barrels, which were shipped all over the State.

In 1839, the post office here was the largest in the county, and previous to the building the railroad Henderson was nearly as important a place as either Knoxville or Galesburg; and was able to exert sufficient influence to secure the insertion of a provision in the railroad incorporation act that the line should pass through the town, but the provision was evaded. Nevertheless, when the Central Military Tract Railroad was constructed, it was a stirring village, though fallen behind its rivals, Knoxville and Galesburg. Subsequently, trade being attracted to the railroad stations, the village steadily declined, until little remained. The construction of the Rio branch of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad has saved it from extinction, and some little improvement appears.

In 1839, Ben Campbell established a distillery, which Mr. Koons bought, and removed to Section 10. Early in the thirties a saw mill was started here which, in 1841, was owned by Calvin Glass, who that same year started in it a still with a capacity of ten barrels a day. It was burned the same year. The next year Poyer and Wickes put up a still with a daily capacity of twenty barrels, a little north of Henderson. It, too, burned in about a year, and with its destruction ended the attempts at distilling in Henderson.

Population. 1850, 378. 1880, 198. 1890, 163. 1899, estimated, 125.

JOHN JUNK.

John Junk was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, May 6, 1827. His parents were James and Elizabeth (Lincoln) Junk of Pennsylvania. James Junk died in Fayette County July 3, 1877, previous to which he had celebrated his golden wedding. He was the oldest of seven children, the others being: Samuel, Thomas, Sarah, Henry, Robert, and Jackson. John Junk's paternal grandparents were John Junk of New Jersey, and Sarah (Preston) Junk of Pennsylvania; his maternal grandparents were Benjamin Lincoln, who was born near Baltimore, and was a second cousin of Abraham Lincoln; and Elizabeth (Bates) Lincoln.

John Junk was educated in a log school house in Fayette County, and later apprenticed to learn the trades of carpenter and joiner, and millwright, devoting three years to the former and two years to the latter. He came to Knox County in May, 1855, and, having previously known Dr. Joseph Henderson, he settled near him in Henderson Township. The first application of his trade in the county was the building of a barn for Governor William McMurtry, after which he built a school house in District No. 1. While thus engaged, he boarded with Mrs. Ebenezer (Robertson) Westfall. November 22, 1855, he was married, in Knoxville, Illinois, to Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander and Narcissa (Ferguson) Robertson. Mr. Robertson served in the Black Hawk War. He and his brother, Daniel Robertson, came to Henderson Township in February, 1828. Alexander Robertson died February 28, 1848. His daughter, Elizabeth, was born in Henderson Township, December 14, 1837.

During the Fall of 1855, Mr. John Junk bought eighty acres of land and began farming. He was very successful, and, after a few years, went to the old home of his wife and bought out the other heirs, securing a farm of four hundred and thirty acres, where he now resides.

Mr. and Mrs. Junk are the parents of two children, Stephen A., who died at the age of four years; and Alexander Robertson.

In politics, Mr. Junk is a democrat, and has held many important offices. In 1871, he was elected Supervisor, serving four years, and was again Supervisor in 1896. He was Justice of the Peace for eight years, and Road Commissioner for three years; he also served as Assessor. He is a member of Hiram Lodge No. 26, Masonic fraternity.

JAMES CHAMPION McMURTRY.

James Champion McMurry, son of William and Ruth (Champion) McMurry, was born in Crawford County, Indiana, February 3, 1829. He belongs to a noted family, whose descent is from the French Huguenots. His great-grandfather, John McMurry, had a large family of children, five of whom were killed in the Revolution, at the battle of Cowpens.

The McMurry family came to Knox County, November 1, 1829, and settled in Henderson Township. The family consisted of the grandfather, James McMurry, his two sons, William and James, their wives, and the children of William—Mary and James C. The following families, whose names will always be associated with Knox County, were already settled in the neighborhood: Daniel and Alexander Robinson, and Riggs Pennington, of whom William and James McMurry bought their farm of one hundred and sixty acres, on which was a small log cabin. On this farm, the people of the whole neighborhood assisted in building a block house or stockade, which afforded protection against the incursions of the Indians. At different times before, during and after the Black Hawk War, about twenty-five families were gathered here. During the war, William McMurry organized a company of Rangers of about eighty-nine, which embraced nearly all that were fit for service in Knox, Warren and Mercer counties. They were all mounted, each man, furnishing his own rifle and horse. They pursued the Indians in all directions but were never engaged in battle.

His grandfather, James McMurry, was one of thirteen children, and was born in Tennessee. His maternal grandfather was of Irish descent, and was born on the "Emerald Isle." James McMurry died in 1854, at the advanced age of nearly ninety.

His father, William McMurry, was one of the most remarkable men of his time. He was strong intellectually, was a thorough student of human nature, and was an adept in the art of leading and controlling men. He was born in Tennessee, and married Ruth Champion, a native of Kentucky. He was a State Senator for many years. In 1848, he was elected Lieutenant Governor of Illinois on the same ticket with Governor French. He was captain of a company in the Black Hawk War and Colonel of the Sixty-seventh Regiment of Militia of Illinois. During the Civil War, he was chosen Colonel of the One Hundred and Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and after serving a short time in Kentucky, he became ill and was honorably discharged.

In 1846, he became a member of the Masonic Order, joining the Hiram Lodge in Henderson and the Horeb Chapter in Henderson. He was the Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge and Chapter for fourteen years. He was one of the first three County School Commissioners of Knox County and has held the office several times since.

Governor McMurry was an uncompromising democrat, and a particular friend of Stephen A.

Douglas. He was early instructed in the democratic ritual by his father and grandfather. He was one of the most conspicuous political figures in Illinois, and on account of his tenacity of opinion and firm adherence to democratic principles, he was regarded as a "wheel horse" in his party.

The natural powers of Governor McMurry were great. He was a great reader and had a well stored mind. He was entertaining and agreeable in conversation, a good neighbor and constant friend. He performed the duties of citizenship faithfully, and was regarded by everyone as a conscientious and upright citizen.

Dr James C. McMurry received his education in the common schools. Later, he was a student in Knox College, and in Union College, Schenectady, New York. He took his degree in medicine at the Rush Medical College in Chicago. After graduation, he returned to Knox County, and has practiced medicine here ever since.

In early life, Dr. McMurry embraced the political faith of his father. He was a democrat until the breaking out of the Civil War. He cast his first republican vote for Abraham Lincoln's re-election. Since that time he has been a firm adherent to republican principles, and his voice is often heard in the council hall of the republican party. He is regarded as an influential party man, and is a party leader in local and State politics. He helped to form the Union League in Henderson Township and was elected its first president. He has been offered many official positions in the party, which he has declined. He says that "during the war, his life was threatened many times by members of the Golden Circle; but his good nerve, judgment, and reputation as a good fence, and 'dead shot,' did much to prevent disorder in Knox County." The doctor is a superior athlete, and has exhibited his strength and nerve on many occasions.

Dr. McMurry possesses many of the characteristics of his father. He is noted for the honesty of his convictions, his clearheadedness of obligation and duty, and his moral courage in maintaining the right. In manner, he is not finical or affected, and in his speech, he is straightforward and plain. He is liberal in his views, charitable towards all, given to hospitality, and has lived a life full of good deeds.

Dr. McMurry was married June 9, 1855, to Caroline Nelson, of Warren County. She is the daughter of Andrew Nelson, who, at the time of marriage, was a merchant in Henderson. To Dr. and Mrs. McMurry were born five children: James W., Franklin H., Susan H., Caroline and Mary. Franklin H. died at the age of five.

BAER, ELI F.; Farmer; Henderson Township; born January 11, 1863, in Henry County, Illinois; educated in Westfield College, Illinois. His parents who were natives of Franklin County, Pennsylvania were: David F. Baer, born May 11, 1827, and died July 18, 1890, and Susanna (Rine) Baer, born April 28, 1825; his grandparents were David and Elizabeth (Flicklunger) Baer, of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania; his maternal grandparents were Michael Rine, of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, and Elizabeth (Dunkle) Rine, of Hagerstown, Maryland; his great-grandparents were Michael Dunkle and Susanna Raider. Mr. Baer was married to Angie Waters, at Gilson, Illinois, May 25, 1898. Mr. Baer is a prohibitionist. In religion, he belongs to the United Brethren in Christ.

Edw. A. M. Murtry

CARVER, EDWIN; Farmer and fruit-grower; Henderson Township; born June 28, 1834, in Fayette County, Indiana. His father, Jonathan Carver, was born on the Hudson river, in New York State, and died at the age of eighty-two. His mother, Malinda (Nelson), was a native of Augusta, Maine. His paternal grandparents, Elijah and Susan (Longwell) Carver, were natives of New York State; his paternal great-grandfather was Timothy Carver. His maternal grandparents, Jacob and Mary (Campbell) Nelson, were born in Maine, as was also his maternal great-grandfather. Jacob Nelson, whose son, Horatio Nelson, was in the naval service during the Revolution. February 18, 1857, Mr. Carver was married, in Fayette County, Indiana, to Nancy J. Van Buskirk, daughter of George and Rachel (Helm) Van Buskirk, natives respectively of Kentucky and Pennsylvania. Both parents died in Fayette County, Indiana, the father being nearly ninety-six years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Carver have one son, Grant, who was educated in Galva and Chicago, and married Helen, daughter of S. H. Bateman. Mr. Carver came to Illinois October 18, 1865, and settled three miles Northeast of Lafayette, Stark County, on a farm of two hundred and forty acres of virgin prairie, which he improved and subsequently sold. He moved near Lafayette and from there, in 1880, to Galva, where he engaged in the implement business. After five years, he returned to the farm, which he cultivated until 1889, when he moved to Galesburg. He owns sixty-five acres of land near Henderson, which he converted into a fruit farm, a charming retreat greatly admired by Galesburg people. He is a republican.

DAVISON, JOSEPH; Farmer; Henderson Township; born in Northumberland, England, January 21, 1828; educated in his native land. His father, Robert Davison, was a shoemaker and merchant in Northumberland, which is on the border of Scotland. His mother, Mary (Charlton), was a native of England, as were also her parents, Joseph and Mary Charlton. Mr. Davison's paternal grandfather, John Davison, was a North-of-England man; he was a Mason. His paternal grandmother was Isabella (Nashit). In 1853, Mr. Joseph Davison came to the United States and settled in Henderson, Knox County, Illinois, where he engaged in the shoe business, which he had learned in England. This he continued until about 1875, since which time he has devoted all his attention to farming. He was frugal and industrious, and added to the first forty acres which he bought adjoining Henderson, until he now owns more than four hundred acres of good land. Mr. Davison was twice married; first, to Jane Armstrong in Scotland; his second marriage was to Isabella Kilgore. He has three sons: Robert, Harvey C., and Irving. In politics, he is independent. He has held local offices. He was made a Mason at Hiram Lodge Number 26, and Horeb Chapter Number 4.

DUFFEY, EDWARD FENWICK; Farmer; Henderson Township; born in Covington, Kentucky, June 21, 1852. His father, Michael Duffey, was born in Philadelphia, October 4, 1811; he was a carpenter. In 1854, he came to Knox County and settled on Section 34, Henderson Township, owning and improving one hundred and sixty acres of land, which at his death was divided among his five children. His wife, Catharine V. (McDonough), was born in New York City, and her parents, Francis and Margaret (Prosser) McDonough, were natives of Ireland. Francis McDonough was a soldier in the War of 1812. M. T. Duffey's parents, John and Mary Duffey, were also natives of Ireland. Mr. E. F. Duffey moved to Kendall County, Illinois, in 1872, and from there to Fayette County, Iowa, where he farmed. He was married in Seaton, to Hattie E., daughter of Richard Maitland Wade, a native of Ulster County, New York, who came to Knox County in 1855, but now lives in Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Duffey have five children; Mrs. Bertha M. Cunningham; Kathryn M., a graduate of Galesburg High School, class of 1899; Francis A.; M. Blanche; and Lawrence H. In Fayette County, Iowa, he bought eighty acres of land and farmed there for ten years. He then moved to Red Willow County, Nebraska, where he took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres from the government, which he traded for three hundred and twenty acres of land in Rawlins County, Kansas. In May, 1895, he returned to the old homestead in Knox County, where he now resides. Kathryn M., his second child, taught during one school term in Nebraska, having obtained a certificate when she was sixteen years old. Mr. Duffey belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a republican, and has held the office of School Director, and Assessor. He served as Justice of the Peace, and held other offices in Nebraska.

HENDERSON, DAVID; Farmer; Henderson Township; born January 26, 1822, in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, where he was educated. His father, Stewart Henderson, was born in Ireland; his mother Anna (Hunt) Henderson, in Pennsylvania. Mr. David Henderson was married to Sophia Davis Poppett, in Ontario Township, in June, 1853. Their children are Nancy Ann, Mary Jane, Jacob Harvey, Nellie Sophia, Peter Davis, and Thomas. Harriet Amanda and David Alexander died in infancy. In religion, Mr. Henderson is a Protestant. He is a democrat.

HICKMAN, ALFRED W.; Farmer; Henderson Township; born February 4, 1867, in Henderson Township; educated in Galesburg. His parents were Jacob Hickman, of Wilmington, Delaware, and Mary Ann (Chapman) Hickman, of Oneida County, New York. His paternal grandfather was John Hickman, and his grandmother's maiden name was Junk; they were of Sussex County, Delaware; his maternal grandparents were Samuel Chapman of Oneida County, New York, and Mary Chapman, of Westmoreland, New York. Mr. Jacob Hickman died July 24, 1898. Mr. A. W. Hickman was married to Alice Windom, at Galesburg, Illinois, October, 1893. He is a democrat.

HODGES, ELLEN; Henderson Township; born December 10, 1844, in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania; educated in Pennsylvania, and Knoxville, Illinois. Her parents, Robert and Nancy (McIlhenny) Cobean; her paternal grandparents, James and Elizabeth (Stewart) Cobean; and her maternal grandparents, Victor and Nancy (Orr) McIlhenny, were born in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania; her paternal great-grandfather, William Cobean, was born in Scotland; and her maternal great-grandparents, George and Nancy (McClure) Orr, were born in Ireland. Mrs. Hodges was married to John Hodges in Galesburg, Illinois, April 15, 1867. Their children are: Bertha, Myron, Nellie, Charles, and Robert.

JUNK, JAMES ELVIN; Farmer; Henderson Township, where he was born April 20, 1864; educated in the same township. His parents were Thomas and Maria (Kilgore) Junk, of Fayette County, Pennsylvania; his paternal grandparents were James and Eliza (Rankin) Junk of the same County and State; and his maternal grandfather was James Kilgore, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Junk was married to Carrie Blanche Hampton in Galesburg, Illinois, December 24, 1891; their children are: Fred Hampton, Geneva Jane, and Dorothy. Mr. Junk is a member of the Methodist Church. He is a democrat.

McMURTRY, HARRIET; Henderson Township, where she was born, February 12, 1854, and where she was educated. Her parents were James McMurry, born in Hardin County, Kentucky, died, March, 1893, and Eliza (Rice) McMurry, born in Indiana, died, September 23, 1879; her grandparents were James McMurry of North Carolina, and Margaret (Lucas) McMurry of Kentucky; her maternal grandparents were Jacob Rice, and Margaret (Edwards) Rice of Kentucky. In religion, Harriet McMurry is a Universalist.

McMURTRY, WILLIAM; was born in Mercer County, Kentucky, February 20, 1801. He removed, with his parents, to Crawford County, Indiana, where he married Ruth Champion, by whom he had five children: Mary E., James C., Nancy, Francis M. and Cynthia. Mrs. McMurry died February 10, 1864. In 1829 he came, with his family, to Henderson Grove, where he lived until his death, from dropsy, April 11, 1875. He was a democrat in politics, and was elected to the legislature in 1836, and again in 1838. In 1844 he was sent to the State Senate, and in 1848, was made Lieutenant Governor. He was comparatively uneducated, but his sociability, his strong, good sense, and his inimitable energy made him one of the most influential men of his day in Illinois politics. In 1862, he was commissioned Colonel of the One Hundred and Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but ill health compelled his resignation in February, 1863. He was a man of powerful physique and great vitality, but his rough life in the early frontier days left him broken down in constitution during the later years of his life.

NELSON, CHARLES HENRY; Farmer; Henderson Township; born in Monson, Hampden County, Massachusetts, June 2, 1830; educated in the common schools of Knox County. His parents, Andrew and Susan (Hawley) Nelson, were born in Massachusetts, the former in the town of Wales, the latter in Amherst. His paternal grandparents were George and Susan Nelson, the former having been born in Wales. His maternal grandparents were Philip and Roxanna Hawley, the former a native of Massachusetts. The Nelson family was of English descent. Mr. Nelson was married in Henderson, November 8, 1882, to Ruth Cook; they have two children: Frank A. and John T. Mrs. Nelson is a daughter of James Cook, who came to Knox County in 1862 and died in 1891; he was a farmer. Mr. Nelson came to Knox County with his father and step-mother, Barbara (Hamilton). His own mother died in Pennsylvania, November 9, 1839. For ten years he was a merchant; he then studied law in Chicago (1862) with George Ford, since which time he has practiced in Knox County. He owns nine hundred and seventy-five acres of land, chiefly in Knox County. He is a self-made man, his financial success being entirely due to his own efforts. In politics, he is a democrat, and is a free and independent citizen; he is not a member of any society. He was supervisor for three terms.

OVERSTREET, JOHN LOWREY; Farmer; Henderson Township; born, November 13, 1859, at Galesburg, where he was educated in the district school, and at Knox College. His parents were Milton Lowrey Overstreet of Nicholasville, Jefferson County, Kentucky, and Catherine (Martin) Overstreet of Connecticut; his grandparents were Robert S., and Jane (Lowrey) Overstreet of Kentucky; his maternal grandparents were Joel and Phoebe Martin of Connecticut; his great-grandparents were James Overstreet of England and Susan (Daves) Overstreet of Kentucky. He was married to Nannie A. Brown in Galesburg, Illinois, December 26, 1882. Mr. Overstreet is a member of the Congregational Church. In politics he is a republican.

PARSONS, FRANKLIN; Farmer; Section 25, Henderson Township; born January 9, 1826, in Agawam, West Springfield, Hampden County, Massachusetts; educated in New York and Ohio. His parents were David Hastings and Lydia T. (Warren) Parsons of Massachusetts; his paternal grandparents were Hosea Parsons, born June 4, 1778, and Sallie (Upham) Parsons, born October 25, 1778, the latter at Springfield, Massachusetts. Mr. Franklin Parsons first married Sarah Bullard at Knoxville, Illinois, March 1, 1848. His second marriage was with Actus Baxter, in Henderson, September 5, 1871.⁸ His children are Leonard U., Edatha E., Frank D., Ellen A., John R., Lincoln E., Sarah L., M. Emma, and Effa M. Mr. Parsons is a member of the Universalist Church. In politics, he is a republican.

PENDERGAST, THOMAS; Coal Operator; Henderson Township; born December 22, 1846, in County Kilkenny, Ireland. He was married to Rosanna Sharkey, December 28, 1869, at Galesburg. They have five children: John, Mary, James, Katharine and Johanna. John Pendergast, the father of Thomas, was born in Ireland, as was also his mother, whose maiden name was Catherine Gorman. His paternal grandfather was Patrick Pendergast; his maternal grandfather was Michael Gorman, and his maternal grandmother was Mary Cady, all of whom were natives of Ireland. In the spring of 1863 Mr. Pendergast came to Knox County, Illinois, where his father had located in 1855. He engaged in farming until 1889, when he sunk a shaft and began to mine coal on his own farm in Soperville, Illinois. He is a self-made man, and his success in life is due solely to his tireless energy and industry. Tragic circumstances attended the removal of his father's family to America. Mr. John Pendergast came to New York in 1848, and one year later, sent for his family. Upon landing at Quebec they were seized with cholera, and before the father could reach them from New York, the mother, one daughter and a son had died. His surviving daughter was taken to the home in New York, which the father had provided for his family. He is a member of the Catholic Church. In politics, he is a democrat.

PENNINGTON, RIGGS; Mr. Pennington was one of the first County Commissioners. He was a keen, shrewd man, of medium size, dark complexion, having piercing eyes, straight black hair, a full forehead, and a general appearance that gave him the air of a thoroughly wide-awake business man. Not much can now be learned of him, but he deserves mention herein, for in his day he was one of the wealthiest and most influential men in Northern Illinois. When he left this State for Texas, in 1837, he carried nearly fifteen thousand dollars with him. He was a native of North Carolina and was the first white settler in McDonough County, Illinois. He came to Knox County, in 1828, and returned here once for a short visit in 1840. It is said that he remained in Texas until his death, in 1869. But perhaps a more trustworthy report is that he shortly left Texas and went to Mexico, where he amassed a large fortune.

POPLETT, FRANCIS; Farmer; Henderson Township; born in Sparta Township, May 28, 1851; educated in Knox County. His father, John Poplett, was born in Indiana, September 12, 1826, and died March 30, 1852; his mother, Sophia (Davis) Poplett, was born in Indiana, November 2, 1829; his grandfather, Thompson Poplett, came from Kentucky; his maternal grandfather, Peter Davis, was born in Kentucky in December, 1801, and died March 15, 1871; his maternal grandmother, Harriet (Cannon) Davis, was born in Kentucky March 5, 1811, and died November 8, 1891. John Poplett and Sophia Davis were married November 16, 1848; a son, Henry Thompson, was born in 1849, and died June 16, 1850. Francis Poplett was married to Laura L. Rowe, in Sparta Township July 3, 1872. Their children are: Nellie Harriet, born July 10, 1873, died August 11, 1873; Laura Ella, born January 12, 1875, married to Jacob M. Findley, January 9, 1896; Mary Alice, born August 19, 1876, died February 8, 1880, and Elmer Frank, born April 20, 1884. Laura Lorrana, wife of Francis Poplett, was born February 22, 1849, and died March 31, 1890. Mr. Poplett is a Protestant. In politics, he is a republican, and has held the office of Road Commissioner.

ROBERTSON, HARBIN CRAWFORD; Farmer; Henderson Township; born in the old log homestead May 5, 1850; educated in Knox County. His father, Daniel Robertson, was born June 12, 1804, in Blair, Perthshire, Scotland, and came to this country with his father, Alexander Robertson, also a native of Scotland, when he was but six months old. Alexander Robertson settled first in New York State, but in 1817, removed to Illinois, finally settling in Morgan County, where he died. Daniel Robertson moved, in 1822, to Sugar Creek, near Rushville, and in 1828, to Knox county, where he died April 6, 1890. Daniel Robertson's wife, Hopey Jane (Riddle) was born in Kentucky, February 25, 1812, and died November 29, 1895. December 27, 1877, in Henderson, Mr. H. C. Robertson was married to Lida McKee; they have three children: Fannie Maud, Mary Elener and Millard Allen. Mrs. Robertson is a daughter of Allen and Harriet (Biggerstaff) McKee, natives of Athens County, Ohio, and of Scotch-Irish descent. Her parents moved to Iowa in 1873, where her father died; her mother is still living. Mr. Robertson owns the old homestead and has, altogether, two hundred and one acres of land, eighty-four acres of which are in section twenty-eight, where he resides, and where he settled when he was married. He is the only one of the family in the township. From April, 1871, till September, 1873, he lived in Kansas and Missouri, where he still owns one hundred and sixty acres of land. In politics, he is a democrat.

SHAY, J. J.; Farmer; Henderson Township, where he was born November 14, 1859. His father, Michael Shay, and his mother, Mary (Fitzgerald) Shay, were born in Ireland. Mr. Shay's parents came from Ireland to New York in 1848; in 1850, they moved to Knox County, Illinois, where they resided until their death. Mr. Shay was married to Anna Horstman, at Lexington, Nebraska, March, 1890. They have two children: Ray and Earl. Early in life, Mr. Shay went West and spent fifteen years in Western Nebraska and Wyoming, as foreman for Daters & Company of Cheyenne, Wyoming.

He had the management of twenty-five thousand head of cattle. In 1895, he returned to Knox County, where he has since resided and follows the occupation of farming. In politics, Mr. Shay is a republican, and is now serving his second term as Assessor. He is energetic and industrious, and much respected by the community in which he lives.

WILLIAMSON, EDWIN PETER; Farmer; Henderson Township; born March 13, 1870, at Wataga, Knox County; educated in Business College at Galesburg, Illinois, and at Davenport, Iowa. His father is William Williamson. Mr. E. P. Williamson was married to Elizabeth L. Olson, at Wataga, March 22, 1899. He was brought up on the Williamson farm, near Wataga, and was a clerk in his father's store in Moline, Illinois, from 1887 to 1888. After the death of his brother George, he managed the mill in Wataga until the Fall of 1895, when he began to farm on the homestead. After his marriage, Mr. Williamson settled near Henderson on a farm of one hundred and eighty-seven acres, where he is making a record for industry and thrift.

GALESBURG TOWNSHIP.

Joseph Rowe, the first settler, took up his home in the southeastern corner of the township in 1832 or 1833. Soon after came Isalah Smelser, and in 1834 Gaddial Scott and Edward Morse located on Sections 19 and 3, respectively. Edward Morse was one of the Henderson colony, but settled so far from his neighbors as to be over the Galesburg line, away from the timber. He built a tall log cabin, which could be seen for miles over the level country, and hence was called the "Lighthouse of the Prairie."

All the land in the township is very fertile. There are six ungraded schools, with one hundred and thirty-six pupils. The six school houses are all frame structures worth about five thousand seven hundred dollars.

This township comprises now the twenty-seven sections of Township 11 North, Range 1 East, not included in the limits of the City of Galesburg.

The city was made a separate town by legislative enactment in 1867.

The township's population (the city, of course, being excluded), as shown by the United States Census reports, has varied as follows: In 1860, it was six hundred and sixty-four; in 1870, eight hundred and seventy-eight; in 1880, seven hundred and forty-eight; in 1890, seven hundred and eight.

[For additional facts relative to the history of this township, the reader is referred to the article entitled "City of Galesburg,"]

HILAND HENRY CLAY.

Hiland Henry Clay, son of John L. and Louisa M. (Balch) Clay, was born in Chester, Vermont, January 3, 1838.

His paternal grandfather was Timothy Clay, who was born in Massachusetts. His paternal grandmother was Rhoda Lawson, also a native of Massachusetts. His maternal great-grandfather was Hart Balch, who was born in Boston. His maternal great-grandmother's maiden name was Betsey Green. His maternal grandfather was Joel Balch, a native of New Hampshire, and his maternal grandmother was Betsey Stevens.

John L. Clay, the father, came to Knox County in 1837. He bought four hundred and eighty acres of land in Galesburg Township, a part of which has always been known as the "Clay" homestead. His traveling companions were Adnah Williams, who founded the "Williams Nursery" on West Main street, and Stephen Fields. Both Williams and Fields bought a tract of land. After making their investments and examining this section of country thoroughly with a view to future settlement, they all returned to Vermont. In 1840, Mr. Clay moved to Illinois with his family, which consisted of his wife and four children; Alonzo C., William L., Warren W. and Hiland H. They lived in Galesburg, then a small village, nearly one year, until a house was built on the land which he had already purchased. This land was all prairie, very fertile, and became one of the best farms in Knox County. Here Mr. Clay lived until he died, reared his family, and by his industry, became a man of wealth and standing. He was charitable and kind, a good neighbor and a fond father. He was liberal minded, a thorough-going democrat, and was called to fill several local offices, such as Assessor and Supervisor.

Mr. Clay married into a very superior family, intellectually. His wife's maiden name was Louisa M. Balch, who was born in Andover, Vermont. Her brother, Dr. William S. Balch, was a Universalist clergyman, and one of the greatest orators and debaters in the denomination to which he belonged. Mrs. Clay was a strong, intellectual woman. She had a versatile mind, was well informed, and always manifested true, motherly instincts in her family. Her neighbors gave her the name of being a kind hearted woman, ministering to the sick and needy as circumstances seemed to require.

Major H. H. Clay inherited some of the characteristics and mental qualities of his mother. He was educated in the common schools, finishing with a short course in Lombard University. He is thoroughly posted in the events of the day, and has been a prominent citizen in the community in which he has lived ever since he has arrived at manhood. He was raised on the farm and farming has been his occupation through life. His homestead embraces four hundred and twenty acres of most excellent land and he is regarded as one of the best practical farmers of Knox County. During the Civil War, he enlisted in the One Hundred and Secand Regiment Illinois Volunteers, and remained in service until its close. He participated in many hard fought battles, such as Reseca, New Hope Church, Peachtree Creek and siege of Atlanta. On entering the army he was chosen First Lieutenant of his company, and within four months thereafter, was commissioned as Captain. In December, 1864, he rose to the rank of Major, and commanded his Regiment until the close of the war.

W. H. H. Clay

As a soldier, Major Clay was a good disciplinarian, prompt and intelligent, and always won the respect and confidence of his command. His regiment saw the most active service after May 1, 1864. They were engaged in battle in the siege of Chattanooga and Atlanta nearly one hundred days. They remained in this vicinity until November 15, when they entered the great army under General Sherman in that ever memorable "march to the Sea." Major Clay's regiment participated in the Grand March in Washington and was mustered out, June 6, 1865, disbanding in Chicago.

As a man and citizen, Major Clay has had an honorable career. He is a man of strict integrity, sound judgment, and has a well stored mind. He is not fastidious or squeamish, or burdened with the conventionalities of life. He goes straight forward to his labors and duty, and leaves to others the freedom he himself enjoys. He is broad in his views, liberal in his dealings, and charitable toward all. In politics, Mr. Clay is a consistent and unserving democrat. All his life he has been identified with that party. He has held several township offices. In 1877 he was elected Supervisor, which office he filled most acceptably.

Major Clay was married October 14, 1878, to Jennie E. Clay, daughter of James and Charlotte T. (Orcutt) Clay, residents of Gaysville, Vermont.

To them were born six children: Fred C., John L., Walter T., Irving H., Marion and Roberts M.

COOLIDGE, JAMES H.; Farmer; Galesburg Township; born August 25, 1838, in Watertown, Massachusetts; educated in the common schools. His parents were John and Mary (Bond) Coolidge of Watertown, Massachusetts. He was married to Ellen F. Brown in New Hampshire, January 1, 1862. They have nine children: Lottie E., who married David Williams, and died in 1895; John, James H., Jr., Arthur E., Nellie, Walter, Josephine, Edgar D. and Edna L. Mr. Coolidge came to Knox County in 1874, and settled on Main street, west of Galesburg. He is engaged in general farming, dairying and the breeding of thoroughbred Holstein cattle. His ancestors came from England to Watertown about the year 1700. Mr. Coolidge is a member of the Baptist Church. In politics, he is a republican.

DERBY, FRANCIS THOMAS; Farmer; Galesburg Township; born, July 10, 1822, at Andover, Vermont; educated in the common schools of Vermont. His parents, Nathan B. and Betsey (Thomas) Derby, and his paternal grandparents, Nathan and Nancy (Thompson)

Derby, came from Massachusetts; his great-grandfather, Nathan Derby, was born in England. Nathan B. Derby moved from Massachusetts to Andover, Windsor County, Vermont, in 1821, and died in 1880. Mr. F. T. Derby was married in New York City, October 7, 1852, to Anna Thompson. Their children are: Frank W., William N., Eddie T., Ella and Mary. Mr. Derby is a republican.

FELT, EDWARD A.; Drover and Farmer; Galesburg Township, where he was born February 20, 1860. His father, Charles M. Felt, and his grandfather, Peter Felt, came from Massachusetts; his great-grandfather was George A. Felt. Mr. C. M. Felt came to Knox County in 1842, and located first near Cherry Grove. He had twelve children: Charles M., Seth H., Austin V., Albert, Edward A., Harry, deceased; Mary, Adaline, Clarissa, Elsie, Helen and Kate. The father died February 21, 1897. He had been Supervisor of the township for fourteen years. Mr. E. A. Felt was married to Emma G. Stringham, in Galesburg, February 24, 1881. He now lives in the homestead where his father settled in 1858. He is a republican, and was elected Town Supervisor in 1892, which office he has held to the present time. He has also been Road Commissioner, Assessor and School Director.

GARWOOD, JONATHAN C.; Farmer and Stock-raiser; Galesburg Township; born in 1826 in Ohio; educated in the common schools of Michigan. His parents were William Garwood of Ohio and Mary (Thatcher) Garwood of Kentucky. He was married in Knoxville, Illinois, October, 1852, to Mary Churchill, daughter of Lewis and Mary (Churchill) Weeks, who came to Galesburg in 1841. She was born May 13, 1832, at Sheldon, New York. Two children were born to these parents, Mamie E.; and Martha, who died at the age of six years. In politics, Mr. Garwood is a republican.

GEORGE, JOHN W.; Farmer; Galesburg Township; born August 19, 1836, in Ohio, where he was educated in the common schools. His parents were Thomas George of Ohio, and Mary (Gorsuch) of Maryland; his paternal grandparents were Presbyterians from Ireland; his maternal grandparents were Norman and Kit-turah Gorsuch of Maryland. Mr. George was married March 9, 1862, in Hancock County, Illinois, to Mary E. Younger, who was a native of Ohio. Their children are: Charles C., John E., Minnie D., Lulu B., Mary Blanche and Florence. In politics he is a republican and has held various township offices.

GRIFFITH, MORRIS; Farmer; Galesburg Township; born February 17, 1836, in Fayette County, Pennsylvania; educated in the common schools. He was married to Elizabeth Harmony, at Knoxville, Illinois, December 27, 1859. They have six children: Herbert R., William E., Arthur A., Frank M., Etta O. (Mrs. George C. Hutson, Jr.) and Jessie A. Mr. Griffith was the son of Able Griffith, who came from Ohio to Knox County in 1852. He settled in Cedar Township and followed for many years the occupation of farming; he died in 1875, leaving five sons and three daughters: John, William, George, Howard M., Morris, Anna E., Mary E. and Frances Belle. In 1859, Mr. Griffith built a house on a part of a tract of land purchased by his father in Galesburg Township, where he still follows his chosen occupation of farming. In religion, Mr. Griffith is a Presbyterian. In politics, he is a republican, and was Highway Commissioner for seven years, and has held the office of School Director.

GUM, CHARLES D.; Farmer; Galesburg Township, where he was born September 12, 1866, and where he received his education in the common schools. His father, Jacob D. Gum, was born in Sangamon County, Illinois; his mother, Minerva (Montgomery) Gum, was born in Spencer County, Indiana. His paternal grandparents, John B. and Casander (Dills) Gum were natives of Kentucky. Mr. Gum was married March 18, 1891, to Ellen Eckkaani, in Knoxville, Illinois. They have three children, Edwin, Bessie and Grace. Mr. Gum is a republican.

JOHNSON, DANIEL; Galesburg Township; born in Sweden March 23, 1838, where he was educated in the common schools. He has been three times married; first to Charlotte Wahlstrom, who died and left three children, Peter, Mary and Victor; his second wife was Emma Johnson, who died and left two children, Jennie and August; his present wife was Clara B. Larson. They have one child, Arthur. Mr. Johnson is a member of the Lutheran Church. He came from Sweden in 1869, and for some time worked for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; he afterwards followed coal mining for fifteen years. In 1886 he began farming on Section 35, Galesburg Township, where he still resides. He is regarded as one of the substantial farmers of the southeastern part of the township. In politics, Mr. Johnson is a republican.

MAIN, C. A.; Farmer; Galesburg Township; born November 19, 1833, in Otsego County, New York. He was married to Harriet Mosher in New York, March 16, 1880. They have three children: Earl T., Harry E., Frances M. Mr. Main came with his father to Knox County in 1854 and lived in Oneida three years before coming to Galesburg where he worked as brakeman for eighteen months. He was freight conductor for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company for ten years and passenger conductor twelve years. In 1869 he bought the farm on which he now lives and for a time combined farming with road work. Mr. Main is a republican and has held several township offices. He was Highway Commissioner for seventeen years, School Director for twenty years, and is a member of the Board of Directors of Knox County Agricultural Society. He is an Odd Fellow and a Charter Member of the Lodge. In religion, Mr. Main is a Methodist.

NELSON, NELS X.; Farmer; Galesburg Township; born in Sweden in 1840, where he was educated. He was married to Benta Palm, in 1863, in Sweden. Their children are: John X., David E., Frans Joseph and Nels W. Mr.

Nelson came from Sweden to Galesburg in 1872, and for some time worked by the month. In 1880 he began farming for himself, and is now a thrifty farmer on Section 33, Galesburg Township. In religion, Mr. Nelson is a Lutheran. He is a republican.

They have one child, Alonzo F., living in Galesburg Township. Mr. Paden is a republican and was Supervisor for several years.

KNOX TOWNSHIP.

By O. L. Campbell.

Knox Township, as described in the United States Government Survey, is Number 11 North, Range 2 East. Its surface is a level prairie and its soil is as fertile as any in the county. Excellent natural drainage is afforded by Couit and Haw Creeks, with the numerous streams tributary to them. The first named crosses the township from east to west; the latter cuts it in the southwest corner. Originally about one-third of Knox was covered with timber, and although most of the growth has been cleared away, there is yet a considerable amount standing along the banks of the water courses. The early history of the township is interesting, but is virtually identical with that of Knoxville, which is related in the succeeding pages. That city, for many years the county seat, and Randall, are the only towns of importance. Lake George and Highland Park, favorite pleasure resorts for the people of Galesburg, are within its limits. [See Lake George.]

Highland Park is situated in Section 18, a mile east of the city limits of Galesburg. It is under private management, which has arranged the grounds for the accommodation of picnic parties and keeps boats for hire upon the numerous small lakes with which the park is dotted, and in the neighborhood of which are large brick yards. A street car line runs out from the city, and the place is well patronized in summer. Ice is cut in considerable quantities from the little ponds and there are several large ice houses in the vicinity.

The chief industry of the township is farming, although brick is extensively manufactured in that part adjacent to Galesburg. [See Brick Making.]

J. L. Campbell

RANDALL.

This village stands on the north half of Section 15. It was laid out on November 8, 1890, by C. B. Randall, and owes its existence to the phenomenal growth of the brick making industry and the completion of the Santa Fe line to Chicago. The population numbers about eight hundred and is composed chiefly of employes of the brick yards. In 1892 the railroad company changed the name of its station to East Galesburg, but that of the town remained the same as at first.

Randall supports two churches, Christian and Methodist Episcopal, a good school and a weekly newspaper.

The Christian Society was organized January 1, 1894, with eighty-six members, and may be rightly said to be the result of evangelistic work done by Rev. J. M. Morris and Elder J. G. Rowe. It is a mission of the Galesburg Church, which erected an edifice costing twelve hundred dollars in 1893. The present membership is sixty, and the Sunday school attendance sixty-five. T. L. Rowe is Superintendent.

The Methodist Episcopal denomination organized its church here a few years ago and built a house of worship costing three thousand dollars. There are twenty-seven communicants, and fifty pupils in the Sunday school. There is no settled pastor.

The East Galesburg Tribune was established in 1892, and is issued every Saturday from the presses of the Galesburg Plaudealer, by Karl R. Haggengos, who is both editor and publisher. It is a seven column folio, and democratic in politics.

The Knights of Pythias and Modern Woodmen of America are well represented in the village. East Galesburg Lodge 46, K. of P., was organized with forty-five charter members, and has a present membership of forty-six. The first officers were J. Stiekels, C. C.; J. W. Yard, V. C.; F. Parkins, P.; J. H. Potter, K. of R. and S.; J. E. Hebard, M. of A.; C. J. Nibel, M. of F. Present officers, H. B. Corbin, C. C.; J. Underwood, V. C.; J. Bushong, P.; J. H. Potter, K. of R. and S. Meets at Robbins and Granvil's store.

The East Galesburg Camp of Modern Woodmen was established August 16, 1894, with eleven members. Its present membership is forty-one. Meets in K. of P. Hall. First officers: J. L. Rowe, V. C.; John F. Barmore, Clerk. Present officers: A. P. Melton, V. C.; John F. Barmore, Clerk.

KNOXVILLE.

By O. L. Campbell.

Knoxville is located on the southern quarter of Section 28 North, Range 2 East, Knox County, and was laid out August 7, 1830, by Parnach Owens. The town was first called Henderson, but in 1833 was given its present appellation, both county and town being named in honor of General Knox, of Revolutionary fame. Its location, on the divide between the Mississippi and Illinois rivers, on the east and west, and smaller streams on the north and south, renders the site a most desirable one for a city of homes; salubrious, healthful and pleasing.

The town's early history is full of interest. The first settler was Perry Morris, who, in 1829, located on what is known as the east side of the present city. He afterwards sold his farm to Captain John Charles. John Montgomery and Dr. Hansford came soon after. The last named was the first physician, and his daughter, Mrs. Grace Shock, was the first female child born in Henderson. John Moore Bartlett was the first boy. In 1832, John G. Sanburn brought a stock of goods here. Down to the time of his death he was a prominent figure in the town's history. He was Knoxville's first postmaster and held many important county and government positions, including that of the first Circuit and County Clerk. He died April 14, 1865. Henry Runkle came in 1833, his brother Eldred in 1834 and another brother, Cornelius, in 1836. These brothers have been closely identified with the development and history of the town from the date of its organization. Henry owned the first mill in the settlement. He died in 1852, and his brother, Eldred, who was associated with him in mercantile business, died in 1865. Cornelius Runkle is still an honored and respected resident of this city. Rev. Jacob Gum, a Baptist minister, was Knoxville's first preacher. His son, John B. Gum, came to the township in 1839. He left a numerous progeny, who have become influential citizens. Daniel Fuqua came here in 1834, and for sixty-three years has been prominent in town and municipal affairs. The family is a prolific one, numbering one hundred and thirteen, including ten children, sixty-eight grandchildren and thirty-three great-grandchildren. He finds his greatest pleasure now in the family reunions of his descendants. Judge R. L. Hannaman located here in 1836. Although for a time he was engaged in mercantile pursuits, it was as an attorney that he was best known. For many years he was the leading lawyer of the county, and always known as the firm friend of the poor and distressed. The first sale of lots took place in 1831, when those upon which the offices of the Republican now stand brought over three thousand dollars.

From the time of its organization until 1872, Knoxville was the county seat of Knox County. [See Court House.] The Knoxville of to-day is a model residence town, its citizens being a community of educated and refined people, with whom it is a pleasure to reside. It has exceptionally good educational advantages, electric lights, electric street railway and a splendid system of waterworks. Here also are situated the County Fair Grounds and the County Almshouse. [See Almshouse.] Its people always point with especial pride to the city's excellent private and public schools.

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

First in importance is St. Mary's School, organized as Ewing Female Seminary, in 1859. This institution was opened on Monday in Easter week, 1868, and after the destruction of the building and contents by fire, on January 4, 1883, was reopened January 31, in St. Augustinus College building. The new structure was begun in April, occupied in October, and has twice been enlarged. The limit of its capacity (one hundred pupils) has been reached. St. Mary's is an incorporated institution, the Board of Trustees representing the City of Knoxville and the three dioceses of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Illinois. The buildings, grounds, furniture and apparatus are valued at one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Of this amount about fifty thousand dollars were given and bequeathed by the late Hon. James Knox. The house is constructed of the best materials—stone, brick, iron and slate—and the interior is finished with southern pine. The plans are the result of thirty years' experience in school management and construction, and for adaptation to both sanitary and educational purposes are unsurpassed. St. Mary's Church, built of stone, is a fine specimen of Gothic architecture, and connected with the school building by a cloister of rare beauty. Among the contents of the sacred edifice are a fine pipe organ, memorial windows and other gifts.

The provision made in the school for astronomical study is very complete, the apparatus and equipment having cost more than three thousand dollars. The Observatory is of brick, surmounted by a dome sixteen feet in height, with transit room adjoining. The telescope is an equatorial refractor, mounted with clock work, having a six-inch object glass of Alvin Clark and Sons' manufacture. The transit is a very fine instrument, made by Messrs. Fauth and Company. Personal attention is given to every pupil, and religious and semi-parental influences accompany the daily work and discipline. It is the aim of the school to prepare its pupils for responsible positions in life, and to adorn the family and social circle not only with intellectual culture, but also with graceful manners, refined tastes and Christian character. One special feature of the administration is that St. Mary's continues under the rectorship and care of Rev. C. W. Leffingwell, D. D., who founded the school in 1868. Thirty years of experience, with a record of successful work, constitute a strong assurance of safe and wise management for the future. The following are the officers and teachers of the institution: • The Rev. Charles W. Leffingwell, D. D., Logic and Psychology, Civics; the Rev. Edward H. Rudd, S. T. D., Chaplain, Latin, Greek, Natural Science; Nancy Meneeley Hitchcock, M. A., Principal Emeritus; Emma Pease Howard, Principal, Literature, Rhetoric and German; Mrs. Leffingwell, Vice Principal; Mrs. E. H. Rudd, French, Italian, History; Emily Seamans, Mathematics and Latin; Charlotte W. Campbell, English; Jessie M. Leath, Director of the Studio; Mrs. Helen Carlton-Marsh, Vocal Music. Mary Harriet Howell, Biology, Physical Training; William H. Sherwood, Chicago, Visiting Director of Music; Eleanor Sherwood, Resident Director of Music; Susan Bertha Humston, Organist, Assistant in Piano and Harmony; William H. Cheesman, Violin and Guitar; Mrs. Francis H. Sisson, Elocution; Charlotte Cooper, Preparatory Department; Louise Nicholas, Matron; John F. Somes, Curator.

St. Alban's Academy was founded by Rev. Dr. Leffingwell in 1890. The property on which it stands had been originally occupied by a Swedish-American college, which was largely indebted to Hon. James Knox, who gave thirteen thousand dollars toward the erection of the building. After five years, the embryo college had ceased to exist, and the property reverted to the City of Knoxville. In 1894, Dr. Leffingwell leased the school to Colonel A. H. Noyes, the present Superintendent, who had been a member of its original teaching staff, and who ably discharged the duties of Superintendent for five years. The main building is a four-story brick structure, with a mansard roof and stone basement. It will accommodate fifty pupils, besides masters, matrons and attendants. In its enlargement and improvement strict attention has been given to the securing of the best sanitary conditions. Water supply, drainage, ventilation, light and heat are all of the best, and the appliances therefor are all of the most modern type. The recitation, class and assembly halls and chambers are well lighted, large and lofty, and admirably arranged for the combination of school and home comforts. In 1898, Phelps Hall was erected, the beautiful frame building for younger boys. Chief among the institution's many attractions and improvements is the new gymnasium and armory. The main room of this building is seventy by forty feet, with a ceiling twenty feet above the floor, finished in Georgia pine, and thoroughly equipped with modern gymnastic appliances. In winter it is used as a drill hall and for indoor athletic games, as well as for social entertainments. The chapel, a wooden building in the Gothic style of architecture, having a seating capacity of two hundred, stands on the grounds near the main building. An addition has recently been made to the latter, enlarging the number of recitation rooms and sleeping apartments. The academic staff is as follows: Rev. C. W. Leffingwell, D. D., Rector and Founder; Arthur H. Noyes, B. A., Superintendent; Rev. Francis Mansfield, M. D., M. A., Chaplain; Charles A. Adams, B. A., Sciences; Nelson Willard, B. A., Classics; John Harris, Booge, Primary Department; J. Grant Beadle, Drawing and Architecture, Penmanship; Mrs. A. H. Noyes, Vocal and Instrumental Music; Miss S. E. Hayden, Studio Director; Mrs. E. M. Harrison, Matron; Miss Lutie Booge, Matron Phelps Hall.

Knoxville has an admirable public school system, with two good buildings. The first was erected in 1876, at an outlay of eighteen thousand, five hundred dollars; the second was finished in 1896, the cost being about seven thousand dollars. Both buildings are modern in construction, well arranged and have a fine equipment, including a large and well selected library. The corps of teachers embraces only experienced and capable instructors. They are as follows: Principal, W. F. Jones; Assistants, Eighth grade, Emma Mowery; Seventh, Josephine McIntosh; Sixth, Amanda C. Lightner;

Fifth, Nellie Evans; Fourth, Lodena McWilliams; Third, Belle Sanford; Second, Mary A. Parmenter; primary grade, Flora Smith, teacher of vocal music, M. B. Parry.

CHURCHES.

The first religious denomination to form an organization in Knoxville was the Methodist Episcopal, which has held regular services since 1831. The Free Methodists have also held services in the city for several years, but have no house of worship. The African Methodist Episcopal Church owns a church building and a parsonage, but the membership is small.

St. John's Episcopal Church was organized in 1843, and erected an edifice, costing two thousand, five hundred dollars, in 1867. The building is now used as a chapel for St. Alban's Academy. The congregation embraces some seventy-five communicants, and the Sunday school membership is about one hundred and twenty-five, including the pupils of the Academy who attend. A handsome chapel is also connected with St. Mary's Academy, of which mention has been already made.

The Swedish Lutherans formed a church in 1853, which is still in existence and holds regular services.

The present Presbyterian Church of Knoxville was organized in 1870, by the union of the "old" and "new" school branches of that denomination, under the pastorate of Rev. D. G. Bradford. Rev. W. H. Mason is the present pastor, and the church is in a flourishing condition.

The former "old school" Presbyterian house of worship is now occupied by the Christian Society, which was organized in 1871 and purchased the building from its former owners.

FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS.

Illinois Council No. 1, R. and S. M., was organized March 11, 1852, under a dispensation granted from Kentucky. Its first officers were: T. J. G. M., William A. Seaton; Deputy T. J. G. M., G. C. Lanphere; P. C. W., Harmon G. Reynolds; J. G. C. G., I. M. Wilt; I. G. S., I. Culihur; Recorder, J. W. Spaulding; Treasurer, William McMurtry; Stewards, F. Mason and B. F. Hebard.

Rabboni Chapter, No. 95, R. A. M., was instituted October 5, 1856. Its first officers were: James McCracken, H. P.; Alvah Wheeler, K.; Adam Brewer, Scribe.

Pacific Lodge, No. 66, A. F. and A. M., was organized in 1896, by uniting Pacific Lodge No. 400 and Knoxville Lodge No. 66. E. T. Eads was the first W. M., and E. Coddington, Secretary.

Knoxville Lodge, No. 126, A. O. U. W., was organized September 30, 1878. Dr. G. S. Chalmers was the first M. W.

Knox Lodge, S. K. of A., was organized in 1887, and is now in a flourishing condition.

The Knoxville Lodge of the Modern Woodmen of America was organized in 1888 and is now the largest fraternal organization in the city, numbering one hundred and thirteen members. The Royal Neighbors, a branch of this order which admits women, was organized in 1893, with J. A. Westfall as its first presiding officer.

Knoxville Home Forum, No. 586, was organized April 18, 1896, and now has a membership of fifty. O. L. Campbell was the first president of the organization.

Horatio Lodge, No. 362, K. of P., was organized in 1892, and has sixty members. Hon. A. M. Parmenter, the Mayor of the City, is its presiding officer.

A Temple of Honor was recently established, with Dr. L. Becker as presiding officer.

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS.

The Knox County Old Settlers' Association, whose composition is indicated by its title, holds annual meetings at Gilbert's Park, Knoxville, which are very largely attended and are a source of great pleasure, besides promoting a friendly feeling among the members. Hon. H. M. Sisson is President, and O. L. Campbell, Secretary.

The Knox County Agricultural Board was organized in 1856, at Knoxville, and since that date has only once failed to hold a yearly meeting. The object of the organization is to promote the educational and other interests of the farmers of the county. The impetus which has been imparted to agriculture by this long series of annual gatherings has proved of the utmost benefit. The present officers are: President, Hon. J. F. Latimer, of Abingdon; Vice President, Hon. H. M. Sisson, of Galesburg; Secretary, O. L. Campbell, of Knoxville.

BANKS.

The first banking facilities of Knoxville were afforded by James Knox, as early as 1850, if not before, who received deposits and drew bills of exchange on New York for the accommodation of his customers. The transactions, however, were, in a sense, irregular, Mr. Knox having no established bank and being prompted chiefly by a desire to oblige his friends and neighbors. Jehial B. Smith started a private bank in 1850, and seven years later T. J. Hale became his partner, but before the outbreak of the Civil War the business was discontinued and the bank closed.

In 1853, Mr. Knox was sent to Congress, leaving the management of his affairs in the hands of Cornelius Runkle, who thus gained his first insight into the principles and usages of banking. On May 1, 1857, he, in connection with his brother, Elbert Runkle, opened a private bank, which they conducted until 1865, in which year they organized the First National Bank, with a paid capital of sixty thousand dollars. Cornelius Runkle was President, and John Babington, Cashier. The stockholders were James Knox, G. A. Charles, John Eads, Miles Smith, A. M. Craig, John Carns, and the Runkle brothers. The bank was successful from the start, doing a large and profitable business; and when it was finally wound up, in 1865, it had a surplus of sixty thousand dollars.

Upon the closing of the First National, the Farmers' National Bank came into existence, with F. G. Sanburn as President, and C. G. Smith, Cashier. It, too, had a capital of sixty thousand dollars. This has since been increased to one hundred and sixty thousand dollars. The present officers are J. Z. Crane, President, and H. J. Butt, Cashier. The bank's surplus is twelve thousand dollars, and its deposits and loans each about one hundred thousand dollars. A private bank was opened in 1890, by J. M. Nisley. Its capital is about thirty thousand dollars, and deposits and loans amount to about forty thousand dollars.

THE PRESS.

The first newspaper to be published was the Knoxville Journal, the first issue of which appeared October 5, 1849. Its proprietors were John S. Winter and David Collins, and the editorial management was able. It was neutral in politics. Starting as a six column folio the number of columns was increased to seven, on July 9, 1850, and to eight, May 6, 1851. On January 13, 1852, Mr. Winter retired. Mr. Collins continued to be the sole proprietor until March 2, 1855, when he sold out to John Regan. Under the new control the paper soon became democratic, and after a few years was discontinued. The pronounced political attitude of his former paper induced Mr. Winter to re-enter the field of journalism, and on October 8, 1856, he issued the first number of the Knox Republican, taking strong anti-slavery ground, and earnestly supporting the principles, policy and candidates of the republican party, then in its infancy. The date of the issue gives the Republican the unquestioned right to claim the distinction of being the oldest paper in the county, in point of continuous publication. The county's political complexion promoted a rapid increase in circulation. John Winter and R. M. Winans were soon taken into partnership, the firm name becoming John S. Winter and Company. On April 7, 1858, they disposed of the paper to Zachens Beatty and W. T. Robinson, the first named of whom was later, for many years, editor of the Republican Register of Galesburg. Within a few years Mr. Beatty retired, and in 1875 Mr. Robinson sold out to F. A. Lanstrum. Shortly afterward the paper was bought by the present editor, O. L. Campbell, who has very considerably enlarged its size, changing its form from an eight-column folio to a six-column publication of eight, and sometimes ten, pages. The paper appears every Wednesday, and has a circulation of about twelve hundred. It is a clean, family paper, well edited, and aggressively republican. It is now entering its forty-third year, and has been published continuously by its present proprietor for more than a quarter of a century.

The Knox County News was founded in December, 1898, by Charles N. May and Fred O. McFarland. The last named gentleman retired after about three months. Messrs. Harry Campbell and F. Huschinger were then taken into partnership, but withdrew after about a month.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

The municipal government of the City of Knoxville is vested in a Mayor, a Board of six Aldermen, elected from three wards, with nine heads of executive departments, which are named below. The present officers (1899) are: Mayor, A. M. Parmenter; Aldermen, F. E. Buckley, F. W. Emery, D. H. Funk, A. C. Barnhart, G. T. Parmenter and Jesse Pickrel; City Clerk, Fred H. Stearns; City Treasurer, H. J. Butt; City Attorney, E. A. Corbin; City Marshall, T. O. Stenson; Police Magistrate, James Godfrey; Street Superintendent, Herod Pierce; Superintendent of Waterworks, Fred McGill; Cemetery Sexton, Seth Crump; City Inspector, E. Coddling.

ALANSON G. CHARLES.

Alanson G. Charles is a native of Knox Township, and was born February 21, 1846. His parents were George A. and Dorlinsky (Post) Charles, natives of the State of New York. George A., the father, was a man of great natural ability. With an unerring judgment and quick perceptions, his opinions always carried with them the weight of conviction. He was kind and generous, and was beloved by all who knew him.

Alanson G. resembles his father in features and complexion, and the law of heredity is fully exemplified in his generous spirit and benevolent disposition. He is a sturdy, thrifty farmer, and is the owner of twelve hundred acres of beautiful rolling prairie land, in one solid body, with a commodious dwelling in the midst. Near by, are three hundred and twenty acres more, which may serve for tillage or pasture land, as the husbandman may think best. Mr. Charles' farm seems to be an ideal one. As one steps upon it, the first impression is extent, magnitude. It is beautifully situated, and from the windows of his homestead, may be seen the spires and belfry towers of the city of Knoxville. Plenty seems to have its home here, as the abundant crops and the fine stock of horses, cattle and swine attest.

Mr. Charles has been a resident of the county from the day of his birth. He has no desire for a better country or a better home. He has lived in peace and quietude, and has never sought position or place. He rather dislikes office, but has, now and then, accepted it at the urgent importunities of friends. For four terms he was elected Supervisor, which office he filled with great credit. For twelve years he has discharged the duties of Treasurer of Knox County Agricultural Board, and still holds that office. At present he is President of Knox County Farmers' Institute, which was organized in 1894.

