George Thomas Harris was educated in the public schools, Lenox College, of Delaware county, Ia., and Davenport Business College. After leaving school he engaged in farming and now lives on and manages the home farm of 480 acres in Edgington township, and also owns 160 acres adjoining the homestead. This farm was cultivated by his father for many years, and most of the improvements were made by the family. Mr. Harris is an intelligent, energetic farmer, and has brought his land to a high state of cultivation and productiveness. He is a member of the Presbyterian church. A republican in politics, he has served in various township offices, and is popular and well liked by all.

On July 14, 1887, Mr. Harris was married by Rev. T. R. Johnson to Miss Bronetta B. Hayden, daughter of Henry and Sophia (Bowman) Hayden, of Rock Island, but natives of Pennsylvania. Of the five children that blessed this union, Anna Bronetta and Mabel survive. The former is teaching music and art in a school at Waukon, Iowa. She was born June 21, 1888, and was educated at Mt. Vernon College. Mabel H. was born June 8, 1890, and lives at home. She was educated at Augustana College, of Rock Island. Three children died in infancy.

HARRIS, Jacob L., who now lives retired from active life, belongs to one of the oldest families of Rock Island county. He was born in St. Joseph county, Ind., September 17, 1837. This township received its name from his grandfather, also named Jacob Harris, who came to America with his parents from the northern part of Ireland. The family met with a catastrophe in the death of the father on the way, and he was buried at sea. The mother, with two sons, came on to New York city, and there Jacob was separated from the others, being bound out to work for a Mr. Hartman, a German, living near Pittsburg. There he was educated, and learned the trade of cabinetmaker. He married a Miss Hartman, whose father served in the Revolution. He spent some time at Dayton, Ohio, and later moved to St. Joseph county, Ind., where he entered land and passed the remainder of his life. He had twelve children, the fourth son being Thomas, who became the father of Jacob L. Harris.

Thomas Harris was reared on a farm. In 1848 he moved to Iowa, coming to Edgington township, Rock Island county, the next year, where he entered 240 acres of land. He died at the age of forty-four years. He married

Jane Findley, who was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., daughter of Andrew Findley. She died in Edgington township in 1865, at the age of forty-six years. Thomas Harris was a Lutheran in religious faith and his wife a Baptist. They had nine children, namely: John, who died in Colorado in September, 1911; Jacob L.; Henry, who lives at Rock Island; Samuel, who lives near Portland, Oregon; Sebaldus, who lives at San Francisco; Adelia and Amanda, twins, both now deceased; and Veritus, who is Mrs. C. Thompson, lives near Los Angeles, Cal.

Jacob L. Harris received a common school education and sometimes attended school twenty miles from his home. In 1860 he and his father made a trip across the plains, and it was then his father died and he buried him about eighty miles above Omaha, Neb. He well remembers pioneer days in Rock Island county and experienced various vicissitudes and trials incident to the early days here.

In 1862 Mr. Harris married Miss Ann Eliza McGrew, formerly of Ohio, daughter of Thomas and Rachel (Robbins) McGrew. They became parents of two children, George T. and Ernest. George T., who married Bernetta Hayden, lives on the home farm, and they have two children, Anna B. and Mabel. A sketch of George T. also appears in this work.

Ernest holds the post of Consul General at Stockholm, Sweden. He was educated at Berlin and Heidelberg, and formerly served as Consul General to Turkey. He married Wilhelmina Elizabeth Herbst, of Heidelberg, and they have one daughter, Wilhelmina, who is studying at Geneva, Switzerland. She is now fourteen years of age, and speaks four languages. Her grandfather, Thomas Harris, spoke seven languages, and never went to school five days in his life.

Mr. Harris spent eight years on a farm of over one thousand acres in Central Iowa, going there in 1865. He then returned to Rock Island county and now owns 480 acres of well improved, fertile land. He has been successful in the line of general farming and stock raising and has always stood well in the estimation of his neighbors. Being one of the old settlers, he is well acquainted and has many friends. He is not a member of any church but his wife is a Presbyterian. He has been a member of the I. O. O. F. since 1860 and is interested in various measures for the public welfare and advancement. He is kindly and charitable and sympathizes with all classes of men.

HART, Archie, commissioner of the department of public health and safety of Rock Island, is a man in whose capable hands rests the health and physical welfare of the people of Rock Island, and all who come into close touch with them. The work of a health commissioner of these days of advanced views with relation to sanitation, are not light, and the conscientious official appreciates the weight of the responsibility placed upon him. The present incumbent of this very important office, was born in County Antrim, Ireland, November 1, 1867, a son of James and Nancy Jane (McCleas) Hart. The mother died in Ireland, although born, as was the father, in Scotland. The latter came to America in 1904, locating at Belle Plain, Iowa, where he lived retired, until his death, November 7, 1909. His remains were interred at that place. During his active life, he was a farmer. Growing up in his native land, Archie Hart was educated in the country schools, and passed a healthy boyhood much the same as any other lad. His first work was on a farm, but on November 12, 1886, being tired of agricultural life, and wanting to see something of the outside world, he and some other boys went to Scotland, and engaged in coal mining, thus continuing for fourteen years. In 1890, he came to the United States, locating first at Belle Plain, Iowa, but later went to What Cheer, Iowa, where he mined, and he was engaged along the same lines at Evans, Iowa, but on account of a strike, he was laid off, and worked for the Chicago & North Western Railroad Company at Belle Plain, but in 1895, came to Rock Island. His first employment here was with the Sylvan Steel Co., continuing with that company for three years. In the spring of 1898, he engaged with the street railway company, as conductor, and so continued for thirteen years, lacking one month. He was then elected as one of Rock Island's first health commissioners, and is now holding this important office. A staunch republican, he takes an active part in public affairs, and is a well-informed man on current events.

On September 20, 1895, Mr. Hart was married (first) to Rosalie Jensen, daughter of Jacob Jensen. She died February 28, 1906. On September 20, 1908, he was married (second) to Amanda Carlson, daughter of Gus Carlson. By his first marriage, Mr. Hart had two children: Archie, who died at the age of three months, and Marvelle. There is no issue of the second marriage. In religious faith, he is a Presbyterian. Fraternally, he belongs to the Odd Fellows, of Mystic, Iowa, No. 555; Red Men, King Philip Tribe Molic No. 94; Modern Woodmen of America, No. 1029, and the Rock Island Street Car Employees' Association, of which he was president for eight years. He owns his home at No. 628 Forty-third street, which is in the Seventh Ward. Mr. Hart has made this ward his home ever since coming to Rock Island, and is one of the best-known men in it, and certainly one of the most popular.

HATCH, Alson William, construction manager of the building contracting firm of A. W. Hatch & Son, with shop and office at the southeast corner of Fifteenth avenue, and Twenty-ninth and One-half street, Rock Island, is a man widely and favorably known in the building trades throughout Rock Island county. Mr. Hatch was born in Moriah, N. Y., January 5, 1865, a son of William and Sophronia (Maxfield) Hatch. The father was born in Vermont, but died in Springfield, Mass., June 16, 1897, having been a contractor all his active life.

The mother died April 14, 1910. They had five children: Anilda, wife of James Kingston of North Lawrence, N. Y.; Mattie S., widow of Alexander Graves, lives in North Lawrence, N. Y.; Flora, who died in childhood; Alson W.; and Burton, who is living in New York state. The father was a strong republican, and was a consistent member of the Methodist church.

Alson William Hatch was reared in his native place, securing educational advantages at Dickinson Center, N. Y. While attending school, and during his vacations, he worked with his father, and learned all the details of the trade he was destined to follow much of his life. In 1896, he entered the employ of the government as gun stocker, working at Springfield, Mass., until 1904, when he was transferred to the Rock Island Arsenal, and made foreman of the gun stock department here. In 1910, he resigned, to devote all his attention to the business of his present firm, which was organized July 1, of that year. The first quarters of the firm became too small for their large and constantly growing business, and recently removal was made to their present location. They are building contractors, specializing on fine interior trim, stair and cabinet work, hard wood floors, colonnade openings, built-in refrigerators, storm windows and doors and porches, neat work and prompt service being guaranteed.

On June 16, 1886, Mr. Hatch married Affema Goodsell, born in New York. They had three children: Ruby, who died when sixteen months old; Leannil, who was graduated from the Rock Island High School in the class of 1911, and is now studying architecture; and Arline, who is fourteen years old. Mr. Hatch is a Mason, belonging to the Rock Island lodge, and also an Odd Fellow, belonging to the lodge of Springfield, Mass. Politically he is a republican, but is very liberal in his views. A man of more than average ability, Mr. Hatch has developed himself through various business experiences all of which have had their educational value, and is now one of the most responsible contractors in his line, as well as a citizen who represents true Americanism.

HAUBERG, Johann Detlev (deceased), a farmer, was a son of Marx Hauberg of Holstein, Germany. He was born in Holstein January 29th, 1808, and died in Coe township, Rock Island county, Ill., March 14th, 1886. Of humble origin but vigorous blood, the family tree contains its tales of a forcible impressment into the army of the great Napoleon on the march to Russia; of adventures and tragedy in the military service of the Fatherland; of a burial at sea off the cape of Good Hope; the experience of subjection in the old world and the romance of pioneering in the new.

Johann D. Hauberg was the second of four brothers of whom Marx, the eldest migrated to Johnson county, Neb., where his two sons and two daughters survived him. David and Joachim died in Holstein, the latter leaving a large family, all residing in or near Kiel, Germany. After completing his public school course which ended with confirmation in the Lutheran church, the next important step in the life of Johann Detlev Hauberg was his service at the military post of Itzbyhoe, Holstein, with a cavalry regiment. He was a non-commissioned officer in his troop and served the full period of three years as a regular and for the five years immediately following was a member of the reserves during which time he was required annually to attend extended maneuvers.

In October 1835, he was united in marriage with Miss Catherine Margaret Griese, born July 26, 1811 at Elmschenhagen, Holstein, daughter of Marx Clement and Anna Christine (Luehl) Griese. The father was the village blacksmith and horseshoer, and her brother became the owner of one of the largest omnibus lines of the capital city of Berlin, while another brother owned a wood and turf yard at Kiel where he counted among his best patrons, the Duke of Augustenburg, Frederick VIII, father of the present Kaiserin of Germany. Mr. Hauberg was employed as overseer under the royal forester and game warden in the beautiful Vogel-sang forest near Peetz, and lived part of the time at Lustigen Bruder and the remainder of the year at Ralsdorf, both villages being near the forest mentioned. He took contracts for clearing ground on his own account and was reputed to be an advocate for his fellow villagers in their troubles with the public officials. A prominent German, Niergatt by name, having purchased a large plantation in eastern Tennessee, Mr. Hauberg was induced to come over with his family as an employee on this estate, and, in the spring of 1848, sold off his household goods at auction and embarked in a sailing vessel for the new world. After sailing for thirty-five days he landed with his family of wife and four children at Castle Garden, New York and by railways alternating with canals they came by way of Philadelphia to Pittsburgh; then by steamboat down the Ohio to the Tennessee river; up the latter to Kingston, and then by ox-team to Wartburg their destination. Among the incidents of the trip was a bad storm at sea during which a hatchway was torn off by the elements and the seas began to fill the ship; his participation in a general fight aboard a canal boat between companies of German and Irish immigrants, and threatened mix-ups in which a "bluff" sufficed to save the day, for the times were rough. Near the end of their long journey occurred the death of their youngest child, Magdalene Dorothea, aboard the steamboat "Pickaway" on June 23, 1848, and she was buried in a Presbyterian cemetery near Kingston.

After two months' stay at Wartburg, they lived at Kingston for a month; then occupied a farm ten miles up the river from Kingston, and after a total employment of ten months, slaves were purchased for the plantation and Mr. Hauberg with his family were dismissed, almost penniless. The first steamboat down the river was hailed and passage taken to Decatur, Ala., where a month was spent to replenish the empty pocket book and to pay the balance due on their passage thus far. Next was the river trip to Paducah, Ky., where another month of hard work and frugality enabled them to again follow the rainbow on down the Ohio and up the Mississippi to Davenport, Ia., to which place a sister and her husband had preceded them and who were at this time living on the estate of the late Col. George Davenport, on the Island of Rock Island. No work was found at Davenport and Mr. Hauberg brought his family to Moline, Ill., where he was soon engaged on contracts to dig cellars, and grub stumps from roadway between Moline and Rock Island, now known as Third avenue. Moline, while his youthful sons were at times working with their father. For a time the two sons were employed by the late John Deere sawing off plow beams by hand with a cross-cut saw, and again they drove oxen to the big breaking plows on the virgin prairies of Scott county, Ia.

January 18, 1850 must have been a proud day for Mr. Hauberg, for on that day he became a "landed proprietor" having purchased a half-acre tract in what is now the heart of the city of Moline. The following year he purchased from Elihu B. Washburne, who had received title direct from the United States Government, the quarter section of land in the upper end of this county which is the present homestead place of his son, Marx D. Hauberg, in Coe township. This farm was one most desirable for those days, having a creek that never failed and the timber land which was considered so necessary. It was partly improved, about ten acres being broken and a log cabin built on it. The purchase price for the 160 acres was $255. In the spring of 1853 they moved from Moline to the farm, a team of four oxen hauling the household goods and family. Penn township, as it was then called was for most part a virgin prairie with its blue-joint grass, wild flowers and hazel brush. For many years the Indians continued annually to come in numbers to hunt. Deer and wild fowl were very plentiful; the public highways meandered across country as best suited the convenience of the settlers and though rail fences predominated, Mr. Hauberg built many of his fences by digging a deep trench, the earth being thrown in an even ridge at one side and covered with thorny brush. Sixty years have passed since some of these were built but the old trenches can still be traced, more than a mile in extent over hill and hollow. During the first year of residence at the new home he made several trips to the United States land office at Dixon, Ill., for the purpose of entering government lands, for, while the earliest entries in this township were made in 1838, and the year 1839 was the banner year in point of number of entries made, the years of 1853, 1854 and 1855 still had large tracts untaken. Mr. Hauberg possessing no means of carriage other than by ox team, made his visits to Dixon afoot, covering the distance, about forty-five miles, in a single day, returning in the same length of time and carrying the provisions for the trip in his haversack. By the end of the year 1855 he was owner of over 500 acres of farm lands.

He was instrumental in starting a German Lutheran parochial school in the community in the fall of 1856, which was one of the first schools in the county, and at his log cabin was preached the first sermon to the German settlers of that community. The Lutheran congregation there organized is still in existence, though most of the descendants of those early members are now connected with other churches in their respective localities. In the summer of 1856 Mr. Hauberg received his final naturalization papers. The same fall Rock Island county mustered a total of 2,822 votes, for the entire county. The proposition to adopt township organization was carried, and at the first township elections held April 7, 1857, Mr. Hauberg was elected one of the three commissioners of highways for Coe township, which office he held for three years during which time he took active part in locating a number of the public highways along their proper section lines. He was a firm adherent of the democratic party and though in no sense a politician he never missed his privilege to vote on election day.

The Sterling & Rock Island railroad was promoted in 1857 and Mr. Hauberg subscribed $400 toward the project, but beyond the fact that his subscription showed his interest in the development of his county, it was money wasted, for the road was never finished. He took part in the organization of Bluff school district No. 1 of Coe township, at present known as No. 7 of Rock Island county, and served as one of its first board of directors. In 1868 as overseer of highways he opened the road on the town line between Coe and Canoe Creek townships, known as the John Wiese road. He was a charter member of the local Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry. Mr. Hauberg was a man of genial nature; unpretentious to the extent that he left no picture of himself. In his later years he amused himself largely by fishing in the Meredosia slough, distributing his catch gratuitously among his neighbors. There were those who said that he and his wife were too generous in their hospitality to itinerants, for never was the Indian, the peddler or any other applicant turned hungry from the door or refused shelter. Their golden wedding anniversary was celebrated in 1885 by a large assemblage of their descendants and friends. They were a healthy, true, God fearing couple, beloved by all their own people and neighbors. The wife was a most faithful helpmeet, a faultless housekeeper, and wherever sickness visited the community there came Grandmother Hauberg to minister. She died October 10, 1896, in the eighty-sixth year of her life, and both she and her husband are buried in the Lutheran cemetery located on their original homestead farm.

Their family included six daughters and two sons. Of the latter Marx D., married Anna Margaret Frels, a native of Rock Island county;

Jergem D., married Mary Messer of Germany; Dorothea married Gottlieb Stiltz; Elizabeth married Dedrick Bracker; Catherine married Charles G. Walther; Margaret married Frederick H. Schroeder, all the above located in Rock Island county as farmers, excepting Mr. Schroeder, now deceased, who lived at Rock Island. Magdalene died in Tennessee as above noted and Mary, the youngest died during childhood.

HAUBERG, John Henry, son of Marx David Hauberg and Anna Margaret (Frels) Hauberg was born in Coe township, Rock Island county, Ill., November 22, 1869. For the first twenty-odd years of his life his were the experiences common to the boys of the farm, doing all kinds of field work in summer and attending the country schools in winter, except for one winter spent at the Port Byron academy. After he was of age he went out "to see the world" and spent several months at work in lumber camps of Missouri and Arkansas, and several months on a large cattle ranch in Wyoming. In 1894 he completed a course at Duncan's Davenport business college, and in 1897 he closed his studies at what is now Valparaiso University, Ind., having been graduated in both the scientific and the classic courses there. The fall of the same year he entered the law department of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, receiving his diploma from that institution with the class of 1900. During the summer's vacation of 1899 he enjoyed a bicycle trip of 1,200 miles, visiting Washington, D. C., New York city and other places of interest. Six months more were spent in travel in Europe, and then in October 1901, he successfully passed the state bar examination. Since then he has been engaged in the practice of law in Rock Island county, having an office in Moline until December, 1911, when he came to Rock Island.

In June 1911 he was united in marriage to Miss Susanne C. Denkmann, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. F. C. A. Denkmann of Rock Island, Ill. She was born at Rock Island and attended the public schools of the city, later taking up literary studies at Dana Hall and at Wellesley college. A theoretical and practical course in kindergarten work was taken, of a year each at Chicago and New York city, respectively, and two summers were spent in travel abroad. She is deeply interested in the West End Settlement of Rock Island, and takes active part in a number of projects for the betterment of the community in which she lives.

Mr. Hauberg was for four terms elected president of the Luther League of Illinois; is a member of the state executive boards of the Illinois Sunday-school Association and Illinois Young Men's Christian Association respectively, and is a member of the board of directors of Augustana college and theological seminary.

HAUCK, Gottlieb Daniel, owner of pleasant Hill Farm, of 130 acres in Buffalo Prairie township, is one of the progressive farmers of Rock Island county, whose efforts have aided very materially in the maintenance of a high standard of excellence in all kinds of agricultural work. He has been a justice of the peace for nine years. Mr. Hauck was born on the farm he now owns, February 2, 1848, a son of John J. and Barbara (Rode) Hauck, both born in Bavaria, Germany, January 22, 1802, and March 14, 1805, respectively. They were married in Germany. The father was graduated from a school of architecture when twenty-one years old, and drew prizes on his plans for many public buildings all over Bavaria, and was at the apex of his distinguished career, when four of his seven children died from scarlet fever within five weeks. This preyed upon his mind to such an extent that he left his home and came to the United States, sailing from Hamburg for Philadelphia, in 1844. For six months following his arrival in the latter city, he lived there, and then came to Rock Island county, buying forty acres of Jacob Bauer, in Buffalo township. Later he bought another forty of a Mr. Deris. The land office was then at Dixon, and hearing of another eighty acres in his vicinity, that was for sale, he started for Dixon so as to secure it. Owing to disability, he could not ride horseback, so started out on the trip on foot in the midst of winter. He not only made the trip to Dixon that way, but returned in good condition, to find a new member of the family had arrived in his absence, he being Gottleib Daniel of this sketch. Still later, he bought twenty acres more from Mr. Deris, and on it he died in April, 1886, firm in the faith of the Lutheran church, belonging to the church of that denomination of Buffalo Prairie township, which he helped to build. For years he served it as deacon, and gave it material support as well. The mother died in 1893. Nine children were born to these parents: Margaret (Mrs. Philip Fuhr) died in this township; Regina, (Mrs. Paul John) is of Edgington; Mary, (Mrs. Henry Leonhard) is of Iowa; Gottleib Daniel; one who died in infancy; one at two years; one at fourteen years; one at nine years and one at seven years.

Mr. Hauck was educated in the district schools and those of Muscatine, Ia., and Rock Island, attending in Muscatine one winter, and two winters at Rock Island. He learned the shoemaking trade, which he followed for some time. Growing up as he did on the home farm, he took an interest in its development, and first took possession in 1885, his father having willed it to him. Since then he has made a number of improvements and has a fine property. On April 15, 1880, Mr. Hauck was married in Rock Island, in the German Lutheran church by the Rev. August Menecke, to Miss Annie Colberg, daughter of William and Wilhelmina (Fulman) Colberg. Mr. and Mrs. Hauck became the parents of children as follows: Carl Glenn, born January 25, 1881, married November 13, 1904; Nellie Bales, issue, Irving Claire, born July 17, 1905; Cleona Maria, born October 20, 1883, married Almer B. Sward of Rock Island county;

Lela May, born August 18, 1885, married Oscar Lamb of Muscatine county, Ia., issue, Maynard W., born May 25, 1911; John William, born March 15, 1889; Ernest M., born April 30, 1892; Albert Valentine, born February 14, 1895; Wilhelmina Freda, born March 2, 1897; twin sister of Wilhelmina, deceased; and Adam Arthur, born September 4, 1898, five being at home. Mr. Hauck comes of an old and honored family, and his father is remembered by many, for he was a man of superior worth, highly educated, and possessed of a high order of talent. His life was filled with many good deeds, and his memory is cherished by a host of friends as well as by his family.

HAWES, Major Charles Wesley.—The Modern Woodmen of America is the greatest fraternal beneficiary organization doing business in the United States or the world, and Maj. Charles Wesley Hawes is the head clerk or general secretary thereof, with headquarters located at the head offices of the society at Rock Island, Ill. He is the experienced administrator, statistician and insurance authority for the organization, his duties involving heavy responsibility, when it is considered that the organization has, roundly, over a million members, in every state in the Union, and with life insurance in force aggregating over $1,600,000,000.

Major Hawes was born in the city of Rock Island, Ill., on March 7, 1841, the son of David and Julia Maria (Babcock) Hawes. David Hawes his father, was born at Belchertown, Mass., October 19, 1809, and his mother at Ware, Mass. David Hawes located at Rock Island (then called the town of Stephenson) in 1836, and continuously resided in that city until his death in April, 1900. During all the mature years of his life he was active in the affairs of his city and state, both in business and politics. In his younger years, he was variously a contractor and dealer in building materials, and a merchant. Later, he served as sheriff of Rock Island county, holding that office at the time of the breaking out of the Civil war, and his record in office, respectively, as justice, alderman and sheriff, was that of an honorable faithful and capable official. In politics he affiliated with the whig party, later becoming a republican, and he gave ardent support to the Union cause when the Civil war was declared. For fifty years he was a deacon of the First Baptist church of Rock Island and a consistent member.

Major Charles Wesley Hawes, was educated in the Rock Island public schools and Hersha academy of Dixon, Ill. After his school days, he engaged with his father in various business undertakings, but his ties of home and business were severed in 1861 when President Lincoln called for volunteers. On July 20th of that year, he volunteered as a private in Company A. Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, and participated with his company in the battles of Pea Ridge, Prairie Grove, the siege of Vicksburg, and the Red River, Yazoo and Black River campaigns. On July 20, 1862, he was commissioned captain of Company A, and on Sept. 23, 1863, he was commissioned as major of the Ninety-second United States Cavalry. He commanded this regiment through the entire Red River campaign. At the close of this campaign, he became inspector general of the Freedmen's Bureau for the state of Louisiana, and received an honorable discharge from the service on December 31, 1865. After the war, he was prominently identified with the state militia of Illinois, serving as captain of the celebrated Rodman Rifles of Rock Island, a company of national drill reputation. Later, he served as major of the Sixth Battalion. While in the militia service, he was instrumental in securing the building of an armory hall in Rock Island.

In public affairs, Major Hawes has always been identified with the republican party, serving in many capacities. He was deputy sheriff under his father during the year 1860, and until he enlisted for the war in 1861. He became chief of police of Rock Island, Ill., serving during the years 1874-1881, inclusive, and was postmaster of Rock Island during the years 1884-1888, inclusive, later becoming deputy county clerk. On Nov. 13, 1890, Major Hawes was elected head clerk, or general secretary, of the Modern Woodmen of America, at the head camp meeting held at Springfield, Ill. It is in this position that he made his national reputation as an insurance accountant, record keeper and life insurance authority. His official reports and numerous special reports that he has issued have been accepted by the life insurance world as practically the last word on the subjects treated. No official has exercised a larger or more beneficial influence in shaping the destinies of the great fraternal beneficiary system, representing over 7,000,000 insured American lives. Rock Island has claimed Major Hawes as resident during all the years of his life, with the exception of the years 1890-1897, inclusive, when as head clerk of the Modern Woodmen he was required to reside at Fulton, Ill., then the official headquarters city. Later, the head offices were removed to Rock Island, Ill., largely through Major Hawes' influence. Major Hawes is a Thirty-second degree mason, being identified with that great fraternity since 1866. He is also a member of the Knights of the Maccabees of the World and the Royal Neighbors of America. He has for years been an active supporter and member of the Broadway Presbyterian church of Rock Island.

On Dec. 10, 1866, Major Hawes was married to Josephine B. Saulpaugh, who died in 1892, two children surviving the union, Katherine S. (Mrs. James McNamara), born in 1869, and Charles W. Jr., born in 1880. On Dec. 24, 1894, Major Hawes was married (second) to Mary C. Fay of Fulton, Ill., the daughter of John Martin and Catherine A. (Harmon) Fay, natives of New York state, but pioneers in the settlement of Fulton. Of this union there was born in 1895 one son, John Marcus. Major Hawes is perhaps one of the best known men in the United States. His commanding official position with the Modern Woodmen of America and his activity in the fraternal and insurance world have made his name practically a household word wherever life insurance is known. As a life insurance record keeper and accountant, his reputation is international, and the business system developed under his official direction, as used by the Modern Woodmen of America, is considered a model. Personally, no man of large affairs enjoys a wider circle of warm friends, nor has any man exerted a more beneficial influence on the welfare of his fellowmen.

HAWES, Frank Babcock, a lifelong resident of Rock Island, who is now serving in the capacity of financial agent for the Modern Woodmen of America, has been connected with this organization for many years and is well known to the members of this large fraternal society. Mr. Hawes was born in Rock Island, Ill., November 14, 1844, a son of David and Julia Maria (Babcock) Hawes. David Hawes was born in Belchertown, Mass., October 19, 1809, and came to Rock Island, Illinois, which was then known as Stephenson. Shortly afterward he went to his native town and from there went to Naples, Ill., where he operated a hotel until 1837, when he returned to Stephenson; when it was little more than a trading post. He was a staunch member of the Baptist church, in which he became a deacon, and he held the offices of alderman, acting mayor, sheriff (from 1860 to 1862), United States gauger and coroner for twelve years, and for many years was sheriff. He died in April, 1900, at the age of ninety years and six months. Mr. Hawes was a charter member of the Old Settlers' Association, and he also held membership in the Odd Fellows, which order he joined in 1858. His wife died September 15, 1870, having been the mother of nine children of whom but four lived to maturity: Maj. C. W., who is an official of the Modern Woodmen at Rock Island; Frank B.; and John E. and Marcus W., who are both deceased.

Frank Babcock Hawes received his education in the public and high schools of Rock Island, and his first employment was as a clerk in the postoffice here. Later he became connected with the E. P. Reynolds Railroad Construction Co., beginning in a humble capacity and working his way up to the position of foreman and later to that of cashier. During the time he held the latter position, the company constructed a good many thousands of miles of western railroad, and Mr. Hawes handled on an average of $250,000 per month without losing a cent for the company. On April 13, 1891, he became connected with the Modern Woodmen of America as financial accountant, a position which he has held to the present time. He holds a first head council badge in the organization, and he is also a member of the Royal Neighbors and the Masons, in the latter of which he has attained to the Knight Templar degree. In political matters he is a republican.

Franz Schulte and wife

On October 12, 1875, Mr. Hawes was married at the bride's home, in Walworth county, Wis., by Rev. Brown of the Episcopal church, to Elizabeth A. Rector, who was born in that county, October 7, 1856, daughter of Joseph and Mary Anna (McDougal) Rector, the former born near Albany, N. Y., February 16, 1807 and died in 1869, and the latter born in 1811 at Duaneburg, N. Y., died January 11, 1876. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hawes, namely: David Rector, born March 28, 1880, (Easter Sunday), who is a graduate of the Illinois School of Dentistry and the University of Illinois, and is now an official of the Modern Woodmen of America.

HAWK, John Quincy, chief of the Moline fire department, is a man whose sagacious handling of the department under his efficient charge, has resulted in great saving of life and property, and a feeling of security on the part of the people of his city. He was appointed to his present office April 22, 1899, but has been connected with the fire department for twenty years, serving as volunteer for six years, before the paid department was organized. When the present organization was effected, Mr. Hawk was made assistant chief under Henry Reese, the first chief, in 1896.

Mr. Hawk was born at Sharon, Pa., October 20, 1869, a son of John and Mary (Stephenson) Hawk, the former born in Pennsylvania, and the latter in Scotland, both being deceased. The father was an expert oil driller in Pennsylvania and California, and was killed by an explosion in the latter state. The mother passed away in Pennsylvania. They had two children: Maud who died in infancy; and John Quincy. Growing up at Pittsburgh, Mr. Hawk attended the public schools, and later learned the trade of a tinner and cornice maker. In August, 1889, he came to Moline, recognizing the growing possibilities of the place, and until 1896, he worked at his trade, but in that year entered the employ of the city fire department.

In 1891, Mr. Hawk married Anna Johnson, born in Moline. They have two children: Nellie Bly, and Marie Madeline. Fraternally, he is a Mason, and belongs to the Odd Fellows, Eagles, Modern Woodmen of America, W. O. W. and Court of Honor. While he has voted the republican ticket in national matters, he has always been very liberal in county and city affairs. The family residence is at No. 728 Twenty-fifth street. Mr. Hawk not only is a brave and capable official, but also a loyal and public-spirited citizen, and no man stands higher in the confidence and esteem of his associates.

HAWLEY, Hon. John B. (deceased).—Rock Island county a half a century ago was the home of a number of men who played an important part in political matters of their day. Among these was the Hon. John B. Hawley, who entered public life with the birth of the republican party, served at one time as United States congressman, was later assistant secretary of the United States treasury, and eventually sought the gubernatorial nomination in Illinois. He was reared on a farm near Carthage, Ill., and came to Rock Island with his bride about the year 1854.

At the time of his arrival in this city, Mr. Hawley was a democrat, but after the nomination of General Fremont, in 1856, decided that the Nebraska Bill was not to his liking and felt that he could not support Senator Douglas and his measures. Accordingly, he threw his support to the republican party, made numerous speeches all over the state and in that same year was nominated for states attorney and elected in the following November. In his official capacity he was conscientious and painstaking as he had been in his private legal practice, an evidence of which was shown when on one occasion he held a grand jury four days with nothing to do while he fully decided how an indictment should be drawn. In the fall of 1861 he recruited a company of volunteers, of which he was made captain, this becoming a part of the Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry, but remained in the service only five months, when he was honorably discharged on account of disability incurred through exposure at Fort Donelson. In the fall of 1862 the 126th Illinois Volunteer Infantry was recruited and went into camp at Dixon, five companies going from Rock Island county. Mr. Hawley made a strong effort to secure a colonel's commission in this regiment, but did not succeed. In the Chicago and Washington papers, and even in some of the home sheets, he was spoken of as "General," but never received other than a captain's commission.

At the close of the war Mr. Hawley was appointed postmaster of Rock Island, a position which he held for one term. He then announced himself as candidate for Congress, received the nomination, and in the election which followed was successful over his opponent, P. L. Cable, by about forty-five votes, this campaign about exhausting Mr. Hawley's resources. While in Congress Mr. Hawley was faithful to his trust and looked after the interests of his constituents and locality with care. He was especially vigilant in looking after the Rock Island Arsenal appropriations, and when Samuel Randall was chairman of the finance committee and announced a reduction of $40,000,000 in the appropriation, of which $50,000 was deducted from the Rock Island arsenal, was instrumental in having the latter amount returned. When he sought renomination it is thought that his connection with the arsenal appropriation had much to do with arousing the bitterness that sprung up against him. During the administration of President Arthur Mr. Hawley was made assistant secretary of the treasury under Hon. John Sherman, but a rumor came to Rock Island that he had incurred the enmity of a United States senator and that this caused his retirement from that position. On his return to this city he again opened his legal offices and not long thereafter announced his candidacy for the governorship, but was decisively defeated in the race and this about ended his political career. Through the influence of W. C. Goudy, who had lived at Canton and had attended the Rock Island county courts, Mr. Hawley secured an appointment as attorney for the Elkhorn Valley Railroad, a branch of the Northwestern Railroad, with offices at Omaha, Neb. There he continued to reside until his death. In his happier moments Mr. Hawley was jolly, genial and companionable. He was a Christian gentleman throughout his life and as free from vice as a child, and as a representative member of the Rock Island county bar when good men were not lacking in its makeup, deserved the respect and esteem in which his memory is held.

HAWLEY, Seymour B.—The demands of any large community for food stuffs, creates active business conditions, and those who are able to cope successfully with them, have a gratifying resultant prosperity. One of the substantial grocers of South Rock Island, conveniently located at No. 2501 Twelfth street, is Seymour B. Hawley. Mr. Hawley was born in New York, April 2, 1854, being a son of Isaac H. and Jane (Travis) Hawley, both natives of New York. The father died in that state, and following his demise, the widow with her three children went to Geneseo, Ill. Later, she moved to Rock Island, arriving here in 1870, and here died in 1884. The father had been a farmer and hotel man.

Seymour B. Hawley attended the public schools of New York, until he was eleven years old, and then worked for a gardener. Upon coming to Rock Island, he secured work in the Rock Island Plow Works, there learning the moulder's trade, working at it for four years. He was then employed by the Rock Island Stove Co. for three years. Later, he moved to Nebraska, taking up a homestead on which he remained for years, then returning to Rock Island to engage once more with the Rock Island Stove Co. At the expiration of eighteen years with that concern, he embarked in his present enterprise in June, 1909, and has every reason to be satisfied with the result of his operations.

Mr. Hawley was married April 24, 1878, in Rock Island, to Eliza Jones, born August 31, 1861, daughter of Richard L. and Rachel Jones, the father being born in New York and the mother in Wales. Mrs. Jones went to Sunday school in New York and Horatio Seymour, later twice governor of New York, was her teacher. Mr. Jones was a brick mason by trade, and contractor and he built the first roundhouse in Rock Island, and worked on some of the leading buildings of this city. Mrs. Hawley has a sister, Mrs. Charles Baxter who lives in Omaha, Neb. Her husband was assistant custodian of the Federal building, but now deceased. Mr. Hawley has a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson, wife of Wallace Robinson, a Civil war veteran and retired lumberman, residing in New York City. Abraham T. Hawley, brother of Mr. Hawley lives in Waterford, N. Y., and is a dentist there. Another brother, Charles E., lives in Topeka, Kans., where he is a furniture dealer and undertaker. The Hawleys are all Baptists in religious faith, and democrats in politics, except Charles E. who is a republican. Mr. Hawley is a member of Milan Lodge No. 69, A. F. & A. M., and a charter member of Camp No. 1550, Modern Woodmen of America of Rock Island; Mrs. Hawley belongs to Oak Leaf Camp No. 1495, Royal Neighbors, of which she was secretary for ten years; and to Milan Chapter No. 326 Order of the Eastern Star, being Worthy Matron of her Chapter. She is also a member of the White Shrine of Jerusalem. The daughters belong to these two orders, and the sons are Masons.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawley have four children: Seymour B., an iron moulder, in the employ of the Rock Island Stove Co., resides at home; John B., married Edith Vertman of Rock Island and is proprietor of the Harms House barber shop, Rock Island; Caroline, wife of Cornelius Pfaff, a plumber of Rock Island; and Jennie, wife of Theodore Walker, proprietor of a barber shop in Moline. There is one grandchild in the family, Elenor Pfaff.

HAYES, Thomas J.—Farming is carried on in Rock Island county according to the latest improved methods, and the success attained by the agriculturalists here displays the wisdom shown in pursuing such a course. One of those who have attained to a well-merited prosperity is Thomas J. Hayes, owner of 140 acres situated on section 6, Edgington township, section 31, Andalusia township and section 1, Buffalo Prairie township. He was born on a farm in Buffalo Prairie township, July 15, 1860, being a son of John T. and Mary (Horen) Hayes. The former was born in County Limerick, Ireland, and died at the age of eighty-three years, in Preemption township, Mercer county, Ill., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Daniel Brenman. John T. Hayes came to the United States in young manhood, landing at New Orleans, from whence he came to Rock Island on the first train that entered the city. He could find no shelter but an old abandoned log cabin, which in later years he, assisted by neighbors, moved to his farm. Afterward he went to Ohio, and worked nine years near Cincinnati, but returned to Rock Island county, where he was married. Mrs. Hayes was born in County Kerry, Ireland, and landed in New Orleans when a girl and she had the yellow fever. She worked for a family that had slaves. They took care of her and she often related to her family incidents of her days in New Orleans, having lived there eight years. After she came to Rock Island she worked for three years. She was the eldest of a family of thirteen children, and sent money back to bring her brothers and sisters to America.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Hayes settled on a farm in Buffalo Prairie township, consisting of 160 acres, which they bought from a Mr. Clark, for whom Mr. Hayes had worked in Ohio. Here he raised $100 worth of potatoes, which he planted with a grubbing hoe, he not having any horses. Mrs. Hayes died in Peoria, while on a visit. She was the mother of the following children: Thomas J.; Ellen, Mrs. Daniel Brennan of Mercer county; Johanna, unmarried, living in Peoria; Mary, Mrs. Mary M. McDonald of Letcher, So. D.; and one who died in infancy. Both parents are buried in the Catholic cemetery in Mercer county, Ill.

Thomas J. Hayes went to school in Buffalo Prairie until he was twenty-one years old, working on the farm during the summer months. He well remembers when there were deer in this neighborhood, as well as wild turkey, and pioneer conditions generally prevailed. Until he was twenty-three years old, he worked for his father, then rented his father's farm for three years before his marriage and for several years afterward, buying it about 1899. On his property he erected a barn in 1902, and has a nice house. Mr. Hayes does general farming and stock raising, and has been very successful in his operations.

On May 4, 1887, Mr. Hayes was married by Justice Reed of Drury Township to Emeline Roberts, daughter of Simeon E. and Amanda (Campbell) Roberts, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. Hayes was reared a Catholic. He is a staunch democrat, and has always been a reliable citizen. To Mr. and Mrs. Hayes the following children were born: Everett, born March 20, 1891; and Gertrude, born February 27, 1896. Everett is now farming for himself, having rented sixty acres close to his home. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Hayes have celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary and have lived in the same place all this time.

HAYS, John Frew, of section 36, Drury township, is a member of a family that has been identified with Rock Island county history since 1843. He was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., July 10, 1837, a son of William and Dorcas (Maxwell) Hays, natives of the same county. The grandfather, Samuel Hays, immigrated from the north of Ireland and located in Westmoreland county, Pa. When the family came to Rock Island county in 1843 they located first at Illinois City, where they spent a year and a half, and then settled on a farm located in Buffalo Prairie township and Drury township, Rock Island county, and Duncan township, Mercer county. The father eventually became the owner of 600 acres of good farming land, and died in Buffalo Prairie township, July 30, 1899, at the age of eighty-eight years. The mother died on the same farm. Their children were: John Frew; Joseph, who is deceased; Thomas, who is deceased, served in the One Hundred Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry; Jesse, who served in the Second Iowa Cavalry, was killed in a battle near Memphis, Tenn.; Martha, who is Mrs. Joseph Ryan; Eliza, who died at the age of five years; and William, who is of Muscatine, Ia.

Being the eldest child, John F. Hays was early set to work but was also given a meagre education in the local schools. Among his early teachers he can remember Squire Whitney and James Simpson. He hauled grain and rails during his boyhood, and remained on the home farm until he was twenty-four years old. About 1861 he went to Colorado and Nevada and on to California, where he prospected and worked in gold mines, but in 1868 came back to Rock Island county, where he has since resided, now owning ten acres of valuable land.

In February, 1882, John Frew Hays married Miss Mary Schmelzer, born in Muscatine, Ia., February 2, 1859, a daughter of Henry and Martha (Hucke) Schmelzer, natives of Hesse Cassel, Germany, who came to the United States in October, 1851, and located at Muscatine. The father was a wagon-maker by trade and he and his wife died in 1874. After his marriage Mr. Hays continued farming and erected his present house in 1908. He and his wife have had children as follows: Meigs, who is of Buffalo Prairie township; Hazel, who is a teacher in Hazel Dell school; Olive, who is a teacher in Thornton school of Drury township; Audrey, who is a teacher in French District, Drury township; John, who died in 1910; and Chester and Marie, who are both at home. Mr. Hays is an independent in political belief.

HEAPS, Clarence Elroy.—With extensive improvements and changes being constantly inaugurated, which require the superintendence of experienced men, has come a development of the general contractor until his work today is among the most important executed. Numbered conspicuously among those who have achieved distinction along this line of endeavor, is Clarence Elroy Heaps of Moline, whose operations extend over a wide field, and his reputation for sound, reliable work is fully sustained. He was born in Kewanee, Henry county, Ill., July 25, 1873, second son in a family of five sons and an infant daughter (deceased) born to Israel Green and Rhoda Ann (Petteys) Heaps, both still living, residing at Kewanee. Israel Green Heaps was one of the early settlers of Henry county, coming there with his parents from Pennsylvania, in 1848. He engaged in farming near his present home, and has been prominent in agricultural and social matters of his community ever since locating in the county. For four years he served in the Union army during the Civil war, enlisting in Company I, Twenty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, participating in the battles of Lookout Mountain, Kennesaw Mountain, Chickamauga, Stone River, Shiloh and in Sherman's March to the Sea, coming out of the service with the grade of captain, and a record of "well done." On the same day he was mustered out of the service, May 17, 1865, he was married to Rhoda Ann Petteys, the young people having been engaged and anxiously awaiting his happy return home. The Petteys family was also prominent in pioneer history of Henry county, and the bride was one of four children. The war being over, the young couple settled on a farm, near Kewanee, and here Clarence Elroy was born.

Clarence Elroy Heaps attended the schools of his neighborhood, while helping with the work at home, and later was graduated from Geneseo collegiate institute, Geneseo, Ill. Returning to the farm, he remained there until about twenty years of age, when he began learning the trade of a mason, and through this, gradually developed into a general contractor, taking part in the upbuilding of his home city. In 1902, Mr. Heaps left Kewanee and spent a year at Davenport, Ia., where he had the contract for the construction of the new building for the First National Bank, noted as being the first chartered national bank in the United States, and carried it to successful completion. In the spring of 1904, he came to Moline, where he has made his home ever since, still being engaged in general contracting, his business extending all over Illinois, Iowa and the surrounding territory. He has been identified with the construction of many residences, churches, schools and all classes of building construction, and now has under process of construction a $150,000 gymnasium at the Iowa Agricultural college at Ames, Ia., this being his third building for the same institution.

Clarence Elroy Heaps was married at Kewanee, August 18, 1901, to Miss Alice Brunquist, who is one of a family of eight. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Heaps. Mr. Heaps has taken no active part in political life, but has generally voted the republican ticket. He is a member of the Moline Lodge of Elks, and is a member of the Commercial Clubs of Moline, Rock Island and Davenport. An extensive traveler, he has been from coast to coast three times, but his trips have been made for business purposes. He is still in the midst of a broad and active life. His interests are many and he has large landed holdings in the south which are rapidly appreciating in value, especially now that the Panama canal nears completion. These lands lie near Mobile, one of the chief of the gulf coast ports. Probably the salient index to Mr. Heaps' character is that he considers his mother the best woman who ever lived.

HECK, George W., (deceased).—It is a generally accepted truism that no man of genius or acknowledged ability can be justly or adequately judged on the morrow of his death, chiefly because time is needed to ripen the estimate upon work which can only be viewed upon all sides in the calm atmosphere of a more or less remote period from its completion. This remark is in no sense inappropriate to the case of the late George W. Heck, whose name occupies a conspicuous place in the history of Rock Island county. George W. Heck was born in Ohio, March 22, 1835, and came to Rock Island county about 1843 with his parents, John and Sarah Heck, who engaged in farming, finally buying and settling on a farm of some 300 acres, located on what is now Fifteenth street, Moline. Here the father and mother lived many years, dying respectively at the ages of ninety-one and eighty years.

George W. Heck was the ninth child of his parents and aided in the work of the home farm, his education being secured in the common schools. Later he engaged in the teaming business in Moline, and was thus occupied when the Civil war claimed him as a member of the Forty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and it was while he was thus engaged that he contracted sciatic rheumatism, from which he suffered more or less seriously during the remainder of his life, and was invalidated home. On December 23, 1866, Mr. Heck was married to Mrs. Georgiana M. (Sinnet) Mallory, of Rock Island, and shortly thereafter he became a partner in the ice business with his father-in-law, Alanson Sinnet, of that city. Four years later the business was turned over to him and he moved to Moline, where he resided in a cozy home and continued in the local ice business for fifteen years, also shipping ice to various points. At this time, on account of failing health Mr. Heck was compelled to give up business. His health continuing to fall he had (in 1893) to seek a mountain climate. Although very low at the time, his wife took him to Eureka Springs, Ark., where he found much relief, but for several years was obliged to spend his summers there. His health fluctuated, and he eventually grew worse, passing to his final rest October 31, 1900, at his home in Rock Island, where he and his wife had removed in the meantime.

George W. Heck was a man true to his convictions. He was a republican, and at the time of his death was superintendent of streets of Rock Island. He took much interest in the early history of his county, he and Mrs. Heck being members of the Rock Island Old Settlers' Association almost from its organization; Mrs. Heck still retains her membership therein. He was a member of Moline Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and his widow is still a member of the Women's Relief Corps of Moline.

Georgiana M. (Sinnet) Heck still resides in Rock Island, her home being at No. 449 Forty-fourth street. She is in good health, and is active in body and mind, her interesting reminiscences of the early days of Rock Island being both accurate and instructive. She was born on St. Valentine's day, February 14, 1828, in a log cabin on her father's farm, located on what was known as Burg street, one of the principal streets leading out of Granville, O. She obtained her education in the Granville schools and in Granville Seminary, after which she taught school for several terms. On October 28, 1856, she arrived in Rock Island with her husband, James A. Mallory, who died March 23, 1863. It was not then as it is now, one single track railway—the Rock Island, being the only means of transportation, and it having reached the town only two years before. There was no bridge across the Mississippi river, of course no street cars, and only a few houses. One street, or to speak more accurately, only one road, led from Rock Island to Moline, and on each side were farms, which were often visited by wolves, which crossed the ice from the island during the winters and howled around the houses. There were no churches, services being held in schoolhouses and halls, of which there were none too many. There were no accommodations for drainage, and the early settlers considered themselves fortunate if there were enough people well to care for those who were ill with the ague. These were the conditions when Mrs. Heck first entered Rock Island, but she has lived to see it become one of the great centers of industry and education. She has a vivid recollection of war times and especially the crisis at Vicksburg. During the war she went across the Mississippi river on the ice when it was broken so she had to step across cracks, sometimes a foot wide, to Davenport, to see after her brother's child that had died.

The family lived on cornbread, and coffee that she made herself from wheat. She well remembers when she sent her fine butter to town and received 5 cents a pound, in trade for it. While a child and young girl her clothes were woven and spun by her mother and the cooking was done at the fireplace. She never had better biscuits than were baked by the reflector in front of the old fireplace. Her span of life has covered the time of the homespun clothing, tallow candle, etc., to the present time of modern conveniences. Mrs. Heck has a hand-woven counterpane that was given to her by her mother-in-law in 1856.

She has been a member of the Baptist church for over seventy years, and now belongs to the Edgewood Baptist church of Rock Island, to the support of which she has given much of herself and her means. Together with her father, Alanson Sinnet, and her brother, Francis M. Sinnet, Mrs. Heck has done much for Rock Island, having opened and had built Sinnet's Addition with more than one hundred residences and business places, she having had built over one-half a block of buildings herself. Mrs. Heck also owned ten shares of stock of the Rock Island & Moline Railroad, of which her father was one of the promoters. Like her late husband, she has scores of friends in the city, and holds an established place in the affections of many of Rock Island's best citizens, who recognize and appreciate her many admirable qualities of mind and heart.

HEDIN, Henry John.—Modern methods of agriculture differ very materially from those used in the early days of Rock Island county, and the men who are now regarded as representative of the best class of farmers eagerly adopt new ideas whenever they are convinced they will work out profitably and sensibly.

One of these men is Henry John Hedin, born in Smolen, Sweden, June 14, 1848, a son of Hemming Anderson and Bertha (Peterson) Hedin. He grew to manhood in his native place, being educated in the public schools there. Not being satisfied, he came to America in 1869, arriving here in April. The first two years he spent in Kansas, but then went to Missouri, and staid there for eighteen months before coming to Rock Island county. After his arrival here, he worked in the coal mines in Hampton township for five years, then went to Moline to engage as blacksmith for the Moline Plow Co., and was thus employed for seven years. In 1882, he bought fifty-five acres of land near Watertown, which he operated for twenty-two years, at the expiration of which he sold, to buy seventy acres in Coe township, which has been his home ever since. Here he does general farming, and has developed a fine property.

In 1872 Henry John Hedin was married (first) to Hannali Peterson, by whom he had three children: William; Anna, Mrs. George Smith of Seattle, Wash.; and Esther, Mrs. Arthur Smith, also of Washington. Mrs. Hedin died in 1887. Henry John Hedin married (second) Matilda Johnson. They have five children: Henning, Hilda, Minnie, Jennie and Arvin, all at home. Mr. Hedin is a member of the Lutheran church, and is active in its good works. Interested in the development of his township, and believing in good roads, modern schools and other improvements, he is somewhat advanced in his ideas, and always willing to do his full part to secure these advantages. Few men are better liked than he, and he has many friends all through the county where he has lived so long.

HEEREN, Rense Classen.—One of the honored veterans of the Civil war, and a man widely known throughout Rock Island county, is Rense Classen Heeren, native of Ost Friesland, Germany, where he was born February 10, 1839, and in 1853 he came to America on a sailing vessel, thirteen weeks being consumed in the voyage. His father, Albert E. Heeren, bought land in Zuma township to the extent of ninety acres. On this property there was a little log house and in it he, his parents and nine brothers and sisters lived, while they were making improvements. They had three yoke of oxen, and were thus more fortunate than many of their neighbors who had none. This first home is still in the family.

After Mr. Heeren married he bought 140 acres, later adding sixty acres and still later eighty acres more, and on this farm he has himself put the greater part of the improvements. Mr. Heeren remembers seeing slaves driven to market in New Orleans, while coming to America in 1853. On September 29, 1866, Mr. Heeren was married in Coe township to Antje Rah, daughter of John and Gerdena (Gerowald) Rah, both natives of Ost Friesland, Germany. Mrs. Heeren came to America on the same ship as her husband, but her people located in Iowa, where she grew up, having been only two years old when brought to this country. Eight children were born to this marriage: Albert R., John D., Enno N., Dena A., Henry J., Alida C., Sarah J., Rense P. B. Henry J., who died April 28, 1902, is buried at Pleasant Point Cemetery, in Coe township. He was twenty-eight years old, and a promising young man, whose loss was deeply mourned not only by the family but the many who knew and appreciated him.

Mr. Heeren served in Company D, Twelfth Illinois Infantry during the Civil war, and his company was assigned to the Army of the Tennessee. However, he was put on special duty, and sent to Tennessee, then to New York; thence to North Carolina and there he rejoined his command. He served nine months, and was principally on guard duty along railroads. During the Grand Review at Washington at the close of the war Mr. Heeren marched continuously from ten in the morning until two in the afternoon. In 1905 Mr. Heeren left the farm and built a new house in Port Byron, where he is now living retired. He is a member of the Lutheran church, but attends the Congregational church with his wife, who belongs to that denomination. Hard-working, faithful in all things, Mr. Heeren is a most excellent example of the sturdy German-American who has done so much to make this country what it is today.

HEIDEMANN, William.—The soil and climatic conditions of Rock Island county, combined with unsurpassed transportation facilities, make this locality an ideal spot for gardening, and many of the prosperous residents here have devoted themselves to this line of work. One of those thus engaged is William Heidemann of No. 980 Aiken street, South Rock Island. He was born at Rock Island April 14, 1858, a son of John Heidemann and his wife Charlotte (Schrader) Heidemann. They were Germans by birth, who came to the United States in 1854, landing at New Orleans, from whence they went to Davenport, Iowa, via St. Louis, Mo. The father secured employment with Bailey Davenport in a stone quarry, where he worked for three years, and also on the old Harper house. He then engaged with Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann with whom he remained for six or seven years. Following this, he worked with different contractors until 1880, when he located on the property now the home of his son, buying four acres. Later he added five and one-half acres and spent here the remainder of his life, engaged in gardening, dying in September, 1891. His widow survived him until February, 1902. Their family was as follows: John, who is deceased; Alvina, who is the wife of Charles Bauman of South Rock Island; William; and Charles, who is a carpenter and contractor of Denver, Colo. Until he was fourteen years of age William Heidemann attended the Rock Island public schools and then secured a job wheeling sawdust for Philip Bladel, receiving for this work forty cents per day. This continued for a year, when he became a shingle packer, and so worked for three years. He then was advanced in wages to $1.40 per day. About this time he entered the employ of Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann and remained with them for a year. For another year he drove a team for William Rauth, when he went into the gardening business in partnership with his father, this association continuing for eight years, when William Heidemann assumed sole charge of it, but at present he is in partnership with his son-in-law, Fred Hartman, this connection having been formed in 1910.

William Heidemann was married at Rock Island April 19, 1872, when he was united to Miss Ellen Donovan, daughter of Daniel and Fanny Donovan, natives of Ireland, who came to the United States in 1859, locating at Rock Island. The children in the Donovan family were: Rose; Jerry M.; William; Daniel; Charles; Margaret, and Mrs. Heidemann. Mr. and Mrs. Heidemann became the parents of children as follows: Charles, who lives in Chicago, being an estimator on sash and door work; Letty, who married Fred Hartman; Anna, who lives at home, is employed as a policy writer at the Modern Woodmen of America building; William, who lives at home; and Ella, Francis and Winifred, who also live at home; Maggie is deceased. For twenty-four years William Heidemann has been a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. For six years he served as highway commissioner and for the same length of time was a school director. He enjoys the confidence and esteem of his neighborhood, where he is recognized as a man who can be trusted with the management of public affairs.

HEINZE, Hon. Otto R., mayor of Andalusia, Rock Island county, occupies an honorable office for which a collegiate training in youth, military service for some five years under the strictest discipline known to any army in the world, and much European travel, qualified him in many ways, and is one of those broadminded, forceful German-Americans, whose activities are so often used for the public good. He was born in Prussia-Germany, October 2, 1855. His people were all of the same section, his grandfather, Frederick Heinze being a well-known rope manufacturer for many years, and during the Revolution of 1848, was captain of the Second Company of the Fifth Pioneer Regiment.