As a man, Mr. Charles is well informed and is thoroughly posted in his business relations. He is reserved, never opinionated, and is able to give an intelligent statement on all subjects coming within the scope of his knowledge. He is a good neighbor, a lover of friends, and is given to hospitality. In politics, he is a democrat, but not an extreme partisan. He sees good and evil in all parties; but his honesty forbids his screening the acts of evildoers. He believes that the perpetuity of republican institutions depends upon men of integrity and ability in office instead of strictly party men without these qualifications.

Both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church, and according to the principles therein inculcated, they have lived upright, Christian lives.

Mr. Charles was united in marriage November 24, 1868, to Lottie Rogers, daughter of Charles and Eliza (Phillips) Rogers. Charles Rogers was a native of Connecticut; and his wife, Eliza, of England. They settled in Knox Township in 1844, where Mrs. Charles was born, January 31, 1848.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles have been blessed with six children: George, Albert, Roger, John H., Alice, and Bessie. Albert and Roger are deceased.

THOMAS LEE GILBERT.

Thomas Lee Gilbert, son of Thomas and Annis (Dibble) Gilbert, was born in Oneida County, New York, March 17, 1830. His father was a farmer, and it was on the farm that the son received his first lessons in industry and thrift that have opened to him the pathway of success.

Thomas Giloert, the father, went with his father's family to Oneida County, New York, when he was only six years of age. He lived there, working on a farm, until he had grown to manhood. He then went to Ogdensburg, New York, and engaged in the mercantile business, until the War of 1812. He enlisted, and was wounded when Ogdensburg was taken by the British. After the close of the war, he went to the headwaters of the Mississippi, as a trader with the Indians. After returning from the Northwest, he lived in Oneida County, until the Spring of 1834. He then went West again, in order to select a location for a permanent home. He traveled on horseback over the State of Illinois, and studied the merits and demerits of every portion. He preferred the country between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers; but the land was not then in the market and he returned to New York.

In the Spring of 1835, he was selected as one of a committee to find a suitable location in Illinois for a colony. This committee was composed of Thomas Gilbert, Nehemiah West, and Timothy Jarvis. A letter of instructions, written by the Rev. George W. Gale, was given them, which Mr. Gilbert carried in his pocket through the entire trip. The original letter is preserved in the archives of Knox College, from which the following interesting items are transcribed:

"First, Health. This may be regarded as a sine qua non. Under this head, the following indications are to be specially noticed: 1. The quality of the water in wells and springs.

"2. The streams, whether rapid, slow or sluggish; whether they rise in swamps or pass through them, or from springs; the vicinity of marshes; the face of the country, whether level or rolling.

"3. Quality of soil, depth, variety, general character, whether clay or loam or sand; and if mixed, what proportions, probably; slope of the country, and towards what points, and the degree of slope.

"4. Supply of water, timber, and fuel.

"5. Facilities of intercourse; roads and canals, where now made or probably to be made at no distant time; navigable streams."

The sixth article has reference to hydraulic power, mills, and machinery; the seventh, to canals and navigable streams; the eighth, to state of population and prospect of increase. The main drift of the instructions was to select a healthy location. The letter is dated May 10, 1835, and is directed to Messrs. Gilbert, West, and Jarvis.

During this trip, Mr. Gilbert, the father, entered a half section of land in Orange Township, and also bought an adjoining claim on which was an unfinished log cabin. He then returned to New York for his family. He went to Chicago and tried to sell his horse, saddle, and bridle for the eighty dollars which he paid. He could not get that price, but instead, was offered forty acres of land, which is now the center of Chicago. The land was refused, and at last, his outfit was sold for sixty dollars. He then took a boat at Chicago around the lakes to Buffalo. He started West with his family from Rome, New York, going on the Erie Canal to Buffalo, then by lake to Cleveland, then by canal to Portsmouth on the Ohio River, then by the Ohio, Mississippi, and Illinois rivers to Copperas Creek Landing, and then by team to Knoxville, reaching that place November 25, 1835. He lived on his farm until 1865, when he sold out and moved to Knoxville where he died in 1872.

Thomas L. Gilbert has lived a busy life. He has earned not only a competence, but the respect and good-will of his fellow citizens. His ambition has been to shun the wrong, and to demand nothing but what is right. His life is an example of good deeds done and is worthy of imitation. In his business relations, he has ever been just and honest, and has never claimed anything but his own. He came into Knox County when only a child, and here has been his home ever since. In youth, he assisted on the farm, attending school as opportunity presented. At the date of his marriage, he settled on a farm in Orange Township, remaining there until the Spring of 1866. He then rented his farm and removed to Knoxville, where he was engaged in the grocery and live stock business until 1868. He next purchased an interest in a hardware store, which claimed his attention until 1871. In 1873, he engaged in the lumber business, which he continued for nearly twenty years. At present he is dealing in real estate.

The early educational advantages of Mr. Gilbert were such as are incident to a new country. To acquire a thorough business education, he improved every opportunity presented. He attended school each winter season until the Fall of 1850, when he entered Knox Academy at Galesburg. He is a well-informed and cultivated man, and shows that he has studied the book of experience with a high purpose and a noble aim.

In politics, Mr. Gilbert is a republican, having been connected with that party from its organization. In religion, he is a Presbyterian; both he and his wife being members of that church. He was united in wedlock, April 24, 1856, to Harriet T. Hebard, the daughter of Benjamin and Eliza (Clisbee) Hebard, natives of Ohio. They have but one child, a daughter, Effie, who resides with them in Knoxville.

John Cooke.

DAVID BRAINARD HUGGINS.

David Brainard Huggins was born in Vermont, August 31, 1824. His father, David Huggins, was a farmer, and his mother's maiden name was Cynthia Bartless.

His father came from Vermont to Knox County in 1834, and settled in Knoxville, where he lived until his death in 1851. At the time of his arrival in Knoxville, only seven families had preceded him and were located there. In 1836, at the first Fourth-of-July celebration at Knoxville, his father superintended the dinner for the crowd. He was a kind-hearted and generous man, and aided much in the development of the town and county in which he lived. In his religious views he was a Congregationalist, and held the office of Deacon for a number of years. While living in Vermont, he was Justice of the Peace for twenty years, and served in the same capacity for several years in Knox County.

D. B. Huggins' boyhood was passed on the farm. His opportunities for education were limited, but he availed himself of the instruction afforded in the common school and acquired therein a good, practical, business education. He was brought up a farmer and has followed the occupation of farming and stock-raising all his life. He discontinued the business in 1892 and now is retired.

Mr. Huggins has shown himself a public spirited man. He was largely instrumental in the establishment of the street car line between Galesburg and Knoxville. He headed the subscription list with one thousand dollars, and raised most of the money required by hard personal work. Furthermore, he gave bond for ten thousand dollars, to insure its completion. The speakers, on the occasion of the opening of the road, made honorable mention of these facts, and the street car company recognized these services by placing in the hands of Mr. Huggins the first spike to be driven, plated with gold.

Mr. Huggins has shown a disposition to aid in every good cause. For many years, he has been greatly interested in the Knox County Fair. Year after year, the general superintending of the grounds was intrusted to his care—a work in which he showed great judgment and efficiency. He made also liberal contributions, as the needs of the Fair seemed to demand.

Mr. Huggins has not been a great traveler. He has visited several States, but has never been abroad. He went to California in 1855, by water, and was more than a month on his way. While there, he took charge of a City Hospital in San Jose.

As a man, Mr. Huggins is quiet and unassuming, and is free from the pride of ostentation. He has lived a harmonious life, and has always been regarded as a good neighbor and a good citizen. His kindness of heart and his deeds of charity are an index of the man, and his habits of industry and perseverance will ever commend him as a worthy citizen.

In religious faith, Mr. Huggins is a Presbyterian. Both he and his wife became members of that church in 1868, and for more than thirty years have worshipped together in that communion. Politically, he is a republican, and has been a faithful worker in the party ever since its formation.

He was married, December 26, 1847, to Harmony Doty, daughter of Ebenezer Doty. Her father was a soldier in the War of 1812, and her brother, Edward Doty, was one of the "forty-niners."

To Mr. and Mrs. Huggins was born, September 2, 1852, one son, Frank Doty.

CHARLES WESLEY LEFFINGWELL, D. D.

Charles Wesley Leffingwell, Rector of St. Mary's School, Knoxville, is distinguished as an educator and an organizer. In his connection with the cause of education, he is entitled to be remembered as a benefactor of the race.

Dr. Leffingwell is a New Englander by birth, and was born December 5, 1840. He is the son of Rev. Lyman and Sarah Chapman (Brown) Leffingwell, natives of Connecticut. His father was brought up on the farm, and received his education mainly in the public schools. After arriving at maturity, he was educated in the higher branches and was fitted for the ministry in the Methodist church. After a successful ministration for many years in different parishes, he died in Knoxville, Illinois, in 1880, at the age of seventy-one.

The first of the family in this country was Lieutenant Thomas Leffingwell, who was a leader in the colony which settled in Norwich, Connecticut, in 1635. He was very friendly with Uncas and his Mohegan followers, and once saved this tribe from their enemies, the Pequots. Dr. Leffingwell traces his descent from Lieutenant Leffingwell. His grandfather was Joseph Leffingwell, who was born in Norwich, Connecticut.

In his youth, Dr. Leffingwell had the usual advantages of the New England public schools. He supplemented this instruction by attending Temple School at New Haven, where he was fitted to enter Yale College. He finally chose Union College at Schenectady, New York, instead of Yale, entering the Sophomore class. He did not graduate here. By too close application to study, he had impaired his health, and, consequently, was unable to finish his course. He came to Illinois, whither his parents had preceded him a short time before. On his arrival, he did not long remain idle, and, although only seventeen years of age, he engaged in teaching near Dundee, Kane County. His next service as a teacher was in the Military Institute at Kirkwood, Missouri, where he remained one season. He then accompanied Rev. Benjamin Eaton to Galveston, Texas, with whom he remained several years. Here he taught a select school, and at the same time, held the office of Deputy City and County Surveyor. He remained at Galveston until the commencement of the Civil War, when he returned to Illinois. He then matriculated at Knox College with an advanced standing, and graduated with high honors in the class of 1862. His Alma Mater has since shown her appreciation of his scholarship and ability by conferring upon him, in 1875, the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

After graduation, he became connected with the Military Institute at Poughkeepsie, New York, as Vice-Principal—Dr. C. B. Waring being Principal. During his three years' service here, his aspirations for the Episcopal ministry seemed to shape the destiny of his future life-work. Immediately he put himself under the instruction of Rev. Dr. Traver, of Poughkeepsie, and afterwards completed his theological course in the Seminary at Nashotah, Waukesha County, Wisconsin. He graduated in 1867, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. After his ordination by Bishop Whitehouse, he became an assistant to Rev. Dr. Ryland of St. James' Church, Chicago, which position he held for four months. He was then elected Tutor in the Theological Seminary at Nashotah. His tutorship here was of brief duration. Before a year had passed, he was called by the Bishop of Illinois to establish a school for girls in Knoxville. It was opened on Monday of Easter week, 1868, under the title of St. Mary's School.

This school is under Episcopal supervision, and the property was given to the diocese under the condition that a boarding and day school should be maintained there for a period of five years. Under Dr. Leffingwell's management its growth was marvelous, and within four years, it had outgrown its accommodations. A plan was adopted for the enlargement of the building, and Hon. James Knox came forward with a generous gift of ten thousand dollars. Others readily responded. The church gave four thousand, and the Rector advanced the large sum of twelve thousand five hundred dollars. Soon the building was completed and furnished with all the appurtenances which were necessary to make a successful school.

On the morning of January 4, 1883, this structure, which was the pride of Knoxville and the county, with all its contents, was burned. A blackened mass of ruins marked the spot where it once stood, a thing of beauty. The Rector, undaunted, and with a spirit that did not quail in the presence of misfortune, did not wait for the dying embers to expire, but secured another building, the Ansgarius College for his school. An annex, twenty-five by one hundred feet, was built, and within a month, the school was in session again. In May, 1883, the work of reconstruction commenced, and in October of the same year, St. Mary's was completed on a greatly improved plan and larger scale and opened for work.

St. Mary's School has a wide reputation, and is patronized by the best families far and near. The buildings and grounds are artistically arranged, and an air of neatness and taste pervades all the surroundings. As a home for young ladies, it has no superior in Knox County. It has been made what it is by that untiring worker and educator, Dr. Leffingwell. By his efforts, he has lifted it to the pinnacle of prosperity and success. It has no ups and downs, but is always full and flourishing.

Second only to his interest in his school is his interest in "The Living Church," a paper of which he has been editor and proprietor for more than twenty years. It has won its way to a leading position in the Episcopal Church and has a national circulation. In influence, it is second to none. Only a small portion of Dr. Leffingwell's time, however, is spent away from his duties in St. Mary's. His motive in conducting this enterprise has not been for financial profit, but for the work's sake, and the good influence which might be thus exerted.

Dr. Leffingwell occupies not only a prominent position as an educator, but also in church work. From the time of the division of the Diocese of Illinois until the present, he has been President of the Standing Committee and Deputy of the General Convention of the Quincy Bishopric. During the illness of the Bishop, he has been twice elected President of the Diocesan Convention.

As a citizen, Dr. Leffingwell has lived a remarkable life. Starting in the world without means, he has acquired a competence by his industry and labor in fields of usefulness. While pursuing his studies in the theological school, he supported himself and his family by organizing and teaching a select school. His personal characteristics are of the benevolent order. He is a thorough scholar, and is practical in his dealings and teachings. He is kind in disposition and agreeable to every one. A trinity of good qualities forms the basis of his character—decision, prudence, and discretion in all things.

Dr. Leffingwell was united in wedlock, June 23, 1862, to Elizabeth, daughter of John Francis. He was formerly of Kent, England, but came to this country, residing in Chautauqua County, New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Leffingwell have been the parents of seven children: Anna and Bertha, who died in infancy; Alice, deceased after graduation and marriage; Warring, Ernest, Hortense, and Gertrude, now living.

JOHN HENRY LEWIS.

John Henry Lewis is a living example of a successful man. With a well-balanced mind, he has pursued the path that leads to fortune and to fame. He has been a prominent citizen of Knox County for many years, residing in the city of Knoxville. He is a native of the State of New York, and was born in Tompkins County, July 21, 1830.

The ancestry of Mr. Lewis reaches back to the period when the times and the events "tried men's souls." The name Lewis will ever be illustrious in the annals of American history. That charter of American liberty, the Declaration of Independence, was signed by Francis Lewis, from whom John H. is descended.

Francis Lewis was a native of Landaff, in the shire of Glamorgan, South Wales. He was born in March, 1713. His father was a clergyman, and his mother was the daughter of a clergyman, the Rev. Dr. Pettingal, who had charge of a parish in North Wales. Francis was an only child and was left an orphan when only five years old. He was left to the care of a maternal aunt, was sent to the Westminster School in London, where he soon became a thorough classical scholar. In the Spring of 1735, when he was only twenty-one years of age, he came to New York with merchandise which he had purchased with his small fortune. His partner was Edward Annesly. Francis took a portion of the goods to Philadelphia, where he remained two years. He then returned to New York and married Elizabeth Annesly, the sister of his partner. When the Continental Congress met in Philadelphia, he was unanimously elected a member of that body, April 22, 1775, and continued to hold the office until 1779. He was an uncompromising advocate of liberty, and was one of the first to declare that the colonies could not live under the dominion of Great Britain. For the cause of freedom and the inalienable rights of the colonies, he spent his fortune and died poor at the advanced age of ninety, in 1803.

Henry Lewis, the father of John, was a native of New Jersey, and was born in Sussex County, October 6, 1796. His kinsman, General Morgan Lewis, whose wife was of the noted Livingston family, was once its Governor. The wife of Henry Lewis was Pamelia M. Shaver, a native of the State of New York. They were married July 8, 1826, and removed to Illinois in the Fall of 1836, with their two sons, George W. and John H. The day of railroads and steam had not yet dawned, and they were compelled to make their trip in a two-horse wagon, loaded with the implements that would be of service in their new settlement. At length, after fifty-one days of extreme weariness and toil, they reached their journey's end, October 15, 1836. They settled in Ellisville, Fulton County, where were only a few deserted wigwags. Mr. Lewis erected the first frame house in that town, and it was here that the hopes and plans of this little family were blasted by his death, September 25, 1837,—within a year of his arrival. At this bereavement, the mother did not sink down in despair, but looked beyond the lowering clouds and saw a glimmering ray of hope. In a lone wilderness, without friends or home, she battled nobly to sustain herself and her children, until they should reach a period when they would be self-supporting. George, the eldest son, left his home, while yet young, and traveled in the Eastern States and in Mexico, and at last settled in southern California, where he died. John H. remained with his mother, until he was eleven years of age, attending school a few months each year, and earning his own subsistence by working on the farm. Then for a period of six years, a contract for his services was made with a South Carolinian family, under the following stipulations: good clothing, three months' schooling each year, a horse, saddle and bridle, at the close of his apprenticeship. These conditions were almost wholly neglected. For the first five years, young Lewis had had but forty-one days of schooling; was poorly clad, was treated as a menial, and at meals was not allowed to sit at the same table with the family. His mother, learning of the situation, succeeded in removing him at once. He was placed for the winter in the family of William Kent, who lived near Yates City. In the spring, he was employed near by on the farm of James Kent, at seven dollars a month. In 1847 he came to Knoxville, doing chores for his board in the family of Judge R. L. Hannaman. Here he remained for two years, enjoying, at the proper season, the advantages of the common school. In 1849, he was employed in the store of G. M. Ewing, of Knoxville, at a salary of fifty dollars a year and board. The second year, his salary was raised to seventy-five dollars. The third year, he was offered one hundred and fifty dollars, but the offer was declined, that he might obtain a broader and more liberal education, and thus fit himself for the higher duties of citizenship. He was next engaged in the store of Alexander Ewing, of Knoxville, and by his trustworthiness and fidelity, he soon gained the confidence of his employer. Mr. Ewing entrusted him with a small bill of goods to sell on the road on commission. Young Lewis had neither horse nor wagon, nor money to purchase an outfit,—his only capital being less than twenty-two dollars. Of this amount twenty dollars was paid towards a horse and harness, purchased at forty dollars, and a sixty-day note for sixty dollars was given for a wagon. Thus equipped, Mr. Lewis started out on his new venture, and so successful was he, that the amount of his profits was sufficient to pay off his note before maturity. In 1852, he took a clerkship in the store of Mr. Chesney, of Abingdon, where he remained until his employer sold out in 1857.

Previous to this time, Mr. Lewis had been employed in the law office of Hannaman and Hale, making out abstracts of county records. It was there that he acquired a liking and a taste for law, and in 1857, having access to the library of a prominent lawyer at Abingdon, Mr. A. J. King, he availed himself of the privilege of reading law, and soon was qualified for practice. He was licensed by the Supreme Court, January 10, 1870, to practice law in all the courts of the State.

In politics, Mr. Lewis is a thorough-going republican. As a member of that party, he has held many public offices, which he has always filled with marked ability. In his early years he was an abolitionist, sympathizing greatly with the colored race in their enslaved condition. He became a member of the republican party at its organization and voted for John C. Fremont, its first nominee for President. In the exciting campaign of 1860, when Lincoln was elected President, Mr. Lewis was elected to the office of Clerk of the Circuit Court of Knox County, holding the office for four years. He then took a vacation for several months, visiting friends in the Union Army. All this time, his interest in politics was unabated, and he kept himself thoroughly posted on all national affairs. In 1868, he again entered the Clerk's office, as deputy, holding that position for six years. In 1874, he was appointed one of the Trustees of the Institution for the Education of the Blind. He resigned this office when he was elected a member of the State Legislature.

Mr. Lewis' record in the State Legislature is highly commendable, and for his judicious acts and votes there, he has received the encomiums of his fellow citizens generally. One act of his, while member of the Legislature, is deserving especial notice. Having examined carefully into the penal institutions of the State, and believing that their management was not for the good of the criminal and the best interests of the State, he framed and introduced a preamble and resolution which was read for information, but being objected to by a single member was not allowed to be considered. It was published in the papers throughout the State and highly commended. Mr. Lewis argued that prisons, in a measure, should be reformatory; that criminals as criminals have rights which the State is bound to respect; that those bound by the ties of consanguinity and love should have a portion of the fruit of their labor. The resolution excited a great deal of comment and interest, far and near, and was probably the first introduced in this State on that subject.

In 1880, Mr. Lewis was elected to Congress by the republicans of the Ninth Congressional District of Illinois, over his democratic opponent, John S. Lee. In 1882, he was renominated, but defeated on account of his vote on the river and harbor bill.

Mr. Lewis is a living proof that a man is the architect of his own fortune. Poverty in his youth had no power to control his ambition or smother his aspirations. In the distance, he saw the fertile fields of promise, and through the open gateway, he was determined to enter. By his determined resolution, he hewed his way through the wilderness of doubt and uncertainty, and won for himself riches and honor. As a citizen, he is noted for his affability and urbanity of manners; for his kindness and sympathy to the unfortunate and his charity towards all. He is bound by no creed, is a member of no church, but believes in the gospel of good deeds. He belongs to the Masonic Order, having joined when quite young.

Mr. Lewis was married, December, 1857, to Elizabeth S. Russell. She was the daughter of R. H. and Elizabeth Russell, of Abingdon, Illinois, who came to this State in the Fall of 1837. They were Virginians by birth and left their native State on account of their hatred of the institution of slavery. To Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were born six children, four sons and two daughters, two of whom are now living: Ira J., born August 14, 1865, now married and living in Knoxville; and John, born August 30, 1874, now practicing law in Galesburg.

JOHN M. NISLEY.

John M. Nisley is of German descent and was born in Franklin County, Pennsylvania, November 26, 1840. His father was Joseph Nisley, who was born in the same county. His mother was Mary (Schwartz) Nisley, a native also of Pennsylvania.

Joseph Nisley, the father, had the misfortune or good fortune of not inheriting riches. He was bereft of parents when only about six years of age, and was left almost alone to battle with the storms and vicissitudes of life. For a term of years, he was bound out to a cabinet-maker, which occupation he followed until he came to Knox County in the Spring of 1843. He settled on a farm near the city of Knoxville, where he became a successful farmer, and where he lived the remainder of his days. He died January 2, 1861.

Mary Nisley, the mother, was a kind, neighborly woman and performed the duties of the household in a wise and acceptable manner. She was the daughter of Daniel and Catharine Schwartz, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania.

John M. Nisley was brought up on a farm and had some of the experiences and struggles of the pioneer farmer of Illinois. He relinquished this pursuit in 1873 and took up his residence in Knoxville. He received his education in the country schools and at Knoxville. He never had the advantages that the college affords; but in the public schools, he received such instruction as would thoroughly fit him for the duties and practical business of life. In education and in every sphere of life, "not how much, but how well," has been the ruling characteristic of his mind.

From the business of a successful farmer, Mr. Nisley passed to that of a banker. In 1890, he started a private bank in Knoxville, which he has since conducted. This bank has always been regarded as a popular financial institution.

As a man and citizen, Mr. Nisley has disclosed traits of character that have made him popular. He is mild in disposition, agreeable in manner, and has an air of sincerity and honesty that draws around him many friends. He possesses sound discretion, is endowed with a good judgment, and never gets entangled or meddles with the affairs of others. He has a cool, reflecting mind, and always reaches his conclusions after mature deliberation. He is kind and charitable, and believes in helping those who will make an effort to help themselves. He is a republican in politics, but not an offensive partisan. He is liberal-minded in his religious views, and believes that the science of true living is above creed and doctrine.

Mr. Nisley was married in Newton, Kansas, to Kate C. Runkle, December 19, 1889. She is a niece of Cornelius Runkle, of Knoxville.

C. W. Leffingwell

ORANGE LOWELL CAMPBELL.

Orange Lowell Campbell is a native of Knox County and was born in Knoxville, March 7, 1852. His father was Elisha Campbell and was born in Gallipolis, Ohio. His mother was Mary Amelia Lowell, a native of Maryland.

As the name indicates, Mr. Campbell's ancestors are of Scotch descent. His great-grandfather, John Campbell, was born in Scotland, and was a cousin of Thomas Campbell, the poet. His grandfather was also called John Campbell and was a man of broad culture and an accomplished gentleman. He was a physician and poet, and during the struggle for independence, became an officer in the Revolution. He was a native of Virginia.

Mr. Campbell's father was both a teacher and mechanic. As a sergeant, he entered his country's service in the War of the Rebellion and was wounded in a skirmish at Fort Donelson. He was so injured as to induce a spinal disease; but by exercising the greatest care, his life was prolonged for fifteen years. At the early age of sixteen, he left his Ohio home, coming first to Bloomington, Illinois, then to St. Louis, then to Peoria, and finally to Knoxville. He resided in Knoxville for twenty-five years, and then removed to Council Bluffs, Iowa, where he died.

Mr. O. L. Campbell obtained his education in the public schools of Knoxville. After receiving the customary training in the primary grammar schools, he entered the high school, from which he graduated in 1868. In his studies he was proficient. The circumstances and conditions of his boyhood opened up to him a practical view of life. When but a lad, the bent of his mind was turned towards the printers' art. Early he entered the printing office of the Knox County Republican under the editorship and management of Z. Beatty, and served there as an apprentice almost continuously until February 23, 1876, when he became editor and proprietor. For nearly a quarter of a century, the Knox County Republican has made its weekly visit in many homes and has ever been regarded as an interesting and reliable publication.

Mr. Campbell is certainly a public spirited man. Self-interest, the main spring of action, has not been the all-absorbing passion of his life. The many and various offices that he has held in different organizations attest the fact that he has been a worker for the public good. He was elected City Clerk of Knoxville for eight different terms and served as Town Clerk for twenty years. In town and county he has been the Secretary of twenty-two organizations. He was a member of the Knox County Agricultural Board for nineteen years, serving as Secretary during the entire period. For seventeen years, he has served with credit as Secretary of the Old Settlers' Association. In 1892, he was one of the originators and organizers of the Farmers' Institute, and has held the office of Secretary during the eight years of its existence. He is also one of the organizers of the Knoxville Public Library; was a member for eight years of the Board of Education; is a member of the Fraternal Life Insurance Organization, called "The Miner of Honor"; was charter member of the Home Forum, Sons of Veterans, and Modern Woodmen of America. It is but truth to say, that Mr. Campbell has performed the functions of these various offices acceptably and creditably.

Mr. Campbell's great experience, well informed mind, and readiness to assist in public enterprises, have made him a very useful member of society. He attracts by his personal bearing, gentility of manners, and frankness of spirit. He is liberal, kind, and charitable, and the golden rule of right doing and right living is his unerring guide. He is frank, open hearted, consistent, and manifests in his daily life honesty of purpose and integrity of action. In religious belief, he is a Presbyterian. In political faith, he is a conscientious, straightforward republican. Under President Harrison's administration, he was appointed Postmaster at Knoxville, holding the office for four years. He is now Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee of the Tenth Congressional District.

Mr. Campbell was married in Knoxville, June 19, 1873, to Augusta Stowe Bull. Three children have been born to them: Sterling H., Secretary of the National Railway Specialty Company, Chicago; Charlotte W., teacher of English in St. Mary's School, Knoxville; and Mary, who was born October 9, 1893.

JOHN COOKE.

John Cooke is a native of Pennsylvania, and was born in Fayette County, December 11, 1824. His father was Thomas Cooke, who was born in the same county, April 3, 1813. He is still living very near the place of his birth, at the advanced age of eighty-six. His occupation, at first, was that of a miller; afterwards, a farmer. He was a sturdy yeoman and earned a competence for himself and family by almost unrelenting toil. In 1848, he made an extensive trip through the Mississippi valley when the means of conveyance and places of entertainment were very unlike those of the present day. He passed down the Ohio River, up the Mississippi to Burlington, thence to Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, thence eastward to Macomb, Canton, Peoria, and finally to his Pennsylvania home, where he has lived in retirement these many years.

His mother was Eliza Frazer, who was born in Franklin Township, Pennsylvania, June 2, 1812. She was the daughter of Luke and Elizabeth Frazer, and was a most estimable woman. She died in Knox County, Illinois, at the early age of sixty-four.

The ancestry of this branch of the Cooke family in this country is not far to trace. Some of them were among the early settlers of Pennsylvania, and belonged to the Quaker fraternity. One somewhat peculiar and distinguishing characteristic ran along the succeeding generations of this family, which is worthy of mention. They had a "passion" for two Biblical names—Thomas and John. Away back in early times, the family is represented by Thomas Cooke—a substantial Quaker. Then comes a John Cooke, who is followed by a Thomas, then by a John, and so on, even down to the latest generation.

John Cooke, the subject of this sketch, had no special advantages for an education beyond the common schools of his native town. He made a good use of his time and became well versed in the practical branches then taught. His school days were intermingled with home duties and labors in a mill and on a farm. After arriving to manhood, he pursued a similar occupation, until he came to Illinois in 1868. He first engaged in farming near Knoxville, which occupation he followed for twenty-four years. In 1892, the Board of Supervisors of Knox County elected him Superintendent of the Almshouse, which position he still holds. The wisdom of this selection is shown in the air of neatness and general good management that seem to pervade every department.

As a citizen, Mr. Cooke needs no encomium. By his own exertions, he has earned his way in the world without assistance from either friends or relatives. It is by attending strictly to the duties and obligations of life that he has acquired a competence and a name for honesty and integrity. He is considerate in action and has no disposition to antagonize those with whom he comes in contact. He is not forward in opinion, but always has a reserved force in his judgments. In religion, he belongs to the Christian Church, having joined in Fayette City, Pennsylvania, in 1875. In politics, he is a republican.

He is a member of Pacific Lodge, No. 66, A. F. and A. M., and of the A. O. U. W. of Knoxville, No. 126.

Mr. Cooke was married in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, October 2, 1856, to Martha M. Torrey.

JOHN D. MCCLURE.

John D. McClure is a native of Lawrence County, Illinois, where he was born August 13, 1854. His grandparents were John A. and Louisa (Hadden) McClure, the former born in Kentucky. His father, Thornton Scott McClure, is a Presbyterian minister at Oaktown, Indiana, and was born in that State. His mother, Lucinda (Ennons) McClure, was born in Lawrence County, Illinois.

John D. McClure was educated in the common schools, and at Howe's Academy, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa. Upon attaining his majority, he went to Fort Worth, Texas, where for several years he engaged in the grocery and general merchandise business. Owing to ill-health, he disposed of his interests in Texas, and in 1890, moved to Knoxville, Illinois. For some months he was not actively interested in business, but in 1892, having regained his health, he bought property on the square, opposite the Court House in Knoxville, where he engaged in the restaurant and confectionery business. In the pursuit of this occupation he has met with pronounced and gratifying success.

Mr. McClure was married at Fort Worth, Texas, April 21, 1881, to Edith Adelia Chapin, a daughter of Burrell N. and C. Jane (Culver) Chapin. They have one daughter, Edith Maurie. Mrs. McClure comes of distinguished Mayflower and Revolutionary ancestry, many of whom rendered conspicuous service to their country. Her grandparents were Moses Bascomb and Irenia (de Maranville) Chapin, the former a lineal descendant of William White, the eleventh signer of the Mayflower compact of 1620. Mrs. McClure was educated at Knox College, Galesburg.

Mr. McClure is a man of quiet, unassuming manner, whose good judgment and reliability are thoroughly appreciated by his friends and business associates.

In politics, he adheres strictly to republican principles, but has never sought official recognition. In the Spring of 1899, he was elected a member of the Board of Education of Knoxville.

HARVEY MONTGOMERY.

Harvey Montgomery is a thrifty farmer, and was born in Knox Township, on the place where he now lives, January 14, 1834.

John Montgomery was his father, whose occupation was that of a farmer. He was a native of Kentucky and was born in Nelson County, October 27, 1801. When he was ten years of age, his parents sought a home in Indiana and lived in that State until they removed to Henderson, Illinois. They arrived in Henderson on May 10, 1830, living there and engaging in farming for a period of eighteen months. They then removed to the farm in Knox Township, where Harvey Montgomery now lives.

Harvey's mother was a Kentuckian by birth and was born in Barren County. This county takes its name from Little Barren River, which drains this section of country. The origin of the name is traceable to sparsely wooded tracts, called in the West, "Barrens."

His parents were married in 1825, and there were born to them seven children: three boys and four girls,—three of whom are still living. The following is the order of their births: Robert, Rebecca, Minerva Jane, Eliza, Harvey, Sarah S., and John W. One of the daughters became the wife of Jacob D. Gum, a familiar name in Knox County, and another is the wife of C. N. Butt, who lives near Knoxville.

Harvey Montgomery's grandfather, Robert Montgomery, was a Pennsylvanian, and was born in Mifflin County, which took its name from Governor Mifflin. His grandmother was Rebecca Brown, a native of Pennsylvania. Harvey's great-grandfather was killed in an Indian engagement on Pickaway Plains in the eastern part of Ohio, when the State was but a wilderness, inhabited by tribes of wandering and ferocious Indians. The name Pickaway comes from the misspelling of "Piqua," the name of an Indian tribe, inhabiting this region.

Harvey Montgomery, during his school age, had no easy task to perform. He had to labor almost incessantly on the farm while attending school. It was a true example of pursuing "knowledge under difficulties." Making use of what time was spared him, he attended the district school at what is known as the "Hague Schoolhouse," and acquired there the rudiments of his education.

When his meager school-days were ended, he continued the avocation of farming, which he had pursued, more or less, during his boyhood. And during these many years of his life, his business has been farming and stock-raising. His aim is to cultivate the best of stock, which he regards as more profitable than keeping an inferior sort. His horses, his short-horns, and his sheep have been considered among the best, and he has been reckoned among our most thrifty and reliable farmers. His home farm is well situated and covers an area of eight hundred acres—the larger portion of which is tillable land, the smaller portion is covered with native forests. His homestead does not comprise all of his real estate. A short distance south of the city of Galesburg, he owns a farm of one hundred and sixty acres; he owns another farm of eighty acres; and still another of eighty acres more. His landed possessions, in all, comprise eleven hundred and twenty acres. The land is rich and valuable.

Mr. Montgomery has no particular love for office. He seeks to do his duty as a citizen, and leaves to others the trials, troubles, bickerings, honors, and emoluments of office-seeking and office-holding. For the long period of twenty-five years, he has been a member of the Knox County Agricultural Board, and served for a term or two as an Assistant Supervisor. He is a member of the Old Settlers' Association, whose meetings he never fails to attend. He wears a gold medal presented by them, on which is the following inscription:

HARVEY MONTGOMERY.

Oldest Person Born in Knox County.

Mr. Montgomery has no church affiliations, but believes it to be a religious duty to live an upright and moral life. He has no sympathy with cant or fustian, whether practiced by Christian or infidel. He has lived a plain, unaffected life, and is regarded by the community as an estimable and worthy citizen. He is guided by moral principle, kind and affectionate, and he bestows his charities where his sound discretion and judgment dictate. Politically, he has always been a staunch democrat, with unswerving faith in Jeffersonian principles. He is not radical, and is ever willing to listen to the views of his opponents.

Mr. Montgomery was married in Henderson Township, November 15, 1864, to Louisa Maxwell. She was born in Henderson Township, February 28, 1842, and was the daughter of Harvey and Sarah Maxwell. Her father came to Knox County, in 1829, and located near Henderson Grove.

To Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery were born three children: Sarah J., born November 18, 1865; John, born December 2, 1866; and Henry, born November 22, 1870.

Sarah J. married John G. Hayes, and has one child, Harry M. They live in Galesburg Township. John married Grace Dunlap, and to them has been born one child, Marie. They live in Knox Township. Harry married Mary Bowens. They have one child, Jennie, and live in Knox Township.

ALLEN MOORE PARMENTER.

Allen Moore Parmenter is a native of Knoxville, Illinois, and was born December 21, 1846. He is the son of Theophilus Talcott and Roxanna (Warren) Parmenter, who were an industrious couple, and scrupulous in the moral training of their children. His father was an exemplary man, honest and upright in all his dealings. He was born near Greenfield, Franklin County, Massachusetts, in 1809. His mother died when he was only seven years old, leaving a family of three boys, of which he was the oldest. He was bound for a term of years to his uncle, who resided near Hartford, Connecticut, to learn the tanner's trade. He was married in Pepperell, Massachusetts, where for a short time he made his home. He then moved to Albion, Erie County, Pennsylvania, and, after remaining there a few years, started for Knoxville, Illinois. His conveyance was the usual emigrant wagon, drawn by a span of horses, which he drove the entire distance, reaching Knoxville in 1837. His business was that of a boot and shoe merchant. Here he lived the remainder of his days, and died, March 20, 1897, in his eighty-seventh year.

Mr. Parmenter's mother was a native of Massachusetts, born in Pepperell, June 17, 1810. She was a spirited woman, domestic in her family relations, and was proud of her ancestry. One of her ancestors, John Farrer, was one of the Pilgrims of the Mayflower. She lived to an advanced age, universally respected, and died in Knoxville, March 13, 1894.

Allen M. Parmenter is, in a great measure, a self-educated man. The rudiments of his education were obtained in the Public Schools of Knoxville. This instruction was supplemented by attending night-schools, when he was working at his trade in Peoria. Although his opportunities for education were limited, yet by his reading and his intercourse with the world, he has become well posted for the duties and practical business of life. He first learned the tinner's trade of Thomas C. Moore, who was appointed Assessor, of what was then the Fifth District of Illinois, by President Lincoln. He next went to Boston and was employed for five months by the Eastern Railroad Company. He then was engaged by the Boston Stamping and Manufacturing Company, where he worked for three years. He next served for a period of three years, at Troy, New York, as a tinner for Tibbits and Butler.

While here he was engaged by J. B. Wilkerson to build perfect working models of the different makes of cook stoves, manufactured in Troy and Albany, some of the models costing thirty dollars each. He then returned to Knoxville, the home of his childhood. He first engaged in the boot and shoe business with his father and continued therein until 1874. Then he launched into the hardware business, connecting therewith the sale of carriages and farm implements, which is his present occupation. His first bill of hardware amounted to eight dollars and fifty cents, for which R. A. Culter, of Peoria, went security.

Mr. Parmenter, by his probity and honesty of purpose, has earned the respect and goodwill of his fellow citizens. He is Chairman of Knox Township Republican Committee; has served nine years as Alderman of the City of Knoxville; has been elected twice to the office of Mayor, his last election being without a dissenting vote. His second term of office is not yet completed and he is still working for the general good of his native city. He was instrumental in establishing St. Albans—a school which is looked upon by every Knoxvillian with pleasure and pride. The street-car line between Galesburg and Knoxville received his hearty commendation and support.

Mr. Parmenter has confined his travels to the United States and Canada. He has journeyed eastward several times, over different routes, and has learned much of the physical features and development of the Eastern States and the States of the Mississippi Valley. He was once a member of the Methodist Church and for seven years was Superintendent of the Sabbath School. At present he is connected with the Presbyterians, having joined that organization about fifteen years ago. Politically, he is an unswerving republican and a firm adherent of his party's principles and policies.

Mr. Parmenter is connected with the following societies: Knoxville Lodge, No. 66, Royal Arch Masons; Illinois Council, No. 1, serving as its present Secretary; Raboni Chapter, No. 95; the Order of Redmen; A. O. U. W.; Select Knights of America, being the present Chancellor Commander of the same; member of the Knights of Pythias; Venerable Council of Modern Woodmen of America; member of Miner of Honor.

Mr. Parmenter is a working man. He discharges his public and private duties with zeal and discretion. He is known for his honesty of purpose, his uprightness in action, and for his adherence to principle. He is not fastidious but frank and open-hearted. He is entertaining in conversation and his apparent brusqueness of manner is more pleasing than otherwise.

Mr. Parmenter was married in Knoxville, Illinois, December 25, 1872, to Catharine Elizabeth Rosenberg, a daughter of Henry Rosenberg, a native of Pennsylvania and a practicing physician at Knoxville for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Parmenter have had four children: Willie R., born September 23, 1874, died December 25, 1880; J. Harvey, born June 7, 1876, died June 14, 1881; Henry A., born August 8, 1882, a graduate of the High School at Knoxville, an excellent performer on the piano, now clerking in his father's store; Maurice, born February 16, 1884, at present a member of the High School at Knoxville.

ARTHUR HAMILTON NOYES.

Arthur Hamilton Noyes, son of George S. and Mary S. (Murdock) Noyes, was born in Boston, Massachusetts, June 23, 1867.

His father was a clergyman, and for ten years officiated at the Seaman's Bethel in Boston, as the successor of that remarkable man, Father Taylor. He had a fine presence and was extensively known for his ability and eloquence.

The Noyes family reaches back to an early period in the history of this country. Nicholas and the Rev. James Noyes came from England in 1634 and settled in Newbury, Massachusetts, the following year. This family is represented in many departments of American history. The name appears in the Continental Congress of 1774-75, in the Revolutionary struggle and other wars, and lastly, in the War of the Rebellion. A large number of the men were clergymen and army officers, and one became Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Arthur H. Noyes had superior educational advantages. He first received instruction in the public schools of Nahant, Massachusetts. Afterwards, he entered, for a short time, Boston University, and lastly, matriculated at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut. From Trinity, he graduated with high honors, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

In childhood, young Noyes was blessed with good surroundings and an ideal home. His parents were intelligent, and gave him that moral and religious instruction, which guided his footsteps in after years. The seeds of his manhood were sown at the paternal hearth. Early he disclosed a fondness for reading and study, and a strong desire for education was manifest.

Before completing his course and during the intervals of college work, he engaged in teaching at the early age of seventeen. He also did some newspaper work and engaged in other occupations for his support. He graduated in 1889, and came to Knoxville in 1890.

President Noyes first entered St. Albans Academy as Master in Greek and Latin in 1890. He was promoted to be head master in 1892. In 1894, he leased the school, acting at the same time as its Superintendent. When the institution was incorporated in 1896, he became its President. Under his management, St. Albans has acquired a good reputation for thoroughness of instruction. It is doubtful whether any western school of a similar grade can make a better showing. Her graduates have attained a uniformly high standing.

President Noyes, in his early years, lived in a country of the best of schools and colleges. He was surrounded with classic literature and had the companionship of educated men. He embraced all his opportunities for learning and has become a thorough scholar. He is not forward in his address, but rather retiring. He dislikes large social functions, and never courts popularity.

His dignity of manhood is such that he makes friends that are lasting. He is kind and affable, and is endowed with warm feelings and generous sympathies. He is thoroughly conversant with the duties of his profession, and is not unmindful of home duties, or the duties of citizenship.

Societies, religious or political, secret or social, have but little attraction for him. While in college, he was a member of only two fraternities: I. K. A. and O. A. X. By virtue of his position as head of St. Albans, he holds a commission as Colonel in the Illinois National Guard.

In religious faith, he is connected with the Episcopal Church. At present, he is Junior Warden of St. John's Parish, Knoxville.

He was married June 6, 1892, to Eunice Alice Phelps, daughter of Judge Charles H. Phelps, of Burlington, Iowa, niece of Hon. E. J. Phelps, late minister to England.

They have had born to them three children: Dorothy Louise; Arthur Phelps, deceased; and Virginia Murdock.

CORNELIUS RUNKLE.

Cornelius Runkle is one of the few survivors of the pioneers of Knoxville and Knox County. He has watched the growth of city and town, and has marked the onward march of civilization. This venerable man, who is now in his ninetieth year, has been a co-worker here with others for nearly two generations, and has borne a conspicuous part in every good work and improvement.

Mr. Runkle was born in Watervliet, Albany County, New York, January 19, 1810. His father, John Runkle, and his mother, Helen Van Wert, were natives of the same State, though of Holland descent. Mr. Runkle was left fatherless when only three years old; but he had the tender care of a loving mother until he reached the age of fifteen, when she died, leaving a family of four sons and two daughters. The children remained at the old homestead, until August, 1833, when the two elder brothers, John and Henry, came to Illinois. John settled at Hanna City, Peoria County, and resided there until his death at a very advanced age. Henry located at Knoxville. Cornelius started westward in August, 1834, seeking his fortune and a home in this almost unexplored region. He reached Knoxville in 1834, and engaged in the mercantile business with his brother for a year and a half. He then went to Mt. Pleasant, Henry County, Iowa, where he was engaged in trade until 1847. He then returned to Knoxville, accepting a clerkship for his brother, until he was elected Sheriff in 1854. He held this office for two years, and then engaged in the banking business with his brother under the firm name of Runkle and Company. This co-partnership lasted for eight years, when a National bank was established, which led eventually to the founding of the First National Bank of Knoxville, with Cornelius Runkle as its President.

Mr. Runkle conducted the affairs of the bank as its chief head until January, 1885, when he resigned that position to a younger man. In all his business relations as a banker, Mr. Runkle showed a marked ability and a peculiar fitness for his vocation. He exhibited a keen financial sagacity and a gentleness of manners towards his customers that was observable by everyone. His probity, genial character, and unswerving honesty won for him friends and fame.

As a banker, Mr. Runkle had one experience which shocked the community far and near. It happened on the night of February 6, 1880, and is told in the following language: "His private sleeping room was in his bank building. After he had retired and gone to sleep, he was awakened by three men in his room. They blindfolded and gagged him, after which they took him to the safe and ordered him to unlock it. Not having the combination, he could not do so, and he says that he would not, even if he had known the combination. In order to compel him to acquiesce in their demands, they hung him up by the neck, then let him down; he still refused. Then they laid him in bed, drew his feet over the footboard, and held the lamp underneath them, burning and torturing him in a most fearful manner. They left about three o'clock in the morning; but before going, they tied Mr. Runkle securely in bed, as they thought; but he succeeded after a couple of hours, in releasing himself, and when he went to breakfast, he gave the alarm. The thieves, however, secured three thousand five hundred dollars, which they found in a small, old-fashioned safe, the key of which was in Mr. Runkle's pocket. It was about two months before he fully recovered from the shock to his system, and the effects of the burning. The thieves were never caught."

What courage, what purpose, Mr. Runkle displayed in an hour like this. What thoughts, what emotions must have disturbed the usual quietude of his being! Threats may intimidate, but they had no power to destroy his manhood. Torture also was powerless. As a citizen, Mr. Runkle has always shown the same manly character. Firm in the principles of justice and right, kind in disposition, benevolent in his sympathies, and full of charity and good deeds, he has lived a long life above reproach.

In politics, Mr. Runkle in early years was a whig. Afterwards he became affiliated with the republican party. He has never been a politician, but has exercised the right of suffrage as his conscience dictated. He is not a member of any church, but has contributed largely to the support of the Christian religion.

Mr. Runkle was never married.

FRANCIS GRANGER SANBURN.

Francis Granger Sanburn was born in Knoxville, Illinois, October 4, 1843. His father was John Gould Sanburn, and his mother's maiden name, Althea Owen.

The genealogy of the Sanburn family reaches back to Lieutenant John Sanburn, who was born in 1620. The next in the line of descent was Nathaniel Sanburn, who was born in 1666.

The third generation reaches Jedediah Sanburn, Francis' great-grandfather, who was born in 1757. He was one of the patriots of the Revolution, and was on the Lexington "Alarm List," living at Wethersfield, Connecticut. In the fifth generation is found the name of John Gould Sanburn, the father of Francis Granger Sanburn.

John Gould Sanburn was a distinguished man, intellectually, and morally. To his name is linked much of the early history of Knox County. He was born in Canandaigua, New York, March 13, 1797—the home of Francis Granger, Postmaster-General under the first Harrison and the namesake of his son. His parents were New Englanders, and were thoroughly schooled in industry and economy among the rugged, barren hills of their nativity. They were among the earliest pioneers of western New York, then the home of the savage Indians and wild buffalo. The spirit of enterprise was in the son, and in the Autumn of 1817, he came to Ohio, where he spent the winter in teaching school. In the Spring of 1819, he embarked in a skiff at Pittsburg with his brother and three other young men, and sailed down the Ohio River, landing at a point opposite St. Louis. He then, with his companions, made his way on foot to that city. He then went to St. Charles, Missouri, where he spent the summer in teaching. The following winter, he returned to Canandaigua, making almost the entire journey on foot. His diary kept on this journey is in the possession of his children and is highly prized. It shows his spirit, enterprise, and sturdy endurance. After spending two or three years in western New York, he again returned West, locating at Vandalia, then the capital of Illinois. He remained here until 1830, when he again visited his native home, making the journey both ways on horseback.

About this time, the Military Tract was attracting great attention on account of the fertility of its soil and other natural advantages. Mr. Sanburn saw here an opportunity, and in 1830, opened a store in Henderson Grove. In this year, the new County of Knox was organized. At the same time Knoxville became the county seat. Mr. Sanburn, by reason of his general intelligence and accurate business habits, held nearly all the important offices. He was Clerk of the Circuit Court, Clerk of the County Court, Recorder, Probate Judge, and Postmaster.

Mr. Sanburn was married in 1831 to Althea Owen, a native of western New York. At an early age she came to Ohio, thence to Knox County, Illinois. To them were born six children, four sons and two daughters.

At the time of his death, Mr. Sanburn was Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue of Knox County. He also held other minor offices, such as City Clerk and Trustee of both Knox and Ewing University.

As a man, Mr. Sanburn was kind, well educated, well informed, and a pleasing conversationalist. He was positive in his political preferences, was formerly a whig, but later a republican. He was patriotic and loyal, and during the Civil War, was a strong advocate of freedom and union. In religion he was an Episcopalian, but with his wife, attended the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Sanburn died April 14, 1865, the day President Lincoln was assassinated. Mrs. Sanburn died at the old home in Knoxville, January 30, 1883.

Francis G. Sanburn was fortunate in his birth. He belonged to a family of lofty aims and of great moral worth. He was the fifth of seven children, and was taught in boyhood the high moral lessons that blossomed into the fruit of a true manly life. In childhood, he received much instruction from loving parents, and in mature years, he had the advantages of the common school, and of higher institutions of learning. Early, he became well fitted to enter upon the active duties and business of life. Like many a young man, he went westward, spending a summer in Kansas. He soon, however, returned to his native State, and was next engaged for two years as Deputy Postmaster, under the late Z. Beatty. In 1872, he went to Topeka, Kansas, and was employed there but a short time. He next found employment in the firm of Phillips Brothers at Galesburg. He soon resigned this position and accepted the offer of a clerkship in the Farmers' National Bank in Knoxville, which was more to his taste and liking. With this bank, he remained until his death, serving for several of the last years of his life as its President.

The esteem in which Mr. Sanburn is held is marked. His friends and fellow citizens had perfect confidence in his integrity and ability, and had no misgivings in placing him in positions of honor and trust. He was retiring, and had no hankering after office; and yet, he served his native city two terms as City Clerk, five or six terms as City Treasurer, and two terms as a member of the Board of Education.

A graphic representation of his early life may be obtained from the following sketch, written by his sister, Althea O. Sanburn:

"His early childhood was passed in the modest home of his parents. He engaged with keen interest in the amusements of boyhood life, but was equally ready and willing to bear his share in the tasks and duties of home life suited to his years. He early showed mechanical tastes, and delighted younger children of the neighborhood by his constructive genius. Numerous water-wheels, windmills, fishing seines, and, finally, a miniature railroad on which the boys and girls were delighted to ride, though in a rude box car, were some of the results of his recreation hours up to his thirteenth year. His love for flowers was very marked, and he never failed to find the first spring blossoms before others suspected their arrival. While a mere boy, he became quite an expert in budding and grafting choice varieties of roses, which were his favorites. As a child, his mind was quick and active, and his reasoning powers good. In school he was a diligent pupil and a general favorite with his teachers."

Mr. Sanburn had no striking characteristics. He was admired for his equanimity of temper, his gentleness of manner, and his uprightness of character. He was not given to frivolity, but was always sedate and thoughtful in his bearing. He was kind to the unthankful, full of charity for the unfortunate, and merciful in speech and act. He lived a life above reproach, and had the reward that comes through industry, strict integrity, and Christian obligation.

Mr. Sanburn's religious faith was Presbyterian. In early manhood, he joined that church, and was an elder therein for about five years. He was not a partisan or a politician, but was a firm adherent to principle. He was a republican, and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln for President.

Mr. Sanburn was married August 1, 1818, to Mary H. McCracken, who was born in Worthington, Ohio, and died in Knoxville, Illinois, February 7, 1881. When a child, her parents removed to Knoxville. She graduated from St. Mary's in 1871. After graduation and until two years after her marriage, she taught painting in oil, Latin, French, and the sciences in her Alma Mater.

To Mr. and Mrs. Sanburn was born one daughter, Mary Louise.

Mrs. Chapin is also of distinguished ancestry, among them being William White, of Mayflower fame. She is related to Peter Craps and Silas Kirby, who were Revolutionary patriots. Her paternal grandfather, Joseph Culver, served under Washington at Valley Forge, and was at the surrender of Burgoyne. He was one of six men who carried the wounded General Arnold on a litter from the battlefield at Saratoga, to Albany, New York. Mrs. Chapin and her two daughters are members of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

CHARLES, CAPTAIN GEORGE A., was for many years one of the most prominent and influential men in Knox County. Though politically a democrat, he was for many years elected Supervisor in an anti-slavery stronghold, and was the chosen leader of the Knoxville party during the whole period of the county seat war. He was born in Erie County, New York, December 25, 1810, the son of Captain John Charles, a sailor upon the inland seas, who was born in Pennsylvania, October 17, 1782, and Eunice Gates, born June 16, 1788, in New York. Captain John Charles came West in 1830 with his family, and located on Section 28 of what is now Knox Township. For a year they occupied an abandoned log cabin, found in the vicinity, then they moved into a hewed log house built by themselves. Here Captain George A. Charles lived until his marriage to Pomelia Gardner, when he located a claim on Section 22 in the same township. His wife dying after the birth of her first child, Rosalia, who became Mrs. J. F. Earl, of Mason City, Illinois, he was again married, December 5, 1843, to Doolinsky Post, daughter of Ezra and Patty (Pratt) Post. By this marriage he had four children: Alvira, Alanson G., Albion P. and Harley J. Until 1870 he lived on his farm. Then he removed to Knoxville, purchasing a residence on East Main street, where he lived until his death, November 5, 1878. Captain Charles was County Surveyor for four years, and Supervisor of Knox Township for thirteen years. Coming to Knox County with almost nothing, through his sound judgment and shrewd financial ability he was able to achieve pronounced success. He was thoroughly honest and upright, and made hosts of warm friends.

CONNER, JAMES H.; Knoxville; Retired Farmer; born in Franklin County, Ohio, August 29, 1841; educated in the common schools. His parents were Benjamin T. and Ellen L. (Stephenson) Conner. The latter was a native of Ohio. His ancestry was Dutch, German, Irish, French and English. Mr. Conner came to Knox County in 1843. August 27, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, Eighty-sixth Illinois Volunteers, and was honorably discharged June 6, 1865. March 22, 1866, in Gilson, he was married to Esther Rambo, daughter of Allen T. and Elizabeth (Shelton) Rambo. Mr. Rambo was a native of Indiana, and was a gunsmith by trade. Mr. and Mrs. Rambo had eleven children: Julius R., John S., Esther, Tabitha, Mariam, Reuben, Nancy K., Francis M., Thomas B., Judson, and an infant daughter. Mr. Rambo died in April, 1894, his wife April 3, 1891. Mr. and Mrs. Conner have had eight children: Laura E., Dora E., Ida M., Lurena E., J. Herbert, B. Franklin, L. Gertrude and Bessie B. B. Franklin died in his fifth year. Laura E. married Lincoln Swigart; they have two children: Harry and Charles. Dora E. married John Wasson; they have one son, Franklin D. Mr. Conner is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a republican.

In politics, he is a republican. He was the first President of the First Shaft of the Minor of Honor.

PERSIFER TOWNSHIP.

By Joseph W. Miles.

This township is situated in the central part of Knox County, and is drained by Spoon River and Court, North and Sugar Creeks.

Its soil is adapted to grazing and agriculture alike; more or less timber grows in its bottoms and along its streams; and its mineral resources include coal and sandstone. Formerly, the abundance of game was rivaled only by the profusion of wild fruit. Indian legends tell of silver and lead hidden beneath the ground, and some fine specimens of ore have been found along Sugar Creek.

The Santa Fe Railroad runs through Persifer from west to east, along Court Creek, affording a direct outlet for farm products to the Chicago markets.

The present site of Dahinda was once an Indian village, and the poles of their wigwams stood there for years after the arrival of white settlers. There are twenty-five or thirty mounds on the bluffs near by, which contain human bones and are presumably Indian graves. Many arrow-heads and stone axes have been found, and one branch of the Galena Trail passes through the township from north to south, crossing Court Creek at the point where the Appleton bridge now stands.

The Indian chief Shabona once offered to show William Morris a silver mine in the north-eastern part of the township, but Mr. Morris was too distrustful to accompany him.

This same William Morris bought the north-western corner of Section 26, March 10, 1832, and he was probably the first settler in Persifer, and is said to have spent the winter of 1832-3 in a hollow sycamore tree in Spoon River bottoms, just below the Elliott Mill. Nothing is known of him prior to his settlement here. His wife, Ruth Vaughn, came from Kentucky, as did Jesse and Willis Reynolds and Beverly Young. Charles Bradford was born in Maine. He came to Ohio when a young man, and to Illinois in 1834, settling in Persifer Township. He was a descendant of Governor Bradford, of Puritan fame, and lived to be over ninety. Several of his descendants reside near here, among whom are to be found the familiar names of R. C. Benson, E. J. Wyman, Jacob Lorange and John Spear. On coming here he bought Beverly Young's claim to the eastern half of the north-east quarter of Section 26, moving into the cabin that had been built by Mr. Young. The next year he acquired the northwestern quarter of Section 27, taking up his residence in a double log house that stood on the northeastern quarter of Section 26.

In 1837 several families came, among them being those of Edmund Russell, Isaac Sherman, G. W. Manley, T. D. Butt, Caleb Reece, John Caldwell and James Maxey. All of these have many descendants in the county.

Persifer also counts the Hon. George W. Prince among her sons; although not a pioneer.

R. W. Miles was, before his decease, honored by the people with many positions of trust; having held several township offices and being twice sent to the Legislature and three times elected a member of the State Board of Equalization. He never betrayed the trust reposed in him.

Mrs. Charles Bradford was buried January 5, 1835, and hers was the first death and burial. She was interred on her husband's clearing, on Section 26. The first public cemetery was on Section 9, the first burial therein being a son of John Henderson. The first Persifer couple to marry was Charles Bradford and Parmelia Ann Richardson. They were united at Peoria early in the Spring of 1838. The next marriage in the township, of which any record has been preserved, was that of Harvey Stetson Bradford and Hester Whitton. They were joined in matrimony October 24, 1836, at the home of Charles Bradford. Rev. Mr. Bartlett, a Baptist minister from Knoxville, performed the ceremony. R. C. Benson and Sarah Bradford were the next couple to become man and wife, January 5, 1837. They have been not infrequently mentioned as the first couple married. The first birth was to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Reynolds,—a daughter.

The State road through Trenton and Knoxville was built in the Fall of 1838. T. D. Butt, Caleb Reece and John Coleman were Commissioners. The first stage road ran past the Manley and Miles farms and through Trenton, crossing neither hill nor bridge from Knoxville to Spoon River. The Victoria post road was also laid very early. The first iron bridge was built in 1875, where the present Appleton bridge now stands. That structure was replaced in 1892 by a larger one. There are now several good iron bridges, including a new one at Dahinda.

The first land plowed in the township was a six-acre tract in the southeast quarter of the northeastern portion of Section 26. The first crops were of wheat and oats, William Morris raising the wheat and threshing it by horse power.

Persifer boasts the first mill in Knox County. It was built by Robert Hendrix, in 1834, on Court Creek, just above where the Knoxville and Victoria road crosses, in Section 19. It did not contain a single piece of sawed timber. Only corn was ground at first, but subsequently wheat also was run through the stones. Later it was transformed into a saw mill, and was finally swept away by a flood in 1851. The next structure of this description built was the Elliott mill, at the mouth of Court Creek, on Spoon River. It was put up in 1840, by Mr. McKee. It was originally designed for sawing logs, but was afterwards made into a flouring mill, and was for more than twenty years one of the most important in the county. It was torn down in 1881. The third in the township was built by Charles Haptonstall, about 1848. It stood on Court Creek, about half a mile above the present Appleton bridge. Only corn and buckwheat were ground. The edifice was not substantial, and remained standing but a few years.

The first church building was Bethel Chapel, built in 1863 on Section 30, and costing eighteen hundred dollars. There are now five churches. Those at Bethel and Maxey are Methodist; those at Mound and Persifer are of the United Brethren denomination and at Dahinda there is a Mormon Church, of which mention is made below. Rev. S. S. Miles preached the first sermon, in the house of Charles Bradford, in June, 1836, and organized the first Sunday school at the same place, in 1838. There are now six Sunday schools in the township, one at each of the churches and one at the Town Hall, at Appleton.

The first school of which any mention is made was taught by Mary Ann Long, in a cabin one-fourth of a mile south of Bethel Church, about 1839. It was supported by subscription. The first school-house was built of logs, about 1841, and stood on the Wilson and Caldwell farms, on Section 30. Who taught the first public school is an unsettled question. Some give John McIntosh the honor of being the pioneer teacher, while others confer it upon Curtis Edgerton. James and George McPherrin, Nephtin, Lucina and Mary Russell, Charles Butt, Jacob Brunk and John Hearn were pupils.

The township was divided into school districts January 10, 1846, and there are now nine good frame school-houses, valued at about $6,500, in which two hundred and fourteen pupils are taught. None of the schools are graded.

The first postoffice was established about 1847, and was named by the people in honor of General Persifer Frazer Smith. Charles Bradford was the first postmaster, and the office was in his home, on Section 27. When the township was organized, it took the name of the postoffice.

The first house is supposed to have been a log cabin on the Morris farm, which was burned soon after it was built. T. D. Butt erected the first structure intended for a tavern as well as dwelling, in 1837. It stood on Section 29, and was for several years a stopping place for travelers. The first house weather-boarded and painted white was the Easley house on Section 30. The first frame house was either that of Captain Taylor, in Trenton, or of Edmund Russell, on Section 31. The Taylor house was of native white pine, sawed at the Elliott mill, and is still standing. The Russell home was built from hewed hardwood, and was burned about 1886. Both were constructed about 1841. James M. Maxey built the first brick house in 1851, making his own brick. It is still standing, on Section 4, but is not used as a dwelling.

George W. Manley was the first Justice of the Peace. The first town officers, elected April 5, 1853, were: G. W. Manley, Supervisor; Richard Daniel, Clerk; James McCord, Assessor; William T. Butt, Collector; Wilson Pearce, Overseer of the Poor; Francis Wilson, Caleb Reece and David Cobb, Highway Commissioners; R. W. Miles and Thomas Patton, Justices; L. A. Parkins and David Russell, Constables. G. W. Manley was moderator, and Richard Daniel clerk, of this election.

The present township officers are: J. R. Young, Supervisor; N. C. Dawson, Clerk; C. I. Butt, Assessor; John E. Gibson, Collector; J. C. Montgomery, Jacob Loranice and Ole Olson, Highway Commissioners; O. P. Gates and David Russell, Justices of the Peace; Jerry Wallack and J. J. Patton, Constables; J. J. Patton, G. W. Butt and Jacob Loranice, School Trustees; O. P. Gates, School Treasurer.

The township furnished one soldier to the Mexican War, Edward Thorp, and a large number of men from Persifer volunteered during the War of the Rebellion. The following is a list of those who entered the army, some of whom, however, were credited to other places: Arthur Wyman, J. Haptenstall, James Warrensford, Washington Dilley, William S. Henderson, Alexander Mitchell, Samuel F. Patton, James A. and Jefferson W. Donnelly, James McDowell, E. A. Pratt, J. H. Patton, Alfred Russell, Theodore Perkins, Alfred Spidle, Benjamin F. Wills, Jacob Wallack, DeWitt C. Standiford, J. Lutkiewicz, Anthony Blair, William Flynn, J. D. Green, T. J. Gordon, William Haptenstall, William B. McElwain, Edwin Phillips, Warren Russell, James O. Wallack, H. Benson, H. K. Benson, Benjamin Flynn, Levan Parkins, N. Zimmerman, J. A. Irving, William Russell, S. J. Maxey, Hiram Elliott, Albert Bullard,

F. S. Leamer

Peter F. Dillon, Winslow H. Bradford, E. Bulard, James Daniel, William Daniel, Warren and James Elliott, T. B. Farquer, Alfred Gardner, George Miranda, Theophilus Farquer, J. F. Mire, Samuel Kite, D. W. Butt, Isaac Wilhelm, W. G. Sargeant, G. W. Butt, Daniel Flood, Milton Dipper, Charles Haptenstall, John Sutherland, Thomas Wesley and S. M. Butt, Richard F. Mire, Green White, Samuel Strine, Drury Dalton, Samuel Gullett, William Bolden and S. C. Arie.

The veterans now living in Persifer are: Frank Beamer, G. W. Butts, Silas Berkshire, William Dalton, George England, T. B. Farquer, Alfred Gardner, Jacob La Follette, David Ramp, Jerry Syler, William G. Sargeant, Simeon Temple, James Warrensford and Jerry Wallack.

Charles Clark was the only volunteer during the Spanish-American War of 1898.

Trenton was laid out on the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of Section 25, on July 30, 1839, by Hiram Bowman. It once contained a grocery, a small pottery and brick yard and a tavern. There are now two dwellings on the site.

APPLETON.

The village was laid out by the Hon. J. H. Lewis, in the Spring of 1888, on the southeast quarter of Section 16. Mills Voris was the surveyor. It contains a freight and express office, two stores, a grain elevator, a blacksmith shop, a carpenter shop, a lumber yard and nine dwellings. E. J. Steffin is postmaster. Persifer Town Hall, which cost over six hundred dollars, is here. Some grain and a large quantity of stock are shipped from here annually. During the last year W. H. McElwain shipped more than fifty cars of hogs.

DAHINDA.

This place was laid out in the Summer of 1888, by the Santa Fe Town and Land Company. It is held in the name of the president of that company and contains 47.74 acres. It stands on the northwest quarter of Section 24. It contains a freight and express office, two stores, a blacksmith shop, a grain elevator, and twenty-five dwellings, one of which is a boarding house. The railroad has a pump house and tank, and a fine bridge over Spoon River. R. J. Bedford is the village doctor and William G. Sargeant is postmaster and notary. There is a good school house, and a Mormon church, dedicated in 1896 under the name of "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." D. C. Smith is the minister and leading man of this organization.

FRANK S. BEAMER.

Mr. Frank S. Beamer is a careful and thrifty farmer, and one of the successful men in Persifer Township. He was born March 10, 1844, in Gettysburg, Adams County, Pennsylvania, and received his education in the same county. The family is of German descent. His paternal grandfather died in Maryland. Jacob Beamer, father of Frank S., was born in Carroll County, Maryland, and died in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. His mother, Ann Polly, was a daughter of John Wentz; she died in Gettysburg.

Mr. Beamer was reared on a farm in Adams County, Pennsylvania. In October, 1862, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted for nine months in Company G., One Hundred and Fifteenth Regiment of Pennsylvania troops, taking the place of a poor cousin who was the head of a large family; the consideration he received from his cousin, for this service, was a horse. He served in the Department of Fortress Monroe until July, 1863, when he was honorably discharged. In August, 1864, he re-enlisted, in an independent company of U. S. cavalry, for one hundred days. February 15, 1865, he enlisted in Company G. of the Seventy-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was honorably discharged September, 1865. After the war, Mr. Beamer remained in Pennsylvania until the Spring of 1867. It was on the 18th of March of that year that he arrived in Knoxville, Illinois, where he bought a team with money he had saved while he was in the army, and went to farming two miles north of Gilson. He lived nine years on a farm in Knox Township, and bought one hundred and sixty acres of land in Persifer Township, the southwest quarter of Section 8, where he removed in the Spring of 1877 and began to improve the farm. He has given especial attention to stock-raising, and it is in this that he has had the greatest success. He not only feeds his cattle all the grain from his farm, but buys a large amount for the same purpose. He now owns three hundred and ninety-five acres of land.

February 25, 1869, Mr. Beamer was married in Knoxville to Mary E., daughter of James England, deceased, formerly of Bedford County, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Beamer have had two children: Harry E.; and Maggie A., wife of Charles Myers.

Mr. Beamer is a member of the G. A. R. at Knoxville. In politics, he is a republican; he has been Road Commissioner, and has held school offices.

GEORGE STEVENS.

The early life of George Stevens was one of roving and adventure. He was born in Philadelphia, and was but a small lad when he ran away from home and went by sailing vessel to New Orleans, where he was taken sick and went to the hospital. An old gentleman conceived a friendly interest for the young adventurer, and took him to his home, but the roving spirit was too strong, and young Stevens left his kind-hearted friends and went into Mexico, where he herded sheep. He went from Mexico to California in 1849, and then to Denver, Colorado, where he worked in a saw and flour mill for D. C. Oakes. He afterwards went to Leadville with Isaac N. Rafferty and engaged in gold mining. They remained there only about two months, during which time they secured about $24,000 in gold, which they took to the mint in Philadelphia and had made into coin.

Mr. Stevens made and lost several fortunes; and returning to Denver, he engaged in the real estate and brokerage business. He returned East to Madison County, Ohio, where his former partner, Mr. Rafferty, resided, and when Mr. Rafferty came to Illinois to be married, Mr. Stevens came with him, and in 1860, bought the old Robinson White farm in Persifer Township, Section 28. The farm comprised four hundred and seventy acres and Mr. Stevens leased it for five years. He then went to Nevada where he became a successful mine operator, at one time employing six hundred men. He made three trips to California on horseback, riding a famous Indian pony, "Mitchell," purchased from the Indians. The pony reached the age of thirty-seven.

Mr. Stevens was an excellent business man, and bought and sold much stock and real estate; at the time of his death he owned twelve hundred and fifty-seven acres of land. On account of his physical and mental endowments he was a leader among men, and his sterling, manly qualities were quickly recognized by western people. He was a famous athlete, and among the Indians and frontiersmen, many stories were told of his feats in jumping and running. He was a personal friend of the famous Kit Carson, and later was one of the dashing and daring riders of the "pony express." His character was active, honest, straightforward and open-hearted.

Mr. Stevens was married to Hannah P. Rafferty, in Galesburg, Illinois. Six of their children are now living: Lucinda B., wife of Jacob DeBolt; George W.; Mary V., wife of George K. Sherman, of Knoxville; Eleanor E., wife of Geortz West, of Galesburg; John B., and Milo A. Mrs. Stevens was a daughter of William B. and Susanna (Denny) Rafferty, of Abingdon, who came to Illinois when Mrs. Stevens was fourteen years of age. Since she was thirteen years of age she has been a member of the Christian Church.

In politics, Mr. Stevens was a democrat, and he was ever interested and well posted in national affairs. He died March 26, 1897.

JOHN WYMAN.

John Wyman, son of Arthur and Anna (Salts) Wyman, was born in Vinton County, Ohio, July 25, 1830. He received a common school education. His father was a native of New York State. His maternal grandfather was Edward Salts.

Mr. Wyman came to Persifer Township, Knox County, Illinois, when twenty-four years of age. He was a single man, and began life on a small scale. When he arrived in Illinois, he had as capital $210 in cash, with which he bought stock and grazed and fed them. Prospering in this undertaking, he soon after purchased eighty acres of land. He was in debt, but was possessed with energy which insures success. He was soon able to discharge all his indebtedness, and to engage in larger business enterprises. He bought more stock, and purchased more land so that at one time he owned not less than twelve hundred acres. If Mr. Wyman now possesses less land than formerly, it is because he has adopted the plan of giving a farm to each of his sons. Mr. Wyman is a wealthy man, a generous and kind-hearted father. These qualities of mind and of heart are as clearly exhibited in the wider relations of life as in those of the family. He is a good counsellor, a trusted friend, a kind neighbor, and is always ready to extend a helping hand to the unfortunate and the distressed. Honest in his dealings with his fellowmen, he has made it clear to those who know him that wealth may be accumulated with no taint of dishonor; that a strong purpose aided by integrity, economy, and perseverance, is still the most potent factor in securing the double harvest of life—material prosperity and a noble manhood.

Mr. Wyman was married to Hannah, daughter of Daniel Taylor, December 22, 1854. She died April 8, 1864; there were three children: Henry, who married Lovina Montgomery; Charles, who married Effie Wilson; and Eunice Ann, the wife of Edward Russel.

October 17, 1867, he married, at Knoxville, Illinois, Katharine, daughter of Frederick and Eliza (Hammond) Mundwiler. Three children were born to them: Eliza, wife of Guy Manley; Arthur, who married Fannie Farquer; and Ida J., wife of Harvey England. Mrs. Wyman's father was born in York County, Pennsylvania; her mother was a native of Franklin County, in the same State; they came to Knox County, Illinois, when Mrs. Wyman was twenty years of age.

Mr. Wyman is a republican. He has not sought office; but for many years served his township in the capacity of Road Commissioner, and his influence in town affairs has been extensive and valuable.

ADAMS, AUSTIN; Farmer; Persifer Township; born October 3, 1868, in Elba Township, Knox County, Illinois. His father, Ziba Adams, and his mother, Della Gullet, were natives of Ohio. He received his education in Elba Township and in Galesburg. Mr. Adams was married to Susie Rafferty, March 15, 1899, at Peoria, Illinois. Mr. Adam's father came from Ohio to Knox County about 1846, and settled in Persifer Township, and later removed to Elba Township. In early life he worked on a farm, and in 1892, began farming for himself in Persifer Township. Mr. Adams has those habits of industry and economy which are at once the prerequisites and the harbingers of success. In religious belief, Mr. Adams is a Methodist. He is a democrat.

ANDERSON, PETER; Farmer; Persifer Township; born in Sweden in 1844, where he was educated. His parents were Andrew and Mary (Olson) Anderson, of Sweden. He was married December, 1889, in Marshall County, Illinois, to Elizabeth Carr, daughter of Edwui and Catherine (Foster) Carr, of Ohio. Their children are: Christine Mabel and Paul E. Mr. Anderson came from Sweden in 1869 and began as a farm hand near Knoxville, Illinois. With his earnings he bought a farm in 1888, and by energy and economy established himself near Dahinda and became a prosperous farmer. Mr. Anderson was a member of the Lutheran Church. In politics, he was a republican. He died July 24, 1899.

DAWSON, CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS; Farmer; Persifer Township; born August 25, 1846, in Ohio. Educated in Knox County. His parents were James and Margaret (Claypole) Dawson, of Ohio. Mr. Dawson was married to Filetta Corbin in 1869, in Persifer Township. Their children are: Leon Lewis; Joseph Rollie; James Albert; Charles Wilbert; Nellie Alvilda; Etta May; Jasper Winfield; and Harley, an infant, deceased. Mr. Dawson's parents came to Knox County when he was eight years of age, and settled on a farm, where they lived until the death of his mother. His father then sold out and went to Kansas, where he died. Mr. Dawson remained in Knox County and still lives on his farm near Dahinda. His family are at home with the exception of one son, Lewis, who married and is farming elsewhere. Mr. Dawson is a democrat and has been a School Director.

GARDNER, ALFRED; Farmer; Persifer Township; born July 18, 1839, in Ohio; educated in Knox County, Illinois. His father, Alfred Gardner, was born in New York State; his mother, Jane (Collins) Gardner, was a native of Ohio; his grandfather, Caleb Gardner, was born in the State of New York; his grandmother's name was Lydia Thurston; his maternal grandfather, John Collins, was a native of Virginia, and his maternal grandmother, Beca (Ennas), was also a native of Virginia. The Gardner family came from Ohio to Knox County when Alfred was three months old, and settled on a farm in Persifer Township. In 1862, Mr. Gardner enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving till the close of the war. He was with Sherman's army, and took part in all the battles in which the regiment was engaged. He endured many hardships, and his health was so impaired that he has never fully recovered; he draws a pension. Mr. Gardner was married to Sarah E. Lorange, November 3, 1855, in Iowa. Thirteen children have been born to them: Alfred, Isaac H., Eliza Jane, and Jacob H., deceased; Sherman; Martha H.; Charlie; Albert; Mary; Benjamin; Leonard; Verner; and Lorange. Mr. Gardner is a Protestant. In politics, he is a republican.

GULLETT, JOSHUA; Farmer and blacksmith; Persifer Township; born June 12, 1823, in Putnam County, Indiana; educated in Indiana and North Carolina. His parents were Joshua Gullett, from Delaware, and Barbara (Housh) Gullett from Germany; his paternal grandparents were Joshua Gullett, of Ireland, and Elizabeth (Barnes) Gullett, of Nantucket, Massachusetts; his maternal grandparents were Adam and Becca Housh, of Germany. Mr. Gullett was married to Deliah Upton, in North Carolina in 1849. Their children are: William, deceased; Barbarian; and Mary Marlish, deceased. The grandfather of Mr. Gullett fought in the Revolution. His parents were married in Indiana and came to Illinois in 1839; the father died in 1880. Mr. Gullett retained part of the homestead, and has increased its area by purchase. He is a blacksmith by trade, and has a shop on his farm. He is one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Persifer Township. Mr. Gullett is a democrat.

HINTHORN, JOHN F.; Station Agent at Dahinda, Persifer Township, Knox County; was born in McLean County, Illinois, June 3, 1858. His parents, Silas James and Rachel (Lindsay) Hinthorn, were married in Fulton County, Illinois, and began their married life in McLean County, on a farm where his father had lived from childhood. To them were born two sons, the younger dying in infancy. When about three years of age his mother was taken sick with quick consumption, and the family removed to Fulton County, to her father's, where she died after an illness of about six months. His father returned to McLean County, leaving John F. with his grandparents, Reuben Lindsey and wife. Soon after the breaking out of the Civil War, his father enlisted in one of the volunteer companies then being organized in Bloomington, Illinois, and served about three years, nearly all of which time he was in active service, without having received a wound. He lived in McLean, Woodford, and Tazewell counties until his death near Peoria in April, 1899, at the age of sixty-six years. John F. Hinthorn remained with his grandparents, near Vermont, Illinois, until eighteen years of age, when he went to Bushill, Illinois, and learned the trade of harnessmaking, at which he worked until 1882. He then studied telegraphy and station agency on the Wabash, St. Louis and Peoria Railroad, at Waverly, Illinois, where he worked for five years, finally leaving the service of that company at Grafton, Illinois. He immediately went to Kansas and accepted a like position with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, working at various places until February, 1888, when he accepted a similar position at the company's station at Dahinda, Illinois, where he is still employed. Mr. Hinthorn was married to Asenath Booth at Knoxville, Illinois, November 1, 1885. They have two children: James E. and Clinton B. Mrs. Asenath Hinthorn was born and reared in Knoxville, Illinois. Her father, Edwin Booth, was born in Connecticut, February 26, 1810, and died November 25, 1885. Her mother, Nancy (Fuller) Booth, was born in New York State July 10, 1819, and died February 8, 1899. Mr. and Mrs. Booth were married in the East and moved to Illinois at a comparatively early day, finally settling in Knoxville, where they resided until their death. They had three children, Azenath being the youngest. She is a woman of true Christian character, a faithful wife and devoted mother. Mr. and Mrs. Hinthorn are especially interested in church and Sunday school work, and are members of the Methodist Church, Mr. Hinthorn being Superintendent of the Sunday school. In politics, Mr. Hinthorn is a prohibitionist.

MILES, JOSEPH W.; Farmer; Persifer Township, where he was born March 6, 1864; educated in the common schools and at Knox College. His parents were Rufus W. Miles, of Newark, Ohio, and Mary Jane (Bruce) Miles, of Wallingford, Vermont. His paternal grandparents were Rev. Solomon S. Miles, born in Belpre, Ohio, in 1794, and Eliza Ann (Gilmore) Miles, of Rutland, Vermont; his maternal grandparents were Silas and Hannah D. (Scott) Bruce, of Vermont; his paternal great-grandparents were Captain Benjamin and Hannah (Buckminster) Miles, of Massachusetts, the former of Rutland. Mr. Joseph Miles was married in Persifer Township, Section 28, September 6, 1896, to Mary E. Derham. Their two children are deceased.

MILES, RUFUS W.; Farmer; born September 24, 1822, at Newark, Ohio; educated in the common schools of Ohio, and at Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois. His parents were Rev. S. S. Miles, of Belpre, Ohio, and Eliza Ann (Gilmore) Miles, of Rutland, Vermont. His paternal grandparents were Benjamin and Hannah (Buckminster) Miles, of Massachusetts, the former of Rutland. His maternal grandfather was John Gilmore; his paternal great-grandparents were Captain Benjamin Miles, and Mary (Hubbard) Miles, of Concord, Massachusetts. Rufus W. Miles came to Illinois in 1836, when fourteen years old. He crossed the plains in 1850, returning in 1851 by way of Panama and New York. Mr. Miles was married near Knoxville January 18, 1849, to Mary J. Bruce. Their children are: Lucy W., Hannah E., Emma M., James H., Rufus H., Joseph W., M. Jennie. Mr. Miles was a member of the Presbyterian Church. In politics, he was a republican, and during the last forty years of his life he was almost constantly in public office. The public service that he liked best to remember was that rendered as a member of the building committee of the Knox County Alms House.

SUTHERLAND, SAMUEL; Farmer; Persifer Township; born January 14, 1839, in Athens County, Ohio. His father, Alexander Sutherland, was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania; his mother, Harriet Leeper, was born in the same State; his grandfather, John Sutherland, was a native of Glasgow, Scotland; his grandmother was a native of Maryland; his maternal grandfather, Samuel Leeper, and his maternal grandmother, Ann Evert, were natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. Sutherland was married to Anna E. Diefenderfer in 1859, at Knoxville, Illinois; they have eleven children: William Alexander, Alpheus J., Ulysses, Frank, Victoria, Romane, Ellen Jane, George S., Claude W., Anna Myrtle, Ivy Glenn. Mr. Sutherland was educated in Pennsylvania. His father, Alexander Sutherland, came with his family from Pennsylvania to Knox County, Illinois, in April, 1852, and settled on a farm in Persifer Township. Samuel went to California, and in three years he accumulated sufficient means to purchase the farm on which his father first located, after which his father and mother came to live with him. His father died in 1870; his mother is still living at the age of eighty-six years, being at this time the oldest person in the township. A poor boy, Mr. Sutherland began life by working by the month, and through persistent energy and economy, has become one of the most prosperous farmers in Knox County. In politics, Mr. Sutherland is a republican, and has held the office of Assessor, Collector, Constable, Commissioner of Highways, Trustee of Schools, and is at present School Director in District No. 2.

SUTHERLAND, WILLIAM ALEXANDER; Farmer; Persifer Township; born October 19, 1859, in Truro Township, Illinois. His father, Samuel Sutherland, was born in Athens County, Ohio; his mother, Ann Elizabeth (Diefenderfer) Sutherland, was born in Union County, Pennsylvania; his grandparents, Alexander and Harriet (Leeper) Sutherland, were natives of Pennsylvania, the latter of Washington County. John Sutherland, the great-grandfather of William Alexander, was born in Glasgow, Scotland; his great-grandmother was Susan Norris. Mr. Sutherland was married to Emma Prosser July 2, 1884, in Stark County, Illinois. Two children have been born to them: Charlotte L., deceased; and Fern. John Prosser, the father of Mrs. Sutherland, was born in England; her mother, Elizabeth Prosser, was a native of Pennsylvania. Mr. W. A. Sutherland began life for himself at the age of nineteen years, and found employment in Stark County. He attended school for several winters and obtained a good common school education. Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland removed to Knox County in the Fall of 1884, having saved enough money while working by the month to make a payment on his farm in Persifer Township, upon which he now lives. Mr. Sutherland has shown much interest in the progress of Persifer Township, and has held the office of Township Clerk for eight years with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his fellow townsmen. He is a member of the Masonic order, and has attained the degree of Chapter Mason; he is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Sutherland is a man of energy and push, and with the assistance of an economical wife, has paid for his farm under adverse circumstances. In politics, he is a republican.

WILSON, FRANCIS M.; Farmer and stock-breeder; Persifer Township; born on the homestead, which he now owns, September 1, 1849; educated in Galesburg. His father, Francis Wilson, was twice married; first, to Nancy McPherrin; the second marriage was with Elizabeth McPherrin, both of whom were born in Ohio. Of the first marriage there were three children: George W., Thomas and Elizabeth. His first wife died January 3, 1838. Mr. Wilson had seven children by his second wife: John; James A.; Francis M.; Drucilla J. and Mary C., deceased. The mother died August 15, 1882. Mr. F. M. Wilson was married to Clara A. Thomas, in Kansas, January 13, 1886. There were four children: Ella, who died in her ninth year; F. Earle; Harley R.; and Nellie M. Mrs. Wilson's father, William Thomas, was born in Warren County, Indiana, in 1836, and was educated in the common schools. He married Elizabeth Odell, of his native county; there were nine children: Adeline, James, Clara A., Julia, Maryette, Harry, Edward, Franklin and Myrtle. Both parents are now living in Kansas. Mr. Wilson's family came to Knox County in 1836, and settled in Persifer Township in 1838. The ancestry of the family is Scotch-Irish and Welsh. Mr. Wilson is one of the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a democrat.

WYMAN, ARTHUR; Farmer; Persifer Township, where he was born October 2, 1870; educated in the common schools. He was married to Fannie Farquer, July 27, 1893, in Knox County; they have three children: Clara Gertrude, Earl G. and Lena. His father, John Wyman, was born in Ohio; his mother's name was Katharine Muudwiler. Mr. Arthur Wyman's father came to Knox County, Illinois, from Ohio when a young man. He had scant savings from wages at thirteen dollars a month while working in Ohio. By hard work, careful management, and strict economy, he has become the possessor of several farms and much stock. He has six children, and to each of his sons, as they settle in life, he gives a farm provided with the necessary equipments. Mr. Arthur Wyman has one hundred and sixty acres of land; he is a successful farmer and interested in the progress of the community in which he lives. In politics, Mr. Wyman is a republican, and was for some time a School Director.

WYMAN, EDWARD J.; Farmer; Persifer Township; born January 10, 1833, in Vinton County, Ohio, where he was educated. His paternal grandfather, John Wyman, was a native of New York and died in Ohio in 1839, at the age of seventy-six. His father, Arthur Wyman, was born February 5, 1807, and came from Steuben County, New York; his mother, Anna Salts, born June 1, 1807, was a native of Ross County, Ohio. Arthur Wyman came to Knox County with his family of nine children in 1853. They sailed down the Ohio River from Pomeroy, Ohio, and up the Mississippi and Illinois rivers to Peoria and thence by wagon to Knox County, where he bought three hundred and twenty acres of land. He was one of the United Brethren, and was instrumental in building the first log school house in the district. He died in 1876; his wife died January 10, 1884. Edward J. Wyman was reared in Persifer Township. He has added to his first purchase of eighty acres of land and now owns five hundred and forty-nine acres. February 4, 1858, in Stark County, he was married to Susan Elizabeth Bradford. Six of their children attained maturity: Mrs. Mary A. Eiker, deceased; Mrs. Alice E. Steffen; William P.; Minerva J.; Clark E.; and Rufus C. Mrs. Wyman's father, Harvey Bradford, was born in Maine, September 27, 1809, and was the son of Charles and Elizabeth (Brown) Bradford, who were active abolitionists and came to Illinois in 1833. Charles and his son, Harvey S., were highly respected in the community. Mrs. Wyman has held the office of School Treasurer for two years. The Bradfords were descendants of Governor William Bradford, of the Mayflower. In religion, Mr. Wyman belongs to the United Brethren. In politics, he is a republican, and has held numerous local offices, including that of Supervisor for seven years, Constable eight years and Treasurer thirteen years. He has been Director and Trustee almost continually.

YOUNG, JOHN R.; Farmer; Persifer Township; son of Robert Young; born May 23, 1852, on the Young homestead, Section 30, Persifer Township; educated at the Knoxville High School and Hedding College. He married Samantha Lotts, in Haw Creek Township, December 8, 1875; there were four children: Earl L., John R., Trella W. and Merrill L. May 10, 1889, his first wife died. November 3, 1891, he married Mary A., daughter of George England; two children were born to them: Leon D. and an infant daughter. Mr. Young's college education did not unfit him for farm work, and knowing that he could make a success of farming, he chose that as his life work. He has made a success, beginning in a small way, and now owns four hundred and sixteen acres in Persifer Township, three hundred and seventy-five acres being in one tract and well improved. He is a progressive farmer. He has educated his children; his two oldest sons, Earl L. and John R., graduated at the Knoxville High School, the former teaching his first school in the Winter of 1898 and '99. Mr. Young is a republican in politics, and has been Supervisor ten years. He filled the office of Road Commissioner from 1885 to 1888, and in 1888, was elected Assessor. On the Board of Supervisors, he has been chairman of the Road and Bridge Committee since 1894, and has rendered valuable services to the county. Mr. Young is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and of the A. F. and A. M., Gilson Lodge, No. 3161.

YOUNG, ROBERT LINCOLN; Farmer; Persifer Township, where he was born November 14, 1863. He was educated in Knox County. His father, Robert Young, was born in Warren County, Ohio, and his mother, Mary Fowler (Johnston) Young, was a native of Claremont County, Ohio. His paternal grandfather, Jacob Young, was born in Germany; his grandmother, Elizabeth Young, was born in Philadelphia; his maternal grandfather, Edward C. Johnston, came from New Jersey. His maternal grandmother, Hannah Fowler (Rusling) Johnston, was a native of England. Mr. Robert L. Young was married to Emma E. England, September 17, 1890. They have one child, Harold Ewart. The parents of Mr. Young moved from Ohio to Knox County, Illinois, in 1844, and settled on the farm where they now live. Through energy and economy they have accumulated a large estate. Mr. Young now lives on the farm with his father, and is successfully engaged in general farming and stock raising. In addition, he cultivates a valuable farm of his own, consisting of two hundred and sixty-eight acres of land. Mr. Young has always taken much interest in the welfare of the township. In early life he taught in its schools and has later held the offices of Highway Commissioner, School Treasurer and School Director, the latter office he is now holding for the fifth year. Mr. Young is a member of the Methodist Church. In politics, he is a republican.

TRURO TOWNSHIP.

By L. J. Baird.

Next to Persifer, this is the roughest township in Knox County. Spoon River enters it in Section 12 and flows out from Section 31, winding through it for fifteen or sixteen miles and touching sixteen sections. This river and its branches, which liberally water Truro, pass through timber lands which formerly extended over half the township. Of late years, however, this timber has been gradually disappearing, the land on which it stood having been converted into almost treeless pastures, which have proved a source of greater profit. North of Spoon River, the land is mostly rolling; on the south stretches a level, fertile prairie. About one-sixth of the township is underlaid with a good quality of coal, which, with the timber, affords an excellent supply of fuel.

The first settlement was made on Section 19, in 1832, by John Dill. The first birth was that of Andrew Dill, in 1833. During that year Rev. John Cummings performed the first marriage ceremony, uniting Jake Ryan and Miss Stambaugh. In 1832, within Section 30, Malon Wimans, a United States rail carrier, was drowned while attempting to swim Spoon River with a mail bag strapped to his back. This was the first death. Within this same section, in 1834, John Coleman started a ferry across Spoon River, at a point which was long known as Coleman's Ferry, but afterwards came to be called Trenton. Here the first postoffice was established, during the same year.

On the northwest quarter of Section 31, the first white settlers found a number of Indian graves. Logs had been split into halves and hollowed out for coffins, and these were placed in the forks of trees, from ten to fifteen feet above the ground, where they rested, with their ghastly human skeletons projecting above their tops. In 1836, the pioneers took them down and gave them "white man's burial."

In 1834, Rev. John Cummings preached the first sermon at the home of Widow Lambert, on Section 31. The first school house was built in 1848, on Section 33. There are now seven frame school houses, valued at about seven thousand, five hundred dollars. Of the four hundred and forty-seven persons under the age of twenty-one, two hundred and seventy-three attend the public schools, one of which is graded.

Rensselaer Johnson was the first Justice of the Peace.

April 5, 1853, the township was organized. The first election of officers resulted in the choice of the following persons: Augustus Lapham, Supervisor; J. P. Cadwell, Clerk; Benjamin Sweat, Assessor; Levi Seward, Collector; Thomas Ross, Overseer of the Poor; Thomas Crawford, Luther Rice and Joseph Wilder, Highway Commissioners; Thomas Ross and Joseph Oberholtzer, Justices of the Peace.

The population in 1860 was seven hundred and thirteen; in 1870, eight hundred and ninety-nine; in 1880, seven hundred and seventeen; in 1890, eight hundred and sixty-five; and at present it is estimated at eleven hundred.

Truro Township is inhabited by prosperous farmers. The land is well tilled, and dotting the pastures are herds of well-bred hogs, horses, sheep and cattle. The farms are fairly well improved, and the people contented and happy.

The population is composed chiefly of American born citizens of English, Irish, Scotch and Swedish ancestry. The hardy pioneers are fast passing away, but they have left energetic and intelligent descendants. Although thus sprung from various stocks, they are all intensely American in their patriotism. Adorning the walls of their homes are to be found not only the portraits of the heroes of their Fatherland, of whom they are justly proud, but also those of Washington, Lincoln and other eminent Americans, who hold no second place in their affections.

Here also is found a generous religious tolerance, Protestant and Catholic joining in advancing charitable and educational enterprises. In such perfect assimilation of different nationalities, and in such broad charity in the matter of religious faith as are found here, lies one of the strongest guarantees of the future grandeur and perpetuity of our country.

A. Leonard

WILLIAMSFIELD.

Until 1887, Truro was without a railway. During that year the main line of the Santa Fe was laid across the township, and on April 24, 1888, Williamsfield was laid out by E. B. Purcell, on Section 23. Later, Galesburg capitalists interested themselves in the project, and promoted it with so much vigor that within twelve years the new town has become one of the most prosperous in the county, and now boasts about five hundred inhabitants. There is a graded school, employing from three to four teachers since the completion of the school building, in 1890.

A Methodist church was erected early in 1890, and dedicated on the first day of June of that year. It is a substantial structure, and the denomination has a fair membership. Two years later, the Catholics erected an attractive house of worship.

Since 1890 Williamsfield has had a bank and a printing office, both of which started in business on January 22 of that year. The Bank of Williamsfield (a private institution) was opened by L. J. Baird and Company. David Cation is its Cashier. The Williamsfield Times, an independent weekly, was established, as has been said, in 1890. Its founder was C. D. Benfield. In October, 1890, the building in which the Times was located was burned, and Mr. Benfield lost his entire outfit. The subscription list of the paper was purchased by Momeny and Benson, and in a few months they were enabled to continue the publication. Later, they dissolved partnership, and J. M. Momeny assumed control of the paper. In the Fall of 1892, S. E. Boggess leased the plant from Mr. Momeny, and in April, 1893, it passed into the hands of its present owner, M. Hugh Irish.

Various lines of mercantile business are well represented, there being four general stores, two hardware stores, two meat markets, two lumber yards, one furniture and undertaking establishment, two restaurants, a livery and feed barn, two barber shops, a blacksmith shop, and dry goods and millinery stores. It has also two grain elevators, and has always been a great center for the shipment of grain and live stock. In fact, in these respects, Williamsfield is surpassed by but few points in the State.

The societies of the village are named below:

Grand Army of the Republic; instituted July 22, 1890, by Dr. Lambert, of Galesburg, assisted by comrades from Elmwood and Yates City, with a membership of thirteen. Named the George W. Parker Post, in memory of a deceased soldier from this township. John Cole, M. D., was the first Commander. For three years the Post met in Tucker's Hall, when the Odd Fellows tendered them their lodge room, free of rent, as their future home. Present membership, twenty-three. Comrades who have died since the institution are Samuel Tucker and Frank Reinboldt.

Independent Order of Odd Fellows, No. 779. Organized April 15, 1890. Meet in a commodious hall, over the bank. Membership, sixty. All the organizations named below also hold their meetings at the same place.

Degree of Rebekah. Organized September 12, 1895. Membership, thirty-eight. Knights of Pythias. Organized May 15, 1895. Membership, fifty-five. Order of Eastern Star. Organized July, 1895. Membership, twenty-five. Modern Woodmen of America. Organized June, 1894, with seventeen members. Present membership, thirty-two.

ANTHONY SEWARD.

Anthony Seward, son of Samuel S. and Sarah A. (Caldwell) Seward, was born in Knox Township, Knox County, Illinois, October 12, 1848. His father was born in Broome County, New York, in 1826. His grandparents were Orin and Mehetabel (Livermore) Seward, who were pioneers in Knox County.

Samuel S. Seward attended the pioneer schools and assisted his father on the farm. In the summer of 1862, he enlisted in the Union army, serving until June, 1865; he was with Sherman's army in its march through Georgia, marching from Atlanta, Georgia, to Savannah, and thence through the Carolinas to the city of Washington, taking part in the grand review of the army at the close of the war; he was mustered out of service at Chicago, Illinois. He married Sarah A., daughter of John P. and Mary (Porter) Cawwell. After his marriage he located on a farm in Truro Township, but in a few years he disposed of this farm and, after renting land for a time, bought a farm on Section 16. In 1882 he left his son Anthony in charge of the farm in Truro Township and settled on a farm in Cedar County, Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Seward had six children: Anthony; John M.; Sophronia (deceased); William H.; Sarah; and Albert Marion.

Anthony Seward was married in Knox County, March 17, 1868, to Margaret M. Daniels, who was born in Richland County, Ohio, December 24, 1851. Four children have been born to them: Chloe P., Ellen Viola, Lucius and Ella. After his marriage Mr. Seward settled upon his father's farm, of which he assumed complete control in 1882.

Mr. Seward was educated in the common schools of Truro Township. He is a farmer and grain dealer. In politics, he is a republican; in religious belief, a Methodist. He held the office of Commissioner of Highways from 1881 to 1888. In 1887 he was Township Supervisor and was re-elected in 1889, holding the office until 1894; in 1898 he was again elected to the same office. He held the office of School Treasurer five or six years, and has been School Director for a number of terms. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge, No. 777, and a member of the K. P. Lodge, No. 525, at Williamsfield.

EZRA W. TUCKER.

Ezra W. Tucker, son of John and Eleanor (Metcalfe) Tucker, was born January 4, 1829, in Peoria County, Illinois. His parents were born in Ashland County, Ohio, and were pioneers in Peoria. His father died in 1850.

Mr. Tucker was educated in the common schools, and attended school in a log house furnished with slab seats. He was married October 22, 1860, to Kate Mundy, who was born in Elba Township. Six children were born to them: Willie, Samuel B., Mamie, Lettie, Barbara and Thomas. Mr. Tucker was married a second time, February 28, 1877, to Elizabeth Dugan, born in Scotland in 1837, and was the daughter of James and Elizabeth (McMurray) Dugan. Her father died in Scotland, and she came with her mother to the United States in 1865.

After his first marriage he purchased a farm of one hundred and ten acres in Truro Township, where he now lives. He has improved his farm, and increased it by purchase, until he now has an excellent farm of three hundred acres, situated one mile south of Williamsfield, where he raises a large amount of fruit.

In religion, Mr. Tucker is a Methodist, and in politics a republican. He has held the office of Road Commissioner, Justice of the Peace, and School Director in Truro Township.

BAIRD, JOHN M.; Williamsfield, Truro Township; Lumber Dealer; born July 15, 1863, in Knox County; educated in Abingdon, Illinois. His parents, William H. and Elizabeth Jane (Farwell) Baird, were born in Pennsylvania. September 9, 1844, in Elba Township, Mr. Baird was married to Florence R. Sumner, who was born December 16, 1861. Mr. and Mrs. Baird have two children: Una C., born December 4, 1888; Vesper E., born August 6, 1892. Mrs. Baird is a member of the Eastern Star Lodge. ELBA TOWNSHIP.

By B. P. Balrd.

The first settler in the district now known as Elba Township was Thomas King, who came there in the year 1836. The statement has been made, in former histories, that John King, the father of Thomas, was the original pioneer. This is an error. John King emigrated from the East in 1835, but located in Brimfield Township, Peoria County, where he died in the autumn of the same year, without having preempted an acre of ground in Knox County. He had come West, intending to make a home for his family, but died before he had time to accomplish his purpose. Thomas King brought his widowed mother and younger brothers and sisters West, being resolved to seek better fortunes in a territory comparatively new. In the Fall of 1836 they reached Illinois, and settled on what is now Section 2, of Elba Township. The original farm is still owned by James, a brother of Thomas, who was a child of five years when the family migration was made.

Among the earliest settlers were John and Felix Thurman, who were soon joined by Leonard and Darius Jones, emigrants from New York. The latter settled in Section 15, about the autumn of 1837, and not long afterward came Jacob Kightlinger, with his wife and family, to Section 27. Mr. Kightlinger had a large number of children and employed a private tutor to instruct them, thereby gaining a distinction either more or less enviable according to the standpoint from which his conduct was viewed. Yet he is said to have been the builder of the first school house in the township, in Section 27. Vachel Metcalf was among the first teachers in Elba, although it cannot be definitely asserted that he taught in this school. James Harrison Baird, a native of Pennsylvania, arrived with his wife and family in 1838, having emigrated from the East in a wagon and reaching Elba in the autumn. He made his home in the northwest quarter of Section 3, and—it being situated on the stage route between Peoria and Knoxville—it frequently proved a welcome resting place for weary travelers. Samuel Tucker, with his brother John, settled on Section 2 the following year; and about the same time came Rev. John Gross, who subsequently attained some local distinction through his connection with the "underground railway."

Most of these early pioneers have passed away, Vachel Metcalf being the only known survivor. His present home is at Elmwood, Peoria County. They did much for the development of the section, yet scarcely deserve more praise than should be awarded to some who came after them. Among the later settlers who passed their maturer years in Elba and were prominently identified with the business interests of the township, and who have gone to the reward due to well spent lives, were Josiah Nelson, Moses Wheeler, Henry Oberholtzer, William H. Baird, Henry Potts, John Callegan, John Lindsey, Walter Bailey, James Nicholson, James Patterson, Benjamin Pitman and James Catterton. Of the present citizens who have earned an enviable reputation for industry, probity and public spirit, and whose beautiful homes help to make Elba what it is, may be mentioned Calvin Sumner, James Cation, Frank Potts, W. S. Baird, T. L. Galpin, Enoch Dalton, Isaac Shelton, D. W. Gooding, J. S. Thurman, William Bennett, G. W. Kennedy, William Woolsey, J. W. Sherman, D. C. Hurlburt, A. G. Adams, George Owen, John Miller, Peter Schenck, William Murdoch, Albert Breece, Thomas Howell, R. E. Farwell, J. O. Baird, William Callegnan, Samuel Shires, William Truitt, William Chapman, Elva Woolsey, William Speare, F. E. Nelson, Ziba Adams, David Hannah, J. M. Oberholtzer, John Cowell, Reuben Gates, Frank Chelton, J. D. Gray, James Barrett, James King, and John McKintey.

The surface of the township is beautifully undulating, and good natural drainage is afforded by French Creek and the numerous small streams which flow into it. The former traverses Elba from northeast to southwest, and along its banks is a considerable growth of timber, which serves to give variety to the landscape. Spoon River also crosses the extreme northwest corner, cutting off about an acre. The soil is extremely fertile, and especially adapted to the growth of cereals, the annual crop of wheat, corn and oats being as large as those grown in any other township in the county. The yield of corn has been known to exceed one hundred bushels per acre, and of oats seventy-five bushels. Considerable hay is also raised, and timothy, clover and blue grass all flourish, as also do apples, peaches, and a large variety of small fruits. The commercial value of the land ranges from twenty-five to one hundred dollars per acre, the maximum, however, being obtainable only for the choicest farms.

Elba is not crossed by any railroad, although good shipping facilities are afforded by the Santa Fe line, on the north, and the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, on the south.

The number of school districts is eight, with an average attendance of twenty-five pupils. There are two flourishing Methodist churches, and at one time there was a Presbyterian society as well. The latter congregation, however, has been broken up through deaths and removals, and the church edifice is rapidly going to decay.

Township organization was effected on April 5, 1883, by the choice of the following officers: John F. Nicholson, Supervisor; J. W. Hines, Clerk; H. L. Bailey, Assessor; Henry Smith, Collector; William Searles, Overseer of the Poor; Henry Oberholtzer, John West and K. Hines, Highway Commissioners; John West and B. F. Johnson, Justices.

BENJAMIN P. BAIRD.

Benjamin P. Baird, son of W. H. and Elizabeth (Farwell) Baird, was born in Pennsylvania, March 19, 1855. His paternal grandparents were Benjamin and Ellen Baird, of

W. H. Barr

Pennsylvania, and the parents of his mother were James and Pernelia Farwell of the same State.

Mr. Baird came with his father to Elba Township, where they located on Section 4. He was educated at Hedding College, Abingdon, Illinois. At the age of twenty-two he began farming for himself, and he now owns a very fine farm of three hundred and sixty acres on Section 16 of Elba Township, where he is quite an extensive breeder of fine horses. His first marriage was to Mary E. Oberholtzer, who was born in Truro Township, October 22, 1859, and died June 13, 1880. Her parents were Joseph and Anna Oberholtzer, residents of Truro. By this marriage Mr. Baird has one son, Newton Homer, who was born October 1, 1878, and is a student in Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois.

Mr. Baird was married a second time, February 22, 1882, to Josephine G. Gray, who was born July 29, 1861. Her parents are Lemuel Gray and Mary Ann (Swegle) Gray, now living in Farmington, Illinois. The children by this marriage are Willie L., born April 5, 1883; Leo P., born July 12, 1885; Lois L., born April 22, 1887; Eva L., born September 7, 1889; Forest Gray, born December 21, 1890.

Mr. Baird has been Road Commissioner for the township of Elba, and has served as School Director sixteen years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a republican in politics.

WILLIAM H. BAIRD.

William H. Baird was born April 6, 1820, in Clinton County, Pennsylvania, on the west branch of the Susquehanna River. His parents were Benjamin and Ellen (Summerson) Baird. Benjamin Baird was a native of Pennsylvania, and lived in Clinton County from his earliest youth. Ellen Summerson was a native of England, and came to America with her parents when she was an infant. They were married in 1817, and were the parents of eleven children, nine of whom, six boys and three girls, attained maturity, William H. being the eldest.

Mr. Baird's childhood was passed on the farm, and in the forests and along the streams of his native State. He was a lover of nature, and an adept with rod and gun. His education was limited, being confined to branches taught in the common schools. He afterwards taught in the schools of his county. He farmed for several years, during part of which time he worked in the forest, felling trees, moving them on the snow to the streams, and rafting them to distant saw-mills during the spring freshets. In 1848, with the aid of his father, he invested in a quarter section of land in what is now Elba Township, Knox County, Illinois, where he moved with his family in 1856, settling on the northeast quarter of Section 4. He resided there until his death, which occurred on the thirty-fourth anniversary of the date of their arrival in the county, June 2d. He was a successful farmer, and made additions to his farm from time to time.

Mr. Baird was married to Elizabeth Jane Farwell, May 22, 1850. She was born May 15, 1821, in Clinton County, Pennsylvania. Her parents were of German, Irish and Scotch descent. There were six children: Jerusha Grace, now Mrs. Wheeler; James Ogden; Benjamin Preston; Leroy Joseph; William Sebastian; and John McClellan.

Mr. Baird was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Pennsylvania. His life was moral and upright, and old associates aver they never heard him utter a profane word. His wife always affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal church people, but was not a member of any church.

Politically, Mr. Baird was a democrat. He was a modest, unassuming man, precise in his methods, industrious and frugal. He was a friend of the church and of education, contributing liberally to their support; he was a School Director during most of his life in Illinois. Both his precept and his example were in accord with right action. He found true pleasure in associating with old friends, and greatly enjoyed telling comic tales with his family about him to join in the merriment. He was a life long sufferer from asthma, which, with other infirmities, caused his death June 2, 1890, shortly after completing his seventieth year. A few months afterward, his wife built a comfortable home in Williamsfield, a few miles from the old farm, where she lives, surrounded by her children.

GEORGE W. KENNEDY.

George W. Kennedy, son of George and Nancy (Tedlock) Kennedy, was born in Rush County, Indiana, January 29, 1833. The progenitor of this branch of the Kennedy family came from Ireland in a sailing vessel. The voyage lasted six months, during which period an acquaintance was formed between himself and a beautiful English maiden on board, and they were married immediately after landing in America. They settled in Tennessee, where their descendants became numerous and widely connected in several of the southern States, notably in Tennessee and Kentucky.

The grandparents of George W. Kennedy were William P. and Elizabeth (Parcell) Kennedy. The grandfather, born in Green County, Tennessee, was a farmer and mechanic. They were members of a church all their lives, first the Presbyterian and later the Methodist Episcopal. He died in Iowa and his wife in Indiana. George Kennedy, father of George W., was born in Green County, Tennessee, where he was reared on a farm. He married Nancy Tedlock, daughter of James Tedlock, who belonged to a family of whom several were men distinguished in the professions. They moved to Rush County, Indiana. Mrs. Kennedy died in Hancock County in the same State. Mr. Kennedy was thrice married and his last wife, Dorothy, is now living in Stark County, Illinois. She was reared in Elba Township, Knox County, where her father, John Thurman, was an early settler. He died in Salem Township, February 3, 1884.

George W. Kennedy came from Indiana with his father in 1847, and settled in Salem Township, where he lived ten years. His educational advantages were limited, having attended a district school for only a few months. He was married in Salem Township, November 1, 1857, to Eliza Thurman, who was born December 20, 1835. Mrs. Kennedy was the daughter of John and Matilda Thurman, who came to Illinois in 1828, and to Elba Township in 1832. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy were: Dorothy Charlotte, born July 29, 1858; Daniel Webster, born November 9, 1859, died April 14, 1860; William Albert, born May 4, 1862, died January 12, 1866; Mary Eveline, born August 1, 1865, died May 16, 1866; Rosa May, born May 27, 1867; Charles Edwin, born October 27, 1869; Clara Bell, born May 27, 1872; and Martha Ellice, born October 30, 1875. Dorothy Charlotte was married to Andrew Riondon in August, 1877; they have one child, Bessie, who was married to B. Hunter in 1894. Charles married Minnie Ralston, whose father was a soldier in the Civil War, One Hundred and Second Regiment, Illinois Volunteers.

Politically, Mr. Kennedy is a democrat. He takes an interest in education, and the first school meeting of the District was held, and the School Board was organized, in his house. He has been School Director eighteen years and has held the office of Road Commissioner. He is a Royal Arch Mason, Eureka Chapter, No. 97, Yates City. In 1866 he introduced short-horn cattle into Elba Township, and in 1881 he completed his herd by purchases from J. R. Gay, of Versailles, Kentucky, and thus became the owner of the first herd of short-horn cattle in that township. His herd has numbered as high as one hundred and twenty-six, and he now has one hundred head. Sales have been made in thirteen different States at remunerative prices, one animal having brought six hundred and sixty dollars. Mr. Kennedy has a fine farm of four hundred and eighty acres of land in Elba Township, owns two hundred and eighty acres elsewhere, and has a good residence and other substantial buildings. He is a prosperous farmer.

JOHN E. LINDZEY.

John E. Lindzey, son of William and Hannah Lindzey, was born in England, October 19, 1823, and came with the family to Vermont. The Lindzeys were engaged in cotton and woolen mills in England and in this country, and were expert in their vocation. The family removed from Vermont to Illinois and settled in Fulton County. George E., one of the sons, lives in Farmington, Illinois. In 1872, John E. Lindzey came to Knox County and settled on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres. He was a School Director nine years, and took a deep interest in educational work. Politically, he was a democrat. He was married in Knoxville, August 22, 1873, to Mrs. Kiziah Chapman, daughter of William and Rebecca (Sharp) Gray, and widow of John Chapman. Mr. Gray's parents were Jacob Gray, of New Jersey, and Mary (Shrieves) Gray, of Maryland. His paternal grandfather was William Gray, of New Jersey, and his mother's father was Barton Shrieves, who was born in Maryland, and died in Knox County, Illinois. Mr. Gray was born in Bedford County, Pennsylvania, November 24, 1821, and was married in Clinton County, Ohio, February 23, 1843, to Rebecca Sharp, daughter of John W. and Kiziah (Brewer) Sharp. Thirteen children were born to them: Mrs. Kiziah Lindzey, John Wesley, James Madison, Mrs. Mary A. Chapman, Francis M., David H., Mrs. Margaret E. Logan (deceased), Joseph M., Alice (deceased), Mrs. Eliza Byers, George E., Charles E. and Frank P. Mr. Gray was by occupation, a farmer; in politics, a democrat. In the year 1851 he removed from Highland County, Ohio, to Knox County, Illinois, and settled in Maquon Township. He lived four years in Iowa. His wife died in 1885 in Knoxville, and his home has been in Douglas, Salem Township, since 1896.

John Chapman, the first husband of Mrs. Lindzey, was the son of John and Ann Chapman. There were four children born to John, and Kiziah (Gray) Chapman: Florence May, who died August 25, 1888, M. Nettie, Francis and Rebecca Ann.

The children of John E. and Kiziah (Gray Chapman) Lindzey were eight in number: Harriet Jane (deceased), Maud, William C., George A., Alma Edith, Blanche, Bruce and Emma C. Since the death of her second husband, Mrs. Lindzey, with the assistance of her sons, has managed her farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which is located in Elba Township. She has a beautiful residence, and the farm is well stocked with a herd of twenty-five cattle and numbers of swine and horses. Mrs. Lindzey was born in Ohio, March 22, 1849; was educated in the common schools, and is a Methodist.

JACOB M. OBERHOLTZER.

Jacob M. Oberholtzer was born in Elba Township, Knox County, Illinois, March 14, 1845. His paternal grandfather, Samuel, came from Germany to Ohio, where he was a farmer. He was married three times, and had a family of twenty-one children. He died near Findlay, Hancock County, Ohio. His son Henry, father of Jacob M., was born in Ohio, and came with Samuel Tucker to Elba Township. Soon afterward, having married Mr. Tucker's daughter Martha, and being a farmer, he settled on a farm of sixty-eight acres, in Section 3, and purchased forty acres in an adjoining township. He was a good neighbor, a democrat, and a member of the Presbyterian Church. He died in the Spring of 1865. His widow resides in Yates City.