He married a Drexel of Schingel, Germany, and they had five children: Frederick, Samuel, Frederick, William, Maria and Agnes. The second son, Samuel Frederick, was postmaster of his native town for many years and served as a soldier in the Prussian army for twelve years. He died in his native town, Moschin, in 1883, at the age of sixty-one years. He married Lizzie Von Selig, who survived until 1903, dying at the age of eighty-six years. They had the following children: Otto R.; Emelina, who lives at Berlin, Germany; Theodore, who also resides in the city of Berlin; Annie, who died in the above city in 1903; Mary, who died at Moschin, in 1887; and Iva, who is a resident of Berlin.

The mother of the above family moved to Berlin after the death of the father.

Otto R. Heinze attended the schools of his native village and after going to Berlin attended the high school and also attended a law college. He was quite young when he became a soldier, as all German youths do some time in early manhood, but he was only sixteen and a half years old when he participated in the Prussian war of 1870-71, and was wounded by a bullet in his left thigh at the battle of Mais-la-Tour. His whole term of service in the German army was five years. He learned several trades, one of which was rope making, his grandfather's trade, and this he followed to some extent before coming to America. In 1874 he sailed from Hamburg, on the steamship Gellert for New York and came immediately to Rock Island, being accompanied by his wife. He found employment as a lumber sorter with the great lumber firm of Denkmann & Weyerhaeuser and continued with them for three years. His next business connection was with the Rock Island Stove Company for eight years and for the succeeding eleven years he was with the Rock Island Plow shops. He then turned his attention to gardening and for three years was so engaged in South Rock Island, and for three more years operated the old Goode farm, one mile south of Andalusia. Subsequently, for two years, he engaged in navigation on the Mississippi river, following which he purchased a button factory at Andalusia, which he conducted, but it is now operated by his son Bernard. This is the largest button factory in Andalusia, giving employment to twenty-nine men and cutting 300 tons of shells annually. He also owns residence property at Andalusia. Since taking up his residence here he has shown every mark of good and intelligent citizenship. After serving as trustee of the village for four terms he was elected mayor and in this honorable office is serving his third term.

Mayor Heinze was married at Berlin, Germany, December 5, 1873, to Miss Emma Noack, a schoolmate, who was born also at Moschin, Prussia, and died in Rock Island county, December 29, 1902. She was a daughter of Karl and Bertha Noack, who died in Germany. They had eleven children born to them, namely: Bernhard, who is village clerk of Andalusia, married Blanche Reed, a daughter of R. E. Reed, has one son, Rodney B.; Wallie, who is the wife of William Schultdt, of Buffalo, Iowa, has three children, Margaret, Elizabeth and Wallie; Otto, who is a resident of Buffalo, Iowa, married Francis Roe; Martha, Edward and Emma, all of whom live at home; and five who died young. In the spring of 1903, Mayor Heinze and his six children visited Germany, where they passed three months, their visit being somewhat saddened by the death of the aged mother and grandmother. It was a great gratification, however, that at the close of her eighty-six years she had these long-separated dear ones with her. Mayor Heinze is of the Lutheran faith. Politically he is a democrat, and fraternally, for twenty-two years, has been a member of the M. W. A.

HELLPENSTELL, Carl Anton Julius (deceased). The German-American is a distinctive type, and one that has more than borne its part in the remarkable development of this country. Many of these sturdy characters have passed to their last reward, but the result of their labors, and conscientious lives, remains, and exerts a beneficial influence upon the rising generation. One of these men who at one time was an important factor in the life of Rock Island county, and particularly that of the city of Rock Island, was Carl Anton Julius Hellpenstell. He was the fifth child of seven, the family consisting of three sisters and four brothers. He was born in Muenster, Westphalia, Germany, June 27, 1861. His father was Wilhelm Hellpenstell and his mother Georgine (Geissler) Hellpenstell. The former held a high government position, and was descended from a prominent family of the middle Rhine provinces, while his wife came from an old Hanover family.

Carl Anton Julius Hellpenstell attended a number of schools and universities in his native land, being graduated from the Polytechnic school in Hanover, after which he was engaged in clerical work in that city for two years. His father having died, the family removed to America in 1882, coming direct to Rock Island, where he made his home up to the time of his death, which occurred November 29, 1911. Shortly after his arrival here, he became book-keeper for I. Huber, who was his firm friend ever after. Later Mr. Hellpenstell took a position with Hayes and Cleaveland in the insurance line. He remained here a short time, and then entered the Mitchell and Lynde Bank. After about a year, he left this bank to take the position of teller in the Peoples National Bank. When August Huesing retired, he was appointed cashier, and later elected vice-president, holding that responsible position at the time of his demise.

Mr. Hellpenstell was a member of Rock Island Commandery, No. 18, K. T., a charter member of the local lodge of Elks, a member of Trio Lodge of Masons, and of the Modern Woodmen of America. He was actively identified with public enterprises, was a leading member of the Rock Island Club, and one of its promoters. Mr. Hellpenstell was one of the organizers of the Rock Island Exposition Company, being its director and treasurer; was a member of the Rock Island Industrial Commission, and was active in the Business Men's Association. He was a prominent member of the leading German societies of Rock Island and Davenport, and for eleven years was treasurer of the Rock Island Board of Education, and at one time was president of the library board. Governor Deneen appointed him a member of the state insurance commission, and he did much hard work in connection with this office. As chairman of the executive committee of the American Bankers' Association, Mr. Hellpenstell rendered very valuable services.

Mr. Hellpenstell was married October 5, 1895, to Miss Gertrude Cross of Davenport, Ia., who always proved his truest friend and support in all the trials of life, as well as his chief sharer in its joys. The widow and four children, Carl, Julius, Gertrude and Olga, are left to mourn the loss of the husband and father, and reside in the family home at No. 1026 Twentieth street, Rock Island. He is also survived by three brothers; Emil and Max of Rock Island, and Louis of Pasco, Oregon, and three sisters, Mrs. Hermine Steinhauer of Preenruption, Mrs. Emma Steinhauer and Miss Augusta Hellpenstell of Rock Island.

Mr. Hellpenstell really sacrificed himself to his bank. A few years previous to his death, the management bought the building in which the bank was located, remodeling and enlarging it, turning the upper stories into a modern office building. All the attendant work was done under his direct supervision, and the responsibility was a severe strain on him in addition to his other duties. Later, it was decided to transform the bank's own rooms into fine, modern banking quarters, and the supervision of this was also turned over to Mr. Hellpenstell. Faithfully, he did all that was required of him, but the strain proved too much, and three days after the opening to the public of the bank's present elegant rooms, he was compelled to give up, and seek a long rest. He went first to Michigan, and then to Colorado, but all was in vain, and he was brought home to finally sink to rest in the city of his adoption, passing away at his elegant home, surrounded by his family and friends, early on the morning of November 29, 1911. No man stood higher, none was more popular in the lodge, club, social and business life of the city where he lived, as well as with those with whom he came into contact in county, state and nation. Mr. Hellpenstell traveled extensively throughout this country, for one leading such a busy life, his journeys reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Hemenway, Harrold, superintendent of the foundry of the H. W. Cooper Sad Hardware Manufacturing Co. of Moline, and one of the enterprising young business men of this county, has proven his ability and faithfulness to duty by years of constant endeavor. He was born in Moline, September 14, 1880, being a son of Charles F. and Mary E. (Harrold) Hemenway, the former born in Grand Detour, Ill., in 1846, and the latter in Rock Island county, February 1, 1848. Charles F. Hemenway was cashier of the Moline National Bank, coming to Moline in 1854, but moved to the state of Washington, July 9, 1908, and he died at Port Anzeles, Dec. 15, 1912. During the Civil war, he served in the Twenty-seventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Lansing, Ia. He was made clerk at army headquarters and served three years, being mustered out at the close of the war.

Harrold Hemenway attended the Moline public schools, graduating from the high school in the class of 1898. He grew up fond of outdoor life, thereby building up a strong physical frame, and when he entered the Griffin Clay Manufacturing Co., Griffin, Ill., he put all his energy into his duties, resolving to rise to a position of responsibility. He remained with this concern from June 14, 1898, to August 14, 1899, and then worked for the Union Malleable Iron Co., until May 1, 1908, when he was made foundry superintendent for the H. W. Cooper Sad Hardware Manufacturing Co., and has 150 men under him.

Mr. Hemenway was married in DeKalb, Ill., June 7, 1911, to Nina L. Wagner, born there, September 10, 1883, daughter of Henry and Nancy (Waite) Wagner. Mr. Wagner is a dry goods merchant of DeKalb. Mr. Hemenway owns considerable city property. He belongs to the Elks, and served two terms as exalted ruler. He is also a member of the Moline Club, and is now on its board of directors. While he upholds the republican platform in national matters, he prefers to vote for the man in local issues. Strong, self-reliant, able to command others, Mr. Hemenway is one of the men born to lead, and while he has already accomplished much, there is no doubt but that he will rise much higher, and his name may become known in connections of still greater industrial importance.

Hemenway, Capt. Luke Edgar (deceased).—More than a decade has been lived since Captain Luke Edgar Hemenway passed to that shore toward which all mankind is hastening, yet he is still remembered among those who were fortunate enough to be his friends and business associates, and his influence is felt in circles of Moline where zealous citizens are attempting to promote the public welfare. Soldier, citizen and business man, Captain Hemenway so regulated his life and affairs that his record will continue to be one worthy of honor, whether found upon the rolls of war or peace. He was a member of a family noted for its military valor and patriotic spirit, and was born August 7, 1816, at Shoreham, Addison county, Vt., a son of Francis S. and Clara (Turrill) Hemenway.

Ralph Hemenway, the progenitor of the family in America, came to this country from Gloucester, England, about the year 1730, and settled at Roxbury, Mass., where the family became prominent as industrious and public-spirited people. The title deeds of the founder of the family still remain in the Hemenway name, and the original deed of the property of the grandfather of Captain Hemenway is dated March 6, 1792, which shows the date of the family's moving to Shoreham, Vt., from Farmingham, Mass. Captain Hemenway's great-grandfather, Daniel Hemenway, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, receiving his baptism of fire at Bunker Hill, and fighting right through that struggle until independence was gained. A son of this Revolutionary hero, Samuel Hemenway, became the father of Francis S. Hemenway, a farmer by occupation, who came to Illinois from

Otto, R. Schutte & Family

Vermont in 1853 and settled in Ogle county, Ill., there passing away in 1858, at the age of seventy-eight years.

Captain Luke Edgar Hemenway received his education in the public schools of his native place, and secured his early business training as a clerk in stores in several mercantile towns. He left Bethel, Vt., in the fall of 1836, and came direct to Grand Detour, Ogle county, Ill., via the canal and the great lakes. In partnership with his brother-in-law, Solon Cumins, he engaged at once in the mercantile business, but, his health failing, subsequently began farming, in which he was engaged until 1855. At that time he located in Moline, Ill., where he secured employment with John Deere, the noted plow manufacturer, and for four years continued with this manufacturing genius as bookkeeper, this training gaining for him knowledge and experience that did much to advance his success in after life. In 1859 he formed a partnership with H. A. Barnard and Mr. Wyckoff, and under the firm style of Hemenway, Wyckoff & Barnard continued to manufacture chairs, furniture and mill machinery until the outbreak of the Civil war called so many of the young men of the neighborhood to the army that business came practically to a standstill, and in 1864 Mr. Hemenway answered his country's call by gathering about him a company of earnest, patriotic men, and was elected captain thereof, the organization becoming Company H, of the 132d Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry. A record of this company will be found in the military history of this work, and it is only necessary to say that Captain Hemenway was always with his men, his brilliant example so inciting them to effort that they were respected by every command with which they were connected. Upon receiving his honorable discharge, October 17, 1864, Captain Hemenway returned to Moline and entered the employ of the Moline Plow Company, at that time a new manufacturing concern of agricultural implements, which has since developed into one of the largest concerns of its kind in the world. He continued as bookkeeper and general office manager of this enterprise until again compelled by ill health to retire. Two years later (1877) he was appointed postmaster of the city of Moline by President Hayes, and reappointed by Presidents Garfield and Arthur, serving nine years in this capacity, giving to the city and the government the utmost satisfaction. He also served the city as alderman, clerk and trustee, and was faithful to his every trust. He was a charter member of Doric Lodge No. 19, A. F. & A. M., joining in 1859 and being elected its second worshipful master in 1860 and 1861. In the latter year the lodge was suspended on account of the Civil war, but in 1866 was again organized and he was elected to the same position. He was also actively connected with R. H. Graham Post, Moline, Grand Army of the Republic. He was Universalistic in his belief until ten years before his death, when he joined the First Congregational church of Moline, in the faith of which he passed away April 27, 1903. Captain Hemenway was originally a whig in politics, and cast his first presidential ballot for William Henry Harrison and his last in that party for General Winfield Scott. When the republican party was formed, he voted for Fremont and Dayton, and continued to be an ardent supporter of the Grand Old Party until his death, his last vote being given to President McKinley.

On June 23, 1842, Captain Hemenway was married at Grand Detour, Ogle county, Ill., to Miss Jane Elizabeth Marsh, who was born January 29, 1814, at Bethel, Vt., daughter of Salmon Peleg and Mary (Mills) Marsh, and granddaughter of Colonel Joel Marsh, of Revolutionary fame. There are three children living of this union: Frederick C., ex-sheriff of this county and now a guard at Rock Island Arsenal, also an ex-soldier of the Civil war; Ellen M., the wife of Joseph M. Christy, the veteran cracker manufacturer of Moline, Rock Island and Des Moines, Ia., who is at present residing in the latter city; and Charles F., a Civil war veteran (deceased), who spent the greater part of his life in the banking business. The mother of these children was a woman of excellent character, beloved by all who knew her, and the daughter, Mrs. Christy, has inherited many of the loving and motherly qualities which made the elder woman so affectionately thought of. The mother died in December, 1883. Mr. and Mrs. Christy have had the following children: Fred Hemenway, October 2, 1867, who married Agnes Durham, September 10, 1899; Jennie Marsh, born February 15, 1870, who married Mark L. Johnson, September 25, 1895; Joseph Milton, Jr., born August 12, 1872, who married Nellie Lehman, April 21, 1896; Margaret Ellen, born December 3, 1875, who married Rufus Walker, Jr., November 15, 1899; Charles Francis, born April 26, 1880, who married Grace Taylor, May 30, 1906; and Clara Ruth, born February 24, 1882, who died July 18, 1884.

HENNEGAN, John Alexander (deceased).—In the life of the late John Alexander Hennegan, recently postmaster at Carbon Cliff, and one of that village's most enterprising and public-spirited citizens, there was found an excellent example for the youth of the present generation to follow. Starting in life with the handicap of only an indifferent education, his parents both dead and himself in humble circumstances, he fought his way in the world doggedly and persistently and through the sheer force of his own industry, worked his way to the front ranks of his fellow townsmen, and his loss to Rock Island county which was occasioned by his sudden death by accident, June 6, 1912, was keenly felt by the whole county. Mr. Hennegan was born November 7, 1852, in Armstrong county, Pa., a son of James P. and Mary Jane (Neal) Hennegan, natives of that county, and a grandson of John and Nancy (Powers) Hennegan, the former of Pennsylvania and the latter of Ireland. Mr. Hennegan's parents were married in Pennsylvania, where James P. Hennegan was a general laborer and also conducted a store, and in 1853 they came to Rapids City, Ill., where Mr. Hennegan was employed as a laborer until his enlistment in the fall of 1862, in Company E, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He died from exposure May 10, 1863, at Jacksonville, Tenn., and his widow survived him only until August, 1866, when her death occurred at Port Byron, Ill.

John Alexander Hennegan was the only child of his parents and he received his education in the Soldiers' Orphans' school at Fulton, Ill. He remained with his mother until her death, and then began working on farms, until he was twenty years of age, at which time he went to Colorado, where for three years he was employed on a farm located between Golden and Denver. Returning to Rapids City, Ill., he started digging coal in Hampton township, an occupation which he followed for eleven years, when he began clerking in a general store, three years later purchasing the place from the proprietor. He conducted this business for six years, but in 1903, when he was appointed to the position of postmaster, he sold it so as to attend to the duties of the office. On June 10, 1907, he bought an interest in his former store, which he sold in May, 1911, and once more gave his entire attention to the duties of postmaster. He was well known throughout this section, and was very popular on account of his pleasing and genial personality, and was highly esteemed as a man who had made his own way in the world. He was a republican in politics, and served as assessor and collector, being in office for two terms as the incumbent of each position. Fraternally he was connected with the Modern Woodmen of Carbon Cliff, and the Court of Honor of East Moline.

On February 23, 1876, Mr. Hennegan was united in marriage with Miss Bridget A. O'Brien, who was born at Carbon Cliff, Ill., April 3, 1858, daughter of John and Catherine (Murray) O'Brien, who came to the United States from Ireland as young people and were engaged in laboring and farming during the balance of their lives in this locality. Mr. and Mrs. Hennegan had the following children: Philip Neal, who is of Moline; John Francis, who is residing at Carbon Cliff; Mary Irene, who married William Gainey of Carbon Cliff; Katie May, who is the wife of Leroy Hampson, of Silvis, and Andrew Warren, who died at the age of eleven years. Mrs. Hennegan has acted as postmistress since Mr. Hennegan's death.

HENNING, Charles A.—Many of those who seek these shores, coming from foreign lands, are brave, hopeful men and women, looking for kindlier fortune in a strange and distant country. Especially is this true of those who come here from Sweden, for they seek homes, and are willing to work hard to acquire them. One of the men whose efforts have proven that his judgment was excellent when he selected the United States as his new home, is Charles A.

Henning, foreman of the paint department of Wilson Moline Buggy Co. of Moline, residing at No. 1426 Twenty-sixth avenue, this same city. He was born in Sweden, September 13, 1865, and losing his parents when he was an infant he knows nothing about them, not even their names. He was educated in the public schools here, and worked in the old Cater saw-mill for several years, then becoming a house painter. Later, he entered the employ of the Wilson Moline Buggy Co., and in 1885, he was made foreman of their paint shop, for they recognized his ability to handle men.

In November, 1885, Charles A. Henning was married at Moline, to Ida M. Anderson, born in Sweden, a daughter of Pere Anderson, who with his wife has passed away. Mrs. Henning died June 20, 1910, and is buried in Riverside Cemetery, Moline. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Henning were as follows: Ernest M., who is a civil engineer in the state of Georgia; Levy Robert, who lives in Seattle, Wash.; Carl S., who is assistant overseer of a ranch in Arizona; and Isabel G., attending school at Rock Island. Mr. Henning is a republican, and belongs to Trinity Methodist church. All his life he has been connected with various musical societies, taking his recreation in that way. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias, Red Men, Knights of the Globe, Tri-City Musical Federation, being one of the county's most prominent musicians. He played with the Old Light Guards' band, the Ogden orchestra of Moline and other orchestras. He is a man who believes in conducting his life according to the Golden Rule and is beloved by the men under his charge, while his strict sense of justice makes him invaluable to his employers for his safeguarding of their interests. Left a helpless orphan, Mr. Henning deserves unlimited credit for what he has accomplished. Not only has he made a place for himself, but he has gained respect and confidence, and is one of the most representative men of his nationality to be found in the county.

HENRICHS, Henry Classen.—Prosperity can be attained along agricultural lines just as it can in other pursuits, only through earnest, persistent endeavor, combined with steadfast thrift. Many of the farmers of Rock Island county have succeeded way beyond the ordinary because they have been willing to work hard for what they have, and to save from their earnings. One of the successful farmers of this locality is Henry Classen Henrichs, of section 33, Coe township, born in Germany, September 18, 1859, a son of Claus and Ella (Betty) Henrichs. Henry C. Henrichs was educated in the public schools of his native land, and gave his country the required military service of three years, before coming to America in 1889. He located in Rock Island county which has since been his home. In February, 1897, he bought his farm of eighty-one acres of Peter Dooze, on section 17, and has put in all of the improvements, building the greater part of the barn, rebuilding the house, and putting up many necessary outbuildings. He also put up the fences, and has everything in prime condition. Mr. Henrichs feeds all his grain, raising thirty head of hogs annually, and carrying eight cows and four horses.

In 1897, he married Anna Hollow, daughter of Louis and Bertha (Gurnton) Hollow, all born in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Henrichs are the parents of eight children: Claudie, Bertha, Henry, Eltie, Otto, Louis, William and Adella, the older ones students in the district school. Mr. Henrichs belongs to the Lutheran church, and gives it liberal support. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 34 of Port Byron. Both he and his wife have many friends, and their place is one of the best in this part of the township.

HENSLEY, Henry H.—There are few branches of commercial endeavor that have not attracted the enterprising business men of Rock Island, and none has been developed along more modern lines than that of catering to the love of flowers. One of the men who has won a well deserved distinction as a florist is Henry H. Hensley. He was born at Horine Station, Jefferson county, Mo., October 23, 1872, a son of James O. Hensley, now deceased. Mr. Hensley comes of an old and honored family, his ancestors settling in Albemarle county, Va., having come from England, where one of the ancestors of the Hensleys was appointed a high churchman. The great-grandfather fought under General Washington at Valley Forge, and the grandfather, William Hensley was under General Jackson at the famous battle of New Orleans. The father was born near St. Louis, Mo., November 11, 1832, and spent his boyhood on a farm, securing a good education. He went to Texas in a prairie schooner, and after his arrival in that state, taught school for a time, but returned to Missouri and engaged in mercantile pursuits, and at one time furnished wood for the Iron Mountain Railroad. During the Civil war, he was in the quartermaster's department, under General Rosecrans. Joseph O. Hensley married Eliza Sinclair of Scottish descent, born in Ohio, who survives her husband, making her home at Marshall, Marshall county, Mo., being seventy years of age.

Henry H. Hensley was educated in the public schools of his native place, and Jones' commercial college of St. Louis. After leaving school, he learned the florist business, and since 1887, has been engaged in this line of work all over the country, as foreman, manager and proprietor. He came to Rock Island in 1905, and started his present business.

Mr. Hensley was married in Marshall county, Mo., in 1902, to Miss Jessie R. Chapman of Springfield, Ill. No issue. Fraternally, Mr. Hensley belongs to the Masonic order, the Eagles, Court of Honor and Maccabees, while socially, he is a member of the Rock Island Club. The First Methodist church of Rock Island holds his membership. In political matters, Mr. Hensley follows his own ideas regarding the fitness of the candidate for office, regardless of party ties. He is a shrewd, reliable, enterprising man, who understands his business thoroughly, and his present success clearly indicates his future policy.

HERSTEDT, John, well known as an expert machinist, was formerly a partner with his brother in conducting the Moline Pattern Works, Moline, Ill., but is now with the Moline Pattern Co. He was born in Sweden, September 24, 1871, was educated in the public schools of his native land, and there learned the trade of blacksmith. He is a son of Peter and Bengta (Lundgren) Herstedt, who were born in Sweden where the father died and the mother still lives.

In 1891, in looking for better opportunities for his line of work, John Herstedt came to America and located at once in Moline, where he learned the trade of machinist, becoming expert as a pattern maker. He and his brother Anton were for a time interested in the Tri-City Pattern & Experimental Works, of Moline, but later decided to embark in business on their own account, and in February, 1911, opened an establishment at No. 428 Third avenue, where they carried on brass pattern work and also did experimental work but later moved to present location Fourth avenue and Twelfth street. They had their plant equipped with modern machinery, and their work extended over a wide territory, for they had an excellent patronage in the three cities, especially in Moline, and have built up a good business reputation. The business arrangement between the brothers was a copartnership.

After coming to Moline, John Herstedt married Anna Swanson. Two children have been born of this union, Adelbert and Evelyn. Mr. Herstedt is a member of the Odd Fellows and has a large circle of friends.

Anton Herstedt, who was born in Sweden in 1886, came to America in 1905. He had learned the trade of blacksmith in his native land, and after coming to Moline learned pattern-making. He is unmarried. He has returned to Sweden to live.

HESS, William John.—Farming has grown to be so profitable that many of the most sensible men of Rock Island county are content to spend their lives engaged in it, and few regret such action. Not only is the soil here well adapted to agricultural purposes, but the transportation facilities are so good that the products can be easily marketed. One of the men thus engaged is William John Hess, who was born in Knox county, Ill., November 26, 1866, and when three years old, in 1869, was brought by his parents to his present farm. He is a son of William and Mary (Goodlow) Hess, the former of whom was born in Canada in 1841, while the latter was born in Rural township, this county, in 1847. William Hess was a cheese-maker and farmer, who, after coming to Rock Island county in 1869, spent the remainder of his life in rural pursuits. He and his wife had three children: William John, Elizabeth and George. William John Hess was brought up on the homestead and attended the district schools during the intervals of work. Later he took a course at the Davenport Business College for a commercial training. For a short period he was a clerk and then was in a grocery business, but selling out in 1905 he came to his present farm to re-enter an agricultural life, realizing that in it are to be made the most profits on money and time invested.

In 1891 Mr. Hess married Sarah Martin, and they have had children as follows: Annie and William, who are deceased; Ethel; Herman; Albert; Mabel and Helen. In politics Mr. Hess is a republican. He has served for five years as a school director, rendering his district very valuable services in that capacity. The Masons and Odd Fellows hold his membership fraternally, while he is an Episcopalian in religious belief and practice. A live, energetic young man, thoroughly abreast of the times, Mr. Hess is one of the best farmers of his township, and a man universally liked.

HESSMAN, Clyde C., owner of the Hillsdale Farm, a finely developed property on section 36, Drury township, is one of the leading young farmers of his locality. All the buildings on this farm have been erected by him since 1910. He was born near his present farm February 9, 1886, a son of Lewis E. and Sarah (Clarkson) Hessman, natives of Illinois and Pennsylvania respectively. They were parents of ten children. Clyde C. Hessman was educated in the Hazel Dell school, some of his teachers having been: Mame Yates, Rosie Spyker, Blanch Emery, Mattie Lutz, Bessie Lutz and Hattie Parker, as well as his sister, Ivy G. Hessman. He left school at the age of seventeen years and worked on the home farm for his father, until he rented the Cutter's farm, operating it for three years, when he bought his present place, locating on it in March, 1911.

Clyde C. Hessman was married September 22, 1909, to Miss Clara Eckhart, daughter of Caspar and Sarah (Fuhr) Eckhart. They have had two children: Louis H., born April 15, 1911, died in infancy, and Max W., born March 23, 1912. His standing in the community is excellent and he is popular with his many friends. A staunch republican, he served as tax collector during 1910 and 1911. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and he and his wife belong to the Order of Eastern Star. An able and energetic farmer, he has achieved excellent results from his operations, and is a representative of the best interests of his community.

HESSMAN, Elmo Floyd, owner of the Evergreen Farm, comprising 170 acres of fertile Rock Island county land, devoted to general farming, is one of the leading agriculturists of Drury township. He was born in this township August 16, 1875, a son of Louis E. and Sarah (Clarkson)

Hessman, people well known in this locality, whose history is given more at length elsewhere in this work. They were earnest, hard-working people, who brought up their sons well, teaching them industrious, thrifty habits, and the result of this early training is shown in the after lives of these young men.

Elmo Floyd Hessman was born on the farm his father still occupies, and while helping to operate it, attended the district schools. Until he was twenty-one years old, he continued with his father, and then for the following three years, was a clerk in a general store in Buffalo Prairie township. However, his inclinations were towards an agricultural life and so he rented a farm, operating it for three years prior to buying, in 1906, his present property. It is a well-developed farm, and his improvements are excellent and kept in fine condition. It is such men as Mr. Hessman who keep up the standard of agriculture in this county.

In 1903, Mr. Hessman married Harriet May Miller, born in Muscatine, Ia., where she taught school until her marriage. She is a lady of unusual educational training and is prominent in the Presbyterian church. Two children have been born of this marriage: Margaret Marie and Mildred Catherine, twins. Mr. Hessman is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. A republican, he was elected road overseer in Buffalo Prairie township for three years, and as school director in Drury township for two years. An earnest, industrious man, he has advanced rapidly, and is highly regarded in his community.

HESSMAN, Louis Christian, owner of eighty acres of excellent farming land in Drury township, belongs to the well-known Hessman family of Rock Island county, a complete history of which will be found upon another page of this volume. Mr. Hessman was born September 25, 1879, in Drury township, a son of Louis E. and Sarah (Clarkson) Hessman, and owes to these excellent parents much for his careful early training, which taught him the value of work and thriftiness.

The boyhood of Mr. Hessman was spent as that of any ordinary farmer's son, working on the homestead in the summer and attending district school in the winter, and he remained at home until attaining his majority. For the next two years he worked for neighboring farmers, and then rented property, which he operated for a year. He then was able to purchase his present farm, and moving upon it began at once to make improvements. He erected a nice residence and necessary sheds, and put the entire place in order, so that it now reflects his capability and prosperity. Owing to the fact that the farm contains many noble maple trees, it is called Maple Grove farm. Mr. Hessman intends to make this his permanent home, not having bought it for an investment, but as a place of residence, so that he is interested in all local matters, and has served as road commissioner and is now school director, being elected to both offices on the republican ticket. He belongs to both the Masonic and Modern Woodmen of America lodges at Buffalo Prairie, and has held several offices in the latter fraternity.

On the thirtieth of January, 1901, in Buffalo township, occurred the marriage of Mr. Hessman to Bessie Gorton Kistler, born October 4, 1883, in Drury township, and they have an eight-year-old daughter, Grace Margaret, born September 28, 1905. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hessman are deservedly popular in their neighborhood and have many friends all over the county.

HILBERG, Henry.—The demand for a wholesome food supply is constantly increasing, while recent national and state pure food laws have resulted in the placing upon the market of a class of goods of vastly better quality than ever before given to the public. For these and other equally cogent reasons the business of catering to this demand in any way is proving very profitable, provided the best quality of goods is placed on sale. One of the men who enjoys a well-earned reputation for his skill as a baker is Henry Hilberg of East Moline. He was born in Hessian Nassau, Germany, January 29, 1864, being a son of Laws and Agnes (Haltz) Hilberg, natives of Germany and France, respectively. The father was a stock buyer who died in Germany. Eight children were born to him and his wife, as follows: John, Joseph, Drena, George, Mary, Elizabeth, Henry and Lena, all of whom reside in Germany except Henry. Henry Hilberg came to America in 1884, landing at New York city. For six months he remained in that city, and then went to Independence, Ia., where he lived fourteen years. Following this he was employed for thirteen years as baker at the Watertown Sanitarium, and then on September 20, 1911, established himself at East Moline, where he has a very attractive shop, and is prepared to furnish his customers with the best of bakery goods.

In 1890, Henry Hilberg married Edna Bittner, born in Independence, Ia., a daughter of John and Ina (Wechter) Bittner, both of whom were well known residents of Buchanan county, Ia. Three children came to Mr. and Mrs. Hilberg: Wilmer, born in 1891; Ralph, born in 1893, and Lucile, born in 1900. In religious faith, Mr. Hilberg is a Presbyterian. Politically he is a republican. He served for six months in the German army, and all of his brothers gave their country military service. Like so many of the enterprising young men of East Moline, he is a member of the Commercial Club, and is enthusiastic relative to furthering the city's growth and development.

HILDEBRANDT, August.—Gardening as a profitable business venture has commanded the attention and energies of some of the most thrifty of Rock Island's men, who, engaging in it, have reaped substantial rewards. One of these is found in August Hildebrandt. He was born in Brandenburg, Germany, August 29, 1869, being a son of Christ and Sophia (Biemner) Hildebrandt, who came to America in 1872, landing in New York city, from whence they came west to Minnesota. The father died in that state, in 1877, but his mother survived until 1902. The father was a first class stone mason, having learned his trade in Germany, and he carried it on in conjunction with farming. The following children were born to him and his wife: Ferdinand, who lives at Rock Island; Charles, who lives at Wichita, Kans., and is a miller; Christ, who is employed by the City Railway Co. of Rock Island; Fritz, who is a farmer of South Haven, Minn.; Anna, who married August Miller, a butcher of Zumbrota, Minn.; and August.

August Hildebrandt was educated in the German schools in Minnesota, and then learned the carpenter trade. He has built several houses, and now owns two houses put up by him. In 1891, Mr. Hildebrandt came to Rock Island, and followed his trade for a time, then worked for the Rock Island & Peoria Railroad for twelve years. Following this, he farmed for four years, then spent two years in Wichita, Kans., and on coming back to Rock Island, he entered the employ of the Rock Island Railroad, being in the passenger depot for two years more. In 1900, he settled on a truck farm in South Rock Island where he carried on general gardening for three years, moving to a farm in Milan in the autumn of 1912.

Mr. Hildebrandt was married at Fort Madison, Ia., in 1891, to Miss Rekey Fues of that place, daughter of Henry and Minna (Osterhoge) Fues, natives of Germany. The father died May 23, 1911, but the mother survives, being now seventy-three years old. Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrandt have had four children: Sophia, Ella and Freda, all of whom are deceased; and Dorothy, who was born September 18, 1897. Mr. Hildebrandt is a reliable man whose aim through life has been to do his duty, and establish himself solidly, and his expectations have been carried out in a most gratifying manner.

HILLIER, Henry.—Farming pays well in Rock Island county for the conditions here are peculiarly fitted for agriculture, and the farmers themselves know how to take advantage of offered opportunities. The soil is fertile, transportation facilities excellent, and the region is so generously watered, that there is no difficulty regarding drought. All these facts have induced some of the most substantial farmers of this and other countries to locate here. Among those who have made a success of their work is Henry Miller of Coal Valley township. He was born in Nova Scotia, December 13, 1849, being a son of George and Flora (McDonald) Hillier, the former born in England, January 20, 1822, and the latter in Scotland, June 20, 1824. She died August 25, 1910, at Coal Valley, the father having passed away in the same place, May 6, 1904, and both are buried in Chippeannock cemetery. In 1860, the parents came to Coal Valley township, where the father began farming and mining, thus continuing for many years. He was a Knight Templar Mason, and was supervisor and road commissioner of his township.

Henry Hillier attended school in Coal Valley, and his business began and ended in farming, he now being retired. He owns 90 acres of splendid farm land along the Rock river, where he resides. Mr. Hillier owns 64 acres of coal rights in Henry county, and his sisters, Mrs. P. F. Cardf and Miss Tillie Hillier, partly own a business block on the corner of Seventeenth street and Third avenues, Rock Island, in which the heirs of another sister, Sarah (Mrs. Josiah Scott) are also interested. Miss Lillie Hillier is a member of the Eastern Star. Politically, he is a democrat, but he has never cared for public life. The Baptist church holds his membership. Fraternally, he is a Mason and a member of the Eastern Star, both of Coal Valley, and has held many chairs. Mr. Hillier has never married. He welcomes his friends at his pleasant home, and entertains delightfully, the best of his bountiful larder being placed before his guests. While never caring to go before the public for office, Mr. Hillier is well known throughout the county, and is extremely popular with all classes.

HINK, Charles W.—The realty interests of any community form a very important part of its commercial history, for upon the expansion of property values and their proper handling depends much of the city's progress. One of the men who is associated with the real estate transactions of East Moline is Charles W. Hink, born at Moline, Ill., February 24, 1870, a son of P. Henry and Dorothea (Reimers) Hink, both natives of Germany. P. Henry Hink was born in 1832, but came to America, having perfected himself in cabinetmaking and architectural drafting. Locating at Davenport, Iowa, he began working under General Rodman on Government Island, remaining with him until about 1870. In 1868 he invented a laundry mangle, which has been in general use since that time. That same year he married Dorothea Reimers, who came to this country to join him. They began housekeeping at Moline and made that city their home until 1871, when they moved to Davenport, where he began working as a cabinetmaker and architectural draftsman, establishing a reputation as an expert in both lines. He was an inventive genius, placing upon the market a number of useful inventions, in addition to his mangle, which are still handled. The death of this brilliant man occurred February, 1875, when he was accidentally killed. A college graduate, he was a man of broad knowledge and wide information. His widow was left with one child, Charles W.

Mrs. Hink was born September 15, 1838. Her father was a member of the Royal Guard, and one of her uncles was a bishop of the Lutheran church. After completing her education, Mrs. Hink lived with another uncle, an importer and wholesale merchant, assisting him in business, developing considerable commercial ability. When she was left a widow, she turned this experience to account, opening a grocery store at Eighth street and Eighteenth avenue, at Moline, which she conducted until the fall of 1892, when she sold to Jacob Abraham. In 1877 Mrs. Hink married (second) Hans Friedrichsen, born in Germany in 1836, who came to America in 1855, locating at Moline. By trade he was a carpenter. Mr. Friedrichsen died March 28, 1912, but his widow is still residing at Moline. They had one child, Mrs. Emma Farslund, of Moline. Mrs. Friedrichsen is a member of the Lutheran church.

Charles W. Hink was educated at Moline, but left the grammar school to work for John Deere Plow Works, although he studied at the night school and took a commercial course in a business college. Later on he became a graduate of the International Correspondence school in mechanical drawing. At the beginning of his business career he was a plow worker's helper, in the winters and in the summers he worked with his step-father as a carpenter.

When sixteen years old he began working on a farm and as he understood the use of carpenter tools, did considerable building. At the age of nineteen years he went to the woods, hewed out timbers and built a barn 22x120 feet all by himself. So expert did he become that by the time he attained his majority he was foreman of a carpenter gang of eight men engaged in building houses. From 1892 to 1895 he was engaged in contracting and building, but in 1895 he began studying to be a patternmaker, during the winters, for he has always been ambitious. From 1902 to 1907 he was foreman for a large construction contractor, and during that time had charge of the erection of a number of important buildings at Moline. Later, he took charge of the construction of some large buildings for a railroad company in the south. During 1911 Mr. Hink put up more buildings in East Moline than any other contractor, keeping 127 carpenters, 14 plasterers and other craftsmen constantly busy. His contracts show that he built 140 structures, including those of brick, cement, stucco and frame. In 1912 he did $160,000 worth of work. Efficiency and energy have contributed towards his success. About 1910 he began handling real estate buying and selling, and has developed this branch of his business to large proportions.

On April 6, 1892, he was married to Carrie A. Mau, a school teacher born in Oak Park, Ill., in 1868, a daughter of John H. Mau, a native of Germany. The family moved to Andrew, Iowa, in the early seventies, where the parents still reside. Mr. and Mrs. Hink have five children: Edith C., born August 26, 1893, is a pianist and music teacher; Arthur C., born February 7, 1896; Roy H., born in 1898; Grace D., born February 22, 1900; and George H., born in October, 1906, all of whom are at home. When he married Mr. Hink located at Moline, but in April, 1911, he moved to East Moline, where he resides at present. Fraternally Mr. Hink belongs to the Masons, and Modern Woodmen of America. His social connections are with the Moline Business Men's Club and the East Moline Commercial Club. His religious convictions make him a Protestant. Mr. Hink feels that he owes much to his mother, who not only was a remarkable woman for her business ability, but has always been admired and beloved for her tender sympathy that takes her to the bedside of the sick and to the help of the afflicted.

HODGES, James F.—The British Empire extends its domain over the entire world, for where the government itself does not rule, its representatives are to be found, and almost without fail, they are among the solid men of the communities in which they have settled. One of the best representatives of this great power in Rock Island county, is James F. Hodges, now living retired after a useful life as a merchant and saw-mill operator. He was born in Bristol, England, February 14, 1831, a son of James and Sarah (Phillips) Hodges, natives of England, where the father was born in 1779. He was chief engineer of the Bristol Steam Navigation Company of England, and put the first machinery in the Great Western steamer, a wooden ship, the first run by steam to dock at New York, in 1838. It made four trips a year. He also put in the first boilers in the first iron screw propeller, Great Britain.

James F. Hodges learned the dry goods business and followed it until he came to America in 1856, locating at Dubuque, Iowa, where he remained until the outbreak of the Civil war, at which time he went to Independence, Iowa, and there embarked in the mercantile business, conducting it for fifteen years. While at Independence he served for seven years as selectman or township trustee, one duty being to provide for wives, widows and children of soldiers. He was a delegate, and voted for Wm. B. Allison at the time he was first nominated for Congress, and he was also one of twelve delegates who was instrumental in building the Carnegie bridge at Dubuque. In spite of losing his stock upon several occasions by fire, he bravely resumed business, and in 1877, Mr. Hodges came to Rock Island to engage with the firm of Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann in the lumber business, and for many years operated the lath and shingle department and was employed by this firm for over thirty years, or until the business was closed down.

Mr. Hodges was married in Bristol, England, December 3, 1852 to Harriet Morgan, born in England. His second wife was Deborah Hyatt, born in New York. Members of the Hyatt family came to Iowa at an early day, and their descendants are to be found throughout the state. Mr. Hodges has the following children: Harvey J., who is of Chicago; J. F., who is of Rock Island; Clara, who is the wife of David Flatau of Chicago; William M., who is of Marshalltown; Bertha M., who is deceased, and Charles C., who is of Freeport, Ill. There are eleven grandchildren in the family and six great-grandchildren.

Mr. Hodges is a republican, and has been very active politically, serving as delegate to numerous conventions both of county and state. He was on the board of elections of Rock Island for fifteen years and has served on the federal grand jury and the petit jury. The Episcopal church holds his membership, and he has been a delegate upon six occasions to church conventions. Upright, honorable and conscientious, Mr. Hodges has been a good citizen, and is now reaping the reward of his years of industry, and wise provision for old age.

HOFSTETTER, Fred William.—The Rock Island county farmer has learned many things through government experiments, and his own operations, so that he stands in the front rank of the farmers of Illinois. In this locality he has every natural advantage, as well as those accruing from unsurpassed transportation facilities, and he has not been slow to recognize this fact. One of the most progressive of these men is Fred William Hofstetter, owner of 80 acres of section 30, Andalusia township. He was born in Hampton township, May 9, 1857, a son of Adam and Selma (Winstine) Hofstetter, both natives of Germany. They were married in Germany, but soon thereafter left for the United States, landing in New Orleans, from whence they made their way north, finally arriving in Hampton township, and here the father bought 80 acres. He was among the early settlers of the township, and passed through many of the experiences incident to the times and locality. After a hard and useful life, the father died in 1872, and his wife in 1874, both firm in the faith of the Lutheran church of which they were consistent members. Their children were: Adam, who is of Hampton township; Christine, Mrs. Christ Wildermuth, who is of Geneseo, Ill.; George, who while serving in an Illinois' regiment during the Civil war, was taken sick and although sent home, died; Catherine, Mrs. August Kleberg, who is deceased; Margaret, Mrs. Michael Miller, who died in Nebraska; Mary, Mrs. John Shave, who is of Watertown, Ill., and Fred William.

The latter attended the public schools in Hampton, and worked on the farm for his father until the latter's retirement, when he worked for neighboring farmers, at saw-milling, mining and various other occupations.

About 1878, Mr. Hofstetter was married in Hampton to Ruth Richardson, daughter of William and Susan (Davis) Richardson. After marriage, Mr. Hofstetter began farming his brother Adam's property in Hampton township, thus continuing until he bought his present home in 1905. Mr. and Mrs. Hofstetter have had the following children: Clara, who is Mrs. August Guildpheney; Amelia, who is Mrs. Clarence Leslie of Port Byron; Maggie, who is Mrs. Chas. Smith; Orville of Barstow, who married Ella Adams; Alfred, who is of East Moline, married

Nettie Coates; Selma, who is Mrs. Edward Bloomer of Missouri; John, who is at home, married Edith Glaser; Roy, Charles and Pearl, who are all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Hofstetter are consistent members of the Lutheran church at Barstow. Mr. Hofstetter votes independent of any party ties. He is one of the sound, reliable, industrious men of this locality, whose good judgment is relied upon in matters concerning agricultural development.

HOLLINGSWORTH, Maurice Alden, D. V. S.—No extended mention is necessary to introduce the name of Dr. Maurice Alden Hollingsworth, for his work in his chosen line of veterinary surgery is so well known to the people of Rock Island, Ill., and the surrounding country that anything of an extended nature would be superfluous, but it might be well to state that no man in this field of operation has gained a greater reputation than the subject with whom this sketch deals. Dr. Hollingsworth is a native of Cincinnati, O., where he was born December 10, 1872, a son of Abraham and Celeste (Mote) Hollingsworth, and a descendant of old English Quaker stock.

Dr. Hollingsworth received a public school education in Ohio, and after graduating with the high school class of 1890, entered the Ontario veterinary college, of Toronto, Canada, from which he was graduated in 1895. During the fall of that year he located at Moline, Ill., and from that time to the present date he has been successfully engaged in the practice of his profession. His offices, at No. 2215 Fifth avenue, in the latter city, are equipped with the latest appliances, and he is a close student, keeping abreast of the time and using the most modern methods in his treatment of the animals brought under his care. He is a member of the Illinois State Veterinary Society and the Modern Woodmen of America, while he is a republican in political matters and liberal in his religious views.

Dr. Hollingsworth was married at Rock Island, Ill., September 4, 1905, to Isabelle J. McConchie and they have had three children, of whom two are now living, namely: John and Elbert.

HOLLISTER, George Henry.—It is remarkable how many of the present farmers of Rock Island county have spent their lives in agricultural pursuits, and yet there is a reason back of it, for conditions here are so favorable for farming that profits are large and intelligent effort abundantly rewarded. One of the prosperous farmers of Coe township who has proven that he understands his work and that his choice of calling was sensible, is George Henry Hollister. He was born in Coe township December 25, 1871, a son of Ruben and Uphemia (Trent) Hollister. Educated in the district schools of his township, he grew up amid rural surroundings and developed into an excellent farmer. On January 24, 1892, George Henry Hollister was united in marriage with Kate Sodorus, daughter of Henry and Emma (Flickinger) Sodorus. Five children have been born to them: Alva, Bernice, Edith, Clara, Forest and Helen, all students at school except the youngest, who will begin attending when old enough. Mr. Hollister belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, and takes pleasure in his fraternal associations. The present desirable conditions in Rock Island county have not been attained without considerable effort and the display of determination on the part of its people. Hard work, intelligent direction, and public-spirited officials have brought about many needed changes, and placed this section among the leaders in Illinois, now recognized as one of the most representative of the agricultural states of the Union.

HOLMBERG, Nels, general contractor and builder of No. 1629 Twelfth street, Moline, is one of the older men in his line of work. During the quarter of a century he has taken and executed contracts, he has maintained the same honest methods for which he is noted today. He was born in Sweden in 1863, a son of Nels and Johanna Holmberg. The father was a carpenter and worked in his native land, dying there in 1900, his widow surviving him until 1907, when she, too, passed away, in Sweden. They had five children: Mary, who is of Sweden; Annie, who is of South Dakota; Nels; Alma, who is living with her brother Nels; Emma, who is also in Sweden.

Nels Holmberg attended the excellent schools of his native land, and is indebted to it for his thorough knowledge of his trade. In 1881 he came to America, locating immediately at Moline, where he worked for two years for others, before he began contracting for himself, and is now one of the oldest contractors in the city, many of the substantial buildings here having been constructed by him. Mr. Holmberg owns two comfortable residences in Moline. He has never married. Fraternally he belongs to the Odd Fellows (Swedish), and politically has always been a republican. Having come to Moline in its earlier days, he has had the satisfaction of seeing it grow, and assisting in this substantial expansion. At one time he handled more contracts than any other contractor, but does not now care to undertake too much. Having lived here so long he naturally takes an interest in civic matters, but has never desired public notice, his work filling up his time and taking his attention.

HOLT, John M.—The history of the Holt family in this country, would make a book as large as the history of Rock Island county, and then he not more than half written, for there are today about 15,000 of them, while if we cross the big pond and include the family there, several thousand more must be added, for the Holts started in England, and branches of the family are in every civilized country on earth. It appears from the records that in this country, the immigrant ancestor was Nicholas Holt of Romsey, England, a tanner, who arrived at Boston, Mass., on June 3, 1630, with his wife Elizabeth, and settled in Newbury, and Andover,

John Liveland Wife

Mass. From this couple, and the two other wives of Nicholas Holt, Hannah Bradstreet and Martha Preston, started the large family of Holts in America. The unbroken record shows that there has not been a war in this country since the family settled here, but what some of its members were represented in it on the side of liberty. It can be truly said that all the LORDS were left on the other side, the NOBLES coming to America to help build up the greatest nation of the earth. The Holts have always been patriotic, and consequently very military, and John M. Holt has sustained the family reputation in that respect. John Millington Holt, a guard at the Rock Island Arsenal, a resident of No. 1614 Fifth avenue, Moline, has done more than any other man to make this history of Rock Island county a success, and contributed much extremely valuable data, especially regarding the military records of the county's distinguished veterans.

Mr. Holt was born at Colden, Erie county, N. Y., February 21, 1844, son of Arnold and Hannah (Millington) Holt, the former born at Sharon, Vt., July 5, 1794, and the latter at South Shaftsbury, Vt., about 1820. The father was a tanner, currier and shoemaker. His first wife, Rney Austin, died October 2, 1841, having been the mother of a large family, among them being the Rev. Edmund D. Holt, the first Presbyterian minister in Rock Island, coming here about 1848 or 1849; and Cornelia J., wife of the Rev. Thomas Condon, of Oregon, the founder and one of the professors of the state university and state geologist until 1905. The mother of Mr. Holt, was the mother of four children, of whom John M. was the eldest, the others being: two sisters and a brother, still living. Mrs. Holt died at Rodgers, Ark., in 1906, aged eighty-six years. The father died at Moline September 5, 1864. He moved from Vermont to New York state in 1833, establishing a large tannery at Colden, but his health failing, he sold, and moved to Buffalo, then to Moline, in 1855. He was both a first lieutenant and captain of a rifle company at Bennington, Vt., when the Green Mountain boys were needed, and it is claimed that he took part in the War of 1812, although he was then quite young to have been an officer. He was a republican, a Mason, a Presbyterian and respected wherever he lived.

The grandfather of John M. Holt, Abiel Holt, was a native of Willington, Conn., where he died June 6, 1829. Grandmother Holt, whose maiden name was Mary Mosher, of Sharon, Vt., died at Fairfax, Vt., September 6, 1827. Grandfather Millington, born in Vermont, died in that same state. Grandmother Millington died in Iowa, aged ninety-two years.

John M. Holt was educated in the public schools of Buffalo, N. Y., and Moline, Ill., attending school during the winter months until fourteen years old. At that age, he went to work at the printer's trade, and followed it until the last of November, 1861, when, obtaining permission from his parents, he enlisted. He has lived in Moline ever since the war, and in 1865, embarked in a grocery business, continuing in it mostly until 1890, when he was commissioned postmaster of the city, holding that office until July 4, 1894. He was assistant postmaster under President McKinley three years, but on account of ill health, accepted the position of guard at the Moline bridge leading to the Arsenal, which he still holds.

Mr. Holt's military record is very interesting, beginning with his enlistment on December 1, 1861, in Company H, Eighth Kansas Infantry, Rock Island, Mercer and Henry counties of Illinois, raised two companies for the Eighth Kansas, under Colonel Robert H. Graham, of Moline, who as captain had raised a company of cavalry called the Independent Rangers, which had been captured with Colonel Mulligan's Brigade at Lexington, Mo. The men of the two companies for the Eighth Kansas, left Moline December 3, 1861, going to Fort Leavenworth, Kans., being equipped, and then were sent into Leavenworth city and did provost guard duty. They were then sent to Fort Riley, Kans., where they stayed a month, when they were called back to Leavenworth, and with the balance of the troops, comprising Gen. Robert B. Mitchell's brigade, were started down the river, and finally landed at Columbus, Ky. Mr. Holt says: "From there we marched through to Corinth, Miss., and then to Eastport, Miss., crossed the Tennessee river and started after General Bragg's army on their invasion of Kentucky, arriving at Louisville, Ky., but a few hours before the Confederates got there, and took part in driving them back, and fighting the battles of Perryville and Lancaster, Ky. Then to Crab Orchard and as the Confederates crossed the Cumberland river, we started for Nashville, Tenn., and headed them off again, and finally, just before the battle of Murfreesboro, or Stone River, commenced, we were sent into the city of Nashville, December 20, 1862, to do provost guard duty, taking the place of two Tennessee regiments, with only five of our companies (the other five companies still being on the frontier in Kansas, and only joining us in February and March, 1863). Here we were on duty night and day for five months receiving and forwarding prisoners to the North, and hunting out spies and cleaning the city of murderers and thieves that always follow an army. On June 6, 1863, we left Nashville, going to our brigade, near Murfreesboro, Tenn., and were once more a part of Hegg's Brigade, Jeff C. Davis' Division of McCook's Corps, and on June 24th we started on the Tullahoma campaign, which ended in the capture of Tullahoma, Tenn., and the driving of the enemy across the Tennessee River. We crossed over the mountains north of Stevenson, Ala., on the 19th and 20th of August, and stopped at Stevenson until the 28th, and on the 29th the Eighth Kansas and the Fifteenth Wisconsin volunteered to lay the pontoon bridge across the Tennessee river, in face of the enemy. This was the start of the Chickamauga campaign. We did it, and drove the Confederates from the river." Mr. Holt was in the second pontoon boat that touched the shore. He continues: "We kept moving south, crossing Sand mountain and Lookout mountain forty miles below Chattanooga, Tenn., causing General Bragg to vacate that place; then marched night and day to get into the battle of Chickamauga, which lasted three days, and we lost 60 per cent of the regiment." Mr. Holt did not get hit, although he had his gun shot almost out of his hands on the first day of the battle, and came within a few yards of being captured on the second day, but escaped by passing a Confederate battery point blank, while in full action. He was also in the charges on Orchard Knob and Missionary Ridge, where his regiment lost about 18 per cent of the command, following this, went to Knoxville, Tenn., to help General Burnside who was surrounded, and followed the Confederate army through to Bull's Gap. Mr. Holt was in the Atlanta campaign from Kennesaw Mountain to the capture of Atlanta, including the battles of Jonesboro and Lovejoy station. His time expired on the night of November 30, 1864 and he was at the battle of Franklin, Tenn., on that date where he shot his last shot at the enemy in the Civil war, but he stayed with his company until December 5, when Nashville was reached. There he received his discharge. His captain and colonel presented him with his gun with the remark:

"John, take it home and keep it as long as you live, for we think you have earned it." He still has it. He never missed a skirmish or battle of his company, and participated in two heavy skirmishes that the company was not in. During his enlistment, he always was a faithful soldier and has continued the same as a citizen. Mr. Holt arrived home on the 7th day of December 1864, having taken the last train out of the city of Nashville, that got through to Louisville, until after the battle of Nashville. The train right behind the one taken by Holt was captured by the enemy, and thus he was nearly captured again. Staying at home one month, he again went back to the army as a sutler's clerk in the Eightieth Illinois Infantry, and stayed with them until the war was over. Again he went way up into East Tennessee as far as Greenville, and had the pleasure of seeing the house and home of Andrew Johnson, who accidentally became president of the United States. It was there he received the news of the assassination, and death of President Lincoln and that Johnson was president in Lincoln's place, even as he was looking at the sign on the house saying "A. Johnson, Tailor." It was here that Mr. Holt came near being captured the third time, while out with a squad foraging for corn. The foragers had all the wagons loaded but two, and they partially when they got the tip from a young lady that was making signs to a party of bushwhackers, on the side of the mountain, and Mr. Holt immediately got the teams on the back track, and succeeded in getting them away before the enemy could cut off the last two with himself and a few of the guard who had stayed behind with them. This was the last of the war for Holt for they started back for Nashville, Tenn., in a few days, and were sent home to Springfield, Ill., and mustered out. Holt arriving at home in June, 1865.

Mr. Holt has been a republican ever since the party was started. He was in the first company of Wide Awakes formed in Rock Island county and has been in marching clubs during every campaign, except in 1864, when he was carrying a gun at Nashville, Tenn. During 1869, he was constable and collector of taxes for Moline.