Jacob M., the son of Henry and Martha (Tucker) Oberholtzer, received his education in the country schools. He was married October 28, 1869, to Laura A., daughter of Moses and Cynthia (Walker) Wheeler, who came to Knox County, in 1856; they were prominent members of the Baptist Church; they died at the home farm in Elba Township, at the age of seventy-

His parents were Thomas and Jane (Wilson) Tenny; the father came from Massachusetts, the mother from Tennessee. He was married in Shelby County, Illinois, October 7, 1852, to Symantha Williams. She was born in Fairfield County, Ohio, June 11, 1830, and is the daughter of John B. and Francina (Blue) Williams; her father was born in 1803 and died in 1867; her mother was born in 1808, and died in 1886. Mr. and Mrs. Tenny's children are: John M., born December 30, 1853; George C., born July 20, 1855, and died May 16, 1862; Edwin A., born November 1, 1856; Francis M., born February 4, 1859; Newton H., born August 30, 1860, died April 20, 1895; Owen Clarence, born November 27, 1865, died October 26, 1879; Angeline, born September 28, 1863, died October 22, 1888; Paris Edgar and George Michael, born January 21, 1869; and Ethel M., born October 22, 1870. Mr. Tenny came to Elba Township in 1853, and located on Section 23, in 1863. His farm contains two hundred and forty acres, and a fine residence. Mr. Tenny is a member of the Methodist Church. In politics, he is a democrat, and has been Justice of the Peace, School Director and Trustee for a number of years.

TRUITT, T. J.; Farmer; Elba Township; born January 28, 1852, in Ross County, Ohio; educated in common schools. His parents, Elijah and Eliza Jane (Taylor) Truitt, were born in Ross County, Ohio, in 1818, and 1822; his grandparents were Giley Truitt of Virginia, and Nancy (David) Truitt. T. J. Truitt came with his father to Illinois in 1855, and located in Elba Township, Section 28. He removed after several years to Yates City, where his parents lived till their death in 1898. The father was School Director in Elba Township for a number of years, and was captain of a military company. Mr. and Mrs. Truitt were members of the Methodist Church, of which he was a class leader for a number of years. They had a family of eleven children: Mary Jane, who was married to I. O. Gibbs; J. D. Truitt, a lawyer at Yates City; John T.; Margaret L., who married Dunaham Drake; T. J. Truitt; William F.; Harvey J.; Isaac M.; Laura E., who married John G. Grey; Joseph H.; E. E. Truitt, a physician in Maquon, and graduated at Keokuk College, Iowa. Mr. T. J. Truitt is fifth in this family and is unmarried. He is a republican and has been School Director for nine years.

VANCE, S. L.; Farmer; Elba Township; born February 3, 1861, at Highland County, Ohio. Educated in the common schools. His father was Andrew Vance, born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania; his mother was Harriet Kibler of Highland County, Ohio; his paternal grandparents were David and Hannah Vance of Maryland. His great-grandfather, Thomas Vance, and his maternal grandmother, Margaret Strain, were from Ohio; his great-grandfather was John Strain. Mr. Vance was married March 3, 1892, in Galesburg to Letty Riner. She was born in Toulon, Stark County, August 22, 1870, and is the daughter of Mathew and Margaret Riner. They have one child, Carmon R. R., born March 19, 1896. The grandparents of Mrs. Vance were John and Elizabeth (Douglas) Wingader; the great-grandfather came from Germany, and died January 25, 1894; the great-grandmother came from Scotland and was born September 4, 1809, and died April 28, 1878. Her grandparents on the father's side were Peter Riner of Virginia, born March 8, 1803, and Margaret (Kelly) Riner, born October 8, 1808, died January 1, 1873. Mr. Vance came, in 1868, with his father to Section 36, where they have a farm of two hundred and eighty acres. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, Lodge No. 301, Yates City. Mr. Vance is a democrat.

WHITING, EDWARD; Farmer; Elba Township; born October 5, 1856, at Kickapoo, Illinois; educated in the Kickapoo schools. His father and grandfather were called William Whiting and came from Sussex County, England; his mother, Jane (Cummings) Whiting, came from Portage County, Ohio; his maternal grandmother was Susan Cummings. He was married January 1, 1884, in Elba Township, to Ettie Patterson, who was born in Elba Township, October 23, 1861, and is the daughter of James and Elizabeth (Marshall) Patterson of Preble County, Ohio. James Patterson was married in 1847, and came to Elba Township in 1849. Their children are: Etha Z., born November 13, 1884, and James Kirby, born November 14, 1885. Mr. Whiting has a fine residence and fine farm of one hundred and ten acres on Section 25, three and one half miles northeast of Yates City. In addition, he manages his father-in-law's farm. In politics, he is a republican.

WOOLSEY, WILLIAM; Farmer; Elba Township; born in Haw Creek Township, August 11, 1861. His father, David Woolsey, was born in Ulster County, New York; his mother, Mildred (Logan) was born in Virginia. His paternal grandparents were Hezekiah and Hannah (Cutter) Woolsey. August 23, 1883, Mr. Woolsey was married in Knoxville to Norah M. Taylor. They have two children, Forest Taylor, born June 18, 1884, and Harley H., born April 4, 1886. Mrs. Woolsey was born in 1860. Her parents were Abraham and Emeline (Cartright) Taylor. The father is dead; the mother is living in Caldwell County, Missouri. Mr. Woolsey is a republican in politics. He has been Assessor of the town of Elba, and School Director a number of terms. He is a member of the Odd Fellows, No. 256, Maquon; also of the Modern Woodmen of America, in the lodge located at Douglas. His farm of one hundred and forty-three acres is on Section 6.

HAW CREEK TOWNSHIP.

By Charles W. McKown.

In its natural features this is, perhaps, one of the most attractive townships in Knox County. About two-thirds of its area consists of prairie, and the remainder of timber land. The latter lies chiefly on the east and west, where the surface is more hilly. The central portion of the township, from north to south, is a rich fertile prairie, mainly flat, yet sufficiently rolling to afford excellent natural drainage. The Spoon river is the principal stream, into which flow numerous small tributaries on either side, the most important of which is Haw Creek, on the west. These streams aid in drainage and also afford excellent watering facilities for stock. The Spoon enters the township at its northeast corner, and, after pursuing a devious course, flows out in Section 35.

There is an underlying vein of bituminous coal along the water courses, but as it is only from twenty to twenty-eight inches thick, it cannot be profitably worked for general commerce, although more or less is mined for local consumption.

The chief industry of the people is agriculture, while some live stock is raised for exterior markets. The principal crops are corn, wheat, oats and rye; while a little buckwheat and barley are also raised. The farms are well improved, and the farmers progressive, and always on the alert to test new ideas, adopting such as they believe tend to their real betterment.

The population consists almost wholly of native born Americans, there being but few foreigners. Of colored people there are none. Sobriety and industry are well nigh universal, and illiteracy is unknown.

The first white family to settle in the township was that of Mrs. Elizabeth Gilmore Owen, a widow, who was accompanied by her son, Parnach, and her two daughters, Thalia N. and Althea, who came from Ohio in 1829, and entered a claim in Section 18. Their neighbors were few and remote, the two nearest being Perry Morris, who lived on Section 33 of Knox Township, and a family who operated a primitive ferry across the Spoon river, at Maquon. Parnach Owen was a land speculator, and the conduct of his business necessarily involved long absences from home, during which periods the women of the household relied one upon the other for mutual protection. But they were of the strong fiber which ran through the frames of those pioneer women of Illinois, who became the mothers and grandmothers of a hardy, stalwart race. They despised nothing so much as cowardice and they were themselves no weaklings, being abundantly able to wield a hunting knife alike in the slaughter of a deer or in defense of their honor.

Two years after their arrival in Haw Creek the Owen family removed to Knoxville. Parnach Owen was prominent in the organization of the county and was made its first official surveyor. He died at Prairie LaPorte, Iowa, about 1845, at the age of forty-seven. Mrs. Elizabeth G. Owen died at Knoxville, March 6, 1839, in her seventy-fifth year. She and her children, brave in the face of danger, and dauntless before obstacles, are among those who laid the foundations of civilization in Knox County. Thalia N. Owen married Dr. E. D. Rice, of Lewiston, Illinois, and died there in 1880, at the age of seventy-seven years. Her sister Althea became the wife of John G. Sanburn, of Knoxville, on November 3, 1831. To him she bore seven children. One of her sons—Francis G.—was president of the Farmers' National Bank of that place. She died there, having reached the same age as her sister—seventy-seven.

About a year after the Owen family, came James Nevitt, Samuel Slocum, David Teel, and David Enochs. They were followed by Woodford Pearce, David Housh, Joshua Burnett, Jacob Harshbarger, Linnaeus Richmond, William W. Dickerson and others; so that by 1833 or '34 there was a well grown settlement here.

Charles Nevitt, a son of James, was the first white child born in Haw Creek (1832). The first death was that of Eleanor Jarnigan, in 1834. The first sermon was preached by the noted pioneer, Rev. Peter Cartwright, in 1831. Revs. Richard Haney and William Clark were also early in the field as Methodist circuit riders. The first school was taught in 1836, by Susan Dempsey. She is now the aged widow of Booker Pickrel, and lives in Gilson. The first church was built in 1864, on Section 17, and about one year afterward two others were erected in Gilson. From this statement, however, it should not be inferred that the people had no places of worship prior to 1864. Every school house in the township was used for that purpose, beside regular old fashioned camp meetings in the groves.

James Nevitt built the first frame house in the township, in 1835, and Woodford Pearce erected the first brick dwelling.

Enoch Godfrey, James Nevitt and George Benson garnered the first grain crops, in 1832. The first road laid out was the State road from Knoxville to Farmington, in 1836. This soon became a regular stage route, and before long a village sprang up along the line of travel in Section 18, and became an occasional stopping place for stage coaches, although not, in those days, what was considered a regular station. This was the nucleus of what became, later, the village of Mechanicsburg.

In the early days of the township, the only available markets for farm produce were along the Illinois and Mississippi rivers and on Lake Michigan. Loads of grain were hauled to Chicago, nearly two hundred miles away; the sellers bringing back salt, shingles and general merchandise. Now, the Peoria and Galesburg branch of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road enters Haw Creek at the southwest corner of Section 6 and leaves it at the southeast corner of Section 33, and Gilson is the only station within the township limits.

Township organization was effected at a meeting held at the Nevitt school house on April 5, 1853, by the election of the following officers: William M. Clark, Supervisor; Woodford Pearce, Clerk; Isaac Lotts, Assessor; Joseph Harshbarger, Collector; Jacob Wolf, Overseer of the Poor; John S. Linn and Enoch Godfrey, Justices of the Peace; George Pickrel and William Lewis, Constables; Milton Lotts, Allen T. Rambo and Benoni Simpkins, Commissioners of Highways. A complete list of town clerks from the first election down to the present time is given below. A similar list of supervisors may be found in the chapter relating to county government.

In 1853, Woodford Pearce; 1854, Joel Harshbarger; 1855-'57, William Swigart; 1858, William H. Eastman; 1859, Samuel Caulkins; 1860, Peter Lacy; 1861, W. J. McCulloch; 1862, William H. Eastman; 1863-'65, William P. Kellar; 1866, E. K. Coe; 1867, Joseph Harshbarger; 1869, C. W. McKown; 1870-'73, S. M. Ickes; 1874, A. L. Barr; 1875-'76, B. A. Hill; 1877, Joseph Cramer; 1878, B. A. Hill; 1879, J. M. Cravens; 1880-'81, O. J. Aldrich; 1882-'84, B. A. Hill; 1885-'86, O. J. Aldrich; 1887-'89, C. W. McKown; 1890-'96, William M. Gardner; 1897-'99, James Moore.

There are three regularly organized churches in Haw Creek, two in the village of Gilson and one in Section 3. The Methodist Episcopal Church at Gilson was organized in 1857. The present edifice was erected in 1864, and is worth about eight hundred and fifty dollars. Its first pastor was Rev. G. M. Iriom, and the clergyman now in charge is Rev. S. E. Steele. There are some ninety active members. The other Gilson church is connected with the United Brethren, and has about forty-eight members. Wolf (or Union) Chapel (also United Brethren), on Section 3, has a membership of nearly sixty.

In addition to these organized bodies, there is a tract of land devoted to the holding of annual camp meetings. The history of the allotment of this ground for this purpose is of interest in this connection.

Pursuant to a notice published in the Knox County Republican, calling for the organization of a camp ground association, the Knox County Methodists met in Orange Chapel, September 19, 1868, and elected Peter Godfrey, J. C. Elwell, and Joshua Burnett, Jr., trustees to purchase and hold land for a permanent camp ground. They bought of N. G. Clark eleven and four-fifths acres of ground for four hundred and seventy-four dollars. On September 3, 1869, the number of trustees was increased to nine, and on October 5, 1872, another acre purchased for fifty-five dollars. The camp ground is on the line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway, a mile southeast of Gilson. It is well adapted for picnics as well as camp meetings. A good fence, horse corral, and buildings have been put up, and wells dug, at a cost of about fifteen hundred dollars. The camp meeting begins the Tuesday before the fourth Sunday in each August, and lasts one week. Since 1882 a gate fee has been charged all visitors. From the proceeds thus obtained the improvements have been made, and about eight hundred dollars are in the treasury. The present trustees are: E. H. Arnold, President; E. J. Young, Secretary and Treasurer; A. Dean, H. Shoop, J. M. Vangilder, E. Cramer, G. G. Moore, J. W. Davis and A. Bruner. Messrs. Arnold and Young have been on the Board for over twenty years.

There are eight common schools, one of which (that at Gilson) is a graded school. The buildings are frame, but well constructed, with a view to adapting them to their use. The attendance includes nearly all the children of the township within the legal limits of the school age. The teachers are selected with great care, and the salaries are sufficient to ensure competence. In fact, the Gilson school won two of the premiums awarded at the State fair of 1878.

Gilson and Mechanicsburg are the two villages. The former is situated in the southeast corner of Section 7, and has a population of about one hundred and fifty souls. It is not incorporated. Its business establishments comprise six stores, two blacksmith shops, two carpenter shops, a harness shop, and a grain elevator.

The settlement of Mechanicsburg antedates that of Gilson. The first store in the village was kept by Edmund Smith, and the first industrial establishments were wagon and blacksmith shops. A postoffice was established May 7, 1852, and named—by the government—Haw Creek. Joseph Harshbarger was the first postmaster, and was succeeded, September 16, 1852, by Allen T. Rambo. Woodford Pearce followed him on March 17, 1855, and on March 5, 1857, the office was removed to Gilson, which was then a railway station, and Mechanicsburg fell asleep.

Samuel B. Anderson.

Of the early settlers of the township, many moved away, but the descendants of some of those who remained are numerous. Some of the most familiar family names are Housh, Pickrel, Richmond, and Burnett.

There was a large grist mill built at an early day in Section 34, on the Spoon River, which did a flourishing business for many years, but the flow of water in the river grew less and less, until the miller could obtain power during only about seven months in the year. As a result, the enterprise was abandoned; but the building and machinery were removed to Maquon, where they were utilized in the construction of a steam mill.

In 1849 a "cholera scare" was occasioned by the arrival of three immigrant families—Stanford, Richardson and Foster—who came by water to Peoria and finally located in the northeastern part of Haw Creek Township. The scourge appeared shortly after their arrival, and the community was not a little perturbed. Mr. Stanford, Mrs. Fred Foster, Mrs. Thomas Richardson and two of her children, and William Richardson died, but fortunately the disease spread no farther.

One of the most exciting episodes in the history of the township occurred in August, 1877, and was of sufficient importance to be worthy of mentioning in some detail. On Sunday, the fifth of that month, while the family of Mr. Woodford Pearce, of Gilson, was at church, a tramp entered their home, and, after ransacking the premises, departed with a miscellaneous assortment of personal property, including seventy-five dollars in money. On the discovery of the theft a hue and cry was raised, and a posse was soon in hot pursuit. The culprit was discovered eating his dinner in a grove near by. He was armed, and, on seeing the approach of his would-be captors, he retreated to a cornfield, firing as he fled. His shots were returned, and during the fusillade William Kellar was shot in the ankle. Reinforcements were sent for, and soon the field was surrounded by two hundred men and boys. The tramp was discovered and again took flight, firing as he ran. A horse ridden by James Pickrel was wounded and the rider's knee bruised. Another horse, carrying Charles Masten and Charles Cramer, was shot through the neck and killed, and a bullet through the heart killed Charles Belden. The tramp also exchanged shots with Charles W. McKown at short range (less than fifteen feet), the former receiving a slight flesh wound in the arm and side, the latter was shot through the left lung, the bullet lodging in the muscles of the back, where it still remains. Under cover of the night the quarry made good his escape. He had cast aside his shirt and vest, however, and these were discovered. In one of the pockets of the latter was found an express receipt given to Frank Rande. This clew led to his ultimate capture, in St. Louis, through the skillfully directed efforts of Frank Hitchcock, then Sheriff of Peoria County, but not until after he had committed another robbery at the house of John R. Scoles, near St. Elmo, Illinois, killing Mr. Scoles and another man and dangerously wounding a third, as he was making his escape from an excited, infuriated troop of pursuers.

Before being overpowered at St. Louis, he also killed one of the policemen assisting in making the arrest. A reward of one thousand dollars was offered and paid for his apprehension. He was taken to Galesburg, where he was tried, convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment in the Joliet penitentiary, where, seven years later, he broke the Warden's skull with an iron bar and was shot by a prison guard.

Recently a mineral spring has been discovered on Section 34. The water is said to be very potent in curing disease, and has been shipped far and near for use of invalids, barrels of it having gone as far as Oregon. The surrounding grounds are being beautified, and preparations are in progress for erecting a large hospital near the spring.

GILSON.

A brief reference has been already made to the village of Gilson, but its relative prominence in the township justifies a more extended notice.

The village was laid out July 10, 1857, on the southeast quarter of Section 7, by Linneus Richmond and James Gilson, for whom it was named. The location was good,—just on the edge of the timber land along Haw Creek, eleven miles from Galesburg, on the Peoria branch of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway. The engines first in use on this line burned wood, and a large trade grew up in that species of fuel. Indeed, Gilson now seems to have been laid out on an open prairie, so thoroughly has the timber been cleaned away.

The first school house was put up before Gilson came into existence, and was used until about 1872, when the present structure was erected. The school is graded. There are two churches—Methodist Episcopal and United Brethren in Christ. The present population is about one hundred and fifty. The business is mostly confined to trade with surrounding farmers. There are two hotels, two barber shops, and an apiary of one hundred colonies of bees.

The postoffice was established March 6, 1857, with David Richmond as postmaster. His successors have been Woodford Pearce, May 21, 1857; J. S. Linn, March 4, 1859; John Love, June 23, 1860; James Moore, December 16, 1860; Jonas Ickes, January 6, 1865; W. J. McCulloch, May 24, 1870; B. A. Hill, November 23, 1885; Morris Blanchard, June 4, 1886; Jennie Utter, May 29, 1889; Morris Blanchard, September 27, 1893; G. W. Bushong, August 7, 1897. It is a money order office, and has a large patronage.

Gilson Camp of the Modern Woodmen was organized August 31, 1895, with ten members. First officers: J. E. Scott, V. C.; J. F. Conner, W. A.; J. N. Woolsey, B.; J. H. Baird, Clerk. In November, 1898, there were fifty-two beneficiary and five social members. There has never been a death in the camp. Present officers: J. F. Conner, V. C.; C. L. Dossett, W. A.; A. R. Holloway, E. B.; J. K. Newman, Clerk; E. H. McElwain, E.; W. S. Steepleton, S.; C. H. Upp, W.; J. B. Miller, Physician; C. H. Upp, Robert Sumner and D. A. Hughes, Managers.

SAMUEL BURNS ANDERSON.

Samuel Burns Anderson was born in 1801 in Greenbriar County, Virginia. His father, Archibald Anderson, was a native of the same State. In 1829, near Union, Ohio, he married Miss Irene F. Watts. Six children were born to them: Mrs. Elizabeth Huggins; Henry Clay (deceased); Daniel W., of Oregon; Mrs. Malinda A. Wright (deceased); Mrs. Mary E. Couse (deceased); and Samuel C. (deceased).

Both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were brought up by the Shakers of Union Village, Ohio. Mr. Anderson went to them when he was only seven years old, and from them learned his trade, that of a blacksmith, which he followed many years. He was also a good machinist and turner, having served an apprenticeship of seven years in these trades. He was a giant in strength, one of his feats being to lift two anvils by the horns and strike them together.

After his marriage Mr. Anderson settled in Monroe, Butler County, Ohio. In 1835 he moved to Knox County, Illinois, and settled in Haw Creek and Orange townships, opening a shop and also farming one hundred and sixty acres of land. He brought with him from Ohio three short-horn cattle, among the first in the county, and from them raised a valuable herd. He was also for a long time the largest buyer of hogs in the county, driving them to Peoria and Galena.

Mr. Anderson was County Commissioner when there were but three in the county, which office he held for many years. At that time there was but one pauper in the entire county, and Mr. Anderson kept and cared for her. In politics, he was a republican.

Mr. Anderson died at the age of seventy-two, honored and respected by the community. His wife died at the age of eighty-six.

CHARLES HUBBARD HUGGINS.

Charles Hubbard Huggins, son of David and Cynthia (Bartlett) Huggins, was born in Orleans County, Vermont, November 27, 1826. David Huggins was born in Cornish, New Hampshire, May 14, 1787. In 1834 he came, with his son Nathaniel, to Knoxville, Illinois, and purchased land in Knox Township, and town lots in Knoxville, and then returned to Vermont. In the fall of the same year he removed with his family to Knox County, via Burlington, Vermont; Lake Champlain; Troy, New York;

Erie Canal to Buffalo, New York; by boat to Cleveland, Ohio; by canal to Portsmouth, Ohio; thence down the Ohio River, and up the Mississippi and Illinois rivers to Beardstown, Illinois; thence by ox-team and horse-team to Knox Township. The Huggins family was the seventh that settled in Knoxville.

Mr. C. H. Huggins obtained his education in Knoxville, and learned the carpenter's trade with his half-brother, Edson. He followed that occupation five years; and then, for four years, very successfully operated a saw mill on Court Creek; he afterwards purchased a farm in Persifer Township, on which he worked till 1862. He was married in Galesburg, Illinois, April 5, 1849, to Elizabeth J., daughter of Samuel B. Anderson, an old settler in Knox Township. Mr. and Mrs. Huggins have had no children, but they brought up ten, two of whom they adopted: Alpha B., wife of Dr. L. A. Burr; and Hubbard Huggins, who was the son of James Anderson; one of the ten children reared by them was Cora E. Anderson, daughter of Mrs. Huggins's youngest brother.

In April, 1862, Mr. and Mrs. Huggins started across the western plains with a team of horses, in a large company that, part of the way, had nine hundred wagons. Their special company had fifteen wagons, Anthony Colwell being its Captain; Edson Huggins, brother of Charles H., was also a member of the company; they arrived in Oregon in October. Mr. Huggins farmed a year near Salem, Oregon, and then removed to Boise City, Idaho, where he kept the Idaho Hotel for three years, afterwards conducting a dairy in which he had fifty cows. He made 6,000 pounds of butter, which was sold for one dollar and a quarter a pound in gold, when greenbacks were worth only fifty cents on the dollar. He carried a cooking stove into Boise City on horseback. He and his partner, George Russell, bought sixty pack horses in Salem, Oregon, and, loading them with provisions, went through to Boise City. Mr. Huggins managed the hotel while Mr. Russell "packed" back and forth between Boise City and Umatilla, on the Columbia River. The usual cost of packing goods on that line into Boise City was twenty-five cents a pound, and the price of provisions was something remarkable; live hogs brought a dollar a pound, and chickens, large or small, a dollar a piece. They had eighty regular boarders at the hotel, and were prepared for as many "transients," who paid a dollar for lodging, and furnished their own bedding. They finally sold out and went to San Francisco, where they took passage for New York City, via Panama. They started from Boise City, January 1, 1867, traveled three hundred miles by stage, then by water to New York, reaching Knoxville, Illinois, February 19.

After returning from Idaho, Mr. Huggins conducted a general store in Gilson, Haw Creek Township, for four years, when he sold out and turned his attention to farming. For his place of residence, he located in Haw Creek Township on the old homestead of Samuel B. Anderson, his wife's father, where he has a farm of two hundred and seventy-seven acres of choice land, and where he conducted a dairy till 1898. In addition to his farm, he owns three hundred acres of pasture land.

Mr. and Mrs. Huggins are members of the Presbyterian Church in Knoxville. They have always been influential members of society in Knox county and have been honored in many ways. For sixteen years he has been a member of the Executive Committee of the Knox County Agricultural Society. While in Gilson, he was Superintendent of the Sunday school.

Mr. Huggins is a republican. He has always taken a deep interest in whatever pertained to the welfare of Knox County, and the community in which he lived.

DAVID WOOLSEY.

David Woolsey was born in Ulster County, New York, January 3, 1828. His parents, Hezekiah and Hannah (Cutler) Woolsey, were born in Dutchess County, New York. His father died in Ohio, and his mother in Elmwood, Illinois. The old Woolsey family came from England, and the grandmother and great-grandmother on the father's side were born in Holland. The paternal grandparents were William Woolsey, born in New York, and Hannah (Wright) Woolsey; his maternal grandparents were David and Patience (Sheldon) Cutler, born in New England.

Mr. Woolsey was educated in the common schools of Ohio. In 1849, he came alone to Knox County, where, at the age of twenty-one, he was the happy possessor of fifty dollars in cash. For several years he built fences, made rails, and did such work as he could get from the older settlers. He was first married August 25, 1850, to Elizabeth Fry, who was born in Ohio, May 25, 1828. She was fifth in a family of twelve children. Mr. and Mrs. Woolsey had three children: Lefee A., Hezekiah, and William Cyrus, all of whom died when young.

Mr. Woolsey married for his second wife Mildred, daughter of Alexander and Elizabeth (Wright) Logan May 4, 1856. She was born in Virginia, April 27, 1837. The children of this union are: Alva, who married Flora Hall and lives in Elba Township; Alonzo, deceased; Louisa, deceased; William, married to Nora Taylor; Arzella, the wife of Frank E. Nelson; Deborah, deceased; Lenora M., married William Chase, and lives in Haw Creek Township; Julia A., the wife of Milton Sherman, of Oklahoma; Charles, living in Truro Township; Adelbert, deceased; and Clyde, now living in Haw Creek.

Mr. Woolsey farmed in Maquon, Chestnut, and Haw Creek Township, remaining for five years in the latter. He purchased one hundred and fifty acres of land in Haw Creek Township, and began his residence there in 1865. He greatly improved his farm and added to it, until, at the present time, he owns six hundred and thirty-one acres in Knox County. He is a very successful and progressive farmer, and is considered one of the best stock men in the county. Mr. and Mrs. Woolsey are identified with the United Brethren Church, and contribute largely toward its support. They are noted in the community for their kindness of heart and unostentatious charity.

BENNETT, JOSEPH, deceased; Farmer; Haw Creek Township; born in Milton, Saratoga County, New York, November 22, 1818. His parents were William Bennett and Lydia (Hathaway). August 25, 1839, he was married to Lois C. Wilcox in Onandaga County, New York. Four of their children are living: Mrs. Hellen L. Pearce, Chicago; Mrs. L. Adeline Foote, Kansas; Mrs. Lois A. Housh; and Joseph Bennett, Jr. Mrs. Bennett's father, Asel Wilcox, a native of Massachusetts, was a pioneer of Illinois, and bought several farms, one of them, on which his daughter settled, being located in Knox County; he was a Master Mason. His daughter, Lois C., was born November 6, 1813, in Manlius, Onandaga County, New York. His wife, Hellen (Foster), was a native of New York. Lois C. (Wilcox) Bennett was educated in New York and taught school there for ten years. At the age of thirteen she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church and has been a member for more than seventy-three years, and a Sunday school teacher for nearly seventy years. She is a remarkable woman and a good manager, and at the age of eighty-five her mind is bright and active. Joseph Bennett, senior, and family came to Illinois in 1855, and to Knox County in 1858. They settled in Haw Creek Township, where the family owned one hundred and sixty acres of land, to which Mrs. Bennett later added ninety acres. Mr. Bennett was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he was a republican. He died in Haw Creek Township November 11, 1875.

CLARK, SALINA E.; Haw Creek Township; born in Maquon Township, Knox County, Illinois, June 4, 1848, on the old Selby homestead. Her parents were Philemon B. Selby of Lancaster, Ohio, and Elizabeth (Gullett) Selby. Her first marriage was with Franklin Thurman. Two children were born to them, Mrs. Florence Odell, and Mrs. Mary Kromer. Her second marriage was with Thomas A. Clark, son of Rev. William Clark of Knox County. They have four children: Mrs. Jennie Burnside; William E.; Katie; Frederick. Mr. Clark was Road Commissioner, and has been School Director for fifteen years. He is a successful farmer.

DICKERSON, JAMES T.; Farmer; Haw Creek Township, where he was born January 21, 1848. His father, William Wright Dickerson, was born in White County, Illinois, August 3, 1820, and died August 11, 1885; his mother, Sarah (Housh) Dickerson, died in 1863; they were the parents of eleven children, seven of whom reached maturity: Mrs. Mary Morss, Mrs. Phebe Morss, James T., Mrs. Elizabeth Carter, William, Mrs. Eliza J. Woolsey, and Mrs. Martha Dennis. In 1865, his father married again, the second wife being Elizabeth (Highfield) Dickerson; two children were born to them: John B., deceased; and Frank Wilson. His grandparents, Louis Dickerson, of Georgia, and Elizabeth (Beck) Dickerson, of South Carolina, were among the early settlers in the State. James T. Dickerson was married in Peoria County, March 27, 1876, to Melvina Connor. Mr. Dickerson is a practical farmer and owns three hundred and thirty-three acres of land in Haw Creek Township, besides timber land. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, having joined Maquon Lodge, No. 530, when twenty-one years of age. Mr. Dickerson is a democrat.

LACY, GEORGE LAMBKIN; Farmer; Haw Creek Township; born on the Lacy homestead in Haw Creek Township, February 21, 1858; educated in Knox County. His father is Peter Lacy of Knoxville. December 28, 1881, Mr. Lacy was married in Knox County to Olive L. Russell; they have four children: Rettie E., Clarence R., Thomas E., and Mary F. Mrs. Lacy is the daughter of David and Mary A. (Rambo) Russell, old settlers of Knox County. Mr. Lacy was reared on the farm, and has one hundred and sixty acres of land, comprising the old homestead. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. In religion, he is a Methodist. In politics, he is a democrat.

LOTTS, MILTON; Farmer; Haw Creek Township; born in Gallia County, Ohio, January 1, 1823. His father, Isaac Lotts, was born in Greenbrier County, West Virginia; his mother, Nancy (Knox), in Monroe County of the same State. His maternal grandparents, James and Sarah (Robinson) Knox, were natives of Virginia; his paternal grandparents were Jacob Lotts, a native of Germany and a soldier in the Revolution, and Elizabeth (Wolf), a sister of General Wolf of Revolutionary fame. Mr. Lotts came to Knox County with his parents in 1837. His father died October 4, 1875, aged eighty-three years; his mother, September 26, 1875, aged seventy-six years. Mr. Lotts inherited a part of the homestead on which he was reared, and later bought the remainder from the other heirs. To this he has added by purchase until he now owns seven hundred acres of good land. March 13, 1845, Mr. Lotts was married to Elizabeth Ward, near Gilson, Illinois. Eight children were born to them: Mrs. Larissa Caldwell; Mrs. Fidelia Scott; Jared W.; Mrs. Sarah S. Young, deceased; Arthur W.; Delesca, wife of L. E. McPherris; James Oscar; and Ella, who died in 1886. Mrs. Lotts died May 1, 1879, at the age of fifty-four years. In politics, Mr. Lotts is a democrat. He was Supervisor in 1861, 1862 and 1863, and has held other local offices.

McKOWN, CHARLES WESLEY; Apiarist; Haw Creek Township; born March 14, 1840, in Fulton County, Illinois; educated in the common schools. His parents were William McKown of Ireland, who was born November 22, 1785, and died April 6, 1865, and Sarah Davis of Hamilton County, Ohio, born December 8, 1796, and died January 24, 1888. Mr. McKown was married in Gilson March 11, 1866, to Sarah W. Ward. His second marriage was with Rebecca C. Traxler, March 24, 1885. Three of their children are living: Frank T., Henry C., and Daisy. Mr. McKown came with his parents to Knox County in the Fall of 1858, and settled in Haw Creek Township, where he farmed until 1862. He enlisted in Company F, Eighty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain J. L. Burkhalter. He fought in the following battles: Perryville, Chickamauga, Kenasaw Mountains, Mission Ridge, through the Atlanta campaign, at Jonesburg, and with Sherman in his famous "March to the Sea." He participated in the Grand Review at Washington at the close of the war, and was honorably discharged June 6, 1865. After his return to Knox County he taught school, and, after his marriage, settled on a farm for two years. He then became a merchant in Gilson, and in 1876, sold out and became an apiarist. In 1889, his ability and success was recognized by his appointment to the position of United States Gauger at Peoria, which he held for five years. He then returned to Gilson and continued his work as an apiarist, often producing as many as ten thousand pounds of honey in a season. Mr. McKown is a Royal Arch Mason. He has also been Adjutant and Quartermaster of the Eighty-sixth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry Reunion Association since its organization in 1887. In politics, he is a republican.

MILLER, DR. JOHN B.; Gilson, Haw Creek Township; Physician; born in Delavan, Tazewell County, Illinois, October 22, 1852; educated in the High Schools of Illinois. Dr. Miller's paternal grandfather, William Miller, was of Scotch descent. His son, George W. Miller, father of Dr. Miller, was born in New Albany, Indiana, and, soon after his birth, the family moved to Kentucky, and from there to Lawrence County, Illinois. He became a Methodist minister and married Elizabeth Westfall, a native of Lawrence County, and the daughter of Isaac Westfall. Dr. Miller studied medicine one year with Drs. Wright and Laney in Canton, Illinois, and, after moving with his father to Gilson, he studied two years with Dr. D. W. Aldrich in that place, and then attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Keokuk, Iowa, where he graduated in 1873. He settled immediately in Bonaparte, Iowa, but after nine months, returned to Gilson, where he married and then settled in Orion, Henry County, Illinois. After a short time he returned to Gilson, where he conducted a drug store for about a year and a half. After practicing three years in Eugene, he returned to Gilson, where he built up a good practice. Dr. Miller has been twice married. His first wife was Cordelia A. Ward, whom he married in Gilson, where she died, leaving two children: Pearl, wife of George Robertson; and Ward. His second wife was Virginia E., daughter of John D. Moore, an old settler of Orange Township. Of this union there are four children living: Settie May, Joy McC., Bettie, and Lucy Lavon. George B., a twin brother of Bettie, died at the age of eight months. Dr. Miller is a free religionist. In politics, he is a republican. His official positions have been school offices. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and of the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a popular and intelligent physician, honored and loved by all who know him.

MURPHY, JOHN; Farmer; Haw Creek Township; born August 20, 1820, in County Kilkenny, Ireland. His parents were Nicholas and Ellen (Hearn) Murphy, natives of Ireland, where they died. Mr. Murphy came to the United States at the age of twenty-eight, and was pioneer of the Murphy family in this country. He landed at New Orleans and from there came by boat to St. Louis, where he worked in a warehouse from March till September, 1849. He then came to Peoria, and afterwards, with some Knox County farmers, Joshua Davis, John Walter and son, Thomas, and Milo Preston, came to Knox County. For ten years he worked by the month for P. B. Selby, after which he bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which he improved and upon which he now lives. Mr. Murphy was married to Catharine (Cullinane), of Ireland. They had a large family of children, seven of whom are living: Nellie; Molly; Julia, wife of Levi McGirr; Dennis; James; Michael, and Daniel. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy are members of the Roman Catholic Church. In politics, Mr. Murphy is a democrat, and has been School Director for seven years.

RAMP, BENJAMIN; Farmer; Haw Creek Township; born in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, November 20, 1815. The family is of German descent. Mr. Ramp moved to Miami County, Ohio, in 1844, and thence to Knox County, Illinois, in 1848, and settled on Section 3, Haw Creek Township. October 26, 1837, Mr. Ramp was married to Sarah Mapps. They have had thirteen children: Elizabeth, wife of John W. Cook, died January 14, 1862; William; Mary Jane, wife of Henry Bell; John, died August 11, 1842; David; Aaron, died January 14, 1854; Benjamin, died June 5, 1850; Samuel; Jesse M., died October 31, 1853; Asa M.; Cephas A.; James W.; and Charles A. Mr. Ramp's second daughter was first married to Mr. Epperson; there was one son, William B. Epperson. Her second marriage was to Henry R. Bell. Six children were born to them: Milton; Lawrence; Estella, now Mrs. Evans; Arthur; Lillie; and Luetta Ella. Henry R. Bell's father was Henry Bell, an old settler, and ex-Sheriff of Knox County. Mr. Bell was born in Knox County, and is a farmer in Haw Creek Township. In politics, he is a democrat. Mr. Ramp owned two thousand acres of land in Haw Creek, Truro, and Persifer townships, all, except three hundred acres of pasture, being under cultivation. All this he accumulated in spite of successive accidents by which he lost first a leg and then an arm. After recovering from the first accident, he had but little property, and was in debt for treatment. Mr. and Mrs. Ramp were members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Ramp was a republican. He held several local offices, and was for four years Justice of the Peace.

REBSTOCK, JAMES; Farmer; Haw Creek Township; born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, April 14, 1839; educated in the county schools. His father, Emanuel Rebstock, was born in Maryland, while his mother, Mary (Rolanbaugh), was a native of Germany, as were also her parents, John and Emily Rolanbaugh. Emanuel Rebstock died in Ohio at the age of thirty-five, when James was only nine years of age; the boy lived among strangers, who did not send him to school nor properly clothe him. When he was fifteen years old he was earning six dollars a month with a farmer in Pulaski County, Indiana; the following year he received eight dollars a month. At the age of sixteen he entered forty acres of land for fifty dollars. In the Winter of 1858, he came to Knox County, and at the age of nineteen, he was earning fourteen dollars a month. In 1861, he traded his forty acres, and in 1867, bought property in Haw Creek Township. In 1862, Mr. Rebstock enlisted in Company G, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteers, and after serving two years as a private, was commissioned by Abraham Lincoln as First Lieutenant in the Eighth Colored Heavy Artillery. He was not mustered out until March, 1866, when he returned to Knox County and settled on a farm near Gilson. In Gilson, July 26, 1866, Mr. Rebstock was married to Mrs. Salinda Pickrel, daughter of Isaac Lotts. In religion, he is a Methodist. He is a republican. He has held many offices, and is now Supervisor, having been elected in 1880, holding the office continuously, with the exception of four years. In his official capacity he has rendered the county valuable service. Mr. Rebstock is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the A. F. and A. M. He has been prosperous in his business enterprises.

SCOTT, WILLIAM; Merchant; Gilson, Haw Creek Township; born in Highland County, Ohio, November 13, 1843. His father, Henry Scott, was a native of Virginia; his mother, Margaret (Burnett) Scott, was a native of Delaware. At the age of seventeen years, Mr. Scott enlisted in Company D, Sixtieth Ohio Infantry, and served twelve months; after his discharge he re-enlisted in the Twenty-fourth Battery, Ohio Light Artillery, and served till June, 1865, having participated in important battles. He was captured by General Jackson and released on parole. After the close of the war, Mr. Scott came to Illinois, in September, 1865, and entered Hedding College, at Abingdon, teaching at times to pay his way. In 1868, he returned to Ohio, and the next year entered the Normal School at Lebanon, in that State. In 1869, he returned to Illinois and resumed teaching. In 1871, he removed to Adams County, Nebraska, where he taught school, but again became a citizen of Knox County in 1874, and for four years taught school in and about Gilson. In 1878, he opened a store for general merchandise at Gilson. He has prospered in business and owns two farms, one in Nebraska and one in Knox County. He is a member of the United Brethren, and a steward in the church. He is a republican. March 23, 1879, Mr. Scott was married to Amanda E. Lawrence, daughter of John and Abigail (Farlow) Lawrence, old settlers in this county. They have three children: Carl L., Floreth B., and Jewel E.

STEVENSON, WILLIAM C.; Farmer; Haw Creek Township; born in Franklin County, Ohio, February 26, 1836; educated in Knox County. His father, Edward Stevenson, was born in Maryland; his mother, Mary (Keys), was born in Delaware. Mary Keys's father's name was James. Edward Stevenson's parents, Zacharia and Sarah, were born in Maryland, as was also Zacharia's father, John, who was of English descent. William C. Stevenson was married to Charlotte A. Ouder Kirk, the daughter of Jacob and Nancy (Waffle) Ouder Kirk, at her home in Haw Creek Township, February 24, 1859. They have two children, Mrs. Elsie Reynolds and Ethmer V. Stevenson. Mr. Stevenson came to Knox County in 1841, with his parents. They spent three years in Jones County, Iowa, but later returned to Knox County. He has been a successful farmer, and has three hundred and thirty-five acres of land in Maquon, Haw Creek, and Orange townships. In 1865, he moved to his own farm in Maquon Township and lived there till 1893, when he settled on the old Jacob Ouder Kirk place, in Haw Creek Township. In politics, Mr. Stevenson is a populist, and holds the position of School Trustee.

WEST, MARY ANN; Haw Creek Township; born in Indiana January 5, 1819; daughter of Joshua Gullett; educated in the common schools of Indiana; came to Knox County May 31, 1838. She was married to Samuel West, who was born in Vermont, April 25, 1807, and died in Knox County January 31, 1860. Mr. West's parents were John and Anna West of Vermont, who were of English descent; he was educated in the common schools of Vermont and Cincinnati, Ohio. His occupation was that of sawyer and miller, and he came to Knox County May 1, 1838, and helped build the Selby saw mill on Spoon River in Haw Creek Township, Section 34, which was the first saw mill in Knox County. He later remodeled it into a grist mill, which he operated several years. After his marriage he settled on a farm, and at the time of his death owned about three hundred and fifty acres of land. He was a good friend and neighbor, and a kind husband. He affiliated with the Presbyterian Church. In politics, he was a democrat. Mr. and Mrs. West had six children: Anna; John; Elizabeth, now Mrs. McTier; Joshua; Daniel; Philemon. Anna is the wife of Rev. Newton G. Clark, who was educated in the common schools, and at Valparaiso, Indiana. They had two children, Elsie, wife of Bert Bays; and Mary L., wife of Dr. James U. Long. Mrs. West has been successful in the management of her farm.

WOLF, JACOB; Farmer; born February 7, 1814, in Athens County, Ohio, where he was educated. His parents were Jacob Wolf, of Pennsylvania, and Lydia (Dorr), of Jackson County, Ohio. Jacob Wolf, Senior, was a tanner by trade, and after living many years in Ohio, moved to Porter County, Indiana, where he died. The ancestry of the Wolf family is German and English. Mr. Jacob Wolf was married in Haw Creek Township March 4, 1849, to Elizabeth Pickrel. They had five children: Josephine, deceased; Mrs. Mary Pursel; John; Sarah, deceased; and Emily, who married Darius Woolsey, and was the mother of seven children. Mr. Wolf's first occupation after moving to Illinois was that of cattle dealer. He bought cattle in Missouri, Iowa, and Illinois, and drove them to eastern markets. He was a very shrewd and capable manager, and at the time of his death owned nearly three thousand acres of land in Knox County. He carried on an extensive farming business, but used much of his land for pasture. He often fed five hundred head of cattle at a time. Mr. Wolf was a republican. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The old Wolf homestead is now owned and managed by John Wolf, who was born January 27, 1853; he was married to Miss Delmar Harshbarger, a daughter of Jonathan Harshbarger. They have three children: Ralph, Marie, and Wayne. Mr. John Wolf owns the old homestead, and about one thousand acres of land.

ORANGE TOWNSHIP.

By John C. Eiker.

Orange, as at present defined and bounded, was one of the first townships in the county to attract the attention of early immigrants to northern Illinois, and the pioneers were not wholly free from fear of predatory visits from the aboriginal owners of the soil. As a matter of fact, however, in 1830—the year when the first settlers arrived—the Indians were migrating to the west, and comparatively few of them remained. A blockhouse was erected, however, in 1830, or '31, and the murder of a white man by a straggling band of hostile savages during the Black Hawk War threw the small community into a ferment of apprehension.

The township is crossed by several well defined trails. That which is known as the Peorian and Galena runs diagonally from northwest to southeast, passing also through Knox, crossing the northeastern corner of the present city of Knoxville. A little to the west of this is another, which crosses Brush Creek, in Section 30, and forms a sort of a pathway from that stream to the headwaters of Haw Creek. Several Indian graves have been found and their traces are yet plainly discernible, just across the Knox Township boundary line, on Section 32. The last appearance of any considerable body of aborigines in the township was in 1843, when several hundred Sacs and Foxes camped on the northwestern quarter of Section 5, while on their way from the north to their reservation in Indian Territory.

About three-fourths of the soil of Orange consists of fertile prairie, the remainder being covered with a good quality of timber. The wooded sections lie along Brush and Haw creeks and their branches, on the west and east, respectively, where the surface is much broken. The center of the township is flat, and here may be found some of the most productive farms in the county. The township is underlaid by three distinct veins of bituminous coal, which are said to be capable of furnishing a well-nigh inexhaustible output but which have been as yet little developed.

The first white family to settle within the present limits of Orange was that of Joseph Wallace, who located on Section 15, in 1830, and found a rudely constructed cabin suffice for their shelter. After the death of his wife, on the old farm, Mr. Wallace removed to Iowa.

Asa Haynes (born in Dutchess County, New York, in 1804) came in 1836. He had bought the three hundred acres on Section 30, on which he erected a one roomed log cabin, in which he took up his residence with his wife, formerly Miss Mary Gaddis, to whom he had been married October 7, 1830. He was hardy, daring and adventurous, but without education other than such as he had obtained during two months' attendance at an Ohio district school each winter during six or seven years. He brought with him his two children, a half brother, Hiram, and a nephew, Isaac Hill. During their journey from Ohio, which occupied nineteen days, they encountered more or less rainfall during seventeen days, and found the rivers swollen to the summit of their banks, even the horses' harness never drying. Mr. Haynes was energetic and enterprising, and from the outset proved a potent factor in the development of the new country. He started the first brick yard and in 1840, built the first saw mill, which was operated by water power obtained from Brush Creek. In 1841 he erected a large barn, and the following year replaced his primitive cabin by a brick house, which in those early days was regarded as commodious. While by no means a profound scholar himself, he took a deep interest in the imparting of at least a sound primary education to children. For a time he himself taught an elementary school in his little cabin, and when his brick home was completed, one room was reserved and furnished as a school-room. Miss Frances Moore was the instructress, becoming later, Mrs. Hiram Haynes. Asa Haynes became, in his day, the largest landholder in Orange Township, at one time owning nine hundred and eighty-nine acres. He was one of the adventurers of 1849 and Captain of the "Jayhawkers" company of gold seekers formed at Monmouth. He led this little band of sixty across the continent. The hardships and privations which the men underwent caused many to drop by the way, but Mr. Haynes reached California safely, where he remained until 1851. Later in life he returned to California and made that State his residence for several years. He returned home and died at the house of a daughter, in Missouri, March 29, 1889. Of his six children, only one—Mrs. Nancy J. Wiley, who yet lives on a part of the old homestead—remains in the township.

James Ferguson came from Kentucky, with his family, in the same year with Mr. Wallace, settling on Section 11. He had several children, but only two are at present residents of Orange; Andrew J., a farmer living on Section 10, and Mrs. Sarah Weir, whose home is on Section 15. The elder Ferguson attained prominence as being the first Justice of the Peace and the first Overseer of the Poor in the township. He was also a soldier in the Black Hawk War, being commissioned as Major. He died in 1841, his widow surviving him for twenty years. Both sleep in the quiet plot of ground reserved for sepulture on the old farm.

Peter Godfrey is among the best known settlers of 1832, and he and his wife are among the oldest and most honored couples belonging to the "Old Settlers' Association of Knox County." John Denney and John and Simon McAllister arrived two years later. Isalah Hutson and wife emigrated from the State of New York in 1837. He has since died (1883), but his widow and daughter still find their home on the homestead, which was theirs sixty years ago. Thomas Gilbert was also an early settler, his farm being on Section 8. His son, Thomas, is a prominent citizen of Knoxville, and two of his daughters still reside in that city.

Other early settlers of the township who are worthy of especial mention are as follows: Thomas and James Sumner, who came from Ohio in 1837 and settled on Section 23. James lost his life through an accident, but Thomas still lives at his old home.

Israel Turner emigrated from Chester County, Pennsylvania, in 1837. He entered two hundred and forty acres on Section 32, remaining there until he died. Anderson Barnett also came in the same year, settling on Section 10. To him belonged the distinction of begetting the largest family of children (eighteen) ever reared in the township, nearly all of whom are yet living.

The oldest residents of the township at present are William Reed and Mrs. Sarah E. Weir.

The early houses were, of course, of logs, and of these Mr. Wallace built the first, on Section 15. Thomas A. Rude erected the first brick dwelling, on the farm of the late William Turner, in the same section. A portion of the latter is still standing, but the residence of Mr. Asa Haynes is probably the oldest structure in the county, remaining precisely as it was built.

The two earliest marriages were those of Alexander Robertson to Narcissa Ferguson, and of Daniel Fuqua to Lydia Bomar. This was a double wedding and the ceremony was solemnized by Rev. Jacob Gum, at the Ferguson residence, on Section 10. The first white child born (1833) was Cynthia, daughter of James Ferguson.

It has usually been stated by historians of the township that the first death was that of a Mr. M. Cramer; but one of the oldest living settlers of Orange is authority for the statement that the first person to die was an aged female pauper, who was, at the time of her death, living on the farm of James Ferguson, at the time Overseer of the Poor. Both were interred in a plot of ground on Section 15, known as the McCramer burying ground.

Sixteen burials were made here, when interments were discontinued and there is now nothing to mark the spot. The Ferguson and the Ward burying grounds (the latter on Section 3) are neglected spots and are seldom used. There are, however, two other cemeteries, which are well kept up and which contain many handsome monuments. These are the Haynes, on Section 20, and the McAllister, on Section 12.

The first school house was of logs, and stood on Section 14. It was known as the Wallace School, and religious services were occasionally held within its rude, unplastered walls. The first teacher was Thomas Ellison, who wielded the birch during the Winter of 1836. He died at Abingdon, in 1897. Mr. Ellison was followed by Anderson Barnett, who taught in 1837 and 1838. The school house erected in what is now District No. 8 was of brick, Israel Turner being the mason and the carpentry being done by Charles Corwin. Miss Amanda Corwin, one of the earliest graduates from Knox College, was the first teacher and remained six years. Another early school house was that within the limits of the present District No. 3, where Miss Mary Gilbert Chaffee was the first to give instruction to boys and girls, some of whom have long since passed away, while others have grown old and silver-haired. At present Orange Township has eight schools, all ungraded, occupying well constructed frame buildings. The houses are modern and represent an outlay, in the aggregate, of about ten thousand dollars. In addition to this sum, libraries and equipments have cost a thousand dollars. The total enrolment of pupils is two hundred and seventeen.

The earliest religious service held in the township was conducted by Rev. Jacob Gum, a Baptist minister, at the home of James Ferguson. The first denomination to organize into a church society was the Methodist Episcopal. This body erected a house of worship known as Orange Chapel, in 1855. It was built on Section 22, and was of brick, burned in the yard of Anderson Barnett and laid by Thomas Rambo. The building was dedicated in the Spring of 1856, by Rev. Richard Haney. The Gilson Circuit was established in 1857-8, and Orange Chapel was included within its limits. The following is a list of its pastors, from 1857 to 1898: 1857-8, Rev. G. M. Irwine; 1859-60, Rev. Wm. Watson; 1860-61, Rev. C. M. Wright; 1862, Rev. J. B. Mills; 1863, Rev. G. W. Havermale; 1864, Rev. A. Beeler; 1865, Rev. A. Fisher; 1866-7, Rev. Thomas Watson; 1868-9, Rev. Stephen Brink; 1870-1, Rev. G. W. Miller; 1872-3, Rev. Jesse Smith; 1874, Rev. L. B. Dennis; 1877-9, Rev. F. R. Boggess; 1880-1, Rev. Frank Smith; 1882, Rev. N. H. Merriam; 1883, Rev. William Collens; 1886-7, Rev. Geo. D. Hensell; 1888, Rev. E. N. Bently; 1889-90, Rev. Lewis Apfinger; 1891, Rev. Alford Mead; 1892, Rev. Samuel Albright; 1893-5, Rev. B. C. Dennis; 1896, Rev. A. P. Bolen; 1897-8, Rev. S. E. Steele.

Early in the seventies revival services were held at the school house in District No. 4, which resulted in a general awakening of religious interest. At that time there was no organized church other than Orange Chapel, although there was, in the township, a moderate sprinkling of Congregationalists and Protestant Methodists. The fervor of both these sects was aroused. Both denominations organized societies, and Haynes Chapel was built by the Protestant Methodists. The Congregational Church had no place of worship and soon ceased to exist as a local organization. A general religious decline appeared to supervene about the same time, spreading over the territory between Knoxville and Hermon, on the north and south, and Gilson and Abingdon, on the east and west. In fact, for nearly twenty years, or until 1890, Orange Chapel was the only center of organic Christian effort. In the last mentioned year, however, a branch of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was formed at Haynes Chapel, with nine active members. For several years the young people conducted weekly services there, after their customary fashion, and in 1893, Rev. A. W. Depew, of Abingdon, began preaching, with marked success; Haynes Chapel being considered an outlying station. By this time the Christian Endeavorers numbered forty, and it was not long before another Congregational church was organized, with twenty-two members. Its first pastor was Rev. Mr. Slater, who preached for the congregation from May, 1894, to February, 1895. For nearly two years thereafter, the church was without a regular pastor, but on December 1, 1897, Rev. West Alden accepted the congregation's call. The present membership is thirty-eight, and the Young People's Society is still maintained. The number of Sunday schools in the township is three, with an average attendance of thirty-six. Mr. J. K. Lawrence is Orange Vice President for the County Association.

The township was organized and its name chosen at a meeting held April 3, 1853. The name seems to have been selected on account of the shape of the central prairie, which, in those early days, was one of the most beautiful spots in the State. Asa Haynes was elected Supervisor; A. Barnett, Clerk; A. Pierce, Assessor; J. G. Rude, Collector; Peter Godfrey and David Stephens, Constables; Samuel Mather and J. Wallace, Overseers of the Poor; J. H. McGrew, Thomas Gilbert and Morris Chase, Highway Commissioners.

The chief industries are agriculture and stock raising, although in those early days, brick yards were started by Asa Haynes, Thompson Rude, and Anderson Barnett. These ventures proved unprofitable, however, and the kilns long ago fell into disintegration and decay. From the time of its settlement Orange ranked high among the best cereal producing sections of the county, although a lack of transportation facilities prevented the marketing of the grain raised. More than half was used in the fattening of stock. Haynes, Godfrey and Sumner Brothers manifested great interest in improving the quality of live stock, and were the first to introduce spotted China hogs and short horn cattle. The principal market of the pioneers was Peoria, although Canton and Oquawka received a fair share of the farm products. The farmers hauled their produce by teams, receiving in exchange supplies which they carried home to their expectant families. The opening of the first railroad, in 1854, altered the entire situation, shippers now finding Chicago at once the most accessible and most profitable market.

The only village in Orange is DeLong, a flourishing little station on the line of the Narrow Gauge Road. It came into existence in 1882, and owes its being—as it does its name—to S. H. Malory. He bought the site from Wayne Marks when the preliminary survey of the line was made, in anticipation of a station being established thereon, and called the village DeLong, in honor of the explorer of that name. It can boast two general stores, a barber shop, two blacksmith shops, two grain elevators, a building containing a hall and store room, and about a dozen residences. Its population is about fifty, and it is a relatively important shipping point for grain and stock.

Two societies have branches there. The Modern Woodmen established a camp in 1896, with sixteen members. The first officers were: C. A. Clark, V. C.; W. A. Wiley, C.; A. L. Turner, E. B.; F. Hopkins, W. A.; G. M. Clark, E.; E. T. Haynes, W.; G. W. Logue, S.; W. H. Wiley, J. Boston and J. F. Turner, Managers. The present official staff is composed of: R. L. Eiker, V. C.; W. A. Wiley, C.; E. Haynes, E. B.; B. C. King, W. A.; C. Wollsey, E.; J. Eckman, W.; E. Tucker, S.; L. Mather, W. Wise, and F. N. Clark, Managers.

A lodge of Good Templars was organized in the Fall of 1897, and has greatly prospered, its present membership exceeding fifty. Its first officers were: H. L. Haynes, C. T.; Mrs. A. Wiley, V. T.; Miss Amy Briley, Secretary; Miss Sarah Haynes, Financial Secretary; E. T. Haynes, Marshal.

The township furnished its full quota of troops in both the Mexican and Civil wars, and has within its borders one veteran of both—the venerable Aaron Weir.

The census figures relative to population are as follows: In 1840, four hundred and ninety; in 1860, eight hundred and seventy-six; in 1870, eleven hundred and sixty-seven; in 1880, eleven hundred and thirty; in 1890, eight hundred and fifty-one.

ASA HAYNES.

Captain Asa Haynes was born in 1804, in Dutchess County, New York. He was of Scotch-Irish parentage, his grandfather, Enoch Haynes, having come to this country early in its history, together with a brother, William, who settled in one of the Carolinas.

The mother of Asa Haynes died while her son was an infant, and he was cared for by an older sister. At nine years of age he was "bound out," but six years later he rejoined his father, who was "coming west." Clinton County, Ohio, was their destination, and here the boy helped clear the farm and shared in the toil and hardship of pioneer life. Now and then in the winter time he was sent to school for a brief term, but he received altogether not more than thirteen months of such instruction.