On July 12, 1866, Mr. Holt was married (first) to Maria W. Hitchcock, daughter of the Rev. Allen B. and Frances E. (Hotchkiss) Hitchcock, he being pastor of the First Congregational Church of Moline and both natives of New Haven, Conn. Mrs. Holt was born in Davenport, September 27, 1844, and died August 1, 1908. The marriage was performed by the bride's father. Mr. Hitchcock was a promoter of the "underground railroad," and was a very close friend of Owen Lovejoy, an uncompromising temperance man, and a republican. As a proof of his influence, when he died all the saloons of Moline were closed during his funeral to show the universal respect in which he was held.

Mr. and Mrs. Holt had children as follows: Mabel Dutton, who died aged thirty-two years; George Edmund, who served as vice-consul-general at Tangier, Morocco, Africa, acting consul-general for nearly two years, married Jennie Cox of this city and they have had two children, a son dying in infancy, and Fay Irene living; and Niel Allen, who is a clerk in the office of Deere & Co., married Bessie Hillier of Rock Island county, and they have two daughters, Wilma and Mildred. He belongs to the Sons of Veterans Camp of Moline, the Royal Arcanum and is a republican. Mr. Holt married (second) Mrs. Georgiana Bixby, on July 20, 1910. She is a daughter of Mrs. Agnes McAuley, at one time a matron of the hospital at the United States Arsenal on Rock Island and widow of Henry V. Bixby, being born in New York City, July 20, 1853. Mrs. Holt had three children by her first marriage: one who died in infancy; Agnes, who is now Mrs. J. W. Cook of Chicago; and Anna, who is now Mrs. Burt G. Butler of Kansas City. The family residence is at No. 1614 Fifth avenue, Moline.

Mr. Holt belongs to R. H. Graham Post, G. A. R.; Doric Lodge No. 319 A. F. & A. M.; the Modern Woodmen of America, and other fraternal organizations. The First Congregational Church holds his membership. His father was a deacon in this society; his father-in-law, its first pastor, and all of the family belonged to it. The present Mrs. Holt is a Presbyterian. One of Mr. Holt's half-brothers, Dorman A. Holt was a member of Company F, Twenty-first New York Volunteer Infantry. He was the husband of Marguerite S. Holt whose biography is found elsewhere in this work. The Rev. Edmund D. Holt, another half-brother, was a member of the Christian Commission, and the Sanitary Commission during the Civil war, and was at Louisville, Ky., at the time of the Chickamauga campaign to help with the wounded who were being sent North. Two cousins, named Holt, died in Andersonville, and a large number of the family served from various parts of the country, all on the side of the Union.

In 1877, Mr. Holt helped to get up a company of soldiers for the Illinois National Guard in this city. It was a very fine command and was called Company D. Fourteenth Battalion, serving for five years under that name, when it was changed to Company F, of the Sixth regiment, Illinois N. G. with William Clendenin as colonel. In the formation, Mr. Holt was appointed quartermaster of the regiment, and held that position for sixteen years. This company still continues, and has a fine record, having participated in every strike of any size in the state. At the time that the Spanish-American war broke out, Mr. Holt took occasion while at Springfield, Ill., to have his name put on the retired list as he was at that time in the government employ as assistant postmaster of Moline, and had a sick family at home. He is still on the retired list, with rank of captain. During the first five years, he was a sergeant at his own request, and let all the promotions pass him because he did not have time to drill the men. He was in this command in nearly all the strikes and troubles in the life of the company and regiment, but could not go with them to Porto Rico for above reasons.

HOLT, Margaret Stouffer (Hartzell), one of the most representative women of Rock Island county, whose recollections of pioneer conditions are very valuable, extending as they do over a remarkable period in history both of state and nation, was born in Stephenson, now Rock Island, May 22, 1837, a daughter of Michael Bash and Nancy (Wouman) Hartzell. Mr. Hartzell was born August 19, 1804, and his wife October 5, 1810, both at Blairsville, Pa. He was a cabinetmaker and contractor who came to Stephenson, in 1835, and in 1842 located at Moline. At that time there were many Indians here and some used to come to the house of Mr. Hartzell, trying to trade their ponies and blankets for his squaw (wife). Understanding them, Mr. Hartzell did not resent this, but would only shake his head. Then the Indians would keep on raising their bid for her with more ponies and blankets, not being at all discouraged with the continued refusal. The Hartzell family passed through the Black Hawk war, and suffered with the other settlers. Mr. Hartzell died August 19, 1893, aged eighty-nine years, his widow surviving him until October 12, 1909, when she passed away, aged ninety-three years. Both were leading members of the Methodist church of Moline and the parents of a large family, among whom were Mrs. Holt; Rev. Joseph C. Hartzell, bishop of Africa; and Mrs. Aseneth Hartzell Wallace of Kansas City, Mo., at present national organizer and lecturer of the W. C. T. U. Bishop Hartzell was in college when the Civil war broke out, and joined a company at Evanston, Ill., but when it was not accepted he concluded, as he afterwards expressed it: "God called me to stay in school and get ready for the battle of ideas that was to follow the clash of arms and I obeyed that as a divine direction, and acted accordingly." Time has fully proven that he acted right, as his work in the south in revolutionizing the school laws and his work among the freedmen, as well as his labors in Africa and the ministry, have given him a national reputation. He was a member, just previous to the war, of a very large class composed of young men who attended the First Congregational church of Moline for Bible study. The class was taught by R. K. Swan, who was one of the organizers of the Moline Plow Company. Every member of this class enlisted for service during the war, except one, who could not do so on account of his youth.

Mrs. Holt has the distinction of being the first white child born in what is now Rock Island. She grew up in Rock Island county, and when eighteen years old was married, March 13, 1855, to Thomas Jackson of Buffalo, N. Y., who died in 1863. Three children were born of this marriage: Charles W., now of Kansas City, Mo.; Julia Ella Hyde, now deceased; and Adaline Luella Bergston of Moline. For six years following Mr. Jackson's death Mrs. Jackson taught school at Moline, and was a teacher held in high esteem both as a woman and an instructor. On June 30, 1867, Mrs. Jackson married Dorman A. Holt, of Moline. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Holt: Fred Dorman Holt, now employed as receiving clerk at Deere & Company's office at Moline; and Gertrude Estelle Lawrence, now of Oklahoma City, Okla. Mr. Holt had also been married before to a lady of Buffalo, N. Y., and had a daughter, Mrs. Rose S. Pierce, who was reared by her step-mother as though she were her own. This lady later resided at Fairlee, Vt., but is now deceased.

Dorman A. Holt was a member of Company F, Twenty-first New York Volunteer Infantry, and served in the Army of the Potomac. He was in all the battles of that regiment during the first year and eleven months of his service, following which he was discharged on account of disability from injuries received at Fort Runyon, Va., while assisting to dismount a heavy siege gun. He had also been hit in the breast by a spent ball at Fredericksburg. Mr. Holt was also in both battles of Bull Run. During the battle of Fredericksburg he helped to build the pontoon bridge under heavy fire, and 350 men were killed during that one piece of work. Mr. Holt was so disabled that he had to go home, the date of his discharge being October 10, 1862. His ability being appreciated, however, he was called upon to work in the quartermaster's department at the Rock Island Arsenal, where there were a large number of Confederate prisoners. Acting as issuing clerk until January 28, 1863, he was sent to Camp Douglas, Chicago, to issue rations to the prisoners; then from Chicago he was sent to Nashville, Tenn.; thence to Chattanooga, and up into eastern Tennessee as far as Bull's Gap, and finally back to Nashville, when his services being no longer required with the army he came home in July, 1865, locating at Moline, where he embarked in a grocery business, thus continuing until failing health compelled his partial retirement, he dying in 1899. Mr. Holt was a Mason, a member of the G. A. R. post, and was instrumental in securing the soldiers' lot and monument in Riverside cemetery of this city.

Mrs. Holt belongs to the Ladies' Relief Corps of Moline, the Home and Foreign Missionary Society, Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church, Women's Christian Temperance Union, Equal Suffrage Society, and organizer of the King's Daughters' Here and There Circle in 1898. The Methodist church of Moline holds her membership. Mrs. Holt resides at No. 836 Fifteenth street, Moline. She is one of those broad-gauged women with a proper appreciation of the enlarged responsibilities of her sex, which are breeding added intelligence and working towards many reforms and a betterment of society in general.

HOOVER, Lorenzo D. (deceased), was one of the earliest settlers of Rock Island city and of Rock Island county, and his long life of eighty-four years was one of usefulness and during a portion of it was filled with incident and adventure, for he was a faithful soldier through the great Civil war and afterward led a busy life for many years in the midst of industrial activity. He was born at Petersburg, in Jefferson county, Pa., March 23, 1828, a son of John and Nancy (Collins) Hoover. His father was born in Clearfield county, Pa., in 1789, and his mother in Dublin, Ireland, two years later. They were married in Pennsylvania and from there came to Rock Island on October 15, 1843. In the following year they moved to Mercer county, Ill., and one year later to a farm three miles south of Milan, Ill. There the mother of Mr. Hoover died, September 12, 1848, and the father lived until 1849, when he went to Westchester, Pa. In 1851 he returned to Illinois, but in 1852, once more returned to Pennsylvania and in 1853 died there. They had a family of fourteen children, namely: Joseph, Martin, Collins, Reuben, Jerome, Lorenzo, George, Matthew, Lattimer, Catherine, Priscilla, Ellen, Clarissa and Sylvesa, the last named, a resident of Iowa, being the only survivor.

Lorenzo D. Hoover had but meager educational opportunities for he lived in a section in his boyhood where the securing of school books was almost impossible, but he was ambitious and greedily absorbed all the knowledge that came his way. He was noted for his remarkable physical strength as a young man and this was a great advantage to him as he became a millman as his father had been. He was only ten years old when he began work on a turnpike road in Pennsylvania and later was a teamster, hauling logs and timber, and in 1843 he went to Pittsburgh and worked for a few months there in constructing flatboats, and in the fall of that year went by water to St. Louis, Mo. On August 11, 1862, he enlisted for service in the Civil war, as a private in Company K, One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Illinois Infantry, and served until June 8, 1865, when he was mustered out with the rank of captain. He proved a soldier of more than ordinary ability. He participated in a number of important battles, was with General Sherman in the march to the sea, and at all times proved himself dependable and loyal. On one occasion he was captured and held a prisoner over night, but at Lookout Mountain, Chattanooga, Gettysburg and the Wilderness he passed through all dangers practically unharmed. He was a member of Buford Post, No. 343, G. A. R., Rock Island.

After the close of the war Mr. Hoover came back to Rock Island county. For a number of years, over forty, he was a mill man, and was employed in some of the first mills established in the county and had charge of the first mill erected on the government island and for nearly thirty-nine years had charge of the first mill in Moline. He also took the first boiler which was used in local foundries overland from Carbon Cliff, which was a task that excited the wonder and admiration of all who understood its difficulties. In 1898 he retired from active life. Since 1863 he had been a continuous resident of Rock Island and died at his comfortable residence situated at No. 536 Twenty-sixth street, February 25, 1913. In religious views he was an Adventist and was a great Bible student. Politically he gave his support to the republican party.

On May 21, 1850, Mr. Hoover was married to Miss Harriet E. Thompson, who was the first white female child born in this city. She died January 10, 1912. She was born January 1, 1834, a daughter of James M. and Caroline (Towsley) Thompson, the former of whom was of English descent, born in March, 1812, and the latter born in New York in 1815. She was talented as a vocalist and sang in many western cities in concerts. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, who had come to Rock Island in 1832: Charles; Harriet E.; Mary; Frank; Edward; Martha; Carrie, and Spencer. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover were: Charles, who died on his twenty-first birthday; Emma, who died in infancy; James, who is an engineer on the Missouri Pacific system, lives at Lincoln, Neb.; Stephen, who died April 27, 1910; John, who is deceased; Elmer and Ella, twins, both of whom died in infancy; Mary, who, like her late mother, is talented as a vocalist, is the wife of Edward Cropper, a railroad engineer, and they reside at Chicago; and Clara, who died October 24, 1862.

HOUDER, Jacob Warren, a well known resident of Rock Island, who holds an important position at the offices of the Modern Woodmen of America, was born at Pontiac, Ill., January 7, 1861, a son of Martin and Nancy E. (Freeman) Houser, natives of Dayton, Ohio, where the former was born in January, 1832, and the latter in January, 1835. Martin Houser, who was a farmer by occupation, came to Pontiac, Ill., in 1855. He enlisted for service during the Civil war, as a member of Company C, Thirty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and died in prison at Florence, S. C., November 10, 1864. His wife survived him until 1902 and died at Churubusco, Ind. They had a family of four children: Mary E., who is the wife of Benjamin B. Powell of Chicago; Viola T., who is the wife of Charles J. Potter of Ari, Ind.; Martin L., who resides in Fort Wayne, Ind.; and Jacob Warren. In 1867 Mrs. Houser was again married, becoming the wife of George Humbird of Churubusco, Ind., and to this union there were born three children, of whom one died in infancy, the others being: George W., who resides in Churubusco, Ind., and Jennie, who married Perry Hall. Jacob Warren Houser attended the district schools near Pontiac, the graded school at Churubusco, Ind., and the high school at Fort Wayne, Ind. After teaching school for one year he entered Michigan University at Ann Arbor, and two years later was graduated from the law school with the degree of LL. B. He practiced law at Omaha for ten years with moderate success and then went to Columbus, Neb., where he was associated as private secretary and assistant, with John J. Sullivan, one of the justices of the supreme court of Nebraska, for three and one-half years. In July, 1901, he came to Rock Island and became chief of the correspondence department of the Modern Woodmen of America. In November, 1902, he took charge of the mortuary department, and he has continued to discharge the duties of this position to the present time.

Jacob Warren Houser was married at Clinton, Iowa, May 1, 1909, to Minnie S. McKibben, who was born at Davenport, Iowa, a daughter of George P. and Mary A. Bennett Simpson, natives of Hull and London, England, respectively. Mr. Simpson came to America at the age of twenty-one years, and settled at Davenport, Iowa, where he was employed in various occupations until coming to Rock Island. For twenty-six years he was an employe at the United States arsenal at Rock Island. Mrs. Simpson came to this country when sixteen years of age. Mrs. Houser was the younger of two children, her brother, George B. Simpson, being assistant general freight agent for the Chicago & Alton Railroad at Kansas City, Mo. Mr. Houser became a Blue Lodge Mason in March, 1903; a Royal Arch Mason the same year; a Knight Templar, February 29, 1904, and a Scottish rite Thirty-second degree Mason in Oriental Consistory, in April, 1906. He is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Royal Neighbors of America and a past exalted ruler of the Elks. His political convictions are those of the progressive republican party.

HOWARD, Birl, a lifelong resident of Rock Island county, a veteran of the Civil war, is a man of high character, and honorable, upright principles who is well beloved in his neighborhood, and is now residing on the farm where he was born in Drury township, September 22, 1840. He is a son of Lewis and Christine Ann (Snell) Howard, the former born in Virginia, and the latter in Kentucky. They were married in Ohio, near Wyandotte. About 1834, they came to Illinois, taking up 80 acres of wild land in what is now Drury township, which is included in Mr. Howard's 120-acre farm. The father followed farming, although a miller by trade, after coming to Illinois, dying on his farm, January 5, 1873, aged eighty-four years. His widow survived him until 1881, when she died, aged eighty-nine years. They were consistent members of the Methodist church. The father was a republican. The children of this worthy couple were: Dianah, Mrs. James Ball, who died in Iowa; Harvey, who died in Buffalo Prairie township in 1897; William, who is of Drury township; Birl; Susan, Mrs. Samuel Fox, who is of Taylor Ridge, this county.

Birl Howard first attended a subscription school at Illinois City, taught by John Condon, but later went to a school on the present site of the White Oak school, where his first teacher was a Mr. Israel. Following this he went to a public school, taught by James Beardsley. When he was twenty years old, he left school, and worked with his father at blacksmithing for a while, finishing his trade in the army.

On August 9, 1862, he enlisted in Company I, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Knox and Colonel Beardsley, and was discharged at Pine Bluff, Ark., near the close of the war, having participated in the campaign about Vicksburg, and other important engagements. Coming home after his discharge, he resumed working at blacksmithing, and for forty years he operated a shop on his farm. On his father's death, he succeeded to the homestead, and is proud of his property as he has every reason to be.

On March 1, 1868, he married Emma Dimick, daughter of Corliss and Calista Ann (Butler) Dimick. Mrs. Howard was born in New York City, November 26, 1848, but was taken to Vermont in infancy, and three years later to Waukegon, Ill. From there her parents went to Muscatine, Iowa, where she lost her mother, being then seven years old. Her grandfather, Jacob Butler of Waukegon then took and reared her, until her father married Elizabeth Bishop, when she went back home. Her sister Ella married Andrew Reeves and lives at Fairport, Iowa, while two of her brothers, Edwin and Wallace served in the Thirty-fifth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, enlisting in 1861. Mr. and Mrs. Howard have children as follows: Percival, who died in childhood; John, who is of Drury township, married Rosie Stateman, issue, Mabel and Alta; Harvey, who is of Drury township, married Ella Cunningham, issue, Estella, Edgar (deceased), Chester, Forest, Lettie, Sylvia and Russell;

Laura, who is Mrs. Lee Walker of Drury township, issue, Arthur, Tella, Gertie, Emma and Ethel; Myrtle, who married (first) Lewis Jay Moore, issue, Charles, Jessie, Myrtle, married (second) Alfred Reynolds, issue, Iona; Alva, who is of Drury township, married Mary Hayes, issue, Florence, Omer and Lawrence.

All his life, Mr. Howard has been a republican, and served as road commissioner nine years. He belongs to the W. J. Wylie Post, G. A. R., No. 377. Mrs. Howard belongs to the Methodist church of Illinois City, and she also belongs to the Woman's Relief Corps. Both are most excellent people who have endeared themselves to their associates by many deeds of kindness and charity, and they stand high in public esteem.

HUBBARD, Anson M., one of the remarkable characters of Rock Island county, now residing at Moline, was born October 10, 1818, in Bergen, Genesee county, N. Y., where he resided with his father's family until 1836. In that year he came with the family to Adams county, Ill., and in 1837 settled with a colony from their old home in the place which later became Geneseo, Henry county, Ill. There, March 31, 1843, Mr. Hubbard married Marietta M. Moore of Auburn, N. Y. Mr. Hubbard made his home in Geneseo until 1844, when he came to Moline, and spent ten years at this city, returning then to Geneseo, where for eight years he carried on farming. Once more, in 1862, he came to Moline, locating here permanently. At this time he had three sons, Charles, William and Horace, and one daughter, Mrs. Georgiana M. Fowler, who made her home with her parents for a number of years previous to her mother's death and has since continued living with her father; Charles and Horace are deceased.

The early education of Mr. Hubbard was obtained in the common schools of his native town, but later he attended an academic school where he took a special course in surveying and civil engineering. Although Mr. Hubbard's education was along the line of surveying he never devoted any time to this profession, as the people of his locality desired to have instruction in music and he was induced to take up that employment, which proved to be his life work in which he succeeded so well: even while employed at other lines he continued his musical work. He organized the first brass band in Moline, which played in public for the first time at Rock Island and for the last time at the banquet in celebration of the arrival of the first passenger train on the banks of the Mississippi; so far as Mr. Hubbard knows there was then no brass band nearer than Galena or St. Louis. When the drum corps of Graham Post, G. A. R., was organized, Mr. Hubbard was made leader. Before coming west, Mr. Hubbard was interested in farming with his father, but after several years, turned his attention to music, being at one time a pupil of Lowell Mason, and afterwards taught vocal classes in the counties of Rock Island, Henry and Whiteside very successfully, for a number of years. Later he combined the business of handling musical instruments with his teaching. In 1862, he became proprietor of the Moline House, and some years later of the Central House, where he entertained the traveling public as well as accommodating many private boarders. At different times he filled several offices, being justice of the peace, police magistrate for seven years, being appointed to the latter office by Governor Yates to fill out a four-year term, the incumbent, Mr. Waterman, resigning after serving only one year. Following this, Mr. Hubbard was elected to fill another term of four years. He has been a consistent member of the First Congregational church of Moline, almost from its organization. In the fall of 1844, the same year the church was organized, Mr. Hubbard organized the first choir, which he conducted for twenty-six years. There is now a memorial tablet in the church, placed there in memory of the first choir and organist. The result of Mr. Hubbard's efforts can still be seen in the present choir, which is a continuation of the organization which he brought about nearly seventy years ago. He filled the office of deacon for many years. At present he is deacon emeritus.

In 1908 a friend of Mr. Hubbard went to England, and while visiting different places of interest, went to Bideford. The following extract was published as a result of this trip: "Inhabitants of Bideford, England, and its neighborhood, who have from their earliest days regarded the 'Hubbastone' upon the Appledore road near Northam, as an historical landmark, will doubtless be interested to learn that a veritable descendant of the formidable Danish king is living today in Moline, Ill., U. S. A., Deacon, or 'Father' Hubbard, as he is affectionately termed by his numerous friends. He is deacon emeritus of the First Congregational church of Moline, which he helped to establish and build, and for which he was trustee in 1844. He organized the first choir in the church, and led it himself until 1876. The venerable gentleman has attained the age of ninety years; he stands six feet high, and has retained all faculties unimpaired. He is, in fact a splendid specimen of hale and hearty old age, a sincere, large-minded Christian gentleman of keen intelligence and remarkable vigor. Never allowing his mind to dwell upon the past, he has lived in the present day, thus preserving a freshness and sympathy with the progress of the world in which he has seen so many changes and developments; while enjoying an ever-widening outlook upon 'the scene resplendent in the Heavens' towards which, he journeys day by day in perfect confidence. Deacon Hubbard resides with his widowed daughter in a picturesque vine-clad cottage set in pleasant green lawns. Together they are engaged in the congenial occupation of compiling a history of the early days of pioneer life on the prairies of Illinois, a task for which wide experiences and genius for research possessed by the aged historian, renders him peculiarly competent. The Hubbard homestead which has been for generations in the family, still stands in Connecticut. The forefathers of the present branch came to America in 1633, from Wells and Glastonbury in Somerset. They boast a direct descent from King Hubba, the Dane, and number among their connections in England, Lord Abingdon, late director-general of the Bank of England. The ancestor of the American branch was a certain George Hubbard, who became a leading man among the colonists, and with others of his neighbors bought lands from the Indians in the state of Connecticut, where they founded the town of Glasonbury, presumably to perpetuate the name of their birth-place, in the old country. The descendants of the family have spread far and wide through the length and breadth of the land, famous followers of the redoubtable Norseman; men of mark in their several callings; governors, statesmen, leaders of men, of the type that has helped gain for America the place that she holds in the modern world today. The writer became acquainted with the foregoing facts through being an enthusiastic collector of picture post cards. When visiting Bideford last year, she purchased several of the 'Hubbastone,' one of which she gave to a friend from Moline, U. S. A., who being well known to Deacon Hubbard and cognizant of his history, passed it on to him. He was greatly interested in the little picture, and sent a request for more information about the historic spot. Returning to the west of England in the spring, the writer was enabled to collect and forward many historical facts bearing on Kenilworth Castle and the memorable defeat of the Danes in these parts. Through the kindness of Mr. Puddicombe of this town, she also obtained a large photograph of the celebrated 'Hubbastone' and the inscription which reads thus on the stone tablet: 'Bloody Corner. Stop Stranger, Stop! Near this spot lies buried King Hubba, the Dane, who was slain by Alfred the Great, in a bloody retreat. A. D. DCCCLXXXII.' All was duly dispatched across the Atlantic and was gladly welcomed and accorded an honorable place in the home of the great Dane's venerable descendant."

This article was written by Mrs. A. M. Nadin, well known throughout England as an illustrator for magazines and newspapers, especially for The Graphic of London, and a leading woman's magazine of England. Mrs. Nadin takes much pains to ferret out facts for her articles and illustrations before promulgating them. She called upon Miss Marian Williams of Moline to furnish her with the facts in the narrative properly emanating from the Moline end. Mr. Hubbard retired from active business some years since, but is still, at the advanced age of ninety-four years, full of interest in the church, the progress of the times and everything pertaining to the best interests of his home city; always exerting his personal influence for the right in every good cause.

HUBBARD, Rufus (deceased).—The late Rufus Hubbard, father of the venerable A. M. Hubbard, of Moline, was born in Glastonbury, Conn., on June 19, 1789, on the old homestead that has been in the family for generations. In 1810, he married Laura Squires of New Britain, Conn., removing thereafter to Rome, N. Y., where they resided for two years. During that time, following the burning of Buffalo by the British, he was drafted for service in the War of 1812, but circumstances in his family preventing his going himself, he provided a substitute. Soon after this, he removed to Bergen, Genesee county, N. Y., where he established a tannery and also operated a fine farm, there remaining for many years, being a useful citizen. Here he made a pleasant home for his wife and family of six children, four sons and two daughters, and he was identified with all the best interests of his home town. He was on the board of supervisors, representing the town; was justice of the peace for many years, and active in the securing of good educational advantages for the young. As the years went on and his sons matured, he became interested in the then far west, and decided to remove to Illinois. A start was made on June 7, 1836, in a covered wagon, the entire family, with the exception of one son, being the party. Hope was entertained by all that the change might prove beneficial to the good wife's health. The country was then without the railroads that connect various portions so closely now, and conditions were found to be primitive as they neared their new home. The usual incidents of such a trip occurred on the way, but after tarrying a short time in Adams county, they settled in Geneseo, Ill., with a colony from their old home. On February 27, 1837, while living at Mendon, then Fairfield, Adams county, Mrs. Hubbard died, and before leaving Adams county, Rufus Hubbard was married to Miss Harriet Pomeroy, who had come to that locality from New England with Asahel Hubbard, brother of Mr. Hubbard. Rufus Hubbard, with the older members of his family, united with the First Congregational church at Geneseo, and he was also active in assisting to establish the Geneseo manual labor school, acting as chairman of the incorporating committee. This was the first school in the place. Later the name of the school was changed to Geneseo seminary, and from it many studious, intelligent pupils were graduated, leaving the institution well equipped for the future work of life. On December 4, 1842, while living at Geneseo, the second Mrs. Hubbard died and the following year Mr. Hubbard married Augusta C. Foster, who survived him until October 12, 1883.

After some years of usefulness in Geneseo, he followed several of his children to Moline, Ill., in 1845, and there once more founded a home, remaining in the city until his death in 1880, when he was ninety-one years old. He passed peacefully to his reward after an active and useful life, with his wife and some of his children about him. He retained his faculties to a remarkable degree. A most exemplary man in character, a consistent member of the First Congregational church of Moline, he served it as deacon for some years. All his life he was active and interested in promoting every good cause.

HUBER, Albert, one of the younger members of the legal profession of Rock Island county, who has built up a large practice since locating in the city of Rock Island, is a native of Germany, having been born in Alsace, January 23, 1879, a son of Leopold and Margaret (De-Mangeat) Huber, natives of the Fatherland. Albert Huber was but two years old when brought to this country by his parents, and was the second of a family of nine children. His preliminary education was secured in the common schools of Rock Island, after which, deciding upon the law as a profession, he entered Creighton college, at Omaha, Neb. Being admitted to the bar in 1901, he began the practice of law at Davenport, Iowa, but eventually located at Rock Island, where he has continued to practice to the present time, although he still draws a large clientage from the Iowa city. He is a democrat in his political beliefs, and he has always been an active worker in the ranks of that party. He is state vice-president of the German National Alliance, a league of all German and American societies, and he also holds membership in the Knights of Columbus and the Elks.

During the time that Mr. Huber has practiced before the Rock Island bar, he has won many important cases, and his practice has increased steadily as he has won the confidence of the people of the city. He is of the progressive type, and is always to be found in the front ranks of those movements which have for their object the public welfare or advancement along social, business, educational or religious lines. Mr. Huber's residence is at No. 2917 Sixth avenue, and he has well-appointed offices at No. 213 and 214 Peoples National Bank building.

HUBER, Theophilus.—When years of earnest and persistent labor are rewarded with justly earned wealth, a community prospers as well as the individual. Rock Island has profited by the success of Theophilus Huber, for as his endeavors have born fruit, he has added to his possessions, beautified his home and increased his expenditures, while his resulting freedom from anxiety regarding monetary matters has given him opportunity to give more attention to civic matters. He was born at Alton, Ill., August 16, 1856, a son of Theophilus and Margaret (Brandy) Huber. The father was born in France September 29, 1828, while the mother was born in the same country August 26, 1828. In 1850 the father left his native land to come to the United States, first settling at Alton, Ill., where he remained five years when he returned to France. After several years there he returned to America and came to Rock Island county. In January, 1860, he located at Illinois City, where his widow still resides, aged eighty-five years. He was a shoemaker by trade, but retired about twenty years ago, his declining years being spent on a farm. The children born to Theophilus Huber, Sr., and wife were as follows: Theophilus; Mrs. Emma Ball; and Edward, who is conducting the homestead formerly belonging to his father.

Theophilus Huber owns the farm known as the Catalpa Grove farm, in section 6, Bowling township, and also the Hillside Farm in Black Hawk township. He has built a beautiful house and made other improvements, and has always been an energetic man in his community. On January 1, 1885, Theophilus Huber was married at Rock Island to Miss Ella Wheeler, daughter of Ramson and Harriet (Ferriss) Wheeler. The father was born in Canada August 11, 1822, while the mother was born in Vermont October 25, 1823, and they came to Rock Island in 1844 or 1845. Mr. and Mrs. Huber are the parents of children as follows: Abigail Wright, who is the wife of Louis Wright a fireman on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad; Lois; Margaret; Edward; and Henry; Albert; Wallace; and Theophilus, the fifth child, who died October 6, 1911. The family belong to the Methodist church of Taylor Ridge. Mr. Huber is a democrat. His daughter, Mrs. Wright, is a member of the Royal Neighbors. The Ferriss family is a very old one, having been founded in America at Providence, R. I., in 1630. Representatives of the family came to Oswego, Ill., in 1837, having made the trip overland. On August 15, 1906, there was a notable reunion in West Park, at Joliet, Ill., of the descendants of Reed and Josiah Ferriss. The occasion was the eighty-fourth birthday of Phoebe (Ferriss) LeBarron, and was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James H. and Olive (Hunt) Ferriss. William Hazard Ferriss, aged eighty-two years, was the next oldest, while Russell Richard Ferriss, ten months old, was the youngest. Mrs. Ella Wheeler Huber represented her branch of the family, and with her was her daughter, Miss Abigail Huber. A most delightful address was made by the artist Stephen James Ferriss, who spoke eloquently of the hardships, dangers and bravery of the pioneers, and described the old house on Grand Isle. Miss Dean read the family legends, and all joined in giving their recollections of the good old people from whom they were descended. Such reunions serve to cement family ties, and prevent that drifting apart which seems so inevitable when members of a household live in different communities, and have varying interests.

HUDSON, Albert C.—Numbered among the successful farmers who have devoted their lives to agriculture, and thereby learned the many necessary lessons taught those who keep in close touch with advancement in farming operations, is Albert Hudson, of section 3, Bowling township. He was born in England, September 11, 1853, being a son of Charles and Mary (Bowles) Hudson, both natives of England, who died in that country. Albert Hudson learned the shoemaking trade in his native land, but was not content in his surroundings, so came to the United States in 1871. Landing in New York City, he came direct to Mercer county, Ill., where he farmed for eighteen months, but left to go to Michigan, working there in a saw-mill as fireman for eighteen months more. However, he had come to the new world to establish himself as a farmer, so he came to Rock Island county in 1876, and since then has devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. In 1892, he was able, because of his thrift, to buy his present farm, and since then he has made many improvements upon it.

Thirty years ago, he married Mrs. Mary Grundy, born in England, whose father came to the United States at a very early date, locating in Rock Island county soon after the outbreak of the Civil war. He died in 1908. By her first marriage Mrs. Hudson had two daughters: Laura and Grace. Mr. and Mrs. Hudson have had children as follows: Frank, who is a farmer of Bowling township, married Fay Hines—two children, Vesta and Seth; and Joseph, who is at home. Mr. Hudson was reared an Episcopalian, while his wife is a Methodist. Mr. Hudson is independent in politics, but does not seek public office. His success is to be commended, for he came here poor and with no backing, but made his way because of his determination to succeed. His education is largely self gained, although he did go to school in England. His father was a butler, and so was brought in touch with some of the aristocrats of England. Mr. Hudson has the confidence and respect of his neighborhood, and no better farmer is to be found here than this man who never allowed himself to be discouraged, but forged ahead in a manner that many of the present generation would do well to emulate.

HUESING, Arthur T., formerly exalted ruler of Elks, and assistant manager of the A. D. Huesing Bottling Works at No. 1822 First avenue, Rock Island, is one of the best-known young men of this city. He was born in this city, April 16, 1885, a son of A. D. and Charlotte F. (Tremann) Huesing. The education of this young man was secured in the public and high schools of Rock Island, and even during his school days, he proved himself a credit to all parties concerned, being president of his class, 1903, during the senior year. Soon after his graduation, he entered his father's business, as assistant manager, and has since continued in that capacity.

The A. D. Huesing Bottling Works were established in the spring of 1899, and the first soda water was manufactured on the Fourth of July. The plant is equipped with all new and improved machinery, and all kinds of soda waters are manufactured, including the noted Pepsin Ginger Ale, which is recommended by physicians in cases where a pleasant digestor is needed. The firm also has the agency for the Anheuser Busch beer, which they ship all over Iowa. Their soda trade extends all over the adjoining counties. Employment is given to from ten to twelve men, and they operate three wagons and one big truck, owning six horses. A new factory, 80x100 feet, has been recently completed at Fourteenth and First avenue, another building 30x50 feet is being used as a garage.

On May 18, 1906, Mr. Huesing was made an Elk, and has risen high in his lodge, having been elected exalted ruler April 1, 1911. He has also been esteemed lecturing knight and esteemed leading knight. In addition, Mr. Huesing belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. While in national matters, he is a republican, he votes locally for the man he deems will best carry out the wishes of the people, independent of party lines.

On April 24, 1907, Mr. Huesing was married to Myrtle A. Barber, daughter of Albert F. and Sarah (Corman) Barber. Mr. and Mrs. Huesing have a daughter, Eleanor May. The Huesing family is one of the old and honored ones in this section, and its members have served in many capacities, and always been distinguished as men of high integrity and unblemished honor.

HUESING, John August, (deceased).—In the records of Rock Island county, are to be found the names of many of German birth who attained to a high position, not only in business circles, but political as well. The people here have always recognized and honored true merit and solid integrity, and rewarded civic loyalty and patriotism by election to offices of trust. One of the men whose imprint on the history of this section, was deep and lasting, was the late John August Huesing. He was born in Germany, but came to the United States before his marriage, landing in New York City. From there he went to Baltimore, Md., his father, also John August, being with him. Later he came to Davenport before the first railroad was laid to the city, making the trip overland to St. Louis, and from there up the Mississippi river. He became associated with Mr. Tegler in a wholesale liquor business, continuing in it until 1867. In 1873, Mr. Huesing was forced to dispose of his business interests on account of failing health, and went to Europe, returning the following year. Upon his return, he was elected sheriff of Rock Island county, and served until 1876, being the first man to be elected to that office on the Democratic ticket during a quarter of a century. During President Cleveland's first administration, Mr. Huesing was made postmaster, succeeding Major Hawes. Later, he was made cashier of the People's bank, but once more his health failed him under the strain, and he was forced to resign. Retiring, he lived in comfort and seclusion until his death, July 4, 1899.

Mr. Huesing married Charlotte Frances Stefensen, also a native of Germany. By this marriage there was one son, Albert D. Mrs. Huesing died, and later, Mr. Huesing married (second) Mary Stark. They had three daughters: Anna, who is in the post office in charge of the money order department, a very efficient young woman;

Helen, who is deceased, and Martha, who is a teacher in Rock Island.

HUNT, Charles F., general foreman of the Williams, White Co., of Moline, is one of the most proficient men in his line of industrial activity to be found in this part of the state, and his steady rise is due to untiring effort and conscientious performance of duty. He was born in Rutland county, Vt., September 23, 1847, being a son of Gardner and Mary (Ford) Hunt, the former born in Brattleboro, Vt., in September, 1804, and the latter in Rutland county, Vt., in June, 1806. They were farming people who married in Rutland county, Vt. and moved from there to Illinois in 1855, locating in Geneseo, where they lived until his death, this event occurring in 1887. His widow survived until 1889, she passing away in October of that year at the home of her son, Charles F. Both are buried at Geneseo. The Hunt family originated in England, representatives of it coming over on the famous Mayflower. The grandfather Hunt was in the War of 1812, as a guard, and shot an Indian. He had taken off his hat and coat, hanging them up, and seeing an Indian sneaking up to steal them later on, he shot the intruder, causing great excitement. Edward B., a brother, of Charles F., was a soldier in the Civil war, enlisting in Company I, One Hundred and Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, when sixteen years old, serving two years. He was an athlete, and worsted the bully of the regiment in a wrestling contest. This young man had the misfortune to be taken prisoner, and was confined in Libby prison, later being transferred to Andersonville, where, after suffering untold misery, he died.

Mr. Hunt was educated in the public schools of Geneseo and was brought up on the farm. When he was sixteen years old, he left school, to enter a machine shop at Geneseo, and from there went to Davenport, Iowa, to complete learning his trade. After a year there, he entered a shop at Rutland, Vt., where he spent a year. On June 15, 1868, he came to Moline, and entered the employ of the Williams, White Co. as a machinist. From the start his ability and reliability were recognized, and he was promoted from time to time until he was made general foreman of the works, in 1886. Mr. Hunt has made a remarkable record. Always willing to work overtime and Sundays, he has done enough of this to average ten hours a day for forty-three years, and during all this period he was never out of the shop more than one week at a time.

In 1867, he was married at Troy, N. Y. to Emily I. Ferguson, who died at Moline in 1904. She was born in June, 1843. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt had children as follows: Minnie M., who married George Wood, superintendent of the Moline Wheel Co., issue—Herald, Dorothy, Teddy and George; Clara, who is deceased; Nellie S., who married Charles V. Gould, employed in the post-office, issue—Helen, Thomas J., John, Charles and Emily; Myrtle, who married F. J. Tische, superintendent of the canvas goods factories of H. C. Channon & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, died at Moline in 1900, leaving no issue. On April 4, 1905, Mr. Hunt married (second) at Rock Island, Mrs. Elizabeth (Vartuvany) Yond, no issue. Mrs. Hunt had five children by her former marriage: Annie, who married Thomas Downing, issue—Daisy and Rose; Grace, who married Emory Fuller, died, having had the following issue—Walter, Mabel, Violet and Harry; Charles, who married, lives at Lincoln, Neb.; William, who married Dillie Gusta, lives at Rock Island; and Pearl, who married Andrew Nielson. They have one son, Clyde, and live in Moline.

Mr. Hunt is a member of the Odd Fellows, having occupied all the chairs in that order, and has been a delegate to the grand lodge. He is liberal in his religious views, although inclined towards the Congregational faith. In politics he is a republican. He owns his home at No. 529 Fifth avenue, and a property at No. 611 the same street. Reliable, steadfast and energetic, Mr. Hunt is invaluable to his company, and a substantial citizen of whom his neighborhood may well be proud.

HUNT, Robert.—The English people are noted for their colonizing propensities and wherever they go they carry with them the determination to establish homes for themselves. For this reason they are welcome additions to any communities, for they form a stable part of a population, that can always be relied upon. One of the representatives of the British Empire in Rock Island county is Robert Hunt of Cordova township, born in Lancastershire, England, March 16, 1862, a son of Henry and Margaret (Banford) Hunt. These parents came to America in 1870, first settling at Hannibal, Mo., but later coming to Port Byron, Ill. Here the father worked at his trade of shoemaking for a winter but in the spring he bought thirteen acres, operating it as a market garden. In 1876 he bought a farm in Cordova township and devoted his days to its improvement, dying on it June 28, 1882. His widow survived him until 1895. These parents had nine children, all of whom were born in England.

As long as his mother lived Robert Hunt remained with her, giving her a good son's care and attention, but with her death he succeeded to the management of the home place. When this was sold in 1905 he began looking about him for a desirable farm and in the following spring bought his present property of 184 acres. On it he carries on general farming and since 1907 has carried the work on alone. He has named it the Ketchum farm. There are six summer cottages on this property, which he rents to families from Clinton, Iowa, a packet boat making two daily trips in season between the farm and Clinton, so that it is a desirable camp. Mr. Hunt as yet has never married. He is a democrat, and after serving as road commissioner one term, discharging the duties of that office with trustworthy fidelity to duty, was re-elected in the spring of 1913, to the same office. Fraternally he belongs to Cordova Lodge, No. 33, M. W. of A. In him the township has a solid, reliable man, and he is recognized among his associates as an excellent farmer and experienced business man.

HUNTINGTON, Myron Edward.—Some men appear to be naturally fitted for public life. They possess those attributes necessary for successful leading of others, and their ability is recognized by the party whose cause they espouse. One of the young men of East Moline who has already advanced rapidly politically, and has a very bright future before him, is Myron Edward Huntington. He was born in Lafayette county, Wis., in May, 1889, being a son of Cyrus and Anna (Bonson) Huntington, both born in Grant county, Wis. The father was a farmer until 1901, when he moved to Platteville, Wis., which is still his home, he being one of the contracting carpenters there. His children were: Alden of Platteville, who married, has two children; Jesse, who is a city mail carrier of Seattle, Wash.; and Myron Edward.

Myron Edward Huntington remained at home until seventeen years old, at which age he was graduated from high school. He then began working for a Platteville firm, continuing with it a year, when he came to East Moline and entered the employ of the Union Malleable Iron Company as timekeeper, holding this position until April 18, 1911, when he was elected city clerk of East Moline and was re-elected April 15, 1913, by a very large majority. From boyhood he has taken an active interest in politics and is already recognized as a leader in his ward. Since October 1, 1910, he has served as secretary of the Odd Fellows, of which organization he is an enthusiastic member, and he also belongs to the Commercial Club. As yet he is not married. Mr. Huntington was brought up in the Primitive Methodist church. The republican party has no more earnest or enthusiastic support than Mr. Huntington. He was brought up in its faith and believes in its teachings. Its founders are among the heroes of his boyhood and young manhood, and he is proud to follow in their footsteps. East Moline has many excellent citizens, none, however, are more loyal or likely to be as efficiently useful as Mr. Huntington.

HUNTLEY, Bert Benson, cashier of the Port Byron State Bank, at Port Byron, is an energetic business man, well qualified to conduct the affairs of a financial institution, and the material success which he has fairly earned is beneficial alike to himself and to the place in which he has labored. Mr. Huntley was born at Preemption, Mercer county, Ill., February 7, 1874, a son of Benson Huntley. Bert Benson Huntley was given excellent educational advantages in his youth, attending the public schools of Mercer and Rock Island counties, the graded school at Oskaloosa, Iowa, and Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa, where he took a commercial course. His first business venture was in the shoe trade at Andalusia, Ill., but subsequently, after two years, he formed a partnership in a general mercantile business with his brother, John J. Huntley. Later they sold out and bought a button factory and when, after seven months, it was destroyed by fire, they came to Port Byron and leased a button factory. The partnership was dissolved after a short time and Bert B. Huntley then became bookkeeper for the banking firm of Simonson & Schaefer. In the spring of 1901 this was reorganized as a state institution. Mr. Huntley was then advanced to the position of assistant cashier, and in 1908, at the time of the death of John Schaefer, cashier, he was made cashier, a position he has continued to hold to the present time. He owns a block of stock in this bank, is a member of its directing board, and possesses the full confidence of his associates, who have the highest regard for his judgment in matters of an important nature. Through his careful handling of the affairs of the management, he has gained public confidence and approbation, fairly winning his right to be known as one of Rock Island county's able bankers. He has always displayed a commendable interest in matters affecting the welfare of his adopted place, and has served in various positions of importance and responsibility, being city clerk of Port Byron for nine consecutive terms, township clerk one term, and township treasurer for several years, still holding the latter office. A valued member of the Masons, belonging to Port Byron Lodge and the Order of the Eastern Star, he was master of his lodge in 1910, and has filled all of the chairs, having held office ever since joining the order. With his family he attends the Congregational church. On April 16, 1902, Bert Benson Huntley was married at Port Byron, Ill., to Miss Minnie E. Moody, who was born in Coe township, Rock Island county, Ill., July 7, 1875, a daughter of John W. and Mary C. (Drennan) Moody, of Port Byron, Mr. Moody being a retired farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Huntley reside in their own pleasant home.

HUNTLEY, Edward.—The Huntley family were among the early settlers of Rock Island and have always been identified with its best interests. Edward Huntley was born in Rock Island November 18, 1864, son of Mitchell and Anna (Lawson) Huntley, the father born in Akron, Ohio, in 1824, and the mother born near Albany, N. Y., in 1831. The father came from his native state to Rock Island county in 1842 and here purchased a farm, which he operated for several years. He worked on the first passenger ferry boat across the Mississippi, also the first horse ferry, and was one of the best known men in the county in early days, being remembered as a man of upright character and worthy life, of whom his descendants and friends hold a pleasant recollection. Later he came to Rock Island and conducted a shingle factory, becoming possessed of considerable property here, but, in 1906 he removed to Garden City, Kan., where he remained until his death, November 27, 1910. He was a class leader in the Methodist church in Rock Island for many years, and was also a local preacher in the church. There were born to Mitchell and Anna Huntley five daughters and two sons, namely: Frances, wife of Captain White, of Kansas; Benson, of Potlatch, Ida.; Florence, wife of Elmer Fuller, of Rock Island; Lottie, wife of William Smith, of Monmouth, Ill.; Lura, wife of William Lawson, a mail carrier of Garden City, Kans.; Gertrude, wife of Nicholas Von Postel, of Seattle, Wash.; and Edward. The mother of this family died July 16, 1891.

Edward Huntley received his primary education in the public schools of Rock Island. The family spent several years in Jefferson County, Kans., and were living there during the grasshopper depredations. He learned the trade of painter, one in which he became an expert, and now has an excellent position as striper with the Rock Island Plow Company, having been in their employ the past ten years.

On March 25, 1891, Mr. Huntley was married in Rock Island to Mary A. Simpson, a native of England, born in County Durham, June 24, 1872, daughter of Thomas and Margaret Simpson, who came to America and settled on a farm at Briar Bluff, Henry county. The father was a farmer and a miner and was accidentally killed in Cable coal mine in 1893. The family now consists of the mother, two sons and four daughters, and the mother lives at Cabool, Mo., where the sons are engaged in fruit farming. Six children have been born to Edward Huntley and wife and of these, four now survive: Hazel, Ruth, Hartzell and Edwin. Being reared in Rock Island, the city of his birth, where so much of his life has been spent, Mr. Huntley is well known and has many friends here. He is an active and useful member of the Methodist church, as are the other members of the family, and he also belongs to Camp No. 309 M. W. A. of Rock Island. He owns a pleasant home located at No. 730 Third street.

HUNTLEY, John Julius.—It is impossible for any merchant, no matter where located to succeed unless he is in close touch with his trade, understanding the needs of his customers and supplying them with what they want. One of the men who has been able to build up a large and steadily increasing business along mercantile lines in Rock Island county is John Julius Huntley of Port Byron. He was born in Preemption, Ill., on his father's farm, October 15, 1859, and given a common school education. He is a son of Benson and Celestia (Bigelow) Huntley, natives of Vermont and Cleveland, Ohio, respectively. The father was reared in Ohio, but spent many years at Reynolds, Ill., where he died in 1885, aged fifty-two years, and is there buried. His widow resided with her son, John J. Huntley, dying November, 1912, aged seventy-seven. There were nine children in their family: George, John J., Clara, Lincoln, Charles, William, Laura, Bert and Abby.

John Julius Huntley farmed until he was thirty-one years old and then entered the mercantile trade at Andalusia, continuing to conduct a large general store for nine years. Selling his property, he moved to Port Byron in 1900, where for a year he cut blanks for buttons and then purchased the general store of B. A. Lamb, since which time he has prospered as a merchant, owning one of the largest establishments of its kind in the county, outside of Rock Island and Moline. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America at Andalusia, and the Knights of Pythias at Port Byron. For many years he has been a leading factor in the Congregational church, serving it as deacon. For eight years he served as a school director of Andalusia, and has held the same office at Port Byron. He has also served as supervisor and can always be counted upon to give his constituents a sane, business-like administration of affairs.

In 1883 Mr. Huntley was married in Mercer county, Ill., to Rose Smith, daughter of Gottlieb Smith. Mr. and Mrs. Huntley became the parents of children as follows: Julius, who is in business with his father; Roy, who is general manager of a foundry at Tacoma, Wash.; George, who is at Tacoma, Wash.; and Pearl, who is now Mrs. George Zigler, lives on a farm in Coe township. Mr. Huntley is one of the most representative of the business men of Port Byron, and his influence is felt in public matters.

HUNTOON, John N., township collector, whose many years residence at Rock Island have been filled with useful deeds and civic movements, is a man who is well fitted for the position to which he was elected April 2, 1911. He was born in Henry county, Ill., in 1842, a son of Nathaniel and Sarah (Paddleford) Huntoon. The father died in 1852 and the mother in 1877. During his boyhood days, he attended school in a log house that had no windows, nor any modern furnishings. While striving in this primitive way to secure the educational training he so desired, Mr. Huntoon worked on the farm which his father entered from the government and where J. M. Huntoon was born, remaining there until 1868 having before he reached his majority bought out the other heirs. In 1872 Mr. Huntoon went to Victor, Iowa, where he remained until 1875. In that year, he came to Rock Island, and was engaged along several lines, until he accepted a position with the Rock Island Plow Company, with which he remained twenty-one years. Following this, he was associated with other manufacturers of agricultural implements, as he was an expert in his line, but is now retired.

In 1864, he married Samantha Glenn, a native of Ohio, whose parents were the very first settlers of Henry county, Ill. She died in 1892, having borne her husband five children: William, who died at the age of ten years; John Glenn; Frank; Helen Emma, and Winifred.

MRS. F. M. SINNET

a teacher who lives at home. He has always voted the republican ticket, and been prominent in politics.

Among his most cherished possessions is a time-yellowed paper which belonged to a forebear of his, reading as follows: "To Whom It May Concern: This certifies that Mr. John Huntton of Salisbury is in my opinion, well qualified to teach reading, writing and cyphering in general, and that his morals are such that children may with propriety be entrusted to his care, Thomas Thompson, Dated December 9th, 1793." Mr. Huntton is a cousin of George H. Huntton, whose wife is one of the contributors to this work. The family residence is at No 1439 Thirty-first street, where Mr. Huntton is enjoying the results of his long years of useful labor.

HURST, Hon. Elmore W., who served with honorable distinction in the Illinois state legislature in the sessions of 1888 and 1900, identifying himself with measures of great public usefulness, has been a member of the Rock Island bar for the past twenty-nine years and so highly valued by his professional brethren that twice he has been elected president of the Rock Island Bar Association. He was born at Rock Island, December 6, 1851, a son of William and Anna (Hurlock) Hurst. The parents of Elmore W. Hurst were of English extraction and were born in Delaware. In 1837 William Hurst, in searching for a desirable business location, came to Rock Island and here he saw, with the rare business sense that was a factor in his subsequent success, that the little village had unequalled facilities if properly developed to grow into a great center, although it is not probable that he foresaw its present extent or prosperity, nor could he know how closely his son would be identified with this expansion and importance. For many years he carried on merchandizing at Rock Island and was numbered with the city's best citizenship. Both he and wife were among the early members of the First Methodist Episcopal church here.

Elmore W. Hurst, the youngest of a family of five children, attended the public schools of Rock Island. His first entrance into business was as bookkeeper for a local concern and later he became assistant cashier of the Rock Island National Bank, with which institution he continued his connection for some eight years, or until he entered upon the study of the law. In 1883 he was admitted to the bar and soon attracted attention, which was notable because at that time the Rock Island bar had many men of brilliant attainments among its members. From 1891 until 1902, Mr. Hurst was in partnership with Hon. William Jackson, under the firm style of Jackson & Hurst, when additions were made to the firm by the admission of John T. and Elmore H. Stafford, nephews of Mr. Hurst. This has been a strong combination, individually and as a firm, and much important litigation in Illinois has been handled by it.

Mr. Hurst's additional interests in a business way, include investments in lands, industrial plants, and Rock Island realty, with stock in financial institutions. From early manhood he has taken a deep and conscientious interest in politics, believing that educated and enlightened men should be the directors of policies by which the Republic must stand or fall, and his judgment has been so often sustained that his fellow citizens place implicit confidence in him and have hastened to do him honor on many occasions. Elmore W. Hurst was married on May 29, 1873, to Miss Harriet M. Field, and their beautiful residence, one of the old landmarks, stands at the head of Eighteenth street, Rock Island. Many pleasant social functions have taken place there, the hospitality of this home being well known. Mr. Hurst is a member of the First Methodist Church of Rock Island and has filled church offices. He has served on many public boards, benevolent and otherwise, and is fraternally connected with the Order of United Workmen, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Knights of Pythias.

IGLEHART, Milton R.—One of the best known marble and granite works of its kind, is that at No. 1514 Second Ave., owned by Milton R. Iglehart, a representative business man of Rock Island county. Mr. Iglehart was born at Davenport, Ia., January 28, 1852, son of Ezra and Elizabeth A. (Kauffman) Iglehart, the former born near Ellicott City, Md., in 1818, died in 1865; while the latter was born in Lancaster county, Pa., in 1828, and died in 1888. The parents were married in Lancaster county, Pa., and came to Davenport, Ia., in 1850, making the trip by boat, via the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. The father, a millwright by trade, worked at his calling and did general carpentering. He and his wife were consistent members of the Methodist church, and reared nine children, of whom Milton was third. Four now survive: Milton R.; Mrs. Hattie A. Minnier of Dixon, Ill.; Ezra K. of Rock Island; and Mrs. Carrie Pyfer of Dixon, Ill.

Milton R. Iglehart attended the public schools of Davenport, Ia., until fourteen years old, when he was obliged to leave in order to go to work. For two years he found employment on a truck farm, but when sixteen years old, he entered the monument business as an apprentice in Rock Island, in the shop of an uncle, J. H. Kauffman. In 1871, Mr. Iglehart went to Baltimore, Md., where he worked as journeyman monument cutter, returning, however, to Rock Island, in the spring of 1876, to continue working for his uncle until the latter sold his business in the fall of that same year. Mr. Iglehart has continued in the monument business ever since, and owns the only establishment of the kind in the city. He has erected some beautiful monuments in the cemeteries of Rock Island, Moline and Davenport, which are a lasting testimonial to his skill and artistic perceptions.

In December, 1874, Mr. Iglehart was married in Baltimore, to Miss Maria E. Jones, born in that city, in 1857, who died in 1901. On November 7, 1904, Mr. Iglehart was married (second) to Miss Rose B. Fider, born in Rock Island in 1866, daughter of August and Eliza (Jack) Fider, natives of Germany and Illinois, respectively. Mr. Fider was a harnessmaker. Three children were born of Mr. Iglehart's first marriage, two of whom died in infancy, the other being Mildred L., born in 1877, who married Max H. Heller of Chicago but died April 14, 1912. By the second marriage there is a son, Milton R., Jr., born June 23, 1907. Mr. Iglehart is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and is interested in his fraternal relations. He owns a double and single residence and the store building where his shop is located. A man of good judgment, high business principles and civic pride, Mr. Iglehart is widely and favorably known, and is influential in the various circles in which he moves.