At the age of twenty-two he, together with an older brother, purchased a farm; and four years later, October 7, 1830, Mr. Haynes was married to Miss Mary Gaddis, of Fayette County, Pennsylvania. She was of Irish descent, was a noted beauty, and there were many suitors for her hand. She proved a devoted wife, and cheerfully bore her part in the common burdens of the time.

In 1836, Mr. and Mrs. Haynes removed to Knox County. They occupied nineteen days upon the trip, in almost continuous rain, finding the rivers greatly swollen, and reaching their journey's end only after much discomfort and danger. They began their residence in Illinois in a log cabin of one room, located in Section 30 of Orange Township, where Mr. Haynes had purchased three hundred acres of land.

The enterprise of Asa Haynes was equal to the opportunities afforded by the undeveloped country. Soon after his arrival he started a brick yard, and in 1840, built a saw-mill on Brush Creek. His appreciation of the advantages of education is evidenced by the fact that in winter he opened a school in his own house and taught it himself. In 1843, he built a large frame barn—the largest in the county at the time. The "raising" was an historic event; with only three exceptions every man in Knox County was present to assist. The next year saw the erection of a fine two-story brick house of twelve rooms, which is still standing. The lumber for the barn and the brick for the dwelling had been manufactured by Mr. Haynes himself; most of the furniture was constructed on the spot, a competent workman having been secured for the purpose. A large number of hands were employed upon the place, until it seemed more like a colony than a farm. Sheep were kept to supply the wool needed for clothing, and a tailoress was hired for six months every year to cut and make the homespun suits. With such a spirit of ambitious enterprise Mr. Haynes prospered, and performed his part in the development of Knox County. He was County Commissioner and Supervisor for several years.

Mr. Haynes was one of the celebrated "Jay-hawkers" of 1849, and in that year, crossed the plains as Captain of the company from Monmouth. He was a republican, and during the Civil War was outspoken in the expression of loyal sentiments, and was several times threatened by the notorious Knights of the Golden Circle, though without effect. For many years, he was a noted stock-raiser, having been the first to introduce the spotted China hog, and one of the three men who first brought short-horn cattle into Knox County. He was one of the founders of the Knox County Agricultural Society. At one time, Mr. Haynes owned nearly one thousand acres of land in Orange Township, five hundred acres in Iowa, and two fine farms in California, where, for several years, he made his home. In religion, he was a Protestant Methodist. He died at the old homestead in Orange Township, March 29, 1889.

Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Haynes: Clark, deceased; Margaret; Elizabeth; Anna M., deceased; Nancy; Mary E.; Charles A.; and Elery, deceased. One son and one daughter live in Kansas; two daughters are living in Missouri, and one daughter lives in Orange Township, near the old home.

WALTER REDD.

Walter Redd, son of John and Elizabeth (Barber) Redd, was born in Shenandoah County, Virginia, March 27, 1820. His father was a farmer, and had served his country as a soldier in the War of 1812. His parents died while he was a lad of seven or eight years of age. The early struggle for a livelihood was a severe one, and the youth was glad to make a living as best he could.

In February, 1842, Mr. Redd, in his twenty-second year, came to Knox County. He had no capital, and for a year and a half worked here and there as he found opportunity. He then went to Knoxville and secured employment in a flour-mill, where he remained eight years and thoroughly learned the miller's trade. Having accumulated a little money, he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land on Section 11 in Orange Township, where he lived until his death, improving his land and adding thereto until he had a farm of about three hundred acres. Mr. Redd was a member of Knoxville Lodge, No. 66, A. F. and A. M. He was a republican.

September 12, 1844, Mr. Redd was married to Frances Allen, daughter of William and Nancy (Wilkins) Allen. She was born in Jefferson County, Indiana, April 5, 1826. Her father was a native of Kentucky; her mother was born in Pennsylvania. The Allen family came to Knox County about 1836, and took up land in Persifer Township, where Mr. and Mrs. Allen remained until their death.

Mr. and Mrs. Redd are the parents of twelve children: Benjamin F., deceased; Robert H.; John W.; Julia and Julius, twins, both deceased; Lorena; Blanch; Frank; Ida M., deceased; Grace, deceased; Etta; and Harvey, deceased. Robert married Melissa McDowell, and is a farmer in Iowa; John married Clara Barnett, and is a farmer in Colorado; Julia married John F. Fink, and lived in Nebraska; Lorena is the wife of Peter Hawley, and lives in Knoxville; Blanch is the wife of Julius J. Maxey, and lives in Knox Township; Ida married Park Garwood, and her home was in Nebraska; Grace married James Mowry, and lived in Iowa; Etta is the wife of Frank Motter, and lives in Persifer Township, Knox County.

ISRAEL TURNER.

Israel Turner was born in Chester County, Pennsylvania, March 22, 1812. His parents were Henry and Susanna (Halderman) Turner, of Pennsylvania. They were of German ancestry. Henry Turner was a stone-mason.

Israel Turner had no educational advantages other than the district schools. At sixteen years of age he found employment as a boat hand on the Schuylkill and Union Canal, and at nineteen was master of a boat. After three years of this life he left the canal, and learned the trade of stone-cutter and mason, after which he found steady employment in bridge construction on the canal, and along the line of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad.

In 1837, Mr. Turner came to Illinois, and, being favorably impressed with the fertility and promise of the prairie soil, he entered a claim for two hundred and forty acres of wild land in Orange Township, Knox County, and in 1840, began its cultivation. In addition, he found opportunity to work at his trade, and in 1843, he cut stone for the foundation of the first Congregational church in Galesburg. From time to time he added to the acreage of his farm, and eventually became the owner of more than a thousand acres in Orange and the adjoining townships.

February 13, 1844, Mr. Turner was married to Lucinda E. Hammond, daughter of George and Elinor (Taylor) Hammond. She was born in Waterville, Kennebec County, Maine, in 1826, and came with her mother to Galesburg in 1843. Mr. and Mrs. Turner were the parents of eleven children: Elizabeth E. married Michael Enwright, and lives in Iowa; Henry W., who lives on the old homestead, near DeLong; Hamilton J. married Anna R. Grimm, and lives in Kansas; Israel F. married Anna E. Howerter, and lives in DeLong, Orange Township; Anna E. married Henry A. Howerter, and lives in Fulton County, Illinois; Isaac P. and Willoughby F., deceased; Abraham L. married Hattie C. Haynes, and lives at DeLong; Lenora A. married Albert C. Howerter, of DeLong; Elnora C., deceased; and Otis G. who married Lydia Tucker, and resides at DeLong.

Mr. Turner was, and his wife is, a member of the Missionary Baptist Church. In politics, Mr. Turner was a republican. He died February 5, 1888.

BORRELL, JAMES; Farmer; Orange Township; born in England, July 31, 1842; educated in the common schools. His parents, Pattan and Roseanah (Johnson) Borrell, were English, as were his paternal grandparents, James and Elizabeth (Pattan) Borrell, and his maternal grandfather, Johnson. March 27, 1867, Mr. Borrell was married to Eva N. Roberts, in Knoxville, Illinois. They have had four children: Mary I., Fannie E., Charlie P. and Lenna L. In politics, Mr. Borrell is a republican. He holds the office of School Director.

CLARK, FRANK NELSON; Stockman; Orange Township; born July 15, 1864, at the Clark homestead, Orange Township; educated in Knox County. His parents are Luther and Sarah (Yeager) Clark, the former from New Jersey; his grandfather was Abraham Clark. Mr. Frank N. Clark was married in Knoxville February 7, 1889, to Jennie R., daughter of John R. Wilder, of Knoxville. His father, Luther Clark, came from New Jersey to Knox County with his parents in 1843, and now owns a farm of two hundred and twenty acres. Frank N. was brought up on his father's farm, and became a practical farmer. When a boy ten years of age he was given charge of the swine which he bought, sold and improved according to his own good judgment which was remarkable. After clerking three winters in Knoxville, he returned to the farm, at the age of twenty-four, and became well known as the owner of the "Orange Herd" of Poland China hogs. This stock is recorded; and one pig, Hadley's Model, No. 35913, is valued at $3,000. Mr. Clark is a republican, and a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

DUNBAR, JAMES W.; Farmer; Orange Township; born February 13, 1856, in Macon County, Illinois; educated in the Orange Township common schools and at St. Alban's College, Knoxville, Illinois. His parents were Chauncey Dunbar of Ashtabula County, Ohio, and Debby Ann (Woolsey) Dunbar of Saratoga County, New York. His paternal grandparents, Thomas and Ruth (Harper) Dunbar, were from Ohio; his great-grandfather was Jacob Dunbar; his maternal grandparents, John and Elizabeth (Bradshaw) Woolsey, came from New York. Mr. Dunbar was married to Ida A. Cox, December 23, 1881, in Macon County. Their children are: Chauncey A. and Lenna A. Mrs. Dunbar was the daughter of John F. and Mary A. (Carver) Cox, of Macon County. Mr. Dunbar came to Knox County with his father in 1857; his father died June 1, 1898, leaving two sons and two daughters: John L., James W., Lucy A., and Eliza A. A son, Thomas, died in 1886. The mother died in 1890. The family came from Scotland at an early day, and settled in Ohio in 1798. Mr. James W. Dunbar lives on a well improved farm near DeLong.

DUNBAR, JOHN L.; Farmer; Orange Township; born in Marion County, Ohio, December 31, 1842; educated in the common schools. His parents were Chauncey Dunbar of Ashtabula County, Ohio, and Debby A. (Woolsey) Dunbar of Saratoga County, New York; his paternal grandparents were Thomas and Ruth (Harper) Dunbar of Ohio; his maternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth (Bradshaw) Woolsey of New York; his great-grandfather was Jacob Dunbar. The Dunbars came from Scotland and settled in New York, whence they removed to Ohio in 1798; the grandfather was a soldier in the Revolution. John L. came to Illinois with his father in 1857; the father died June 1, 1898; the mother died in 1891. Mr. Dunbar lives with his two sisters upon the homestead. He is a republican.

EIKER, JOHN CALVIN; Farmer; Orange Township; born January 24, 1833, in Adams County, Pennsylvania, where he was educated in the common schools. His parents were John Eiker of Carroll County, Maryland, and Charlotte (Myers) Eiker of Fredericks City, Maryland; his paternal grandfather was David Eiker; his paternal great-grandfather, Abraham Eiker, a miller by trade, came from Germany and settled in Maryland; his maternal great-grandparents were Lawrence Myers, of Germany and Rebecca Horner. Mr. Eiker was married in Knoxville March 4, 1858, to Sarah Agnes Armstrong. They have six children: Calvin A.; Edith May; Blanch M., wife of A. R. Green; Charlotte, wife of Gilbert Scott; Elmer Grant; and Roy Leander. Mr. Eiker's father drove his family overland from Pennsylvania to Knox County in 1852. He was a miller and farmer, and in 1863, removed to Decatur, Iowa, where he died at the age of eighty years. His wife died at the age of seventy-three. John C. Eiker was nineteen years old when he came to Knox County. He is a very successful and progressive farmer and owns two hundred and twenty acres of finely improved land. In 1874, he was elected President of the Farmers' Fire and Lightning Insurance Company, and during his twenty-five years of service, has rendered valuable aid to the association. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. In politics, he is a republican, and has filled most of the local offices.

FERGUSON, ANDREW J.; Farmer; Orange Township, where he was born April 25, 1836; educated in the district schools. His father, James Ferguson, was from Warren County, Kentucky, while his mother, Martha (Maxey), came from Buckingham County, Virginia. His paternal grandmother was a native of Ireland, while his grandfather, Ferguson, was from Scotland. His maternal grandmother's maiden name was Woodfin, and both she and his grandfather, Maxey, were natives of Virginia. December 25, 1837, Mr. Ferguson married Victoria Woodmansee in Knox County; they have had three children, James A., George L., and Bessie L. In politics, Mr. Ferguson is a democrat.

FERGUSON, JAMES A.; Farmer; Orange Township; born August 23, 1869; educated in the common schools. His father, Andrew J. Ferguson and his grandfather, James Ferguson, came from Kentucky to Orange Township about 1836. Mr. Ferguson was married to Minnie Mather, daughter of Richard Mather, at Galesburg, February 3, 1893. They have one child, Edith. Mr. Ferguson is a democrat.

Martha was married to Charles Hutson, son of George Hutson; they have one son, Chester. Mr. Long came with his father and family from Ohio to Knox County, in 1835, and settled at Knoxville. In 1840, he settled on the farm where his father died in 1862, leaving three sons. Mrs. Long died in 1884, since which time, Mr. Long has lived with his daughter, Martha. Mr. Long is a republican. He has traveled extensively.

MASSEY, ANSON (deceased); Farmer; Orange Township; born in May, 1817, at Wilmington, Ohio, where he was educated. His parents were James and Elizabeth (Hale) Massey of North Carolina; his grandfathers were Francis Massey of North Carolina, and Jacob Hale of Pennsylvania. He was married to Elizabeth Hill, February 7, 1838, in Clinton County, Ohio. Their children are: Louisa, Isaac, Frank, Mary, Eli, Katharine E., Julia Martha, and Alfred. Isaac and Frank served in the Civil War. Katharine E. was married to William McCleary; their children are: George S., Nancy J., Lena C., Frank A., Elmer E., William M., Cora Edith, and Mary Elizabeth. Mr. Massey came to Knox County in June, 1844, with his wife and three children. They spent one winter in Knoxville and then removed to Abingdon, where he worked at his trade of harnessmaker until he began to farm in Orange Township. He died in February, 1894. Mrs. Massey was the daughter of Ephriam R. and Content (Haynes) Hill. The father of E. R. Hill was Isaac Hill, who was born at Newberg, New York. Mrs. E. R. Hill was born in Dutchess County, New York, and was the daughter of Enoch and Elizabeth (Birdsell) Haynes. Enoch Haynes was a son of Asa Haynes, a native of Scotland, who bought land on the Croton River, New York, which is still owned by his descendants. Robert E. Hill, brother of Mrs. Massey, came to Knox County in the Spring of 1838.

Israel Turner

In 1839, he bought the farm of one hundred and sixty-five acres where Mrs. Massey now lives. He was highly respected by all. The great-grandfather, Asa Haynes, had a brother, William, who settled in South Carolina, and who was the ancestor of the Haynes family of the South. In politics, Mr. Anson Massey was a republican.

He was mustered out at Nashville, Tennessee; and was discharged at Springfield, Illinois, November 9, 1865. Mr. Wiley has held the following offices: Supervisor, Justice of the Peace, School Director, and Postmaster at DeLong, which position he has filled for twelve years and still holds.

CEDAR TOWNSHIP.

By J. F. Latimer.

This is one of the most fertile, best cultivated townships in Knox County. Cherry Grove covers about six square miles of its surface, extending along the entire western side, and for a little more than two miles the timber which skirts either side of Brush Creek extends over several sections. Between the two stretches a beautiful strip of rolling prairie, that can scarce anywhere be surpassed for farming purposes. Brush Creek and its branches, on the east, and the tributaries of Cedar Creek, on the west, water the township, a stream flowing through nearly every half section. Cedar was originally well timbered, there having been heavy growths of many varieties of valuable woods, notably of sugar maple and of different kinds of oak, walnut, wild cherry, elm, ash, basswood and hickory. The abundance of the wild cherry was the reason for the naming of the first settlement Cherry Grove, which name was also at first given to the township. Good coal and a limited amount of building stone are also found.

The first settlers were Azel Dorsey, on Section 18, and Rev. Hiram Palmer, a Methodist minister, on Section 7, both of whom came in 1828. In 1829, A. D. Swarts, founder of Abingdon and Hedding College, settled on Section 17. At his house Rev. Mr. Palmer preached the first sermon ever heard in the township.

The first members of the Latimer family to reach here were Joseph and his son George, who came from Tennessee in 1831, and settled on Section 29. Jonathan Latimer and his father-in-law, Jacob West, settled on Section 28 in the following year. About the same time his brothers, John C. and Alexander Latimer, his widowed sister, Mrs. Richard Boren, and his brothers-in-law, U. D. Coy and Israel Marshall, settled along the timber, believing, in common with other settlers, that the prairie land was valueless and would never be pre-empted and occupied. In 1833, Joshua Bland settled on Section 16, and his son-in-law, William Bevins, settled on Section 23 in 1834. The same year came Lewis and Bennett Spurlock, Reuben Castle and Elisha Humiston, and, shortly afterward, Hugh Kelly arrived.

The settlers were compelled to go to Ellisville to have their grain ground into meal or flour. The mill was small, and at times the grists were many and the farmers were sometimes obliged to wait for their turn, which was always given in due rotation. In 1833, Joshua Bland erected a horse power corn cracker on Section 16, which proved a very welcome addition to the comfort of the pioneers.

The first birth was in November, 1829, Helen E. Swarts. The first marriage celebrated was that of U. D. Coy and Susan Latimer, in December, 1833. The first death was the demise of Miss Olive Strange, in 1834. In 1832, Robert Bell taught what was the first school in Cherry Grove settlement, and the second in Knox County. At the present time, outside of Abingdon, there are eight district schools, with four hundred and thirteen pupils. The school houses, two of brick and six frame, are valued at nine thousand six hundred dollars. Cherry Grove Seminary was founded by Jonathan Latimer, and other members of the Cumberland Presbyterian denomination, and was located on Section 29. From the minutes of the Presbytery, it is established that this school opened prior to 1840, under the charge of Rev. Cyrus Haynes, a minister of that creed. He remained at its head for about eight years, and made the institution widely and favorably known. In 1866, the Cumberland Presbyterians established a college at Lincoln, Illinois, and this seminary was abandoned.

Prior to 1850 Indian Point and Cedar townships were known together as the Cherry Grove voting precinct. Cherry Grove was separated and given a distinct name by order of the County Judge on January 14, 1850. However, the first Board of Supervisors on June 6, 1853, renamed it Cedar, for the reason that the Secretary of State decided that another Illinois township had prior right to the name "Cherry Grove." On April 5, 1853, a meeting was held for the purpose of perfecting a township organization. The voters chose Hugh A. Kelly, Moderator, and L. W. Conger, Clerk. E. P. Dunlap was elected Supervisor; William Marks, Clerk; William Lang, Assessor; James W. Smoot, Collector; J. W. Stephens and W. H. Heller, Commissioners of Highways; P. M. Shoop and Joseph Harvey, Justices of the Peace; Thomas S. Bassit, Overseer of the Poor; Solomon Stegall and Eli Butler, Constables. The election was held at what was then known as Louisville, about three miles north of Abingdon, on Section 16. A vote was also taken for the place of holding the next election, which resulted in favor of Louisville.

The town last named was laid out by John S. Garrett, on the southwest quarter of Section 16. It was platted September 30, 1836, and for a time was the chief place in the southwestern part of the county. The growth of Abingdon killed it, and now there is only a district school to mark its site.

In 1855, the place for holding elections was changed to Abingdon, where they have been held ever since. The last named place is now the only town in Cedar, Louisville being only a farm and Saluda a flag station on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.

Before the first election of President Lincoln, the township was democratic, but since that date it has been strongly republican, although in local elections party lines were disregarded until within the last few years.

From 1870 until 1890 there was a slight decrease in population, but within the last nine years the increase, owing chiefly to the growth of Abingdon, has been such that at the meeting of the Board of Supervisors in July, 1897, the population having passed the maximum for one voting precinct, the township was divided into two, although both polling places were located in Abingdon.

Cedar has always been noted for its high standard of morality and intelligence obtaining among the people. Churches were established very early in its history. The Methodists organized in 1833, at the house of Joseph Latimer, with the following members: A. D. Swarts and wife, Mr. Finch and wife, Mrs. Jonathan Latimer and Joseph Latimer and wife. For several years the church existed as a mission, services being held at the homes of the various members and later at school houses, until, in time, the denomination had grown strong enough to erect a church at Abingdon. Their first quarterly meeting was held at the home of Jacob West and conducted by the renowned Peter Cartwright, who preached frequently to this charge. Its growth in membership and usefulness has been steady, until now it is the largest in the township. At the present time the denomination holds, in addition to those at the Abingdon Church, regular services at Warren Chapel, which is located in the northwestern part of the township.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Cedar dates its beginning from about 1834 or 1835, with fifteen members. Not long thereafter they erected a house of worship, said to have been the first church building in the county. It stood about one mile and a half northwest of Abingdon, and was used for a number of years as a class room for Cherry Grove Seminary. The denomination's influence, in both school and church affairs, has been potent throughout this entire section of the county. In 1866 the congregation removed to Abingdon. Subsequently it affiliated itself with the Congregational denomination and became the present Congregational communion of Abingdon.

In addition to the bodies mentioned, the religious history of the township has embraced organizations of Protestant Methodists, United Brethren, Baptists, a Methodist Episcopal church at Louisville and an early Congregational church, all of which have been gradually merged into the three churches named.

The chief industries are farming, and breeding and raising fine stock. Coal mining is also carried on to a very limited extent. Heretofore, large herds of short-horn, Hereford, Galloway, Angus, Holstein and Jersey cattle have been bred in the township. At the present time, the principal stock raising interest centers in the short-horn, Angus and Jersey breeds, representatives of the two latter having taken high honors at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893.

During the Civil War, no township in Knox County responded to the Nation's call more nobly or with greater readiness than Cedar, always keeping in the field more than her share of the county's quota. No draft was ever made in Cedar Township. Official statistics show that over two hundred and twenty-five volunteers enlisted, some of them descendants of heroes who had proved their loyalty to their country and its flag in earlier struggles. Of these old settlers sleeping in the cemeteries, there are seventeen soldiers of the War of 1812, four of the early Indian wars and two of the Mexican War. Of the soldiers of the Civil War, forty-nine are buried within the township limits. Their living comrades, members of Post 58, Grand Army of the Republic, at Abingdon, annually, on May 30, preserve the memory of their devotion and self-sacrifice, their toils and triumphs, ever keeping green the recollection of the patriotic dead.

The official figures relative to the population of Cedar Township are as follows: 1840, six hundred and sixteen; 1860, eighteen hundred and twenty-two; 1870, two thousand, one hundred and fifty-three; 1880, nineteen hundred and seventy-six; 1890, fifteen hundred and seventy-four.

WILLIAM H. REYNOLDS.

William H. Reynolds was born in Park County, Indiana, December 23, 1839. His parents were Samuel and Ann Jane (Reed) Reynolds of English and Scotch descent. Samuel Reynolds was the son of William Reynolds, a native of England, who came to America before the Revolutionary War. The family settled on a farm in South Carolina, where William Reynolds died when his son Samuel was ten years of age. The widow emigrated to Kentucky with her nine children, William, Samuel, John, Robert, Nancy, Rebecca, Elsie, Jane, and Saran Ann. They all reached maturity, and with the exception of John, married. Some of the children went to Park County, Indiana, and were followed by their mother, who died near Indianapolis. Samuel was married at the age of twenty-two years, and settled on a timber farm of one hundred and sixty acres which he cleared. He afterwards sold his farm, and in 1836, moved near Berwick, Warren County, Illinois, and bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres which is now owned by his son James. He accumulated a large property, and at one time owned two thousand acres of land in Warren County. He had few educational advantages, but was a man of clear head and remarkably strong muscular development. His wife, Ann Jane Reed, a daughter of John Reed, was of Scotch descent, and was born near Louisville, Kentucky. He died at the homestead at the age of eighty-eight, and his wife died in Abingdon, Knox County, at the age of eighty-four. They had twelve children, nine of whom reached maturity: Katherine B., William H., John R., James A., Jemima, Jennie S., Marion, Sarah, and Louise.

William H. Reynolds was brought up on the home farm, and at the age of twenty-six ran in debt for a farm of three hundred and sixty acres in Warren County, which he afterwards sold, and bought the farm of one thousand acres in Orange Township, near Knoxville, which he now owns. He owns, in addition, six hundred acres of land in Knox Township, and a model stock farm of four hundred acres in Norton County, Kansas. He was educated in the common schools and at Abingdon College. He also studied law, and practiced his profession four or five years, but soon turned his attention to the more congenial pursuit of farming. He came to Knox County in 1857, and lived for many years on his farm near Knoxville. In 1883, he moved to Galesburg, and in 1892, bought a farm near Abingdon.

June 24, 1855, Mr. Reynolds was married to Martha M. Bundy in Orange Township. She died February 1, 1873, leaving three children: Nellie J., who married Mr. Peterson; William M.; and Minnie, wife of James Rogers. Mr. Reynolds' second marriage occurred November 25, 1873, at Knoxville, to Margaret Wallace, who is a native of Scotland. Four children have been born to them: Nellie H., wife of A. E. Werts; Frank W.; Harry Earnest; and Mabel E.

Captain Reynolds has a notable military record. In July, 1861, he assisted in raising a company, and secured most of the volunteers from among his friends and acquaintances in Knox and Warren counties. The company thus formed was called Company D, of the Seventh Illinois Cavalry, and was mustered into service at Springfield October 13, 1861. Mr. Reynolds, who had enlisted as a private, was, at the time, elected First Lieutenant, and was promoted to the rank of Captain at the battle of Corinth, Mississippi. The Seventh rendered valuable service during the war. It was under Pope at Island No. 10, and New Madrid; ascended the Tennessee River in 1862; led at Corinth and in the pursuit of May 30; was the first to march into Tusculum, Alabama; withstood the entire rebel force at luka, and in September, October, and November, made a series of movements in which they marched eight hundred miles, destroying railroads and bridges. May 2, they entered Baton Rouge, after traveling another eight hundred miles, capturing one thousand prisoners, and assisting at the capture of Fort Hudson. Altogether, the Seventh marched about five thousand miles, and captured three thousand prisoners. At one time an order was given by General Grant to General Rosecrans, to have all horses branded and turned over to the United States government. Captain Reynolds succeeded in preventing the breaking of their special contract, and the men of the Seventh rode their horses unbranded throughout the war. It was the Seventh that led and chased General Jeff Thompson sixteen miles through the swamps, into a rebel fort, and that met at terrific pace a charging, overwhelming force, checked their advance, and extricated themselves, after seven hours of fighting.

In the Fall of 1864, Captain Reynolds acted for several months in the capacity of special detective at Memphis, under General Washburn, a position requiring the utmost nerve and courage. It is needless to say that he fulfilled the expectations of those who had honored him with their confidence. He also won at all times the trust and unswerving devotion of the men who served under him.

In politics, Captain Reynolds is independent, and has served as Supervisor, School Director, and Road Commissioner.

FREDERICK STEGALL.

Frederick Stegall, son of Frederick and Sarah Stegall, was born in Pike County, Ohio, September 5, 1827. His father, who had been a soldier in the War of 1812, moved to Illinois and settled in Knox County in the Fall of 1836, when young Frederick was a boy of nine. There were seven children in the family of whom one, Mrs. Susannah Warren, now survives.

The Stegalls first settled near Cherry Grove, but afterwards removed to Abingdon. Mr. Stegall, Senior, later went to Henderson, where he died, September, 1869, at the age of eighty-one. His wife's death occurred some years later, at the age of eighty-seven.

W. H. Reynolds

Mr. Frederick Stegall was married to Lovina Ellen Marks, July 4, 1850, at Knoxville, Illinois. She was born in Kentucky, and came with her father, Benjamin Marks, to Knox County, in 1836. She was a noble type of frontier womanhood, and proved herself a worthy helpmeet in the struggles of those early days. Mrs. Stegall's industry was displayed in the care of poultry and bees. She has always been a kind neighbor and a friend to the poor.

After his marriage, Mr. Stegall bought a farm on Section 24, in Cedar Township, where he lived for many years. He then removed to Orange Township, but after four years returned to Cedar and bought land, now the property of Elery Stegall, on Section 23; he also bought land on Section 31, now the property of Mrs. Sarah Alice Hughey, where he died October 3, 1896, at the age of sixty-nine.

In politics, Mr. Stegall was a democrat. He was a farmer all his life; and by industry and economy accumulated considerable property. At the time of his death he owned twelve hundred acres of land, which was divided equally among the children who survived. These were: Milton, Elery, Mrs. Sarah Alice Hughey, and Mrs. Emma J. Fulmer. The second son, Solomon, was then deceased.

BURNER, MILTON D.; Farmer; Cedar Township; where he was born January 30, 1844; educated in the common schools. His father, Daniel Green Burner, was born in Kentucky, July 7, 1814, and came to Knox County in 1830 with his father, Isaac Burner, who died near Knoxville July 7, 1860. Daniel G. Burner was a firm friend of Abraham Lincoln, being a clerk in his store at New Salem, Illinois. After coming to Knox County he worked for a limited time at the carpenter's trade, and assisted in building the first court house at Knoxville. Later he began farming, and still resides on his farm near Knoxville. June 24, 1838, he was married to Melissa, daughter of John B. and Casander (Dills) Gummi; five children were born to them: John G., a farmer living near Eldorado, Kansas; Milton D.; Casander, who was the wife of Clate Swiger, and died February 6, 1892; Susan, wife of Oliver Custer, a resident of Cedar Township; and Jane, wife of Robert Mount of Des Moines, Iowa. Mrs. Burner died June 9, 1853. March 28, 1854, Mr. Burner married Elizabeth Martz, who died February 27, 1877. By this union there were three children: Mary, Ellen and Ida, all deceased. In August, 1868, Mr. Burner was married to Susanna C., daughter of John and Rebecca (Lightner) Burns. Eleven children were born to them: Edwin G., who married Addie Graham of Cuba, Illinois, June 17, 1897, and is a hardware merchant of Chillicothe, Illinois; Willis J., a graduate of Hedding College, now a preacher at Irvington, Indiana, married Lulu Burr, of LaHarpe, Illinois, and has two children: Margaret and Jarvis; James A., City Marshal of Chillicothe; Henry L., an employe of the Abingdon Steam Laundry; Melissa R., a teacher in the public schools at Abingdon; Georgia, who resides at Knoxville with her aged grandfather; Etta M.; Bertha J.;

Jessie A.; Mina E.; and Francis A., who lives with her parents. Mr. Burner and family worship at the Christian Church, Abingdon. In politics, he is a democrat. He takes especial interest in public affairs, and has held the office of School Trustee for twenty years.

DUNLAP, THEODORE F.; Farmer; Cedar Township, where he was born August 1, 1844; he was educated in the common schools. His parents, Edmond P. and Matilda (Belt) Dunlap, were natives of Kentucky, the former of Fleming County. June 22, 1886, in Des Moines, Iowa, Mr. Dunlap married Mrs. Sue H. Grabill; they had one daughter, Mary Celeste, deceased. Mrs. Dunlap has one son, Dell Q. Grabill. Mr. Dunlap's father died in 1865, leaving four sons and six daughters: George W., Theodore F., Henry, William B., Mary J., Margaret, Martha, Alice, Ellen, and Ann. Edward P. Dunlap was one of the first supervisors of the town of Cedar, and held the office for several years. In religion, Mr. T. F. Dunlap is a Congregationalist. He is a prohibitionist.

EAREL, SILAS R.; Farmer; Cedar Township; born in Adams County, Illinois, January 18, 1857; educated in the schools of Knox County, and Abingdon Academy. His father, Henry D. Earel, was born in Virginia in 1828, and came to Illinois and settled in Adams County; he died in 1898. His mother, Margaret (Simons), was a native of Illinois. His paternal grandfather, James Earel, was born in England in 1745, came to America and settled in Maryland, removing later to Illinois, where he died. April 24, 1875, in Abingdon, Silas R. Earel, was married to Rosa Williamson; they have seven children: Frank, Dale, Tina, Mamie, Zella, Satie and Eva. Mr. Earel is in religion a Congregationalist. In politics, he is a republican. In 1896, he was elected Highway Commissioner and served three years.

FAMULENER, JACOB; Retired Farmer; Cedar Township; born April 9, 1833, in Pickaway County, Ohio. August 30, 1857, Mr. Famulener was married to Sarah J. Warren, daughter of James and Susan (Stegall) Warren. They had four children: Clara A., born June 18, 1858, and married February 15, 1877, to H. C. McMillan; they have six children: Willie J., Leroy R., G. Earnest, Cbeater W., Harley F., and Dewey Glenn; Alice J., born June 23, 1859, and married June 27, 1877, to O. F. Warren—they have one child, Eva Marie. O. F. Warren died October 19, 1881. Alice's J.'s second marriage was with Edgar F. Brainard of Monmouth; they have one daughter, V. Hortense; Emma C., was born February 1, 1862, and married Alex P. Jones March 8, 1882, died December 18, 1897; she had one daughter, Eva M.; Elvin L., born June 9, 1867, and married to Alta L. Marks, February 18, 1896; they have one son, Kenneth Marks. Mr. Famulener moved from Ohio in 1856, and after his marriage, one year later, removed to his present home. He has been a successful farmer, and a prominent, influential man. In politics, he is a republican. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

His father, Jonathan Famulener, was a native of New Jersey, and his mother, Anna (Long), of Pennsylvania. His paternal grandfather was Jacob Famulener. William Famulener was married in Ohio in 1852. There were six children: Chauncey; James; George; John; Martha and Ada. Mr. Famulener came from Ohio, where his father and grandfather had settled at an early day. It was in 1853 that he came to Illinois, and settled in Cedar Township in 1854. His family have been prominently identified in the community. In politics, Mr. Famulener is a republican.

FULMER, FRANK; Farmer; Cedar Township; born March 6, 1869, in Cedar Township; educated in the common schools of Kansas. His father, David, and his grandfather, Daniel, came from Pennsylvania in 1863, and settled at Old Henderson, where they were farmers. When Frank was six years old they went West, but at the age of nineteen he returned and settled in Knox County. August 13, 1891, he was married to Emma J. Stegall, in Abingdon; she is a daughter of Frederick Stegall. Mrs. Fulmer owns the forty acres that her father first "entered" in 1850. Mr. and Mrs. Fulmer have two children, Lovina Elinor, and Francis Manla. Mr. Fulmer is a prominent farmer. He is a republican.

HUGHEY, CHARLES WESLEY; Farmer; Cedar Township; born in Adams County, Ohio, December 1, 1828, where he was educated. His parents were Alexander and Hester (Tudor) Hughey, who came from Ohio to Abingdon, Knox County, in the Fall of 1849. The family is of Scotch and English ancestry. Charles W. Hughey was married to Mary E. Andrews, in Cedar Township. Nine children were born to them: Bell; Ann; Mary E., deceased; Emma; Ella; James E.; Rosette; William; and Flora. In religion, Mr. Hughey was a Methodist. He was a republican, and had been School Director, and held other local offices.

KETCHEM, JOHN; Farmer; Cedar Township; born October 15, 1840, in Greene County, Pennsylvania; educated in the common schools. His father was William Ketchem. John Ketchem enlisted in August, 1862, in Company F, Fifteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, and served until July, 1865. In 1866, he came to Illinois and worked by the month in Warren County, for seven years. February 6, 1873, in Greene County, Pennsylvania, he was married to Margaret A. Sproat, and settled in Warren County. In 1880, he came to Indian Point Township, Knox County, and eight years ago to the farm where he now lives. Mr. Ketchem is a republican, and was elected Highway Commissioner in 1893, and again in 1899. He has always taken a keen interest in town affairs. In politics, he is a republican. In religion, Mr. Ketchem is a Baptist.

LATIMER, JOSEPH FRANKLIN; was born at his present home in Cedar Township, April 15, 1840, and has resided there all his life, following the occupation of farming and fine stock breeding. His father, Jonathan Latimer, was a native of Robinson County, Tennessee, and his paternal grandparents, Joseph and Anna Dobbins Latimer, were natives of New London, Connecticut; they were of English descent. His great-grandfather, Jonathan Latimer, was a Colonel in the Revolutionary War, and served under General Green. His mother, whose maiden name was Nancy West, was the daughter of Jacob and Barsheba Polk West, natives of North Carolina. Jacob West was a soldier in the war of 1812, under General Jackson, and his wife was a cousin of President James K. Polk. On November 25, 1872, Mr. Latimer was married to Joana Humiston, at Atchison, Kansas. They have two children, Guy J. and Lillian H. Mr. Latimer finished his education at Knox College, Galesburg, receiving his diploma in April, 1864, when he enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving until the close of the war. He entered as color-bearer, and took part in the engagements with Forrest at Memphis. Diplomas were granted by the college to members of that class who volunteered their services in the war. Mr. Latimer taught school in Lincoln University for two years, and afterward studied medicine, but was compelled to abandon it on account of defective sight. From 1870 to 1872, he was a member of the Twenty-seventh Illinois General Assembly, and again four years later, he was again chosen to the legislature, serving two terms. In the Thirtieth and Thirty-first assemblies he filled the important chair vacated by Haines, chairman of the Committee on County and Township Organizations, discharging the duties of that perplexing situation in a manner that gave him a creditable and state-wide acquaintance. Politically, Mr. Latimer has always affiliated with the republican party, being an enthusiastic advocate of its principles. He has held the offices of Mayor of Abingdon; Commander of Post 58, Grand Army of the Republic; Treasurer of the Board of School Directors; President of the Agricultural Society for ten years; a member of the Board of County Supervisors for ten years; and held various minor offices of trust and honor. At present he is Chairman of the Board of County Supervisors; township member of the Republican County Central Committee; President of the Illinois Jersey Cattle Club, and Vice President of the First National Bank of Abingdon. Mr. Latimer has led an active and useful life, and has done much toward the development of Knox County. As a breeder of Jersey cattle he is known throughout the United States, and has been the means of attracting buyers of Jerseys to Abingdon from all parts of the Nation. In political circles, both local and State, his opinions are highly regarded, and his judgment upon all important questions given the closest consideration. In the annals of Knox County, as well as in those of the commonwealth of Illinois, Mr. Latimer has attained an enviable position by combining with tact and good judgment, strict integrity and ability that is unquestioned.

MARKS, WILLIAM PLEASANT; Farmer and Stockraiser; Cedar Township, where he was born June 19, 1841. His parents were Benjamin and Mary E. (Bishop) Marks, the former a native of Kentucky. His paternal grandfather was a cousin of Daniel Boone and David Crockett, and located in Kentucky at a very early date. He was once shot through the body by Indians, the ball passing also through a hymn-book in his pocket, after which he lived about twenty years. Mr. Marks has this book, which is now about one hundred and twenty-five years old. His father came here in 1835, and died in 1845, leaving seven children, three sons and four daughters. The Burns family were of Scotch descent. Mr. Henry Smith was married in Knox County, July 3, 1879, to Sarah Elmina Hughey; their children are: James Wesley, Hattie Edith and Ira Reece. His father was reared and married in Kentucky, and removed to Missouri, where a son, William T., was born, and where his wife died. He returned to Kentucky and was married to Ruth Watkins; he then removed to Warren County, Illinois, where his second wife died. His third marriage was with Elizabeth A. Burns; their children were: John L.; Henry F.; James B.; Robert M.; George W.; Charles Eugene; Cyrus H.; Mary A., wife of M. Kennedy; Hattie, deceased; and Laura R. He bought a farm of two hundred and forty-four acres in Cedar Township, where he died at the age of seventy-eight. H. F. Smith lived three years in Nickolls County, and six years in Frontier County, Nebraska, where he engaged in stock raising. He sold his farm of three hundred and twenty acres for five thousand dollars, and after his return to Knox County, bought the old homestead where he has since lived. Mr. Smith is a Congregationalist. In politics, he is a democrat.

STEGALL, ELERY; Farmer; Cedar Township, where he was born February 13, 1860; educated in the common schools. His parents were Frederick and Lovina (Marks) Stegall. Frederick Stegall settled in Knox County in 1836, and died in 1896, leaving, beside his widow, two sons and two daughters. March 4, 1889, in Galesburg, Elery Stegall was married to Mary Kennedy. They have three children: Frederick, Mary A. and Margaret B. Mrs. Stegall is a daughter of Jerry Kennedy, who came from Ireland to this country in 1865. Mr. Stegall is one of the substantial men of his town. In religion, he is a Protestant. He is a democrat.

WILLIAMSON, FRANK M.; Farmer; Cedar Township, where he was born, November 9, 1849; educated in the common schools. His parents, James and Safrona (Bland) Williamson, were both natives of Indiana. Mr. Williamson's father came from Sangamon County, Illinois, to Knox County in 1833. He had nine sons. May 28, 1874, Frank M. Williamson married in Galesburg his first wife, Margaret Warren; they had five children: Warren, Elsie, George, Maud and Maggie. The first Mrs. Williamson died in 1889, and October 15, 1891, Mr. Williamson married his second wife, Nettie Goddard, in Warren County; she was a daughter of Robert Goddard. They had two children: Ruby and Pearl. Mr. Williamson is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a republican, and was elected Justice of the Peace three terms; the first time was during Governor Oglesby's last term of office.

CITY OF ABINGDON.

By Samuel T. Mosser.

Abingdon, the second city in Knox County in population and importance, was originally laid out in 1836, by Abraham Davis Swarts, on the southwest quarter of Section 33, Township 10 North, Range 1 East, its southern boundary being at first coincident with that of the township.

Mr. Swarts came to Illinois from Abingdon, Harford County, Maryland, in 1821, and at first settled near Walnut Hill, Jefferson County. Eight years later he removed to the present site of Monmouth, and soon afterwards (in August, 1829) settled on a farm about three miles north of the present city of Abingdon. In 1833, he took up his residence on the northeast quarter of Section 32, the present site of Abingdon Cemetery, and at the same time purchased the southern half of Section 33. He was a man of means, for that time, public-spirited and philanthropic. It was one of his earliest and most cherished hopes to found a college at Abingdon, but he died before realizing his dream. His children, however, ultimately became leaders in a movement to carry out his project. [See Hedding College.]

The first house to be built in the new town was the log cabin of Josiah Stillings, which stood on the southwest corner of Block 6. It was enlarged the following year, and in it A. Bowman and John W. Green opened the first store of the incipient village. Other early mercantile and manufacturing ventures are worthy of mention, as illustrating gradual growth.

Mr. Swarts early conveyed four lots to David Reece, on condition that he should open a shop for the manufacture of furniture. Mr. Reece used a portion of his dwelling house for this purpose, and it was at his home that his son, Alonzo N., was born in 1838, and where his son, Dr. Madison Reece, was reared. The first named enjoys the distinction of having been the first white child born within the present corporate limits. Directly south of the furniture shop James Smith opened the first shoe shop, about 1838. The original blacksmith, Abraham Swarts Nichols, located his shop on the northeast corner of the same block, No. 6. About the year 1839 Cornelius and James Dempsey built a carding mill on the southwest corner of Block No. 4. After operating it for a short time they disposed of the plant to T. S. Bassett. He failed to make it earn a profit, and transformed it into a planing mill, doing a remunerative business in the manufacture of sashes, blinds and doors. With the growth of the demand for building material, a saw mill and a brick yard became necessities. A. D. Swarts and Josiah Stillings were the first to erect the former, on the Berwick road, some four miles west of Abingdon, and a second saw mill was built not many years afterward, by John E. Chesney. Cager Creel and O. P. Swarts established the first brick yard, in 1842, about one-half mile north of the site of Hedding College.

John E. and J. B. F. Chesney were both among the early settlers, and the latter is credited with having been among the first to invent the modern plow. Early in the forties, a Mr. Cochran began making pumps from hewn logs, the tubing being of hickory and the stock of white oak. The first flouring mill was built in 1856, by Barr and Hoffman. It stood on the corner of Jefferson and Pearl streets, and was subsequently sold to John W. Thompson, who transferred the business to Roseville.

The settlement began to grow very early in its history. In 1837 an auction sale of lots was held, and not less than forty were sold. Incorporation as a village did not follow for several years. Unfortunately the records of that event have been lost; but it occurred about 1845. The first addition was laid out April 2, 1849, by Frederic Snyder. It was on the south, and lay within the northeast quarter of Section 4 of Indian Point Township. Three others were laid out in 1854, two by Mr. Snyder and one by Mr. Swarts. Others were platted in 1855 by Messrs. Swarts and Wilson, and three more by Mr. Snyder, in 1856.

In 1857 Abingdon was incorporated as a city, the several additions mentioned being all included within the corporate limits. The charter was approved February 13, 1857, and the first election held April 21, following. The provisions of the instrument reflected the moral sentiment of the people, gaming houses, saloons, and even billiard tables falling under the ban of prohibition. The legislative power is vested in a Board of four Aldermen who, as well as the Mayor, hold office for one year. A list of the city's chief executives, with the dates of their respective terms, is given below:

W. H. Gillespie, 1857-58-60 and '64; Thaddeus Merrill, 1859; Henry Frey, 1861-62-67 and '77; D. D. Shoop, 1863; A. J. Thompson, 1865; S. M. Lewis, 1866; C. C. Lewis, 1868; William M. Yeatch, 1869-70 and '84; J. B. Strode, 1871-72; Abner Vickery, 1873-74 and '78; William Johnston, 1875-80; H. C. Murphy, 1876; John Mosser, 1879-81-88 and '91; William B. Main, 1882; Thomas Newell, 1883 and '87; William V. Trovillo, 1885-86; J. F. Latimer, 1889; S. D. Hall, 1890; Thomas Austin, 1892 and '98; H. R. Crouch, 1893-94; John G. Burnaugh, 1895; Corliss G. Mosser, 1896-97; James Richey, 1899.

A postoffice was opened in 1863, and Mr. A. D. Swarts was the first postmaster. He named it Harford, after the county in Maryland from which he had emigrated, just as he had called the town Abingdon in honor of his early home. In order to avoid confusion, however, both postoffice and village were later given the same name. Mr. Swarts was succeeded by D. Reece, and he by the following list of incumbents: S. H. Richey, W. Shannon, B. Bradbury, W. D. Lomax, Jesse Chesney, A. B. Cochran, T. E. Givens, William M. Veatch, S. McWilliams and J. W. Maginnis.

The early years of the young city's history were marked by prosperity. As early as 1851, brick came into use in the building of stores, the first, of this material, being erected by J.

B. F. Chesney on the northeast corner of Main and Martin streets. In 1853, the second brick store building was erected by D. K. Hardin, on the northwest corner of Main and Martin streets. In 1870, John H. Chesney, who occupied this building, built his new brick store building joining this on the north, which was the beginning of the brick block on the west side of Main street. At the same time the Masonic building was erected, also the next building north, by F. P. Foltz, and still another by Henry Frey. The largest store of this period was that of John H. Chesney, who had three rooms connected. There is no doubt but that he did the largest retail business of anyone who has ever done business in Abingdon. In the following year, 1871, Lyman Sanderson erected two more brick store buildings joining Frey's on the north. The first one was occupied by S. D. Pollock as a drug store; the other by John Mosser as a general store. In 1873, the corner-stone was laid for the new building of Hedding College; the brick store building of W. H. Heller, and numerous residences were built the same year.

In 1855, Abingdon was made a station on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and twenty-eight years later the Iowa Central line also passed through the place. These circumstances not a little added to its commercial importance in the surrounding country. During the Civil War, however, building was comparatively at a standstill, the perpetuity of the Union, enlistments, and the success and comfort of the soldiers at the front engrossing public thought and care. Another, and later, hindrance to the city's prosperity happened in 1874, when the inhabitants separated into factions concerning the internal dissensions in the management of Abingdon College. Citizens were hung in effigy, assaults were not infrequent, and even the lives of some of the leaders on either side were threatened. In fact, there are those who opine that this factional fight actually turned back the city's progress by fifteen years. Sidewalks fell into decay and were not repaired; weeds grew along the sides of the thoroughfares; no new buildings were erected, and even those standing failed to receive a sadly needed coat of paint.

Prior to this, however,—in 1869—a steam flouring mill was erected by Jefferson and James Dawdy. It was known as the "Highland Mills," and had a somewhat checkered existence. It was burned within a few months after completion, rebuilt, and again partially wrecked by a boiler explosion, in 1874. It was repaired, but again burned to the ground, in 1882, and never rebuilt. Other manufacturing concerns located at Abingdon are the Animal Trap Company, the Abingdon Wagon Company, and the Globe Manufacturing Company's plant for the making of workmen's clothing.

The first named of these three owes its origin to the invention of a mouse-trap by W. C. Hooker. The inventor, with John E. Cox and K. R. Marks, were the original incorporators, Messrs. Cox and Marks having closed out their profitable hardware business in order to embark in the enterprise. The beginning was very modest, but the growth has been rapid and steady. Their present factory, on Meek street, was erected in 1896, and is said to be the largest manufactory of traps in the world. The company exports largely, both to Europe and to South America, and employs about a hundred workmen.

The Abingdon Wagon Company was removed from Clinton, Iowa, to Abingdon in 1895. To secure this removal an addition to the city was platted, east of the "Burlington" tracks, and the proceeds of the sale of lots was given as a bonus. The community has never had reason to regret the transaction. The present owners of the works are A. B. Spies and his four sons—Frank, William, Adam and Henry. Their large brick factory stands near the tracks, and about one hundred and twenty-five employes are engaged in making wagons and "bob" sleds.

The Globe Manufacturing Company began the making of workmen's clothing in 1889. James W. Cox and Samuel T. Mosser are its proprietors, having started their factory work with only ten sewing machines. They were almost phenomenally successful from the start, and at present (1899) occupy a large two-story building and give employment to nearly or quite one hundred and twenty-five hands.

The other manufacturing industries of the city may be briefly enumerated: Abingdon Brick and Tile Company; Abingdon Paper Box Manufacturing Company; Hall Trap Company; Roller Grip Pencil Holder Company; the Champion Display Rack Company.

A fire visited the city in February, 1899, laying in ashes a considerable section of East Main street, but rebuilding commenced at once. Abingdon's citizens are enlightened, progressive and energetic, and a general system of improvements, to conform with modern ideas, is already under contemplation. A new building for city offices is nearing completion, and here the Public Library will find permanent quarters.

The institution last named was established in 1897, by popular vote, and has already played a prominent part as an educational factor.

Next to its prominence as a commercial and shipping point, Abingdon enjoys a justly earned fame as an educational center. Not only have its common schools been well maintained, but higher education has always been the ideal of its founders and most public spirited citizens. The first school house was built on land belonging to A. D. Swarts, just north of the original town plat, in 1837. It was of the character incident to the days in which it was built, and the instruction given was in consonance with the surroundings and qualifications of the teacher. Abingdon being located in two townships, it has two school districts. In 1868, a large, two-story brick building was erected in North Abingdon, and the youthful mind may now be developed in a well-taught, graded school. The North Abingdon School has a corps of six teachers, in addition to a principal. South Abingdon also boasts a two-story brick school house, with a principal and three teachers. The latter building was erected in 1892, and both schools grant diplomas to graduates.

Opportunities for higher education were also afforded at a relatively early date in the town's history. Abingdon College was for years a school of excellent reputation, while Hedding College is a flourishing institution today. For a succinct history of these institutions the reader is referred to the captions Abingdon College and Hedding College. The former no longer exists, but its history is worth preserving and perpetuating.

The first denomination to organize a church was the Methodist Episcopal, and the first Presiding Elder was that famous circuit rider, exhorter, orator and patriot, Peter Cartwright. Regular services were held in the first rude school house, built in 1837, already mentioned. Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Swarts, with five other persons, constituted the first original membership (1833), and this devoted band was accustomed to meet at Mr. Swarts' log cabin; strong in faith and hope, but weak in all else. In 1846 they put up a building at the southwest corner of Block 11, two blocks south of the site of the present Methodist Church. After the building of Hedding Seminary, they used its chapel as a meeting place until 1868, when they built a two-story frame structure, which was then considered a handsome edifice, reflecting credit upon the piety and liberality of the congregation. In 1898, under the pastorate of Dr. R. E. Buckley, a fine house of worship, of red granite, was built and a large two-manual pipe organ installed. The present membership of the church exceeds five hundred. It is progressive, and its power for good can scarcely be overestimated.

The Christian Church was organized by Elder Hiram Smith, in 1840, and its first building was erected in 1849. In 1885 they removed to the chapel of Abingdon College. The trouble which arose in that institution in 1874 rent the congregation in twain, part of the membership withdrawing and forming a new society, called the Jefferson Street Christian Church. These worshipped at first in the Protestant Methodist Church building, at that time idle, and afterwards moved to a small frame building on Washington street, which had been built by the Methodists in 1846. Here they remained until 1884, when the two congregations were reunited. Six years after the reunion, in 1890, a very handsome church was built on South Main street. The church is energetic and prosperous.

The First Cumberland Presbyterian Church was organized in Cherry Grove, by Rev. James Stockton, in 1834. In 1866 the denomination erected a church edifice in Abingdon. This society was later changed to a Congregational church, which was organized in 1881. The society bought the Cumberland Presbyterian property, and in 1885 refitted the building, adding a lecture room. The house was again remodeled in 1897, and a pipe organ placed in the church. The society is in a prosperous condition.

The Protestant Methodists organized a society in 1839-40. They erected a frame structure about 1869. The membership fell off, and the sect has no longer an established place of worship.

The Free Methodist Church was organized in 1880, by Rev. J. G. Terrell, with four members. The denomination never gained much in strength, and after a few years the local organization disbanded.

At the regular election, in the Spring of 1897, the citizens voted to establish and maintain a public library. Although not much more than two years have elapsed since its founding, it has greatly grown in favor and is largely patronized by the citizens. It is expected that within a few years a permanent building will be erected, which will be an honor to the projectors of the enterprise and a legitimate source of pride to the city.

Abingdon has a well managed volunteer fire department, organized in December, 1877, and consisting of an engine and a hook and ladder company, with a membership of about fifty. At the tournament held at Peoria in 1879, the Abingdon hook and ladder company won the State championship. The members of the department are paid twenty-five cents each for attendance at a fire or a meeting.

The first newspaper published was the Abingdon Messenger, which was founded in 1856 by Chambers and White. Its publication was discontinued after two years. The Nonpareil was published by D. H. Elliot, but lived only a year. The next paper to appear was the Reporter, which was conducted during 1861 and 1862 by C. C. Button. E. E. Chesney published the Gazette for a short time, and from 1869 to 1875 W. H. Heaton issued the Knox County Democrat. He sold the paper to H. C. Allen, who started the Knoxonian, which lived for about three years. The Educational Magazine, a thirty-two page paper, devoted to the interests of Abingdon College, was edited and founded by J. W. Butler in 1864-5. S. J. Clark and J. S. Badger founded the Abingdon Leader in 1874, but discontinued its publication after about a year. In 1875 Frank L. Ritchey issued the first number of the Abingdon Express. This was a small sheet at the beginning, but gradually grew in size. It died within ten years. Charles K. Bassett, who, when a boy of sixteen years, had printed a small sheet, three inches square, which he called the "Amateur News," began the publication of the Abingdon Register in 1877. It appeared for several years, when it was discontinued. The Enterprise was established in 1880, by J. C. Cromer, who sold it, in 1884, to J. N. Reed and R. E. Pendarvis. Charles A. Murdock bought the paper in 1893, and one year later disposed of it to M. A. Cleveland and E. M. Killough. Mr. Killough had before this (in 1892) founded the Herald, and the two papers were consolidated, under the name of the Enterprise-Herald. This paper is still published. Abingdon has also two other journals, the Argus and the Kodak. The former first appeared on March 8, 1882, the proprietors being W. H. Clark and William Purdue. Mr.

Purdue withdrew from the firm in 1883, since which date Mr. Clark has edited the paper and conducted the business alone. The Kodak is a journal of neat typographical appearance, and was started by Jesse C. Shoop in 1897.

The city's banking facilities are good, there being two solid financial institutions; the First National Bank and the private banking house of J. Mosser and Company. The latter was opened in 1895, and Mr. Mosser is highly esteemed as a sagacious, conservative business man.

The People's Bank was opened December 1, 1879, with an authorized capital of $30,000. M. C. Bates was President, and J. B. Mackey, cashier. In December, 1882, its capital was increased to $50,000, and in 1885 it was changed to the First National Bank of Abingdon. This institution has done a successful business ever since it was organized, and is today recognized as one of the leading banks of the county, having over $200,000 on deposit. The present officers are: Thomas Newell, President; J. F. Latimer, Vice President; Orion Latimer, Cashier.

Abingdon has had two other banking institutions, but both have gone into voluntary liquidation. T. H. and Strawther Givens, with J. M. Dawdy, engaged in banking under the firm name of Givens, Dawdy and Company, in 1873. In 1878 the business was reorganized and the Union Bank of Abingdon incorporated, with M. C. Bates as President, and Strawther Givens as Cashier. It went into liquidation in 1886. The Abingdon Safety Bank, incorporated under the State law, was organized in 1892, with a capital of $25,000. M. Reece was President, and Jesse Barlow Cashier. It went into liquidation in 1896.

It is impossible to give the name of the first physician who located in Abingdon. Some say a man by the name of Golladay was the first, but the memory of the old settlers is so treacherous that it is difficult to make a positive statement. It is said that Doctors Garfield and Hubbard located here in 1841, and that in 1846 Dr. W. H. Heller moved to Abingdon. He is now in active practice, having been over a half century in his chosen profession in one locality. Dr. Madison Reece, a son of David Reece, one of the early settlers in the village, won great renown as a physician. He studied medicine with Dr. Heller, went to the army and was promoted to the rank of Major, and after the war settled in Abingdon for the practice of his profession. He was known all over the Miltary Tract, and probably no physician in central Illinois enjoyed a larger practice. The present physicians are W. H. Heller, C. F. Bradway, Jesse Rowe, F. B. Dickinson, T. W. Davidson and J. S. Cannon.

Among the very old residents of Abingdon is Dennis Clark, who settled here back in the thirties. He held the office of County Judge for over twenty years and now lives a quiet and retired life at his residence in South Abingdon.

Population, 1899, estimated, twenty-eight hundred.

By A. P. Aten.

The preliminary work that resulted in the founding of Abingdon College began in April, 1853, when P. H. Murphy and J. C. Reynolds taught a select school in a rented building on Main street, in Abingdon. In the Fall of the same year it became Abingdon Academy, with a Board of Trustees. Early in 1854, a new brick building, now known as the old college building, was begun, the contract being given to Jesse Purdue in consideration of ten thousand dollars. In February, 1855, the institution was chartered as Abingdon College, and in January, 1856, removed into the new building and began work with a faculty composed of P. H. Murphy, President; J. C. Reynolds, Professor of Ancient Languages; J. W. Butler, Professor of Mathematics, and an efficient corps of assistants. This faculty continued without material change until 1858, when J. C. Reynolds resigned and A. J. Thompson became Professor of Ancient Languages. President Murphy was removed by death in 1860, and J. W. Butler was chosen to succeed him. William Griffin about that time became Professor of Mathematics. Judge Derham was shortly afterwards added to the Faculty as Professor of Science, S. P. Lucy as Professor of Elocution, and Albert Linn as Professor of Mathematics in place of Mr. Griffin, who had resigned. In 1868, A. P. Aten was chosen Professor of Belles Lettres, and Professor Lucy retired, to accept other work, succeeding Professor Derham in the chair of Science, however, in 1871. The Faculty as thus constituted continued until 1874, when President Butler, with Professors Lucy and Aten, retired on account of some internal troubles that threatened the life of the college.

In 1868, what is known as the new building was erected at a cost of forty thousand dollars, and was occupied early in the next year. A period of great prosperity now began, which continued for six years, after which its decadence was equally well marked.

In 1874 Oval Pirkey became President, holding the position for one year. He was succeeded by Clark Braden. All efforts to revive the college seemed unavailing until after F. M. Bruner assumed the presidency, in 1877. He became sole owner of the institution, by purchase, in 1880, and continued at its head until 1885, in which year negotiations were successfully concluded by which Abingdon College was united with Eureka College, and its alumni were recognized for all practical purposes as alumni of the last named institution. Not long afterwards the Abingdon College property passed into the hands of Professor Summers, of Kansas, who established a school known as Abingdon College Normal, which existed for several years. In 1895, the property was purchased, through the efforts of President Evans, by Hedding College, and has since been owned by that institution, whose normal and musical departments are conducted therein.

HEDDING COLLEGE.

By J. G. Evans.

Abraham Swarts, who laid out the town of Abingdon, in 1836, contemplated the founding of a college, but did not live to realize his ideal. His sons, Oregon P. and Rev. Benjamin C. Swarts, and his daughter, Mrs. Thomas R. Wilson, were so impressed with his plans that they embraced the first opportunity to lead in such a movement.

Hedding Collegiate Seminary was opened in the Methodist Church, November 19, 1855, with Rev. N. C. Lewis, A. M., as Principal.

The first building was erected in 1856-7, at a cost of fifteen thousand dollars, and occupied December 16, 1857. In February, 1857, a charter was obtained incorporating the institution under the name of Hedding Seminary and Central Illinois Female College. Professor Lewis, who resigned at the close of his third year, was a man of fine ability, broad culture, large experience and good practical sense. He laid well the foundations upon which others were to build.

John T. Dickinson, A. M., was elected to fill the vacancy, and was in charge of the seminary for nine years, including the four years of civil war, so trying to institutions of learning. Professor Dickinson, with the aid of some generous friends, succeeded in keeping the school alive until the war closed and young men and prosperity returned.

In 1866, Rev. F. M. Chaffee secured subscriptions for an endowment fund amounting to eleven thousand dollars. The first moneys received were diverted, with the consent of the donors, to be used in building. The balance was never paid, and the seminary was left without any endowment. Professor Dickinson was a good teacher, excellent scholar and a Christian gentleman. He was succeeded by Rev. M. C. Springer, who was President five years. Under his administration a new building enterprise was inaugurated.

Rev. C. Springer, financial agent, called a public meeting in Abingdon, at which Rev. J. G. Evans, who was in charge of the special effort, secured subscriptions amounting to twelve thousand dollars. A building, to cost sixty thousand dollars, was planned and the foundations laid. Unexpected difficulties were encountered, discouragements multiplied, subscribers withheld payments because they doubted the ability of the trustees to go forward, and the work ceased.

Professor Springer had a fine personal appearance and, being dignified in manners, courtly in bearing and gentlemanly in conversation, was well qualified to direct the education of young people. But he was conscious of the impossibility of realizing his ideal while embarrassed by the limited room in the old building. Disappointed in his expectations, he resigned in 1872, leaving an honorable record behind him. Rev. J. G. Evans, A. M., was chosen as his successor.

A very serious difficulty in the way of resuming the building enterprise was found to exist in the discouragement arising from the want of confidence. Subscribers refused to pay until they could see the work going forward, and that could not be without means. A. J. Jones, financial agent, P. M. Shoop, Superintendent of Work, and the President advanced the money to begin work, and as the walls went up confidence was restored, subscriptions were paid and success assured. The new building was occupied in 1874, but not completed until 1876. The cost was thirty-five thousand dollars.

In August, 1875, articles of incorporation were granted to the institution by the Secretary of State, under the name of Hedding College, and full and thorough college courses were adopted. The first administration of President Evans closed in 1878, at the end of six years of hard and successful work. No indebtedness for current expenses had been incurred, subscriptions on hand were ample to cover all indebtedness upon the new building, the attendance had nearly doubled, the graduating class of that year numbered fourteen, and eighty undergraduates remained.

In 1878, Rev. G. W. Peck was elected to the presidency, and held the position four years. He was a good teacher, but lacked the experience and knowledge of Western life and customs necessary to success. Seeing a rapid decline in attendance and a growing annual deficit, he became discouraged and resigned, leaving an accumulated deficit for current expenses of over ten thousand dollars.

Rev. J. S. Cumming, A. M., succeeded him. He entered upon the duties of his office with enthusiasm, and prosecuted the work with untiring energy. The difficulties were almost insuperable, but with a faith that gave birth to the hope he toiled, with a heroism worthy of the noble cause he so faithfully served. His success in raising money saved the institution, and it was through no fault of his that the school still declined in numbers. After four years of anxiety and hard work, Dr. Cummings resigned and Rev. J. R. Jaques, D. D., Ph. D., was elected as his successor. Dr. Jaques was well known as an educator, was able in the pulpit and on the platform, and his election gave universal satisfaction; but he was unable to do outside work, the finances did not improve, nor did the attendance increase, and at the close of the third year he resigned, but retained his chair and took the vice-presidency.

Rev. J. G. Evans, D. D., LL. D., was again called to the presidency. The property had been sold under mortgage, and the privilege of redemption had expired. The attendance the previous year was only one hundred and six. The property has been restored; seven thousand dollars raised and expended in repairs; the Abington College property, which originally cost sixty thousand dollars, has been purchased; the attendance has increased every year, reaching four hundred and three last year; and fifty-five thousand dollars have been secured in endowment notes.

The moral tone and religious sentiment in Hedding have always been of a high order. A daily prayer meeting has been well maintained for thirty years, and from eighty to ninety per cent of the students are Christians.

The government of Hedding is administered upon the theory that such restrictions ought to be enforced as are found necessary to secure the best attainments in the legitimate work of the college, and protect students from being injured by objectionable environments and vicious influences. Secret fraternities, match games with other colleges, football, profanity, attending dances or theaters, drinking intoxicants and the use of tobacco are prohibited, because considered detrimental to good government and injurious to student life. Gymnasium work and all proper athletics are sanctioned and encouraged.

Rev. J. G. Evans resigned, and in June, 1898, Hyre D. Clark, D. D., Ph. D., became President.

FREDERICK P. FOLTZ.

Frederick P. Foltz is the son of Christian and Hannah (Kieffer) Foltz, and was born November 15, 1830, near Strathburg, Franklin County, Pennsylvania.

The family is of German and French-Huguenot ancestry. His paternal great-grandfather was Frederick Foltz, who emigrated from Rotterdam on the ship Tyger, George Johnson, master, November 19, 1771, and settled near Myerstown, Lebanon County, Pennsylvania. His grandfather, also named Frederick, moved to Letterkenny Township, Franklin County, Pennsylvania, in 1798. He had nine children, seven sons and two daughters, of whom Christian, the father of Frederick P., was the sixth. His great-great-grandfather, on the maternal side, was Abraham Kieffer, a French-Huguenot, who came to America in 1750. He had three sons and two daughters. His son, Dewalt, had seven sons and two daughters, the youngest son, Christian, being F. P. Foltz's grandfather.

The Foltz and Kieffer families come of excellent stock, and in France, Germany, and America, have been noted for their intelligence, enterprise, thrift, and usefulness. Many of the Kieffers were, and still are, prominent in church and State as teachers and ministers. Ex-Governor Beaver, a distinguished officer in the Civil War, and at present a member of the Superior Court, is a grandson of Catherine Kieffer. Ex-Speaker and General Kieffer, of Ohio, came from the Maryland branch of this family. Some of the most eminent divines in Maryland and Pennsylvania are named Kieffer, and include Dr. J. Spangler Kieffer, of Hagerstown, Maryland; Dr. Harry Kieffer, of Easton, Pennsylvania; and Professor J. B. Kieffer, of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Foltz's brothers, Daniel, Cyrus, and Martin L., served in the Civil War, southwestern army, and Christian C. was Captain of an emergency company. His brother, George, was a successful contractor and builder. Another brother, Moses A., of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, has been, for many years, editor and proprietor of "Public Opinion." He is an influential republican, has been a member of the legislature, and was appointed by President McKinley Postmaster of Chambersburg.

Mr. Foltz was educated, and learned the carpenter's trade in Pennsylvania, which occupation he engaged in until his removal West. He was married in Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, October 8, 1855, to Melinda C., daughter of George and Susan Jacobs. She was born in Waynesboro, December 7, 1833. In 1857, Mr. Foltz moved with his family to a farm in Kansas, but, owing to the disturbed condition of that part of the country, he returned to Pennsylvania, and worked at his trade until the close of the war. He then made a second trip to Kansas, which, like the first, proved disappointing, and he located at Abingdon, Illinois, where he has for many years been a leading citizen of the town and county. He has taken a conspicuous part in all matters pertaining to the advancement of Abingdon, and was prominently concerned in securing the construction of what is now the Iowa Central Railroad, of which he was a director; he also acted as collector for the company for some time, in which capacity he was very successful. He was among the first to erect modern brick business blocks in the city of Abingdon, and built and owned the Foltz Opera House. He is the owner of much valuable property in the city. He was a pioneer in the introducing and manufacture of tile for drainage purposes, and was a member of the first manufacturing company formed for that purpose. He is now a stock holder in the Abingdon Paving Brick and Tile Company. Mr. Foltz is a druggist, and has been in the business since 1865. He is the discoverer and manufacturer of a valuable antiseptic germ-destroyer and pain alleviator called "Presto," which has proved a boon to suffering humanity.

Mr. and Mrs. Foltz are the parents of seven children: Louise Belle, born at Chambersburg, Pennsylvania; Jennie Augusta, born in Shawnee County, Kansas; Frederick Luther, born in Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, and died in Kansas, April 18, 1864; Linnie M., born in Abingdon; and Lillie M. and Helen D. (twins), born in Abingdon. Lillie M. died September 15, 1870. The family are connected with the Congregational church.

In politics, Mr. Foltz is a republican; he has been Alderman of the city of Abingdon several terms. He is highly esteemed by his fellow townsmen.

JOHN WEBB NANCE.

John Webb Nance, son of William and Nancy (Lowe) Nance, was born in Rockingham County, North Carolina, May 15, 1814. His father was a native of North Carolina, as were his grandfathers, John Nance and Thomas Lowe. The name is French, and the family is of Huguenot descent.

Mr. J. W. Nance's boyhood was passed in Tennessee. For a while he worked at farming in Henry County of that State, and at odd times found employment as a carpenter. In the Spring of 1845, John Nance came to Warren County, Illinois, and purchased one hundred acres of land, which he cultivated till 1878. The following year he removed to Abingdon, where he now resides.

Mr. Nance is a member of the religious body known as Missionary Baptists. He is well thought of in the community, and is honest and upright in his dealings with his fellow men. In politics, he was originally a whig, and since 1856, has been a democrat. He became a Mason in 1850, and was admitted to membership in the Monmouth Lodge, Number 37.

Mr. Nance was married May 24, 1836, to Nancy Simmons, in Calaway County, Kentucky. There were ten children: Rufus D.; Francis M.; Susan A.; Mary J.; Sarah E.; Charles W., deceased; Nancy C.; Martha W.; John A.; and Robert H. His second marriage was with Mrs. Harriet E. Brooks, January 11, 1874. His present wife was Mrs. Mary (Lucas) Crawford to whom Mr. Nance was married April 20, 1879. She is the daughter of Daniel and Jane (McKenzie) Lucas, and was born March 18, 1822, in Ross County, Ohio.

THOMAS NEWELL.

Thomas Newell was born in Brown County, Ohio, September 19, 1821. His parents, Thomas and Margaret (Taylor) Newell, were natives of Ohio, the former of Brown County; he was a soldier in the War of 1812; they died in Park County, Indiana. His paternal grandfather was a native of Ireland.

Mr. Newell was reared a practical farmer on the homestead in Indiana. He was married in Park County to Louise M. Smith, September 14, 1843. They have six children, all of whom are married: Mrs. Sarah A. Burnside; John W.; William H.; Mrs. Julia M. McFarland; Mrs. Emma Leigh; and Kate E., the wife of Samuel T. Mosser. Mr. Newell came to Knox County in 1847, and purchased eighty acres of land near Herman. He afterwards purchased one hundred and sixty acres, making two hundred and forty acres in Chestnut Township, which he eventually sold and bought two hundred acres in Indian Point Township. He came to Abingdon in 1877, still attending to his farming interests. The money received from the sale of his land he invested in the Union Bank, and later in the People's Bank, which in 1885 was changed to the First National Bank of Abingdon, of which he is President.

Mr. Newell has been a conservative business man, and has always avoided speculation. He is a substantial and representative citizen; temperate in all his habits; has always taken an active part in educational affairs, and has labored for the best interests of the community. When, in 1889, Hedding College became involved financially, he bid in the property at sheriff's sale and paid the debts; and when, two years later, there was a failure in redeeming the obligation, he received the deed of the property, but deeded it back to the college, with the provision that it should never be burdened again nor sold on account of debt, thus enabling the institution to continue its good work.

He also induced friends of the college to raise an endowment fund of $50,000.

Mr. Newell is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and of its official board. He has been Supervisor of Chestnut Township for eight years, and has held other local offices. In politics, he is a republican.

BARROWS, ROBERT P.; Farmer; born in New Hampshire, in February, 1833; educated in the common schools. His father, Asa Barrows, was born in Oxford County, Maine, and served through the War of 1812. His mother, Anna (Pike), was born in Granby, Vermont. His paternal grandfather, also Asa Barrows, was a native of Maine and a Revolutionary soldier. His forefathers came from Scotland and Wales. Mr. Barrows came to Illinois in 1858, and settled in Cooke County. In 1862, he enlisted in Company E, One Hundred and Thirtieth Illinois Volunteers, and served till 1865, when he returned to Cooke County, and in 1868, moved to Iowa, where he married and settled in Buena Vista County. In 1883, he moved to Nebraska, and in 1888, to Abingdon, where he has since lived as a retired farmer, real estate dealer and speculator. He was first married May 1, 1869, at Independence, Iowa. There were two children: Grace, now Mrs. William Edmonson; and Josephine. Mr. Barrows' first wife died March 2, 1897, and he was afterwards married to Mrs. Anna Grimm. In religion, Mr. Barrows is a Congregationalist. In politics, he is a republican.

BURNSIDE, ISAAC; Farmer; Abingdon; born August 26, 1826, in Pocahontas County, Virginia; educated in the common schools of Indiana. In 1852, he came with his father to Knox County, Illinois, after living in Ohio and Indiana, in which latter State he was reared on a farm. In 1857, he was married, near Hermon, to Libbie Price, and settled in Chestnut Township, where he was for many years a prominent and prosperous farmer. In 1883, he removed to Abingdon, where he has since resided. Mr. Burnside's second wife was Mrs. Susie Ruth, daughter of Samuel Soliday, who came from Ohio to Tazewell County in 1853, and in 1860 settled on a farm in Salem Township. For some years before her marriage, Mrs. Burnside was a school teacher. Mr. Burnside takes a keen but quiet interest in the public affairs of his town, and is known as an upright citizen and a successful business man. In politics, he is a republican. He is a member of the Christian church.

DAWDY, JEFFERSON M.; Farmer; Abingdon; born in Kentucky, January 24, 1812; educated in the common schools. His father, James Dawdy, came to Indian Point Township, Knox County, in 1846. Jefferson M. followed in 1847, and settled on Section 17, where he farmed until 1897, when he retired and moved to Abingdon. In 1834, he married Elizabeth Amos; eight children were born to them: James, John, Marshall, Cassie, Mary, Sarah E., Hattie E., and Bell. Mrs. Dawdy died in 1894, and since her death Mr. Dawdy has lived with his daughter, Bell (Mrs. J. W. Brown). In the early days, Mr. Dawdy was associated with Mr. Givens in the banking business. In 1865, he built a grist mill, which he conducted for some time. Mr. Dawdy is a member of the Christian Church, and was for some years a Trustee of the old South College. In politics, he is a democrat. He is one of the substantial men of Abingdon.

DECHANT, PETER; Mason; Abingdon; born November 17, 1820, in Germantown, Ohio; received a limited education in the common schools. His father, Peter Dechant, came from Germany, and was killed at the age of forty-six. At the early age of seven, young Peter Dechant began to work out, and when fifteen years of age had learned the mason's trade. He also worked in a brick-yard. In 1864, he came to Knox County and settled near Abingdon. For some years previous to his arrival in Knox County, he had been a contracting mason, which business he followed until 1889, when he retired. October 12, 1843, Mr. Dechant was married, to Nancy J. Hall, in Montgomery County, Ohio. They had six sons: Jeremiah, Peter H., Chase, William P., John S., and Grant. Mrs. Dechant died in 1891; the sons are scattered and Mr. Dechant lives with a daughter. He has been successful, and was the originator of the hollow brick wall theory for prevention of dampness. Mr. Dechant owned a farm four miles from Abingdon, and at all times combined his trade work with that of farming. In religion, Mr. Dechant is a free thinker. In politics, he is independent, and for some years was Highway Commissioner; has always taken a keen but quiet interest in town affairs. For fifty years he has been a member of the Odd Fellows.

DICKINSON, FRANK C.; Physician; Abingdon, where he was born April 20, 1868. His parents were John T. and Elvira (Bates) Dickinson. Professor John T. Dickinson was a native of New York, and was educated at the Wesleyan University at Middletown. He was an educator of high character, and was President of several colleges. As President of Hedding College, Abingdon, he was largely instrumental in building the north wing of the college; he died in 1888. Mrs. Dickinson, who survives him, was born in Pike County, Illinois, and educated at Mt. Holyoke, Massachusetts. Frank C. Dickinson is one of five children, and was educated at Hedding College and Iowa Wesleyan University. He is a graduate of the Chicago Homeopathic Medical College, class of 1893. He settled in Abingdon, where he has built up a good practice.

He was married February 6, 1879, at Prairie City, Illinois, to Ella Barlow, daughter of Samuel Barlow, of Warren County; they have one son, Glenn Yguerra. Mr. Housh was brought up on a farm, and after his marriage lived in Haw Creek Township, where he had one hundred and eighty-five acres of excellent land. In 1893, he went to Abingdon, and engaged in the insurance and real estate business; since February, 1898, he has been a dairyman. Mr. Housh has been a breeder of fine horses, and owned, in 1856, Byerly Abdallah; he now owns Zuleka Patchen. He is a successful business man. Mr. Housh is a democrat. He is a believer in Christian Science.

HUNTER, JAMES W.; Retired farmer; Cedar Township; born August 23, 1851, in Clinton County, Ohio; educated in the normal schools of Martinsville and Lebanon, Ohio. His parents were Charles N. and Mary C. (Bond) Hunter, born and reared in Clinton County, Ohio; his paternal grandfather, James Hunter, was a native of the same state, while his paternal grandmother, Harriet (Neal), was born in Hagerstown, Maryland. His grandfather, James Hunter, was a native of Ireland, where he was a teacher. Charles N. Hunter was a merchant and stockraiser in Ohio, where he at one time was considered one of the wealthy men. He died in 1876, aged forty-six years. Politically, he was a democrat. He was a member of the Christian church. November 16, 1876, at Hermon, Illinois, J. W. Hunter married Sarah A. Smith, a daughter of Charles Smith, a well-to-do farmer. They had two children: Charles M. and Isadora. The latter died in infancy. Mr. Hunter was reared on a farm in Ohio. He began teaching school when a young man; he taught in Ohio and Indiana, and at Olney and in Knox County, Illinois. In 1873, he was admitted to the Bar in Indiana, and afterwards continued his studies with ex-State Treasurer Wilson. In 1874 he came to Knox County and settled at Hermon, where he taught school for two years, when he married and began farming near Hermon. He became prominent in the democratic party of the township, and was elected Justice of the Peace. In 1887, he was elected Supervisor from Indian Point Township. In 1888, he was elected to the Legislature, and re-elected in 1890. In 1892, was nominated for member of Congress from the Tenth District and fell but a little short of election. February 20, 1894, he was appointed Deputy Collector of Internal Revenues for the Fifth District of Illinois, and held the office until 1898, when he moved to Abingdon. During 1889-90, Mr. Hunter was engaged in the mercantile business at Hermon, Illinois. His wife died July 15, 1899. In religion, Mr. Hunter is a Christian.

MAGINNIS, JOHN WESLEY; Postmaster at Abingdon; born at Morristown, Ohio, July 10, 1838, where he was educated in the district schools. He came to Bureau County, Illinois, in 1857. Prior to the War, he followed the carpenter trade, but when the news of the firing on Fort Sumpter reached him, at 9 o'clock in the morning, he left his bench, and was an enrolled soldier before 3 o'clock the same day. He served with Company B, Fifty-seventh Illinois Volunteers, until August 1, 1862, when he was discharged on account of illness. For twenty-five years he was in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company at Malden and Abingdon, Illinois, to which latter place he moved in 1866. He served four terms as Collector of Cedar Township, and for ten years was Constable in the same township and Bailiff in the Knox County Circuit Court. Mr. Maginnis' parents were Methodists, and he has adhered to that faith during his life. In politics, he never wavered from republicanism in its purest form. He was appointed Postmaster of Abingdon by President McKinley in recognition of his army service and fidelity to and active service in the republican party. On November 27, 1868, he was married in Abingdon to Maria Jane Richey. They are the parents of the following children: Albert Richey; Etha Mabel; Samuel Archie, deceased; Arta Velma; Anna Maria; John Scott; and William James. Albert is a member of Company D, Sixth Illinois Volunteers. Mr. Maginnis' father was Daniel Maginnis, a native of Loudon County, Virginia, who married Eva McClure, a native of Pennsylvania. His paternal grandparents were natives of Ireland.

MAIN, WILLIAM B.; Retired Farmer and Merchant; Abingdon; born in Otsego County, New York, December 7, 1835; educated in the common schools of New York State. His parents, Thomas P. and Laura (Allen) Main, were both natives of Otsego County, New York. His paternal grandparents were Joseph and Jane (Blanchard) Main. Peter Main, who settled in Connecticut in 1680, was a native of Scotland. W. B. Main came to Knox County, Illinois, in 1857, and located at Altona. In 1861, he enlisted in Company I, Seventeenth Illinois Volunteers, and served until 1862, when he was discharged for disability, having been wounded at Fort Donelson. Later he settled at Galesburg, and was a conductor on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad until 1879, when he removed to Abingdon, where he engaged in the hardware business, in which he was successful from the beginning, and soon controlled the largest business of its kind in this section of the State. He also bought several farms which he managed for some years. He retired from the hardware business in 1897. January 17, 1865, Mr. Main married Miss Harriet M. Bill, in Bainbridge, New York; they have had two children: Carrie E. (now Mrs. Claude Byram), born June 20, 1870; and George W., born August 19, 1875. Mr. Main is a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is a trustee of Hedding College and treasurer of its endowment fund. In politics, Mr. Main is a republican. He was Mayor of Abingdon in 1882. He is looked up to as one of the most prominent men of the city.

McWILLIAMS, SEYMOUR; Merchant; Abingdon; born March 14, 1861, in Mercer County, Pennsylvania; educated in the common schools. His father, John McWilliams, was a native of Pennsylvania, and his paternal grandfather was Robert C. McWilliams. Mr. McWilliams was married to Jennie Bell, April 8, 1885, in Lawrence County, Pennsylvania. Four of their five children are living: Jennie O., John R., Mark D. and Luke S. Mr. McWilliams came to Galesburg, Knox County, in 1883, and in 1885, began a grocery business in Abingdon, which he continued from 1885 to 1892. In religion, he is a Methodist. In politics, he is a democrat, and in 1894, was appointed Postmaster for four years. He was elected Supervisor in 1890, 1892, and again in 1899. In 1899, he was Collector. Mr. McWilliams has always taken a keen interest in town affairs.

MERRICKS, WILLIAM A.; Merchant and Farmer; Abingdon; born December 7, 1828, in Cabell County, West Virginia; educated in the common schools of Knox County, Illinois. Mr. Merricks came to Knox County in 1839, and after living with different farmers spent some years as a clerk. In 1880, he went into the grocery and farming business which he conducted until 1885. He now keeps a dairy, but has retired from active business life. April 15, 1852, Mr. Merricks was married in Abingdon to Hannah E. (Chesney). They have four children: Clayton O., Jesse J., Blanch E. and Fannie E. Mrs. Merricks is a daughter of Kent M. Chesney, who came to Knox County in 1836, and died in Topeka, Kansas. After his marriage Mr. Merricks settled in Abingdon and from there managed his farm for many years. He was the first City Marshal of Abingdon, and is now serving his tenth term as Alderman of the Fourth Ward, his election having met with very little opposition. He was Collector for some years. Mr. Merricks is a Christian in religion. In politics, he is a republican.

MOSSER, CORLISS GLENN; Merchant and Banker; Abingdon; born in Abingdon February 24, 1870; educated in Hedding College. Mr. Mosser's parents are John Mosser, a prominent merchant and banker of Abingdon, and Sarah J. (Carroll), daughter of William and Sarah Carroll. January 14, 1896, at Grand Ridge, La Salle County, Illinois, Mr. Mosser married Elizabeth Snedaker. Mr. Mosser was for two years, 1896 and 1897, Mayor of Abingdon, and is now President of the Library Board.

MOSSER, JOHN; Merchant and Banker; Abingdon; born January 1, 1832, in Preston County, West Virginia. His father, also John Mosser, was born in Maryland, and his mother, Susan (Frankhauser), was a native of Virginia; both parents were of German descent. The paternal grandparents settled in Maryland, where they died. Mr. Mosser's first wife was Mary, daughter of William and Sarah Carroll, who was born in Fayette County, Pennsylvania. The marriage took place in McDonough County, Illinois, in 1860; they had two children: Samuel T.; and Ida L., wife of J. W. Reed, a druggist in Quincy, Illinois. Mrs. Mosser died October 21, 1866. Mr. Mosser was married to Sarah J. Carroll, sister of his first wife, November 24, 1867; three children were born to them: Corliss G., Stacy C. and Lloyd L. The Carrolls were an old and prominent family in Fayette County, Pennsylvania. Stacy C. Mosser is a graduate of the University of Chicago, class of '97, and is now a reporter for the Chicago Times-Herald. John Mosser was reared to manhood in the old Virginia homestead, the only one of six sons who remained with the parents until reaching majority, and he left home without a dollar, but with the conviction that he had done his filial duty. He found employment at $13.00 per month, the largest wages paid in that locality, the tact causing considerable talk in the neighborhood. In 1855, he came to Illinois and settled in McDonough County, where he followed the blacksmith trade with his brother Jacob. After a partnership of nine years, they started a general store in Abingdon, February, 1864, which John Mosser and a third partner, John Reed, conducted eleven years, Jacob Mosser remaining a partner only five years. The business is now devoted exclusively to dry goods, and boots and shoes, under the firm name of John Mosser and Son; they also conduct a private bank. Mr. Mosser owns a fine farm of two hundred and forty acres in Cedar Township, and a quarter section of land in Coffee County, Kansas. He owns the Post Office building in Abingdon, and the buildings where his dry goods and banking business is conducted. He is a member of the I. O. of O. F. and of the A. O. U. W. In politics, he was formerly a democrat, but is now a prohibitionist. He was Mayor of the city of Abingdon four terms, and Supervisor two terms. Mr. Mosser is the oldest merchant in Abingdon, and one of the most respected citizens.

MOSSER, SAMUEL THEODORE; Merchant and Manufacturer; Abingdon; born November 2, 1861, in Industry, Illinois; educated in the public schools of Abingdon and in Hedding College, graduating in 1884. His father, John Mosser, is a prominent merchant and banker of Abingdon, and his mother was Mary (Carroll) Mosser, who died October 21, 1866. Samuel T. Mosser had, during the time of his education, assisted his father in the dry goods business, and in 1885, he became a partner and its successful general manager, materially increasing the business during a period of seven years. In August, 1889, in company with J. W. Cox and J. W. McCown, he organized the Globe Manufacturing Company, for the manufacture of workmen's clothing, the first manufacturing industry in the city, which proved a boon to Abingdon. They rented an old building and started ten machines, and engaged a first-class cutter. Their business was successful from the start, and increased rapidly, and the following year, 1890, a two-story building was erected, one hundred feet long by forty feet wide, which was occupied in July. Later, an addition, fifty feet by forty, was added, and in this large building one hundred machines are operated, employing one hundred and twenty-five people throughout the year. In this establishment, good wages are paid, better than in most similar concerns in the State. January 1, 1892, J. W. McCown retired from the business. Of this business, unique in the county, if not in the State, Mr. Mosser is the practical manager, while Mr. Cox travels on the road as one of salesmen. January 26, 1887, Mr. Mosser married Kate E. Newell, daughter of Thomas Newell, president of the First National Bank of Abingdon; one daughter was born to them: Leigh Marie Mosser, born February 14, 1893, died January 27, 1899. Mr. Mosser was Secretary and Treasurer of the Building Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose house of worship would be a credit to a much larger city than Abingdon. It was he who induced the people to adopt stone as a material, and the present magnificent proportions of the edifice are largely due to his energy. He raised a subscription of $2,000.00 for the organ, and he has led the choir for fifteen years. Mr. Mosser has proved a useful citizen in many ways, and is held in high esteem in the community.

RICHEY, JAMES; Mayor of Abingdon; born January 22, 1842, in Ireland; educated in Abingdon. His parents were William and Jane (Scott) Richey of Ireland. The family on both sides are of Scotch descent. Mr. Richey was married to Sarelda Haney, in Abingdon, in 1871. Their children are, K. M. Buttler, and Haney. Mr. Richey came with his parents from Columbiana County, Ohio, in 1853, and settled in Abingdon, where his father died July 6, 1876, at the age of sixty-five. His father was a democrat; he was successful in business and well known in the county; his wife died September 28, 1899; eight of their children reached maturity. James Richey is a republican. He was City Marshal in Abingdon for nine years, and then went to Galesburg, where he was Deputy Sheriff for eight years; he was Sheriff of the county four years and Chief of Police in Galesburg for one year. He returned to Abingdon, and served three years as City Marshal, and is now Mayor of the city, having been elected in April, 1899. He is also Deputy Sheriff of Knox County. He has a good farm of one hundred and eighty-nine acres. Mr. Richey is a member of I. O. O. F. He has always been faithful and cheerful in the discharge of duty. He is a Methodist.

SAMPSON, EDWARD M.; Indian Point Township; Justice of the Peace; born February 10, 1855, in Scott County, Indiana; educated at Alpha, Indiana. His father, Isaac Sampson, was born in Montgomery, Kentucky; his mother, Catherine (Young), was born in Hamilton County, Ohio. His paternal grandparents, Benjamin and Sarah (Charles) Sampson, were natives of Virginia; his paternal great-grandfather, John Sampson, was a native of New York, and his paternal great-grandmother, Betsy (Epperson), was born in Wales. His maternal grandfather, Abner Young, was born in New York, and his maternal grandmother, Jane (Wallsmith), in Ohio; his maternal great-grandparents, Jacob and Julia (Long) Young, were natives of Germany. January 25, 1875, Mr. Sampson was married to Mary C. Day in Monmouth, Illinois. They have two children, Cora E., who married J. W. Onan, and John. Mr. and Mrs. Onan have one daughter, Gladys. Mr. Sampson is a democrat, and has been School Trustee and Director in Indian Point Township. In April, 1893, he was elected Justice of the Peace and served two terms. He is chairman of the Township Democratic Committee. Mr. Sampson has studied law and medicine. In religion, he is a Christian.

SHUMAKER, JOHN B.; Retired Farmer; Indian Point Township; born July 5, 1814, in Franklin County, Ohio; educated in the common schools. His parents were Abraham and Elizabeth (Swisher) Shumaker. September 21, 1847, he married Sophia Rager in Franklin County, Ohio; four children were born to them: Sarah E., Jeremiah, Mahala Jane, and Sophia. Mr. Shumaker came from Ohio in 1843 and settled near Maquon. In 1844, he bought land in Indian Point Township, and was a farmer there until his wife died in 1878, since which time he has lived with his daughter, Mahala Jane, who married Robert L., son of John Shumaker. Mrs. Shumaker has two sons: Emory O. and Ray C. The latter is a farmer. Jeremiah is a miller in Abingdon; Sarah married James Bellwood, and has one son, Edward. Mr. Shumaker is a republican. He was Highway Commissioner about three years, and was for several years School Director. He has always been a prominent man. In religion, he is a Methodist.

SWARTS, ABRAHAM D.; was born at Abingdon, Harford County, Maryland, April 20, 1783. He married Ann B. Carroll, of Baltimore, the name of whose family is indissolubly connected with the State's history. Soon after their marriage, the newly wedded pair turned their faces toward the West, their objective point being the fertile, sun-kissed prairies of Illinois. He was among the early pioneers of Knox County, on whose history he has left the ineffable impress of his own untiring efforts and indomitable energy. He had a deep and abiding faith in the almost illimitable possibilities of the young State, and believed that it extended the brightest hope to the agriculturalist. His nature was kindly and generous, and his instincts philanthropic. He genuinely appreciated the value of higher education, although his own early schooling had been of a rather meager sort. (See City of Abingdon.) His original plan was to found a college near the site of his home, and his wishes were carried out by his heirs. From the institution founded through their efforts and liberal aid, hundreds of young people, of both sexes, have gone forth, valiantly to fight life's battle and to conquer success. (For Mr. Swarts' connection with the platting, founding and growth of Abingdon the reader is referred to that caption.) He died March 20, 1854, at the age of seventy-one years. He had lived to see the fruits of his earthly toil garnered into an abundant harvest, and he entered rest as "One who wraps the drapery of his couch around him,

And lays him down to pleasant dreams."

WARD, ROSCOE E.; Farmer; Indian Point Township; born in Marietta, Ohio, March 12, 1855; educated in the common schools and in Illinois University. He is a son of Dr. George A. Ward, and a grandson of Walter Ward of Philipston, Massachusetts. Mr. R. E. Ward came to Illinois in 1863, and settled in Henderson County, where he was interested in school affairs, having been a teacher in the public schools. In 1895, he came to Abingdon, to be nearer good schools, and bought a fine farm. He is one of the leading farmers of Indian Point Township. In 1898, he was made Trustee of Hedding College. In 1878, Mr. Ward was married in Lawrence County, Ohio, to Jessie F. Miller; they have four children: Alice N., George M., Elbert W., Roscoe S. In religion, Mr. Ward is a Methodist. He is a republican.

INDIAN POINT TOWNSHIP.

By M. B. Hardin.

Probably the first white man to visit Indian Point Township with a view to making his home within its boundaries was Azel Dossey, who entered it from Cedar in 1829, but remained only a few years. The first permanent settlement was made five years later, by John C. Latimer, who, in 1834, emigrated from Tennessee with his family. About the same time John H. Lomax came from Kentucky and settled in Section 7, and Stephen Howard, of the same State, who, with his family, settled on Section 6, putting up the first log cabin on that section. The next arrivals were in the following year (1835), when John Howard, Isaac and Alexander Latimer and John Crawford pre-empted claims on Section 16. Mr. Crawford was a minister of the Cumberland Presbyterian church. Two years later Alexander Latimer sold his claim to Daniel Meek, and removed to Cedar. With Mr. Meek came John Killiam, who settled on Sections 15 and 22. Henry D. Russell emigrated from Virginia at about the same time, and entered a claim in Section 24, where he lived for more than a quarter of a century, erecting the first brick house in the township in 1844. He was a thorough farmer, and his farm was one of the finest in the county. Early in the sixties he sold it to James R. Johnston, removing to Abingdon, and later to Kansas. Others followed, and the population of the new settlement began to grow apace. Merriweather Brown made his clearing in Section 7, and Bartlett Boydstrom on Section 17. Mr. Brown became a prominent citizen, and was at one time County Commissioner; and Mr. Boydstrom's son, William A., is superintendent of the building and bridge department of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company, at Galesburg. In 1837, John Howard disposed of his claim to John Davidge, who had moved into the township from Woodford County.

Among those who at this period—and for many years afterward—were reckoned leading men, may be mentioned Daniel Meek, to whom reference has been already made. He was an extensive breeder of fine live stock, and took a lively interest in public affairs. At different times he held the offices of Justice of the Peace, Supervisor and County Commissioner.

It is of interest to recall the names of these early pioneers and to bring to mind the memory of their stalwart virtues and their power of hardy endurance, but the imperative necessity for the curtailment of space forbids more than a passing mention of many whose names are as a household word in the township. John Shumaker, Sr., settled on Section 12, in 1837. He was the father of a large family, of whom one son, James, lives in the same locality at the present time. Charles Fielder settled in the southern part of the township in 1838; and John Vertrees and William Stewart in 1839. That same year, arrived Timothy and Julius Shay, who moved from Section 6 to Section 28 in 1844. George Hunt came in 1840; John Crowell in 1841; George Bowden, who settled in Section 14, in 1843; William Crawford, in 1844; and Charles Smith, who settled in Section 24, in 1846. Among others who came in the late forties and early fifties were Seth Bellwood, John Christopher, Silas Roe, Jacob Miller, Hugh Lowrey and George Cox. John Brown came in 1853. He has three sons, who, like himself, became prosperous farmers, and a daughter, who is the wife of J. Warren Dawley.

The early settlers encountered no Indians, although traces of aboriginal occupation were plainly discernible on every side. They found remains of the wigwams of the red men, together with innumerable flints, arrow and spear heads, axes and other implements of domestic or warlike use among savage tribes. It was the abundance of these relics that gave the locality its name—"Indian Point". Comparatively little timber was found by the pioneers, and this grew chiefly in Sections 31 and 36, along the borders of Indian and Cedar creeks and of the small streams which were their tributaries. They did, however, find well watered, rolling prairies, with rich, arable soil, of dark color, which held out promises which both the past and present have richly fulfilled. Today Indian Point is one of the most fertile and highly cultivated townships in the county. Its fertility may be ascribed to Nature and to Nature's God; its cultivation is due to the patient toil and resolute perseverance of its citizens.

The highest point of elevation is on Mount Hope farm, owned by R. E. Ward, from which may be obtained a view extending twelve miles to the east and commanding most of Indian Point, part of Cedar and Orange and all of Chestnut Hill townships. A noteworthy feature of the agricultural interests at the present time is that nearly, if not quite, one-third of the farms are leased to tenants, the owners having either retired from active pursuits or taken up a residence where better educational advantages are obtainable for their children.

Most of the farmers are engaged in the raising of cereals and the propagation and marketing of live stock. Among those who stand foremost in these lines may be named W. W. Byram, Robert Byram, J. W. Dawley, J. Warren Dawley, Robert Smith, James Bowton, George and Thomas Brown, William Cable, Frank Hall, T. H. Roe and Mr. Johnson. A fine breed of short-horn cattle is extensively raised and sold by J. W. Dawley and Son, on whose stock farm is also raised a large number of colts of Norman blood. W. W. and Robert Byram also deal largely in choice colts of this breed, raised by themselves. The breeding of fine Poland-China hogs is a feature on the farms of Indian Point. This is made a specialty by J. W. Lomax, J. L. Cashman and Charles and Robert Shumaker.

The first birth in the township was a girl-baby, born to John H. and Nancy Lomax, in 1835; the second was also a daughter, sent to John C. and Nancy Latimer, the birthdays of the two children being not far apart. The first marriage was that of William Ogden to Damantha Roberts, which was solemnized October 19, 1837, by Justice John Terry, of Chestnut Township. The first death to occur was that of Mr. Hubbard, who had settled in Section 16 in 1838. He died there, and his was the first interment in Indian Point cemetery.

The first public Protestant religious services held in the township, of which any record has been preserved, were conducted by Rev. John Crawford, a Cumberland Presbyterian clergyman, who has been already named as one of the earliest settlers. They were held at the house of John Howard. In 1848 the first church organization (and the only one ever formed outside of Abingdon and St. Augustine) was effected, under the guidance of Rev. Mr. Williams, of the Methodist Protestant denomination, at the "Valley School House". The body disbanded in 1858. Subsequently the Methodist Episcopal church organized a "class," but it did not long continue in existence. A Roman Catholic mission was established at the present site of St. Augustine at a comparatively early date. It was visited by Father St. Cyrid in 1837. A building was erected, and dedicated by Rt. Rev. Bishop Kendrick, of St. Louis, in 1843. Twenty years later a new structure was built. The present value of the church's holdings of real estate is ten thousand dollars, the property being free of debt.

The first school was opened in the Winter of 1837-8, its teacher being Dennis Clark, who, together with Jonathan Latimer, broke the first ground on the prairie in Section 6, in 1835. Mr. Clark was afterwards elevated to the bench, and is still living in the township. At that time the school district embraced all of Indian Point, together with a part of Warren County, and the original school house was constructed, after a solid fashion, of logs, and located in Section 16. The first winter's roll contained the names of thirty pupils.

Township organization was effected on April 5, 1853, at a meeting at which Samuel H. Ritchey was Moderator and Thomas A. Baldwin Clerk. The first officers elected were: Daniel Meek, Supervisor; Dennis Clark, Clerk; S. H. Ritchey, Assessor; Jefferson M. Dawley, Collector; and Henry Ground and Charles Williams, Justices of the Peace.

At present (1899) the township is crossed by two railroads,—the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and the Central Iowa, affording easy access for crops and stocks to all the great markets of the Northwest and Southwest. In earlier days, Copperas Creek and Peoria, or the Illinois, Okawka, on the Mississippi, and Chicago divided the trade. An illustration of commercial methods before the advent of railways may be of interest. William Stewart and Daniel Meek hauled the first load of wheat to Chicago. They sold it for twenty-five cents a bushel; bought salt with the proceeds; carted the salt back to Indian Point, and disposed of it at a profit which they considered amply satisfactory.

The first two villages to spring up (and the principal ones today) were and are Abingdon, on the northern line, and St. Augustine, in the south. A description of the latter—somewhat in detail—is given in a succeeding paragraph.

Of the old time settlers of the township, but one is left—Judge Dennis Clark, of South Abingdon. The most venerable inhabitant, however, is Marsham Lucas, who has attained the extraordinary age of ninety-six years, and whose remarkable strength gives promise of his rounding out a century.

The population of the township, as shown by the United States census returns, increased from two hundred and eighteen, in 1840, to nineteen hundred and forty-six, in 1890. The figures given during the intermediate decades were: 1860, eleven hundred and ninety-five; in 1870, eighteen hundred and fifty-four; in 1880, seven hundred and twenty-five. At present (1899) it is estimated at eleven hundred, exclusive of Abingdon and St. Augustine.

Outside of these towns there are six school houses (five frame and one of brick), valued at seven thousand dollars, in each of which the school terms extend over eight months.

ST. AUGUSTINE.

The site of St. Augustine, Fulton County, known as old St. Augustine, was first occupied by Osten Mattingly and Samuel Smith, in 1835. They named the settlement after St. Augustine, the apostle of Africa. Mr. Smith returned to Kentucky in 1837, and Henry Mattingly arrived about the same time. The latter was born in Maryland, in 1797, and Osten one year later. They came to Illinois from Kentucky, where their parents had settled. The brothers formed a partnership and opened a store, and it was not long before a thriving settlement sprang up. When the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad was built, the company found a side track could not be built nearer the village than the site of the present depot. Consequently, business soon drifted away from the old town. In 1854, the original village of what, not improperly, may be called new St. Augustine was laid out, and a survey made by E. T. Byram in 1856. Mattingly's first addition was made in 1857. The site is one-half mile north of the old village, in Section 32, of Indian Point.

The place contains four general stores, conducted by enterprising business men, and two churches, Catholic and Christian.

April 29, 1897, a disastrous fire destroyed about two-thirds of the business portion of the village. But the inhabitants are industrious and progressive, and probably the loss will soon be repaired. The present population is about three hundred. In 1880 it was two hundred and eighty-nine; in 1890, two hundred and fifty-five.

John Brown

The St. Augustine Camp of Modern Woodmen was organized September 24, 1896, with sixteen members. The first officers were: James Tamney, V. C.; M. J. Babbitt, W. A.; H. V. Harrod, E. B.; J. W. Decker, Clerk. The present membership is twenty-eight, and the officers are: James Tamney, V. C.; M. J. Babbitt, W. A.; G. H. Babbitt, E. B.; H. V. Harrod, Clerk.

JOHN BROWN.

John Brown, son of George and Martha (Hopkins) Brown, was born in Clermont County, Ohio, February 26, 1825. His paternal ancestry is Welsh, his great-grandfather, Joseph Brown, having come from Wales when a young man, in time to carry a musket with the Continental Army in the War for Independence. The musket is now a cherished heirloom of his descendants. After the war, Joseph Brown settled in Kentucky, and was one of the pioneers engaged in constructing the Fort Laramie military road through that State into Ohio. In 1880, his son, whose name was Joseph, moved his family across the Ohio River on a raft, and took a farm in Clermont County, adjoining the old Fort Denison tract, an important military center during the Civil War. His wife was Mary (Parks) Brown, also of Kentucky. There were thirteen children, of whom two still survive. George Brown, the father of John Brown, was born in 1800, just before the removal of the family to Ohio. His wife was Martha (Hopkins) Brown. They had nine children.

John Brown was born on the old homestead, and received his education in the common schools. For seven years he served in the State militia, a member of the Newberry Company, First Ohio Regiment. May 1, 1849, Mr. Brown was married to Eliza Ann Cox, daughter of James and Anna (South) Cox, residents of Ohio. Four years later, in 1853, Mr. and Mrs. Brown came to Illinois and settled in Indian Point Township, where Mr. Brown engaged in farming. He afterwards bought land on Section 15, where he now resides. He gradually added to his farm until eventually he was the owner of six hundred and forty acres, the greater portion of which he divided among his children. Mr. Brown is a prominent farmer and stockman. He belongs to the denomination called Christian. In politics he is a democrat. He never had a lawsuit, nor was he ever summoned as a witness on a case. Mr. and Mrs. Brown celebrated their golden wedding May 1, 1899.

There are five children: John W.; George; Thomas S.; James William; and Ann, wife of J. Warren Dowdy. Three of the sons are farmers in Indian Point Township.

BROWN, GEORGE M.; Farmer; Indian Point Township; born in Clinton County, Ohio, September 28, 1855; educated in the common schools. His father, William Brown, was born in Ohio; his mother, Mary (Smith) was born in Virginia. His maternal grandfather, John S. Smith, was born in Virginia, and his paternal grandfather, George Brown, in Kentucky. June 5, 1879, in Abingdon, Mr. Brown was married to Phoebe Swegle. Three of their children are living, Alta, Roland, and Mary; one son, Herbert, died in infancy. Mrs. Brown is the daughter of Lafayette Swegle, a farmer who came from New Jersey at an early day. In 1866, Mr. Brown came from Ohio with his father. He was a farmer and died in 1888, leaving four sons: John, Harvey, Robert, and George M. George M. left the old homestead in 1895, and bought the farm where his wife was born. In religion, Mr. Brown is a Christian. In politics, he is a democrat.

DAWDY, WARREN; Farmer; Indian Point Township, where he was born September 29, 1847; educated in the common schools. His parents, John and Tabitha (Boydston) Dawdy, were natives of Kentucky. His paternal grandfather was James Dawdy. John Dawdy came to Illinois and settled in Wood County in 1826. Later, in 1836, he came to Knox County, and died in Indian Point Township in 1875. February 1, 1872, Warren Dawdy, was married to Anna Brown in Indian Point Township. They have had two children: Clara, now Mrs. Robinson; and Minnie. The same year, Mr. Dawdy settled on the farm where he now lives. He is one of the prominent farmers of the county. In politics, he is a democrat.

GRAHAM, BENJAMIN F.; Farmer; Indian Point Township; born in 1865, in Clinton County, Ohio; educated in Bartlett's Commercial College, Cincinnati, Ohio. His parents, Samuel and Margaret (Hunter) Graham, were natives of Ohio; his paternal grandfather, Jonathan Graham, was born in Maryland. His maternal grandfather and great-grandfather were named Benjamin; the latter came from Ireland. October 23, 1894, Mr. Graham was married in Indian Point Township to Bell Myres. Mrs. Graham is a daughter of Stephen Myres, one of the early settlers of Indian Point, who died May 7, 1895, leaving one son, Harry, and four daughters: Bell, Emma, Lena and Nellie. Mr. Graham came to Indian Point Township in 1889, and began clerking in a store in Hermon. Later he clerked for Mosser and Son in Abingdon, but in 1895, settled on the Myres homestead, where he is a farmer and stockman. In politics, Mr. Graham is a republican.

HARDIN, MILTON BAXTER; Farmer; Indian Point Township; born July 12, 1829, in Clermont County, Ohio, where he was educated. His parents, John and Mary (Dole) Hardin, and his paternal grandparents, Peter and Elizabeth (Rowan) Hardin, were born in New Jersey, as were his maternal grandparents, Joseph and Rebecca Dole. Mr. Hardin was married in Fulton County, Illinois, January 28, 1864, to Ada C. Parker, daughter of Payton and Laney (McArthur), of Virginia, and Ohio, respectively. Their children are: Hattie, wife of Eddy Cable of Kewanee, Illinois; and King Milton. They are graduates of Hedding College, Abingdon. Mrs. Cable has two children: Mildred and Merwin H. In 1851, at the age of twenty-two, Mr. Hardin came to Illinois and in 1854 settled in Warren County. He clerked in a store in Abingdon for his brother, E. S. Hardin, for a year, and then engaged in the grain, lumber, and live stock business until 1864, when he bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres near Abingdon, to which he has added until he now owns two hundred and sixty acres of land. He is a prosperous and successful farmer. Mr. Hardin is a member of the I. O. O. F. and has filled all the offices of that lodge. In politics, he is a republican, and has been School Director, Assessor, and Supervisor from 1881 to 1884.

JOHN, ELISHA; Farmer; Indian Point Township; born November 24, 1832, in Clinton County, Ohio; educated in the common schools. His father, also Elisha John, was a native of Tennessee; his mother, Elizabeth (Brown), was born in Virginia. His paternal grandfather, Ebenezer John, was a native of Wales; his maternal grandfather, Christopher Brown, came from Germany. In 1853, in Ohio, he married Rachel Lewis; they had four children: Mandaville, Mary E., Edwin, and Samuel. Mrs. John was a daughter of George W. Lewis, who came to Illinois about 1829 and first settled near Danville; in 1858, he came to Knox County, and later moved to Missouri, where he died. Mr. John came from Ohio to Indian Point Township in 1856, and bought a small farm. In 1862, he enlisted in Company K, Seventh Illinois Cavalry, and served until 1865. He was in many hard battles, and was wounded February 22, 1863. He has been a very successful farmer and stockman, and owns five hundred and forty acres of land. He has given each of his sons a good farm. Mr. John is a republican in politics, and always takes a keen interest in public affairs. In religion, he is a Christian.

JOHNSON, OLOF G.; Farmer; Indian Point Township; born September 21, 1842, in Sweden, where he received his education and learned the shoemaker's trade. His father, Gilbert Johnson, was born in Sweden in 1801. In 1865, Olof G. Johnson came from Sweden and began to work by the month in Abingdon; he later worked at his trade for five years. In 1873, he began farming, and in 1888, bought his present farm, to which he has added until he now owns two hundred acres of fine land. He is one of the successful farmers of his section of the county. February 5, 1872, Mr. Johnson was married in Knoxville to Ingrid Swanson; they have three children: Grant O., Kirk M. and Victor L. In religion, Mr. Johnson is a Protestant. He is a republican.

McELREA, WILLIAM C.; Farmer, and former merchant; Indian Point Township; born February 10, 1839; educated in the common schools. His father was born in Ireland and his mother in Pennsylvania. In 1846, Mr. McElrea came to Indian Point Township with his father, and, after farming some years, engaged in the mercantile business at St. Augustine for nineteen years. He then conducted a store in Hermon, and in 1887, went to London Mills, where he was a merchant for eleven years. In 1898, he returned to the homestead where he is now a farmer. Mr. McElrea has been married three times; his present wife was Lottie (Pierce), whom he married in 1891. By a former marriage he has one daughter, Emma, who is now Mrs. Frank Shover. In religion, Mr. McElrea is a Methodist. In politics, he is a republican.

ROE, TRUMAN H.; born in Norwich, Chesham County, New York, May 19, 1839; educated in the common schools; Farmer; Indian Point Township. In 1842, Mr. Roe came to Knox County with his father, Silas Roe, and settled in Indian Point on Section 21, where his father died in 1865, leaving four sons: Silas, Daniel, Eli and Truman H. Truman H. Roe enlisted in 1861 in Company B, First Illinois, and served until 1862, then returned and in 1864 settled on Section 20. He was married September 22, 1864, in Galesburg, to Lucinda Stephens. Mr. and Mrs. Roe have three sons and two daughters: Oliver, Charles M., Perry, Eva, and Della. Mr. Roe is a republican, and was for several years a member of the Central Committee. For many years he was School Director, and has been Road Commissioner. In religion, he is a Christian.

SHUMAKER, JAMES; Farmer; Indian Point Township; born in Jackson County, Ohio, December 30, 1821; educated in the common schools. He came to Indian Point with his father, John Shumaker, in 1837, and the family has been one of the most prominent and successful of that locality. In 1848, Mr. Shumaker married Mary A. Lowrey; they have three children: Charles, who married Elinor, daughter of Samuel Davis; William, who married Hattie, daughter of Dr. Reece; and Leonard, who married Clara Moss. Charles has one son, James H. Leonard has one son, Clarence C.

STEGALL, MILTON; Farmer; Indian Point Township; born in Cedar Township, Knox County, Illinois, May 21, 1851; educated in the common schools. His parents were Frederick and Lovina (Marks) Stegall; the former came to Knox County in 1836 and settled in Cedar Township about 1840, and died there in October, 1896. There were four children: Milton, Elery, Sarah A. and Emma J. His paternal grandfather was also Frederick Stegall. November 27, 1879, Mr. Stegall was married to Amanda Fernow in Knoxville. They have two children: Asa and Emery. After his marriage Mr. Stegall began farming in Cedar Township, and in 1887, he bought a farm in Indian Point Township, where he now lives. In politics, Mr. Stegall is a democrat.

CHESTNUT TOWNSHIP.

By H. M. Reece.

The surface of Chestnut is much broken, and it is frequently described as being one of the "rough" townships of the county. The fact is probably attributable to the number of small streams which flow through it, watering it well. The chief of these are the Spoon River, Haw and Brush creeks, and a large creek—not named—a little south of Hermon. The soil is fertile and the land (very nearly one-half of which was originally covered with timber) is generally well cleared.

The township lies in the southern part of Knox, on the boundary line of Fulton County. It is crossed by two railroads; the Fulton County narrow gauge line passes through it on a very nearly central north and south line, while the Iowa Central crosses its southwestern corner.

The earliest settler was Anson Dolph, who came from Kentucky in 1833. He raised a crop of wheat that year on Section 17, and in 1834 came as a permanent settler. In the year last named came also John Terry, from Virginia, who settled on Section 16 and became the first Justice of the Peace. He enjoyed the distinction of having performed the first marriage ceremony in the township, the contracting parties being a Mr. Gay and a Miss Cope, whose wish for a legal union was sufficiently strong to induce them to ride a long distance on a single horse. Those early marriages often presented romantic features wholly wanting in the fashionable weddings of these days of purer refinement and higher civilization. To illustrate: One of the marriages solemnized by 'Squire Terry was that of a couple who stood on one bank of the Spoon River, while he pronounced the fateful words on the other, the stream being too swollen to permit either party to cross to the opposite bank. Mr. Terry afterward engaged in trade, and amassed what, in those times, was regarded as an independent fortune.

In 1836, Robert Leigh and Archibald Long came from Ohio and settled on Section 33, where Mr. Leigh remained until his death. Soon after his arrival he commenced raising hemp, and, there being no market for the raw product, he constructed a factory of a rude description, where he manufactured his own and his neighbors' hemp crops into rope. For a time the industry proved very profitable; and he, too, amassed a comfortable fortune. Mr.