HRIG, William (deceased).—One of the honest, reliable German-Americans of Rock Island county, now deceased, was William Hrig, who made his home in the city of the same name for many years. He was born in Germany, in August, 1841, and was left an orphan in infancy, being reared by relatives, and attended school until fourteen years old. Two years afterward he came to the United States with members of his family, and settlement was first made by the little party in Philadelphia, where Mr. Hrig learned the trade of a baker. He served his adopted country during the Civil war, in a Pennsylvania regiment, and because of his faithfulness, was promoted to the rank of corporal, and made an excellent record as a soldier. At the close of the war he returned to Philadelphia, and there married, and in 1870, or 1871, came with his wife and children to Rock Island. During the years he lived in this city he turned his hand to anything he could find to do that would earn him an honest dollar, and was one of the most faithful of workmen. His death occurred on April 6, 1881, in the home he had built twenty-seven years before, at No. 1306 Fourth avenue. He was a democrat in political faith. Fraternally he belonged to the A. O. U. W.

In 1869 Mr. Hrig was married in Philadelphia to Caroline Megerle. Their children were: William F., of Rock Island, who married a Miss Dickerson; Charles W., of Rock Island, who married Sophia Stover; and Louis P., also of Rock Island, who married a Miss Scherer. Mrs. Hrig was born in Germany October 27, 1850, and was sixteen years old when she came to the United States, arriving in New York, from whence she went to Philadelphia. She was the daughter of Jacob and Lenora Megerle, farming people, who died in Germany, parents of twelve children. Mrs. Hrig continues to reside in the family residence at Rock Island. She is an estimable lady, who has proven herself a devoted wife and mother as well as kind neighbor, and has many friends throughout the city.

JACKSON, Hon. William.—Eminent in his profession, loyal to the interests of his city, and possessing a record for faithful performance of official duty, the Hon. William Jackson of No. 524 Twentieth street, Rock Island, is one of the prominent attorneys here. He was born in Liverpool, England, August 14, 1834, of English parents. After leaving the Liverpool Collegiate Institute, he became a grocer's apprentice, but being dissatisfied with his prospects, he came to New York City, arriving there July 2, 1851. After a short stay in that metropolis, he came west to Rock Island county. For several years thereafter, he was employed in various mills in Moline, and in 1858 commenced the study of the law continuing until he was admitted to the Bar. in 1860.

Having qualified himself for a professional life, Mr. Jackson formed a partnership with James Chapman, of Moline. Two years later, Mr. Jackson came to Rock Island, and in 1864, the partnership of Sweeney & Jackson was formed. C. L. Walker was taken into partnership in 1876, the firm becoming Sweeney, Jackson & Walker. In 1833, Mr. Jackson retired on account of failing health but resumed practice in 1855 and in 1888, he became associated with E. W. Hurst, and the firm of Jackson & Hurst came into being, this association continuing until 1903, when the style was changed to Jackson, Hurst & Stafford. During his years of practice, Mr. Jackson has been identified with much important jurisprudence, and has for several years past been one of the local attorneys of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad.

The marriage of Mr. Jackson occurred May 21, 1863, when he was united with Jennie E. Sammis who was born in New York City. Mrs. Carrie A. Barth and Mrs. Hattie J. Babcock are the two living children of this union.

A stalwart republican, Mr. Jackson served as postmaster of Rock Island from 1873 to 1876, and from 1897 to 1901, was on the board of managers of the Illinois state reformatory. He has also served as president of the board of park commissioners of Rock Island. Spencer Square in Rock Island was laid out under his direction, and Long View Park was under his charge as president of the park board. His religious connections are with the First Methodist church of Rock Island, and he has been a member of that denomination for over sixty years. A long, useful life, spent in earnest endeavor for others, sets an example for the rising generation. The name of Mr. Jackson will stand among those who have worked hard for the city's benefit, as long as Rock Island exists.

JAMISON, Edmond K., proprietor of the Jamison Towel Supply Company, the only concern of its kind at Moline, has proven in his commercial endeavors that he is a man of progressive ideas, quick to take advantage of a popular demand, by meeting it. The business is conveniently located at No. 2601 Fifth avenue, Moline, and the company gives a clean towel, apron and coat service that is appreciated and patronized by all of the leading houses of the city. Employment is given eight people, and two wagons are kept busy collecting and delivering the goods. A new brick and tile plant has been recently built.

Mr. Jamison was born at Davenport, Ia., in 1877, a son of George W. and Matilda (Hartung) Jamison. The father was born in Pennsylvania and the mother in Chicago. George W. Jamison and his wife now reside at St. Louis, and there Edmond K. Jamison was reared, receiving a public school education. After leaving school, he worked at different jobs at St. Louis, and then when sixteen years old, came to Moline, where he became a carriage painter in the Sechler Carriage Works, thus continuing for eight years, during which time, he painted the first corn planter manufactured by this company. In 1904, Mr. Jamison established his business, and has already carried it to its present prosperous condition. He is recognized as one of the rising young business men of Moline, and stands high in public esteem.

In 1899, Mr. Jamison was married to Emma Barraclaugh, born in England. Two children have been born of this union: Eddie who died at the age of two years; and Raymond George. The family are Episcopalians. Fraternally, Mr. Jamison belongs to the Red Men. While voting the republican ticket, he is very liberal, and prefers to pick out the one he deems the best man on the county and city ticket.

JASPERSEN, Carl F. (deceased).—In order to succeed in any line of work, it is necessary for a man to understand it thoroughly, and to be interested in what he is doing. The well cultivated farms of Rock Island county show that the agriculturists of this region prove that they are thoroughly modern in their operations. One of the progressive farmers of this county was the late Carl F. Jaspersen of Canoe Creek township, born in Denmark, June 24, 1844, son of Jasper and Bolena (Grumm) Carlsen, both of whom died in Denmark. In November, 1868, Carl F. Jaspersen was married to Carn M. Petersen, daughter of Peter and Anna Catherine (Rasmussen) Petersen, who also died in Denmark. In 1872, Carl F. Jaspersen came to America, locating in Clinton county, Ia., where he farmed for two years, then worked on the railroad, being foreman for the Northwestern road for eight years. In 1894, he came to Canoe Creek township, buying eighty-five acres of land one mile south of Hillsdale, which continued to be his home until his death May 16, 1912. He carried on general farming, and raised horses, cattle and hogs with marked success. Carl F. Jaspersen and wife became the parents of children as follows: Peter, who is at home; Jasper, who is of Hillsdale; Anna C., Frank and Frank (II), who all died very young; Hans Frederick, who died at the age of twenty-four years; Anna C., who died at the age of twenty-three years; and Mary, who became Mrs. Thomas Krantz. In religious faith, Mr. Jaspersen belonged to the Danish Lutheran church. Politically, he was a democrat, but did not aspire to public office. He was a very hard-working man, whose thrifty habits enabled him to provide a home for his family, and advance his interests as he did. It is really remarkable how much those from distant lands can accomplish after reaching our shores. They come here fired with an ambition to succeed, and they seldom fail, especially those who hail from Denmark. Mr. Jaspersen is kindly remembered for his many solid traits of character and admirable virtues.

JENSEN, Jacob.—Many of those who are engaged in other pursuits, change their minds and turn to farming, realizing that there is a larger profit from agricultural industry than in any other line. One of the progressive farmers of Coe township who have aided materially in advancing the interests of Rock Island county after being engaged in other lines, is Jacob Jensen, born in Gyellen, Denmark, May 9, 1869, a son of Christian and Dorothy Catherine (Powelsen) Jensen. Mr. Jensen was educated in the public schools of his native land and taught farming. In 1894, he left Denmark and came to America alone, and reaching Rock Island county, began working for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad as section foreman. For nine years he held this position, proving a reliable and efficient man, but his ambition was to own and operate a farm, and in 1907, he bought eighty acres of section 9, Coe township, from Joseph Carr. On it he has built his large barn and chicken house, and put up a fine modern windmill. He has replaced the most of the fences, and put everything in first-rate shape. Mr. Jensen feeds all of his grain to his stock, raising about forty hogs and keeps six cows and four horses.

On March 20, 1895, Mr. Jensen married Matilda Petersen, theirs being the first marriage in the new courthouse. They have had four children: Thara Catherine, who was born July 24, 1898, is a student in Fairfield; Magnus, who was born September 21, 1899; Roy, who was born August 18, 1902, and Louisa, who was born March 16, 1909. They are hard-working people, thrifty and industrious, and their present prosperity has been brought about through the practice of these virtues. While they have been acquiring their home, they have made friends and have the confidence and respect of their neighbors.

JOERS, John, inspector of plumbing, is a man who gives his attention to securing for the people of Rock Island sanitary conditions of the highest class. In these days when the importance and necessity of first-class plumbing are generally recognized, the services rendered by Mr. Joers are appreciated, not only by the plumbers who secure his expert opinion and approval, but by the citizens at large. Mr. Joers was born in Moline, Ill., in 1870, a son of Hans and Frederecka (Schümacher) Joers. These parents were natives of Germany, and both are now deceased. Attending school, both public and German, in Rock Island, John Joers grew up to a useful manhood. When only fourteen years old, he began learning the trade of plumbing, and has mastered its every detail. In 1911, he was appointed to the office of city plumbing inspector, and his work since then has justified the selection of the administration. Never before has such excellent service been rendered, for, being a practical plumber himself, Mr. Joers can judge fairly and impartially.

In 1911, Mr. Joers was married to Margaret Groom, born in Lathrop, Mo., in 1888. Mr. Joers is very liberal in his political convictions, striving to secure good government, rather than the continuance of any one party in power. The German Lutheran church holds his membership, and benefits from his liberal support of its good works. Honest, conscientious and faithful, Mr. Joers is one of the very best of the city officials, and this administration may well congratulate itself on his appointment.

JONES, Charles W.—Edgington township is the home of some of the most progressive farmers of Rock Island county, and to them is due much of the credit for the remarkable development of agricultural interests. One of those very successfully engaged in farming is Charles W. Jones, owner of eighty acres of land on section 32, Edgington township. He was born in Preemption township, Mercer county, Ill., October 3, 1861, being a son of John W. and Lucinda (Willite) Jones, and grandson of Joseph Jones, a native of Kentucky. The latter came to Illinois, settling in Henderson county, from whence he went to Preemption township, Mercer county, becoming the owner of a considerable amount of land in that vicinity. He died there and was interred in the cemetery of that neighborhood. From boyhood he belonged to the Baptist church, and became a local preacher.

John W. Jones was born in Kentucky August 18, 1828, and was a boy when his father came to Illinois, so he was brought up and educated in this state. He married in Mercer county, his wife having been born in Pike county, and came of Holland descent. John W. Jones moved to Kansas in 1886 and died February 21, 1912. His wife died there in 1904 aged sixty years. They had a family as follows: Joseph, of Brown county, Kas., married Mary Strope; Martha is Mrs. Hugh Strope of Taylor Ridge, Ill.; Mary is Mrs. Peter Hobart of Kansas; Charles W.; Edwin is of Brown county, Kas.; Rebecca is Mrs. Sprague of Twin Falls, Idaho.

Charles W. Jones grew to manhood on the home farm, in Edgington township, attending the public schools, first at Milan, and later in Edgington township, his first teacher having been Alethea Muse. When he was twenty years old he left school and worked on the home farm until his marriage. Following this he settled on his father-in-law's farm in Edgington township, remaining there for three years, when he bought and moved on his present place, which he has made into a very desirable property.

On December 24, 1884, Mr. Jones married Eva Gaunt, daughter of John H. and Mary (Brooks) Gaunt. The children born of this marriage are: Clarence, who married Emily Seligman, lives in Scott county, Iowa; and Grace May, who is Mrs. Perry Venable of Edgington township. Mrs. Jones died in 1905, having been a devout member of the Methodist church, and a true Christian lady, devoted to her family. On April 28, 1911, Mr. Jones married (second) Miss Milda Osborne, formerly of Paterson, N. J., a daughter of Elias Osborne of New Jersey, and they have one child, Dorothy Eleanor. Mr. Jones started out without any help, to make his own way, and has succeeded remarkably well. He has held several of the township offices, including that of highway commissioner. The Modern Woodmen of America holds his membership. He is a member of Taylor Ridge Methodist church, of which he has been trustee for years. A sound, solid, reliable man, whose integrity is unquestioned, his prosperity has been honestly earned.

JOHNSON, Arthur Blaine.—The records of Rock Island county show that never before have there been so many able members of the bar within its confines. With so many important matters before the country which involve serious problems of jurisprudence it is exceedingly necessary for the lawyer of today to be able to cope with them and lend his aid in obtaining justice. Because of the necessary qualifications for success, the lawyer of today is being asked to occupy positions of trust and responsibility, and usually is one of the most prominent men in his community. One of those thus representative is Arthur Blaine Johnson, attorney-at-law of East Moline, residing at No. 330 Second avenue. He was born at Whitehall, Ill., September 28, 1879, being a son of John Calvin and Julia (Toler) Johnson. The father was a farmer and was born in Indiana, and the mother in Clay county, Ill. They were married at Louisville, in Clay county, and resided in that county until after the Civil war, when they moved to Greene county, where they lived the remainder of their lives. During the war the father served for four years in the army of the Blue, and was a brave and gallant soldier. He served under General Grant in the early stage of the war and later under General Sherman, participating in the "March to the Sea." The grandparents on both sides were born in Kentucky, the ancestors having come there from Virginia and the Carolinas. The maternal grandfather, Robert Toler, was sheriff of Clay county. Mr. Johnson's mother's mother's maiden name was Keach.

Mr. Johnson was reared on a farm, and attended the Whitehall public school. During his boyhood he was fond of athletics, but preferred reading to anything else. He graduated from the Whitehall High school, class of 1896. Naturally so studious a youth turned to teaching, and he followed this calling until admitted to the bar. Since coming to East Moline he has been distinguished by election as city attorney on the independent ticket in 1907, and in 1909 on the citizens' ticket.

In November, 1911, he was appointed city attorney to fill a vacancy, and served until spring of 1913. Politically he is a republican. Having gone through all of the chairs of the Odd Fellows lodge, No. 934, he is now past grand, and he also belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, of which he is past counsel, and to the North Star Benefit Association; he is a member of the Sons of Veteran Camp No. 31, and is president of the East Moline Commercial Club.

On October 17, 1908, Mr. Johnson was married at Barrow, Ill., to Mabel Doyel, daughter of J. F. and Henrietta (Edward) Doyel, the former born May 9, 1852, and the latter October 22, 1859. Mrs. Johnson's grandfather, James Doyel, was an early settler of Greene county, and Thomas Edwards, grandfather on the mother's side, was also a pioneer of that section. They were sturdy, upright men of note in their community. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have one child, Keach Doyel Johnson, born June 21, 1910. Mr. Johnson owns lots six (6) and seven (7), block one hundred and eighty two (182), City of East Moline, the property being well improved with nine residences. He is one of the most progressive men of the city and has a brilliant future before him.

JOHNSON, Carl G.—New uses are constantly being found for concrete and cement, and those who are engaged in the manufacture of these two materials have assured prospects for future success. Carl G. Johnson, a mason contractor of Moline, manufactures cement blocks for his patrons and also for his own use, and carries on a profitable business in both lines. He has established a good reputation for the high class of his concrete and structural work, and is known to be upright and straightforward in his dealings. He has a wide acquaintance in Moline and vicinity and is becoming better known through the line of manufacture which he has recently begun. He was born near Hornsborg, Sweden, December 30, 1878, son of John P. and Christina (Swanson) Larson, who still reside in Sweden.

After completing a course in the public school, Carl G. Johnson learned the trade of mason in his native land and followed same until coming to the United States in 1902. He came direct to Moline, where he arrived April 12th of that year, and after working at the trade of mason four years entered the employ of the Edd Construction Company, in concrete work, and continued until he started contracting in masonry and concrete work. He has worked on many buildings in Moline and nearby towns and has an office in his home at No. 1601 Thirteenth street. In the spring of 1911 he started his cement block factory, at Thirty-fourth street and Fourth Avenue, where he manufactures various kinds of building blocks for the trade. He uses considerable of his output in his own contracting work. He is a self-made man, coming to a strange country with little knowledge of its customs and language, and has attained a very fair degree of success. He attended Brown's Business College a short time after coming to Moline.

Mr. Johnson was married September 16, 1909, to Anna G. Bengtson, born at Hornsborg, Sweden, daughter of John and Ida (Person) Bengtson. Her father died in Sweden and her mother still resides in that country. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have a son, Aaron Gilbert Johnson, born July 2, 1910. Mr. Johnson belongs to Swedish Olive Lodge No. 583, I. O. O. F., and is a republican in politics. He takes a good citizen's interest in public affairs and is ready to help promote the general welfare whenever he can do so.

JOHNSON, Charles Victor, who is a representative builder and contractor of Rock Island, makes a specialty of erecting high class residences. Although comparatively a young man, he has made a creditable showing in his line of work, and his business is advancing in a gratifying degree. He was born in Sweden August 13, 1872, son of John and Annie (Johnson) Johnson. The father, a farmer, came to America during the Civil war but later returned to Sweden, where he and his wife now reside. They had ten children, of whom nine are living, those in the United States being: Charles Victor, Axel, Lottie and Hilda.

Charles V. Johnson was educated in Sweden and emigrated to the United States in 1892, after which he spent three years in Michigan, engaged in farming. In 1895 he came to Rock Island and worked at the trade of carpenter, and in 1900 began contracting on his own account. He has a pleasant home at No. 1622 Twelfth street, in the rear of which he conducted his shop and office, erecting this building in 1910.

In 1898 Mr. Johnson married Mary Burkquist, also a native of Sweden, and three children have been born to them: Melvine, Nina and Alfred, all at home. Mr. Johnson is a member of the M. W. A., the Order of Moose, the Odd Fellows and the Swedish Society. He is liberal in his political views but leans towards the principles of the republican party. He and his wife have many friends in Rock Island, and Mr. Johnson is known in business and fraternal circles as a man of good judgment and upright character.

JOHNSON, Daniel W. (deceased).—There are many instances in the history of our country where men, whose educational advantages have been extremely limited, rise above their associates through sheer native ability and strong will, and one who attained much more than local prominence in agricultural and stock-raising matters, was the late Daniel W. Johnson, a veteran of the Civil war, who was born in Rock Island township, Rock Island county, Ill., August 24, 1833, a son of Moses and Catherine Johnson. Moses Johnson, who was born in Louisville, Ky., came to Rock Island county in 1829. He went to Galena to get his marriage papers, returning to Rock Island, where he was married in 1830. He and his wife then came to Zuma township, where Moses Johnson entered eighty acres of heavily timbered land, later adding a tract of forty acres, and after clearing the whole property he engaged in farming here until his death in March, 1866, his widow surviving him until 1901, when she passed away at the age of ninety years. They had a family of ten children, of whom six are now living, namely: Edward, who is of Fulton county, Mont.; Mary, who is now Mrs. Eph Lambert of Marysville, Mo.; Jacob, who is of Rice county, Kans.; Ebenezer, who is of Fulton county, Mont.; George, who is residing on the old homestead; and Catherine, who married John Sharp, of Reno county, Kan.

At the age of sixteen years Daniel W. Johnson commenced working on Zuma township farms, and so continued until he purchased 180 acres where he lived until his death, with the exception of twelve years, when he was at Barstow, Ill. On August 12, 1862, he enlisted for service during the Civil war, in Company E, One Hundred Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and first drilled at Dixon, Ill., later going to Chicago, where he was engaged in guarding prisoners for two months. He was then sent to Alton, Ill. where he spent a like period in the same work; and then went to Jacksonport, Ky., and on to LaGrange, Tenn. In the spring of 1864 he was in the siege of Vicksburg, and fifteen days after the surrender was ordered to Helena, Ark. There the Federals fought Price for two days and marched to Little Rock, then falling back to Duvals Bluff. For two months Mr. Johnson's regiment was at the mouth of the White River, from whence it was ordered to St. Charles, Ark., traveling all over that territory and being mustered out of the service at Pine Bluff, Mr. Johnson receiving his honorable discharge August 12, 1865. Returning to the home place he again took up farming, adding to the property until he had 180 acres. This land, which at that time was a raw, unfenced bit of prairie, is now one of the fine farms of Zuma township which was put in a fine state of cultivation through Mr. Johnson's hard and faithful labor.

On December 14, 1855, Johnson was married to Nancy Long daughter of John and Polly (Beal) Long, early settlers of Zuma township, and one child, Lucius, was born to this union. He died when about three years old. On September 8, 1869, Mrs. Johnson died, and Daniel W. Johnson was married (second) December 14, 1880, to Mrs. Lucy E. Wells, who was born in Zuma township, a daughter of Nelson and Harriet (Dow) Wells. The second Mrs. Johnson died May 27, 1909, after which Mr. Johnson made his home with his adopted daughter, Mrs. John Jacobs, until his death, which occurred October 12, 1911. By her first marriage Mrs. Lucy E. Wells had a daughter, Anna, whom Daniel W. Johnson adopted after his marriage. This daughter married John Jacobs. Daniel W. Johnson was a member of the United Brethren church, and was a trustee from 1890 until death. He was a republican in politics and served as road commissioner for six years, school director for some time and constable for four years. He belonged to Lyford Post, G. A. R. No. 103, of Port Byron, Ill.

JOHNSON, George F., M. D., mayor, and a practicing physician of East Moline, has made his mark in his profession for he is an earnest, skilled man, devoted to his work. Dr. Johnson was born near Cobden, Union county, Ill., March 25, 1873, a son of George and Emma (Armstrong) Johnson, both natives of Union county, Ill. Their parents came from Tennessee and Virginia, respectively, and all were farming people. George Johnson died in Union county in 1880, aged thirty-two years, leaving a widow and four children, two having died previously. Dr. Johnson was the fourth child in order of birth, and the second eldest of the survivors. Mrs. Johnson died in 1910, aged fifty-eight years. Dr. Johnson was educated in the district schools of Union county, and Murphysboro, Ill. Three months prior to the graduation exercises, he left school to enter the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1896, with the degree of M. D. That same year, he began practicing at Iuka, Ill., but after two years, on account of failing health, sold his practice, and moved to Colona, Ill., where he continued in practice until 1905, when he was attracted to East Moline on account of its promised expansion, and has continued to reside here. In 1908, Dr. Johnson established and edited the East Moline Herald, but sold it in the fall of 1911. He has been largely interested in the realty development of East Moline, erecting in June, 1911, the State Bank building, 40x70 feet, two stories in height, a modern store and office structure, which he still owns. He is the senior member of the realty firm of Johnson & Green of East Moline. This firm built the Majestic theatre, and a number of other buildings which were sold by the time they were completed. Politically, a democrat, he has served in a number of offices. In 1906, he was made village trustee, and when the village became a city a year later, he was elected mayor on the citizens' ticket by a unanimous vote, and was re-elected two years later. In 1911, he was re-elected for a third term, and is the present incumbent of the office. Dr. Johnson is a member of the Rock Island County Medical Society, the Iowa and Illinois District Medical Society, the Illinois State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Fraternally, he is a Chapter Mason, Odd Fellow, Knight of Pythias, Modern Woodmen of America, Eagle, and belongs to several other orders. His social connections are with the East Moline Commercial Club, which was organized by him and T. J. Gorman;

the East Moline Civic Improvement Association, and he is president of the East Moline Physicians' Club.

In November, 1896, Dr. Johnson was married to Anna M. Shulze, born at Blair, Randolph county, Ill., in 1871, daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth Shulze, farming people, natives of Germany. Frederick Shulze died in 1886, but his widow survives, living on a farm in Randolph county. Dr. and Mrs. Johnson are the parents of two children: Irma, born February 12, 1898; and Gilman W., born May 4, 1900. Dr. Johnson believes in out door life, especially for young people. He contends that his happiest days were those when he worked on his mother's farm during his vacations. East Moline owes Dr. Johnson a debt it will be difficult for it to discharge, for as its chief executive, he has established the municipality upon a solid financial basis, and made it a power among other cities of the county.

JOHNSON, George Henry.—Some of the more progressive farmers of Rock Island county are realizing the profits of growing fine stock, and are devoting themselves to this branch of agricultural enterprise. One of the farmers of Zuma township who has been preeminently successful along this line is George Henry Johnson, who was born in this township, August 28, 1849, a son of Moses T. and Catherine (Gossip) Johnson, the former a native of New Jersey and the latter of Switzerland. Moses T. Johnson served in the Black Hawk War and five of his six sons served in the Civil war. George Henry Johnson was only prevented by his youth from also participating. George Henry Johnson received his education in the district schools, of his township, and spent his youth on the home farm, taking care of his parents in their old age. On August 7, 1873 he was married to Matilda Scott, who was born near Winnebago, Wis., daughter of Herman H. and Martha (Miller) Scott, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Illinois. Mrs. Johnson's father, who was one of the founders of the United Brethren church in Illinois, was a preacher in that faith, and also owned a small farm in Zuma township, where both he and his wife died.

After his father's death, George H. Johnson bought the old homestead of forty acres, and his mother made her home with him until her death, in 1904, when she was ninety years of age. Mr. Johnson was born in a log cabin, which was the family home until 1876, when a frame house was erected, and this in 1909 was torn down and a modern residence of two stories, 16 x 24 feet, was built. Mr. Johnson has his land in a fertile condition, and has about seven acres in pasture land. He raises a good grade of horses, cattle and hogs, and is successful in this line and in general farming. In politics, he is independent, and he has served in various township offices, including those of school director and road overseer. Fraternally he is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America, No. 1719, of Joslin.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have had the following children: Stella who married Perry Willard, of Hampton township has two children; Roy E. who died at the age of four years; Clarence E., who is of Zuma township, married Anna Schwenker and has three children, Harold E., Mildred and William G.; Harry, of Zuma township, who married Charlotte Taylor, has one child, Geraldine; and Iva and Myrtle, who reside at home.

JOHNSON, George W., president and treasurer of the Moline Furniture Works, is a man whose name is synonymous with honorable dealing, superior quality of workmanship and modern methods. His connection with the company which he heads insures its success, and high standing in the business world. He was born in Henry county, Ill., October 9, 1857, being a son of Swan P. and Christina (Peterson) Johnson, natives of Sweden. They came to Henry county at an early day, and there rounded out useful lives, his father dying in 1889, but his mother yet lives making her home at Cambridge, Ill.

George W. Johnson was educated in Henry county, where he was brought up on a farm, and early taught the habits of industry and thrift which have proven such valuable assets to him. Until 1886, Mr. Johnson farmed in Henry county, and then seeking an investment for his capital, went into a mercantile venture at Orion, continuing in the same until 1894, when he came to Moline, and until 1899, interested himself in realty operations. In that year he took charge of the Moline Furniture works, and has built up this concern until it ranks among the foremost of its kind in the State.

In June, 1882, Mr. Johnson was married in Henry county to Caroline F. Hagg, born in Henry county, daughter of Nels and Catherine Hagg, farming people, both of whom are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson became the parents of four children as follows: Mable born Aug 1, 1883, died in June, 1889; Mauritz, born in Henry county, July 11, 1885, is now superintendent of his father's plant and married Helen Swanson, having three children, Helen, Maurine and George Carlyle; Esley, born in Henry county, December 21, 1887, is timekeeper and bill clerk for his father and married Meta L. Siegel of Champaign, Ill., Oct. 25, 1911; and Franklin, born in Moline, May 29, 1894, is attending high school.

Mr. Johnson has been exceedingly active in republican politics. He was appointed postmaster of Orion, by President Harrison, in 1891, serving until 1895. During his residence in Orion, he held several township offices, and in 1898, he was elected to the general assembly of Illinois, and re-elected in 1900. During his service, he was on the appropriation committee and was chairman of the manufacturing committee. He has been a member of the republican county central committee, since 1906, and its secretary from 1908 to 1912, and has always been loyal in his support of his party's ticket. He is a director of the State Savings Banking and Trust Co. Fraternally he has been president of the Swedish-American Republican State League of Illinois, and belongs to the Odd Fellows, and Red Men. His religious connections are with the Swedish Lutheran church, and his contributions to this denomination are exceedingly liberal. A man of influence, sound and reliable, public-spirited and in close touch with the people so that he understands their needs, Mr. Johnson has long been an important factor in the life of Moline, as well as his part of the state. His beautiful home at No. 1440 Twelfth street, Moline, is often the gathering place for leaders in both social and political circles, who are given the hearty, generous welcome characteristic of the hospitable host and hostess.

JOHNSON, Henry Richard.—Hampton township contains some of the most prosperous and enterprising of Rock Island county farmers, whose reputation as agriculturalists has gone all over the state. One of these is Henry Richard Johnson, who has spent his life in this kind of work, and is an expert in farming. He was born in Hampton township, December 16, 1877, a son of Samuel C. and Augusta H. (Hanson) Johnson, both born in Sweden, where they married. In 1866, they came to this country, first locating at Moline, but after six months, they came to Hampton township where they bought a small place south of Silvis, in the timber, only two acres of which were cleared. The father kept on adding to his farm, until he owned fifty-three acres, and he never stopped improving it. His death occurred in February, 1893. His widow continued to live on the farm until 1904, when she moved to Moline, where she and her daughter Mabel E. reside at No. 1445 Tenth street. There were the following children in the family: August L., who is of Hampton township; Alma R., who married Charles Hansen of Hampton township; Minnie L., who married Philip Colson of Moline; Henry R.; Oscar J., who is of Moline; and Mabel E.

Henry Richard Johnson has always lived on the farm, growing up upon it, attending the district schools. In 1903, he rented property, and has farmed ever since. He now has eighty acres, eight of which are in fruit, and the balance is devoted to general farming and pasturage.

On January 20, 1903, Henry Richard Johnson was married to Hannah E. Hallquist, born in Moline, daughter of Gustav and Christine (Miller) Hallquist of Sweden. Mrs. Hallquist died in the fall of 1906, but Mr. Hallquist lives retired in Moline. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have a daughter, Irene, born April 1, 1907. In 1899, Mr. Johnson joined the Swedish Baptist church of Moline. In politics he is a republican. Fraternally, he belongs to North Star No. 1, of Moline. Mr. Johnson inherits the desirable characteristics of the Swedish people, is industrious and thrifty, and is forging his way to the front among the prosperous farmers of his locality. He has many friends in the township, and Moline, and holds the confidence and respect of all who are associated with him.

JOHNSON, Herman.—An added impetus was given to farming by the hearty interest shown in agricultural matters by several chief executives of the Nation, but there are many in Rock Island county who have been fully aware of the importance of this line of work for many years. One of them is Herman Johnson, a prosperous farmer of Hampton township. He was born in Sweden, January 19, 1859, and when seventeen years old came to the United States with a friend. They arrived at Galesburg, Ill., at a time when there was plenty of work on railroad construction, and he was thus employed for a year, and later was an engine wiper. For the next eighteen months he was in the Buford Plow factory. This was burned so that he was compelled on account of injuries to remain at home during the winter of 1880. When well, he secured work with the Deere Co. at Moline, remaining with this concern for seven years. For the next six years, he was engaged in teaming, and building livery barns, and conducted a livery business for two years. Taking a partner, Hans Peterson, he continued the business a few months more, and then went into an ice business and operated it for seven years. At the expiration of this time, he bought 142 acres of land in Hampton township, on which was an old house. This he replaced with his handsome modern one in 1904, and he has made other improvements, now having a splendid property.

Mr. Johnson was married in Moline to Anna Asp, born in Chicago. Her mother died when she was an infant, and she was reared by outsiders, who took her all over Missouri. In the meanwhile her father, wishing to secure possession of his daughter, advertised for her, and she joined him at Galesburg, Ill., when she was fourteen years old. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson became parents of children as follows: George A., who died in 1904, when twenty-one years old; Nellie, who is a graduate nurse of Princeton, Minn.; Stella, who married Frank Newcomb of Rock Island; Ruth, Margaret, Dewey and Lucile, who are at home.

Mr. Johnson's progress here has been remarkable, for although he had a good education in his native land, he knew nothing of English when he came here, and had to learn the language as best he could. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson belong to the Universalist church. Politically he is a republican, and has served as highway commissioner of South Moline for a year. He is a charter member of Stewart Camp, Modern Woodmen of America of Moline Bluff. The life of Mr. Johnson teaches a lesson, for it shows that much can be accomplished by the man willing to work and save, and that honest dealing and upright living certainly pay.

JOHNSON, John O.—It has been claimed that no native of Sweden is to be found accepting charity or in a penal institution, and certain it is that the sturdy sons of this northern country are always willing to work hard and live frugally in order to place themselves beyond want or temptation from crime. An excellent example of the better class of Swedes to be found in Rock Island county is John O. Johnson, a prosperous farmer of Coal Valley township, residing at No. 1553 Twenty-third avenue, Moline. He was born in Sweden in 1848, being a son of John E. and Caroline (Yansen) Johnson, both natives of that county who died in Rock Island county where they are buried. They had nine children, as follows: Christina, John O., Swan T., Emma, Josephine, Albert C., Ida, Charly and Hilda.

John O. Johnson came to Rock Island county in 1869 and began mining in Coal Valley township. He alternated mining with farming, and in 1882 bought sixty-six and one-half acres to which he has added until he now owns 186½ acres on which he raises corn, oats and potatoes, and breeds horses and cattle. He has four acres in a fine orchard and a magnificent vineyard, and his land is increasing in value with each year.

In 1874 Mr. Johnson married Hannah C. Johnson, born in Sweden, who came to this country in 1870. Ten children have been born to them: Emma, Fannie, Ida, Anna, Elmer, Hilma, Carrie, Nellie, Albert and Mary. There are fourteen grandchildren in the family. A staunch republican, Mr. Johnson served as road overseer for nine years, school director for twenty-seven years and for six years was township treasurer. He is a member of the Swedish Lutheran church, and is one of its most liberal contributors. Coming here in young manhood, with no capital save his ability and ambition, he has gradually worked himself up until he is now one of the leading men of his township. His strict probity, his energetic industry and unflinching kindness of heart have won the confidence and friendship of the best people of this community.

JOHNSON, Nels (deceased).—It would be difficult to say too much in praise of the Swedish people, for their many virtues have long been recognized. No other people are so frugal, so hard-working, or so well fitted to become excellent American citizens. Thus it is that those whose birth occurred in Sweden, are welcomed in every part of the country. Rock Island has its portion of them, and one whose merits are well recognized was the late Nels Johnson, formerly of No. 613 Ninth street, this city. For years he had held a responsible position in the Rock Island Plow Works, and in his death, this concern lost a reliable man, and Rock Island a good citizen. He was born in Sweden, October 31, 1834.

In 1868, Nels Johnson came to America, landing in Quebec, from whence he came to Rock Island. He had been educated in his native tongue, but had to learn the English language after coming here. While all of his life was spent in hard work, on a salary, he made his influence felt, and gained firm friends among his associates, and was respected by his superiors. On October 18, 1858, Mr. Johnson was married in Copenhagen, Denmark, to Anna Sorensen, daughter of Soren and Margaret Sorensen, also natives of Denmark. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson had eight children: Charlie, Willie, Harry, Emil, Anna (deceased) Emma, all of whom attended public school, and two, Louisa and Mary, are deceased.

Mr. Johnson was a member of the Druids Lodge. His religious affiliations were with the Swedish Methodist church of Rock Island. He was a republican, but never sought office. Mr. Johnson owned his family residence, and died there September 17, 1878.

JOHNSON, Nels August, owns and operates some of the most highly developed land in Rock Island county, his farm of seventy-five acres being located in Hampton township. He was born in Sweden, December 14, 1853, being a son of Jonas and Mary (Johnson) Johnson. The father was a farmer in Sweden, dying there in 1907, as did the mother, who passed away in 1868. They had a daughter Emily who died in Sweden in 1908, in addition to Nels August. The latter attended school in Sweden, and the first money he ever earned was given him as a prize for his studious habits.

In 1882, Mr. Johnson came to the United States, believing that here he would find good opportunities for bettering his condition. His first work here was in South Bend, Ind., where he worked as a cabinetmaker for The Singer Sewing Machine Company for a year. He then came to Hampton township, renting a farm here until 1901, when he bought farming property, near Silvis. Within two years, he sold this, and bought his present home, the "Lindhult Farm." On it he has built a large modern house and substantial barns, and a feature of his place is the handsome fountain which plays on the lawn. Mr. Johnson is a general farmer, not specializing in anything, although he also does considerable carpenter work.

In 1882 Mr. Johnson married Sophia Engrall born June 8, 1852 in Sweden and their honeymoon was their trip to this country. Five years ago Mr. Johnson went to Sweden on a visit to his former home. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have had the following children: Nels Linne, born January 31, 1883; Emily Hilda, born July 3, 1884, wife of Aaron Cedarstrom; Esther, born September 29, 1888; Ellen, born July 14, 1891; William, born May 9, 1894; Roshia, born October 10, 1886, died in infancy; Paul, born January 9, 1896, died in infancy; and Myrtle Elvera, born August 3, 1902, died in infancy.

In politics, Mr. Johnson is a republican. He is a member of the Swedish Baptist church, and contributes liberally towards its support. The success that Mr. Johnson has attained, has come to him through hard, unremitting work, and constant thrift, and in all of his plans and operations he has been assisted by his most excellent wife.

JOHNSON, Storer.—Reynolds numbers among its most responsible citizens men whose lives have been spent along agricultural lines, but who are now living retired from general activity, having earned their rest by strenuous endeavor. One of these men is Storer Johnson, born in Switzerland county, Ind., May 12, 1827, a son of Ebenezer and Sarah (Albee) Johnson. The father was born in Ireland, but came to the United States in young manhood. He married in Indiana, a lady who was a native of New York state, and they settled in Switzerland county, but came to Illinois in 1846, locating in Peoria. From thence the family came to Rock Island county, and the parents died on their farm in Edgington township. They had a son, Storer, and a daughter, Ella, who married Elijah McGregor, and died in Colorado.

Storer Johnson was educated in the district schools of his native place, and when he was twenty-one years old, he came to Rock Island county, buying 160 acres of land in Edgington township, remaining here until 1882, when he sold, and retired to Reynolds. In 1848, he married Jerusha Seaver, who died in 1907, a devout member of the Baptist church, and a sweet, good woman, who is deeply mourned not only by her family, but a wide circle of friends. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are: Ella, who is the widow of Lester Mudge, lives in Rock Island; J. S., who resides in Texas; Ollie, who married Nathaniel Taylor of Reynolds; William, who died at the age of three years; Marietta, who married John Asquith of Williamsburg, Ia.; Georgia, who married Abel Seaver of Marston, Ill.; Cora, who died when nineteen years old; Eliza, who married John Walker of Conroy, Ia.; Margaret, who married August Otto of Galva, Ill., and Iva May, who married Logan Eckstrom who lives near Aledo. Mr. Johnson votes the straight democratic ticket, and takes a deep interest in local issues, although he has never desired office, preferring to exert his influence as a private citizen. He is a Mason, and enjoys his connection with this order. During the many years he has been a resident of the county, Mr. Johnson has seen numerous changes, and talks very entertainingly about them. He has contributed his part towards the general advancement shown here, and is justly regarded as one of the most representative men of Reynolds.

JOHNSON, William.—In compiling the history of an important county like that of Rock Island, it is necessary to gain a thorough knowledge of its history and gradual progress to present existing conditions. Thus it is that the recollections of those who have virtually spent their lives here, grown up with the locality, and borne a part in its development, are so valuable. One of the men who is an old resident of the county, is William Johnson, now living retired at No. 830 15½ street, Moline. He was born in West Gotland, Sweden, July 13, 1842, a son of John Erickson and Anna (Erickson) Johnson, both natives of West Gotland, Sweden. The father was a farmer who came to America in 1854, having prior to that lived on a farm in West Gotland. His death occurred five days after his arrival in the new home in Moline. While living in Sweden, he drilled each year with the militia. His widow not only brought up her eleven children, but lived to the advanced age of ninety-three years. The children were: Anna, Ellen, Lotta, Mary, Ellen (II), Andrew, John, Anders, Alexander and William.

Although but a small boy at the time the family came here, William Johnson had already attended school in Sweden, and rounded out his education in the Moline public schools. His first employment was secured in a pail and tub factory in Moline, but soon thereafter he went into John Deere's Plow factory, remaining with this concern for forty years, retiring three years ago with a pension from them for faithful service. His brothers worked in other shops in this city.

Until his enlistment, Mr. Johnson was a remarkably good workman, but ever since has been hampered by disability incurred in defending his adopted country. He enlisted January 21, 1864, in Company L, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, and discharged December 20, 1865, at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. He was in the battle of Osage, Mo., against General Price. His regiment participated in many skirmishes against the bushwhackers, and his company had the distinction of being sent under a flag of truce to order the surrender of Jeff Thompson, which took place the following day, when 1500 men were taken prisoners. His regiment reinforced General Ewing, thus preventing his capture. The regiment was ordered, near the close of the war, to Fort Dodge, Kans., to suppress Indian troubles in that vicinity, so that Mr. Johnson's term of service was a varied one, and he saw much actual fighting. He was badly ruptured in an engagement near Fort Dodge, Kans., in 1865. A brother Alexander, enlisted (first) in Captain R. H. Graham's company of cavalry, called the Independent Rangers, formed in the counties of Rock Island, Henry and Mercer, and left Moline about the first of August, 1861. They were sent to Fort Leavenworth, were armed and sent to Lexington, Mo., where they were captured with Colonel Mulligan at that place, by Price and Van Dorn. They came home, were exchanged, and Alexander Johnson re-enlisted with Colonel Graham. He was assigned to Company H, Eighth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, from which he was discharged by reason of disability, February 3, 1863, as corporal. He again enlisted in Company L, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, in April, 1864, at its organization, and served until the war ended, and for some time thereafter, being mustered out in December, 1865.

On November 19, 1875, Mr. Johnson was married at Moline to Justina Peterson, born June 16, 1855, at Hallen, Sweden. They have the following children: John William, who is a carpenter foreman; Severin, who is head clerk in the clothing store of M. Moss, of Moline; Henrietta, who married Amiel Ostlund; George Allen, who is a machinist; and Alexander, who is a student. The sons are among the leading members of the Sons of Veterans, and are all bright young men. Mr. Johnson belongs to R. H. Graham Post, G. A. R. of Moline. The First Lutheran church of Moline holds his membership. All his life, he has espoused the principles of the republican party. He owns his home at No. 830 15½ street, Moline, and has an acre and a half joining Prospect Park, one of the city's resorts on the south side.

JOHNSTON, James M.—Some very important jurisprudence is handled by the legal fraternity of Rock Island county, as the representatives of this learned profession stand high in the courts of the state. These men have been carefully trained, and are fully capable of handling the cases entrusted to them. One of the rising young legal luminaries is James M. Johnston, who is associated with Burton F. Peek, G. O. Dietz and Cyrus E. Dietz, all men of high standing in their profession. Mr. Johnston was born in Milan, Rock Island county, in 1885, a son of John C. and Sadie W. (Davis) Johnston, natives of Milan and Oquaka, Ill. The Johnston family is an old one in the county. John C. Johnston having worked for his father in the first mill ever built in Milan on Rock river. Later, he went into the milling business for himself, and is now traveling on the road, selling flour for the Western Mill & Flour Company. He owns a beautiful home, in Milan, which is the family residence. Three children were born to himself and wife: James M.; Harry M., who died in childhood; and Elizabeth May.

James M. Johnston was reared in Milan, where he attended the public schools for seven years, and then for four years went to the Rock Island public schools. The next year, he went to the Geneseo college, and then for four years studied law at the University of Illinois, being graduated from that institution in 1909. In December of that year, he was admitted to the bar. Following this, he became associated with the law firm of Peek & Dietz, and is now a member of the firm of Dietz, Dietz and Johnston, who are leading attorneys of Rock Island county.

In 1910, Mr. Johnston was elected supervisor of Black Hawk township, and held that office for two years. In 1912, he was candidate for state's attorney, and while defeated, received the support of the best people of his party, and has every reason to feel gratified at their attitude. His popularity is so great, that he ran ahead of his ticket, and the future holds many promises for him. The Presbyterian church holds his membership. In addition to belonging to two college fraternities, he also belongs to the Red Men of Milan, Masons of the same place, Knights Templar of Rock Island, the Shriners of Rockford, and the Elks of Rock Island. A young man of much more than average ability, Mr. Johnston has risen in his profession, as well as politically, and is regarded as being one of the best representatives of the high-class professional men of his part of the state.

JOHNSTON, Thomas S.—Intelligent effort directed along agricultural lines is productive of successful results as many of the most prosperous of Rock Island county's citizens have proven, during long and useful lives. One of the most enterprising farmers of this section is Thomas S. Johnston, owner of the fine farm known as the Maple Dean Farm, of 160 acres, one mile east of Reynolds. He was born in Mercer county, Ill., near Preemption, June 20, 1852, son of Wm. S. and Susanna Johnston, natives of Ireland and Kentucky, respectively. The father came to America at a very early day, and he and his wife were among the pioneers of this state. Always a farmer, the father bought land in Mercer county, where he lived until his death, thirty-five or forty years ago. His widow survived him many years, passing away in 1908. Their children were: William, who died July 15, 1910; Mary Jane, who died thirty-five years ago; Eliza, who married Robert Hicks of Mercer county; Thomas S.; Joseph S., who is deceased; Robert J., who lives in Mercer county; Rachel A. Robinson, who is deceased; Laura, who married Lawson McIntire; John Francis, who is deceased.

Thomas S. Johnston was educated in the public schools of his native county, and worked on the homestead until he was twenty-three years old. He then went on a farm given him by his father, and spent thirty years upon it, but in 1910, he moved to his present property. He improved his other farm, making many additions, and finished the residence in 1881.

On March 23, 1881, he was married by Reverend Charles of Preemption to Emma J. Smith, daughter of George and Jane (Wadsworth) Smith, farming people, natives of Ireland, both now deceased, the father dying in 1902, and the mother in 1898. They had a family as follows: Mrs. Johnston; William J.; Caroline (deceased); Esther M. of Reynolds; George A. of Oklahoma; Elvina (Mrs. Clarence C. Clark), of Preemption; Jennie K., of Preemption; Angeline A.; Sadie L. (Mrs. Albert Asquith), of Reynolds; Harriet (deceased); and Charles E. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston became the parents of children as follows: Sadie E., who was born December 23, 1883; and Leslie T., who was born July 4, 1892, the former being a graduate of the Reynolds high school, class of 1902. Mr. Johnston is a member of the Episcopal church, while Mrs. Johnston is a Methodist. In politics, Mr. Johnston is a republican, but he has never sought public office. He is a sound, reliable business man, and excellent citizen, whose interest in public matters makes him advocate good government and the securing of such improvements as will work out for the betterment of all concerned.

JOHNSTON, William Y. (deceased).—While other states have contributed towards good citizenship, Illinois has also furnished its full quota of substantial business men and honorable citizens who have spent their lives in this section trying to forward those movements which they feel will bring around business prosperity and good government. Such a man was the late William Y. Johnston, of Rock Island, who spent a long and useful life in this section, having been born near Preemption, Ill., October 22, 1848, and with the exception of three years spent in Madison, Neb., living here throughout his lifetime. In early life he was a farmer and grain and stock dealer at Preemption, later going into a store business and was successful all his life.

On April 30, 1873, Mr. Johnston was married (first) to Mary Johnston, by whom he had one son, Latimer Johnston, now a substantial citizen of Pawnee, Neb. Mrs. Johnston died May 14, 1876, and Mr. Johnston was married (second) December 3, 1879, to Miss Sarah L. Brannian, by whom he had two daughters, Elsie Belle and Elda Ruth, who live with their mother at the comfortable family residence at No. 2840 Seventh avenue, a beautiful part of the city. They are popular teachers in the public schools and prominent socially, with considerable musical talent.

On July 15, 1910, Mr. Johnston was stricken with heart failure at his home, No. 1924 Fifth avenue, and his death occurred. His attack was the result of a nervous breakdown a year previously. He was a consistent member of the Episcopal church at Preemption, which he had helped to build, but asked for a Methodist minister at the end, as he inclined towards that faith. The funeral services were so conducted and his burial took place at the Preemption cemetery. Mr. Johnston was long known as a sterling business man and one who followed a mode of life in strict accordance to those principles which he deemed to be correct. He was a kind husband and a loving father, and his many good qualities rounded out a life that was marked throughout with charity, kindness, honesty and integrity.

JORDAN, Owen, a retired citizen of Rock Island, Ill., has been a resident of this city since about the time of the close of the Civil war, in which he served. He is a native of Kings County, Ireland, born fifty miles distant from the city of Dublin, about 1846, a son of John and Kate (Goghan) Jordan. The father, a blacksmith by trade, brought his family to America and settled in Hartford, Ct., where he worked in Colt's Armory, being employed as die sinker. Both parents died in Hartford. Their children were: James, Thomas, John, Rose and Owen, all of them deceased except the last two named.

tion in the public schools and was but twelve or fourteen years of age when put to work in the armory where his father was employed, at a wage of one dollar a week. In 1861 he enlisted in the Sixty-ninth Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, but being under age, was obliged to leave the army on account of objections raised by his parents. He came to Rock Island about 1866 and worked one year in the arsenal, then entered the employ of the Rock Island Plow Company, where he worked until 1904, being promoted to the position of foreman over a gang of men in the cultivator department. Mr. Jordan is a well known and popular citizen, a Roman Catholic in religious matters and a republican in politics. He has a large number of friends in the city, where he has lived over forty years, and some twenty-five or thirty years ago purchased his present home at No. 606 Third avenue. He also owns two lots adjoining his home. He has retired from active life since 1904 and enjoys the rest and quiet he has earned by his many years of industry and activity. Mr. Jordan has never married.

JUHL, Nicolai E.—Undoubtedly a man takes pride in the fact that he is prosperous and how much satisfaction there must be when he can realize that his possessions and prominence have been honestly won through his own unassisted efforts. It is sometimes proclaimed that opportunity awaits every one who will accept it but it often requires a large amount of courage and good judgment to seize it at the right time and persistent industry to make it worth while. Among the self-made men of Rock Island may be named Nicolai Juhl, a leading contractor and builder here and a citizen who is held in universal esteem. He was born in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, March 3, 1853, and is a son of Peter and Matta (Peterson) Juhl. The parents were honest, industrious and every way worthy people, but their means were limited and when their son determined to cross the Atlantic ocean in search of better working conditions, they remained behind.

Germany is a country justly noted for the educational advantages it affords its school children and Nicolai Juhl attended classes until he had secured a fair knowledge of his books. He was twenty years of age when he left his native land and in 1873 sailed into the harbor of New York. After investigating he took the advice of older German residents and left the metropolis and worked his way as far west as Rock Island, where he has remained. He found plenty of work to do and immediately set about learning the carpenter and bricklaying trades and as a proof of his industry and steadiness, for sixteen years he was kept in the employ of one man. During this time he became a skilled carpenter and builder and was well prepared for taking contracts when he went into business for himself in 1890. Mr. Juhl has steadily advanced until he has become of great business importance here. Look where you will in the beautiful city of Rock Island and his work comes into view, solid, substantial buildings for business purposes, beautiful residences and ornate church edifices, he having made a specialty of such construction.

Mr. Juhl was married on January 14, 1877, to Miss Christina Ralfs, who came from Holstein, Germany, in 1875. They have five children: Mary, who married P. Sherer; Herman, who is deceased; Amelia, who is Mrs. Clemann; Nick M., and Otto, all of whom are well settled in life. There are six grandchildren in the family. Mr. and Mrs. Juhl are members of the German Emanuel Lutheran church of Rock Island. In his political views Mr. Juhl is a republican but his activity extends no farther than good citizenship.

JUNGE, Julius (deceased), who, for more than forty years was identified with many of the industries and enterprises which have contributed to the prosperity of Rock Island county, had been a continuous resident of Rock Island, from 1871 until his death, and was numbered with her best valued citizens. He was of Prussian birth, born March 23, 1848, a son of Joseph and Johanna (Herschel) Junge, who came to America with their children, in 1854, locating near Fort Madison, Iowa, where the father became interested in fruit raising. In his earlier life he had been a soldier in the Prussian army but his later years were ones of peaceful occupation and both he and wife lived into advanced age. Of their seven children their son, Julius, was the youngest born.

Julius Junge was six years old when the family came to the United States and settled in Iowa and he received his educational training, first in the local schools and afterward at Burlington. In the meanwhile he had perfected plans for a business career and his subsequent life has proved that he possessed self-knowledge thus early. At Jollyville, Iowa, he embarked in a general store business and for three years was postmaster of the village. In 1871 he came to Rock Island, where for some years he was accountant for a mercantile house and then went into the bottling business, which he conducted for one year, during which time he became, to some degree, associated with the brewing interests, leading to his acquisition of stock, and in 1893 he became vice president and general superintendent of the Rock Island Brewing Company, which continues to be one of the important industries of this city. Other successful enterprises not only of Rock Island but also of Moline and of Davenport owe a large measure of their success to his connection with them and these include manufacturing industries and banking, while, at one time he owned some notable racing horses.

On November 3, 1878, Mr. Junge was married to Miss Amelia M. Frice, who was born in Illinois, and they had three daughters: Olga, Frieda and Lillie. The family is one of social prominence in the Tri-Cities. Mr. Junge by nature was genial and companionable and was always interested in that class of sport that combines brain and action. Baseball pleased him, football interested him, he was an enthusiastic bowler and belonged to the Rock Island Gun Club and the Marlin Rifle Club. Politics interested him only as a means of preserving peace, law and order. Mr. Junge's death occurred May 11, 1911.

KAHLKE, Peter N., senior member of the well-known firm of Kahlke Bros., proprietors and founders of the largest and best equipped marine railways and boat yard on the upper Mississippi, was born, as was his brother and partner, John J., in Bruns Bittel, Germany, on the river Elbe which is a ship building port, May 19, 1838. He received his education in a private school, and left home when only fourteen years old, and came to the United States. For a short time, he traveled between New York and New Orleans, and then followed river boating from New Orleans to Mobile. Following this, he went to Cleveland, O., where he worked in the ship yards, completing the trade of ship carpenter and drafting, there worked on the steamers plying between Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, Chicago and Lake Superior, and also studied plans of various vessels.

During the Civil war he worked for the Confederate government, building gunboats or rams for river service. After the war he went to Boston and shipped to London, and wrote from London asking his parents if it was safe for him to come home and avoid being forced into the army as Germany was at war with France, at that time, then went from London to India and China and then to London and shipped for New Orleans.

Mr. Kahlke then, with his two brothers, William and John, built and operated the first floating dry-dock in New Orleans, employing 500 men at the dock. They paid them five dollars per day for nine hours but the workmen were not satisfied, and demanded eight dollars a day for eight hours. The matter was never settled and this branch of the business was discontinued. Then he and his brother built a steamer and went to Mexico, there one year, they sold the boat and went back to New Orleans, then came to Port Byron, Ill., where he and his brother John engaged in saw-milling for two years. In 1869, they came to Rock Island and founded their boat yard, they now being builders of steamboats and barges and river craft of every description, special attention being given to all kinds of repair work. This is the largest ship yard on the Mississippi river above St. Louis. About ten years ago, John Kahlke retired from active participation in the business of the firm, Peter N. Kahlke still continuing the business assisted by his son, Fred A.

Mr. Kahlke was married in Rock Island in 1865, to Miss Anna Schmidt of this city, daughter of August Schmidt. Mr. and Mrs. Kahlke have had children as follows: Anna, who married B. W. Pettit, lives in Seattle, Wash.; Edward L., who lives in Rock Island; Arthur C., who married Olga Rochow, lives in Seattle, Wash.; and Fred A., born in Rock Island, attended high school, and is now in his father's employ, and resides at home. The religious faith of the family is Baptist, both Mr. and Mrs. Kahlke having belonged to the Baptist church for forty years. He is a republican. Mr. Kahlke's career is a remarkable one. Beginning in a very humble capacity when a mere lad, he never faltered in his upward progress, and his success is built upon the firm foundation of sterling honesty and individual ability. His whole attention has been given to his business, so he has not taken any active part in public affairs, but he believes in improvements, and is a large taxpayer.

KAIN, Walter H.—The farming element is very strong in Rock Island county, as this is essentially an agricultural district, and large profits are collected annually from tilling the fertile soil. One of the men who has achieved success along such lines is Walter H. Kain, born in the county, October 8, 1878, a son of August and Amelia (Goldfrederick) Kain, the former born in Germany in 1851, and the latter in Cincinnati, O. August Kain came to the United States when only four years old, being brought by his parents who settled in Pennsylvania. Here August Kain grew up, and then secured employment on railroads. Following his marriage he began farming, and on coming to Bowling township, Rock Island county, bought 260 acres of land. Nine children were born to himself and wife: Hattie, Walter H., Louis, William, Harmon, Edith, Otto, Carl and Rudolph. August Kain was a republican, but no office seeker. He died in October, 1903, firm in the faith of the Lutheran church of which he was a member. During his occupancy of his farm, he made all the necessary improvements and developed a fine property.

Walter H. Kain was educated in the public schools of Bowling township, attending them until he was seventeen years old, when he began working the homestead, of which he is now manager. He is an enterprising farmer, adopting new methods, and carrying them out successfully. He belongs to the order of Red Men, No. 77 of Milan. Reared in the Lutheran church he inclines toward that denomination. In national issues, he votes the republican ticket, but in local affairs generally supports the man he deems best fitted for the office. Although still a young man, Mr. Kain has shown his caliber, and attaches men of solidity and prominence to him as friends, being extremely popular in his neighborhood.

KAMMERMANN, Gottlieb.—The Swiss people have long been noted for their fearless loyalty and love of freedom, and when they immigrate to a new country they bring these attributes with them, thus becoming excellent citizens of their adopted land. Gottlieb Kammermann is no exception to this rule, he being justly recognized as one of the most public-spirited of the farmers of Bowling township. He was born in Switzerland, November 3, 1861, a son of John and Mary E. (Thama) Kammermann. The father died in Switzerland twenty-six years ago, and the widow and her five children came to the United States in 1887, landing at St. Louis, Mo., where she still resides.

Gottlieb Kammermann lived at St. Louis for two years, assisting his uncle, but in 1890 he came to Illinois and began farming. He worked for the Tindle family for three or four years, and then about sixteen years ago began operating for himself, buying the farm on which he now resides nine years ago. During this time he has remodeled his house, making it one of the most pleasant residences in his township. On November 15, 1890, he was married to Mary Miller, daughter of Fred and Mary Miller, natives of Germany, who came to the United States forty-three years ago. Fred Miller was a farmer who died over twenty years ago. He also worked as a carpenter and met his death while engaged in some building operations. Mrs. Kammermann died March 16, 1911. She was a most excellent lady, of sweet, Christian character, and her loss is deeply felt by her family. Mr. and Mrs. Kammermann became the parents of children as follows: Gottlieb, born April 4, 1893, had the misfortune in 1902 to lose his sight through accident; Hannah; John; Anna and Fred. In religious faith Mr. Kammermann is a Presbyterian. He is a republican, politically, but holds no public office. A sound, conservative man, he is recognized as a reliable citizen, whose name stands for solid worth.

KANE, James D.—Providing for the feeding of the public is a very important branch of industrial and commercial life, and those who know how to give substantial cooking meet with gratifying success. One of the men who has made his restaurant popular because of the quality of the food he serves is James D. Kane of Andalusia. For years he was an agriculturist, but retired from the farm five years ago. After he became thoroughly rested, his active spirit rebelled at idleness, and in 1910, he opened up his present place. He was born in Bucks county, Pa., November 1, 1856, a son of Jacob and Mattie (Duncan) Kane, the former born in Belfast, Ireland, May 3, 1832. His wife was also a native of the same city. They came to the United States the same year that James Buchanan was inaugurated its president, or in 1857. Location was made in Bucks county, Pa., and this remained the family home until 1872, when the father moved to a farm three miles west of Andalusia, Ill. Here he died January 25, 1909, while the mother passed away, October 15, 1885. James D. Kane was their only child.

James D. Kane inherited his father's farm, and operated it until his retirement, being an excellent farmer. He has proven himself a good business man as well, and his restaurant is very popular among those who appreciate palatable, wholesome eating. He was married February 1, 1881, to Fannie E. Hill, born May 6, 1859, a daughter of James and Margaret (Richards) Hill, the former of whom was born in Hertfordshire, England. Mrs. Kane has one sister, Ada, wife of Thomas Martin of Illinois City, born April 3, 1864. Mr. and Mrs. Kane have had children as follows: Edward C., born June 6, 1885, lives in Rock Island, being assistant superintendent of the steel mills; Ada M., born November 12, 1887; Howard, born May 6, 1891; B. W., born October 7, 1898; and Elna R., born September 7, 1901. A grandchild, Allen G., was born February 2, 1910. Politically, Mr. Kane is a republican. He belongs to Camp Andalusia. Modern Woodmen of America. A live, energetic man, he holds the universal respect and confidence of all with whom he is associated.

KANE, John.—Some of the most representative citizens of Rock Island county are those who have retired from the activities of farm life, to an adjacent town or village, there to round out their useful days. One of these is John Kane of Andalusia, born in Bucks County, Pa., May 3, 1856, son of John and Jennie (Duncan) Kane, natives of Ireland, where the father was born in March, 1829, and the mother in 1825. They came to America in 1849, locating in Bucks county, Pa., and there they resided until 1856, when removal was made to Davenport, Ia. For a year they remained there, and then coming to Buffalo Prairie township, they spent four years within its confines. In 1862, the father enlisted for service during the Civil War, participated in the Siege of Vicksburg, and had the misfortune to be wounded during one engagement. He was honorably discharged in 1865, and returned to Rock Island county in July of that year. His death occurred in 1900, the mother having passed away, March 28, 1894. Two of their sons, James and John Kane, now reside in Rock Island county, the former born in Bucks county, Pa., November 1, 1852.

John Kane was educated in the public schools of Rock Island county. The first school he attended was held in a log cabin, with puncheon floor, and slab seats, and the equipment was most primitive. Remembering these early conditions, during the time he was director of district No. 56, Mr. Kane effected many improvements, and was earnest in his endeavors to provide for the children advantages which were not his. The first teacher he had was Miss Sherwood of Edginton. The first money he had was earned shelling corn. Later he became a farmer and owned a farm which he developed into a high state of cultivation before his retirement.

The marriage of John Kane took place February 7, 1877, to Miss Eveline Shuck, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Chambers) Shuck. The father was born in Louisville, Ky., November 1, 1816, and the mother in Switzerland county, Ind. He died January 27, 1873, and the mother on May 6 of the same year. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Kane are: Wakley C., born November 28, 1877, died March 17, 1892; Jennie E., born November 9, 1879, married N. A. Bull; Mary J., born February 4, 1882, married Clarence Skinner of Rock Island; Amelia B., born December 27, 1884, married Jake Glaser; and Minar, born November 28, 1894, died August 5, 1900. The grandchildren of the family are: John Bull, born April 5, 1901; Eva Bull, born January 8, 1902; Ruth Bull, born in July, 1905; Allen Bull, born in October, 1907; Mary, born in December, 1909; Glen, born in October, 1910; Clarence Skinner, born August 1, 1908; Lyle Glaser, born in 1903; Lloyd Glaser, born January 10, 1905, and Marie Glaser, born March 1, 1908. Mr. Kane owns three acres of land surrounding his home in Andalusia, and is a man of large means. He has gained all he owns by individual efforts, and not only has he prospered materially, but he has won and retains the respect and esteem of all who know him.

KANE, Michael.—Farming as a business has been wonderfully developed during the past quarter of a century, so that the modern agriculturalist is now a man of independence, upon whose success or failure the prosperity of the nation depends. One of the men who have made Rock Island county so important a section in the agricultural prominence of the state is Michael Kane of Rural township. He was born at Rock Island, in December, 1858, a son of Thomas and Bridget (Farwell) Kane, both natives of Ireland. The father died December 22, 1897, but the mother survives, having attained to an advanced age. These parents came to America in 1845, landing at New York City, where they lived seven years. The father was a railroad employe, and his business brought him to Rock Island county in 1854. After coming to this section, he engaged in a dairy business for several years, but later bought land in this county, and began farming, spending the remainder of his life upon his property. There were three children in the family: Michael of Black Hawk township; Robert of Davenport, Ia., and Mary, a dressmaker of Rock Island.

Michael Kane was married June 9, 1903, to Miss May Chambers, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Eignus) Chambers, natives of Missouri and Pennsylvania, respectively. Mrs. Kane was born in December, 1876, and was the oldest in the following family: May, Samuel, Sadie and Rosa. Mr. and Mrs. Kane became the parents of children as follows: Hazel, born July 27, 1904; Marius, born October 24, 1905; Mildred, born July 23, 1909, and Marcel, born June 23, 1910. Mr. Kane was reared in the Catholic church. Politically, he is a democrat, and was elected highway commissioner in 1904, serving for two years. He owns 200 acres of valuable land, where he now lives. He is an excellent farmer, experienced business man, and public-spirited citizen, whose merits are well appreciated by those who have come into contact with him.

KARR, David P., who is now living a retired life at No. 909 Eleventh avenue, Rock Island, was for many years engaged in engineering in Illinois, and is a veteran of the great Civil war. He was born November 4, 1841, at Pittsburgh, Pa., a son of James and Elizabeth (College) Karr, the former of whom was born in France in 1818, and the latter in Virginia in 1815. James Karr came to America at the age of five years and settled at Pittsburgh, Pa., and there the father died in 1841, the mother surviving until 1869. There were two children born to Mr. and Mrs. Karr, namely: Sarah J., born in 1839, who is now deceased; and David P.

David P. Karr was educated in Maryland and in his youth learned the machinist trade, which he followed for six years and then took up engineering, being employed on the Rock Island & Peoria, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Hannibal & St. Joseph railroads. He spent nine years in this manner, and then for the following twenty-five years was engaged in stationary engineering. He lived in Rapid City, Ia., for two years, and then moved to Carbon Cliff, Ill., spent one year at Hampton, and eighteen years ago came to Rock Island. He then made a trip to Kansas, where he lived for four years, then went to Coal Valley, Ill., later to Tampico, thence to Kewanee, Sheffield and Carbon Cliff, and then returned to Rock Island. Following this he took a trip to Millard, but eventually returned to Rock Island, where he has since made his home. In May, 1864, Mr. Karr enlisted in Company I One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving under Captain Cartwright for six months and seeing some hard service. He received his discharge at Chicago, and immediately returned to Rock Island. Mr. Karr was village marshal of Sears, Ill., for a term of four years and also served for three years as special policeman at Rock Island, under Mayor Knox. He is general quartermaster of Milan Post of the G. A. R., is connected with the Methodist church, and in political matters is a republican.

On July 3, 1869, Mr. Karr was married at Rock Island to Nancy Louisa Dunaway, who was born June 16, 1853, daughter of Thomas and Mary Ann Dunaway, the former born in Virginia in 1797 and the latter in 1814 in Pennsylvania. They were married in Virginia in 1833 and moved from that state to Pennsylvania and later to Ohio. In 1866 they located at Coal Valley, Ill., where they remained two years and where the mother died, the father meeting his death on the Rock river bridge, in 1881, when struck by a train. To Mr. and Mrs. Karr there were born twelve children of whom eight now survive: Mary E., who is the wife of William Hall of Rock Island; Nettie, who is the wife of George Brinkerhoff; Anna, who is the wife of Jesse McKinley; Olive, who is the wife of David Hawes, auditor of the Modern Woodmen of America; Alice D. and Calvin R., who are residing at home; Ira, who is residing in Michigan; and Louis, who lives at Rock Island.

KARR, Ira.—The pioneers of Cordova township have finished their work of developing a wild prairie into a fruitful locality, and their efforts have results in a remarkable increase in land values. Where once land could be bought for a few dollars an acre, the farmers are holding their fertile acres, refusing fancy prices, for they recognize that Rock Island county farms are about as good an investment as can be found. One of those whose parents were among the sturdy pioneers of this district, is Ira Karr, one of the retired business men of Cordova village. He was born in Cordova, Ill., October 16, 1858, a son of Thomas and Charity (Ketcham) Karr, both born in Warren county, N. J., where they married. From there they came first to Bloomington, Ill., arriving there in 1853. For four years, Mr. Karr farmed in its vicinity, then moved to Cordova township. After a year of farming, he came to the village of Cordova, where he conducted a wagon factory, employing from fifteen to twenty-five men for many years. He was born in 1823 and died in 1905. His widow, born July 1, 1829, died in Cordova May 20, 1913.

Ira Karr grew up in Rock Island county, being educated in its schools. He lived in Cordova until he was twenty-three years old, then went to Rock Island where he was a salesman with a wholesale grocery house, thus continuing until 1900. In that year he severed his connection with it, and came to Cordova, where he now lives retired. He has dry goods interests in Brooklyn and West Liberty, Iowa, and is a director of the Rock Island State Bank. Mr. Karr has never married. In political faith, he is an independent, preferring to vote for the man rather than bind himself down to any party. For years he has been a Mason, belonging to Cordova Blue Lodge; Rock Island Chapter and Commandery, and Davenport Mystic Shrine. During his business career, he was noted for his sterling integrity, and since his retirement, he has gained many additional friends because of his interest in public affairs.

KEHOE, Myles, who for forty-five years followed the trade of carpenter on Vandruft Island, Sears, Ill., is one of the old and honored residents of that place, and is now living in quiet retirement. He is a native of Ireland, born in County Kilkenny, in November, 1823, a son of Michael and Mary (Mooney) Kehoe, both of whom were born on the Emerald Isle. Michael Kehoe, who was a farmer in Ireland, came to America and settled in Canada, and there the balance of his life was spent. Five of the nine children of Michael and Mary Kehoe are still living.

Myles Kehoe secured his early education in the schools of Ireland, and during his boyhood days learned the trade of carpenter from an uncle. He accompanied his parents to Canada and later came to Mercer county, Ill., but after a short time removed to Rock Island county and settled in Milan, following the trade of carpenter there for forty-five years. He purchased property on what is now Vandruff Island, where he has continued to reside to the present time. Mr. Kehoe had unusual dexterity in his chosen line of labor and the large amount of work done by him gained for him a comfortable competency for his declining years, and he can now look back over a useful and well-spent life. He is a consistent member of the Roman Catholic church, his parents also having been adherents of that faith.

Mr. Kehoe was married in Ireland in 1853 to Julia Brennan, who was born in that country in 1834 daughter of Irish farming people who never came to America. She died April 18, 1908, having been the mother of eleven children, of whom seven are now living: John, of Niles, Mich.; Michael and James, living at home; Mary, the widow of Mariou Surplus, living in Idaho; Ella, the wife of Thomas Conway of Mercer county; Margaret, who married John Mack, of Iowa; Tillie, deceased, who married James Mack; and Millie, twin of Tillie, living in Mercer county, the wife of John Mack. In the family are twenty-four grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren, the latter living in Idaho.

KEIM, Frank, a dealer in fine harness, horse furnishing goods, robes, whips, blankets, saddlery hardware, specializing on first-class repairing, and owner of the largest country shop in Rock Island county, is one of the prosperous business men of Reynolds. He was born in Mercer county, Ill., May 6, 1860, a son of George and Frances (Shearer) Keim, the latter of whom was born in 1837. George Keim was a farmer in Mercer county for a number of years, but was a German by birth, coming to this country in boyhood. He is now dead but his wife survives, living on the old homestead in Mercer county. The children born to these parents were: Frank; Frederick, who died when about fifteen years old; William, who is a farmer of Charter Oak, Iowa; and Gertrude, who married Christ Butz, lives in Mercer county. Mrs. Keim has long been a consistent and active member of the Episcopal church. Until he was sixteen years old, Frank Keim attended school, but then left to learn the harnessmaking trade, and started in business for himself in 1886, since which time he has built his concern up until it has attained very large proportions. On March 10, 1887, Mr. Keim was married to Eliza C. Stanley, daughter of Richard and Hannah (Fawler) Stanley. Mrs. Keim was born September 11, 1865, and was one in the following family: George A., who lives at Boone, Iowa; John, who is deceased; Jacob S., who lives in California; Alfred; Sarah E., who is the wife of George Anitan of Missouri; Louise, who is the wife of Bert Foote, lives at Aledo, Ill.; and Mrs. Keim. The one child of Mr. and Mrs. Keim died in infancy. Both Mr. and Mrs. Keim are members of the Methodist church. He belongs to Camp No. 199, Modern Woodmen of America, of Reynolds, and is a charter member of the Court of Honor of Reynolds, his wife also belonging to the latter order. Having always done good work and carried on his business honorably, Mr. Keim's trade has stayed with him, and new customers have been added, so that his business is founded upon a firm foundation, and his success is well merited.

KELLER, Albert, one of the leading agriculturalists of Drury township, and owner of 400 acres of rich land which he is operating according to modern methods, was born October 4, 1855, in the Canton of Shuffhausen, Switzerland, being a son of Albin and Ursella (Gasser) Keller. The grandfather on the paternal side, a farmer, spent his life in Switzerland, and there his children were born, a daughter and son: Elizabeth, Mrs. Jacob Pape, who still lives in Switzerland, and Albin.

Albin Keller received a college training, and grew up in his native land. On December 11, 1852, he married and four years later, with his wife and two children, came to America via New Orleans, on the sailing vessel Winthrop, the voyage consuming sixty-three days. In January, 1856, they went to St. Louis, Mo., thence to Muscatine, Ia., where they spent a short time, then came to Rock Island county. The father then bought forty acres in Drury township but later sold this and bought 105 acres near White Oak school in the same township, and here he died January 11, 1891, aged sixty-two years. His widow survived him and is now eighty-three years old. She was born in the same canton as her husband, and was a daughter of Melcheor and Barbara (Neuncom) Gasser, her father, a farmer, who died in Switzerland when sixty-five years old. There were the following children in the family of the parents: Jacob, Melcheor and Ursula and Albert.

Albert Keller was one year old when brought to the United States, and received his educational training in Coal Bank and White Oak schools, his teachers being a Mr. Milton, Augusta Davis, Susan Ricketts and others. He left school when nineteen years old, and during the time he had been pursuing his studies he worked for his father in the summer. A natural mechanic, he is a good blacksmith, and can also build any kind of a structure as well as though he had learned the carpenter trade. On January 27, 1881, he was married to Augusta Mix, a daughter of Herman and Fredricka (Radas) Mix. Mrs. Keller was born in 1861 in Germany, and came to the United States when seventeen years old, with her sister, Bertha. They landed in Philadelphia, coming from there direct to Iowa City. Her parents died in Germany. Following his marriage, Mr. Keller began farming, and has continued in that line ever since. His buildings on his place are substantial and his premises all bespeak care and thriftiness. He belongs to the A. O.

U. W., is a democrat in political belief, and has been a school director for fifteen years. He is a member of Pine Bluff Methodist church, being one of the trustees of that organization. His wife belongs to the German Methodists. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Keller are: Minnie, Mrs. Archie Bowser, of Muscatine, Ia., issue—Carroll and Lois; Olney, of Drury township, married Georgie Foster, issue—Loren, Alma, Albert and Kenneth; Ella, at home; Reka, Mrs. Fred Friermuth, of Drury township, one daughter, Ruth; and Omer, at home. The Keller family is one well and favorably known in Rock Island county, and its representatives are numbered among the leading men of the several communities in which they are found.

KELLERSTRASS, Frederick W. (deceased), for many years a wholesale dealer in groceries and cigars at Nos. 1809 and 1811 Second avenue, Rock Island, was one of the men largely responsible for the volume of business annually transacted in this city. He was a man whose increased responsibilities added to his intelligence, and rendered him capable of handling a large amount of business profitably and capably. Mr. Kellerstrass was born in Prussia, in 1836, a son of Peter Kellerstrass. The father married his sister-in-law, Helen, after the death of his first wife, the mother of Frederick W. He was a silk weaver in a small way, owning his own plant.

Until he was eighteen years old, Frederick W. remained in his native land, attending school and learning the saddlery trade. At that time, however, he came to the United States, and for a time worked in a tannery, but finally located at Princeville, Ill., where he bought a grocery store, in partnership with Peter Fries, whom he had met in Pennsylvania. They later moved their business to Henry, Ill., and conducted a grocery and harness shop. Still later, they went to Davenport, where they did business as grocers and manufacturers of vinegar. Moving to Rock Island, they operated a wholesale liquor store at the corner of First avenue and Eighteenth street, in the premises now occupied by Ed. Murrin, who is engaged in the same line. The firm was known as Kellerstrass & Fries, but it was dissolved sometime in the late sixties, and Mr. Kellerstrass embarked as a grocer, pork packer and grain dealer. His store was on the site of the present numbers 1809-1811-1813 Second avenue, with the pork packing establishment in the rear, and back of all, was the storehouse for the grain. This latter property fronted on First avenue. Mr. Kellerstrass handled groceries both at wholesale and retail, and did an immense business, until his death, which occurred February 22, 1887. Politically, he was a democrat, and served as alderman from the Third Ward in 1879 and 1880. The Lutheran church held his membership. He belonged to the Masons, Odd Fellows and the Volunteer Fire Department.

On March 3, 1862, Mr. Kellerstrass was married, in Rock Island, to Margaret B. Seighart-mer, daughter of Peter and Anna Margaret Seighartmer, who came to the United States in 1853, via New Orleans, on the sailing vessel Columbia. The trip took two months as they were first becalmed and then driven out of their course by storms. Mrs. Kellerstrass was about seven years old and remembers distinctly many of the incidents of the trip, and also that from New Orleans to Davenport. The father died in St. Louis, while his widow died in Rock Island, in 1895. The father was a blacksmith by trade. Mrs. Kellerstrass is a member of the Lutheran church. She and her husband had children as follows: Fred J., born in Rock Island, was educated in the public schools here, and is at home; Anna B., wife of Henry L. Becker, lives in Rock Island; Hugh R., lives in Colorado; Alfred A., now at home, a bookkeeper, was born in Rock Island; and Nellie F., who is a teacher in the public schools.

KELLEY, Frederick T.—The possession of a cultivated farm in Rock Island county is something of which any man may well be proud, for it carries with it an independence that few outside the agricultural class are able to appreciate. A farmer of today is able to command not only the confidence of the country, but its envy as well, for he is the one who controls the destiny of the nation, as he produces the food-stuffs upon which all depend. One of the prosperous men of Rock Island county who have assisted in materially improving the condition of the agriculturist in this section, is Frederick T. Kelley. Mr. Kelley was born in Buffalo Prairie township, this county, April 23, 1876, a son of Martin T. and Mariette (Carr) Kelley, the former born in Ohio on June 12, 1830, and the latter in Wisconsin on January 1, 1835. These parents came to Illinois in 1854, locating on a property known as the Carr farm, from whence they moved to Geneseo, Henry county, but after ten years a return was made to their former home. After several years they went to Andalusia, where they spent seven or eight years. Settlement was then made on the farm now owned by Frederick T. Kelley's mother and it continues the family home. The father passed away there March 24, 1905, dying firm in the faith of the Methodist church, of which he was a consistent member, and was buried in the cemetery at Illinois City, Ill. He was a republican and held the office of a school director for a number of years. There were twelve children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kelley, seven of whom survive: Roselle Kistler; Lillie Vanetta; Nancy M. Crocker; Minnie, who is of Rock Island; Jessie Hayes; Frank, whose wife's maiden name was Maud Hurst; and Frederick T., who is living on the homestead. The following are the deceased children: Martin, Vincent, Mattie, Etta and one who died in infancy.

Frederick T. Kelley was brought up on his father's farm and alternated working on it with attending the district schools. On January 16, 1900, he was married to Nellie I. Sedam, the Rev. Chas. F. Stafford officiating: She is a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Brayton) Sedam, the former born in Indiana, March 30, 1846, and the latter in Illinois, December 28, 1848. Both are now living in Illinois City. Mr. and Mrs. Kelley became the parents of two children: James Clifford, born August 27, 1907; and Frederick Wayne, born September 14, 1910. Mr. Kelley was brought up in the faith of the Methodist church. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 7488, of Illinois City. A staunch republican, he has favored that party all his life. A successful farmer, excellent business man and reliable citizen, he has made a good name for himself among his neighbors and outside associates, who recognize his many excellent qualities.

KELLY, Dennis W., a resident of Rock Island, Ill., since June, 1865, has lived retired from active life for several years and has a nice home at No. 808 Twenty-seventh street. He is a native of County Kerry, Ireland, and was born in the Parish of Killarney, November 9, 1838, son of Edmund and Catherine (Crowley) Kelly. The mother died in Ireland in 1838 and the father married as his second wife, Kate Flannery. The father was a farmer by occupation and died in 1853. By his first marriage his children were: Daniel, Julia, Edmund and Dennis W., all deceased except the last named. Dennis W. Kelly had one half-brother, Michael, who came to America, settled in Worcester, Mass., and afterward went to Australia and became wealthy there.

Dennis W. Kelly received his elementary education in his native country and also attended school for a time after coming to the United States. He came with his brother Edmund when he was fourteen years. They landed in New York and went from there to Hampden county, Mass., carrying on farming there and in Worcester county. Dennis Kelly spent 1863-65 in Connecticut and from there came to Rock Island. He was employed by the Government as a rock-boat man for two or three years and afterward spent many years in various occupations, being generally successful in life and able to retire in 1910. He is regarded as an upright, public-spirited citizen and has a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Kelly was married in July, 1860, in Holyoke, Mass., to Hannah Savin, of that city, born in County Kerry, Ireland. She was brought to America by her parents in 1848. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Kelly: Daniel, at home, is superintendent of the City Water Works, which post he has held the past few years; John, of Rock Island; Cora, at home; Edmund, Mary, Hannah and Thomas, all deceased.

KELLY, Edward.—The agricultural interests of Rock Island county are amply protected by the wisdom and experience of the progressive farmers of this region, who understand the needs and possibilities of the soil, and the profits to be gained from a proper cultivation of it.

One of these enterprising men associated with the best interests of the county, is Edward Kelly, of Edgington township. He was born on a farm in Buffalo Prairie township, February 15, 1869, being a son of John Kelly. The latter was born in County Galway, Ireland, June 24, 1838, but came to the United States, in 1854, his father, John Kelly, following later. The latter died in Rock Island county, aged forty-nine years. The older John Kelly married Bridget Flaherty in Ireland, and she passed away in this country in 1881, aged eighty-three years. They had children as follows: Barney, married Catherine Hughes in Norristown, Pa., and died in Adams county, Iowa; Michael, married Bridget O'Marra, and became a farmer, dying in Rock Island; Mary, married Peter O'Marra, and second Stephen Nevin, dying in Marshall, Tenn., and her son, John Nevin was killed during the Civil war; James, married Mary Berry, became a farmer, and died in Minnesota, in 1910; John, father of Edward; Ellen, Mrs. Henry Walker of Sioux Falls, S. D.; Ann, Mrs. James Wallace, died in Perry, Iowa; and Thomas married Nellie McGrew and died in Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1911.

John Kelly, Jr., father of Edward Kelly, was educated in Ireland in the common schools. Soon after landing in New York, he came west to Illinois, and commenced working on a farm in Rock Island county. As soon as possible, he bought 80 acres of land, located on section 25, Buffalo Prairie township, now owned by Anthony Pearson, and cultivated it for twenty years, then bought 360 acres, now the family homestead. On it he died, December 7, 1887. He had held various township offices, and took an active part in the affairs of his community. In religious faith, he was a consistent member of the Roman Catholic church of Edgington.

In 1864, Mr. Kelly married Mary Flaherty, born in Ireland, in 1842, but was brought to the United States when ten or eleven years old by her parents Edward and Hannah (Corbett) Flaherty. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly became the parents of children as follows: Michael, who died at the age of forty-four years; Margaret, who is at home; Edward; James and John, who live at home; Mary, who is Mrs. Ernest Boultinghouse of Aledo, Ill.; William, who lives at home; and Anna, who is Mrs. Vernon Tyler of Illinois City.

Edward Kelly attended the district schools in East Buffalo district, and South Edgington district, his first teacher having been Abbie Burr, and the last one Colin Nixon. Mr. Kelly was reared a farmer, working for his father until his death, when he assisted his mother in conducting the homestead. Later, he rented land in Buffalo Prairie township, and four years ago came to his present place of 144 acres. He is a capable farmer and understands every detail of his work.

On January 29, 1903, he was married by Father Macken of Rock Island, to Josephine Elliott, born in Buffalo Prairie township, January 31, 1871, daughter of Nelson G. and Mary (Caster) Elliott. Mrs. Kelly was educated in the public schools of Buffalo Prairie township, and her first teacher was also Abbie Burr. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly became the parents of one son—John Nelson, born February 21, 1911. Mr. Kelly is a staunch democrat, and belongs to St. Patrick's Catholic church. He has always been active in church work, and is a man who is held in high esteem all over the county, where he and his are so well known.

KELLY, John (deceased).—In the history of Rock Island county, no name stands forth more prominently as an exponent of all that is good and true than that of John Kelly, whose useful life, although ended, still exerts an influence in shaping the acts of his children, and the character of his neighborhood. John Kelly came of good, old Irish stock, being born in County Galway, Ireland, June 24, 1838, a son of John and Bridget (Flaherty) Kelly, both natives of Ireland. The former followed his son to Rock Island county, there passing away, aged sixty-seven years. His widow survived him until 1881, when she too died, aged eighty-three years. They had children as follows: Bartholomew, who married Catherine Hughes at Norristown, Pa., died in Adams county, Iowa; Michael, who married Bridget O'Mara, became a farmer, and died in Rock Island county; Mary, who married (first) Peter Nevin, who died at Nashville, Tenn., leaving one son, John, the latter being killed during the Civil war, and (second), Mary married Stephen O'Mara of Indiana; James, who married Mary Berry, became a farmer, and died in Minnesota in 1910; John; Ellen, who is Mrs. Henry Walker of Sioux Falls, S. D.; Ann, who was Mrs. James Wallace, died at Perry, Iowa; and Thomas, who married Nellie McGrew, died at Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1911.

John Kelly, Jr., was educated in the common schools of Ireland. Soon after landing at New York, he came further west and commenced working as a farm hand in Rock Island county. In time he was able to buy eighty acres of section 25, Buffalo Prairie township, now owned by Anthony Pearson, and farmed it for twenty years. Later he bought 300 acres in the same township, where his widow resides, the farm now comprising 280 acres of land. Here John Kelly died December 7, 1887. He had held a number of township offices, discharging the duties pertaining to them with efficiency and conscientious fidelity to duty. On November 20, 1863, John Kelly married Mary Flaherty, Father McElherne of Rock Island officiating. She was born in Ireland, in 1842, a daughter of Edward and Honora (Corbett) Flaherty, who came to the United States when Mrs. Kelly was about eleven years old, removing to Rock Island when she was twenty years old. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly became the parents of children as follows: Michael, who died at the age of forty-four years; Margaret; Edward, who married Josephine Elliott, has one son, John N.; James and John, at home; Mary, who is now Mrs. Ernest Boultinghouse of Alledo, Ill., has three children: Stuart J., John L., and Margaret O.; William, who is at home; and Anna, who is Mrs. Vernon Tyler of Illinois City, Ill., has two children: Mary L. and Vernon E. James, John and William Kelly own 240 acres in Buffalo Prairie township. Their father was a consistent member of the Roman Catholic church, and belonged to St. Patrick's parish of Edgington. He was an open-hearted, generous, charitable man, possessed of great natural shrewdness, and yet so honorable that no one could ever justly claim that he failed to deal fairly in all transactions.

KELLY, Patrick, an old and highly respected citizen of Rock Island, is now living retired at his comfortable home, after a long life of hard work and useful endeavor. For twenty years he was a valued employe of the Harper House, under landlords Harper, Dusenbury and others. He was born about 1837, on a farm in County Tyrone, Ireland, being a son of Terrence and Ann (McAsker) Kelly, both of whom passed from this life in their native land. They had ten children, the majority of whom remained in Ireland.

After receiving a common school education, Patrick Kelly, with a brother James and sister Catherine taught school for some time, the last two becoming well known educators. Mr. Kelly then farmed until his marriage to Catherine McQuade. After the birth of their first child, he realized that he needed better opportunity for advancement, so left for New York city, landing there in the early sixties. From there he went to Altoona, Pa., but after a year moved on to Rock Island. Arriving here, he was a gardener for a time, until he became connected with the Harper Hotel, and the duties there took up all of his time until he retired. He is a consistent member of the church of the Sacred Heart, having been reared a Roman Catholic. His wife died in 1904, having been the mother of the following children: Catherine, now Mrs. Charles Johnson of Rock Island; Joseph; and Agnes, now Mrs. Colspring. Mr. Kelly is an excellent example of the genial whole-souled Irishmen who have become so prominent in this country. Brilliant, quick to grasp opportunity, they have made their way to the highest of positions in every walk of life, and sustained the honor of their land and added to that of the one they adopted.

KELLY, The Rev. Joseph Sylvester, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church of Moline, Ill., is one of the beloved clergymen of his communion in Rock Island county, with residence at No. 412 Tenth street. He was born at Ottawa, Ill., April 17, 1865, son of John W. and Martha (Markle) Kelly. The father was born at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1836, and is still living, residing in Ottawa. The mother was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., in 1845. The parents were married at Ottawa, April 12, 1864, and they had six children: Joseph S.; Edward, who is a dentist at Ottawa; Mary, who keeps house for her brother, Father Kelly; Mrs. Margaret Klein of Ottawa; James and Cora who are deceased. John W. Kelly came to Ottawa when only ten months old, while his wife was eighteen years old when that city became her home. The Pottawatomies were still there, and he remembers them quite well. John Kelly was a building contractor, and in his day erected a number of public buildings and residences of Ottawa. The maternal grandparents of Father Kelly were native born Americans, their ancestors having come to these shores in 1690. His maternal grandmother lived to be ninety-five years old. Her father served in the Revolutionary war, while her husband was in the Mexican war.

Mr. S. Stansand Family

The preliminary education of Father Kelly was obtained in the Old St. Xavier school taught by the Sisters of Mercy at Ottawa, Ill. He then took a classical course at St. Vitaeurs College, Bourbonnais Grove, Kankakee county; then a philosophical course of two years in Le Grande Seminaire of Montreal, Canada, following which he studied theology at St. Mary's Seminary of Baltimore, where he obtained the degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology. On August 15, 1891, Father Kelly was ordained priest by Bishop Ryan of Alton, Ill. He then took a post graduate course at the Catholic University at Washington, D. C. His first appointment was as assistant to Rev. Wm. Murtagh at Keithsburg, Ill., where he remained for nine months. From there he went to Bloomington, Ill., as assistant to Dean Weldon. On September 8, 1894 he was appointed pastor at Gibson City, Ill. Here he remained not quite four years, when he was transferred in June, 1898, to Moline, where he has since remained. When he took charge of St. Mary's church, he had no assistant, but in 1900, the parish had grown to such an extent it was found necessary to appoint an assistant for him. Since then, the parish was divided, and the Belgian church was organized, which is now in charge of a priest and assistant. Two parishes have since been organized at East Moline so that instead of one priest in the vicinity as in 1898, there are now six. Father Kelly has accomplished much since coming here, some of his work being taken up at length elsewhere in this volume. The interior of St. Mary's Church is beautiful, the windows and paintings being exceptionally fine, and all of these decorations have been added during Father Kelly's incumbency. The parish house is also in excellent condition.

Father Kelly belongs to Leo Council, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, and has been chaplain of the order for a number of years. A scholarly man, Father Kelly is also an organizer, and good business man, and has known how to increase the material prosperity of his parish, while carefully guarding the spiritual welfare of his people.

KEMMERLING, George T., health inspector of Moline, and one of the progressive, conscientious officials of this city, has held his present appointment since May 1, 1911, during which time he has ably safeguarded the health of the community, and inaugurated some much-needed changes. Mr. Kemmerling was born in Henry county, Ill., in 1877, on the farm of his parents Perry and Fanny (Bennett) Kemmerling. The paternal grandfather, George L. Kemmerling, came to Henry county, Ill., in 1839, and here his son, Perry, was born, and resided until 1901, when the family came to Moline, still making this city their home. The children of Perry Kemmerling were: George L.; Lucy B., wife of William Pillath of Buffalo, N. Y.

George L. Kemmerling was reared on his father's farm, and given the educational advantages afforded by the district schools, and Kewanee high school. Following this, he worked as a barber at Kewanee, and Moline, and became state organizer for the Barbers' Union, and served as local secretary of the union. His political affiliations are with the republican party, although in city matters, he is very liberal, preferring the man to the party. Fraternally, Mr. Kemmerling belongs to the Improved Order of Red Men, and is chairman of the house committee of that order.

On August 3, 1899, Mr. Kemmerling was married to Etta Strachan, born in Hampton township, Rock Island county. The family residence is at No. 1517 Seventh avenue. All his life, Mr. Kemmerling has been a man of action, and has developed into a capable leader of his party. His influence was recognized in his appointment, and he has justified the confidence placed in him.

KENDALL, Richard D., who, for the past ten years has lived retired from active life, occupies his very pleasant and comfortable home at No. 904 Second avenue, Rock Island, Ill. He has been a resident of Rock Island for about fifty years and is well known and highly regarded as a useful, upright citizen. Mr. Kendall was born in Batavia, N. Y., October 21, 1834, being a son of Solomon and Penelope (Denton) Kendall, the father a native of Vermont and the mother of New York. The father, who was a carpenter by trade, came to New York in an early day and spent the remainder of his life in that State. Of his twelve children five now survive: Richard D., William, Henry, Cora and Harvey. Five of the sons enlisted from New York state for service in the Civil war.

After attending the public schools of his native place Richard D. Kendall began working with his father at the trade of carpenter, which he learned in this way. In 1855 he came to Illinois and for three years worked at his trade in Rock Island, then went to work in the saw-mill which was conducted by Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann, and became foreman for this company. He continued with them until 1901, when he was able to retire with a competence, and since then has enjoyed the rest and quiet he has so well earned. He is interested in various measures for the betterment and uplift of the public and is a member of the Methodist church. He has a wide circle of friends who appreciate his many sterling qualities and respect him as a man of probity and high principle.

Mr. Kendall was married in Rock Island January 1, 1856, to Margaret Broderick, who was born April 19, 1837, a daughter of Hiram and Anna Broderick. Mr. Broderick and wife came to Illinois at an early date and spent five years on a farm, then located in Rock Island and the father engaged in business as a contractor and builder. He engaged in building bridges for the Government on the Cumberland River, and while engaged in this work his death occurred in 1863 during the Civil war. The mother died in 1858. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Kendall, of whom four now survive, namely: William; June, wife of Fred Hodges; Marilda E., wife of John Parrott, of Moline; and Editha Penelope, at home. There are five grandchildren in the family. Mr. and Mrs. Kendall celebrated their golden wedding in 1906, an occasion of much pleasure to their family and friends. For two years in 1862-63, Mr. Kendall was employed by the Government as a carpenter on the Mississippi river.

KENNEDY, John (deceased), of an old and well-known pioneer family of Rock Island county, was a resident of the county during most of his active years, during which he was a farmer and blacksmith. He was born in Armstrong county, Pa., June 29, 1825, a son of Jacob and Sarah (Smith) Kennedy, of Armstrong county, where they died. They had several children, of whom John was the oldest. He was educated in the country schools and learned the trade of blacksmith.

In 1855 John Kennedy came to Rock Island county, where his first employment was at his trade, working for Mr. Blanchard, of Illinois City. His wife and child followed one year later. After spending about one year at Illinois City they located on the Mary Hays' farm in Drury township, and Mr. Kennedy also started a blacksmith shop, being engaged both in farming and work at his trade until his death. He was an energetic and successful man in both occupations, and won in a high degree the approval and respect of his fellows, and was representative of the best interests of his community and ready to advance any worthy cause. He was reared in the Lutheran faith and in politics was a republican. He served as assessor and postmaster of Ferdinand postoffice, the office being located in his house for a period of fifteen years. He also served as road commissioner, and in all public work was faithful to the interests of all. He was a member of the A. F. and A. M.

Mr. Kennedy was married in Pennsylvania, to Miss Mary Catherine Mechling, who was born in Armstrong county, Pa., August 11, 1831, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Irwin) Mechling. Her father was a tinner, of Kittanning, Pa., who married for his second wife, Barbara Cline, and with her came to Illinois, both dying in Rock Island county. Mrs. Kennedy attended the country schools and lived in her native county until after her marriage. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy: Rose Anna, born May 24, 1854, married James Summers, of Ottawa, Ill.; James F., born September 12, 1857, married Alice Daughenbaugh, and they live at Aledo, Ill.; Luther, born September 11, 1861, lives at Redwood Falls, Minn., and married Matilda Friesie; William, born July 5, 1865, living at Tacoma, Wash., married Eliza Shutes; Margaret, born September 11, 1868, married Samuel Boraf of Drury township; Ross M., born September 20, 1870, married Effie Ellsworth and they live in Drury township, and Leslie, born June 5, 1875. The father of these children died November 3, 1885. The mother is living with a sister.

Leslie Kennedy, youngest of the family, was educated in the country schools and learned farming. He took over the home place in 1896, at the time he attained his majority, and has since operated it. He was married February 19, 1902, to Miss Mary Boraf, daughter of Alexander and Maggie (Lindsay) Boraf, and they have three children: Grace, born January 18, 1904; Leslie Dow, born September 8, 1905; and Vaughn LeRoy, December 11, 1908. Mr. Kennedy stands well in his community, and is well known in political and fraternal circles. He is a republican in politics and fraternally belongs to the A. F. and A. M., Buffalo Prairie Lodge, No. 679; and to the M. W. A., Buffalo Prairie Camp No. 3874.

KENNEDY, Patrick (deceased).—A man who has lived according to a Christian creed, reared a fine family of children, and given of his best to his community, can die satisfied with what he has accomplished, but he leaves behind him a void it is difficult to fill. The memory of kindly traits of character, tender words of affection, and acts of charity linger. The late Patrick Kennedy, formerly a resident of No. 732 Thirtieth street, Rock Island, was one of those genial Irishmen whose friends were legion, and whose family loved him with a devoted affection. He was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, March 17, 1837, a son of John and Mary (Gunian) Kennedy, both of Ireland. These parents rounded out their well regulated lives in Ireland, where they were farming people.

Patrick Kennedy was brought up in Ireland, attending school there. In young manhood, he left his native land for England, where he learned to be a stone mason. Being dissatisfied with conditions there, he emigrated to America, which he reached in 1859. From then until the outbreak of the Civil war, he made New York City his home, but being fired with patriotism, for which the Irish are distinguished, he enlisted in the Forty-ninth New York Volunteer Infantry, and served for three years, participating in many battles, including that of the Wilderness, where he was taken sick, and sent to the hospital at Washington, D. C., where he remained until he recovered.

At the close of the war, he came to Rock Island, and began working on various buildings as a brick mason. He was associated with the construction of many of the public buildings at Rock Island and Moline, but continued to make the former city his home. He was a Mason, and he and his entire family belonged to the Catholic church. In politics, he was a republican.

On May 2, 1874, Mr. Kennedy was united in marriage at Rock Island, to Ellen McNeil, born in West Common, Ireland, in November, 1844. Her parents never left Ireland, and died there. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy became the parents of the following children: Joseph, who is of Chicago; Mae, who is residing at home; Sarah, who is the wife of Charles E. Davis, resides with Mrs. Kennedy, two children, Mary E. and Thomas; Frank and Virgil, who are at home. Mr. Kennedy died March 17, 1908, and his remains were tenderly laid to rest. Mrs. Kennedy owns the beautiful family residence, as well as other property. She is a wholesome, kind-hearted, Christian woman, devoted to her family and church, and one upon whom her neighbors feel free to call in times of sickness or other trouble.

KENNEDY, Samuel R., D. V. S., proprietor of the Moline veterinary infirmary, located at No. 417 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., was born in Andalusia township, Rock Island county, Ill., June 28, 1874, a son of Samuel and Eva (Maurer) Kennedy. Samuel Kennedy was born at Pittsburgh, Pa., in November, 1836, and is of Scotch-Irish ancestry. In 1858 he came to Rock Island and immediately secured a position as steward on a Mississippi boat and in the following spring, he joined others and they took a trail of cattle to the Atlantic coast. In the spring of 1860 he returned and on April 23, 1861, was married at Fort Armstrong to Eva Maurer, who was born at Helpenstein, Germany, in 1844. In 1849 she was brought to America by her parents who died there and in her infancy she was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Conklin and with them she came to the Arsenal at Rock Island. After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy moved on a farm owned by Mr. Conklin, in Edginton township, Rock Island county, and for three years they lived there in a log cabin. Mr. Kennedy then bought a farm of 195 acres, in Andalusia township, where they resided until 1904, when they retired to Andalusia, where they live in great comfort. Mr. Kennedy is a Democrat and served several terms in the important office of township supervisor and for seventeen years was a school director in District No. 1, Andalusia township. Four children were born to them, namely: Cyrus C., born March 2, 1863, who is shipping clerk for Henry Dart & Sons, at Rock Island; Jennie, who is the wife of Adolph Schnider of Davenport; Charles, who died in 1892; and Samuel R.

Samuel R. Kennedy attended the district schools and had one term at Milan and then assisted his father on the home farm until 1894. In that year he married and then rented his father's farm for two years, after which he bought a farm of 120 acres in Andalusia township, where he lived until September 11, 1901, when he sold his stock, rented out his farm and entered the Western veterinary college, at Kansas City, where he was graduated with his degree of D. V. S. in April, 1903. He located for practice at La Plata, Macon county, Mo., and continued there until December, 1905, when he moved to Moline and opened his present professional establishment.

Dr. Kennedy was married on August 22, 1894, to Miss Sarah E. Dunlap, who was born in Rock Island county, September 30, 1873, a daughter of Joseph and Maggie (Hobert) Dunlap, old residents of Edginton township. They have three children: Earl R., who was born January 13, 1895; Eva May, born December 26, 1896; and Albert Ralph, born September 13, 1898. Dr. Kennedy is a member of Lodge No. 133 Odd Fellows, at Moline, and of Aerie No. 1112, F. O. E., at Moline and was elected official chairman of the board of trustees of the latter and was reelected in 1912. He is president of the Degree team which is the only team the Moline Aerie has ever organized. In 1913, was elected president of the Moline Aerie which position he now holds. Dr. Kennedy stands high in his profession and also as a citizen.

KENNEDY, Walter, a well known Irish-American citizen of Rock Island, Ill., now living retired from active life, is respected and honored as a veteran of the Civil war. He has spent the larger part of his life in Rock Island county, where his father was an early settler, and where the family had a good standing. He was born in Ireland October 19, 1834, one of the children born to William and Matilda (Brown) Kennedy, also natives of that country. The father came to the United States in 1844, and in September of that year located on Mill Creek, Bowling Green township, Rock Island county, securing land from the Government. He carried on farming there until 1882, when he located in the town of Sears. Some years later he removed to Mercer county, where the remainder of his life was spent. His five sons served in the Union army during the Civil war, and but two of them now survive, Walter, of this sketch, and his youngest brother, John, who lives in Kansas. One son, William, enlisted in Company I of the Tenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, was wounded during service and died from the effects; Thomas enlisted from Rock Island and was killed at Pleasant Hill, La.; John served in the Sixty Ninth Illinois Infantry; Walter, who served in an Iowa regiment; the fifth son, James, served also in the English army, being killed in battle.

In boyhood Walter Kennedy worked on his father's farm and attended school when he was able to do so. He worked for his father until he was nineteen years of age, when he secured a position on a steamboat on the river, following this life for several years. In 1857 he went to the West, prospecting for gold, and was there during the Mormon war and the Sioux and Cheyenne Indian disturbances. In 1860 he came east to Rock Island and soon afterward went to Muscatine county, Ia., where he was living at the time of the beginning of the Civil war. He enlisted August 16, 1862, in Company B Thirty-fifth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, under the command of Captain Johns and Col. S. G. Hill, for a period of three years, being mustered out and finally discharged at Fort Gaines, Ala., March 15, 1865. He had served faithfully and well and had participated in many important battles, including Nashville, Vicksburg and Jackson, and was never wounded or taken prisoner. He suffered sunstroke twice, however. He held the rank of corporal of his company. At the close of the war Mr. Kennedy returned to Rock Island county, which has since been his abode, with the exception of ten years, and he now owns a pleasant home and other property in the city of Rock Island. In 1882 he moved to Miner county, S. Dak., remaining there about ten years, during which time he was engaged in farming. Upon his return to Rock Island county, about 1892, he resumed farming, in which line he was fairly successful, and a few years later was able to retire from the farm and purchase a home in the city, where he is surrounded by many comforts. He is a prominent member of John Buford Post G. A. R., No. 243, in politics has always been a republican, and is a member of the Presbyterian church. He is recognized as a public-spirited citizen and a useful member of his community.

Mr. Kennedy was married at Muscatine, Ia., November 29, 1860, to Harriet Othick, a native of Yorkshire, England, born in December, 1840, daughter of James and Phoebe Othick, who came to America when she was a child and settled in Virginia. In 1854 they came to Rock Island and the father conducted a boiler shop there for ten years, being a boiler-maker by trade. In 1880 they removed to Brunswick, Mo., and there spent the remainder of their lives. To Mr. Kennedy and wife six sons and four daughters were born, and seven of these children now survive, namely: Mrs. Tillie Dean, who was born in September, 1861, is now the wife of Squire Dean, and they live near Milan, Rock Island county; Minnie, who is the wife of Frank H. Call, of Washington; Harry, who lives at Dayton, Wash.; George, who lives at Fredonia, S. Dak.; Bessie, who is the wife of Len Carson, of Riverside, S. Dak.; and Annie, who is the wife of Harry Ness, lives near Beaver, S. Dak. Mr. Kennedy has five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

KENWORTHY, John Thomas.—The legal profession is ably represented in Rock Island county, which can boast many eminent attorneys who have been associated with important jurisprudence throughout the state. One of the men who has conferred distinction upon himself and his community is John Thomas Kenworthy, of Rock Island, whose offices are conveniently located at 39-41 State Bank Building. He was born at Andalusia, Rock Island county, Ill., October 24, 1846, eldest child in a family of two sons and four daughters born to Samuel and Sarah Maria (Eby) Kenworthy.

Samuel Kenworthy was a merchant and also owned and operated a flour-mill and saw-mill at Andalusia. He was an Englishman, having passed his early life in Manchester, engaged in the cloth-weaving industry. In 1836 he came to America with his brother John Thomas, after whom John Thomas Kenworthy is named. They settled at Andalusia, where later the father entered into the mercantile and milling business. Here he married, during the Christmas holidays of 1845, Sarah Maria Eby of Buffalo Prairie, third daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Eby, who came from Chautauqua county, N. Y., and Hagerstown, Md., respectively. Joseph Eby was a soldier in the War of 1812, serving along the Canadian border, taking part in the battle of Lundy's Lane and other important engagements. After the war, he established and maintained a teaming line over the old Cumberland road to Pittsburgh, whence the goods were sent over the river routes for the West. While thus engaged, he met and married Elizabeth Hershey, maternal grandmother of John Thomas Kenworthy. They removed from New York State in 1838, coming west overland by ox teams, settling in Buffalo Prairie, in 1838. Samuel Kenworthy was one of the gold seekers who went to California in 1850, via the Isthmus of Panama. After three years, he returned to Andalusia, and in 1855, built the Andalusia Flouring Mills, operating them until 1870, when this portion of the state ceasing to be a producer of wheat, they were transformed into a saw-mill plant. Here his wife, after a noble and faithful life, died in 1874. She was a devout Methodist, in which faith she lived and died. Samuel Kenworthy followed his wife to the further shore in 1887.

John Thomas Kenworthy attended the local schools until 1858, when he went to the old Douglass University of Chicago. Still later, he attended a commercial college in the same city, in 1860, and 1861. Returning to Andalusia, he assisted his father until 1864, when he enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving as clerk in the quartermaster's department in Tennessee and Mississippi. He was mustered out at Camp Frey, Chicago, in October, 1864. Returning once more to Andalusia, he attended Bryant & Stratton's Business College, in Davenport from which he was graduated. Mr. Kenworthy then began the study of law in the office of Hon. George W. Pleasants in Rock Island, remaining with him until Mr. Pleasants was elected circuit judge. Mr. Kenworthy was admitted to the bar as a practicing attorney and coming back to Andalusia, entered upon the active practice of his profession.

H. P. Stoddard

On May 19, 1870, Mr. Kenworthy was married to Clara E. Wells, second daughter of Rinnah and Hannah (Buffum) Wells. Mr. and Mrs. Wells were old settlers of Rock Island county, coming here in 1836, from Vermont and Ohio. Mrs. Wells still survives and lives in Novoda, Story county, Iowa. Mr. Wells died at Andalusia. In May, 1910, Mr. Kenworthy had the misfortune to lose his wife, and her death has caused a void in his life which only those who have experienced a like loss can appreciate. Mr. and Mrs. Kenworthy had the following children: Charlotte F., born September 7, 1872; Samuel R., born in October, 1873; an unnamed infant; Clara W., born July 7, 1885. Charlotte F. was graduated from the classical department of Wells College near Ithaca, N. Y., the former lady having been a teacher in the Rock Island schools for a number of years, being devoted to her profession. The younger sister taught school for several years, but later took a position in the offices of the head clerk of the Modern Woodmen in Rock Island, where she still remains. The son, Samuel R., was graduated from the University of Michigan, having taken the legal course in that institution. Following this, he began the practice of his profession in Rock Island, where, in the autumn of 1872, Mr. Kenworthy established himself. Father and son are in partnership, under the firm title of J. T. and S. R. Kenworthy.

In politics Mr. Kenworthy has been and is still a democrat, but has never been in any sense a politician, for he does not desire office of any kind. He has traveled considerably throughout the United States and Canada and Mexico. He has always taken interest in the affairs of the city and county, and was for twenty years secretary of the Rock Island County Old Settlers' Association, and has delivered many interesting addresses relative to the early history of this region. Always a great general reader, he is especially interested along the lines of science and philosophy. In spite of the years he has been in practice, he is yet actively engaged in his professional work, and is hale, hearty and well preserved.

KILLING, Frank Christopher.—The agriculturists of Rural township are, as a class, considerably ahead of those in some other regions, for here they have profited by natural advantages and modern methods, and brought their farms into a high state of development. One of these progressive farmers is Frank Christopher Killing, owner of 120 acres of excellent land. He was born in this township, September 8, 1861, a son of Frank and Jane (Patterson) Killing, the former born in Germany, who died in Rural township, in 1888; while the latter born in Ireland, survived him until 1908, when she, too, passed away. They were married in this township. The father came here with his parents when only twelve years old and spent his life in farming. He and his wife were the parents of children as follows: John, who is deceased; William; an unnamed infant, who is deceased; Mary, who is deceased; Frank C., and Jennie, who is the wife of C. H. Rupke of Davenport, Iowa. Frank C. Killing was reared on the family farm, attending the district schools and the Academy at Washington, Iowa. All his life he has been interested in mechanics, and is a skilled workman, having his own shop on the farm, in which he has turned out some very creditable pieces of machinery, in addition to making all his own repairs. Among these was an automobile which he worked over for two years. It was an excellent machine, and reflected credit upon his skill, but desiring patented features, Mr. Killing bought one of the latest models which he now drives. He owns a threshing outfit, including separator and engine. While he is a good farmer Mr. Killing enjoys most the time spent in his shop, which is fully equipped with all kinds of machinery.