Long, soon after settling on Section 33, removed to Section 19, where, in 1842, he platted the village of Hermon.

He was a local Methodist preacher, and soon after his arrival at his new home he organized a Methodist class, which met regularly at his house for many years. Of this devoted band only one is yet living—Mrs. Sally Shafer. The history of the growth of the Methodist Church in Chestnut—as well as that of other denominations—may be found on one of the succeeding pages.

Among the early settlers should be also mentioned O. P. Barton. He was famous in those times as a pedestrian, and gave repeated evidence of his prowess and power of endurance in this description of exercise. Once, starting on foot at the same time with several horsemen for the land office at Quincy, one hundred miles distant, he outstripped them all, securing the prize offered to the winner of the race, which consisted of forty acres of government land in Section 17. Another pioneer was Harmon Way, who was famous as a marksman and hunter.

The first house was built of logs by Mr. Dolph on Section 17, in 1833. The first brick house was that of Robert Leigh, erected about 1845. The first road was the old State road, from Peoria to Oquawka, which ran diagonally through the township from southeast to northwest. Its course, however, has been since changed, so that it now follows section lines. The first bridge was built about 1846, at the point where the old road crosses Spoon River. It was a very cumbersome, wooden affair, which was carried away and demolished by a flood in 1855.

The first birth was a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Shaver, in 1835. The first death was that of Jacob Harford, in 1836.

The first graveyard was on Section 33, and was established by Robert Leigh, soon after he settled on the section. It is not now used as a burial spot, although the few graves there are well cared for by his son Benjamin, who is a prominent citizen of the township. Two other cemeteries have been laid out, as follows: One on Section 19, near the Methodist Church, by Archibald Long, which has been several times enlarged; the other, in 1863, by the trustees of the Christian Church, near their house of worship on Section 18.

The first school house, after the fashion of those early days, was built of logs, and was exceedingly rude, as regarded both its exterior and interior. It was put up in 1836, and some years afterward was replaced by a frame building, which, after undergoing many alterations, is still used as the school house of District No. 3. Two years later (1838) the second school house, likewise of logs, was built on Section 28. It disappeared long ago, and the site is now occupied by the church of the United Brethren. The first school teacher to exercise his vocation was Mr. Haskins, who taught in what is now District No. 3. At present the township has eight schools, none of them graded, occupying buildings valued at six thousand, five hundred dollars. The aggregate attendance is two hundred and forty-three, out of a total population of three hundred and eighty-six minors.

The first mill was built by Mr. Howard on Haw Creek, about 1845. It was designed both for sawing lumber and grinding corn, but was only used a few years and has long since been only a memory. There was also a saw mill on Litler's Creek, on Section 25, about the same time, which has shared the same fate. Early in the forties, Mr. Parker manufactured brick on Section 23, for several years.

The first store was kept by John Terry on Section 16, and its stock was very limited. A Mr. Moor early established another on Section 15, but it proved unsuccessful, and he soon abandoned the enterprise.

One of the earliest taverns was kept by Jonathan Potts, on Section 22, on the old State road. The first physician was Dr. Porter, who came in 1838 and remained but a short time. He was succeeded by Dr. Morris, and he, in turn, by Dr. Wilson. At present the health of the town is looked after by Drs. McMaster and Browning.

The first settlers of the township were compelled to depend on Troy, in Fulton County, and on Knoxville, then the county seat, for postal facilities; but in 1848 a postoffice was established at Hermon, the mail being brought from Knoxville once a week. The first postmaster was a Mr. Massie.

The township was organized at a meeting held in 1857, by the choice of the following officers: Samuel Collins, Supervisor; John Terry and David Massie, Justices of the Peace; Mr. McCoy, Clerk; William Graves and Freeman West, Constables; Robert Benson, Collector; and Owen Betterton, Assessor.

For a complete list of supervisors since the organization of the township, the reader is referred to the article on "County Government," in Part I.

Justices of the Peace since the first elected have been Owen Betterton, Hiram Culver, Walter Bond, Samuel Jamison, Henry Bond, George Haver, Marion Dyer, T. J. Routh, Clayton Trumbeel, J. W. Ogden, and John E. Davis and Lee Lucas, the present dispensers of justice for the township.

There is but one village in Chestnut, originally called Harrisonville, but now known as Hermon; a somewhat detailed description of which is given in a succeeding paragraph. A village was laid out in Section 23, in 1852, by Andrew J. Parker. It was situated on the right bank of the Spoon, near where the present bridge crosses that stream. It never grew, and the plat was vacated by the legislature in 1869.

Four denominations have churches in the township,—the Methodist Episcopal, Christian, United Brethren, and Baptist. The first of these, in order in time, was the Methodist. Reference has been already made to the class established by Mr. Archibald Long, an early settler and local preacher. Through his efforts a modest church building was erected in 1842, and eight years later the congregation built their present commodious house of worship. Its original membership was thirty, and this has been increased to eighty. Rev. W. S. Welsh, a minister noted for piety and eloquence, is the present pastor, and Rev. G. W. Shafer is class leader.

The Baptist Society was organized early in the forties, by Elders A. Gogorth and C. Humphrey, and for a while numbered about forty. Of late years it has lost through deaths and removals, until only a few remain. They nevertheless maintain their organization, and monthly services are conducted by Rev. S. H. Humphrey.

The Christian Church in the township was organized in 1854, by Revs. John Miller and Gaston. The first officers were: Jonathan Price and A. L. Reece, Elders; and Joseph Rauth and Charles Smith, Deacons. At the outset the membership was about thirty, and services were held in the school house for the first ten years. At the end of that time the congregation erected their present comfortable house. The present membership is about one hundred, and the officers are: Joseph Beery and J. W. Ogden, Elders; Charles Martin, Edwin, John and C. E. Routh, Deacons; Mrs.

Kate Routh, Sally Moon and Ophella Bliss, Deaconesses.

The Church of the United Brethren was organized in 1859, and the denomination has a well-built edifice, on Section 28. The present membership is about forty. Rev. Mr. White is pastor.

The population of Chestnut Township, as shown by the United States census returns, at stated intervals, has been as follows: 1840, three hundred and thirty-five; in 1860, twelve hundred and sixty-eight; in 1870, eleven hundred and forty-four; in 1880, one thousand and eighty-seven; in 1890, nine hundred and nineteen.

One veteran of the Mexican War—W. W. McMaster—resides within its limits. It furnished its full quota under each call during the War of the Rebellion, besides a number of volunteers who were credited to other localities. School District No. 5 sent thirty-eight men to the front, of whom three were given commissions on the score of bravery in action, viz.:—Davis Vulgamore, made Captain, and Samuel Way, Lieutenant, in the Seventh Illinois Cavalry; and John Hall, Lieutenant in the Eighty-sixth Infantry Volunteers.

HERMON.

The village of Hermon was platted by Archibald Long, May 3, 1842. A fairly good clew to Mr. Long's politics is afforded by the fact that he named it Harrisonville. It did not grow rapidly at first, the United States census giving the place a population of only eighty-four in 1850, eight years after it had been platted. The change of name was made in 1848, on the establishment of a postoffice. For several years it was more or less of a business place, but the rapid development of Knoxville and Abingdon, with their better railroad facilities, sounded its death knell. Today it is nothing more than a dull, country postoffice, on the line of the Iowa Central Railway. It can boast of two general stores, a blacksmith shop, and two churches.

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows has a flourishing lodge, as also has the order of Modern American Woodmen. The former was instituted August 31, 1875, the charter members being C. E. Edmonson, S. P. Moon, Daniel Landes, Charles Thomas and H. M. Reece. Of these only the last named is yet living. The first officers were: S. P. Moon, N. G.; Daniel Landis, V. G.; C. B. Edmonson, Secretary; and

H. M. Reece, Treasurer. The present officers are: David E. McMaster, N. G.; S. C. Pattengill, V. G.; Charles Scaver and H. M. Reece, Secretaries; Samuel Pattengill, Treasurer. The lodge owns its own hall and has a surplus of nearly twelve hundred dollars in its treasury. The present membership is the smallest since the institution, numbering only twelve.

The Camp of the Modern Woodmen of America was organized July 23, 1896, with fifteen charter members, and the following officers: John Smith, V. C.; A. L. Browning, W. A.; W. D. T. Moon, Banker. There are now twenty-five members, with the following officers: John Smith, V. C.; Ira Rogers, W. A.; W. D. T. Moon, Banker; and A. L. Browning, Clerk.

BURNSIDE, MARK; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born in Maquon, November 4, 1862; educated in the common schools. His parents were William and Julia (Terry), the former was born in Virginia. His maternal grandfather was John Terry, and his paternal grandfather was another William Burnside, also born in Virginia. February 13, 1884, in Chestnut Township, Mr. Burnside was married to Maud Cranston. They had three children: Robert Roy, born December 25, 1884; Lula Pearl, born October 18, 1886, and Orpha Kitt, born January 31, 1889. Mrs. Burnside was born in Woodstock, Ohio, December 20, 1862. She is the daughter of Charles and Keturah Cranston, who are living at Galesburg. She is a member of the Universalist Church. Mr. Burnside owns a farm of four hundred and eighty acres, located in Sections 9 and 10, and has a very fine residence. He is a large dealer in cattle, hogs, and sheep. In politics, Mr. Burnside is a republican.

CRAMER, BENJAMIN; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born in Ohio, January 10, 1839; educated in the common schools. His parents, William and Sarah (Shutes) Cramer, were natives of Ohio, and were born respectively January 25, 1804, and September 13, 1805, and died in 1875, and 1872. They were married September 1, 1824. His maternal grandmother was Sarah Shutes, and his paternal grandfather was Adams Cramer. Mr. Cramer was married to Louisa Haynes in November, 1860, in Chestnut Township. They had four children: A. H., born December 8, 1861; George E., born November 22, 1863; Grace C., born November 5, 1869; and Asa, born March 13, 1877. Mrs. Cramer was born in Orange Township, Knox County, Illinois, January 30, 1842. She was the daughter of Herman L. and Gerilla Haynes, who died in Orange Township. Mr. Cramer is a republican and has been Assessor for a number of terms; Road Commissioner two terms, and School Director for twenty years. He has been a dealer in grain and live-stock as well as a farmer. His farm of two hundred and fifteen acres is situated two and one-half miles southeast of DeLong on Sections 1, 3, 4, 9, 10. Mr.

Cramer and his wife belong to the Methodist Church.

DAVIS, JOHN E.; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born December 7, 1866, in Indian Point Township; educated in the common schools. His father, Samuel Davis, was born in Somersetshire, England, and died in 1892; his mother, Lucy J. (Bond), born in Clinton County, Ohio, is still living in Hermon. His maternal grandparents were Walter and Ellen (Moon) Bond; his paternal grandfather, James Davis, was born in England. August 25, 1889, Mr. Davis was married in Chestnut Township to Rosa D. Hopkins. They have had two children, Nell, born April 29, 1891, and Floy, born August 12, 1893. Mrs. Davis was born in Chestnut Township August 25, 1868, and is the daughter of Thomas and Salie A. (Bootem) Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins was born January 4, 1831. He was a soldier in Company M, Fourteenth Illinois Cavalry, and after serving three years, was mustered out at the close of the war. He died August 23, 1895. Mr. Davis is a republican and has been Justice of the Peace and School Director in Chestnut Township. He has been Notary Public for five years, and is a member of the Knights of Pythias, Lodge No. 334, at London Mills. He has a cottage home on a farm of eighty acres in Section 21, which is abundantly supplied with stock.

HOPKINS, MRS. SALLY A.; Chestnut Township; born in Jackson County, Ohio, February 17, 1832; educated in the common schools. Her father, Laban Booton, was born in Cabell County, Virginia, February 17, 1809; her mother, Catharine (Shoemaker), was born in Ohio June 6, 1812, and died January 29, 1861. Her maternal grandparents were John Shoemaker and Sally (Woulfberger), the latter a native of Pennsylvania. Her paternal grandfather was Laban Booton; he was of English descent; her paternal grandmother, Nancy (Davis), was born in Wales. Mrs. Hopkins taught school about seven years, and received her first certificate from Judge Sanford, of Knoxville. December 7, 1865, near Hermon, Illinois, she was married to Thomas Hopkins; they had four children: Willie G., born September 3, 1866, died March 18, 1870; Rosa D., born August 25, 1868; Mary C., born November 24, 1870; and Frank L., born May 4, 1873. Rosa D., married John E. Davis. Mr. Hopkins was born in Glenmorganshire, Wales, January 4, 1831; his parents, Griffith and Mary Hopkins, died in Portage County, Ohio. Mrs. Hopkins came to Illinois in 1836, and lived in the township of Chestnut, afterwards residing about ten years in Peoria, when she returned to Chestnut Township, where she and her husband resided until the time of his death, August 23, 1895. Mr. Hopkins was Supervisor of Chestnut Township, Road Commissioner, Assessor five years and School Director fifteen years. He belonged to the Odd Fellows in Hermon and Peoria, and was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He enlisted in Company M, Fourteenth Illinois Cavalry, and was mustered out in August, 1865. Mrs. Hopkins owns a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which she and her son are managing, on Section 4, Township of Chestnut.

LUCAS, G. M. LEE; Farmer and Harness-maker; Hermon, Chestnut Township; born April 16, 1847, near Claysville, Washington County, Pennsylvania. His parents, George L. and Elizabeth Martha (McGuffin) Lucas, were born near Claysville, Washington County, Pennsylvania. The father, who was born February 11, 1821, was a soldier in the Civil War, and was Fourth Sergeant of Company I, Seventy-seventh Illinois Volunteers. He died in a hospital ship on the Mississippi river, June 25, 1863. The mother was born February 28, 1821, and died September 25, 1848. His maternal grandparents were William McGuffin, born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, in 1796, and died November, 1847; and Mary (Graham), born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, June, 1799. The paternal grandparents were Benjamin and Mary (Lee) Lucas, born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, September 5, 1795, and January 20, 1799, respectively. The paternal great-grandfather, Isaac Lucas, was born January 6, 1759, served through the Revolution, and died April 8, 1848; he was the son of Benjamin Lucas of Plymouth, who was born in 1730, and died January 19, 1824; his father was William Lucas, the son of Samuel Lucas, who was the son of Thomas Lucas, who came from England and settled at Plymouth, Massachusetts. Mr. G. M. Lee Lucas was married December 20, 1870, in Elmwood Township, Peoria County, to Catharine A. Schenck. They have had eight children: Annetta, born December 9, 1871; William L., born September 12, 1873; Mattie Anna, born November 23, 1876; Henry Stewart, born January 13, 1879; Harlan Page, born November 29, 1881; Alvina May, born October 29, 1883; Ray Leone, born April 9, 1890; Ralph DeWitt, born July 11, 1892. Mrs. Lucas was born July 4, 1853, near Greenbush, Preble County, Ohio, and was the daughter of William L. and Catharine A. (Snyder) Schenck. She is a member of the Methodist Church. In the Spring of 1854, Mr. Lucas came to Brimfield, Peoria County, Illinois, and in 1894, came to Chestnut Township and settled on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Section 8. For fifteen years he had been a farmer in Elba Township. Mr. Lucas enlisted May 5, 1864, in Company D, One Hundred and Thirty-second Illinois Volunteers and was elected Corporal. He was Justice of the Peace in Elba Township and now holds the same office in Chestnut Township. He was on the Grand Jury one full term of court (1898) at Galesburg. In religion Mr. Lucas is a Methodist. In politics, he is a republican.

MATHER, L. R.; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born in Orange Township, November 30, 1862, where he was educated. His parents, R. L. and Mary (Allen) Mather, were born in Illinois; his paternal grandfather, Samuel Mather, was a native of New York. February 24, 1885, Mr. Mather was married, in Knoxville, to Alie Grim. They have four children: Stella M., born November 28, 1885; George E., born September 8, 1887; Arthur C., born February 11, 1891; Marie J., born June 19, 1894. Mrs. Mather was born January 21, 1861; her parents were J. S. and Elemina Grim, who are now living at Knoxville. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Hermon. She was for seven years a teacher in the public schools. Mr. Mather is Road Commissioner for Chestnut Township and has been School Director for two terms. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, Mine Shaft, of Knoxville. In politics, he is a republican. He has a farm of one hundred and sixty acres and raises considerable stock.

MEEKS, D. E.; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born in Knox County, May 23, 1861; educated in the common schools. His father, Abram W. Meeks, was a native of Virginia; his mother, Martha E. (Bonner), was born in Missouri. In Chestnut Township, September 1, 1886, Mr. Meeks was married to Netta Burnside. They have two children, William B., born in April, 1888, and Fay, born March 12, 1891. Mrs. Meeks was born in Chestnut Township, December 25, 1864, and is the daughter of William and Julian (Terry) Burnside, who are now living in Galesburg. Mr. Meeks' father, Abraham W. Meeks, came from Ohio to Knox County about forty-nine years ago and is now living at Knoxville. Mr. Meeks' farm of two hundred and forty acres is located on Section 21. He is a dealer in horses, cattle, and hogs, and has a fine house and out-buildings. The house is heated by a furnace. In politics, Mr. Meeky is a republican.

REECE, HENRY M.; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born August 2, 1837, in Highland County, Ohio; educated in the common schools and in Abingdon College. His parents, Aquilla L. and Susanna (Smith) Reece, were born in Randolph County, North Carolina. His paternal grandfather was William Reece. Mr. H. M. Reece was married first to Nancy Carter; they had four children: Caroline, Clarence, William, and John. His second marriage was with Emma Owens; they had two children, Harriet, and Frank. Mr. Reece came to Illinois in 1850, and to Chestnut Township, Knox County, in 1854, and worked on his father's farm. In 1862, he enlisted in the Civil War, and was discharged from service July 3, 1865. After leaving the army he lived in Ohio for six months, and in Illinois for a year. In 1868, he went to Kansas, and at the end of five years returned to Chestnut Township. In politics, Mr. Reece is a republican, and has served as Commissioner of Highways, Supervisor, and Justice of the Peace. In 1898, he was elected Treasurer of Knox County.

ROUTH, CHARLES E.; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born in Fulton County, Ohio, December 11, 1848; educated in Abingdon. His father, J. D. Routh, was born in Clinton County, Ohio, May 6, 1819; his mother, Jane A. (Smith), in Frederick County, Virginia, January 28, 1816. His maternal grandparents, John S. and Susan (Crouse) Smith, were natives of Virginia, the former of Loudoun County. His paternal grandparents were John and Jane Routh, the former from North Carolina, the latter from Tennessee. The paternal great-grandparents, Joseph and Molly (Redferson) Routh, were natives of North Carolina, while the great-great-grandparents were Edward and Hannah (Redferson); the husband was born in Wales in 1776, and was of Scotch-Irish descent. January 25, 1876, in Hermon, Mr. Routh was married to Catharine J. Martin; they have had two children: Francis E., born August 1, 1879; and John W., born July 3, 1888. Mrs. Routh was born in Ohio March 8, 1858, being the daughter of Francis and Eliza (Jones) Martin. She is a member of the Christian Church. Mr. Routh came to Knox County with his parents in 1851, and settled on Section 22, Chestnut Township, where he now lives. His mother died March 3, 1888, but his father, who has been Supervisor for five years, School Treasurer twenty-eight years, School Trustee eight years, Commissioner of Highways, Assessor and Collector, is living with him. Mr. Routh enlisted in Company K, Seventh Illinois Cavalry, in the Civil War. He is Supervisor for Chestnut Township, and has been Town Clerk and Collector. In politics, he is a republican. He is a member of the Christian Church. His farm is on Section 22, two and one-half miles east, and one-half mile south of Hermon.

SAMPSON, JOSIAH; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born October 21, 1829, near Richmond, Indiana; educated in log school house in Knox County. His parents were Richard H., and Jane M. (Heath) Sampson of Maryland; his paternal grandparents were Richard Sampson of London, England, and Mary (Hamlin) Sampson of Maryland; his great-grandfather, Benjamin Franklin Sampson, died in England; his maternal grandfather was Josiah Heath. Mr. Sampson was married to Martha A. Street, in Fulton County, March 25, 1852. They have seven children living: Richard H., Martha E., Hulda I., Nicy Jane, Sir John Franklin, Elmer E., and Alpha L. Mildred W. Rist, Mary O. B. Lowden, William, and Josiah are deceased. The last two died in infancy. Mrs. Sampson was the daughter of William and Nancy (Combs) Street of Virginia. They were pioneers in Highland County, Ohio, and came to Fulton County, Illinois, in 1837. Richard H. Sampson came to Knox County, October, 1835, with his wife and six children: Mary, Margaret E., Martha J., Josiah, Rebecca, and Josephine. Benjamin F., Richard, Joseph C., and Tabitha were born in Knox County. He first bought and improved one hundred and sixty acres of land, where he lived for fifteen years; he had been a teacher in Maryland; he died in 1850. His wife died in 1862. After his marriage, Josiah Sampson, farmed in Fulton and McDonough Counties, remaining in each for five years; he then returned to Knox County, bought out the other heirs to his father's estate, and now owns eight hundred and sixty-five acres of land in Chestnut Township. He is a successful farmer and stock-raiser. In politics, Mr. Sampson is a democrat.

SHAFFER, GEORGE W.; Minister; Chestnut Township; born November 16, 1824, in Lycoming County, Pennsylvania; educated in the common schools. His father, James Shaffer, was a native of New Jersey; his mother, Margaret (Brooks), was born in Pennsylvania. His maternal grandfather was Benjamin Brooks; his paternal grandfather, Henry Shaffer, was a native of Germany. Mr. Shaffer's first wife was Amanda, daughter of Thomas Logue, and was born in Lycoming County, Pennsylvania, where her parents died. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. There were three children: Alonzo G.; Thomas J., who enlisted in the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, during the Civil War, and died in the hospital at Memphis, Tennessee; and Emma Amanda, who married Warren England, a lawyer in Knox County. Mr. England died, and his widow married William Jones. March 7, 1888, Mr. Shaffer was married, in Chestnut Township, to Mrs. Sally Leigh, widow of Clark Leigh, who was born in Ohio, September 15, 1831; she was the daughter of Archibald and Catharine Long, born respectively in Tennessee and Virginia. Mr. Shaffer was a circuit preacher in Potter County, Pennsylvania, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He served on the East Genesee Conference, and preached at the Westfield Pennsylvania charge. He came to Illinois in 1855, and preached at the Whitefield charge. After preaching seventeen years in the Central Illinois Conference, he went to Washington Territory and joined the Columbia River Conference, where he remained for ten years, and then returned to Chestnut Township. He is now a local preacher and preaches occasionally. Mr. Shaffer owns a farm in Washington, but lives on a beautiful place three-quarters of a mile south of Hermon, Illinois. In politics, he is a prohibitionist. He is a member of the Free Masons.

TOWNSEND, MAURICE JONES; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born in Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, January 23, 1859; educated in Hedding College, Abingdon, Illinois. His father was William Townsend, who was born in New York; his mother was Lodema (Jones). The father is still living in Chestnut Township; the mother is deceased. Mr. Townsend was married February 25, 1885, in Chestnut Township, to Ruth Grice; they have two children: Jessie Elvira, born March 17, 1889; and Estella Lodema, born February 7, 1892. Mrs. Townsend was born in Ohio March 17, 1858; she is the daughter of Joseph and Susan Grice. Her father is deceased. Mr. Townsend has been Collector of the township of Chestnut for two years, and is a School Trustee. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, Lodge No. 334, London Mills. In politics, he is a republican.

WAINWRIGHT, DANIEL; Farmer; Chestnut Township; born May 4, 1829, in Clermont County, Ohio; educated in the common schools of Ohio. His parents were Vincent Wainwright of New Jersey, and Nancy (Hall) Wainwright, of Ohio; his grandfather was Daniel Wainwright of New Jersey; his maternal grandfather was Jeremiah Hall, of England. Mr. Wainwright was married to Eliza J. Cramer in Ohio, December 13, 1849. Their children are: Vincent; Maguire; Joseph; Benedict (deceased); Sarah E. Eiker, and Clara C. (deceased). Mr. Wainwright settled on the farm where he now resides in 1873, and has greatly improved his land. His oldest son is in Louisiana, his second in Missouri, and one is at home. His great-grandfather and two brothers came to America from England, and were in the Revolutionary War; his great-grandfather was killed, and his grandfather was wounded; his father died in 1844. Mr. Wainwright is independent in politics and has been Road Commissioner; he has been Supervisor three terms. He is a member of the Methodist Church.

MAQUON TOWNSHIP.

By Dr. G. L. Knowles.

In 1827, ten years subsequent to the original survey of this military tract, William Palmer and family, consisting of his wife and five children, located on the southwest quarter of Section 3, about forty rods southeast of the present limits of Maquon Village. This was doubtless the first white family to settle in Knox County. Mr. Palmer's cabin, made of black hickory poles, stood in the midst of Indian gardens, which were usually deserted by the savages in early spring in favor of better hunting grounds farther west. They returned every fall to remain during the winter, until the year 1832, when, as a result of the Black Hawk War, they took a final leave and that neighborhood knew them no more. Mr. Palmer lived here five or six years, planted an orchard and cultivated the gardens, or patches, vacated by the Indians, and, as his cabin stood on the old Galena trail, it afforded a stopping place for the miners going to and from their homes in the southeastern part of the State. A few years later Palmer sold his cabin to Nelson Selby and removed to St. Louis.

The following year Simeon Dolph, the pioneer ferryman of Spoon River, settled on Section 4, building his cabin of logs where the Rathbun house now stands. Owing, however, to a suspicion of his having been implicated in the death of an unknown traveler, he left the community a short time afterwards.

In 1829, Mark Thurman, with his family, settled on Section 25, and one of his daughters, Mrs. Hughs Thurman, of Yates City, still survives and is perhaps the oldest resident of the county. The next year the families of William Darnell, William Parmer, Thomas Thurman and James Milam settled on Sections 24 and 25. They all came from Highland County, Ohio. Subsequently a small, but regular and ever increasing, stream of settlers took up claims in the township, until, in 1837, it was thought a favorable opportunity had arrived for laying out a village, which was called Maquon. This is of Indian origin, signifying spoon. Sapul means river, and as the stream bearing this name assumes somewhat the shape of a spoon from source to mouth, it was called Maquon Sepol, or Spoon River.

This township was one of the chief Indian settlements in the State, and here were congregated families of the Sacs and Foxes and Pottawatomies. Their principal village was located on the present site of Maquon Village as here the Indian trails centered from all directions in pioneer days. A vast number of Indian relics have been, and are still being unearthed in the vicinity, and there are a great many mounds scattered about the neighborhood, the most prominent being the Barbero mound, which is supposed to have been built by the aborigines and to contain human remains. Maquon is well drained by Spoon River and the many small tributaries that flow into it, fine timberland abounds throughout the township, and about one-half of the surface is underlaid with an excellent quality of bituminous coal. The township organization was completed in 1853 by the election of James M. Foster as Supervisor; Nathan Barbero, Assessor; and James L. Loman, Collector.

The first school house in the township was built of logs in 1834 on Section 23, or, to locate it more accurately, about ninety rods west of where James Young's dwelling now stands. The first teacher in that building was Benjamin Brock, the only living pupils of whom are Mrs. Hughs Thurman, of Yates City, and Thomas Milam. The next house to be devoted to educational purposes was erected in 1836 or 1837, and was situated about fifty rods south of Bennington. The first school north of Spoon River was conducted by Miss Mary Fink in a shed adjoining the residence of Peter Jones, father of John Jones, the present postmaster. The only reading book at that time was the New Testament. It is claimed by some of Miss Fink's pupils that she "could read and write, but could not cipher." However, notwithstanding this defect in her education, it was said that her labors were most commendable and satisfactory.

The township at first contained the three villages of Maquon, Bennington and Rapatee. Bennington was originally laid out in the center of the precinct in 1836 by Ellsha Thurman, but it failed to develop sufficient importance to be called a village, although it was the township's polling place until 1858, when the name was changed to Maquon.

RAPATEE.

Rapatee Village can date its inception from the time of the building of the Iowa Central Railroad in 1883. It was laid out by Benjamin Adams in the southeast quarter of Section 33, and its first resident merchant was A. B. Stewart. The village contains at present a Union Church, three stores, a blacksmith shop, a wagon shop, two elevators, and about eighty inhabitants, and is located in the midst of a wealthy and prosperous community.

MAQUON.

The village of Maquon is situated on or near the site of the old Indian village at the north line of the township on the northeast quarter of Section 4, overlooking, toward the south, the valley of Spoon River. The survey, comprising about sixty acres, was completed October 24, 1836, by Parnach Owen, who also laid out the village, assisted by John G. Sanburn, William M. McGowan, R. L. Hannaman, Mr. Richmond and Mr. Beers. For several years Maquon had neither religious nor educational institutions, but was, on the contrary, the site of a distillery and a race track. The latter, however, have been supplanted by a church and school, which are well supported. The village was incorporated March 14, 1857, and its population, as shown by the United States census, has been as follows: 1880, five hundred and forty-eight; 1890, five hundred and one; 1899, six hundred (estimated). Previous to 1880 the census returns do not give the population separate from the township. The first building in the village was Cox's Tavern, which was built by Benjamin Cox and was located where Joshua Burnett's residence now stands; it was known as The Barracks. For twenty years it was used as barracks, kept by Nathan Barbero. The first store was conducted by John Hipple in a building erected by Matthew Maddox in 1839. Maquon has not supported a saloon since 1880, and the steady, industrious rising generation speaks well for the cause of temperance. The present business interests are represented by two banks, six grocery stores, two dry goods stores, one drug store, one newspaper, one harness shop, one butcher shop, one wagon shop, two barber shops, three hardware stores, three restaurants, two millinery stores, four dressmaking establishments, four blacksmith shops, one rolling mill, one elevator, one undertaking establishment, two livery and feed stables, two physicians and two ministers. The private bank of William Swigart was organized by that gentleman in 1881, with a capital stock of $100,000, the officers being: William Swigart, President; and F. C. Bearmore, Cashier. The deposits are about $40,000. A. C. Housh incorporated his private bank in 1882, with a capital stock of $50,000. The deposits are about $30,000. The officers consist of A. C. Housh, President; and E. L. Housh, Cashier. The Maquon Chronicle was established in May, 1899, and is owned and edited by Charles Benfield. The Breeze, an independent weekly paper, was started about the middle of March, 1896, by Gorge H. C. Palmer, and was discontinued in 1898. The business portion of Maquon has experienced six disastrous fires, all of them of doubtful origin, one of the greatest sufferers from this cause being J. W. Briggs. The oldest merchant in the village is A. M. Maple, who, in 1848, opened a grocery store, which he conducted until May, 1896, when he retired, leaving the business in the hands of his son, C. F. Maple. It is but a matter of justice to mention that, during his entire residence in Maquon, Mr. A. M. Maple has set an example of morality, integrity and honesty that the youths of the village would do well to follow.

Maquon schools, prior to 1848, were held in rooms furnished by Nathan and Calista Barbero. The first school house erected was a substantial brick structure, thirty by forty feet, built by William Purcell in 1848. It is still standing and is now used as an implement house. The principal teachers in that building were: Levi McGirr, Dr. A. H. Potter, Professors Fishback, Agnen, Helderman, Breckenridge, Olmstead, Cram, Miller, Bickford, Griggs, Grove, and McCullough. The present school building was erected in 1866 by J. L. Wallick, of Knoxville, at a cost of $7,000. It is a two-story frame edifice, with four commodious rooms, and gives employment to four teachers. The first principal, Robert Proseus, was one of the most successful educators the town has ever had, and was engaged at a salary of fifty dollars per month. The successors to Mr. Proseus were: Henry F. King, William Beeson, Robert Hill, John French, Mr. Palmer, Mr. Axelline, D. G. Hopkins, A. W. Ryan, Robert Hill, James Rischell and C. F. Hurburg, the last named being the present incumbent and who, at this writing, has held the position for three years. The initial attendance in the new school house numbered one hundred and seventy-five pupils, and at the close of the term, which expired in September, there were one hundred and thirty pupils enrolled, the average age of these being ten years. The whole number of days taught was 7,406, the average daily attendance was 92 46-80, and the actual cost of tuition per day was 6 1-2 cents a pupil. In 1899 the enrollment was one hundred and fifty-eight pupils. There are three grades and the school is considered one of the best in the county. The school houses in the township are eight in number, their value being estimated at $9,800; each has a library, with an aggregate value of seven hundred dollars, and out of the five hundred and thirteen persons under twenty-one years of age three hundred and forty-five are pupils.

Maquon Village was forty years old before Christian influence was sufficient to establish a church, although during that time many fruitless efforts were made by different faiths in that direction, the most prominent worker in the movement being Elder Scott, of Farmington, who was a member of the Campbell, or Christian Church. In 1841 the Presbyterians made an effort to establish themselves, and in 1842 the Methodists made a similar attempt, but neither met with any degree of success. In 1850 Spiritualism was introduced and affected the community to an alarming extent, the adherents of that faith holding full sway for ten or twelve years. In 1862 a United Brethren minister, the Rev. Wimsette, held a series of revival meetings in the old brick school house, which gave Spiritualism a serious blow, and as a result the church revived and prospered. About 1892 Christian Science obtained a firm hold on the community and a large number of the most devout Christians embraced that faith, and again the orthodox church was crippled. There are now two religious institutions in the township, namely: Maquon Church and Rapatee Union Church. The former was built in 1876 and dedicated September 11, 1877, by Bishop Jesse F. Peck, its first pastor being the Rev. Swartz, who served two years. H. S. Humes was the next to occupy the pulpit and he remained one year, his successor being L. B. Dennis, who stayed two years and then retired, having exerted in that time a strong Christian influence throughout the community. He was followed in the order named by E. H. Williams, William Merriam, A. P. Beal, R. B. Seaman, the latter of whom was a most worthy Christian and gentleman, through whose earnest efforts the present parsonage was built; Rev. Joseph Bell, whom Maquon people have every reason to long cherish in their memories; Rev. R. D. Russell, Rev. N. G. Clark, Rev. A. M. Bowlin, Rev. J. P. McCormick, Rev. R. G. Hazzard, Dr. Evans, Rev. Winters, and Rev. W. H. Young, the last named being the present pastor.

Rapatee Universalist Church was organized May 27, 1894, by the Rev. J. L. Everton and Rev. E. E. Hammond, with the following officers: A. B. Stewart, Moderator; Miss Nora Rapatee, Clerk; Mrs. F. P. Hurd, Treasurer. Meetings are held on alternate Sundays in the church building owned jointly by the Methodists and Universalists.

Rapatee Union Church was built in 1891 and was dedicated by Dr. J. G. Evans.

Maquon has been well represented by the medical fraternity, as will be seen by the following list of physicians who have practiced here since its organization: Doctors Emery, Hand, Allen, Williamson, Walters, Dunn, Allen, Dunlap, Cunningham, Stratton, Fidler, Tallman, Potter, Thomas, Townsend, Miller, Shaw, Niles, Hess, Southard, Morse, Knowles, Dickerson, Truitt and Long.

The township is justly proud of its unbounded patriotism some of its residents having taken part in three of the nation's most important wars. Among the early pioneers of the township were Philip Rhodes, John W. Walters and John M. Combs, who were soldiers in the War of 1812. Avery Dalton, residing near Elmwood, Illinois, who, at the ripe age of eighty-six years, is hale and hearty and who has furnished much information of the early history of Maquon township, and Madison Foster, deceased, were members of the Fulton County Rangers in the Black Hawk War. The rifle carried by Mr. Foster while in service is now owned by his son, Albert, and is in a good state of preservation, the old flint lock having been replaced by one of more modern manufacture. A full quota of two hundred and fifty soldiers was furnished during the Civil War, many of whom died on the field of battle fighting for the Union, while others still survive and occasionally live over again one of the most exciting epochs in the history of the country.

The fraternal societies are well represented in the township and a brief resume of the local branches is herewith presented.

Maquon Lodge, No. 256, I. O. O. F., was instituted April 29, 1858, and received its charter October 15, in the same year. The first officers were: L. W. Pennworth, N. G.; Allen Hanwick, V. G.; William Davis, Warden; James L. Burkhalter, C. During the month of August, 1858, the lodge room was destroyed by fire and the lodge became disorganized until after the Civil War, when, on January 4, 1868, it was re-instituted with the following officers: Captain James L. Burkhalter, N. G.; R. D. Thompson, V. G.; J. M. Groves, Secretary; William Swigart, Treasurer. The present officers are: Orsin Swan, N. G.; George Tasker, V. G.; W. W. Harler, Treasurer. At present the local body has sixty-four members and the lodge hall is owned in conjunction with the Masons.

Maquon Lodge, No. 530, A. F. and A. M., was organized October 1, 1867, and worked under dispensation for nine months before receiving its charter. The first officers were: Robert Proseus, W. M.; William Swigart, S. W.; L. J. Dawdy, J. W. The present officers are: C. F. Herburg, W. M.; C. F. Maple, S. W.; G. G. Shearer, J. W. The membership numbers about fifty devoted brethren.

The Degree of Rebecca was organized April 8, 1883, with thirty-nine members, and meetings are held in the I. O. O. F. Hall. The first officers of this order were: Salome Wilkin, N. G.; Hannah Holoway, V. G. The present incumbents are: Roxy Donason, N. G.; Lydia Holoway, V. G.

Hancock Post, No. 552, G. A. R., was organized January 26, 1886, with twenty-three members. The present officers are: Albert Smith, Commander; John Jones, Adjutant.

Maquon Lodge, No. 171, K. of P., was organized by George Jones, deceased, and was instituted September 29, 1887. The first officers were D. G. Hopkins, C. C.; C. E. Golliday, V. C.; S. W. Love, Prelate; E. L. Housh, K. of R. and S.; C. S. Burnside, M. of E.; E. D. Rambo, M. of F.; J. W. Davis, M. at A.; F.

P. Hurd, Representative. The present officers are: A. A. Gifford, C. C.; John Simpkins, V. C.; C. F. McKenny, Prelate; E. L. Housh, M. of F. and K. of R. S.; Wilson Holoway, M. of E.; Samuel McWilliams, M. at A.; N. Donason, M. of W.; J. L. Libolt, Representative. The Knights of Pythias Lodge has always been in a prosperous condition, both financially and socially. There are twenty-two charter members, the total membership being thirty-eight.

The O. E. S. was organized May 9, 1891, by Mr. and Mrs. Hoover, of Washington, Illinois, with fourteen charter members, the total number of members today being thirty. Meetings are held in Masonic Hall. The first officers of this order were: Mrs. Emma Hurd, W. M.; G. G. Shearer, W. P.; C. F. Maple, Secretary. The present officers are: Miss Abbie Dixon, W. M.; G. G. Shearer, W. P.; Miss Mattie Hobkirk, Secretary.

Bertie Lenore Temple, No. 10, Rathbone Sisters, was organized December 28, 1893, by Grand Chief Mrs. Jennie Haws, of Decatur, Illinois, assisted by Mrs. Belle Quinlan, G. M., with fifteen charter members and thirteen Knights. There are now forty-one members. The first officers were: Leona Housh, M. E. C.; Minnie Woods, E. S.; Lizzie Briggs, E. J.; Emma Hurd, M. of T. The present officers are: Belle Libolt, M. E. C.; Alice Wasson, E. S.; Maggie Housh, E. J. Minnie Woods, M.; Florence Thurman, P. C. This temple was named in honor of Bertie Lenore Thurman, deceased. Meetings are held semi-monthly in the K. of P. Hall.

The first birth and the first death to occur in the township was that of Rebecca, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman, in 1831. The first marriage took place in 1835, the contracting parties being Elisha Thurman and Anna Hall. Mrs. Thurman is still living, at an advanced age. The first Justice of the Peace was Mark Thurman, and the first Postmaster was William McGown, who held that position in 1837. The first bridge across Spoon River was built in 1839 by Jacob Conser, but it subsequently collapsed by its own weight and was re-built by Mr. Conser the following year. It was located almost directly south of the village of Maquon. The second bridge was erected by Benoni Simpkins in 1851, a few rods below the site of the present structure, which was built in 1873. The stone work was done by J. L. Burkhalter and John Hall, the wood work by Andy Johnson, and the iron work by Mr. Blakesley, of Ohio. The first distillery in Knox County was situated in Maquon and it furnished the cargo for the first shipment from Galesburg over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.

Maquon township has been remarkably free from criminality and has always possessed a high standard of morality, only two crimes of any importance having occurred in its history, of which a brief mention is here given. On March 17, 1883, Loren Thurman became engaged in a dispute with Jack Washabaugh and struck the latter with an ax, inflicting a mortal wound. Thurman was not punished. During the night of November 4, 1894, two masked burglars entered the house of Thomas Walter, located about two miles southwest of Maquon, and, with drawn revolvers, demanded his money. A desperate battle ensued, Mr. Walter using stove wood and chairs as weapons of defense. One of the burglars emptied his revolver during the struggle, one bullet striking Mr. Walter in the breast, but with the assistance of the latter's wife and daughter the men were finally driven from the house. One of the thieves was afterwards caught and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary.

The following record of the township population has been made by the United States Census Bureau: 1860, one thousand, nine hundred and twenty; 1870, one thousand, four hundred and twenty-six; 1880, one thousand, four hundred and forty-eight; 1890, one thousand, three hundred and thirty.

THOMAS J. FOSTER.

Thomas J. Foster was born in Indiana, April 3, 1822, and was educated in the schools of Madison County, Ohio. His parents, Joshua and Sarah (Silver) Foster, were natives of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Foster was married in Knox County, Illinois, July 13, 1851, to Sarah Harriet Blakeslee, daughter of Sala and Lydia B. (Pierce) Blakeslee. Mr. Blakeslee came from Connecticut, and Mrs. Blakeslee from New Hampshire. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Foster: Mary (deceased), Lydia, Rebecca Ann, James D. (deceased), Elizabeth, Lucy L. (deceased), Martha, Benjamin F., Joshua C., Ollie and Sala B.

After residing three and a half years in Fulton County, Illinois, Mr. and Mrs. Foster removed to Knox County, and bought one hundred and sixty acres of land in Maquon Township, where Mr. Foster died May 28, 1882, and where Mrs. Foster still resides. Politically, Mr. Foster was a democrat. He was an attendant of the Methodist Episcopal Church, he was also a master Mason, and member of the Masonic lodge at Maquon, Illinois.

G. L. Knowles U.S. D.

Mrs. Foster came with her parents to Illinois in 1835, when she was one year of age. They came by way of the Mississippi River, landing at Oquawka in Henderson County, and settled on a farm half a mile from Uniontown.

ANDREW CLINTON HOUSH.

Andrew Clinton Housh, son of David and Elizabeth (Thornbrough) Housh, was born October 16, 1834, near Greencastle, Putnam County, Indiana. The progenitor of the Housh family settled in Virginia, where grandfather Adam Housh resided till he moved to Kentucky and located near Louisville. Farming was his vocation, and politically, he was a democrat. There were born to him and his wife seven sons and four daughters: The sons were John, Andrew, Adam, George, Jacob, Thomas and David. Both Adam Housh and his wife lived to be very aged; she died in Kentucky.

David Housh, father of Andrew C., was born in Kentucky and removed to Putnam County, Indiana. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph and Rebecca (Gibson) Thornbrough of the same State. The father of Joseph Thornbrough was a Quaker; Rebecca Gibson was of Welsh descent. David Housh came to Haw Creek Township, passing through the place where Maquon now stands, July 3, 1836. He was a prosperous farmer, and one of the leading men of his township. In politics he was a democrat, and held various township offices. He died at the old homestead in May, 1879, at the age of eighty years. He owned at the time of his death about two thousand six hundred acres of land. In religious belief he was a Universalist. He served in the War of 1812, though only twelve years of age, doing guard duty in one of the frontier forts in Indiana. Later he participated in many Indian skirmishes in his vicinity. He came to Illinois when Knox County was mostly a wilderness. Mrs. David Housh yet lives at the age of eighty-nine years, having been born near Greencastle, Indiana, March 1, 1810. David and Elizabeth Housh had thirteen children, seven of whom are now living: Mary, Rebecca, James O., Andrew Clinton, Elizabeth, Daniel M. and Eveline; all of them have been devoted to agricultural pursuits.

Mr. A. C. Housh was educated in the common schools of Knox County, and was brought up on the farm. In the year 1858, with his father and three brothers, James O., Jacob C. and Daniel M., he entered upon a mercantile career in Maquon. They also engaged in the stock business and farming on a large scale. They had a general store, the largest in Maquon. A few years later he bought out his partners and conducted the mercantile business alone for several years, selling out in 1896. He opened a bank in 1884 called the "A. C. Housh Bank of Maquon," which he has conducted to the present time. He also owns and manages about fifteen hundred acres of farming land in Knox County, and also owns two farms containing three hundred and twenty acres in Nebraska. In politics he is a democrat. He has been Township Clerk, Commissioner of Highways, School Director and member of the Town Council. He is a member of the Masonic Fraternity, A. F. and A. M., Lodge No. 530, in Maquon. He is liberal minded in all things, and is worthy the esteem and confidence of his fellow citizens.

Mr. Housh was married at Knoxville, November 11, 1857, to Adeline, daughter of Peter F. and Elizabeth (Fink) Ouderkirk. Mr. and Mrs. Housh have two children: Emma F. and E. La Fayette.

DR. GILBERT L. KNOWLES.

Dr. Gilbert L. Knowles, son of William and Lucinda (Robinson) Knowles, was born August 13, 1846, in Macomb, McDonough County, Illinois. The genealogy of the family has its origin in England, and has included among its members many who were prominent in the world of art and letters. David Knowles, the grandfather of Gilbert L., was born and educated in Maryland, and moved to Washington, D. C., where he was a contractor and builder. He was married to Jane Roby. Four children were born to them: William, Robert, Mary, and Hamilton. Mr. Knowles was a whig. He died in Washington at the age of sixty-five. The sons of this family were all mechanics. William, the oldest, moved with his family to Macomb, Illinois, in 1839, where he worked at his trade of contractor and builder. He built the first substantial dwelling in McDonough County. He died in 1873, aged seventy-three years; his wife died in 1877, at the age of sixty-seven. They had six children: Charles, James, Robinson, Jane, Gilbert L., and Mary. James was drowned in the Sheridan River, Missouri, in 1858.

Gilbert L. Knowles was educated in the schools of Macomb, and at Hedding College, Abingdon, which institution he entered at the age of twenty-four, and from which he graduated with the degree of B. S. While at Abingdon he read medicine with Dr. Reece, who was one of the most prominent physicians in the Military Tract. Mr. Knowles entered Rush Medical College of Chicago, in 1878, and graduated in 1881. In the Spring of 1881, he located in Knoxville, and moved to Maquon in the Fall of the same year.

Dr. Knowles is indebted to his own untiring efforts for his success in life, having earned, unaided, the expenses for his literary and professional education. He has an extensive and lucrative practice, and enjoys the confidence and esteem of his fellow townspeople.

Dr. Knowles is a republican, and held the office of Coroner in Knox County for six years, his term of service ending in the Fall of 1892.

PHILEMON B. SELBY.

Philemon B. Selby, son of George and Ruth (Allen) Selby, was born in Lancaster, Ohio, in 1809. His father was born in Virginia, and, being in the employ of the Government, removed to Mackinaw where he married a second time, and died when on a visit to his children in Ohio. Mr. Selby's mother was the granddaughter of Dr. Silas Allen who served in the Revolutionary War; his early life was passed in the State of New York, but he removed to Ohio and died at Royalton in that State.

Mr. Selby came to Knox County in 1834. Mr. Elisha Barrett, who married Mr. Selby's sister Clista, had selected a mill site on Spoon River. Mr. Selby bought the land on which the mill was built, and, assisted by his brother Nelson, operated it for many years. He was also a farmer, on rather an extensive scale, and owned nine quarter sections of land at the time of his death in 1868.

Mr. Selby was married at the home of David Housh in Haw Creek Township, November 12, 1837, to Elizabeth Gullett, daughter of Joshua and Barbara (Housh) Gullett. Joshua Gullett was born in Delaware and brought up in North Carolina. He was a farmer by occupation, and settled in Washington County, Indiana, where he was married in a block house which served as a fort. His wife, Barbara, was a daughter of Adam Housh of Kentucky. They came to Maquon Township about 1840.

Five children born to Mr. and Mrs. Selby are now living: Elisha, Mrs. Amanda Summers, Mrs. Salina Clark, Henry, and Mrs. Ruth Bigelow.

Mr. Selby was a dealer in stock, buying and selling cattle, taking at one time a drove of three hundred and sixty to Ohio and swimming them across the Illinois River below Peoria Lake. He was a democrat politically, and was a friendly, broadminded man of many good qualities, both mental and moral, and highly respected by the community in which he lived.

Mrs. Elizabeth Selby, who survives him, is a woman of sterling character. In early life in Indiana she learned to weave cloth, coverlets and carpets, and followed the same vocation after coming to Knox County with her Uncle David Housh. After her marriage to Mr. Selby she lived in a double shanty made of slabs, and later lived for two years in a frame house, and then moved into a log cabin, at the old Selby homestead, where she lived eight years. When her husband went to Ohio with a large drove of cattle, Mrs. Selby accompanied him with their two children, and cooked for the cattle drivers. They returned with three loads of cloth which they sold in Knox County, and with the proceeds bought more cattle to forward to the same market. After the death of her husband she managed her estate wisely, having a large stock of horses, sheep and swine on her numerous broad acres.

THOMAS R. WALTER.

Thomas R. Walter, son of John W. and Hannah (Sumner) Walter, was born September 30, 1817, in Highland County, Ohio. His father, born in Virginia, was a soldier in the War of 1812; his mother was from South Carolina. He was third in a family of ten children: Betsey, William J., Thomas R., Jincy, Lettice, James, Bowater, John W., Cynthia and Richeson C.

Thomas R. was educated in the common schools of Ohio, and came to Illinois at the age of nineteen. He was married in Maquon Township, August 8, 1854, to Sarah J. Stephenson, daughter of Edward and Mary (Keys) Stephenson, the former of whom was born in Maryland, the latter in Delaware. Sarah J. was born in Franklin County, Ohio, September 24, 1835, and was the first of a family of six children: Sarah J., William, John, James K., Lewis N. and Edward O. The Stephenson family settled first in Haw Creek Township and afterward in Maquon Township where the parents died.

Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Walter: Vianna, Mary E. (deceased), Ethzelda, two who died in infancy, Lyman, Elnora, Thomas Ulysses, Laura B. and Bert E. Vianna was married to B. F. Adams of Peoria; Ethzelda was married to Frank Pickrel and died in Haw Creek Township, June 2, 1881. Lyman is a farmer in Maquon Township. Thomas Ulysses lives in Maquon Township, and the other three live with their mother on the old homestead.

Mr. Walter first purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land which he improved with good buildings and other fixtures, subsequently adding to his possessions till he owned nearly fifteen hundred acres of well cultivated land in Knox County, besides property in Maquon. He was Road Commissioner, and also a School Director many years. In politics, he was a republican. He died May 23, 1897.

Mr. Walter was a good farmer and a skillful business man; a hard worker, but an easy taskmaster; a supporter of the church, though not a church member; a friend of education; a good neighbor; a firm friend; a kind husband and father; a man of integrity and honor, "whose word was as good as his bond;" a man respected by all who knew him for his good qualities of head and heart.

ADAMS, WILLIAM HENRY; Farmer; Maquon Township; born in Rome, New York, January 22, 1844, educated in Knox County. His father, Andrew Adams, was a native of Ireland; his mother, Sarah (Coonrad), was born in Rome, New York. His maternal grandparents were Stephen and Jane Coonrad; his paternal grandparents were born in Ireland. January 29, 1880, Mr. Adams was married, in Maquon Township to Mary E. Jacobs; they have one child, Lottie. In religion, Mr. Adams is Orthodox. In politics, he is a democrat.

BOOTH, JACOB; Maquon, Knox County, Illinois; was born in Penobscot County, Maine, June 1, 1821. He was the son of Isaac and Mary Booth. Isaac Booth was born July 7, 1792, and married Mary Grinnell December 6, 1812. Mary Grinnell was born April 30, 1795. He died April 30, 1852; and his wife, April 12, 1836. She was the daughter of Royl Grinnell, a Revolutionary soldier, under General Hull. Jacob Booth came to Sangamon County, Illinois, in 1839, and to Knox County, in 1844. He was married to Malinda Housh, daughter of George P. Housh, September 19, 1844. Malinda Booth was born March 17, 1821, and died June 9, 1869. Jacob Booth's second marriage was to Edith

P. B. Selby

Martin, of Galesburg, Illinois, October 24, 1869. She was the daughter of Martin and Lucinda Martin. Mr. Martin died in St. Joseph, Missouri, in 1844. Mrs. Martin died in 1898, aged nearly ninety-five years. Mr. and Mrs. Booth have one adopted son, Frank Booth, of Abingdon, Illinois. Mr. Booth is a republican, and cast his first vote for Henry Clay in 1844. He and his wife are Christian Scientists, and are members of the mother church in Boston; and also members of the branch church at Maquon, Illinois, and were students of Mrs. Janet T. Colman, one of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy's loyal students. Mr. and Mrs. Booth are faithful workers in the cause of Christian Science.

CLARK, REV. NEWTON G.; Minister of the Gospel; Maquon; born July 18, 1840, in Warren County, Illinois. He is a son of Rev. William M. Clark, who came to Knox County in 1833, and in 1834 settled on the present site of Gilson, where he cultivated one thousand acres of land. Three of his sons were Methodist Episcopal preachers. His parents came from Kentucky. N. G. Clark was educated in the common schools and at Hedding College, Abingdon, Knox County. He entered Hedding at sixteen years of age. August 2, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, Eighty-sixth Regiment, Illinois Volunteers; he also served in Company I, Thirty-sixth Regiment, and was honorably discharged in June, 1865. He returned and worked on his home farm till 1874, when he entered the Methodist Episcopal ministry. He was ordained by Bishop Scott at Carthage, Illinois, and his "charges" were at French Creek, Knox County; Sunbeam, Mercer County; Wataga, Knox County; Rock River Valley, Rock Island County; Hamilton, Hancock County; Lewistown, Fulton County; Walnut Grove, Hancock County; Cameron, Warren County; Burnside, and Durham, Hancock County; Herman, Knox County; North Henderson, Mercer County; Maquon, Knox County; Victoria, Knox County; Williamsfield and Elba Center, Knox County; Douglas, Knox County, in 1894, after which he retired from active service. He moved to Maquon in April, 1892. In 1896 he bought a hardware store and added a department for groceries. Mr. Clark was married March 11, 1860, to Anna West, daughter of Samuel and Mary A. West, who were early settlers in Knox County.

HARPER, ROBERT HENRY; Farmer and Stockman; Maquon Township; born in Canton, Fulton County, January 8, 1848. His parents were John and Ellen (Robinson) Harper, natives of Cumberland County, Pennsylvania; his grandfather Harper was a native of Belfast, Ireland and of Scotch descent. His father came to Canton in 1846, and is now living in Farmington in the same county. At sixteen years of age, Robert H. Harper enlisted in the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll commanding; he served in this regiment one year and nine months and then, until the close of the war, was with Burnside in Mississippi and Tennessee. In the Fall of 1868, Mr. Harper came to Maquon Township. He now owns six hundred and thirty-six acres of land and is engaged in shipping stock to the Chicago market. September 15, 1869, he was married to Mary A. Hunter, daughter of Judge J. M. Hunter. There are five children: Robert K., Emma E., Mary, John, Harry. In religion, Mr. Harper is a Methodist. In politics he is a democrat. He was elected Supervisor of the Township in the Spring of 1899.

HOBKIRK, JAMES; Farmer; Maquon Township; born February 9, 1827, in Conobie, Scotland, where he was educated, and learned to be a baker. His father, Robert Hobkirk, spent four years in America and was born near Hawick, Scotland; his mother, Mary (Armstrong) was born in Conobie. They died in Scotland. Robert Hobkirk's father, William, was lost in the wilds of Canada. Mary Armstrong Hobkirk's parents, William Armstrong and Fannie (Moffat) were Scotch; the former was born in Conobie. In May, 1849, James Hobkirk was married to Jane Beattie in Scotland, and in August reached Maquon and took up farming, although he had previously been a baker. He rented a farm until 1860, when he bought eighty-three acres in Haw Creek Township, where he raised stock. In 1888, he moved to Maquon where he bought five acres of improved land. Between the years 1870 and 1880, he was twice elected Justice of the Peace, but having at that time no political aspirations, declined to serve; he is now, however, serving his second term in that office. He has taken a deep interest in educational matters and was School Director for seventeen years. In religion he is a Presbyterian. In politics, he is a democrat. His wife Jane (Beattie) died February 7, 1897, aged seventy-two years. They had two children, Mary and Martha. The former is now the homekeeper; the latter is a teacher in Haw Creek Township.