On April 28, 1887, Frank C. Killing married Mary Byers, born in Ireland, who came to this country with a brother and sister. Mr. and Mrs. Killing are the parents of three children, namely: Jennie Patterson, Clarence Byford and William Byers, bright young people. In politics Mr. Killing is very liberal. He and his family belong to the Presbyterian church. For fifteen years he served as school director, and has worked earnestly and conscientiously to secure the best educational advantages attainable for his district. Very progressive, believing in the future of his township, alive to every current topic, Frank C. Killing is one of the best types of the modern agriculturist to be found in Rock Island county.

KILLING, William.—If more men were willing to devote the same time and attention to farming that they so willingly give to other pursuits, this country would become a world leader in every respect. Many do not appreciate the dignity and profit of agricultural labor, but those who have are now reaping the results of their wisdom. One of the well known retired farmers living at Moline, who once was active in the agricultural life of Rock Island county, is William Killing. He was born in Germany, March 1, 1830, a son of Benjamin and Amanda (Grosskamp) Killing, who were both born in Germany, where the father was a farmer, after having served three years in the German army. In 1837 the family came to the United States, landing in New Orleans, from whence they came up the Mississippi river to St. Louis, Mo., and from there went to Camanche county, now Clinton county, Ia. The voyage across the ocean consumed three months, as it was made in a sailing vessel. In Iowa the father secured a farm, and died on it. The family consisted of five children, all born in Germany, and all came to America together: Frank C., Mary and Amanda Durman, all deceased; Ben, of St. Joseph, Mo.; and William.

William Killing was seven years old when he arrived in Iowa, and he grew up on a farm. He attended the schools of Rock Island and Whiteside counties, and in 1845 located in the former county, his first employment being working on a farm for four dollars per month, in trade at Bailey & Boyle's store, which was located on the site of the present State Bank building, in Rock Island. Until he was nineteen years old, he continued this work, and then bought a piece of land in Coal Valley township, on which he built a house and put out an orchard. He later sold this place and bought a farm of 288 acres in the same township, which he still owns, and also a 160-acre farm in the same township, and at one time owned 784 acres of land in Rock Island county. In 1901, realizing that he had accomplished enough, he retired, and coming to Moline, has since made this city his home, his residence being at No. 2002 Fifteenth street.

On November 23, 1869, Mr. Killing married Caroline Sherwood, a native of New York, who died March 31, 1876, having had one child, Fannie, who married Peter Garriety, and is now deceased. Mr. Killing was again married October 11, 1894, to Mrs. Elsie R. Atkinson, daughter of David Lisle, of Allegheny City. Mrs. Killing had one son by her first marriage, Geo. D. Atkinson, of Rock Island. Mr. Killing has six grandchildren: Herbert, Thomas Warner, William Lee, John Bruce, Elsie Bell and Cora Ethel. The Congregational church holds the membership of both Mr. and Mrs. Killing. Mr. Killing is independent in politics. He is an excellent example of the early farmers of Rock Island county, who labored under many disadvantages, but accomplished much, and helped to develop their locality.

KILPATRICK, George W.—No longer does the soldier of 1861-5 march to drum taps, or charge the deadly enemy, for his work as a warrior was ended when came peace at Appomattox. The result of his years of fighting and privations, lives, however, to the never dying honor of those who made our land what it is today. Among the distinguished soldiers of Rock Island county is George W. Kilpatrick, of Reynolds. Mr. Kilpatrick was born February 17, 1844, on a farm in Muskingum county, O., near Frazeysburg, son of John and Lucinda Kilpatrick, the former born in Virginia, and the latter in Kentucky. They were married in Ohio. Mrs. Kilpatrick died when George W. was a lad, and John Kilpatrick afterward married Rebecca Miller, of Ohio. When George W. Kilpatrick was twelve years old, in April, 1856, his father and step-mother brought him and his brother Cyrus to Rock Island county. They did not remain here long, however, but went to northern Iowa, where they spent three years, then moved to Millersburg, Mercer county, Ill. After some years there, the father went back to his old home in Ohio, where both he and his second wife died.

George W. Kilpatrick attended school in Ohio and Iowa and took a year's course at Monmouth college, in Illinois. He then began teaching in the country schools of Mercer county, continuing for twenty years in both Mercer and Rock Island counties. On January 28, 1864, he enlisted as a private in Company E, Ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for a period of three years, or during the war, under Captain Kidd and Colonel Hughes. He was sent to Georgia, where he was with General Sherman on his famous march to the sea, but had the misfortune to be captured near Sandersville, Ga., November 25, 1864, and was sent to Florence prison, where for three months he suffered terribly. He was then transferred, and while being taken to Salisbury, he escaped near the Cape Fear river in company with Jacob White and Pard, of the Fourth New York Artillery. They traveled at night and hid in swamps during the day, and reached the Union lines after three days' adventure. Following this he was sent to Wilmington, N. C., and thence to Annapolis, Md., via the Atlantic ocean and Chesapeake bay. During his imprisonment he had contracted typhoid fever, but was not incapacitated until he reached Grafton, W. Va., where he had to stay in the hospital a month, and then went to Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Mo., and from there to Camp Butler, Springfield, where he was honorably discharged and mustered out of the service by order from the war department at Washington, military service no longer being required.

In referring to this important portion of his life, Mr. Kilpatrick expresses himself as follows:

"Major Beardsley, of Rock Island, escorted the recruits to Camp Butler, near Springfield, where we were drilled in the arts of war, and after being thoroughly drilled as a private soldier I was detailed on detached duty as a provost guard in Springfield, Ill." In an interesting way he tells of further experiences.

Later being ordered to the fighting line via Nashville, Tenn. Gen. W. T. Sherman required droves of beef cattle to be driven from Nashville to where his army was then located and said cattle were slaughtered for the use of the United States soldiers in the field. In order to protect the cattle from being confiscated by the Confederates it was necessary to send one hundred United States soldiers as guards. This was G. W. Kilpatrick's first experience in carrying a heavy knapsack, gun and forty rounds of ammunition. Arriving at the battlefield just a few days after the terrible battle of Resaca, Ga., he was with the army constantly until after Atlanta was surrendered to Gen. W. T. Sherman. He says: "On the campaign from Atlanta to Savannah we encountered the enemy quite frequently and captured quite a number of their men. We, as mounted infantry, being the advance guard, encountered once a brigade of Gen. Joe Wheeler's cavalry before we had time to form in line of battle. Several of the United States men were forced to surrender or die."

Returning to Mercer county he farmed for several years, then resumed teaching, and in 1890 came to Rock Island county, retiring several years since, and is now living at Reynolds.

A strong republican, he has served as town clerk and as alderman of this village, and for years he has belonged to Camp Little, G. A. R., of Reynolds. The Methodist church holds his membership.

On March 22, 1868, he was married at Milledburg, Ill., to Frances A. Hegg, daughter of Edward and Elizabeth Hegg, the latter of whom is still living, although ninety-five years old. Mr. and Mrs. Kilpatrick have had children as follows: Verner H., who died in young manhood; and Minnie, Alice, Gertrude, and Bessie, all of Rock Island. The young ladies are all extremely intelligent and are self-supporting. For three years Alice was a teacher in the public schools and both she and Bessie have been connected with the mercantile house of Young & McCombs for the last six years and now fill responsible positions as heads of departments. Gertrude is a successful teacher in the Rock Island schools. Mr. Kilpatrick is one of the sound, reliable, conservative men of Reynolds, and he has won friends wherever he has lived, and retained them because of his sterling virtue.

KING, Peter.—Veterans of the Civil war have the peculiar gratification of knowing that they have risked life and limb in defense of their flag and country, and this distinction sets them a little apart from those whose patriotism is merely a matter of choice of words. These men who know what the flag cost, and what it really means to loyal Americans, are justly proud of their record as soldiers, and thus enjoy meetings with old comrades, and participation in various military celebrations. One of the honored veterans of Rock Island county belonging to this class is Peter King, residing in his pleasant home at No. 4109 Sixth avenue, this city. He was born in Johnstown, Pa., January 18, 1833, being a son of Hon. George S. King, born in Hagerstown, Md., in 1808. When four years old George S. King was taken to Mercersburg, Pa. Here he became a schoolmate of the two younger brothers of James Buchanan, once president of the United States. When he was only twelve years old, he began working in a store in Mercersburg, and by the time he was fifteen, was its manager. Two years later, he owned it. In 1833, he moved to Johnstown, and bought from Abraham Morrison a tract of land now owned by the Gore and Williams estate and by Ellis & Dowling, and on it he started a store. He had become convinced that there was iron in the hills surrounding Johnstown in quantities to warrant the erection of a furnace, and acting upon it, he embarked upon his career in the iron business. His commercial and industrial activities brought him political prominence, and he was elected on the whig ticket, a member of the general assembly in 1855. During his term in the legislature, he used his best efforts to make Johnstown the county seat of the new county then being organized, but failed because he refused to use money to bring this about. He was one of the organizers and first directors of the First National bank, and was also interested in real estate. In 1868, he moved to Lewistown, and for a number of years was interested there in banking and realty matters, thus continuing until the death of his wife, whose maiden name had been Eliza McDowell. She had been a daughter of Charles McDowell, of Bedford, Pa., founder of the Bedford Gazette, the oldest newspaper in that part of Pennsylvania. After her death, which occurred in 1890, Mr. King returned to Johnstown, where he died, December 10, 1903, aged ninety-six years.

Peter King made his first money by riding bareback in a circus, having been stolen from home when only nine years old. He remained with the man who kidnapped him, for a number of years. Later he began working on a steamboat, and traveled up and down the Ohio river on the Minnehaha for some years. Later he was connected with other steamboats, continuing this life for ten years. In July, 1864, he enlisted as a private in Company C, Sixth Pennsylvania Volunteer Heavy Artillery, under Captain Bryslyn, and was transferred to Company A. He was mustered out at Washington, in 1865. Later in that year, he went with Captain Shaw with the intention of building a railroad from the Missouri river to California, but after five months abandoned the project. In the late fall of 1866, he came to Rock Island and began operating a dredgeboat, which he still owns, although he retired in 1908. He also owns his former residence and several lots adjoining, being in comfortable circumstances.

Mr. King was married at Rock Island, May 31, 1867, to Sarah E. Hammerly, daughter of Joseph and Eliza Hammerly, the former born in Cumberland county, Pa., in 1811, and the latter in Hagerstown, Md., in 1827. Mr. and Mrs. Hammerly came to Rock Island in 1866, and here the father died in 1870, and the mother in 1889. They were members of the Lutheran and Presbyterian churches, respectively. Mr. Hammerly was a republican. By trade he was a wagonmaker, and was employed by a Rock Island firm. In the Hammerly family the children living are as follows: Frank, who was in the battle of the Wilderness, now lives at Denmark, Ia.; Jacob, who lives at Rock Island; James, who lives in California; Julia, who is the widow of Sydney Rains; Lavina, who married William Martindale, lives at Rock Island; Delyla, who is the wife of John Roberts, lives in Nevada. Four children are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. King became the parents of seven children, five of whom survive: Edgar, who married Bertha Haubert; James, who married Jane Smith, of Moline; Mabel, who married Ernest Truxell; Charles; Arthur; and Ella May and Elliott H. who are deceased. There are four grandchildren in the family. Mrs. Sarah King died July 21, 1912, and since then Mr. King has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Mabel Truxell, at No. 600 Forty-third street, Rock Island.

KINNEY, Edmund S.—Skill is required to make land yield to its full capacity, but when this is accomplished, a good income is realized. Some of the most progressive men of Rock Island county are devoting themselves to developing small farms, and the results are eminently encouraging. One of the thrifty and substantial residents of South Rock Island is Edward L. Kinney, born in Seneca county, O., December 30, 1858, a son of Edward and Mary (Tilghert) Kinney. The father came from Ireland to America in 1822, landing in New York, from whence he went to Pennsylvania to obtain work on the Erie Canal. Later he moved to Ohio, locating on a farm, where he spent several years. In 1849, he joined the westward wave of emigration, and went to California, but after two years returned to Ohio to resume his agricultural pursuits. That state remained his home until his death on the homestead, in 1884. His wife had died April 8, 1880. Their children were: Bartholomew, deceased; Margaret of Ohio; John, deceased; James; Edward L.; Clara, of California; Katherine of Putman, O. By trade the father was a carpenter and a stone mason, but he spent the most of his time in farming. The mother's people came from Vermont, her ancestors having settled there at an early date in the history of the colonies, and were connections of some important people.

Edmund S. Kinney came to Rock Island in 1896, and bought five acres of land in South Rock Island, in 1909. He owns other property, and is in comfortable circumstances. He was married in Rock Island, November 14, 1899, to Miss Edith May Dilman, daughter of Daniel and Rachel Dilman. They were natives of Pennsylvania, who, coming west in the early fifties, located in Missouri, where they farmed, but are now deceased. Mrs. Kinney has four sisters: Mrs. Mary Sexton, who lives in Rock Island; Rhoda, who lives on the homestead in Missouri; Sarah, who lives at Adair, Ia., and Lydia, who lives in Oklahoma.

Mr. and Mrs. Kinney have three children: Daniel Edmund, born August 17, 1900; Selma M., born April 9, 1902; and Mary E., born June 23, 1904. Mr. Kinney is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 309, of Rock Island. Mrs. Kinney is a member of the Royal Neighbors, Camp Mayflower, of Rock Island. In political faith, Mr. Kinney is a democrat, but his inclinations are not those to lead him toward a public life. He is a good business man, a loyal citizen, and is interested in whatever promises to prove of lasting benefit to his neighborhood.

KINNEY, Ray Washington, who is one of the leading contractors of Rock Island county in the line of general electrical work, was born in Charlotte, Mich., Eaton county, in 1880, a son of John and Melissa (Beal) Kinney, the father a native of Vermont and the mother of Michigan. The mother died when Ray W. was still young, he being the youngest of eight children.

The father and other children live in Eaton county, Charlotte, Mich.

Ray W. Kinney attended the common and high schools of Michigan until he was fifteen years old, then started to learn the electrical business in that state. Later he worked at his trade of electrician at various points, locating in Rock Island in 1909 and has made this city his permanent home, his business address being No. 420 Seventeenth street. He is an expert in his line and has taken contracts on his own account since 1910 and has successfully completed them. Mr. Kinney has established himself in the esteem of those who have had dealings with him and stands well in business circles as a man of integrity and reliability. In politics he is a socialist. He is a member of the Order of the Moose, the Red Men, the Knights of Pythias, and is much interested in the work of these various orders.

In 1909 Mr. Kinney married Miss Rose Weaver, a native of Michigan, and one child has blessed their union, Angie M. Mrs. Kinney is a daughter of John and Mary Weaver. Mr. and Mrs. Kinney have won many personal friends since they came to Rock Island.

KIPP, John J., proprietor of a store at Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, Rock Island, Ill., has spent all his life in Rock Island county and is a member of one of its old and highly respected families. He was born in Moline, February 10, 1874, a son of Joseph and Frederica Kipp, the father deceased and the mother living on Third street, Moline. They were parents of fourteen children.

John J. Kipp was reared and educated in Moline, attending the First Ward school until he was fourteen years of age, when he went to work. He was employed for a time in the Deere Works, then worked for twelve years in a saddlery and harness shop. In 1907 he established a small grocery in part of his residence and has added to his stock, and now deals in high grade staple and fancy groceries, notions and gents' furnishings, and keeps a substation of the post-office and is erecting a new store building which he expects to occupy soon as a dry goods and notion store. He is a self-made man, having started with but little capital and achieving a very fair degree of success. Since September 19, 1906, he has been employed as a filer in the arsenal.

Mr. Kipp was married in December, 1895, to Miss Annie Mason, of Moline, daughter of John J. and Mary (Wahe) Mason, born in that city December 4, 1875. In childhood she attended the Irving school in that city. Two children have been born of this union: John F. and Myrtle C. Mr. Kipp and wife are members of the German Lutheran church and he is affiliated with the A. F. & A. M. and the M. W. A. In politics he is a republican. The Kipp family and the Mason family are both of German descent. Mr. and Mrs. Kipp have occupied their present residence a number of years and have many friends in their neighborhood.

Sarah E. Stoddard

KISTLER, Daniel P.—Ownership of Rock Island county land implies comfortable circumstances, for the soil here is so fertile, and its value has increased so materially, that profit is to be had whether the proprietor operates the property himself, or rents it to others. One of the leading farmers of Buffalo Prairie township, owner of 206 acres of land, has one of the most valuable properties in this part of the county. His modern house, commodious barns and substantial outbuildings are all kept in excellent condition, and show that the owner takes a pride in them. Mr. Kistler was born on the home place of his family in this same township, October 12, 1843, a son of John and Martha (Sloane) Kistler, both born in Westmoreland county, Pa., where they were married. By trade the father was a shoemaker, and came to Illinois in 1831, being one of the first settlers of Rock Island county, and hauled his first load of lumber from Copperas Creek. At first he entered eighty acres, to which he added until he owned 700 acres, 260 acres of which lay in Mercer county. A well educated man, his ability was soon recognized, and he was sent to represent his district in the state assembly, and he also served as county judge, elected on the democratic ticket, he being a staunch adherent of that party. Fraternally, he was a Mason. The death of this distinguished man occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. F. Platt, of Reynolds, in 1880, when he was seventy-seven years old. In his death, the county lost one of its statesmen and makers of early history, and his family an ever kind and indulgent father. The mother passed away in 1876, aged sixty-seven years, firm in the faith of the Presbyterian church. The children born to these excellent parents were: Mary, who is Mrs. William Drury of Texas; Malissa J., who was Mrs. John Bonry, died in Mercer county, Ill.; William H., who married Josephine G. Gordon, lives in Buffalo Prairie township; Elizabeth M., who was Mrs. James F. Platt, died at Harlam, Ia.; Daniel P.; John S., who married Rose Kelley of southern Illinois; David J., who is of Teko, Wash.; James S., who is of La Crosse, Wis.; and Louis Cass, who died at Wichita, Kas.

Daniel P. Kistler attended the district schools and one term at Cordova high school. He began his life work as a farm boy, gradually working his way up, first for his father, and thus continuing until twenty-seven years old. He then began on his present farm, building his own house, and putting in other improvements which now make it so desirable. On February 8, 1877, Daniel P. Kistler was married to Mary A. Vanata, daughter of James and Elizabeth Vanatta. She died in March, 1909, a devoted wife and mother, and a gracious lady of lovely character. During life she was a consistent member of the Eastern Star. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kistler were: J. Everet, on February 1, 1878, on the old Kistler farm, married Tillie Mander, issue,—Boyd, Ruby and DeLos; J. Leonard, on March 30, 1880, married Catherine Marquis, and they reside at Delhi, Minn., no issue; Arthur Philip, on July 23, 1883; Florence

Mary, on January 5, 1891, was married October 18, 1909, to Carl Seastrand, and they live on the Kistler farm; and Clarence D., on June 9, 1893, married Margaret Fuhr, and they reside in Buffalo Prairie township. Daniel F. Kistler is a democrat, and served as highway commissioner of Buffalo Prairie township. He belongs to Buffalo Prairie Lodge No. 679, A. F. & A. M. All his life he has been a man of steady, industrious, thrifty habits, and the results are shown in his present prosperity, and the high regard in which he is held by his associates.

KISTLER, William Henry.—The real benefactor of humanity is the man who spends his life providing foodstuffs for his generation, by tilling the soil. If more of the present generation would be content to do as did those of the one before, and spend their days in agricultural pursuits, the "high cost of living" would be a thing of the past. One of the men who helped very materially to advance the agricultural supremacy of Rock Island county, is William Henry Kistler, now living retired at Buffalo Prairie. He was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., September 1, 1838, a son of John and Martha (Sloan) Kistler. The father was born in a Dutch settlement in Pennsylvania, as was his wife. He learned to be a shoemaker, and continued to work at his trade until he came to Rock Island county. At that time he located in Buffalo Prairie township, buying eighty acres of land in 1841, and added to his holdings, until at one time he owned 300 acres. His death occurred in 1880, his wife having passed away in 1875. They had eight children: Mary, who is the wife of William Drury; Melissa, who was the wife of John Boney; William Henry; Elizabeth, who was the wife of James Platt, is deceased; Daniel P., who is a farmer of Buffalo Prairie township; John S.; David and James, both of whom are engaged in a grain business in the state of Washington; and Cass, who is deceased.

William Henry Kistler was reared on his father's farm, where he was taught farming, and sent to the district schools. Attending the latter until eighteen years old, he then left to devote all his attention to farming, working for his father until he was twenty-six years old. At that time, having married, he bought eighty acres of land, and gave his time to the cultivation of his property. At different times, he bought more land until he owned 250 acres. On December 24, 1864, William Henry Kistler was married to Josephine Gorton, born in Macomb county, Mich., September 26, 1843, a daughter of George and Julia (Woods) Gorton. George Gorton and wife had children as follows: Arisbe, who died in infancy; Arisbe (second), who is deceased; James, who is of Chicago, Ill.; George E., who is deceased; Cornelia, who is of Detroit, Mich.; Stewart, who is of Luzerne, Mich.; Josephine, who is Mrs. Kistler; Thomas S. (first and second), both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Kistler have had children as follows: Dell, who is the widow of Judge Harney, formerly of Montana, issue.—Ethel, Manville, and Eugene; Kate, who is the wife of Levi Mahew, retired, living in Mercer county, issue,—Irene, Maud (deceased), Frank, William, Dell and Ruth; George, who is a farmer of Buffalo Prairie township, married Ella Elliott, issue,—Carroll, Merle, Iva and Josephine; John, who is a farmer of Buffalo Prairie township, married Mary Potter, issue,—Iris; Merton, who is a farmer in Mercer county, married Sarah Shirkey, who died, and he married (second) Bertha Droll, has one child by first marriage,—Lysle; Charles, who is on the old home place, married Mary Droll, issue,—Glenn and William; Bessie, who is the wife of Louis Heissman, a farmer of Drury township, issue,—Grace; and William E., who is a farmer of Colorado, married Bertha Epperly, issue,—Elmo, Harry, Bernice, Ralph and Clifford. William Henry Kistler is a Mason, a member of the Eastern Star, and has held all the offices of the Masonic lodge of Buffalo Prairie. Politically a democrat, he has held the office of supervisor, was on the school board for twenty-three years, and he has held all the offices within the gift of his township, and has probably done more than anyone else to promote its advancement. His sons are all fine men who belong to the Masonic order, and the father is very proud of them and what they have accomplished. Both he and his wife propose making Rock Island county their home during the remainder of their lives, and are justly numbered among the most representative people of this locality.

KITTILSEN, Col. Edward, who proved his efficiency as an officer in the United States volunteer army during the Spanish-American war, is well known to his fellow citizens of Rock Island county, Ill., as a reliable and prosperous business man and as a dependable and courageous county official. During the long period in which he served Rock Island county in the office of sheriff, his previous reputation for personal courage and devotion to principle, law and order, was still further established and he is justly numbered with the representative men of this section.

Colonel Kittilsen was born at Moline, Ill., July 19, 1854, and is a son of Andrew and Frederika (Johnson) Kittilsen, his people belonging to those sturdy kingdoms, Norway and Sweden. Edward attended school at Moline and then secured a commercial training in a Rock Island business college, after which he filled a clerical position in a grocery house, following which he learned the molder's trade and subsequently embarked, on his own account, in the ice business. In 1880 he was appointed a member of the police force at Moline, in 1883 becoming chief of police, an office he held without interruption, for twenty-three years, this long period terminating in his resignation in order to assume the duties of sheriff of Rock Island county, to which he had been elected in 1906, and to which he no doubt would have been elected in 1898 had he not put ambition aside in order to pursue what he believed the path of duty. Since 1875 he has been a member of the Illinois state militia, continuing to serve, with one deserved promotion following each other until 1893, when he was commissioned lieutenant-colonel of the Sixth Regiment, I. N. G. For ten years he held that rank and then became colonel of this regiment, his commission dating August 13, 1903. He accompanied the Sixth Regiment to Springfield, Ill., on April 28, 1898, having been mustered into the United States volunteer service on April 11 preceding, and from Springfield, with other regiments, departed for Camp Alger, near Washington, D. C. On July 5, 1898, the regiment went to Charleston, S. C., and on the 10th embarked on transports for Cuba, the seat of war. In the service that followed, the Sixth Regiment acquitted itself well and when the war closed it embarked for the United States from Porto Rico and after reaching home was honorably mustered out of the United States service, November 25, 1898.

Colonel Kittilsen was married at Moline, Ill., September 17, 1884, to Miss Corailla Stewart, a native of Canada, and they have had five children: Myrtle L., Arthur E., William W., John A. and Helen Shiloh. Mrs. Kittilsen is a member of the Baptist church and in this faith the children have been reared. Politically Colonel Kittilsen is a staunch republican, while fraternally he is identified with the Masons, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Select Knights of America and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a man of military bearing and his personality is such that while it invites friendship, never fails to command respect.

KLAUSON, A. Fred, has built up an excellent business at Moline during the last ten or a dozen years, in the line of mason and concrete contract work. He has followed the trade of a mason all his active life, and since taking contracts on his own account has worked on some of the larger buildings at Moline and East Moline, having had a varied line of experience, so that he is fully qualified to conduct his business along lines that make for success. The high quality of his work speaks well for his standard of excellence, and is an invaluable advertisement. He is a man of strict integrity and probity in all his dealings and stands well in business circles. He was born in Sweden, April 20, 1864. His mother died in 1903, aged eighty-three years, and his father, who survives, still lives in Sweden, being now considerably over eighty years of age. A. Fred Klauson received his education in the public schools of his native country, and then learned the trade of a mason, which he followed for a short time there. He came to Moline in 1888, where he has since resided, having worked some time for Deere & Company and for other concerns, until in 1901 he decided to embark in business for himself. Since then he has proven his sagacity and good management. He is well known in various circles and looked upon as a useful citizen. The Free Swedish Church, of which he has been treasurer since 1909, holds his membership, and in politics he is a republican on general questions, although in local affairs he prefers to give his support to the men and measures he thinks are most beneficial for the people at large, so he votes independent of party affiliations in such cases.

On December 12, 1888, A. Fred Klauson married Charlotta Aberg, who was born in Sweden and came to Moline in 1887. Her mother survives and resides in Sweden. Children as follows have been born of this union: Beda, Ellen, Signe, Fred, Carl, Hazel, Reuben, and Frances, all bright young people and a credit to their parents.

KLAWONN, Otto R.—In reviewing the farmers of Rural township, the writer is struck by the preponderance of German-born citizens, and realizes that it is because they come from that country that this locality enjoys so distinctive a reputation for agricultural supremacy. Germans are taught to work hard and long and to save thriftily from their earnings, and such methods must work out for ultimate good wherever they are employed. One of the prosperous farmers of this section is Otto R. Klawonn, owner of the Hannah O'Brien place consisting of 160 acres of rich land. Otto R. Klawonn has improved this greatly, and raises upon it corn, wheat and oats, and carries on a dairy business, handling thirty-five cows, selling his butter at Moline. He was born in Germany, May 30, 1866, a son of Wilhelm and Mary (Blum) Klawonn. The boyhood and early manhood of Otto R. Klawonn were spent in Germany, where he attended school, and learned the machinist trade. In 1890 he visited London and Paris, returning to Berlin. A year later he married and accompanied by his wife came to America, sailing April 1, 1892, on the ship Moreva under Captain Wenkler, and upon their arrival were well received by the New York officials and treated like citizens of the United States. His wife bore the maiden name of Theresa Bastick, and they have four children: Rudolph, Herbert, Willia and Clara.

After reaching Rock Island county, Mr. Klawonn worked as machinist for seven years. In 1899 he engaged in farming, thus continuing ever since, and as he has never been afraid to labor hard and earnestly for the end he had in view, he has succeeded. In politics he is a republican and has been a school director and district clerk. A public-spirited man, Otto R. Klawonn was the organizer of the movement which laid out and made the new road which passes his property. This is one that adds materially to the value of Rural township farms, and facilitates travel through it. The people of the township are very ready to give him full credit for this improvement. He is a Lutheran in religious faith. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Live, energetic, always ready to take advantage of opportunities offered, Mr. Klawonn has rapidly forged to the front ranks of agriculturalists of his section, and is universally respected.

KLEBE, Emil A.—It is recognized that only humane men, possessed of more than average ability and an unusual degree of charity of judgment should be placed over those who are unfortunate enough to become wards of the government. In the selection of Emil A. Klebe as assistant superintendent of the Rock Island county infirmary, those in authority showed excellent judgment and an appreciation of their responsibilities towards these charges. Mr. Klebe is a son of the county, having been born in Hampton township, in 1885, and is one of the reliable young men of this section. He is a son of August and Kate (Hustetter) Klebe, the former born in Germany, was brought to this country by his parents when only ten years old. Location was made in Hampton township, where the family farmed and here the father still resides. The mother died in 1902, having borne her husband the following children: Ernest, who resides in Nebraska; Fred, who resides at Barstow; May, who resides at Moline, is the wife of Claude De Crum; Maggie, who is the wife of George Thompson, of Little Rock, Ark.; William, who is in a saw-mill business at Hampton; August, who is a coachman at Rock Island; Emil A.; Esther, who is a cashier living at Rock Island; and Albert, who died at the age of eighteen years.

Emil A. Klebe attended Oak Ridge School in Hampton township, but had but limited educational advantages owing to the need of his services on the farm. After leaving his father, he worked in the plow factory, and then in the creamery at Barstow. In 1910, he was appointed assistant superintendent of the county infirmary, and has discharged his duties so satisfactorily that there is no doubt but that he will be retained as long as he is willing to stay.

On June 7, 1911, Emil A. Klebe was united in marriage with Nettie Kraph of Coal Valley. Mr. Klebe is liberal in his politics, not attaching himself to any particular party. Fraternally, he is a member of the Eagles. Intelligent, quick to adopt methods he believes will work out for the general good of his charges, sympathetic with them, Mr. Klebe is pre-eminently fitted for his work, and faithful in the discharge of his responsibilities.

KLEINAU, Henry Andrew.—Rock Island county is peculiarly adapted to general farming and stock raising, and the more progressive agriculturists of this section of the state recognize this fact, and have devoted their energies to developing the possibilities along these lines. One of the successful farmers of Hampton township, is Henry Andrew Kleinau, born on the farm he now owns, December 18, 1864, a son of Emanuel and Elizabeth (Denhardt) Kleinau. Both were natives of Prussia-Germany. In 1860, they came to the United States, and settling in Hampton township, bought 60 acres of land. Here the father died in 1897, while his widow survived him until December, 1904. The family of this excellent couple was as follows: Dora, who died in 1879, the victim of an assassin; Frank, of Carbon Cliff, Ill.; Henry Andrew; and Emanuel, of Iowa.

When Henry Andrew Kleinau was twenty-five years old, he began working for the Arzillo Company at Carbon Cliff, Ill., remaining there for nine years, as a moulder. He then bought the homestead, and since then has been doing general farming and poultry raising. He rents forty acres in addition to his farm, and specializes, raising a good grade of horses and hogs. His premises show that he is a good manager and understands his work thoroughly. In politics, he is a democrat, and served for three years as school director. In religious faith, he is a German Lutheran, and is interested in the good work of the church. Mr. Kleinau has never married. He is an industrious, thrifty young man and an excellent farmer, who is very popular in his neighborhood.

KLEIST, Louis.—Drury township boasts as fine farmers as can be found in all of Rock Island county, and among them is Louis Kleist, owner of 120 acres of good land on section 18, on which he carries on general farming, specializing on corn culture. He also raises a few horses, some cattle and hogs. The farm is known as the Hillside Farm, and is beautifully located, the house being on the side of the bluff, and in front of it stretches the level bottom land, so well suited for agricultural purposes. This property is the old homestead of Mr. Kleist's family. He was born in the township, December 30, 1859, a son of Christian and Maria Kleist. These parents were born in Germany, where they were married, and lived until four children were born to them, when they came to the United States. Their children were: Charley; Wilhelmina; Augusta, who is deceased; Fredricka; Louis; Daniel; Emma, who is deceased; Willie, who is deceased, and Emma (11).

Louis Kleist was brought up in Drury township, and attended the district schools until he was fifteen years old. His father dying then, he had to commence working on the farm. The homestead at this time consisted of 53 acres, which Mr. Kleist later bought, and then added to it until he attained his present holdings, and in April, 1813, Mrs. Kleist bought 40 acres on section 18, Drury township. Beginning as he did with nothing, Mr. Kleist deserves much credit for what he has accomplished, and can be proud of the fact that he is a self-made man.

On January 3, 1885, he married Anna Mewes, born in Muscatine, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Kleist have five children: Carl, who was born April 27, 1885; William, who was born October 4, 1887; Edward, who was born May 16, 1890; Mabel, who was born May 13, 1894, and Esther, who was born February 28, 1898, all of whom are at home.

Louis Kleist is a member of the Methodist church and generously gives towards its support. In politics, he has always been a republican. Few men have worked harder than Mr. Kleist to become prosperous, and he stands high in his community.

KLINCK, William J., manager of the Illinois Theater in Rock Island, is a man of long experience in this line and has greatly added to the success of the enterprise with which he is at present identified. He has spent his entire life in the vicinity of Rock Island, having resided in all of the tri-cities, and has been connected with various lines of business activity. He is an enterprising and ambitious young man, enthusiastic over any project in which he is interested, and spares no effort to attain success. He was born in Davenport, Iowa, January 20, 1882, a son of John and Fredericka Klinck. His parents were born in Germany and came to the United States in 1870 and direct to Davenport, Iowa.

William J. Klinck was educated in the common and high schools and at a business college in Davenport. As a mere boy he helped in his father's grocery store when not in school, and there gained business experience. His father dealt in a general line of goods, such as hardware, flour and feed, groceries, dry goods, and other commodities. After leaving school he began driving a grocery wagon for P. J. Paulsen, later worked in a similar capacity for John Shuett for a year and a half, and then entered the employ of the LeClaire Stone Company. He subsequently spent six months as office man for the Abel Lime & Cement Company, owned by Henry Bremer & Son, and the cooper shop, owned by the same firm, and resigned that position to become messenger for the Farmers & Mechanics Savings Bank. Three years later he was promoted to the position of teller in the same bank and continued in this capacity until his health failed. He then bought an interest in the real estate business of Jacob Nabstedt, which he later sold to C. W. Peaice, to enter the employment of Mr. Kindt in the Burtis Opera House and Kimbell Hotel until the hotel closed for repairs. When the Davenport Hotel opened, he went over there and stayed with this firm for three and one-half years in connection with the theater business. For the past ten years he has been successfully engaged in this line, and in 1911 became manager of the Burtis Opera House, and on August 28 of the same year, he was given the management of the Illinois Theater, in Rock Island, and since then has held this responsible position. This theater is devoted to the highest class of attractions playing only the best on the road, booking through James Wingfield in Chicago, and Ed Giroux, New York.

Mr. Klinck is prominent in Masonic circles, where he is very well known, being affiliated with the following branches: Davenport Lodge No. 37; Zaraphoth Lodge No. 4, Consistory; Coeur De Leon Council of Kodush, No. 4; St. John's Chapter of Rose Croix, No. 4; Adon-iram Lodge of Perfection, No. 4, Knights Templar; Davenport Chapter, No. 16; Kaava Temple, Mystic Shrine. He is also affiliated with Davenport Lodge No. 298, B. P. O. E., and belongs to the Davenport Commercial Club and Rock Island Commercial Club. He resides at 2016 Third avenue, Sweeney Flats, with his mother. He is unmarried.

KLINE, George P.—The Williams-White Company has in its employ some of the most responsible and skilled workmen in their several lines, to be found in the country. They are supervised by competent men who know how to handle any condition that may arise, and turn out an excellent product. One of these is George P. Kline, foreman of the machine shop of this concern. Mr. Kline was born at Rockville, Parke county, Ind., March 28, 1866, a son of Fernando C. and Emily E. (Baker) Kline, the former born in Winchester county, Va., January 3, 1832, and the latter at Brazil, Ind., in 1842. The father was a printer, who went to Indianapolis, but later moved to Rockville, Ind., where he was editor of the republican newspaper there. Eventually he went into the postal service, moving to Cass county, Ind., in 1872. Returning to Rockville, he re-entered the newspaper business, but in 1900 went to Winamac, Ind., where he lives retired. During the Civil war he gave the country his services as a soldier.

George P. Kline was educated in the public schools of Logansport, Ind. His first work after leaving school was clerking in a book store at Logansport, but he soon entered a machine shop owned by T. C. Barnes, and spent two years there. Following this, he entered the employ of Knowlton and Dolane of Logansport, remaining with them from 1883 to 1885. In the latter year he returned to his first employer for twelve months. In 1886 he went to Chicago to be with the Ajax Forge Works, but after three years entered the employ of the Illinois Steel Company, and was with that corporation for two years. For the following three years he was with Crane & Company, but in 1894 went with the Auditorium Hotel Company, remaining with that concern until 1897. In the latter year he was employed by the agents of the Rookery building as engineer. He went to Lexington, Ill., in 1898, to operate a shop of his own, but within a year moved to Pontiac to be chief engineer of the electric light plant of the town. For more than a year he remained there, then came to Rock Island to enter the round-house of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. After a year he became connected with the Williams-White Company as machinist, but in 1907 his ability was recognized by his promotion to his present responsible position.

Mr. Kline was married at Logansport, Ind., July 29, 1886, to Phoebe A. Clovis, born in Pennsylvania, October 15, 1866, daughter of Solomon S. and Anne Clovis. The mother died when Mrs. Kline was very young. The family on both sides came of German extraction, and lived in the eastern states. Mr. and Mrs. Kline became the parents of children as follows: Emmett, who died in Chicago when three weeks old; Lawrence L., who was born in Chicago March 19, 1889, is a teamster and lives at home; Lebron A., who was born in Chicago, March 5, 1891, is a machinist and lives at home; and Ferdinand C., who was born in Chicago January 8, 1897, is also at home. Mr. Kline owns his home surrounded by four acres on Eleventh street and Thirty-third avenue. This is in what is known as Glenview Addition to Moline. He also owns five shares in the Masonic Temple of Chicago. Mr. Kline has long been a Mason, belonging to Pleiades Lodge No. 478 A. F. & A. M. of Chicago. In national matters he is a republican, but when local issues are at stake he prefers to vote for the man best suited for the office. A conscientious man, Mr. Kline has proven his ability and steadfastness of character during his many years of useful activity and enjoys the full confidence of his employers.

KNOX, Curtis B., who for the past forty years has been employed by the United States Government as a guard, is one of the old and honored residents of Rock Island county, and has taken part in the general development of this section of the country since pioneer times. He was born July 20, 1844, at Rock Island, at the corner of what was then Rock River and Madison streets, the present site of B. F. Knox's undertaking establishment. At that time from the present location of Mueller's lumber yard to Water street, was covered with water from the Mississippi. Mr. Knox's father, Charles B. Knox, the son of Massachusetts farming people, was born in that state, and was reared near Blandford, Mass. He learned the cabinetmaking trade at Hartford, Conn., and April 1, 1841, came to Rock Island, via the Great Lakes, and up the Mississippi from St. Louis by steamboat. When he first came to Rock Island he worked hard to get a start, accepting whatever work was offered him until he was able to bring his parents to this part of the country. His father was a very economical man, and would often tell how during the first year here he managed to get along on ten cents; whenever he wanted anything he worked or bartered, rather than paid cash for it. He also learned the trade of undertaker, an occupation which he taught to all of his four sons: Edwin B., Curtis B., Samuel P. and Benjamin Franklin, the last-named being engaged in that business in Rock Island. He died at the age of seventy-three years in 1893, and his wife, who was born at Westfield, Mass., survived him two years and was seventy-two years old at the time of her death.

Curtis B. Knox first attended the little brick school-house in Spencer Square, Rock Island, and his youth was spent on his father's farm, on which a co-worker and warm personal friend of Mr. Knox was the late Ransom Cable, who later became president of the Rock Island Railroad. After being in business with his father for some time he learned the trade of broom-maker, from the bottom up, or from the time the broom corn was planted until the broom became a finished article. As a lad he was very self-reliant, being perfectly able to take care of himself, and willing to fight "at the drop of a hat," and it was only natural that a youth who had made a trip alone to Massachusetts when he was thirteen years old, should enlist in the Union army during the Civil war. Prior to this, however, he had attended school for a short time, after having returned from Massachusetts in 1858, and it was on the farm of Hiram Cable, twenty-five miles from Davenport, a 700-acre tract, that he learned the trade of broommaking. In 1865, after returning from the war, he became an assistant surveyor for the government, for which he also did some teaming, and put in a wall at the Moline Water Power, but during the last forty years he has served as a government guard. Ever since his father died he has been noble grand and chairman of the board of trustees of Rock Island Lodge No. 18, Odd Fellows, and he also belongs to Encampment No. 12, in which he is past chief patriarch, and he is past captain of Uniform Rank, No. 8. He has always been a republican. Formerly the family were active members of the Methodist church. Mr. Knox owns his residence at No. 2311 Fourth avenue, Rock Island, and the one next door, No. 2309, the latter having been the birthplace of his daughter. He can relate many interesting events of the early days, and has seen wonderful changes take place in Rock Island during his long residence here.

On May 31, 1866, Mr. Knox was married at Coal Valley, Ill., to Martha Thompson, who was born July 1, 1832, in Meadville, Pa., and they had three children: Charles T., born in 1866; Mrs. Martha Frances Jansson, born July 30, 1870, and one who is deceased.

KNOX, Edwin B.—It is not until sorrow and desolation have entered a home that the necessity arises for the presence of the undertaker and it is then that his kindness and understanding sympathy, as well as his professional skill, are appreciated. As other lines, undertaking in all its branches has made mighty strides in recent years, and those who now follow this profession must be qualified through scientific study. Edwin B. Knox, undertaker, at No. 1729 Fifth avenue, Moline, stands very high both professionally and personally, in Rock Island county.

Edwin B. Knox was born in Rock Island, Ill., October 15, 1842, a son of Charles B. and Mary (Goram) Knox, the father born at Blandford, and the mother at Southwick, Mass. In 1841 they were married at Southwick and in the following year came to Rock Island, where the rest of their lives were passed, the father of Mr. Knox dying in 1891 and the mother two years later. For forty years Charles B. Knox followed his trade of cabinet-making, at Rock Island. Six children were born to Charles B. and Mary Knox: John, Theodore, Edwin B., Curtis B., Samuel P. and Benjamin F., John and Theodore both dying in infancy.

After his school period was over, Edwin B. Knox worked at house painting for four years and then engaged in farming for six years, on the Milan road and Rock river. On March 4, 1874, he opened his undertaking establishment at Moline and has continued ever since. Mr. Knox is a veteran of the Civil war. His first enlistment was in March, 1863, in Company G, One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for three months, but he served six months before being discharged, his field of action being confined to Missouri and Tennessee. His second enlistment was in March, 1864, in Company G, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, in which he served until the close of the war. This regiment was sent from Springfield to New Orleans, and from there to Fort Morgan and took part in the siege of Spanish Fort or Mobile bay. After a week's attack and several battles the fort surrendered. The regiment was then marched 300 miles to Montgomery, Ala., from there to Demopolis and then to Camden, being at Camden, Ala., at the time of General Lee's surrender, and Mr. Knox was finally discharged at Chicago. During his first enlistment he served with the rank of first sergeant and during the second acted in the same capacity although he was at that time first duty sergeant.

In September, 1869, Mr. Knox was married at Rock Island, to Lizzie Verharen, who was of German parentage but was born in March, 1850, at East St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Knox have two children: Mrs. Amy Knox Bennett; and Luther Calvin Knox, the latter of whom is his father's assistant. Mr. Knox owns his place of business as well as several other properties and is a substantial citizen.

Mr. Knox has been active in the ranks of the republican party for many years, in 1882 served as mayor of Moline, served one term as alderman and one term as a member of the board of supervisors. It was during his term as mayor that the present system of water works and also the sewerage system were installed and Moline is indebted to Mayor Knox's energy and foresight for both these utilities. He is identified with the Odd Fellows, belonging to Moline Lodge, No. 133, of which he was noble grand at one time.

KNOX, Hon. Joseph.—Among the leading legists of former years, one who is still remembered by members of the older generation was the late Hon. Joseph Knox, who as early as 1855 was a member of the law firm of Knox & Drury, with John W. Drury, the firm name, being practically a household word in western Illinois, and the partnership being in control of the most important cases being tried in this judicial district. For many years he continued to be one of the leading practitioners before the Rock Island county bar, and his activities as a public-spirited and patriotic citizen brought him constantly into the public eye.

Joseph Knox was born in the state of Massachusetts in 1805, was there admitted to the bar in 1828, and in 1837 brought his family to Illinois. At that time, including Rock Island, the judicial district numbered many communities. Like old-time circuit-riders, the lawyers of this early day would start out on horse-back with their books and linen strapped on the saddle behind them, and would be absent from home often for weeks. Among the contemporaries of Mr. Knox were Judges Purple and Peters, L. B. Knowlton and Julius Manning, all of Peoria, and a warm personal friendship sprung up between these able lawyers which continued as long as they lived. As an advocate, Mr. Knox had no superior in the west. Of him Judge McClean of the United States supreme court once said: "He is the most powerful jury advocate I have ever had before me," a worthy tribute from a great jurist. He was a man of fine bearing, although slender and a trifle below medium height, and had blue eyes and gray hair, while his great brain was encased in a head of noble proportions. He was always neatly attired, and his ruffled shirt was a conspicuous part of his dress.

It was ever his ambition to go to Congress and had he succeeded he would have, no doubt, made a great record in that body as an orator. Prior to 1856, when John Wentworth and other Chicago democrats dominated everything in politics, Mr. Knox had but little chance, and after both Wentworth and Knox became republicans (Rock Island county remaining in the Chicago district), Mr. Knox was still unsuccessful. Isaac N. Arnold of Chicago, the author of a biography of President Lincoln, secured the nomination, and before the election a great republican meeting was held at Dixon, Mr. Knox's name being upon the list of speakers. When he was called, he arose, and said: "Isaac N. Arnold for Congress! Isaac N. Arnold for Congress! Oh, pshaw!" and left the platform.

As a host Mr. Knox was most generous, and in his domestic relations most fortunate, and his pleasant home was a center of contentment and hospitality. In 1860 he moved to Chicago, where he was made state's attorney for Cook county, and upon the expiration of his career again entered private practice. As was but natural with a lawyer of his ability, he was connected with a number of cases that attracted wide-spread attention. In 1846 he prosecuted the murderers of Col. George Davenport, and in this noted case gained distinction both as an orator and as an examiner of witnesses. In 1857 seven men were charged with the murder of Boyd Wilkinson at Iowa City, and after a trial of one month Mr. Knox succeeded in securing the acquittal of all of the defendants. In the Effie Afton case against the Rock Island Bridge Company in the United States supreme court, as well as in many other cases, he acted as leading counsel. Mr. Knox lived to an advanced age, and when seventy years of age still attended to his practice and walked to and from his office, a distance of four miles. He was a lovable man and charming companion, and his death removed one whose thoughts of country ever came before those of self.

KOCH, Anthony Simon, owner of eighty acres of fine farming land in Zuma township, and one of the prosperous young farmers of Rock Island county, was born at Geneseo, Ill., in November 20, 1875, a son of Simon and Annie (Fidler) Koch. The father was born in Bavaria, Germany, and his wife was a native of the same country. When fifteen years old Simon Koch came to the United States, locating in Hampton township, Rock Island county, where he became a cooper. During the Civil war he served as a private in Company K, One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for a period of three years. After the war he located in Henry county, Ill., and was ticket agent for the Rock Island Railroad at Geneseo, for twelve years. Following this he returned to Hampton township and farmed for some years. Twenty-seven years ago he moved to Zuma township, where he has since lived being retired, at present he and his wife making their home with their son, Anthony. They were married in Henry county, and these children were born to them: Mary, Anthony, George, Joseph, and John who died when young; Caroline, Kate, Nicholas, Henry and Isabel.

Anthony Simon Koch was reared in Henry county, Ill., and Rock Island county, and attended the public schools of the latter county. Until the spring of 1911 he worked the home farm, and then bought it, and is now conducting it for himself. His success has been marked and his property is an excellent one.

On May 24, 1911, he married Annie Vogel, born in Rapid City, where her parents are still living. Mrs. Koch died on November 9, 1912, and is buried in the Rapid City cemetery. One daughter, Amelia, was born of this marriage, on October 9, 1912. The family are all Catholics. In politics Mr. Koch is a republican, but as yet his attention has been centered upon his farm work, so he has not cared to enter public life.

KOESTER, Detlef H.—Placed beyond the necessity for active labor because of years of fruitful endeavor, many of the most substantial residents of South Rock Island are now living retired. They own pleasant homes, usually surrounded by a little land which is well cared for, and here they are rounding out their useful lives. Such a man is Detlef H. Koester, born in Holstein, Germany, May 26, 1842, a son of Claus Henry and Elizabeth (Frahm) Koester, born in 1802 and 1809, respectively. The father died in 1877, in Germany, and his wife passed away in the same land in 1883.

Detlef H. Koester came to the United States in 1868, locating first at Davenport, and worked on various farms to get a start, although by trade he is a miller, having learned it in Germany. In 1870 he began working at this trade at Rock Island and continued at it for two years. Then for three years he was employed in a Rock Island business house. For ten years he was a groceryman, establishing himself in that line in 1882, but in 1892 he sold his business as his realty interests had become so large that he required all his time to look after them. Two years ago he retired. In 1877 he built his first house and since then has erected three more, now owning seven pieces of property, and his residence is surrounded by six acres of land. A man of considerable means, all of his wealth has been accumulated through his industry and keen foresight.

Mr. Koester was married at Rock Island in 1873, to Anna Cardes, born in Hanover, Germany, March 18, 1854, who came to the United States in 1891. There were four children by this marriage: Annie who lives at South Rock Island; William, who lives at Rock Island; Mary, who lives at Rock Island; and Bertha, who lives at Davenport. Mr. Koester was married in 1901 to Mary Rasler, born in Holstein, Germany, January 19, 1843, where her father was a farmer. She is deceased. Mr. Koester belongs to the German Lutheran church of Rock Island. Although he could not speak English when he came here, he had been well educated in German. He was poor, but understood farming, having earned his first dollar in Germany, by handling cattle, and had his trade. However, his lack of funds did not stop him from making a success of his life, and his sterling principles have won for him the confidence and respect of his neighborhood.

KOHLER, Hjalmar.—Among the interesting personalities of Rock Island county, Ill., whose private citizenship and public services entitle him to extended mention in a representative work on Illinois, is Hjalmar Kohler, now living retired at his attractive residence, situated at No. 1212 Seventh avenue, Moline. He was born May 17, 1844, in the Parish of Tanum, Province of Bohus, Sweden, and is a son of Gustaf Adolf von Kohler and his wife, Julianna (Gedda) Kohler. In the 16th century the Kohler family belonged to Germany, later to the Baltic provinces, afterward to Finland, and still enterprising and progressive, reached Sweden in the latter part of the 17th century. Gustaf Adolf von Kohler was an officer in the Swedish army and was discharged by reason of disability, having had his foot crushed while in the line of duty at the building of Carlsborg Fort. He received a pension from the government on this account.

Hjalmar Kohler was educated at the Real Gymnasium, Gothenburg, Sweden. His boyhood is one pleasant to recall, a large portion of it having been spent in the country and on the shore of Skagerack, and he became an adept in the manly sports of sailing, boating, fishing, hunting, swimming, horseback riding, coasting and skating, nothing coming amiss, either on land or sea. After his education was completed he became tutor for Gustaf and Wilhelm Dyrssen, who are now Real Admirals in the Swedish Navy, and Gerhard Dyrssen, who is the present Governor of the Province of Wernland, Sweden. In April, 1868, Mr. Kohler came to the United States and went to Redwing, Minn., where he remained a brief time and then took up his residence at Menominee, Wis., where he worked in a sawmill for six months, or until December, 1868, when he reached Moline, Ill., on the eighth of that month, and with which state his interests have been identified ever since. His first employment was in a clerical capacity in a store. He rapidly made acquaintances and friendships developed and he soon became interested in politics, as an intellectual man could not fail to be, and in 1879 he was elected town collector. On April 1, 1880, he was appointed deputy county clerk, and in November, 1890, was elected county clerk and reelected in 1894. He had already studied law, in the office of his son, Axel H. Kohler. The principles advocated by the republican party met with his approval and he has given this party and its logical candidates his unqualified support. On May 1, 1885, he was appointed aid-de-camp on the staff of Governor Richard J. Oglesby, and in 1889 was reappointed to this position by Governor Fifer. In 1893 he was appointed judge advocate on the staff of General William Clendennin. At different times, Mr. Kohler made property investments and was one of the original owners of Stromsburg, Polk county, Nebr., and platted that town, subsequently selling his lots, one of which was purchased by M. M. Ford, who erected a bank building on the same. Being musical and possessing talent in that direction, he joined the Olive Male Chorus, of Moline, and in October, 1911, was elected president of this organization and reelected the following year.

Mr. Kohler was married in April, 1870, to Miss Anna C. Johnson, who was born at Nykroppa, Wernland, Sweden, and died in Illinois, March 3, 1907. Mr. Kohler's tribute to his wife was expressed in the following words: "She and my mother were the noblest women in God's creation." Two sons were born to them: Axel H. and Arvid E. Axel H. Kohler was born April 11, 1871, and after graduating from the Moline High School, read law with Browning & Entricken, attorneys at Moline, after which he entered the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he was graduated in law in 1893. He is established in practice at Moline. Arvid E. Kohler was born September 10, 1873. For two years after graduating from Moline High School he also read law in the office of Browning & Entricken, and then spent a year at Augustana College, and in 1898 was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Chicago, Ill., since which time he has been in active medical practice at Moline. Mr. Kohler owns considerable improved property at Moline and also has a 320-acre farm in Kansas. After an absence of forty-four years, Mr. Kohler visited his fatherland, Sweden.

Robert B. Taylor

KRAMER, Adam, a well known and respected citizen of Rock Island, Ill., now retired from active life, is a veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Hessen, Germany, May 1, 1844, a son of Peter and Hannah (Ansterm) Kramer, natives of Germany, the father born in 1818 and the mother in 1821. The father was a weaver by trade and brought his family to America in 1853, locating in Philadelphia, Pa., where he remained until 1869. In the last-named year he came to Rock Island and worked at his trade, becoming foreman for Black & Newbury of that city, which position he held four years. He then engaged in business on his own account and continued until twelve years ago. He died December 11, 1910, and the mother died during the same year. There were seven children in the family, of whom six now survive, namely: Fred lives at Fifteenth street and Sixth avenue, Rock Island; Louis lives at Topeka, Kan.; Henry is a bookbinder and lives in Rock Island; Lawrence conducts a grocery business at Ninth street and Sixth avenue, Rock Island; Leonard lives at Sixteenth street and Tenth avenue, Rock Island; and Adam, the immediate subject of this sketch.

After coming to America Adam Kramer lived with his parents in Philadelphia until the breaking out of the Civil war. In March, 1862, he enlisted in Company H, Seventy-third Pennsylvania Infantry, served under Colonel Hooker, who was killed at the second battle of Bull Run, and later served under Colonel Haas. The first battle in which Mr. Kramer took part was the second battle of Bull Run, and later he participated in the battle of Chancellorsville. He took part with his regiment in the great battle at Gettysburg, which lasted three days and nights, and then went to Lookout Mountain. After the third battle in which he fought he reenlisted for three years, returned to Lookout Mountain and later went with Sherman on his memorable "March to the Sea." He was mustered out at Washington, D. C., in January, 1866. He had won a good record as a soldier and after his discharge he returned to Philadelphia, remaining there until he came to Rock Island in 1869, engaging as a pressman on the Rock Island Daily Union, until his retirement in 1884. He has been a resident of Rock Island since 1866 and has a pleasant home at Ninth and Brashar streets, South Rock Island.

On April 4, 1868, at Philadelphia, Pa., Mr. Kramer was united in marriage with Anna Stoolmiller, who died in 1891. Her father, Jacob Stoolmiller, brought his family to America in her childhood and located in Philadelphia, where the mother died, the father survived until 1871. Mr. and Mrs. Kramer had ten children, of whom the following eight now survive: Lizzie, wife of Dolph Dunlap, a farmer; Charles, engaged in the printing business in Rock Island; Lina, wife of Frank Bremer, of Davenport; Kate, wife of Fred Garnet, of Sears; Daisy, wife of Arthur Roberts, of Rock Island; Elsie, wife of Albert Shaun, of Rock Island; Jessie, wife of Elmer Johnson, an employe of the M. W. A. of Rock Island; and Benjamin, a driller in the Moline plow shops. There are thirteen grandchildren in the family. Mr. Kramer was married (second) in 1895 to Anna Myer, a native of Germany, born March 27, 1845, the only child of Martine and Katherina (Krauss) Myer.

KRANZ, August, one of the progressive agriculturists of Drury township who is operating a farm according to the latest approved scientific methods, was born on the farm now his place of residence, October 28, 1869, a son of August and Sophia (Feldman) Kranz. His father, the elder August Kranz, now deceased, was one of the leading farmers of his day, and a veteran of the Civil war, who, as a member of Company H, Eleventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, rendered efficient service, and was wounded in defense of his adopted country. He was born in Brandenburg, Prussia-Germany, in 1832, and came to the United States in 1857, and to Muscatine, Iowa, in 1860. After the war was ended, he located in Rock Island county, which continued his home until his death, August 30, 1903.

The younger August Kranz attended the schools of his neighborhood, and grew up amid rural surroundings, learning how to farm, and be thrifty. Whenever he was needed at home, he assisted his father, and at other times, worked for the neighbors by the month. As he saved his money, he was able to buy his first piece of land in 1909, in Drury township, and added to it until he now owns 80 acres on section 26, which he operates in conjunction with his mother's homestead. He purposes combining the two under the name of Kranz Villa Farm, and specializing in raising Hereford cattle, in which he has had considerable experience. He also raises hogs and grain, and has been very successful in his undertakings. Being a natural machinist, he can repair any of his farm machinery that gets out of order, which often saves him considerable time and money. At present he is operating 320 acres of as fine land as can be found in Drury township.

A republican, he has served as collector of the township for two terms, and was constable for four years. The Kranz family is one of the best known in Drury township, and certainly none is more highly respected, for all the members stand for uprightness of purpose, industrious and thrifty habits, and encouragement of solid improvements that will result in the betterment of all.

KRANZ, August (deceased).—The German-Americans proved their loyalty to their adopted country from the time the first man from the Fatherland landed on these shores, and it is safe to assume that they will continue to do so as long as there are any left to come here. They are sturdy, hard-working, reliable people, and every community has cause to rejoice in their settlement in its midst. One of the men who proved the truth of these assertions was the late August Kranz, of Foster, Drury township. He was born in Brandenburg, Prussia, Germany, August 17, 1832, and came to the United States in 1857. His parents never left Germany, and are buried there. Landing in New York city, he remained in New York state until 1860, when he came west to Muscatine, Ia., where he went on a farm, but in the fall of 1861, enlisted in Company H, Eleventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and served in the Civil war until 1865. During the battle of Shiloh, he was wounded, a bullet entering his mouth, and coming out through his jaw. The scar left by this terrible wound, he carried to his death. Mr. Kranz was with General Sherman on his famous march to the sea, as well as in other important campaigns. Owing to the fact that the hospitals were crowded with the sick and dying, Mr. Kranz kept with his regiment after receiving his wound, and never lost a day, a most remarkable circumstance. His self-sacrificing spirit in giving up the place in the hospital justly his, to one less able to bear pain and discomfort, was characteristic of him.

After being mustered out, Mr. Kranz came to Rock Island county, and worked on a farm, until the fall of 1866, when he bought his first piece of land, located in Drury township. There was a small house on it, and he and his young wife, for he had just married, moved into it, and commenced housekeeping. He added to his holdings from time to time, until when he died, he owned 240 acres of land in Drury township, and was justly accounted one of the leading agriculturists of his locality.

On September 18, 1866, Mr. Kranz was married to Sophia Feldman, and they had children as follows: Edward, born January 22, 1868, living in Drury township; August, born October 28, 1869, living at home with his widowed mother; Louisa, born July 28, 1871, at home; Anna, born March 27, 1873, now Mrs. James Hayes of Drury township; William, born January 4, 1876, of Taylor Ridge; Sarah, born February 26, 1877, died September 1, 1899; Henry, born June 20, 1880, of Drury township; Minnie, born August 5, 1882, now Mrs. Nahum Spickler of Drury township; and Caroline, born November 17, 1884, now Mrs. W. P. Downey, of Drury township. Mr. Kranz died August 30, 1903, and his burial was in the Reynolds cemetery. His widow survives him and makes her home in Foster, Drury township, where she is universally respected. Mr. Kranz was a member of the Methodist church, and his loss was felt in that congregation, as it was in every circle where he was known.

KRANZ, William J.—Some of the most prosperous of Rock Island county farmers have found that it paid them better to specialize along certain lines. The agriculturists of this section are very progressive in their methods, and have a thorough understanding of all the possibilities of their business. One of these extremely modern farmers is William J. Kranz, owner of Meadow Brook Farm, which consists of 123 acres of as fine land as can be found in Bowling or any other township. He was born on a farm, January 4, 1875, a son of August and Sophia (Feltman) Kranz, the former of whom was born in Germany in 1832, and died in Drury township in 1903. August Kranz came to the United States in 1859, landing at New York city, and spent a couple of years in that metropolis, when he came to Rock Island county and located in Drury township, where he worked for different farmers. In 1861, like so many of his countrymen, he enlisted in defense of his adopted land, from Muscatine, Ia., in Crocker's brigade, Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the war. During the terrible conflict at Shiloh, he was wounded, a gunshot ball entering the lower part of his mouth, coming out through his left cheek. Another time, while getting a drink of water, he was surprised by the enemy, and although ordered to surrender, rather than be taken prisoner, he took the risk of instant death, and ran away, going so swiftly that although shot at, the ball only cut off his left eyebrow, and he escaped otherwise unhurt. At the close of his service, he returned home. Soon thereafter, he went to farming for himself in Drury township.

In 1867, he was married to Miss Sophia Feltman, born in Germany, who was brought to this country when only twelve months old, by her parents. Mrs. Kranz survives, residing on the home place, comprising forty acres, in Drury township. She is, as was her husband, a devout Methodist, and he held many offices in the church. In politics, he was a republican. Their children were: Edward; August; Louisa; Annie, who is Mrs. James Hoyer; William J.; Henry, who married Adelia White; Minnie, who became Mrs. N. E. Spickler; and Carrie, who became Mrs. Wilson.

William J. Kranz attended the public schools, beginning at the age of six, and continuing until he was nineteen years old. When only thirteen years old, he began doing the work of a man, and remained at home until he was twenty-one years old, when he worked for farmers for two years. On March 20, 1898, he was married to Emma Spickler, a daughter of Charles and Margaret Spickler. After his marriage, William J. Kranz worked by the month for two years, and then rented land for three years. He then bought 114 acres in Black Hawk township and operated it for a year, when he sold to buy eighty acres, but after five years, sold it to buy his present property. Mr. and Mrs. Kranz have had children as follows: Clifford S., born in 1898; Constance, born in 1900; Graydon, born in 1901, and one child who died in infancy. Mr. Kranz belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and the Court of Honor. He is a live, energetic young man whose success has come through individual effort, intelligently directed.

KREBS, Charles M.—Solid business connections combined with honesty of endeavor result in success, and some of the most reliable men of Rock Island are those who have worked hard all their lives, never scorning the hardest kind of labor, but giving to each task full measure of effort. One of these sterling men of toil is Charles M. Krebs, a blacksmith of Eleventh street and Fourth avenue, this city. He was born in Mahoning township, Northumberland county, Pa., May 27, 1851, belonging to one of the oldest families of his state. The father, John Henry Krebs, was born in the same county and educated in the academy at Bloomfield. For thirty-seven years he taught school in Pennsylvania and Illinois, moving to the latter state in 1852, settling in Carroll county, near Mt. Carroll. Later he moved to Davenport, where he died when within four days of seventy years of age, firm in the faith of the Methodist church, of which he was a member. He married Jane Tressler, born in Perry county, Pa., who also died at Davenport. They had nine children, of whom Charles M. is second in order of birth.

Charles M. Krebs was a year old when the family came to Illinois, and he grew up in this state, learning the trade of blacksmithing and carriage-making at Rock Island. He worked as a journeyman for four years, then going into business for himself at Davenport, where he remained two years and then went to Reynolds, Ill. For the next twenty-eight years he remained at Reynolds, but then came back to Rock Island in 1910, where he went into business at his present location. Mr. Krebs was united in marriage at Davenport, in 1878, to Miss Pauline Ehlers, born there, a daughter of Henry and Catherine Ehlers. Mrs. Krebs died September 23, 1912. Five children were born of this marriage: Frank L., who is with his father, married Rella Black; Henry, who is of Rock Island, married Ada Hudson; Oscar, who is in the United States navy on the battleship Montana; Estelle, who is Mrs. Bert Webster of Rock Island; and Stewart, who is of Davenport, Ia., married Katherine Boso. Mr. Krebs is a Mason and a Modern Woodman of America. In politics, he is a republican. He is a consistent Methodist, and active in church work as was his wife. The Krebs family are most excellent people, who have proven themselves true friends countless times to those who have need of their help and sympathy, and their many virtues are known and recognized.

KREIS, Edward B.—To successfully engage in the real estate business in a thriving section of any community, it is necessary that a man be possessed of more than ordinary business acumen, a thorough and exhaustive knowledge of realty values, ability to cope with strong competition and a mind receptive to grasp an opportunity and take advantage of it. Land values in Rock Island county, Ill., have advanced considerably in the past ten or fifteen years, and this advance, no doubt, is in a large measure due to the enterprising spirit and progressive ideas of real estate men of this part of the state, who, by judicious methods, have brought large interests to locate here, thereby increasing business interests, adding to the population and as a result bringing the value of property up to its highest point. Edward B. Kreis, one of Rock Island county's substantial business men, has interested himself in real estate, insurance and loans, for the past twenty years in Rock Island, and is one of the best informed men of his day and locality in land values. He was born April 12, 1869, in Rock Island, and is a son of Jacob and Caroline (Paxton) Kreis, farming people, the former of whom was born in Solum, County Mintz, Germany, and died December 29, 1892, aged eighty-one years. Mrs. Kreis, who still survives, was born April 7, 1836, at Bristol, Pa.

Edward B. Kreis was the only child of his parents, and he was educated in the public schools of Rock Island, later attending the High school. He then spent one year in travel, and on his return to Rock Island entered a law office, with the idea of adopting law as a profession. Eventually, however, he entered the real estate field, feeling that his abilities could be turned to better advantage, and the large success which has rewarded his efforts in this line is evidence of the wisdom of his choice. For three years Mr. Kreis was a member of Company A. Illinois National Guard. He is Past Thrice Illustrious Master of Rock Island Council No. 20; Past Worthy Patron of Rock Island Chapter No. 269, O. E. S.; a member of Vashti Shrine No. 23; Past Master of Trio Lodge No. 57, A. F. & A. M.; and member of Rock Island Chapter No. 18, R. A. M., and Rock Island Commandery No. 18, Knights Templar; and he is also connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and Lodge No. 980 of the order of Elks. Mr. Kreis was married at Milwaukee, Wis., July 4, 1895.

Mr. Kreis is one of the public-spirited citizens and progressive business men of Rock Island, and he has been prominent in forwarding many enterprises that have resulted in benefiting the community in a large degree. It is to such men that the country must look for its prosperity, and one of the surest and quickest means of furthering this prosperity is the building up and settlement of new territory and the increase in value of property already tenanted.

KRUEGER, Henry, is a representative German-American of Drury township, who is the owner of 100 acres of fine farm land at Hazel Dell. He has good buildings on this property, and occupies the substantial house which was built by his father in September, 1885. In 1904, Henry Krueger erected his barn and since that time he has erected other buildings as needed, including a garage for housing his automobile. He was born in Prussia, Germany, June 30, 1858, a son of Charles and Minnie Krueger. The father was born in Prussia, January 15, 1821, and was a farmer all his life. He served in the German army, and in March, 1848, brought his wife and eight children to the United States, leaving Bremen in the sailing vessel Leo Cannon, spending ten weeks on the ocean, and landing at New York. The Krueger family first located in Iowa, spending two years at Pine Creek, after which the father bought the farm now owned by his son Henry, in Rock Island county, where they made their permanent home. Eight acres of this land had been partially cleared, but the stumps remained, and the father, mother and children all grubbed and cleared together to complete the work. In March, 1895, the father moved to Muscatine, Ia., where he died June 12, 1902. The mother died at the home of the son Fred at Lone Tree, Ia., January 22, 1908. Both were active members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and he helped materially in building the German church of this faith at Wrayville, Ill. The father was a republican in politics. Children as follows were born in the family: Fred, of Lone Tree, Ia., married Susie Burgess; Charles, of Lone Tree, married Minnie Retz; Minnie is Mrs. Henry Sieb, of Hazel Dell, Rock Island county; Amelia is Mrs. William Becker, of Drury township; Gustie, Mrs. Jack Lemkall, died at Mercy Hospital, Davenport, Ia., March 11, 1904; Henry; Lena is Mrs. George Hill, of Mt. Pleasant, Ia.; Anna is Mrs. Daniel Barlett, of Mercer county, Ill.

Henry Krueger began his educational training in Germany and continued it after coming to the United States. For a short time he attended the Hazel Dell school, where among other teachers was one Washington Irving. Being eleven years old at the time the family emigrated, he remembers vividly the incidents of the voyage, including the storms, the whales they saw, and the four passengers who died and were buried at sea, which latter melancholy incident made a deep impression on his youthful mind. His parents were poor and he had to begin working at an early age, helping with the grubbing necessary to clear the home farm.

Henry Krueger helped his father on the home place until ten years after his marriage, which occurred February 8, 1878, when he was united with Wilhelmina Stuhr, a daughter of Joachim and Anna (Stelk) Stuhr. In 1894, Henry Krueger took charge of the home place, where he has become an active and successful farmer. He has a high standing with his neighbors as an industrious and useful man, for he takes an active interest in local affairs and events, as a republican in politics, and as a member of the Methodist Episcopal church in religious matters. Mr. Krueger donated the ground on which the church at Hazel Dell was built. He and his wife have had children as follows: Charles F., who was born December 19, 1888, was educated at the Hazel Dell public schools; Anna and Edna, who are twins; Lillian; and Oscar. Mrs. Krueger was born in Holstein, Germany, March 2, 1856, and was brought at the age of thirteen years to the United States by her parents, who sailed from Hamburg, Germany, and landed at New York City, making the trip in a steamship. They located at Davenport, Ia., where the father was a teamster, but later he became a farmer in Drury township. He died March 25, 1899, at the age of sixty years, and the mother died February 24, 1910. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and he was a republican in politics. Mrs. Krueger is their only surviving child, one son having died in Germany before they came to America.

KRUEGER, J. A. August, owner of 170 acres of land in Drury township, and eight acres in Illinois City, is one of the progressive agriculturalists of Rock Island county. His farm is known as Copperas Creek View Farm, and he is raising banner crops of corn, oats and wheat, also horses and hogs. He was born in Drury township, January 12, 1870, a son of William and Wilhelmina (Kranz) Krueger, both natives of Germany. These parents, with a son named August, came to this country, settling in Muscatine, where the little two-year old boy died. The father worked as a laborer until 1864, when he left Muscatine to come to Drury township, where he found employment as a farm hand with Jerry LeQuate. In a year's time, he rented land and began farming for himself. Until 1877, he continued to rent land, but in that year bought the farm where he resided until his death in 1902, his widow surviving him until 1904. Both are buried in Reynolds cemetery in this township. They had eleven children: August, deceased; William; Mary and Lizzie, deceased; Minnie, wife of Louis Krueger; J. A. August; Fred; Lena, deceased; Anna, died in infancy; Anna and Henry, both deceased.

J. A. August Krueger was brought up on the home farm, and attended school in the neighborhood. He remained with his father until he was twenty-two years old. When he was twenty-nine years old, he bought his present farm, and has since developed it to its present valuable condition. On February 22, 1899, he married Mary L. Danner, born in Muscatine, Ia., November 10, 1866, daughter of John S. and Margaret (Brannworth) Danner. They have had three children: Wesley August, born February 22, 1901; Paul Henry, born February 18, 1904; and Leon Danner, born April 2, 1905. Mr. Krueger belongs to the German Methodist church, to which he gives a liberal support. Since attaining his majority, he has voted the republican ticket. As a citizen and farmer, Mr. Krueger does his full duty, and is a man widely known and respected by all who are associated with him.

KRUEGER, William Frederick, who is a substantial and prosperous farmer of Rock Island county, is a member of a highly respected family of this section. He was born in Drury township, Rock Island county, Ill., September 10, 1874, a son of the late W. F. Krueger. W. F. Krueger was born in the Province of Brandenburg, Germany, August 24, 1844, and died in Drury township, Rock Island county, Ill., April 13, 1908. In 1868 he accompanied his mother and his sister, Mrs. William Pietsch, to the United States and they all came directly to Rock Island county. He was married in November, 1869, and eleven children were born to this union as follows: Helena Maria, born January 21, 1871, is Mrs. George Mayhew, of Reynolds, Ill.; Karl Frederick William, born October 29, 1872, lives in Drury township; William Frederic August, born September 10, 1874, lives in Drury township; Caroline Frederick Wilhelmine, born May 9, 1876, is Mrs. William Krueger; Lydia Marie, born November 8, 1877, is Mrs. Ed Platt, of Buffalo Prairie; Ludwig Frederick Karl, born June 26, 1879, lives in Drury township; George Frederick Christian, born April 16, 1881; Wilhelmine Augusta, born January 2, 1883, is Mrs. O. White-side, of Moline; Mary Frederika, born October 4, 1884, died in August of that year; Emma Pauline, born March 28, 1888, lives at home; and Christian Edward, born February 16, 1890, lives at Illinois City. The mother of the above family still survives and is a faithful member of the German Methodist church.

After marriage the late W. F. Krueger bought 120 acres of land on section 35, Drury township, on which there were some improvements, to which he greatly added, and about five months before his death, bought eighty additional acres. He was a most estimable man, careful and industrious and was highly esteemed in the community and in his church.

William Frederick Krueger attended the township schools and worked with his father on the home farm until he was twenty-one years of age and then worked for neighboring farmers until his marriage, after which he was a clerk in a store at Illinois City for one year but returned then to farming and ever since has operated 120 acres of his father's estate. Mr. Krueger was married to Miss Nellie Fuerst, a daughter of Jacob and Mary Jane (Mitchell) Fuerst of Drury township, and six children have been born to them: Hazel Mary, February 10, 1900; Jessie Manola, January 9, 1902; Floyd Raymond, August 18, 1904; Walter Glen, August 3, 1906; Maynard Lawrence, December 6, 1908; and Lois Gertrude, April 30, 1911. They attend the German Methodist church. Mr. Krueger is a republican in politics and fraternally is identified with the M. W. A.

George Christian Krueger, son of the late William Krueger, assisted his father while attending school and afterward worked as a farmer until his marriage, after which he rented a farm and since his father's death in 1908, has operated his mother's farm. He was married to Miss Rose Johnson, a daughter of Frank and Eda Johnson, the former of whom was born in Indiana and the latter in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Krueger have two children: Flavel Max, born March 9, 1910, and a babe, born July 5, 1912. The family belongs to the German Methodist church. In politics he is a republican and at present is serving in the office of school director. Like his brother, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America.

LACHNER, Bernard Joseph, M. D., one of the leading medical practitioners of Rock Island, Ill., who has built up a large practice since coming to this city in 1907, was born in Baker City (now Baker), Ore., November 23, 1877, and is a son of Joseph M. and Walburga (Anzin-ger) Lachner, natives of Munich, Germany, where the former was born in 1833 and the latter in 1839. The parents of Dr. Lachner came to America in 1860, settling in Jefferson City, Mo., from whence the father enlisted for service during the Civil war in 1861, and served throughout that struggle under General Lyons. After the close of hostilities he returned to his home and removed his family to Canyon City, Ore., where he remained seven years and then located in Baker City, continuing to reside there until his death, which occurred in 1905. His widow, who survives him, still makes her home there. They were the parents of eight children, as follows: William J., residing at Baker, where he has held the position of postmaster since the town took its present name; Catherine, who is deceased; Walburga, who married John O'Connor, of Baker, Ore.; Mary, who met her death by drowning at the age of four years; Bernard Joseph; Caroline, who is the wife of Timothy F. Mullen, a Chicago attorney; Barbara, who died at the age of seventeen years; and Francis, who died when two years old.

Bernard Joseph Lachner was educated in the schools of Baker, Ore., and after graduating from the high school there spent one year in St. Mary's College at Oakland, Cal. He then took a four year course in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and during the eighteen months following served as an interne at St. Agnes' Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa., and on December 1, 1907 came to Rock Island, where he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession, in addition to being examiner for several large life insurance companies and benefit societies. He is a member of the State, County and National medical societies, and of the Elks, the Knights of Columbus, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Court of Honor, the Western Catholic Union and the Royal Neighbors, his political views are those of the republican party and his religion that of the Catholic Church, he being an attendant of St. Joseph's parish.

On June 1, 1910, Dr. Lachner was married by Archbishop Ryan, in Philadelphia, Pa., to Ann Elizabeth Kelley, of Philadelphia, Pa.

LAGE, Nicholas H.—The German-Americans of the United States form a considerable portion of the population of almost every community and their thrifty habits and willingness to work have aided materially in the advancement of the localities in which they have settled. One of the old residents of Rock Island, who belongs to this desirable class of citizens is Nicholas H. Lage, now living retired, owns his home at No. 540 Twenty-first street, this city. He was born in Germany, February 15, 1829, being a son of Amos M. and Anna (Gertsche) Lage. The father was an overseer of a large estate in Germany, but came to America in 1867 with his wife and a son and daughter, to join three sons, including Nicholas, who had already made the trip in 1857. Arriving in Rock Island, these parents worked at gardening for Mr. Dodd for a quarter of a century. Here the mother died, aged eighty-two years, the father surviving until 1892, when he too passed away. They were devout members of the German Lutheran church. Their children were: Amos, who died in 1912; Nicholas H.; Lizzie, now Mrs. Peter Veasey of Grand Island, Neb.; Hans, who died in Rock Island in 1886; and Joachim, of Moline, who married Louisa Went.

Nicholas H. Lage attended school until he was sixteen years old, and followed farming for a living. After having given his country the obligatory military service, he embarked in 1857, from Hamburg for New Orleans, and after ten weeks on the water, arrived safely. From that city he came north to Davenport, where he found employment as a farm laborer. Later he came to Rock Island, engaging with the gas works for fifteen years. He also worked on the government canal, and for twenty-two years was a lumber marker for the Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann Lumber Company. Having by this time rounded out a long and useful career, he retired in order to give his attention to his sick wife. Before her illness, she was active in the work of the Lutheran church, of which she was a member. Mr. Lage has never recovered from her loss, mourning her faithfully and tenderly, and her memory is among one of his dearest possessions. She died November 15, 1897, at the age of eighty-six years.

LANGBEHN, Peter.—Moline is a city of homes and without doubt has its full quota of competent housewives, but, nevertheless there is no family that does not relish frequently the dainties prepared in a first class bakery, such as Langbehn's bakery, which is conducted at Nos. 516-518 Fifteenth street, Moline. As bakers, confectioners and dealers in fancy goods, this house has built up a fine reputation and has extensive patronage. Its proprietor, Peter Langbehn, was born in Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, in 1849, and is a son of Hans Langbehn, and wife, who lived and died in Germany. They had a family of thirteen children, Peter being the only one to come to America.

All German children are given a fair education under the law and afterward the youths are expected to serve the Fatherland in the army. After his school days were over, Peter Langbehn learned the baking trade and when nineteen years of age entered the German army and served out his allotted term of three years, participating in the Franco-German War in 1870-71. It was in 1873 that he came to the United States and in 1875 he reached Moline, Ill., and was employed for the next five years with different bakers. In 1880 he embarked in a bakery business for himself and has been very successful, beginning in a small way but now owning his own building, which was erected in 1897, where he resides and where his business is also conducted. His wholesale trade is very heavy, his shipments being sent all over Rock Island county, while his retail trade is probably the largest, in his line, in the city. Two wagons to deliver goods are constantly in use and twelve people are given employment all the year round.

Mr. Langbehn was married (first) in 1879, to Miss Mary Krohning, who at death in 1898, left three sons: Henry, Peter and Frank. He was married (second) to Mrs. Anna Quade, who died in 1908. He is a member and liberal supporter of the German Lutheran church. In politics he is a liberal and fraternally belongs to the Masons. Mr. Langbehn owns an automobile and frequently makes use of the same in delivering goods. He is one of the representative business men of the city.

LARKIN, James E., a veteran of the U. S. Army and a well-known public official of Rock Island county, has been a resident of the city of Rock Island for many years and was formerly engaged in merchandising here, but has now retired from business life. He is a native of Troy, N. Y., born June 8, 1849, to John and Mary (Corcoran) Larkin, both of whom came to America from County Galway, Ireland. The father, a horse-shoer by trade, left his native country as a young man and for many years lived at Troy, where he worked at this occupation until his death in 1854. His widow afterward came to Rock Island and until her death in November, 1886, lived with her son, James E., who is the only survivor of three sons and one daughter. The father, one son and the daughter, died in one day, in 1854, from cholera.

James E. Larkin received his education in the public schools of his native city. In January, 1866, he enlisted in the United States Army, from Albany, N. Y., becoming a member of Company E, Sixth United States Infantry. He served three years, although he never participated in any fighting, and was mustered out of service at Fort Cobb, Okla., after which he returned to Troy and learned the trade of stove mounting, which he followed there about four years, and in 1873 came to Rock Island and followed his trade for several years here. In 1887 he engaged in the grocery trade, and conducted a retail business for ten years. Prior to this, in 1884, he became constable, and served four years, being the choice of the republican, democratic and people's tickets, and was then re-elected to the office, in which he served three years longer. In 1885 he was appointed deputy sheriff under Sheriff John D. Reticker, served one term and was reappointed to the office by Sheriff Sharp Silvis, served one year and then engaged in the mercantile business, as before mentioned. He is now serving his second term as assistant supervisor, having been elected the first time in 1908. He is one of the best-known men in Rock Island county, and is popular in many circles and has served also as alderman of the Seventh Ward in the city, and has been deputy assessor under various assessors for several years past. He has a beautiful home in the city at No. 612 Forty-fifth street, and owns other property in Rock Island.

Mr. Larkin was married in Rock Island, November 27, 1877, to Mrs. Clara Blake, a native of Oneida, Ill., daughter of Robert and Elizabeth (Stephenson) McConchie, both natives of Scotland and the father an early settler in Illinois. At the breaking out of the Civil war, Mr. McConchie enlisted from Knox county, Ill., serving to the end of the struggle. Later he brought his family to live in Rock Island, and there he and his wife spent their last days. Of the six daughters and one son in the family four children now survive: Mrs. Grace Davenport, Mrs. S. S. Hull, Mrs. William H. Shillinger and Mrs. Larkin, all of Rock Island. No children have been born to Mrs. and Mrs. Larkin, but she had a son by her first marriage, John Blake, whose death occurred eight years ago.

Mr. Larkin was formerly an influential member of the Knights of Labor, and assisted in organizing this and other societies. He has been a member of the M. W. A. for twenty-six years and belongs to Camp No. 29, is also affiliated with the Court of Honor and the North Star, and has held offices in all these organizations. He is connected with John Buford Post No. 243 G. A. R. In politics he is a republican. In all things he is considered a public-spirited, enterprising citizen, ready to advance the cause of his city and county.

LARSEN, H. Peter, formerly junior member of the paper hanging and painting firm of Hinrich & Larsen, is one of the practical men in his line, whose business success has come through knowledge, persistent hard work and aggressive policies. He was born in Denmark, in 1884, a son of Christian and Charlotte (Stjerne) Larsen, the former born in Denmark, and the latter in Sweden. The father worked for a gas company in Copenhagen until pensioned off by that concern, and he is living retired in his native land, although his wife died twenty years ago. There were eight children in the family of the parents, all of whom survive, but Peter and a sister, Valborg, are the only ones who came to the United States.

In 1906, Mr. Larsen, after having been well educated in Denmark, and taught his trade, came to the United States, and locating at Moline, began working for the Moline Plow Company, remaining with this company for five years. In February, 1912, Mr. Larsen and Hans Hinrich formed the firm of Hinrich & Larsen, and began a successful career as paper hangers, painters and decorators, with headquarters at No. 2011 Fourteenth and One-half street. The partnership between Mr. Larsen and Mr. Hinrich was later discontinued and while Mr. Larsen works at paper hanging and painting in the summer months, he is employed by the Moline Plow Co., in the winters.

In 1905, Mr. Larsen was married to Johanna Annie Robertsen, born in Denmark. They have two children: Elsie M. and Kaj W. Both Mr. and Mrs. Larsen belong to the Danish Brotherhood of which Mr. Larsen is secretary. Politically, he is a republican. The family residence is at No. 2011 Fourteenth and One-half street. Having succeeded so well in Moline, it is only natural that Mr. Larsen proposes to continue living here, and that he is interested in the city's further development goes without saying. He is a man of high standards, and takes a pride in living up to them.

LARSON, Andrew L.—Within recent years, the supplying of the immense demand that exists for pure candies, has grown into a very important industry, and some of the most enterprising of Rock Island's men are engaged in catering to this liking for sweets. One of these confectioners is Andrew L. Larson, dealer in fine candies, cigars and ice cream, selling at both retail and wholesale, conveniently located at No. 1318 Third avenue, Rock Island. Mr. Larson was born in Halmstad, Sweden, January 19, 1875, a son of August and Anna Sophia Larson. These parents are living in Sweden.

Andrew L. Larson was educated in the public schools of his native land, and followed various occupations in his boyhood, learning the worth of a dollar, and habits of industry and thrift. In May, 1891, he landed at New York, having sailed from Guttenberg, and from that city, came to Rock Island. For a time, he lived at Moline, and then for six years, worked on a farm in Rock Island county. In 1897 he moved to Rock Island and then entered in the employ of Andrew Nelson, cement contractor for four years, when he embarked in his present business at No. 900 Third avenue. In 1908, he moved to his present location, where he has a finely equipped store, with ice cream plant in the rear. The quality of his goods, combined with his fair treatment, and pleasant manner, have won for him a widespread reputation and a constantly increasing patronage.

On June 15, 1899, Mr. Larson was married at Rock Island to Emma J. Peterson of Rock Island, daughter of Oloff and Elsie Peterson. Mr. and Mrs. Larson are the parents of the following children: Dorothy, Ruth, Ramona, Luella and Carl. Mr. Larson belongs to the Swedish Lutheran church. He is a member of the Independent order of Svithod, Mystic Workers of the World and Odd Fellows. He is an independent voter and for two years has been Third Ward committeeman. A man who stands high in his community, he is numbered among the leaders in his line in Rock Island county.

LARSON, Charles M.—East Moline is the home of some very responsible institutions, headed by men of sound judgment and high standing in the community, this locality being recognized as an ideal field for extensive operations. The needs of the community called into being the East Moline Electric Company, and the East Moline Theatre Company, both of which are managed very efficiently by Charles M. Larson. He was born at Geneseo, Ill., in 1873, son of Gustav and Steni (Carlson) Larson. The parents were both born in Sweden, and came here some years ago, locating at Geneseo, Ill., where the father worked as a cabinetmaker. By his first wife he had three children, all born in Sweden. After the death of his first wife he married Steni Carlson and she bore him two children, of whom Charles E. is the younger. The father died in 1889, but his widow survives.

Charles E. Larson received a fair education in the public schools of Geneseo, and when only thirteen years old he began working as a tailor, thus continuing until he was twenty years old. He always wanted to be an electrician, and with this end in view took a course in the Scranton Correspondence School, following which he installed two electric light plants, one at Woodhull, Ill., and one at Wataga, Ill. In 1909 he established himself in business at East Moline. He has a well equipped store at 812 Fifteenth avenue and attends to wiring and placing electrical fixtures. Since the inception of the business, under the name of the East Moline Electric Company, Mr. Larson has been general manager. He also manages the East Moline Theatre Company, and is in every respect a reliable, progressive young man.

On March 8, 1893, Mr. Larson was married to Augusta Wilemena Schmidt, born at Geneseo, Ill., where her parents still reside. Three daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Larson: Helen, Minerva and Marie, all at home. The pleasant family residence is at No. 505 Sixteenth avenue, where the friends of the Larsons receive a cordial welcome. Mr. Larson belongs to the Odd Fellows, No. 383; the K. O. T. M., and affiliates with the East Moline Contractors' Association which belongs to the National Contractors' Association, and is a member of the Tri-City Electric Employees' Association. Through experience he has proven the desirability of East Moline for both business and residential purposes, and no one here is more enthusiastic about its future than Mr. Larson.

LARSON, Erick J., junior member of the contracting firm of Wells & Larson, is a man who has taken advantage of the demand for concrete in all kinds of building operations, and with his partner, has developed a business that is not confined to Moline, but extends all over the county. Mr. Larson was born May 8, 1873, in Sweden, son of Charles F. and Anna (Carl-gren) Larson, both natives of Sweden, who brought their family to the United States in 1880. These parents had the following children: Sophia, Mrs. John Seaberg of Moline; Louise, Mrs. Elias Larson, Boston, Mass.; Emma, Mrs. John Erickson of Moline; Miss Emily, chief of the state asylum at Watertown, Ill.; Amel and Carl, deceased; Matilda, deceased; Augusta, Mrs. Erick Thornblom of Moline; Charles F., deceased; Sarah, Mrs. Frank Klingberg of Moline; and Erick J. The father was a blacksmith, and coming direct to Rock Island county, found ready employment in the shops of Deere & Company, with whom he remained until his retirement at the age of fifty-five years. His death occurred in Moline, October 29, 1899. His widow passed away in February, 1911.

Erick J. Larson was seven years old when the family arrived in Rock Island county, and grew up here, attending school until thirteen years old, when he began working on a farm, continuing his studies as opportunity offered. From time to time he changed his occupation, gradually acquiring a general information in the various factories, until he engaged with Barnard & Lease, with whom he learned the carpenter and cabinetmaking trades. After eight years, he left this firm, to engage in business for himself, continuing as a carpenter until the formation of his present firm in 1911. The firm manufacture and deal in concrete building blocks of all designs, colors and dimensions, watertables, coping, chimneys, chimney caps, fancy porches and dimension stone of all kinds, specializing on tycrete blocks absolutely waterproof. The place of business is conveniently located at No. 110 Eighteenth street, Moline.

Mr. Larson was married to Miss Emma C. Anderson, in August, 1894, and they have four children: Paul L., who is living at home, is filing clerk at the railroad shops at Silvis; Earl Wallace, who is at home, is mail clerk at Silvis; Manley Wellington, who is attending school at Moline; and Myrtle Althea, who is at home. Mr. Larson belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, Improved Order of Red Men, King Philip Tribe, and the Svea Choras, a singing society with which he is first tenor. Like his partner, Mr. Wells, Mr. Larson is a man of wide experience in his special line, and is a man whose word is taken as another's bond.

LARSON, John Alfred.—The obligation under which Rock Island county rests with regard to the debt it owes the pioneers of this locality, can never be discharged. But for the energy, foresight and dauntless perseverance of these forerunners of civilization, Rock Island county would still be a wilderness. One of the men who has bravely borne his part in the onward movement is John Alfred Larson, now owning and operating 160 acres of rich land, he redeemed from its virgin state. Upon it he has erected a large, modern house, well equipped barns and outbuildings, and here he raises corn, hogs and cattle, making a success of whatever he undertakes.

John Alfred Larson was born in Sweden, in 1859, and suffered from poverty in his boyhood. He received but little schooling, but being bright and ambitious, he eagerly seized upon all information that came his way. In 1872, he came to the United States, and worked at various callings, until in 1885, he was able to buy his first land, to which he continued to add. From the first he was not afraid of the hardest of work, and always saved his money, so that he is now recognized as one of the leading farmers of Rural township.

In 1886, John Alfred Larson married Mary I. (Leddje) Johnson, and they had one daughter, Inez. Mrs. Larson died, and Mr. Larson married (second) Anna Holmquist, and they have one child, Florence. In politics, he is a repubhcan, and served very acceptably one term as road commissioner of Coal Valley. His success has not come through any backing, or special luck, but is the result of plodding hard work day by day, and the knowledge of how to make each effort pay. He possesses many of the excellent qualities of the people of his nation, and any community might be glad to have him as a resident. .

LARSON, Nels A., junior member of the well known law firm of Murphy & Larson, at Rock Island; president of the State Bank of East Moline, and the East Moline Sash and Door Works, treasurer of the Trio Manufacturing Company, secretary of the Regalia Manufacturing Company, and director of the German Trust & Savings Bank, is a striking example of what can be accomplished by perseverance and industry, backed by natural ability and progressive ideas, if directed along the right line. Mr. Larson is a native of Sweden, where he was born December 31, 1879, a son of John F. and Wilhelmina (Johnson) Larson, natives of that country.

Mr. Larson was but a youth when he was brought to this country by his parents, and his preliminary educational training was secured in the public and high schools of Moline, graduating from the latter in 1898. He then went to work in a Moline factory for sixty-five cents per day, and worked there until 1900, when he entered the University of Illinois, and there made his way through college by assisting a civil engineer and working in the shops of Moline during his vacations. He was graduated from the university in 1903, and immediately entered the law offices of Connelly & Connelly, at Rock Island, and upon his admission to the bar entered upon the practice of law. In 1907 he organized the East Moline Sash and Door Works, and he now holds the office of president of this concern; in 1908 he formed a partnership with J. F. Murphy, under the firm name of Murphy & Larson, a connection that has continued to the present time with much success; in 1909 he became a director in the State Bank of East Moline, and in 1911 was elected its president; and he has been a director in the Trio Manufacturing Company since its organization in 1908 and its treasurer for nearly three years. He has been a director of the German Trust & Savings Bank of Rock Island since its organization and is secretary of the Regalia Manufacturing Company.

On April 10, 1907, Mr. Larson was united in marriage to Miss Emma H. Jenkins, and they have had two children, namely: Thomas Jenkins and Richard Frederick. Mr. Larson is a republican in his political views, being secretary of the County Committee, and he is a member of the Rock Island Club, Moline Club, and East Moline Commercial Club. A natural organizer, a capable executive, and an enthusiastic worker, he has made a name for himself in the business world, while his public spirit and interest in his city's welfare have stamped him as a desirable citizen. Mr. Larson's offices are located in the Safety Building, Rock Island, while his home is situated at No. 1532 Twelfth avenue, Moline.

LARSON, Robert W., well known and popular in business, fraternal and social circles in Moline, is one of the most popular young men in the city. He has made many firm and lasting friendships as a natural result of his natural ability in the line of work to which he has for several years devoted his best energies, as well as through his pleasant personality and social nature. He is a native son of Rock Island county, and Moline is proud to claim his citizenship. Electricity and the uses to which it may be put are constantly growing in interest to all, and Mr. Larson has made an exhaustive study of this subject, with a view to using his knowledge for the benefit of his fellows. He is familiar with this force in its various uses and forms, and has specialized along the line of public utilities. He was born in the city of Moline, September 5, 1883, son of August and Mary (Schunning) Larson, natives of Sweden.

Robert W. Larson was educated in the common and high schools of Moline, and after leaving school entered the employ of the People's Power Company. He received a thorough training in their electrical department and became one of their valued employees. Having mastered the science to which he had decided to devote his energies, he decided to engage in business on his own account, which he did on May 1, 1911. He opened a shop at No. 1304 Fourth avenue, and there has continued in active business. He has a comprehensive display of electrical goods, covering many mechanical attachments, and is recognized as one of the leading business men and contractors in his line in the thriving city of Moline. He carries on a general line of contracting, and his work may be found on many of the prominent buildings in his part of the county, including many fine residences in the city. He employs an average of six men, who are experts in their line, and has established a high reputation for the quality of his appliances and the manner in which they are installed.

In fraternal circles Mr. Larson has a host of friends, being a valued member of the A. F. and A. M., the Odd Fellows and the Maccabees, of Moline. He is also a member of National Electrical Contractors' Association. He was reared in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal denomination and is always ready to advance the cause of progress and right. He is unmarried and very fond of his home, keenly enjoying the companionship he finds in the home circle. He is a man of upright nature and high ideals, and recognized as a substantial citizen.

LAUERMANN, John, who now lives retired from active life, built up a large business at Rock Island and is a self-made man, who attained to a high degree of success through industry and thrift, and became the owner of considerable property. He has been a resident of the city for forty-two years, for thirty-six of which he conducted a coopering shop at Sixth avenue and Twenty-second street. John Lauermann was born in Germany September 6, 1845, a son of John and Mary Lauermann, both of whom died in that country. The father was a cooper by trade, and the son learned the same trade in his father's shop, after attending school until he was fifteen years old. At the age of twenty-two years John Lauermann Jr. came to the United States, sailing from Bremen to New York City on the steamer Deutschland. His brother Fred came with him and they went direct to Chicago, where they arrived in July, 1867. The two worked in the same shop for a time, then John Lauermann came to Rock Island, which has continued his home ever since. He came to the city a poor man, without capital or friends, and began working at his trade. In time he purchased the land where his cooper shop is now located and put up a frame building 18x26 feet, which now stands in the rear of his beautiful home. His trade gradually increased until he was justified in building a second shop 24x40 feet. He prospered from the start and was recognized as a first-class workman and a conscientious business man. His trade was chiefly among brewers and liquor dealers.

John Lauermann was married at Chicago, August 15, 1871, to Miss Caroline Kroeniger, born in Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, October 25, 1848, a daughter of Gottfried and Margaretta Kroeniger. Both her parents died in Germany, the mother when she was a small child, and she came to the United States in 1871. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Lauermann. They commenced their married life in a little cottage, which eventually gave place to their present beautiful home at 2200 Seventh avenue. She is a Catholic and he a Lutheran. Mr. Lauermann is an active member of Lodge No. 18, I. O. O. F., of Rock Island. He retired from active life in the spring of 1906.

LAURITZSON, John Morris.—If every country sent as reliable citizens to the United States as do Sweden and Denmark those far northern lands, where the inclemency of the weather during many months seems to breed a hardness of nature and willingness to work, this nation would soon own the world. Rock Island county has attracted many of these sturdy sons of both Denmark and Sweden, and to this may be attributed much of its present prosperity. One of the men who came from the latter country, but has the blood of the former in his veins is John Morris Lauritzson. He was born in Denmark, January 29, 1872, a son of Sorn and Hannah (Larson) Lauritzson. These parents were of Swedish nativity, who were living in Denmark at the time of their son's birth. When he was three years old they moved back to Sweden, and there he was educated. When seventeen years old, he left for America, coming direct to Port Byron, where he began as a farm hand, later engaging with the Port Byron Lime Association. For a number of years he remained with this company, but in 1891, he enlisted in the regular army at Davenport, and was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., as a member of the Third United States Artillery. After a year of service, he was discharged and mustered out at the fort. Coming back to Port Byron, he has since been engaged in a meat business, working for F. L. Oppendike.

In 1895, Mr. Lauritzson was married to Mathilda Engdahl, daughter of John Engdahl of Coe township. Their children are as follows: Mabel, Mildred, Carl, Hazel, Walter, Sadie, Morris, who died in 1909 and is buried in Oak Grove cemetery; Florence, who died in infancy; and Lawrence, who also died an infant. All those surviving are attending school and are very bright young people. Mr. Lauritzson belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, of Port Byron, and is a member of the Swedish church. In 1909 he was elected tax collector, for one year, and re-elected in 1910, for two years. He is a capable, earnest, hard-working man, in whom the public have full confidence, and Port Byron has found a capable public official in Mr. Lauritzson.

LA VANWAY, S. Alexander.—The demand for household furnishings is steadily growing, as is also that for moderate prices for this same class of goods, and some of the more progressive merchants of Rock Island have conceived and successfully carried out the idea of meeting these requirements by carrying both new and second-hand commodities. S. Alexander La Vanway is one of the most successful business men in this line, being located at No. 1517 Second avenue. His business was established by him in 1908, and he handles a full line of new and second-hand goods, in his double store. Mr. La Vanway was born in Fort Wayne, Ind., in 1860, a son of Luke and Josephine (Bercot) La Vanway. The father was born in New Hampshire, and the mother in France. Coming to Fort Wayne, Ind., the father was one of the early settlers of that place, which he served as justice of the peace for eighteen years, becoming very prominent. When he first arrived, Indians were numerous, but he developed a farm and gradually began handling grain until he became a large wholesale grain dealer, thus continuing until his death, which occurred in 1900. His widow survived him until March, 1911, when she, too, passed away, aged eighty-seven years. She and her husband had thirteen children: Harriet; Amelia, deceased; Louise; Adeline; S. Alexander; Mary; Emma; Charles, deceased; Frances; Anna, deceased; Thersa; Pauline and Josephine. The father of these children was a Presbyterian, but the mother was a Catholic, and the children were brought up in that church.

Mr. La Vanway attended a district school near Fort Wayne, and the public schools of Fort Wayne, after which he took a commercial course. In 1884 he was married at Chicago, and conducted a hotel in that city, until he came to Rock Island in 1898, to engage with the McCabe store. Until he went into business for himself Mr. La Vanway remained with this establishment. In addition to his store he is interested in the Economy Gasmaker Company, which promises to be a big thing. He has always been successful in anything he undertook, for he is a keen, farsighted man, who knows how to make money. Mr. La Vanway owns property at Nos. 2806-2808 Sixth avenue, and his residence at No. 1000 Fifteenth street, as well as four lots on Twenty-fourth street.

In 1884 Mr. La Vanway married Sarah Cantwell, a native of Michigan. She died in 1903. In 1906 Mr. La Vanway married (second) Amelia Behrens, born in Rock Island, where her father was one of the old settlers. Mr. and Mrs. La Vanway belong to the Christian church. He is a democrat, and in 1909 was elected alderman and served until 1911. While in the council he was on the finance committee, the police committee and the ordinance committee, and chairman of the first named. He is now treasurer of the police fund. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and is popular in it as he is everywhere he goes.

LEES, John Mills.—Illinois is in the great corn belt and the production of the staple commodity which has given its name to this region, has made wealthy men out of the farmers of Rock Island county. The land here is peculiarly adapted to corn culture, a fact John Mills Lees of Coal Valley township is proving each year. Mr. Lees, owner of a fine forty-acre farm in this township, also rents 200 acres, which he devotes to corn, being well satisfied with the results. He was born in Ohio, January 31, 1848, a son of Thomas and Jane (Mills) Lees, but he was reared in Coal Valley township, and regards it as his home. He attended the district schools, and secured an excellent common education, and at the same time helped his father farm, remaining with him until his death, in November, 1909. This father is interred in Coal Valley cemetery.

On February 7, 1878, Mr. Lees was married to Ann Woolley, by Rev. Moerr. She was born in England, March 18, 1852, but was brought to this country by her parents in 1864. Mr. and Mrs. Lees became the parents of five children, four of whom survive: Jane, who married Edward Lawson, has one son, Gale S.; Fanny, who married Walter Weaver, has one son, Don Bernice; Frank and Clyde who are at home, and Harry, who died when six years old.

Mr. Lees is a democrat, and for some eight years he has acceptably discharged the duties of the office of assessor of Coal Valley township. For three years he gave his services on the school board, and is a public-spirited man, deeply interested in the development of this section, in which he has great faith. Some years ago, he associated himself with the Masonic order at Coal Valley. Having a thorough knowledge of his work, being deeply alive to its possibilities, possessing a keen sense of honor, and a desire to give every man a square deal, Mr. Lees has not only succeeded in a material sense, but he has won the confidence and respect of his associates, and is numbered among the leading men of his township.

LEES, Thomas R.—Some men naturally lead their associates by reason of superior ability, and to them must be given the credit for advancement and progression. One of these leaders in Coal Valley is Thomas R. Lees, supervisor of the township for eighteen years. He was born in Coal Valley, in 1861, son of Thomas and Jane (Mills) Lees. Growing up in this neighborhood, he is now a member of the mercantile firm of Krapp & Lees, the largest of its kind in the township. The firm handles lumber, and agricultural implements in addition to carrying a full stock of general merchandise, and control an immense trade which concentrates in Coal Valley.

On April 8, 1889, Mr. Lees was married to Matilda Krapp, also born in Coal Valley, and seven children were born of this marriage: John; Gertrude, who is the wife of John Lindquist; Berdina; Lela; Elizabeth and Thomas. Mr. Lees is one of the most prominent men politically the democrats have in Rock Island county. Not only has he held the office of supervisor for so long, but has been elected to all the town offices. In 1906, he was on the democratic ticket for county treasurer, but owing to the immense republican majority, he did not win, although he ran ahead of his party. He is a Mason, having been master of his lodge for two terms; belongs to the Elks, and is much interested in fraternal matters. Knowing how to influence others, always acting fairly by his constituents, and giving when in office a wise and honest administration. Mr. Lees has a large following, and will be called to higher offices than any he has yet filled. He is a man of laudable ambition, and has attained to his present prominence through steadfast endeavor, combined with unusual merit.

LENZ, Albert Frederick Traugot, a successful contractor of Rock Island, is a native of Prussia, Germany, where he was born on June 13, 1861, a son of Ferdinand and Mary (Brown) Lenz, both natives of Prussia. Ferdinand Lenz was a carpenter by occupation and he and his wife died in Germany when their son Albert F. T. Lenz was a child. The latter was the third of four children born to his parents and received his education in the public schools of his native land, where he remained until he reached maturity. Having resolved to seek the larger opportunities offered in the new world, in 1883 he came to the United States. After working two years at New York, he came to Rock Island and engaged as a carpenter. In it he succeeded so well that since 1901 he has been taking contracts on his own account and has built up a good business in this line, filling contracts for complete buildings. By careful attention to details and fair dealing, he has gained a high standing in business circles. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and to the Lutheran church, and in local politics votes for the man he believes best suited to conserve the interests of the people.

On April 1, 1886, Mr. Lenz married Caroline Sellin, a native of Germany and daughter of Wilhelm and Alwine (Lietz) Sellin, both of whom died in Germany. Two children have blessed their union: Arthur, born in 1888, and Walter, born in 1893, both of whom work with their father, having both learned the trade of a carpenter. Mr. Lenz and his sons are representative and upright citizens who not only are recognized as men of worth but have won appreciation among a wide circle of friends.

LEWIS, Joseph G.—After a strenuous life, many men find it pleasant to retire to Rock Island, there to spend the remainder of their lives, surrounded by comforts secured by years of unremitting toil. One of these men is Joseph G. Lewis, a retired paper hanger and painter, residing at No. 513 Eighteenth street, Rock Island. He was born June 8, 1848, at Mertyhyr Tydvill, South Wales, a son of Henry and Ellen (Goulstone) Lewis, both of whom were Welsh. The father was a painter and worked at his trade until his death in 1850. After the death of her husband the mother went to New Zealand, and there died in 1870. Until he was eleven years old, Joseph C. Lewis attended school in Wales, and continued to live there until he was twenty-one years old. In 1869 he sailed for America, landing at New York, from whence he went to Columbia, Pa., there working at various occupations until 1869. In 1870, he went to Minnesota, staying at St. Paul for a time, but eventually he came to Rock Island. From Rock Island he went to Decatur, Ala., spending a winter in that mild climate. In March, 1871, he returned to Rock Island, which has since been his home. He was reared in the faith of the Church of England, but since coming here has attended the Episcopal church. In politics he is an independent.

In 1874 Joseph G. Lewis was married to Celia Elizabeth Bollman, born September 3, 1853, daughter of George and Margaret (Fluck) Bollman, both born in Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis became the parents of three children, namely: Harry G., who was born March 27, 1876, married Fannie Smith, resides in Rock Island, and has no children; Grace, who married Darwin Hartshorn, has one child, Louis, born December 27, 1910; Sadie E., who lives at home. Mr. Lewis and his family are well and favorably known in Rock Island, and have many friends here. He is recognized as one of the solid men of the community, and his opinions upon various subjects are respected.

LEWIS, Simon, wholesale dealer in liquors, at No. 1629-1631 Third avenue, Rock Island, is one of the successful business men of the city. He was born in Prussia, Germany, in 1870, son of Julius and Sarah (Ralfe) Lewis. Growing to manhood in his native land, Mr. Lewis obtained educational training there. In 1884 he left Prussia for the United States, and coming to Rock Island, found employment as a laborer. Being thrifty and hardworking, he rose until in 1895 he was able to embark in his present business, which has been developed until he now gives employment to fifteen men, and is a leader in his line. He carries California wines and brandies, Kentucky Bourbon and Eastern Rye whiskies, and his stock is recognized to be of purest quality and exceptional flavor.

In 1897 Mr. Lewis married Theresa Furstenbig of Iowa. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are: Gertrude, Florence and Jerome. Mr. Lewis' fraternal associations are many, as he belongs to the Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Eagles and Rangers, and is popular in them all. He has voted the republican ticket since he cast his first vote. In religious matters he belongs to the Hebrew Synagogue and is now and since its establishment a member of the board of directors. A man of his word, honorable in his dealings, exceedingly charitable, imbued with strong civic pride, Mr. Lewis is essentially a good citizen, and has many friends throughout Rock Island and the surrounding county.

LIEKEFETT, Frederick, a representative citizen of Rock Island county, Ill., and the proprietor of Highland Spring Farm, who is now living retired after a long and useful career spent in agricultural pursuits, is one of the most popular men of Black Hawk township. He is a native of Germany, having been born in Hanover, November 28, 1848, a son of Franz and Christina (Geltmacker) Liekefett. Franz Liekefett was a tailor by trade, and brought his family to the United States about 1855, and after thirteen weeks on the water the emigrants reached St. Louis, and after a short time there went to the American Bottoms where the father worked for two years at his trade. They then went to Rock Island, but stayed there only two years when Mr. Liekefett rented a farm in Bowling township, later bought it, which he eventually traded for the 400-acre tract in Black Hawk township, which is now owned by his son Frederick and which is known as Highland Spring Farm. Frederick Liekefett has one sister, Elizabeth, who is the wife of John McConnell of Rock Island county. He was educated in the public schools, which he attended until he was twenty years of age and was then employed on his father's farm until the death of the latter, at which time he took the management which he has retained ever since. During the last nineteen years Mr. Liekefett has been so crippled with rheumatism that he has been unable to work, but he is blessed with a sunny disposition, and his uncomplaining nature has made him keep the many warm friends of former days and helped him to make numerous new ones. He is a member of the Methodist church, to which his family also belongs. On December 19, 1876, Mr. Liekefett was married to Miss Marie Simser by Reverend Smith, of Rock Island county. She was the daughter of Henry and Mary (Bruner) Sinsler, whose other two children were: James C., married and living in Rock Island county; and Mary, who is now deceased, as are both of the parents. Mrs. Liekefett was born November 6, 1857, in Rock Island, and has been the mother of five children: Mamie, born August 12, 1880, the wife of Carl Bellhouse, has two children, Wilfred and Hazel, of Rock Island county; Clarence, born March 3, 1883, married Miss Mary Kissler, and lives at home; Elizabeth, born March 28, 1886, lives at home; Sadie E., born November 21, 1889, and Herman L., born October 12, 1892, both at home.