JONES, JOHN; Farmer; Maquon; born in Rochester, New York, August 12, 1828; educated in Allegheny County, New York. His father, Peter Jones, and his paternal grandparents, Phineas and Hannah (Harris) Jones, were natives of Vermont. His mother, Caroline (Fink) was a native of New York, and her father, John Fink, was born in the Mohawk Valley; John Fink's wife, Sarah (Crane) was a native of England. Peter Jones was twelve years old when the family moved from Vermont to Rochester, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Jones' children are: Josiah E.; Horace; John; Sarah (deceased); Walter; Catherine; Mary A. (deceased); and Warren. John Jones came to Knox County with his parents in 1835, and settled in Maquon, which was then a wilderness. The nearest mill was fifty miles away, but one was later built at a distance of twenty miles. In August, 1862, Mr. Jones enlisted in the Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer, and was elected Second Lieutenant in Company G. He served three years and came home as First Lieutenant. He helped organize a colored regiment at Fort Donelson, and was offered the position of Lieutenant-Colonel but declined. At Fort Donelson he acted as Adjutant General for four months and was then made Quartermaster of the Post. He was a strong abolitionist, and spoke his views fearlessly. After the war he farmed until 1876, when he located in Maquon, where he has been Postmaster for fifteen years. He spent four years in California as a miner and merchant. Mr. Jones is a Liberal in religion. In politics, he is a republican. November 2, 1854, Mr. Jones was married in Knoxville to Mary R. White, a daughter of John White of Knoxville, an early settler. Five of their children are now living: Mrs. Hulda C. Penman, Mrs. Mary W. Embick, Mrs. Kate M. Gifford, Emma H. and Robert C. Mrs. Jones died July 5, 1888, aged fifty-one years.

KINSER, ADAM; Farmer, Soldier, and Miner; born in Haw Creek Township, March 1, 1839, and educated in Maquon. His father, Jesse Kinser, and his grandfather Elisha Kinser, were born at Lynchburg, Virginia. Mr. Jesse Kinser was a farmer who went to Indiana where he married Phoebe Housh, a native of Lawrence County, Indiana, and the daughter of Adam Housh. Mr. Jesse Kinser came to Knox County in 1837 and settled in the northeast corner of Chestnut Township. Mr. Adam Kinser was engaged in farming until his enlistment in Company A, Fourteenth Illinois Cavalry. After an honorable discharge at Camp Nelson, Kentucky, December 13, 1864, he returned home and has since been granted a pension for injuries received during the war. In the Spring of 1866, he journeyed overland to Virginia City, Montana, his company having several skirmishes with the Indians en route. After six years of rough but enjoyable mining life he returned to Knox County, but went West again to Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas, where he successfully invested some money in a threshing machine and dealt in real estate for several years. November 27, 1872, he was married to Olive Straley at West Point, Missouri. She is the daughter of Elias and Elizabeth (Edge) Straley, of Virginia and Ohio, respectively. Elias Straley kept a hotel in Independence, Missouri, and then began farming in Miami County, Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Kinser have six children: William C., Alva A., Maud May, Emma Myrtle, Robert L., and Cecil K. On the death of his father, he returned to Knox County and has resided in Maquon since 1880. After a short period of business life he retired and in 1897, was re-elected Police Justice, an office which he has filled with great tact and ability. In politics, he is a republican.

MAPLE, AUGUSTAS MELVILLE; Farmer and Merchant; born at Cabin Creek, Louis County, Kentucky, April 9, 1819. His father, David Maple, and his grandfather, John Maple, were born in New Jersey, where the latter was married to Miss Thompson. Mr. David Maple was married to Mary Buchanan of Pennsylvania, a first cousin of President James Buchanan. He engaged in farming in Kentucky until his death; his wife died at her son's home in Maquon in 1856. Mr. A. M. Maple's grandparents lived to be very old, Mr. John Maple reaching the age of eighty-six, and Mr. Buchanan, who was a Pennsylvanian, that of eighty-five. Mr. Maple was educated in a log school house, and until twenty-eight years of age managed the old Maple farm and a large sugar camp in Kentucky. He sold out, went to Canton, Illinois, where he clerked for his brother A. T. Maple for a year, when he and John Morton bought out his brother's interest. After a partnership of three years, Mr. Maple purchased Mr. Morton's interest and moved to Maquon, where, until selling his store to his son, in 1896, he was successfully engaged in a general mercantile business. April 4, 1851, he married Mary Sheaff, of Canton; they had three children: Harriett Louise, now Mrs. Hayden, of Henry County; Charles Fremont, of Maquon, and Abraham Lincoln, of Hulls, Illinois. Mrs. Maple's parents were Phillip and Harriett (Forman) Sheaff; her grandparents were William and Mary (Miller) Sheaff of Pennsylvania, and her great-grandparents, who as children came from Germany on the same ship, were Phillip and Mary Sheaff. Mr. Maple and his wife belonged to the Christian church and for twenty years he was Superintendent of the Sunday school. They have been leaders in church and social work and he has energetically opposed the liquor element for fifty years. He is a republican in politics, and has held nearly all local offices.

MAPLE, CHARLES FREMONT; Merchant; Maquon, Illinois; born in Maquon, July, 1857, where he was educated. His father, A. M. Maple, was a native of Kentucky; his mother, Mary (Sheaff), of Pennsylvania. His paternal grandfather David Maple, and also the paternal great-grandfather, John Maple, were natives of New Jersey. His paternal grandmother, Mary (Buchanan) was born in Pennsylvania. His maternal grandparents, Phillip and Harriet Sheaff, were born in Pennsylvania and Delaware. Mr. Maple's maternal great-grandparents, William and Mary Sheaff, were natives of Pennsylvania. March, 1897, in Knoxville, Illinois, Mr. Maple was married to Eva J. Chapin. In religion, Mr. Maple is a Protestant; in politics, a republican.

OUDEKIRK, HARVEY; Farmer; Maquon Township; born at Maquon, December 15, 1838; educated in Knox County. His parents, Jacob and Nancy (Waffel) Ouderkirk, were born in New York, and came to Maquon in the Fall of 1835, accompanied by his father and their oldest daughter. After settling on a farm south of Maquon, they moved to Haw Creek Township, where he died in 1882, aged seventy years. His wife died in Missouri, in 1892, aged seventy-five. Their children were: Polly Ann, deceased; Mary J., widow of George Thurman; Harvey; Charles S.; Salinda, deceased; Welman J.; Emily E., wife of Dwight Joiner; Mrs. Harriet Barbero, deceased; Martha, deceased. Jacob Ouderkirk's parents, Frederick, a farmer in New York, and Elizabeth (Bond) were natives of New York. Nancy Waffel's parents were Henry and Elizabeth Waffel. Harvey Ouderkirk was raised on a farm and had few advantages, but by improving his opportunities has acquired a fair education. He was married to Sarah E. Cook, December 13, 1862, in Haw Creek Township. They have four children: Henry J.; Clara E., wife of Frank Briggs; Oscar B.; and Elnora E. The last two are at home. After his marriage he settled in a log cabin in Maquon Township, and though his farm was a rented one and corn selling at eight cents a bushel delivered, he succeeded in buying land in Chestnut Township. He now owns four farms, aggregating four hundred and seventeen acres. November 2, 1880, he moved to a fine farm one and a half miles west of Maquon. He has dealt successfully in stock. Mrs. Ouderkirk is a daughter of John and Hattie (Holloway) Cook, who came to Knox County in 1848. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church, but he afterwards joined the United Brethren. He died in Kansas. Mr. Ouderkirk, though poor, contributed corn to the Kansas sufferers in 1860. In politics, he is a republican and has held minor offices.

PICKREL, JESSE; Farmer; Maquon Township; born in Jackson County, Ohio, December 23, 1811; educated in the common schools. His parents were Solomon and Anna (Griffith) Pickrel of Virginia. They had seven sons and seven daughters. Jesse Pickrel was married November 2, 1834, in Athens County, Ohio, to Miss Rosa Johnson, who was born August 30, 1816. Their children are: Mrs. Sarah Ward (deceased); Mrs. Caroline Davis; Jesse, of Knoxville; Mrs. Ann Austin; Mrs. Melissa Baird; Milton, of Knoxville, and Douglas, who lives on the homestead, in Haw Creek Township. Mr. Pickrel was reared on a farm in Ohio, and came to Haw Creek Township in 1847, where he bought one hundred and sixty acres of land. At the time of his death he had four hundred and sixty acres. He left the management of the farm largely to his wife, who was a woman of rare gifts, good judgment, and kind heart. She brought up a family of sons who are exceptionally good business men, and she takes a deep interest in the welfare of those with whom she comes in contact. She is a member of the United Brethren Church. Mr. Pickrel is a democrat.

SELBY, ELISHA BARRETT; Farmer; Maquon Township; born November 3, 1839, at the old mill-site in Haw Creek Township; educated in Knox County. January 12, 1860, he married Sarah E. Barbaro in Chestnut Township. They have had eight children: Philemon B.; Mrs. Rhoda A. Dennis; Mrs. Delia Boyington (deceased); Nelson E.; Lyman; Mrs. Floy Lawrence; Edith; and Raymond. The last two are at home. Mrs. Selby is a daughter of Frederick and Malinda (Bartlett) Barbaro, who came to Knox County in 1850. Mr. Barbaro was born July 4, 1808, and is still living at the age of ninety-one. Mr. Selby lives in Maquon Township, Section 2, where he has three hundred and twenty acres of land. He has also forty-two acres on French Creek. He has been a farmer all his life. In politics, Mr. Selby is a democrat.

SELBY, WILLIAM HENRY; Maquon; Farmer and Stockman; born January 30, 1851, on the old Selby homestead in Maquon; educated in Maquon and in the Galesburg Business College. March 11, 1885, he was married to Florence Isabel Allen, daughter of William and America A. (Maxey) Allen, old settlers of Knox County. Mr. and Mrs. Selby have one son, William Floyd Selby. He settled on the home farm and later built a house on the northwest corner of Section 2. He has been successful as a farmer and stock man, and now owns four hundred acres of land. He has always been interested in fine stock, and has registered standard horses, hogs, and cattle, and has taken premiums at various local and State fairs. His running horses have been famous in Illinois and the adjoining States, his horse "Izell," having taken more premiums than any other horse in the county. Out of seventeen starts on the Ohio circuit he got first money fourteen times. On his farm, known as "Living Spring," he has about forty head of fine horses. Mr. Selby has done much for the advancement of fine stock in Knox County. In politics, he is a democrat.

SIMPKINS, GEORGE W.; Farmer; Maquon Township; born in Pennsylvania, December 17, 1832. His parents, Horatio and Mary (Rice) Simpkins, and his grandparents, Ananias and Rachel Simpkins, came from Pennsylvania. He was married in Haw Creek Township to Mary, the daughter of David McCoy, an old settler in Haw Creek Township. Their children are: Andrew; Anne, wife of David Barbaro; Nathan; and Henry. His second marriage, July 31, 1886, was with Mrs. Elizabeth (Moore) Pumyea, the daughter of Andrew and Margaret (Steinbrook) Moore. Mrs. Simpkins has two children by her former marriage, William Allen and Edith Pumyea. Mr. Simpkins was born on a farm, and has always been a farmer. After his marriage he rented a farm for two years, one-half mile east of Maquon; he then rented a farm of his father two miles farther east; he then lived for five years three miles northwest of Maquon, after which he moved to Decatur County, Iowa, where he remained one year and returned in 1859. He afterwards farmed five years in Elba Township, and fourteen years four miles west of Maquon. He then removed to Section 21, where he has one hundred and fifty-seven acres of finely improved land; he also has one hundred and sixty acres on Section 15, and four town lots. Mr. Simpkins is a democrat. He has been a member of the Grange for five years.

SMITH, HARRY A.; Farmer; Maquon, Illinois; born January 15, 1868, in Fulton County, Illinois; educated in the district schools. His father, William A. Smith, was a native of Pennsylvania; his mother, Sarah E. Smith, was born in Illinois. His paternal grandparents, Elijah and Susan Smith, were natives of Pennsylvania. His maternal grandfather, Andrew Pinegar, was born in Kentucky. His maternal grandmother's Christian name was Matilda.

The paternal great-grandmother's family name was Brown; that of the maternal great-grandfather, Marchant. November 24, 1892, at Rappahannock, Mr. Smith was married to Lillie M. Norval; they have had three children: Ethel, Halsey and Nellie. In politics, Mr. Smith is a democrat.

SWIGART, WILLIAM; Farmer and stockman; Maquon; born in Pickaway County, Ohio, August 15, 1822. He is of German descent. His father, Daniel Swigart, was a native of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania; his mother, Elizabeth (Conrad) Swigart, was born in Greenbrier County, Virginia. Mr. Swigart came from Marion County, Ohio, to Knox County, in November, 1852. For a time he sent occasional shipments of grain to Chicago, but in 1862, he engaged permanently in the grain trade. For many years he conducted a lumber yard, which he now rents to other parties. In 1878, he opened a general grocery store in partnership with J. B. Boynton, which business he still conducts. In 1881, he opened the bank which bears his name. Mr. Swigart is a member of the I. O. O. F. in Maquon, and is also a Mason, holding membership in the Maquon lodge, in Eureka chapter, No. 98, of Yates City, in Knoxville Council, No. 1, and also in the Peoria Consistory of Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rites. He owns three farms in Haw Creek Township and fourteen others scattered in various townships and counties. In all he possesses two thousand six hundred acres of improved land. October 21, 1847, Mr. Swigart was married to Eliza J. McHenry, in Wyandotte County, Ohio; she died in 1861, leaving four children: John; Jane, now the wife of O. D. Cooke, of Hinsdale, Illinois; Daniel, now living in Chicago; and Alonzo, deceased. His second wife was Susan Stewart, who was born in Indiana, and died in 1875. She was the mother of six children, of whom the survivors are: Elizabeth, wife of Charles Hartsook, of Haw Creek; Sarah, wife of F. C. Bearmore, Maquon; and Lincoln, of Knoxville. Mr. Swigart was married May 16, 1876, to his present wife, Elizabeth Bull, who is a native of Fairfield County, Ohio. Mr. Swigart has held numerous local offices and has been Township Treasurer since 1863. He supports the worship of the Methodist Episcopal and the United Brethren denominations. In politics, he is a republican.

WALTER, THOMAS ULYSSES; Farmer; Maquon Township, where he was born March 30, 1869; educated in the common schools of Maquon Township. He was married, near Gilson, July 15, 1891, to Bessie Leona Baird, daughter of Anthony W. and Melissa (Pickrel) Baird, of Haw Creek Township. They have one child, Harold Baird, born January 8, 1894. Mr. Walter was reared on the home farm, and received his training under the instruction of one of the best farmers in Knox County. He settled on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, to which he later added eighty acres.

He is successful and highly respected. Mr. Walter is a republican.

YOUNG, WILLIAM; Farmer; Maquon; son of John and Margaret (Boyce) Young, who were natives of Derry County, Ireland. He comes of a Protestant family of probable Scotch extraction, who can trace their descent through many centuries. By trade, the father was a weaver, and for seven years William colored the cloth which his father wove. The parents died at an advanced age in Philadelphia. William Young was married in Philadelphia, October 12, 1847, to Elizabeth (Gilmore), daughter of Douglas and Mary (Hunter) Gilmore, who were natives of Derry County, Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Young had eight children: Mary, deceased; John; Margaret; Mrs. Martha Payton; James; Mrs. Elizabeth Swan; Mrs. Anna Clark; and William, who died in infancy. Mr. Young came west to Wheeling, Virginia, and worked for three years in a foundry. In 1854, he came to Fulton County and then to Peoria County, Illinois. In 1856, he came to Knox County and farmed ten years in Salem Township. After the war he bought land in Maquon Township and is now the owner of five hundred and forty acres of good land.

SALEM TOWNSHIP.

By L. A. Lawrence.

Salem lies in the southeast corner of Knox County, and is bounded on the east by Peoria County and on the south by Fulton County. The Galesburg and Peoria division of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railway crosses it from east to west, entering in Section 12 and leaving it from Section 6; while the Buda and Rushville branch of the same road crosses it on a line running almost due south from Yates City, leaving the township from Section 35. These two branches afford Salem, perhaps, more miles of railroad than any other township in the county with the exception of Galesburg.

There are only a few townships that have as fine physical features or as marked beauty of outline as this. Commencing at a point known as Kent's Mound, on Section 12, which rises forty or fifty feet above the common level, a somewhat irregular ridge, sometimes called "divide," runs through the entire township, from east to west, taking the name of Pease Hill in its center and terminating at Uniontown, on Section 19, at its extreme western edge.

Fine views of the surrounding country may be obtained from almost any point in this ridge. It creates an almost continuous watershed across the township, providing the best possible natural drainage; and, as if to complete the system, French Creek and Swab Run, united, flow along almost the entire northern border from east to west; while Littler's and Kickapoo creeks course through its southern sections, the former to the west, and the latter to the east, and both having their source at about the township's center. Along these streams were, in early times, belts of good timber, but the requirements of civilization long ago necessitated the felling and consumption of most of it. What now remains is but the refuse trees and a second growth, that is fast falling before the farmer's axe. All the first settlements were made along the borders of those streams and belts of timber.

Salem was organized under the general law relating to townships on April 5, 1853, by an election held in a log school house near Michael Egan's home, on Section 29. S. S. Bufum was chosen Supervisor; William Gray, Clerk; J. E. Knable, Assessor; D. Waldo, Collector; T. A. Croy, G. W. Euke and J. Jordan, Justices; M. B. Mason, A. Kent and J. E. Duel, Highway Commissioners; J. Taylor and D. Waldo, Constables, and G. Christman, Overseer of the Poor.

John Sloan has been the supervisor most frequently re-elected, having served eight terms of one year each, at different periods, and others of from one to three years.

The first settlement was made by Alexander Taylor, on the northeast quarter of Section 6, in October, 1834. He was soon followed by Felix and John Thurman, Henry and Avery Dalton, Solomon Sherwood, Benoni Hawkins, William Kent, John Darnell, John Haskins and Sala Blakesbee, most of whom brought their families with them.

The first birth recorded was that of little Laura, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Haskins, in 1835; and the first to be joined in wedlock were Avery and Delilah Dalton, cousins, who were married in 1855, by Squire Mark Thurman. Mr. and Mrs. Dalton are yet living. The same year occurred the first death, that of Audrew Corbin.

The early settlers brought their religious faith and practice with them and held prayer meetings from time to time at convenient places. Their pious devotion attracted the attention of Rev. Henry Somers, who visited the settlement in November, 1835, or '36, and preached the first sermon, at the home of William Kent, on Section 13.

The first saw mill was built by James Mason on Kickapoo Creek, in Section 13, in 1835 or

'36; another, a little later, by Anderson Corbin, on the same stream, on Section 14.

The people of Salem have shown an enlightened public spirit in the matter of good highways, and have provided a system of good, substantial, iron bridges, set upon firm stone abutments, over all the principal streams, with stone culverts over most of the smaller ones. The question of constructing, grading and repairing the highways, was many years ago, by vote, left solely to the discretion of the highway commissioners. The result has been a uniform system of grading, which, with thorough underdraining, affords the best roads obtainable on prairie soil without resort to the Macadam process.

Salem has an abundant supply of bituminous coal, which has been mined for local use from an early date along the banks of the streams skirting the north and south sides of the township. The most productive mines are found along the Kickapoo and Littler's creeks. The first mining of which any record has been preserved was successfully undertaken by Pittman and Barlow, blacksmiths, of Farmington, Fulton County, who, in 1832, took out coal from the soil of Section 25 for use in their own forges. Mr. Avery Dalton was the first to mine to any appreciable extent for commercial purposes. He began operations on the same section three years later. Several drillings at Yates City have developed extensive and valuable veins, at depths varying from one hundred and twenty-five feet upward.

Not the least important among the industries which have helped to elevate Salem Township to its present position among the foremost in the county is that of stock-growing. Many of the most progressive farmers make the breeding of improved varieties a special feature of their farm work. Among the prominent stock-raisers may be named N. G. Daughmer and Son, D. Corey and Son, J. M. Corey, H. A. and James Sloan, E. H. Ware, Frank Runyon, A. D. Moore and R. J. McKeighan. The efforts of these men and others who might be mentioned have resulted in elevating the standard established for fine stock to as high a point in Salem as will be found in the best farming sections of the State.

Perhaps the thrift, enterprise and financial condition of an agricultural community—as well as the quality of its land—can be best gauged by its comparative tax assessment. As contrasted with those of other townships, that of Salem, for 1898, was as given below. Galesburg, Ontario and Cedar townships have been selected for purposes of comparison.

Average value of land: Galesburg Township, per acre, $14.95; Ontario, $14.08; Salem, $12.61. Total assessment: Cedar Township, $554,482; Ontario, $451,196; Salem, $442,033. The assessed value per acre for the other townships in the county ranges downward from the highest price named above to $6.81 for Persifer, and the lowest total valuation down to $229,898 for the same township. These figures tend to demonstrate that Salem is the third township in Knox, as regards both value per acre and total valuation, the city of Galesburg, being, of course, excluded.

By the census of 1860 the population was given as 1,311. In 1870 it was 1,906; in 1880, it had fallen to 1,794, and in 1890 it did not exceed 1,677. It consists chiefly of native-born Americans. There is also an admixture of foreign parentage, notably of Swedish, German, Scotch-Irish and Irish descent. Yet all are thoroughly, staunchly patriotic, intelligent and industrious.

Since 1860, on all questions of national policy Salem has been republican in its political vote by a strong majority; but in matters of local interest the yoke of party fealty sits but lightly on the necks of either republicans or democrats.

There are ten school districts in Salem, numbered in order to the ninth, the tenth being called Center. The last named is located on School Section 16. Of the ten school buildings, two, in Districts 3 and 4, are of brick, the others are frame. The first school house was located on Section 13, in 1838, in what is now District No. 1, and the first school was taught by Abiel Drew. The second school was erected in either the same or the succeeding year, on the southwest quarter of Section 6. It was of logs, and had been originally put up by James Hogue for a dwelling. Section 6 now forms a part of District No. 2. Of the ten schools, only the one in Yates City is graded. From the County Superintendent's report for 1898 the following figures are taken:

|--|------------|
| Number males under twenty-one years in the township..... | 321 |
| Number females under twenty-one years in the township..... | 319 |
| Total..... | 650 |
| Males between six and twenty-one in the township..... | 232 |
| Females between six and twenty-one in the township..... | 233 |
| Total..... | 465 |
| Tax levy for support of schools in 1898..... | $6,300.00 |
| Value of school property in the township..... | 11,600.00 |
| Estimated value of school libraries..... | 2,200.00 |
| Amount paid all teachers in the township..... | 4,601.70 |

Every school in Salem has the benefit of a library of greater or less size and value, which owe their origin to Professor W. L. Steele, now the superintendent of city schools in Galesburg, and the history of their establishment may be told in a few words. In September, 1878, Professor Steele, then Principal of a graded school in Yates City, proposed to the School Board, composed of Dr. J. D. Hoyt, J. M. Taylor and L. A. Lawrence, the organization of a school and public library, to be under the control of the board and open at all times to pupils of the schools, and to the public upon payment of a membership fee. The scheme also contemplated the solicitation of donations of books and money. The plan was adopted. A constitution and by-laws were framed, and a public entertainment held in behalf of the project on Thanksgiving Day of that year, which netted nearly one hundred dollars. The movement commanded public support from the first; the plan has been regularly and systematically carried on; and the library has steadily grown until now it numbers about nineteen hundred volumes, of all classes, beside many worn-out books, annually discarded. Young men and women educated here have so thoroughly appreciated its beneficent influence, that, after going out to teach in neighboring districts in this and adjoining townships, they have carried the spirit and plan with them, and planted school libraries wherever they have taught.

Of the four thousand one hundred and sixty-three men who enlisted from Knox County in the Union Army during the Civil War, one hundred and eighty-two were from this township, distributed as follows:

One hundred and fifty-one served in various regiments of infantry, numbered from the Seventh to the One Hundred and Thirty-second. Forty-five were attached to the Eighty-third, and twenty-eight in the Seventy-seventh. Twenty-nine are credited as having served in the Seventh, Eleventh, Twelfth and Fourteenth Cavalry, and two in the Second Illinois Artillery. In addition, several are known to have enlisted in regiments from other States, notably in the Eighth Missouri Infantry, viz.: William S. Kleckner, Frank Murphy, Frank and Fred Hamilton, Henry Ledgerman, James Dundas, Chester Vickery, George Frost, William Hull, William Taylor and William Reed, besides, probably, others, many of whom have never been credited, either to Knox County, or to Salem Township. James H. Walton was probably the first enlisted man from Salem, having joined the Seventh Infantry from Yates City, which was the first regiment organized in 1861. A draft was ordered to complete Salem's quota under the last call for men in 1864, and four names were drawn.

Salem's record in the war with Spain, 1898, is an extraordinary one, the township having furnished fourteen men out of a possible one hundred and fifty for the whole county, the most of whom served in Company C, of the Sixth Infantry. The Mexican War of 1846 has one living representative here, in the person of

L. P. Arbogast

R. B. Corbin, who served in the Third United States Dragoons.

In 1837 a postoffice was established, called Middle Grove, near what was later Uniontown, Henry Merrell being placed in charge. It is said that Thomas Morse offered a whole day's labor to secure a letter on which the postage had not been paid, money being then very scarce, but his offer was refused.

Sala Blakesbee is credited with erecting the first frame building for a barn, in 1837, on Section 19, but it was destroyed by fire the same year.

The scales of justice were first held by William Davis, in 1836.

The "underground railroad" had a well-defined "route" through Salem in ante-bellum days, and many a poor slave, fleeing for life and liberty, had occasion to thank the "officers" thereof for their active vigilance in his behalf.

The moral and religious advancement of the people has kept even pace with their material development, as is shown by their work in the churches and in kindred societies. In early days, preaching services were held in school houses, and all convenient places.

The Salem Township Bible Society Auxiliary to the American Bible Society was organized at the Cox school house, in District No. 6, April 8, 1855, with the following officers: George Reisinger, President; M. B. Mason, Vice President; Zeno E. Spring, Secretary; and Luther Goad, Treasurer. A constitution was adopted and a depository of Bibles established. Copies were sold, and were given to those not able to buy, money was contributed and the work continued regularly until 1880, when it lapsed until 1885. In that year the society was reorganized by electing W. B. Matthews, President; J. M. Cool, Vice President; Nettie Jaquith, Secretary; and L. A. Lawrence, Treasurer; the meeting therefor being held in the Presbyterian Church of Yates City. The work has continued regularly since. Its object is to place a Bible in, or within easy reach of, every family in the township. The present officers are: Edwin Ekstrand; President, Paul Montgomery, Vice President; Lizzie Speckard, Secretary; and A. J. Lawrence, Treasurer.

Another society, of equal or greater influence, has been the Salem Township Sabbath School Association, which was formed about 1870. Its purpose was the establishing and maintaining of Sabbath schools in the school districts not under the immediate influence of the churches. No records of its labors were kept until 1892. Beside maintaining its home work, it has contributed sums varying from twenty-five to sixty dollars annually for the county work in the same direction. Its active workers have been W. B. and W. W. Matthews, J. M. Cool, Thomas Terry, L. A. Lawrence, Mrs. Emma Lawrence, Mrs. R. J. McKelghan and many others, representing the various churches. The present officers are A. J. Lawrence, President; E. Ekstrand, Vice President;

Miss Maud Fletcher, Secretary and Treasurer. Township conventions are held annually.

DOUGLAS.

Douglas (formerly Summit), Salem's second village in order of date, was laid out on the northeast corner of the northeast quarter of Section No. 7 and the southeast corner of the southeast quarter of Section No. 6, by William K. Ware, on October 17, 1856. It was surveyed by E. T. Byram, and the grant of the streets, alleys and public grounds to the public was acknowledged by Mr. Ware before William McCowan, Justice of the Peace, on November 22, 1856. It sprang into existence as a result of the building of the old Peoria and Oquawka Railroad. It has probably two hundred and fifty inhabitants, and has always been a lively trading point in general merchandise, having two good general stores, excellent facilities for handling grain and stock, and a blacksmith and repair shop, and being surrounded by a prosperous farming community.

The Methodists built a commodious house of worship here in 1872, which was dedicated in July, 1873, Rev. Mr. Hill, the pastor, officiating. A Sabbath school has been regularly maintained by the church.

Douglas has a two-room school, superintended at present by Mr. Mack Beale.

Camp No. 3143 of the Modern Woodmen of America was instituted here on August 15, 1895, with fifteen charter members and the following officers: J. S. Heunter, V. C.; Asa M. Laughlin, W. A.; E. H. Ware, E. B.; J. E. Barnaby, Clerk. The present officers are: W. A. Chase, V. C.; Harry Dieffendorf, W. A.; John F. Simkins, E. B.; and J. S. Hunter, Clerk. The camp has a membership of sixty. Its growth has been phenomenal, and bids fair to more than meet the expectations of its organizers.

The village has the honor of being the home of the two oldest continuous residents of Salem, viz.:—James and Henry Taylor, aged seventy-four and sixty-five years respectively. Their father, Alexander Taylor, was the first settler, in 1834, on Section 6.

UNIONTOWN.

This is the oldest village in the township, having been laid out on the west half of the southwest quarter of Section 19, by Moses Shinn, June 4, 1839, and surveyed, platted and recorded by George A. Charles, June 6, 1839.

It is most beautifully situated, on the western extremity of the high divide previously mentioned, overlooking a wide expanse of undulating prairie. It was a point of much importance in its earlier days, as the first survey of the old Peoria and Oquawka Railroad passed through it, and a considerable trade sprang up. The first store was opened by Luther Carey, and others soon followed. A blacksmith shop was opened by Jacob Booth, who is yet living, and Moses Shinn, deceased. They also engaged in the manufacture of plows and wagons not long afterwards. Brick burning was commenced by Thomas Griggsby in 1845, and a primitive shingle machine was operated by Elsha Van Pelt about 1843, cottonwood and black walnut being the timber most commonly used.

The first school was kept about 1843, in a frame building originally intended for a store, on the corner of the public square.

Grain was ground for domestic consumption in hand burrs in the early days, but horse power was substituted a little later.

The village is said to have been named in memory of Uniontown, Portage County, Ohio. A later survey for the railroad, in 1856, finally located the line about two miles further north, and the once flourishing village declined rapidly, until, in 1869, the legislature vacated the plat.

YATES CITY.

This may be called the metropolis of the township. It is pleasantly situated in the northeast part of Salem, on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and its corporate limits include the whole of Section 11. It is surrounded by an intelligent, prosperous farming community, and, being at the junction of the Galesburg and Peoria and the Buda and Rushville branches of the railroad, it has the best facilities for both travel and traffic.

It was laid out by William and A. C. Babcock, Thomson Maple, Rufus H. Bishop, Bostwick Kent, and James Burson, on October 20, 1857. It was surveyed and platted by E. T. Byram, County Surveyor, and named in honor of Yates County, New York, the early home of the Babcocks.

The first business house was erected by James Burson, on the southeast corner of Main and Union streets, in 1857. The next store was built by W. D. Dixon, in 1858. The first hotel was opened by John Sonnemaker, in the same year. The first dwelling was put up by Isaac West, and others soon followed, built by Stair-walt, Kerns, and others. From the locating of the depot, in 1857, there sprang up a brisk trade in all merchandise needed by an agricultural community.

A grain warehouse was at once established by Buffum and Knable, and Yates City became the center for a large shipping business in grain and stock. Until the building of the Santa Fe railroad through Truro Township, twelve miles north, in 1887-89, the place drew its patronage from a large section of country to the north, northeast and northwest, within a radius of twelve or fifteen miles, including the greater part of Elba and Truro townships, and prospered greatly. It had a good flouring mill, built by Summers and Beeson in 1868, and a wagon and carriage shop, by W. D. and M. Aley, both of which were destroyed by fire in 1887 and 1888 and never rebuilt. Brick and tile were formerly manufactured in large quantities, but within the last year this industry has been abandoned. A farmer's co-operative store was opened in 1874, and flourished until February, 1889, when it was dissolved.

Since the building of the Santa Fe line, trade has been more limited, but it is still a center for a large business in general merchandise, grain and stock.

The village has ever been alive to its social interests, and active in promoting whatever would tend to its welfare as the years went by. A Harvest Home Association was organized in 1886, largely through the efforts of Mr. McKeighan, the editor of the "Banner," supported by interested citizens. The festivals of the association have grown in interest and popularity, until now their visitors are numbered by the thousands, representing all communities and classes and coming from every direction within twenty-five miles. The annual programs afford opportunity for oratorical, literary and musical display, while athletic sports, games, and amusements of every sort form prominent features of the entertainments.

From the date of its founding, 1857, the saloon fastened itself upon the village, and clung like a vampire until about 1875, when, through a determined effort of the best citizens, the groggery was driven out, and by dint of constant vigilance has been kept out, with the exception of the years 1888 and 1895, when licenses were granted for the sale of liquor. The advocates of the saloon stole a march upon the unwary friends of temperance, but only for a year at a time

The population in 1880 was six hundred and seventy-nine; in 1890, six hundred and eighty-seven; in 1898, six hundred and eighty-three.

Banking facilities are afforded by the "Farmers'" and "People's" banks. Both are private institutions. The first named was organized in 1875 by J. M. Taylor and Isaac Lambert. Mr. Lambert soon withdrew, and on August 12, 1880, Mr. Taylor sold the business to J. H. Nicholson, W. P. Parker and L. F. Wertman, who organized the Farmers' Bank, which they conducted until 1889, when Mr. Nicholson obtained full control. Since his death, in 1895, his widow, Mrs. C. M. Nicholson, has conducted the business with Charles D. North, with F. E. Wilson as cashier. The bank has as handsome, well-appointed quarters as can be found outside a metropolis. The People's Bank was organized in October, 1889, by Walter Bailey and Company. These are now deceased and the present firm name is Harriet L. Bailey and Company, with John W. Dixon as cashier. Both of these institutions do a general banking and exchange business and find steady employment for all their capital.

The first postoffice was opened in February, 1859, with J. M. Corey as postmaster. The present incumbent of the office is W. G. Lehman, whose enterprise has provided an office with modern appointments far in advance of those of ordinary country villages.

Yates City was chartered on March 4, 1869, its first trustees being: D. Touslee, W. H. Eastman, Frank Madden, G. N. Pierce and J. D. Roberts, Mr. Touslee being the President. E. B. Rhea, City Clerk; W. L. Adams, Marshal; Benjamin Kersey, Treasurer; and David Wiltse, Police Magistrate. The present Board consists of A. W. Garrison, President; F. E. Wilson, W. W. Wood, William T. Corbin and Frank Anderson. J. B. Coykendall, City Clerk; M. Knable, Marshal; Smith Rhea, Treasurer; and T. J. Kightlinger, Police Magistrate.

It has a graded school of four departments, that compares favorably with similar schools throughout the county. A full English course is taught, with the sciences and Latin. Professor W. F. Boyes is Principal, with Mr. C. W. Bird, and Misses Lizzie Spickard and Mary Friend as teachers of the Grammar, Intermediate and Primary departments, respectively. All are energetic and faithful workers in their profession, and have made the school one of the educating forces of the county. For the past five years it has had an elementary course in vocal music, of which Miss Minnie Eyerly is the present teacher. The enrollment of pupils is one hundred and eighty-one, with one hundred and sixty-three in average attendance. An important feature of the institution is its library of about nineteen hundred volumes, previously mentioned, that furnishes an inexhaustible mine of information, auxiliary to the line of regular study. The present school building, erected in 1872, is out of date and inconvenient, but will, no doubt, soon be replaced by a more modern structure.

The Yates City Banner, formerly the Industrial Banner, was founded by A. H. McKeighan, its present editor and proprietor. Its first issue appeared December 25, 1879. It stanchly advocated the Greenback policy during that agitation, and has vigorously championed the movements in favor of prohibition and free silver. The Banner has always been firmly devoted to the best interests of the community, and fearless in advocating what, in its view, seemed best. It is independent in politics, giving its support to those measures which it believes to promise the best results to the whole people. It has ever been a mortal foe to the saloon; its motto is "hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may."

Yates City has an excellent system of electric lighting, introduced in October, 1894. It obtains its power, by contract, from the Elmwood Electric Lighting Company, of Elmwood, two and one-half miles east, in Peoria County. It also has a volunteer fire company and an engine, and about one mile of vitrified brick sidewalk.

The First Presbyterian Church was organized by a committee from Peoria Presbytery, which met November 16, 1866, in the school house. After a sermon by Rev. Thomas Stevenson, an enrollment was made and eighteen members were admitted, chiefly by letter. Joseph Cunningham and William B. Matthews were chosen Elders. An election of trustees resulted in the choice of John C. Bryson, John D. Huey and William B. Matthews. The first pastor was Rev. John H. Smith; the present is Rev. Donald M. Ross. R. J. McKeighan, J. J. Matthews, J. M. Corey, C. M. Bliss and L. A. Lawrence compose the session. With the exception of a few brief intervals, regular preaching services have been held since the organization of the church. A house of worship costing over three thousand dollars was erected in 1867. The congregation supports a flourishing Sabbath school, started in 1867 by Mr. G. N. Pierce. Elder W. B. Matthews was Superintendent most of the time until his death, in December, 1890, when L. A. Lawrence was chosen. He has discharged the duties of the position down to the present time. The average annual attendance has been about eighty, and its sessions regular. Beside the Sabbath school, the Ladies' Missionary Society has been an active, vital force since its organization, about 1875. It has been tireless in advocating and supporting the home and foreign mission work of the church, never failing to make a liberal monthly and annual contribution. The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was organized in 1886, and has pursued its way steadily and faithfully, with good, substantial results. Its present officers are: J. L. McKeighan, President; George Montgomery, Vice President; Bertha Chamberlain, Recording Secretary; Zora Conner, Corresponding Secretary; and Giles Matthews, Treasurer.

This church has a substantial parsonage, the gift of one of its oldest and stanchest members, Mr. James McKeighan, just before his death, in November, 1885.

The Baptists, among whom were M. Lawrence, James Burson, Andrew Vance, Charles Haines, A. M. Swan and David Corley, and their families, with Rev. A. R. Newton as leader, commenced a house of worship in 1864-65, laying the foundation and procuring materials, when difficulties arose, and their site and materials were sold to the Methodist Episcopal Church, prominent among whose members were J. M. Cool, R. F. Anderson, Ephraim Jordan, Bostwick Kent, Sylvester Gould, and John Foster, who took up the work, completing the building and dedicating it in 1868. There they have held regular Sabbath services since, usually conducted by non-resident ministers, from neighboring churches. At present the church is under the care of Rev. Mr. Henderson, of Peoria. Its work has been steadily strengthened by a regular, well-attended Sabbath school, and later by a branch of the Epworth League, organized in 1888 by the young people. Mr. Thomas Terry is the present Sabbath school superintendent.

A Universalist church was organized September 1, 1866, and an edifice built the same year, which was used conjointly by the other denominations until their own houses of worship were completed. The first and leading members of this denomination were: J. E. Knable, M. B.

Mason, Walter Bailey, James Clisson, James H. Nicholson, S. S. Bufum, T. L. Long and A. B. Taylor, with their families. Rev. Mr. Carney, of Knoxville, was their first pastor, followed irregularly until April 5, 1889, when, complications having arisen, the church was disbanded by petition and the property sold.

The following organized societies are found here:

Yates City Lodge, No. 448, A. F. and A. M., was chartered October 4, 1865, with eighteen members and the following officers: S. S. Bufum, W. M.; J. E. Knable, S. W.; and M. B. Mason, J. W. Its present officers are: C. D. North, W. M.; J. W. Wood, S. W.; S. E. Milam, J. W.; John McKinty, Treasurer; F. E. Wilson, Secretary. Its membership is forty-one.

Eureka Chapter, No. 98, R. A. M., was chartered October 5, 1866, with twenty-five members. The first officers were: Benjamin Kersey, H. P.; M. B. Mason, K.; J. C. Riner, Scribe. The present officers are: J. M. Corey, H. P.; G. W. Johnson, E. K.; J. W. Wood, E. S.; M. W. Thomson, C. N.; William Anderson, Pr. S.; C. D. North, R. A. C.; S. E. Milam, Treasurer; F. E. Wilson, Secretary; W. H. Hauser, Tyler. The chapter has sixty-five members.

Yates City Lodge, No. 207, I. O. F., was chartered October 13, 1868, with Imri Dunn, Benjamin Hayes, B. Bevens, A. S. Murphey and Henry Soldwell as charter members. Its first officers were: Henry Soldwell, N. G.; B. S. Briggs, V. G.; Benjamin Hayes, Secretary; and B. Bevens, Treasurer. The present officers are: C. V. Bird, N. G.; S. W. Stone, V. G.; T. J. Kighttinger, Recording Secretary; J. W. Bird, Permanent Secretary; W. A. Gould, Warden; and J. W. Dixon, Treasurer. The present membership is thirty-nine. The lodge owns a good hall, conjointly with the Masons.

Camp No. 3102, Modern Woodmen of America, was chartered July 25, 1895, with twenty-three members and the following officers: S. P. Hassenbacher, V. C.; Charles T. White, W. A.; John U. Conner, E. B.; Samuel E. Knox, Clerk. At present the officers are: S. P. Hassenbacher, V. C.; M. Ellison, W. A.; Frank Christman, E. B.; S. W. Stone, Clerk. The camp has forty-five members, and meets in the same hall as the Masons and Odd Fellows.

Morgan L. Smith Post, No. 666, Department of Illinois, G. A. R., was instituted January 25, 1889, with twenty members and the following officers: J. N. Burch, Commander; W. S. Kleckner, Senior Vice Commander; B. F. Pittman, WEBER A. JAQUITH.

Junior Vice Commander; J. O. Wren, Chaplain; F. W. Brown, Officer of the Day; J. B. Reed, Quartermaster; M. W. French, Adjutant. The present officers are: A. Schoenberger, Commander; G. W. Golliday, Senior Vice Commander; T. C. Hand, Junior Vice Commander; J. O. Wren, Chaplain; O. P. Fetter, Quartermaster; L. A. Lawrence, Adjutant. The post has at present fifteen members.

LOUIS P. ARBOGAST.

Louis P. Arbogast, son of Jesse and Susan (Stoner) Arbogast, was born January 1, 1844, in Wabash County, Indiana. His father was born in Harris County, Virginia, to Peter and Christina Arbogast, and his mother was born in Baltimore, Maryland, to Henry and Susan Stoner; his grandparents came from Germany.

Mr. Arbogast came with his parents from Indiana to Fulton County, in 1854, and to McDonough County, Illinois, in 1855, where his parents died. In 1865 he removed to Farmington, Illinois, and thence, in 1870, to Salem Township, where he located on Section 19. His farm, three miles south of Douglas, contains three hundred and twenty acres of land, and is known as the "Lone Birch Stock Farm." He has been an extensive raiser of stock, principally "Short Horn" cattle and Poland China swine.

Mr. Arbogast was married in Galesburg, Illinois, February 18, 1875, to Esther E. Potter, who was born in Salem Township. Her parents were Norman Z. and Charlotte (Blakeslee) Potter, both of whom died at the old homestead in Salem Township. Mr. and Mrs. Arbogast have one son, Norman P., born June 18, 1882. In politics, Mr. Arbogast is a republican, and has held the office of Road Commissioner two terms; he has been Assessor, School Director and School Trustee, holding the latter offices many years. He was a leader in the organization of the Cemetery Association, of Uniontown, and served as Trustee twenty years. He is a dealer in all kinds of fruit, such as blackberries, strawberries, raspberries, prunes, apricots, peaches, pears and apples.

JAMES MADISON HUNTER.

James Madison Hunter was born December 31, 1811, in what was then known as Frankleton, now Columbus, Franklin County, Ohio. His parents, Joseph and Deborah (McGowan) Hunter, married and settled in Ohio, while it was yet a territory. His father was a native of Pennsylvania, but his mother was from Newfoundland, Canada. The Hunter family is of Scotch-Irish descent, and their ancestry were Protestants. Grandfather McGowan was a soldier in the Revolution.

Judge James M. Hunter was the third of five sons, left orphans when he was but four years old. At the age of five he left the home of the uncle with whom he was then living, and entered the service of a farmer by the name of

Judge Hunter was a self-made and self-educated man. All the educational advantages he enjoyed were those secured in the country and city schools, while he was living with Mr. Cutler. He was only seventeen years old when he went into the business of transporting freight from different lake ports to Dayton and Cincinnati. In this business he continued five years, and then, in 1833, sold out and rented a farm two and one-half miles from Columbus. It was March 6 of this year (1833) that he married Miss Eliza Hunter, of Madison County, Ohio. Mrs. Hunter was born October 12, 1817. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter remained upon their rented farm only eighteen months, and then removed to Union County, Ohio, where they purchased eighty acres of land and where they resided for three years. They then removed to Madison County, Ohio, and bought a farm of two hundred and forty acres. In 1846 Mr. Hunter, with his wife and children, moved to Illinois and settled in Salem Township, where he bought three hundred and sixty acres of land and began to improve it. Here he lived the remainder of his life, an active, honorable and honored citizen of the county. For eight years he was Justice of the Peace, and was one of the last three Associate Justices of Knox County. He was known far and wide, and in the southeastern part of Knox County was one of the best known and most representative citizens.

Judge Hunter died on his farm November 15, 1894, at nearly eighty-three years of age. Mrs. Hunter died December 4, 1888, at the age of seventy-six. They had six children, all of whom reached maturity: Deborah; Joseph; Charles R.; James M.; Eliza J., wife of H. C. Mann; and Mary A., wife of R. H. Harper.

The character that Judge Hunter builded was far more than financial success. It is something that will endure forever, a monument to his memory and an honor to his county. In politics, he was a democrat, and it is an interesting fact, that General Andrew Jackson received his first vote for President.

WEBER ANDREW JAQUITH.

Weber Andrew Jaquith, son of Nathaniel and Prudence Jaquith, was born at Andover, Vermont, February 28, 1828. His parents were of French Protestant (Huguenot) descent, and were born at Windsor, Vermont. Mr. W. A. Jaquith located in Salem Township, Knox County, Illinois, in 1854 and began farming. He was married April 8, 1855, to Susan E. Macklin, daughter of William Macklin, an old settler of Bureau County, Illinois. She was born in Delaware in 1833.

Their daughter, Mrs. Nettie J. Corbin, was born in Salem Township, January 10, 1859. She was educated in the Farmington graded schools, and was married, August 30, 1892, to Charles Melvin Corbin, a grain merchant and owner of the Yates City Elevator. Mr. Corbin was born at Avon, Illinois, November 17, 1859, and educated in the Yates city schools. His father was Richard Corbin, of Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Corbin live at Yates City, where they have a handsome residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Jaquith accumulated a considerable fortune by industry and hard labor. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church for twenty-five years. Mr. Jaquith was always active in church work, having been Steward, Trustee and Class-leader.

Mrs. Jaquith, who died February 1, 1891, was a good neighbor and friend, and a generous contributor to the church; she was the loving companion of her daughter, Nettie, who had the care of her parents in their declining years. Mr. Jaquith was a man of excellent character and led an exemplary life. He was a democrat for many years, but later became a prohibitionist. He died May 11, 1891.

LUCIUS A. LAWRENCE.

Lucius A. Lawrence, son of Milton and Sylvia (Atwood) Lawrence, was born at Hinesburg, Chittenden County, Vermont, June 26, 1840. His parents moved from their home in Hinesburg to Monkton, Addison County, Vermont, in 1841, and in 1861, came to Elba Township, Knox County, Illinois. His father was a man of strong, decisive character, and unyielding disposition, combined with a very retentive memory. He is now eighty-three years old. His mother was a kind and gentle woman, who died March 25, 1857, in her thirty-ninth year.

The Lawrence family in this country is descended from three brothers, who came from England to the Colonies in 1666, and settled in Massachusetts. One brother went to Connecticut, and from him has sprung the present family. The Lawrences were prominent in the early history of New England, and representatives of the family still occupy the old homestead at Lexington, Massachusetts, where their ancestors settled more than two hundred years ago.

Lucius A. Lawrence's opportunities for education were confined to the district schools, and to two terms in Hinesburg Academy, where he studied the common English branches, rhetoric, and algebra. He learned much, however, from observation and diligent after-study, and now has a critical facility in the use of the English language, as well as a wide range of general information. His childhood was spent on a sterile, unyielding farm in Vermont, and he was taught to till the soil and care for stock. He had few pastimes, his routine consisting of steady hard work, regular attendance at the common school, at church and Sabbath school, and to the observance of strict unswerving obedience to his parents. After leaving school, he farmed and taught in the district schools of Salem and Elba townships. August 7, 1862, he volunteered for war service, and became a member of Company H, One Hundred and Second Illinois Infantry, which was mustered into service at Knoxville, Illinois, September 2, 1862. After preparatory drill, the regiment was ordered to the field, and after crossing the Ohio River at Louisville, Kentucky, October 1, 1862, was brigaded with the One Hundred and Fifth and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Illinois Infantry, and the Seventieth Indiana and Seventy-ninth Ohio Volunteers. The brigade immediately took the field, and helped to repel the invasion of Kentucky by the Confederate army under General Bragg, going to Frankfort, and thence to Bowling Green. The brigade was there made a part of the Army of the Cumberland, commanded by General W. S. Rosecrans, in which organization he served until the close of the war. His regiment was engaged in garrison duty until the opening of the Atlanta campaign at Chattanooga. From May 2, 1864, he shared the fortunes of Sherman's army, that brought about the fall of Atlanta September 1, 1864. He was in the hospital from October 30, 1864, to January, 1865, after which he rejoined his regiment in the Carolinas, and participated in the last campaign of the war, the surrender of the Confederate army under General J. E. Johnson, April 26, 1865. He marched to Washington, and was in the Grand Review May 24. He was mustered out of service at Washington June 6, and discharged at Chicago, June 15, 1865.

After the war, Mr. Lawrence again interested himself in farming, until failing health compelled a change, and, in March, 1877, he removed to Yates City, Illinois, which is his present home. In 1882, having regained his health, he purchased the lumber stock of W. T. Wells, to which he added a stock of farm implements, and managed the combined business until January, 1899. In 1893, he purchased an interest in the People's Bank, of Yates City, which he still owns.

Mr. Lawrence was married to Mrs. Charlotte M. Baird, March 21, 1869. She was the daughter of Moses and Cynthia Wheeler, who came from Pennsylvania and settled in Knox County in 1859. Mrs. Baird's first marriage occurred in 1861. She had one daughter, Nora, who is the wife of Hugh A. Sloan, the present Supervisor of Salem Township. Mr. Baird enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Second Illinois Infantry, in September, 1862, and was killed in battle at Resaca, Georgia, May 15, 1864. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence: Alma E., born March 4, 1870, and died March 20, 1891; Edwin P., born December 1, 1871; Arthur J., born September 13, 1873; Cynthia May and Sylvia June (twins), born March 1, 1878, and died August 16, and 21, 1878, respectively.

Mr. Lawrence was a member of the I. O. G. T. from 1867 to 1872. He became a member of the Grand Army of the Republic in 1886, since which time he has held the position of Commander or Adjutant, in Post No. 666, Department of Illinois, at Yates City. He was a member of the Baptist Church from 1857 to 1874, but is now a member of the Presbyterian Church. In politics, he is a republican, and was elected Supervisor of Elba Township in the years 1867-68-69, and in Salem Township in 1894. He served as President of the City Council of Yates

L. A. Lawrence

City during the years 1879-80-85-86-89, having been elected on the anti-license ticket. He has been a member of the Yates City School Board continuously since 1878, and, in 1880, he was elected Justice of the Peace for Salem Township, and resigned in 1883.

Mr. Lawrence is one of the most prominent men of his township, and is possessed of more than ordinary erudition and breadth of mind, and holds advanced and clearly defined views regarding current events.

JAMES MCKEIGHAN.

James McKeighan, son of John and Lillie (Gault) McKeighan, was born in Antrim County, Ireland, June 9, 1803. He was the second son, and had seven brothers and three sisters; those of the children who reached maturity, save one lost at sea, came to America and settled in Pennsylvania, Illinois and Missouri. James learned the trade of linen weaving, at which he worked till he was thirty-two years of age, when he emigrated to the United States, landing at Philadelphia in the year 1835. He brought with him but a small amount of property, but he had what was far better, the integrity, perseverance and strong faith so often seen in the descendants of the old Scotch Covenanters. This rich inheritance from his ancestors he brought to Pennsylvania and it was the solid foundation of all the work of his subsequent life. He arrived at Farmington, Fulton County, Illinois, in December, 1838, and in a few years was the owner of an eighty-acre farm.

Mr. McKeighan returned to Ireland in the Fall of 1847, and there, in 1848, married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert and Rachel Cunningham. Soon after his marriage he returned to Farmington and built a log house on his farm, which he soon replaced with a comfortable frame dwelling. A few years later he sold his property in Fulton County for two thousand four hundred dollars, and removed to Salem Township, Knox County, Illinois, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of unbroken prairie land on Section 22. Here, with the canny skill of the Scotch-Irishman, he made for himself and family a splendid farm. He endured all the trials of the pioneer; he "broke" prairie and built sod fences, and tried to hasten the good time by helping to grade the track for a railroad. Finally, as a result of labor well applied, special care in raising stock and in disposing of the products of his farm, he became wealthy, and was able to give good farms to his children.

Mr. McKeighan and his wife had six children, two of whom died in infancy; the names of the remaining four are Robert J., Rachel, Mary Elizabeth and Emma.

In politics, Mr. McKeighan was a whig, but when the republican party was organized he entered its ranks and stood for liberty and the union during the Civil War. He assisted in organizing, and was a member of the Presbyterian Church at Farmington, and gave twelve hundred dollars toward the erection of a church edifice, and when he became a member of the church in Yates City, he was in a similar manner beneficent to that organization. Those who were in want found in him a friend; those who needed advice could rely upon his judgment, and, whether in public or private life, he was ever ready to assist those in need of help. He died November 15, 1885, mourned, not only by his own family, but by the whole community in which he lived.

JAMES HASBROUCK NICHOLSON.

James Hasbrouck Nicholson, son of Nicholas and Mary (Washburn) Nicholson, was born August 8, 1808, on the "Hasbrouck Farm," Middletown, Delaware County, New York. The father was born in New York, the mother in Connecticut. They were married and settled in Middletown, and afterward removed to Alleghany County, on the Genesee River, where they died. Six children were born to them: Edward, Sarah, Elizabeth, James Hasbrouck, Hannah and Abel S. The father of J. H. Nicholson was of Irish extraction, his great-great-grandfather having been stolen from Ireland by a sea captain and brought to Canada. His son, Robert, was a royalist during the Revolution, and, going to Canada, settled in Walford Township, Leeds County, and died at Nicholson's Falls.

Mr. J. H. Nicholson was brought up on a farm, and attended the common schools. He removed to Illinois in 1842, and was a farmer by occupation; in politics, a democrat; in religion, a Universalist. He married Catherine King. Their daughter, Mary S., was born in Knox County, December 22, 1852, and was married to Charles D. North in Knox County, December 22, 1875.

Charles D. North was born in Pendleton County, Virginia, October 8, 1844; his father was Thomas Jefferson North, of Fairfax County, Virginia, and his mother was Eliza (Henkle) North, of Pendleton County, Virginia; his grandparents on the father's side were George North, of England, and Eliza (Keyes) North, and on the mother's side, Jesse and Margaret (Mosier) Henkle. The children of Mr. and Mrs. North are: Ada H., born September 15, 1877; Ralph M., born August 20, 1879; Earl J. H., born January 25, 1881; Carl C., born May 25, 1882; Harold E., born July 25, 1884; and Elsie L., born June 9, 1889. Mr. North came to Yates City in 1866, and followed carpentering for several years. He has also been a banker about twelve years. He is a member of Yates City Lodge, No. 448, F. and A. M.; Eureka Chapter No. 98 R. A. M.; O. E. S. No. 256; and Galesburg Commandery No. 8. He was initiated into Lodge No. 448 in 1868, and for three years filled the office of Worshipful Master, each year representing his lodge in the Grand Lodge of the State. The Royal Arch degree he received at Eureka Chapter No. 98, in which, for fourteen years, he served as Royal Arch Captain. He is also a member of Council and Commandery, the former at Yates City, the latter at Galesburg, Illinois, having been made a Knight Templar at Galesburg Commandery, No. 8, in 1892. Both Mr. and Mrs. North are charter members of the Order of the Eastern Star at Yates City, instituted in 1893, in which they have served in prominent positions. Mr. North has a home farm of four hundred acres, and has an orange grove in Florida. He was a soldier in the Confederate Army under Fitz Hugh Lee, Company F, Sixty-second Virginia Cavalry. George North, grandfather of Charles D., was colonel in the Revolutionary War. He had a family of four sons and six daughters. Thomas Jefferson North, one of the sons, and father of Charles D., was born at Charleston, Virginia, and was a millwright by occupation. He came to Illinois in 1870, and settled in Yates City, where he died December 5, 1891, aged ninety-three years and five months. Mrs. Thomas Jefferson North is now living (1899), being ninety-four years of age.

James H. Nicholson was one of the prominent Free Masons of Yates City. He was initiated in Elmwood Lodge, and was a charter member of Yates City Lodge, No. 448; a member of Chapter No. 98, and also a member of the Scottish Rite, thirty-second degree, in Peoria, Illinois. He died May 31, 1893, and "over his remains were repeated the beautiful ceremony of the order he loved so well."

BIRD, WILLIAM BENJAMIN; Farmer; Salem Township; born in Canada, November 10, 1850; educated in the common schools. His parents, Stephen and Ann Bird, were born in Ireland, as was also his maternal grandfather, William Bird. Stephen Bird came to Canada when a young man, and thence to this country, August 16, 1864, and now lives in Yates City, at the age of eighty-two. Mr. W. B. Bird came to Elmwood, Illinois, in 1864, and has lived since then in that vicinity, except three years, when he was in the West. September 18, 1878, he was married in Salem Township, to Mary E. Bliss; she was born August 16, 1860, and is the daughter of C. and Angelina (Smith) Bliss, both of whom are now living in Yates City.