LINDBERG, Frank T., who is an enterprising young business man of Rock Island, has made his own way in life from early youth. He is general sales agent for a Chicago concern and has built up a large trade in his line in Rock Island and vicinity. He is wide awake and energetic, and looks carefully to the wants of his patrons, has a good standing in business, social and fraternal circles, and has made friends in the county. He was born in Sweden, November 30, 1881, son of Frank A. and Augusta Lindberg, natives of the same country, who came to the United States in 1890 and located in Rock Island county. There were eight children born to them, of whom Frank T. Lindberg is the oldest.

Frank T. Lindberg received his education in the public schools and J. E. Gustus' Business College, finishing his course at the latter institution when he was sixteen years old. His first occupation afterwards was as bookkeeper for the McNevin & Gansert Company, and later he worked for four years for a railroad company. He then entered the employ of the Northwestern Brewing Company, of Chicago, at their branch office in Rock Island, and continued in that position until November, 1911, when he secured his present responsible position. Although interested in local affairs and issues, in politics he is independent. He is a member of the Lutheran church. Fraternally he is affiliated with the B. P. O. E., the I. O. R. R. and the Rock Island Club.

Mr. Lindberg was married December 15, 1905, to Louise Ebeling, daughter of Albert and Anna Ebeling, of Moline, her parents being natives of Germany. They have one son, Albert. As a farseeing citizen he is ready to further the upbuilding and progress of the city, and has identified himself with various measures looking in that direction.

LINDQUIST, Gustave E.—Some men take pleasure in public life, while others devote themselves to their homes, finding enjoyment in their families, promoting their welfare. Such a man is Gustave E. Lindquist, who owns a fine farm of 113 acres of land in the vicinity of Milan, Ill. He was born in Sweden, March 16, 1853, a son of Carl and Anna (Hokinson) Lindquist, both natives of Sweden, where the father died. The mother died in Henry county, Ill., having borne her husband children as follows: Frank Oscar, who is still in Sweden; Gustave E.; and Joseph, who came to America in 1878, now resides at Cable, Ill.

Gustave E. Lindquist came to America in 1875, and worked on a farm in Rock Island county, then rented a farm for several years, when he bought his present property. It is conveniently located in Rural township on the Knoxville road. On it he has put up a beautiful residence and fine barn, and the premises all show the effect of careful attention. His fences are kept up, his outbuildings are painted, and thrift is indicated everywhere. This farm shows at first glance that it is the property of a man who takes a deep pride in it, and it is a place any one could feel proud of owning. The lawn is tastefully laid out in flowers, and shade trees, and it is probably the most beautiful in this part of the country.

On February 23, 1882, Mr. Lindquist was married to Clara Johnson, a native of Sweden, born August 23, 1859. They have had five children: Albert, who was born December 14, 1881, married May Allely on December 16, 1902, issue—two sons, Mora Allely and Orvill E.; John who was born November 25, 1884, was married June 5, 1909, to Gertie Sces; Mabel, who was born April 8, 1887, married May 20, 1909, to Earl Rowe, issue—one son, Clayton M.; Minnie, who was born November 15, 1889; and Morse, who was born February 21, 1894. Mr. Lindquist belongs to the Swedish Lutheran church. In politics, he is a republican. The success which has attended him has been gained through hard work and the practice of constant thrift, but he can now enjoy the beautiful home his industry and foresight have provided.

LITTLER, George L., now in the employ of the United States Government, and one of the honored veterans of the Civil War, is now a resident of Moline. He was born at Lancaster, O., March 26, 1828, a son of Samuel and Nancy (Little) Littler, natives of Martinsburg, Va., and Lancaster, Pa. The father was a physician and surgeon, who went from Virginia to Ohio, where he and his wife died, and were buried at Waverly, that state. The grandfathers on both sides of the house served in the War of 1812, and his great-grandfather, coming from Scotland, participated in the Revolutionary war, so that Mr. Littler comes of a very patriotic family, and one intimately associated with the military history of the country.

Growing up at Lancaster, O., Mr. Littler attended school there, at White Cottage Academy, and the academy at Salem, O., from which he was graduated. He learned the trade of harnessmaking, and studied medicine while working at the bench. He was graduated from the medical department of Salem academy, and served as hospital steward in the army. Leaving Lancaster, Mr. Littler went to Greenfield, where he worked at his trade until 1858. He then moved to Sigourney, Ia., where he opened a harness shop, and conducted it until he enlisted, in August, 1861, in the Eighth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, being mustered out in March, 1862, on account of injuries received on a forced march to Springfield, Mo., with General Fremont. As soon as able he re-enlisted in the Fifth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and was on detached duty from then until August 13, 1865, when he was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., by special order of the war department, for examination for hospital steward in the regular army. He was not accepted, as he was a married man with a family, such not then being eligible. Prior to that, however, he was hospital steward at Louisville, Ky., New Orleans, Fort Nelson, and was very efficient owing to his professional training. Following his discharge Mr. Littler lived at Mendota, Ill., for one year, Ottumwa, Iowa, for six months, and from the latter place moved to Agency, Iowa, which was his home until 1874, when he came to Moline, where he has since continued to reside.

Mr. Littler was married at Greenfield, O., June 30, 1852, by the Rev. Milton G. Baker, Methodist minister, to Mary J. Shadford, born in Richmond, Ind., June 27, 1834. June 30, 1912, they had the unusual distinction of celebrating their diamond or sixtieth wedding anniversary and the following day left on a second wedding trip to the Pacific coast. Mrs. Littler is a daughter of William Shadford, born in Sheffield, England, who married Ann Douggleby in England and came to the United States, settling at Richmond, Ind., but later moved to Greenfield, O. Both he and his wife died at the home of Mr. Littler at Moline. Mr. Shadford was a blacksmith. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Littler: Anna F., who married John H. Brumbaugh, issue—Arthur, George L. and Vera C.; Charles N., who died in infancy; Mary A., who married T. C. Nutter of Seattle, Wash., issue—Stella, Corinne and Dorothy; William L., who married Lydia Bennett and lives at Spokane, Wash., issue—Olive and Lydia, both married; Effie R. and Lena M., who are at home.

Formerly an old line whig, Mr. Littler is now a republican. He served as justice of the peace for eight years at Agency, Ia., and was on the school board there for eight years. He belongs to the Odd Fellows and the G. A. R. as well as the Knights of Pythias. In religious matters he is liberal, but his family belong to the Methodist church, in which both his father and grandfather were local preachers. Mr. Littler is one of the venerable figures of Rock Island county. He owns his handsome home on the bluff at No. 609 Eighteenth street, and is in very comfortable circumstances.

LLOYD, Joseph.—Conscientious endeavor along agricultural lines merits retirement before the years have pressed too heavily upon shoulders that have borne patiently the yoke of hard labor. The farmer needs to cease active labor sooner than those engaged along other lines, because of the unceasing and heavy demands made upon him by the exacting requirements of his calling. One who has realized this, and is now enjoying the fruits of honest industry, is Joseph Lloyd, a retired farmer of Reynolds. He was born December 26, 1840, in Westmoreland county, Pa., son of W. H. and Isabella (Galbath) Lloyd, natives of Pennsylvania. The mother who came to Illinois in 1876, after the loss of her husband, born in 1813 and died in 1845, passed away in 1900. They had six children: Margaret, who was the wife of Jacob Burchin, deceased; John, who is deceased; Mary, who is the wife of William Galbreth; Joseph; James W., who died during his term of service in the Civil war; and David, who is county recorder of Scott county, Kan.

Joseph Lloyd was educated in the common schools of Pennsylvania. He earned his own living from the time he was six years old, and is proud of the fact, as he has every reason to be. In 1873, after a number of hard experiences, he came to Rock Island county, buying a farm in Edgington township in 1877. Until 1902, he operated it successfully and then bought 2 acres across in Reynolds, and has a comfortable home on the corner of Lloyd and Grant streets.

On October 23, 1872, Mr. Lloyd was married to Miss Maria E. Titterington, born March 26, 1846, in Edgington township. She is a daughter of Charles and Sophia (Eberhart) Titterington, married by Rev. T. R. Johnston. There was a double wedding, her sister Anna being married to Joseph Benjamin, the former of whom was born in Lancastershire, England, January 2, 1814, and the latter June 28, 1820. The paternal grandfather came to America in 1817, locating in Ohio, where he lived until 1835, when he moved to Rock Island county, entering land here from the government. Her father also entered land on the present site of Reynolds. Mrs. Lloyd had brothers and sisters as follows: Thomas, Charles, Anna, Benjamin, Maria, Milton, Frederick, David and Emma Kriksinger. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd are members of the Presbyterian church of Edgington, where Mrs. Lloyd attended Sunday school in childhood. They are most excellent people, who stand very high among their old neighbors and present associates.

LOESER, Herman, a representative German-American citizen of Rock Island, Ill., and a shoemaker by trade, has established himself in business and built up a good patronage here during the past fifteen years. He was born in Berlin, Germany, November 12, 1857, son of Ferdinand and Christina (Thennes) Loeser, the parents both natives of Germany, the father born in 1818, and the mother born in Saxony, in 1821. They spent their entire lives in Germany, where he died in 1885 at the age of sixty-seven years and the mother in 1894 at the age of seventy-three years. They had two daughters, both living in Germany, and one son, Herman, in America.

Herman Loeser was educated in the public schools and for three years worked with his father, learning the shoemaking trade and afterward traveled as a journeyman in various parts of his own country, spent two years in France, three in Switzerland, and then went over the St. Gotthard Pass to Italy, where he worked two years, two in Austria, then returned to his home in Berlin and went into business on his own account. After spending four years in business there he sailed from Hamburg to Scotland, landed without a passport and located in Glasgow. From Scotland he sailed in the ship "Batavia" for America, landing in New York city. He proceeded to St. Louis, Mo., and then spent three months traveling and looking for a suitable location, finally settling in the German colony, Homestead, about seventy-five miles from Davenport, Ia., where he worked at his trade for three months.

In 1891 Mr. Loeser came to Rock Island, which has since been his home the greater part of the time ever since. He began working at his trade with Adolph Grief, now deceased, and later was employed as steward for Mr. Hildebrant of the Casino, near the bridge. He was employed in various capacities for several years, part of the time in Rock Island and for a short time in Davenport. In 1896 he started in the shoe repair business, spending eight years at his first location on Seventeenth street, moving to his present place, 1313 Seventh avenue, in 1902, a beautiful home, where his shop is also located. He is an expert in his line of work and is well regarded by all who know him, being a man of upright character and good business principles.

On May 20, 1893, at Davenport, Ia., Mr. Loeser was married to Blenda Holtz, who was born June 25, 1861, in Sweden. They have two children: Maria, born November 28, 1894, and Alfred, born August 9, 1896.

LOHSE, Henry A., formerly senior member of the general contracting firm of H. & G. Lohse, but now in business alone, owing to the death of his brother, Gustave Lohse, November 9, 1911, is one of the representative men of Rock Island. He was born in Heidmuehlen, Germany, October 31, 1866, son of Hans H. and Katherine (Mohr) Lohse, both natives of Germany, who came to this country in 1869. The father was a carpenter by trade, and worked in Rock Island, where he died in 1901, his widow surviving him and residing at No. 930 Eighth avenue, Rock Island.

Mr. Lohse attended German and English schools in Rock Island, and also the Davenport Business College. In 1901, he began contracting, and in 1905, took his brother Gustave into partnership with him. This brother was born February 13, 1871, and was deeply lamented when cut off in his prime. Mr. Lohse specializes on the construction of residences, and his work stands as a testimonial to his efficiency and integrity.

On December 25, 1889, Mr. Lohse was married to Miss Louise Juergensen, born January 8, 1867, in Germany, coming to the United States in 1886, by herself, her parents, Hans and Christina F. (Peterson) Juergensen, never leaving their native land. Both are now deceased. Mrs.

Lohse has a brother, August, still living in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Lohse have the following children: Frieda, lives at home, and is a seamstress at Young & McComb's, of Rock Island; and Louisa, at home. The family belong to the German Lutheran church of Rock Island. Mr. Lohse belongs to the Aid and Sick Benefit Society of Rock Island, and the Master Builders' Association. He built his comfortable residence, six rooms and bath, at No. 1317 Twenty-fifth street, Rock Island, and true hospitality marks many social gatherings there.

LONDBERG, Carl G., is an example of the successful Swedish-American citizen of Rock Island county, and has made his own way in life from an early age. He is well educated and takes an active and intelligent interest in the affairs of his city and county. He has been identified with Rock Island and Moline since 1900 and during that time has made many friends and acquaintances. He was born in Sweden, September 23, 1876, eldest of six children of August and Charlotta (Johnson) Londberg, who came to the United States in 1891 and located in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. The father was a landscape gardener by occupation, and died in Michigan, in 1893, leaving his son Carl with grave responsibilities for a youth of seventeen years.

Carl G. Londberg attended school in Sweden until he was twelve years old and after coming to the United States continued his education in the public schools. In 1900 he came to Moline and soon afterwards began a course of study at Augustana College in Rock Island, graduating therefrom May 28, 1908, with the degree A. B. During this time he spent two years in teaching and preached for a time in South Bend, Ind., and Chicago, Ill. Since June 1, 1908, he has been local representative of the Scandia Life Insurance Company, for which position he was well fitted by natural ability and training. He has increased his business from year to year and has twelve to fifteen men under his supervision. Besides the work done by his agents during the year 1911, he himself wrote $100,000 worth of insurance and the following year $150,000. He is known as a general agent, and in this position has the responsibility of choosing an able force of sub-agents to co-operate with him. He has a growing reputation for business integrity and uprightness, and the prospects are bright for his doing an increased amount of business during the current year. Mr. Londberg is a member of the Lutheran church and in politics is a republican. He is unmarried. He made a good start in life through earnest effort and energy, possessing the ambition to make the most of his opportunities for advancement.

LONG, Judson H., M. D.—The medical profession of Rock Island county numbers among its members men of high standing and undoubted skill who have proven their self-sacrificing disposition and deep knowledge countless times.

The health as well as the lives of the people depend upon the skill of these physicians and the low death rate of this locality proves that excellent service has been rendered by the profession not only in preventing death but in safeguarding the health of those under their charge. One of the best-known physicians and surgeons here is Dr. Judson H. Long of East Moline. He was born at Orion, Ill., February 15, 1870, being a son of Dr. H. H. and Mary L. (Jordan) Long.

Judson H. Long went through the public and high schools of his native place, and then entered the medical department of the St. Louis University, from which he was graduated in April, 1896. Dr. Long began his practice with his father, who for forty-two years has been an active physician at Orion. After eighteen months spent in this connection, Dr. Long went to Neponset, Ill., and in 1900 came to East Moline, where he has since remained. Dr. Long was the first physician to locate here and has built up a fine practice and endeared himself to those who know and appreciate him. He belongs to the Rock Island County Medical Society, the Illinois State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. Fraternally he belongs to the Masonic fraternity at Silvis, the Modern Woodmen of America, East Moline Camp, and is medical examiner of this organization.

In 1892 he was married at Kankakee, Ill., to Eliza M. St. Pierre, daughter of O. and Louise (Martin) St. Pierre. Six children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Long: Geraldine, who is a graduate of the Moline High School; Verna, Pierre, Willard and Donald, who are students in East Moline, and Mary Louise, who is at home. A close student, a trained physician, and kindly disposed man, Dr. Long has won and retains many warm personal friends who like him personally and admire his professional ability.

LONG, Wilson W.—One of the show places of Rock Island county is the fine farm known as Pinehurst, in Bowling township, comprising 128 acres of as rich and well-cultivated land as can be found in this part of the state. The owner of it, Wilson W. Long, was born on his father's homestead in Rural township, November 4, 1868, being a son of John L. and Caroline (Sayre) Long, the former of whom is still living in Rural township, but the latter died there May 24, 1909. They had children as follows: Orrin, of Iowa; Iva, Mrs. Lawrence Weise, of Edgington township; Wilson W.; Eva, Mrs. James Hutchinson, died in Bowling township; Emma and Minnie at home; Wallace, of Rural township, married Anna Hicks; Lester, of Rural township, married Hattie Schoening; Effie, Mrs. Beck, of Rural township; Roy, married Dela Reeser, of Rural, and Bessie, married Walter Beck, of Rural.

Wilson W. Long went to public school in Rural township, and was brought up on the farm. He worked for his father until he attained his majority, and then rented land for five years prior to his marriage, and three years thereafter, when he bought 117 acres in Rural township, living upon it for four years. He then sold, and bought 194 acres in Bowling township. This he disposed of in 1904 to buy Pinehurst.

On February 14, 1894, Mr. Long was married by Rev. Alfred, of Milan, to Anna Hutchinson, born in Bowling township, August 17, 1869, and educated in the township schools. She is a daughter of Thomas and Susan (Ramsey) Hutchinson, the former born in Ireland, but came to the United States in the forties, locating in Bowling township, where he bought 120 acres, and there he died in 1903; his wife passed away the same year, and she too was a native of Ireland. Their children were as follows: Robert, deceased; George, of Iowa; Bessie, deceased; William on the home farm; Margaret, deceased; Thomas of Iowa; James and Samuel at home; and Mrs. Long. Mr. and Mrs. Long are the parents of three children: Ralph W., born November 21, 1895; Hazel Fern, born September 23, 1900, and John Leslie, born May 30, 1909. Mr. Long is not connected with any religious organization but attends the Methodist church. He served as assessor of Rural township for two years. Both he and his wife belong to the Court of Honor. Both are extremely well liked in their neighborhood, and their home is a gathering place for their many friends who enjoy their lavish and hearty hospitality.

LORENZ, Paul H., a prosperous contractor of Moline, with offices in the People's Bank Building and residence at No. 815 Twenty-seventh street, was born on a farm in Zuma township, this county, March 1, 1877, a son of Christian and Lisette (Klebe) Lorenz, both of whom came with their parents, in 1857, from Madgeburg, on the Elbe, in Prussia, Germany, to the United States. At this time, they were about seventeen and sixteen years old, respectively. The party crossed the Atlantic by sailing vessel, coming direct to this county from New Orleans and up the Mississippi river, being some eight or ten weeks on the voyage. Both families settled in the upper end of the county and engaged in farming, ambitious to earn a better livelihood and provide a competency for their old and declining years, as well as to afford greater opportunity for material happiness to their descendants, than usually fell to the lot of those with restricted means in their own country.

Christian Lorenz was engaged in farming with his father until the outbreak of the Civil war, in 1861, when he, with his brother, Frederick, enlisted in the Union army, the former in Company D, Thirteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and the latter running away to enlist, serving in the Twelfth Missouri Infantry. Frederick was killed at Black River Bridge, Mississippi, about 1863. Christian served throughout his three years' enlistment, taking part in the battles of Lookout Mountain, Kennesaw Mountain, Arkansas Post, Chickasaw Charge, the Siege of Vicksburg, and similar important engagements. Upon the return of the regiment to Springfield, Christian Lorenz was honorably mustered out of the service. He then returned to the home farm and resumed his agricultural life. Soon after his return, he was married to Miss Lisette Klebe, and they removed to a farm of their own. Both were members of the German Lutheran church at Hampton.

Paul H. Lorenz was the seventh son in a family of nine sons, of whom five grew to maturity, these being: Christian, Jr., Albert D., Frederick, Paul H., and Louis C., the latter dying in 1906. At the age of four years, Paul H. Lorenz was taken by his parents to western Iowa, at the age of ten years to Nebraska, and from there, at the age of fourteen years, to Chehalis, Lewis county, Washington, and two years later, to Clackamas county, Oregon. When nineteen years old, in company with his brother, Albert, he returned to Rock Island county. Having now determined to depend upon himself, he spent the next three years in South Dakota, Iowa and Illinois, having in the meanwhile learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, so worked along these lines. He obtained most of his education in the public schools, but later took a short course in the Port Byron Academy, and in a normal school at Bushnell.

Mr. Lorenz was married January 1, 1903, to Miss Isabel E. Rathbun, daughter of Oscar F. and Mary (Pearsall) Rathbun, of Port Byron, and brought his bride to Moline, where they began life together. After serving for a time as assistant cashier in the Moline offices of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company, he began business for himself as a contractor and builder in Moline. He handles all classes of building construction, being identified with the construction department of the Mosler Safe Company, for whom he has built a number of banks in different parts of Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz have recently erected their residence which they share and enjoy with their son Robert Christian, born February 3, 1905. Mr. Lorenz served three years with the Illinois National Guard, being honorably discharged upon expiration of his enlistment. He is a member of Moline Lodge No. 556, B. P. O. E., and of Manufacturers' Lodge No. 485, I. O. O. F. In politics, he has always been a republican. During the summer of 1912 Mr. Lorenz lost his mother, in Clackamas county, Oregon; his father having died there in 1897.

LOVE, Edward Charles.—Agricultural conditions have changed mightily during the past half a century so that the older farmers can trace the successive improvements which have gradually been made, and many of them have assisted in securing present advancement. One of these is Edward Charles Love of section 23, Black Hawk township. He was born at Galena, Ill., December 16, 1852, a son of Samuel and Sarah (Little) Love, the former of whom was born in 1832 and died in a western state. His widow removed to New Orleans, La., after his death, and later married again. Edward Charles Love was the only child by her first marriage; and Buford and Blanche Lathrop were the children of her second.

Edward Charles Love was educated in the public schools of Bowling township, attending them until he was thirteen years old, when he took charge of the home farm, continuing his studies at home. His mother had bought this farm from the Government, but had the deed made out in the name of her son Edward C. The first farm comprised eighty acres of section 23, but later forty acres of section 26 and forty acres of section 23 were added. Edward C. Love was married to Miss Susan Martin, daughter of Mathias and Katherine (Kastner) Martin, both of whom were born in Baden, Germany, but came to America at an early date. Mr. and Mrs. Love became the parents of eight children, namely: Nettie, who was born February 21, 1879, is the wife of Henry Hutchinson of Bowling township; Pearl, who was born August 28, 1882, is the wife of Elmer Pfitzearmaier of this same township; Samuel H., who was born February 2, 1888; Charles M., who was born November 23, 1891; Stella May, who was born June 30, 1893, and Sarah, Elizabeth and Edward, who are deceased. Samuel and Charles are members of Camp No. 3147 Modern Woodmen of America of Preemption, to which their father also belongs. Samuel has been tax collector of Bowling township. There are four grandchildren in the family. Edward C. Love is one of the best farmers in his township and the property which has received the careful labor of all his years from the time he was thirteen years old, shows the effect of the care bestowed upon it, and producing banner crops, reflects credit on its owner.

LOVE, Henry Jay, M. D.—The modern physician finds very different conditions prevailing from those which confronted the doctor of half a century ago. Now half the work of the physician consists in preventing disease, and because of his public-spirited endeavors, the death rate of the country has never been so low, in spite of numerous accidents. The work of investigation which is resulting in new discoveries all the while, is eagerly followed by the physician, who gladly puts them into practical use as soon as their worth is conclusively proven. Rock Island county has some very efficient physicians and surgeons, among whom is Dr. Henry Jay Love, of East Moline. He was born at Orion, Ill., August 16, 1881, a son of Alexander L. and Mary S. Love, natives of Ireland and Davenport, Iowa. These parents live at Orion, where the father is president of the Farmers Bank. Dr. Love attended the Geneseo Collegiate Preparatory Institute, following which he entered Knox College, from which he was graduated in 1903, with the degree of A. B. Entering the medical department of the University of Michigan, he was graduated therefrom in 1907, with the degree of M. D. For the following two years he was assistant surgeon for the A. T. & S. F. Railroad, and during this time was attached to the chief surgeon's staff. On October 1, 1909, he opened an office at East Moline, and since then has built up a large practice. In 1909 and 1910 he rendered East Moline very valuable service as health commissioner, and inaugurated a system of sanitation that has proved of great benefit to the people. Dr. Love was president of the graduating class of the University of Michigan in 1907, and a member of the surgical staff of the same in 1907-07, under Dr. Charles B. Nancrede. He is a member of Phi Rho Sigma fraternity; and belongs to the Rock Island County Medical Society, the Illinois State Medical Society, the American Medical Association and the Illinois and Iowa Central District Medical Society.

On December 24, 1911, Dr. Love was married at Clinton, Iowa, to Amanda T. Hoeltjy of Loudon, Iowa, born May 2, 1883, a daughter of L. Hoeltjy also of Loudon, Iowa. Fraternally Dr. Love belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. In politics he is a republican. A skilled physician, close student and energetic man, Dr. Love has proven his merit, and is held in high esteem not only by those who have been his patients, but the city generally. Mrs. Love is a graduate of the German Hospital Training School for Nurses of Chicago, class of 1907. For two years she attended the Iowa State Normal School at Cedar Falls, Iowa.

LUCHMAN, Emil.—The people of the twentieth century are insistent in their demands to be amused, and are desirous of enjoying themselves out of doors. The Germans are responsible to a large degree for the growth in popularity of out door gardens where the entire family can gather and enjoy the companionship of neighbors, while listening to music and benefiting by the fresh air. One of the most delightful of these gardens in Rock Island is that known as the Luchman Inn, which is located between Rock Island and Milan. This place of amusement was founded by Emil Luchman, Sr., now deceased, but is carried on by his sons Emil Luchman, Jr., and his brother William. Emil Luchman, Sr., was born near Berlin, Prussia, Germany, in 1844, but came to America in 1869, and first located at Lyons, Iowa, where he worked at the trade of baker and confectioner, which he had learned in his native country. Later he moved to Marshalltown, Iowa, and West Union, Iowa, and continued working at his trade. In 1887 he came to Moline and engaged in the liquor business at what was known as the Halfway House, where he remained two years. He then moved to Rock Island where he continued in the liquor business until 1898, when he came to Sears which was his home until death, October 10, 1908. In politics he was a democrat and held the offices of supervisor and treasurer in Sears. At Lyons, Iowa, Mr. Luchman, in 1873, married Lucy Brusa, born at Luebeck, Germany, who survives him and resides at Sears. The Luchman Inn was opened for business in 1898, and is largely frequented by families from Rock Island.

Emil Luchman, Jr., was born at Marshalltown, Iowa, in 1881. He remained with his father, assisting him in operating his various places of business until 1902, when he assumed the management of Luchman Inn. After Emil Luchman Sr.'s death his sons Emil and William became associated in business and have continued operating the inn at Sears to the present time. Emil Luchman, Jr., is a democrat and has held the office of treasurer of Sears and is a member of the democratic county committee.

William Luchman was born in West Union in 1883, lived with and assisted his father to time of his death. He was married in 1909 to Miss Mary Swank, a native of Rock Island county, having grown up on her father's farm in Zuma township. They have two children, Mildred, born 1910, and Beruard, born 1912.

While both brothers are democrats in national matters, when it comes to local affairs at Sears, where they reside, they are very liberal, preferring to support the mau rather than party principles. Good business men, who understand the demands of their patrons, these young men are carrying out their father's plans, and maintaining the high standard he set at the beginning. They are representative citizens, whose interest in their community is public-spirited, and they are a valued addition to any neighborhood.

LUCHMANN, Henry C.—The business interests of Rock Island are heavy, and demand careful attention from those having them in charge. The various lines represented here embrace almost every calling, and as the people are intelligent, only first-class service and goods will satisfy them. One of the Rock Island business men of this class, who is numbered among the young residents of the county, is Henry C. Luchmann. He was born at Lyons, Ia., in 1875, son of Emily and Lucy (Brussey) Luchmann, the former born at Lukau, Germany, and the latter at Luebeck, Germany. The father came to the United States in 1871, locating at Clinton, Ia., where he worked at his trade of a baker. He went to Lyons, Ia., Marshalltown, Ia., and West Union, Ia., and in 1887, settled at Rock Island, where he bought a first-class buffet. From Rock Island he went to Sears, and opened what is known as the Luchmann Summer Garden, which he continued to operate until his death, in 1908. This garden is now continued by his son, Emil, Jr. Five children were born to Emil and Lucy Luchmann: Fred; Henry; Agnes, wife of Lawrence Strayer; Emil and William. The first three named are residents of Rock Island and the others of Sears, Ill.

Henry C. Luchmann attended the Rock Island and Moline public schools, and after leaving school he learned the plumbing trade. For eight years he followed his calling and then for eight years worked for Mr. James Given and purchased a first-class buffet in 1905, since which time he has operated it successfully.

In 1900 Mr. Luchmann married Mayme Binder of Davenport, Ia. The mother of Mrs.

Luchmann, Mrs. Catherine Binder, is residing with Mr. and Mrs. Luchmann, having lost her husband, William Binder. Fraternally Mr. Luchmann belongs to the Elks, Eagles, Owls and Moose. In politics he is a democrat. Very charitable, genial and pleasant, Mr. Luchmann has many warm, personal friends.

LUDEWIG, William Henry, M. D.—It is not sufficient, in these modern days, that a physician be merely one who prescribes remedies for diseases, or that a surgeon be only a person skilled in the use of surgical instruments. In addition to having a thorough knowledge in the art of healing, he must be a natural philosopher, a student of human nature in general, and the possessor of a mind that can keep pace with the achievements of the times, receptive to grasp the benefits to be derived from the wonderful discoveries being made and the scientific inventions produced. Medicine has taken such rapid strides during the past few decades that it requires an active mind and much close study for the physician of today to keep in touch with his profession, and he who would gain the most beneficial results therefrom must also be equipped with the most modern instruments known to surgery. One of the leading physicians and surgeons of Rock Island county, Ill., is Dr. William Henry Ludewig, of No. 1822 Fourth avenue, Rock Island, who was born in Suderburg, Germany, November 26, 1852, a son of Henry and Dorothy (Kerockel) Ludewig. Henry Ludewig was born at Suderburg and was about seventy-five years of age at the time of his death, while his wife, who was born at Wriddel, Germany, was seventy-two years old at the time of her demise. They were married in Wriddel, and came to America about 1860, where Mr. Ludewig followed the occupation of a nurseryman all of his life.

William Henry Ludewig attended the common schools of his native country, and completed his education in America, his medical training being secured in the medical department of the University of Iowa, from which he was graduated in 1890, with the degree of M. D. After graduation he went to Vienna, Austria, where he studied for eight months; returning home, he found employment as physician at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, at the State Insane Asylum, where he remained for eight months, from where he located at Rock Island, Ill., where he has been continuously, except one year, 1894-95, which he spent at Vienna, Austria, taking a post-graduate course.

Dr. Ludewig is the possessor of a well-appointed suite of offices at No. 1822 Fourth avenue, which location is also his residence, with entrance at 400 Nineteenth street, which are equipped with the most modern medical apparatus, and his success in many complicated cases has gained for him a reputation second to none in the city. Besides specializing on the eye, ear, nose and throat, he has had success in the surgical field. Dr. Ludewig is connected with the local lodges of the fraternal orders of Masons and Elks in Rock Island and with the county, state and American medical associations, having served as president of the county society.

LUDOLPH, H. A. Frederick, who has been one of the well-known residents of Rock Island since 1855, was for a long period engaged in the manufacture of harness here, is now retired from business activities and resides at his home, No. 806 Seventeenth street. Mr. Ludolph was born in the Province of Hanover, Germany, June 24, 1832, a son of Johan Frederick and Caroline (Oppermann) Ludolph, and a grandson of Henry Ludolph, all of whom died in Germany. Mr. Ludolph's mother died when he was a small boy, and his father was married again to her sister. Mr. Ludolph had one sister, Caroline.

H. A. Frederick Ludolph attended school until reaching the age of fourteen years, when he began learning the harness and saddlery trade, at which he was occupied in Germany until 1854, and in this year he left Bremen for the United States, landing at New Orleans after a forty-four-day journey on the sailing vessel "John Schmidt." After spending one year at his trade in Memphis Mr. Ludolph came to Rock Island as a journeyman and until 1858 was employed with Joseph Sailor, but in this year he opened an establishment of his own on Market square. Two years later he removed to No. 1724 Second avenue, and here he continued to carry on a flourishing business for thirty-one years, retiring in 1891 with a comfortable competency. His contracts were always lived up to, and the excellence of his work necessitated him at times to employ as many as seven or eight hands. He was always interested in matters of an educational nature, and also served his township as a member of the board of supervisors. Mr. Ludolph was confirmed in the faith of the Lutheran church, and he has always supported its movements with his time and means. Fraternally he is connected with Rock Island Lodge No. 18, I. O. O. F., and in political matters he is a republican. He has been an extensive builder in Rock Island, and in addition to his store he erected two single and five double houses here.

On November 17, 1859, Mr. Ludolph was married to Miss Elizabeth Kirsch, who was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1841, a daughter of J. Kirsch, a stone mason by trade, who came to the United States in 1853 and to Rock Island, Ill., in 1855. Mr. and Mrs. Ludolph have had the following children: Amelia, who married George Smith, of Muscatine, Ia.; Caroline, who married F. G. Young, of Rock Island; Anna, who is Mrs. Charles F. Bladel of Rock Island; Matilda, who is the wife of John Leidtke, of Rock Island; Henry M., who is a druggist of Chicago, married Bertha Berndt; William L., of Rock Island, married Ida Lundy; Flora, who married John J. Ullemeyer, of Rock Island; and Clarence A., who is an attorney of Davenport.

LUNDBERG, Nels A., general contractor and builder of frame and concrete houses, is one of the substantial men of Moline, who have done so much to raise a high standard of excellence in building operations. For five years, he has successfully carried on his independent operations, and ranks among the leading men in his line. He was born in Sweden, in 1868, son of Carl and Marie (Oquist) Lundberg. The parents were natives of Sweden, where the father died in 1902, his widow surviving him and making her home in that country. They had six children, two of whom are deceased.

Nels A. Lundberg came to America in 1902, and locating in Moline, first worked at his trade as a carpenter, which he had learned in Sweden. An industrious and thrifty man, he prepared gradually, but surely for embarking in business for himself, so that when he did so in 1907, he was assured of success. In 1891, Mr. Lundberg married Miss Johnson, a native of Sweden. They have six children: Hulda, wife of Edward Palmer; and Emil, Hugo, Amelia, Elvira, and Elvert. Mr. Lundberg is a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church. He is identified with the Eagles. While a republican in politics, he is very liberal in his views. The family reside in a commodious residence at No. 1154 Nineteenth street, which Mr. Lundberg owns. Thrifty, hard working, intelligent, Mr. Lundberg has steadily advanced, and at the same time has taken a deep interest in civic progress and is accounted one of the city's representative men.

LUNDEEN, Oscar, intimately associated by his business interests with the building up of East Moline, and the secure establishment of this city as a sound community, is one of the leading lathing contractors of Rock Island county. He was born in Sweden in 1879, but was brought to Moline by his parents when ten months old. His brother Emil was brought over at the same time. The father was a lather, and his sons now conduct the business he established. Their work covers many contracts, including one for 110 residences in East Moline, and also the lath work on the Y. M. C. A. building of Moline. Emil Lundeen remains in Moline, and Oscar Lundeen conducts operations in East Moline, so they are able to give personal supervision to all their contracts. They have also executed, and very satisfactorily, a number of contracts in Rock Island. The youngest contractors in their line, they operate under the firm name of Lundeen Bros.

Mr. Lundeen was married in Moline, to Bessie Swanson, of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Lundeen, have two children: Leroy, born April 27, 1907, and Evelyn, born March 6, 1909. The family reside in a commodious house in East Moline, which Mr. Lundeen built four years ago. He belongs to the Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen of America and Eagles. In 1910 he was elected a member of the East Moline board of aldermen, which office he is still holding.

Emil Lundeen married Hattie Ahmquist, and they have two children: Clare, born in 1906, and Lillian, born in 1903. This brother belongs to the Odd Fellows and North Star. Both are young men of exceptional business ability, who have earned their right to general respect and thorough confidence, and made the name of Lundeen Bros. stand for good work and honesty of dealing.

LUNDQUIST, Andrew P., who will long be remembered at Moline, Ill., for his honesty in business life and his sterling qualities as a man, was born in Sweden, October 4, 1846, and died from the effects of an accident, on April 15, 1906, at Moline. His parents were Swan and Anna (Larsen) Lundquist.

In his native land Mr. Lundquist had some educational opportunities and there learned to take care of himself in early youth, but had no chance to learn his trade, that of builder and contractor, until after he reached the United States, in 1868, when he located at Moline, Ill., which remained his home. As soon as competent he embarked in business for himself, in a small way at the beginning, but he was a natural mechanic and soon made rapid strides in his chosen work. In the last thirty-eight years of his busy life he superintended the erection of many of the city's best residences and most notable business blocks and when the sad news was flashed over Moline that an accident, received in the direct line of duty, had resulted in the loss of his life, in many a luxurious home and richly finished business office was the calamity commented on and the remark passed, "Why, it was Mr. Lundquist who built this house." Among the many buildings to which his name may be attached are the Kerns Block, on the corner of Fifteenth street and Sixth avenue; Rosstein's Block, on the corner of Fifteenth street and Fifth avenue; the two Lundville blocks on Fifteenth street; the old Auditorium, which was destroyed by fire; the Y. M. C. A. building, and many others, including important railroad structures. He employed a large force of men at all times and gave himself little relaxation but worked right along with his men, who gave him undying devotion for he led them instead of driving them. Although Mr. Lundquist was nearing his sixtieth milestone, so well preserved was he physically that he appeared many years younger. He was much interested in certain adjustment being made on the roof of the Sylvan plant of the Republic Iron & Steel Company, when a misstep caused him to fall and although he was hurried to the City Hospital and every medical and surgical aid was called in, his life could not be preserved.

At times Mr. Lundquist had made business investments and many of these had proved profitable. He was president of the Swedish Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Moline from the time of its organization until his death, a period of thirteen years, and was also president of the Moline Brick Company. In his political affiliations he was a strong republican and served three terms as alderman from the First Ward, being chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Commission, and had he lived one week longer, would have entered upon his fourth term in the city council. He had been a valuable member of that body and his associates sought his advice on all the public questions of civic importance coming before them, having confidence in his honesty and reliance on his business foresight. He found little time to serve in other public offices but for one term was assessor for the city of Moline. He was a prominent member of the Swedish Republican Club and a member of the Swedish Male Chorus.

Mr. Lundquist was twice married, his first wife surviving but one year and leaving no issue. On May 18, 1878, he was married to Miss Caroline Sophia Berglund, who is a daughter of Carl John and Sophia Charlotte (Johnson) Berglund. Mrs. Lundquist survives and is well known at Moline, being a very active and interested member of the Swedish Lutheran church, having served as president of its missionary society. Mr. Lundquist was a trustee of this church at Moline for some years prior to his death and was one of the dependable men of this body, ever cheerful in his gifts to its charities and benevolent wherever benevolence was needed.

LUNDQUIST, Claus L., manager for the firm of Democh, Gould & Co., lumber dealers of East Moline, is one of the progressive business men of this locality, and a man whose upward growth has been attained through his own individual effort. He was born in Sweden, February 16, 1865, he being a son of Gustav E. and Anna C. (Johnson) Lundquist, both natives of Sweden. They came to America in July, 1866, settling in Jefferson county, Iowa, where they resided until 1880, then moving to Moline. While in Iowa, the father farmed, but after coming to Moline, he entered the employ, as teamster, of the same concern as that of which his son is now manager, but he has now retired.

Claus L. Lundquist attended the public schools in Jefferson county until he was fifteen years old, when removal was made to Moline, and he entered the tub and pail factory owned by his present firm. Three years later he was made a teamster, and thus continued for eleven years. His ability then received recognition, and he was made a salesman. For seven years he gave his firm efficient and faithful service, and on February 18, 1901, he was made manager of the newly opened yards at East Moline, since which time he has conducted them for his house.

On May 8, 1895, Mr. Lundquist was married to Emma E. Burk, born in McPherson county, Kas., June 28, 1873, daughter of Swan and Mary Ann (Almgren) Burk, natives of Sweden and Iowa, respectively. Mr. Burk was a farmer in Kansas, but is now retired. There were seven children in the Burk family: Mrs. Clara Renker of California; Mrs. Tillie Sulberg of Kansas; Mrs. Ida Strom of Kansas; Henry L., a farmer of Kansas; Martin of Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Lundquist have had four children: Amos T., born April 20, 1896; Lloyd W., born March 7, 1898; Lila M., born April 15, 1901, and Sadie Henrietta, born April 5, 1904. In 1906, Mr. Lundquist built his pleasant residence at No. 515 Third avenue, East Moline. For three years Mr. Lundquist held the office of school director, being elected in 1908, and in 1905, he was made alderman from his ward, holding that important office for one term. He belongs to the Emanuel Lutheran church of Moline. Faithful, hard-working and thrifty, Mr. Lundquist has steadily forged forward, and now occupies a position of trust and responsibility, while he stands high in public esteem.

LYFORD, William Haines, M. D., one of the well known professional men of Rock Island county, who during late years has devoted nearly all of his time to the managing of his farming interests, belongs to one of the old and honored families of this part of the state. He was born at Port Byron, Ill., September 8, 1836, and is a son of Dr. Jeremiaah Hall and Mary Ann (Haines) Lyford. Dr. Jeremiaah H. Lyford was born in Northfield, N. H., and was graduated in medicine from Dartmouth college in 1833. He was married in young manhood to Mary Ann Haines, of Canterbury, N. H., from whence they emigrated to Ohio shortly after. In April, 1836, they came to Port Byron, Ill., where they spent the remainder of their lives, Dr. Lyford dying on his farm situated about four miles north of the city. Five children were born to them: William Haines; A. E.; Mary P., who married George E. Smith; Eugene, and Frederick B. Eugene was killed in the battle of Stone River, shortly after his enlistment in the Eighty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Dr. Lyford always took a deep interest in educational and church affairs, and was one of the first members of the Methodist Episcopal church, giving valuable aid in the building of the present church at Port Byron. He held many important positions of honor and trust, including those of postmaster and supervisor, and was a great worker in the cause of temperance. His practice for forty years covered a wide area in both Illinois and in Iowa.

William Haines Lyford attended the early schools here, the Iowa College preparatory department, then at Davenport, the Rock River Seminary at Mt. Morris and the Rush Medical College, Chicago, from which he was graduated in 1859, at once taking up the practice of his profession in Port Byron. He practiced until 1900, at which time he gave up his practice to look after his land interests, having 640 acres under his personal supervision, 200 acres being in timber and over 400 under cultivation, and he does general farming and grain raising, and feeds and fattens cattle and hogs for the market. He is a member of the state, county and national medical societies, and was one of the founders of the Iowa and Illinois District Medical Society, the headquarters for which are at Davenport and Rock Island. Dr. W. H. Lyford was the second town clerk of Port Byron Township. Upon the invitation of Mrs. Annette H. Guyer, a gathering was held at her home in Rock Island, on the fiftieth anniversary of the settlement in Rock Island county in 1846, of Hon. Geo. E. Holmes, at which articles relative to the family history of the Holmes, Belcher, Moore, Lyford, Guyer and Dodge families were read, which were later published by Dr. Lyford and are recognized as valuable contributions to local history.

On April 25, 1861, Dr. William H. Lyford was married at Port Byron, to Jane Holmes, daughter of George Edward and Mary (Moore) Holmes, and to this union the following children were born: George Abbott, born September 29, 1863, died August 8, 1864; Grace Rosetta, born August 4, 1865, married September 13, 1883, Frank Byron Skelton; Charlotte Ellen, born December 10, 1866, married September 16, 1891, James Holliday Boyd; Edward Hall, born January 12, 1869, married Eleanora Hanberg, October 19, 1904; Mary Annette, born September 25, 1870, married July 29, 1894, Charles Warren Hunter, M. D.; Clarence H., born October 24, 1872; Florence Cynthia, born April 7, 1874, married Rev. Frederick Israel Stevens, June 27, 1906; Frances Irving, born August 20, 1875; Burton, born May 18, 1877, died October 30, 1878; Lucy, born April 11, 1878, married May 28, 1908, Frank Morgan; Bessie, born August 3, 1879, married September 24, 1902, Harry Schreves and died April 29, 1903; Sarah, born March 19, 1881, died July 4, 1881; Ernest Jeremiah, born October 16, 1882, died February 17, 1908; and Edna Clarissa, born January 13, 1886, married January 6, 1910, George Schafer. Mrs. Lyford, who was born in Vermont, April 25, 1842, came to Port Byron with her parents in 1846, and died February 25, 1904.

Nathaniel Belcher came with his parents from the New England states and settled here, at the head of the upper rapids, in 1836. Mr. Belcher, Dr. Patrick Gregg and Candice Allen laid out the town and named it Port Byron. It was the custom for the women to do their washing on the bank of the river, near wood and water. Mr. Belcher, on his tour as assessor of the county, met a Miss Jenks here, who became his wife, but who lived only a short time. He afterward married Miss Cynthia Holmes of Vermont. Mr. Belcher was prominently identified in the mercantile business, served as Post Master and in various other official capacities, and built several houses, stores and an hotel. After Mr. Belcher's death his widow returned to Boston, and died in 1911, having been run over by an automobile.

George S. Moore came to Port Byron at the same time as Silas Marshall, in 1837, and engaged in the mercantile business, being the first merchant in this town. A niece of Marshall's wife, Harriet Dodge, came at the same time and engaged in teaching the first school. They had known each other from childhood, and when she went back to Vermont on a visit, Mr. Moore followed her, and they were there married in 1839. He purchased a fine team of black horses, a set of harness and a $500 covered carriage at Concord, N. H., and drove with his wife through the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and through Illinois to Port Byron. Later Mr. Moore sold his team and built a new house and barn. He put his carriage in the barn, and it was completely worn out by the children who played with it. Both Mr. Moore and his wife died in this town.

LYON, Capt. Marvin H., of Moline, comes of distinguished Huguenot ancestry, his forebears having been driven out of France about 1600, during the religious persecution. They went to England, and from there to the American colonies, and since arriving in this country this family has been represented in every war. Captain Lyon's grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and the War of 1812, taking a foremost part in the struggles of his country to achieve freedom. Edwin Lyon, father of Captain Lyon, was born in Connecticut, in 1815, and in early life moved to Ohio, where he married Miss Amy Meade, a relative of General Meade of Civil war fame. Here Mr. Lyon was engaged in the manufacture of pipe organs for a number of years, his plant being located at Fitchville. When war was declared between the North and South, in 1861, being debarred from enlistment by a physical defect, in his zeal to further the cause, he became one of the managers of the famous "underground railroad" by means of which slaves were run north to freedom. In 1866 he brought his family to Illinois and settling in Freeport, he resumed his business of installing pipe organs. Here Captain Lyon was born, September 22, 1866, and passed his happy childhood. In later years the captain's father and mother joined him in Moline, and there the father died in 1889, being buried with full Masonic honors, as he was a prominent member of the order. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Amy Lyon, who has a pleasant home with her son and his family.

Marvin H. Lyon was educated in the public schools of Freeport and resided there until 1882, when he came to Moline. Upon his arrival in this city he took a position with a laundry and remained in its employ for some years, learning every detail of the business, so that when he bought the Moline Steam Laundry he was able to conduct it profitably and make many intelligent improvements. It is now conducted under the name of the Lyon's Steam Laundry, and controls a large business, Captain Lyon sustaining his justly earned reputation for strict honesty in all his dealings.

Captain Lyon was married June 28, 1893, to Miss Nellie Pierce, born, reared and educated in Moline. She is a daughter of Harrison P. Pierce, who was a relative of President Pierce, and served in the Union army during the Civil war. Two children have been born to Captain and Mrs. Lyon: Marvin H., Jr., and Wesley, the latter being born while his father was serving as an officer in the United States army, stationed in Porto Rico, during the Spanish-American war.

Captain Lyon joined the Sixth Regiment, Illinois National Guard, in 1888, and in 1893 was made second lieutenant of his company, with which he aided in suppressing the riots in Spring Valley in 1889, and for three weeks in 1894 was stationed at Chicago during the great riots of that year. He served as second lieutenant in the Sixth Illinois Infantry in Cuba and Porto Rico during the Spanish-American war, and directed the work of his company during the riots in Rock Island in the spring of 1912, having been commissioned captain in the Sixth Illinois Infantry, in 1889, a position he still holds. Had he lived in a military, instead of a commercial age, he would surely have followed the profession of arms, his instincts being military, both from heredity and inclination. He comes from a race of soldiers. He has a large, well selected library, and is a reader, when the many calls of his busy life allow him the leisure, and is specially interested in the history of the nations of the world, and in their military achievements and equipment. Captain Lyon is fond of music, and while he has lacked opportunity to develop his talents, he is giving opportunities to his sons, one being a pianist and the other a violinist of more than ordinary merit.

MACPHERSON, Charles.—Fifty years ago the nation was threatened with dissolution, and had it not been for the patriotism of the thousands who sprung to its defense, present existing conditions would not have been possible. This something the younger generations should never fail to remember, a debt being owed by all succeeding generations, to the veterans of the Civil war. One of the honored veterans of this mighty struggle is Charles Macpherson, now living retired from agricultural pursuits in Illinois City. He was born in Philadelphia, Pa., February 22, 1836, a son of James and Margaret (Stroup) Macpherson. The father was born in Scotland, but came to the United States in young manhood, working first as clerk, and later as a storekeeper in Philadelphia, where he married. In 1837 he came to Illinois, by way of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, landing at Muscatine, Ia., when that was an Indian trading post. He settled in Illinois City, and took up 300 acres of government land, paying $1.75 per acre. His death occurred in 1879, his wife having passed away in 1868. Their children were: Henry, who died April 14, 1909, a veteran of Company K, One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry; Mary Jane; Eliza, who married Jacob Shafuit, a veteran of the Civil war, now deceased; Adeline, who married Leonard Manning, also a veteran of the Civil war; and Charles.

Charles Macpherson went to the old log school-house, his first teachers being a Mr. Rosington, Louisa Andrews and Eliza Robbins. Until his marriage, he worked on the home farm for his father, and then operated a portion of the homestead for six years. In July, 1864, he enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Deffield and Colonel Whitney, and served until the close of the war. Returning home, he resumed farming operations, and thus continued until his retirement to Illinois City.

In 1859 he was married to Ellen Peppers of Illinois City, daughter of John Peppers. She died in 1868, leaving two children: Harry of Moline, who married Kate Rood, issue,—Ruth and Cora; and Cora, Mrs. George Smith of Los Angeles, Cal., issue,—Roy, Clyde and Frank. On January 9, 1873, Mr. Macpherson married Louise Schutte. He belongs to the W. J. Wylie Post, No. 377, G. A. R. of Illinois City. In politics, he is a staunch republican. His wife belongs to the Methodist church, but he is not connected with any religious organization. During all of his life, Mr. Macpherson has endeavored to do what he felt was his duty, and his conscientiousness has resulted in his not only becoming a man of wealth, but also one who is highly respected throughout the country.

MADER, Adam, proprietor of the famous Maple Mere Farm of 200 acres in Edginton township, one of the best agricultural properties in this part of the state, belongs to an honored family of Rock Island county. He was born in Duncan township, Mercer county, Ill., November 8, 1863, a son of Michael and Mary (Garver) Mader, the former born in Germany in 1832. When he was fourteen years old, Michael Mader was taken from school and brought to America by his parents. They landed at New York city, from whence they came to Buffalo Prairie township, where the lad obtained work with John Streckfuss. As soon as he was able he entered land in Duncan township, Mercer county, to the extent of eighty acres, and later bought tracts adjoining until he owned 390 acres, and there he died in February, 1897. He was a republican, and he and his wife were members of the German Lutheran church. While living in Buffalo Prairie township, he married, and he and his wife had children as follows: Maggie who is Mrs. Valentine Fuhr of Mercer county; Adam; Michael who is on the old farm, married a Miss Taylor; Barbara who is Mrs. Louis Vetter of Duncan township, Mercer county; Mary who is Mrs. George Fuhr of Rock Island county; Lizzie, who is Mrs. Thomas Donohue of Mercer county; Bertha who is Mrs. Arthur Lewis of Rock Island county; Tillie who is Mrs. Everett Kissler of Rock Island county; and Amelia who is Mrs. Samuel Perry of Mercer county.

Adam Mader was educated in the public schools of his district and the German school of Rock Island. He worked for his father until he was married. November 29, 1888, to Annie Vetter of Duncan township, Mercer county, Ill., a daughter of George and Catherine (Vinegard) Vetter. Mr. and Mrs. Mader have the following children: Martina, who was born December 5, 1889; Milton who was born June 19, 1892; Rudolph who was born September 27, 1894; Kathleen who was born September 25, 1898; Sylvia who was born February 9, 1903, died November 22, 1905; and Kenneth who was born February 14, 1905. After marriage, Mr. Mader rented part of his father's original farm, remaining on it for twenty-two years. He then bought his present property, which he has developed to a remarkable degree. Both he and his wife are members of the German Lutheran church. In politics, he is a republican, and served as constable in Mercer county. While Adam Mader has devoted himself to farming, he has not allowed himself to be entirely absorbed with agricultural matters, but is well informed on current topics and well posted regarding national affairs. His interest in local matters is strong, and he desires nothing more than to see his township keep its pace among the advance guard in progressive farming.

MARDIS, William C.—The Chicago Rock Island and Pacific Railroad has long been a very important factor in the development and annual growth of Rock Island county. Not only are the different communities here placed in close connection with the entire country, but the various departments furnish employment for the brains and brawn of hundreds who make their homes within the confines of this county. One of the men connected with the road in an important capacity is William C. Mardis, of Carbon Cliff. He was born at Campbellsville, Taylor county, Ky., January 29, 1869, being a son of Carter Mardis, born in 1847 in Kentucky, who married a Miss McVicar, also born in Kentucky. The father farmed in his native state until 1883, when he went to Shelby county, Ind., there to continue his agricultural operations. The mother died in 1885. Their children were: William C.; Mary, Mrs. Henry Terry of Shelbyville, Ind.; Emmet; Sarah, Mrs. Frank Long of Shelbyville, Ind.; and Joseph and Robert, both of Shelbyville, Ind.

After going through the public schools of his locality, William C. Mardis when twenty years old, entered the Central Indiana Normal school at Danville, Ind., and after finishing his course, came to Illinois City, where he taught school until 1901. Although he was an exceptionally good educator, he left there to locate at Carbon Cliff, where he spent four years more in teaching, and also taught for two years in the district schools. On October 17, 1906, he entered the employ of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, and has been steadily advanced until he now has charge of all receiving invoices of material at this office.

On May 5, 1893, William C. Mardis was married to Elizabeth Schnell, born in Coal Valley, daughter of Charles H. and Augusta (Siedler) Schnell, born in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Mardis have had children as follows: Gertrude, Eunice, Carter, Celia and Georgia. Mr. Mardis is a Methodist. In politics he is a republican, and has filled the offices of justice of the peace of Buffalo Prairie township for two years, and president of Carbon Cliff since 1902. He belongs to Colona Lodge No. 684, I. O. O. F., Carbon Cliff, Camp No. 247, M. W. A., and the Fraternal Reserve Life Association, of which he has been supreme auditor since 1904. Although still in the prime of life, Mr. Mardis has already accomplished much. He is an educated, well-read gentleman, whose interest in scholarly matters is marked, but at the same time he enjoys association with his kind, and is a genial, pleasant person with numerous friends all over the county.

MARKEY, Bernard (deceased).—There is something so winning about the Irish people that they make friends wherever they go, and advance until they occupy positions of prominence in every line of life. They not only succeed materially, but gain the friendship of the best in the land, and when they die, their places remain empty, for no others can successfully fill them. The late Bernard Markey was a man for whom all had a good word, and for whom he evinced the kindest feelings. He was born in Ireland, December 13, 1831, a son of Patrick and Anna (Lappan) Markey, both natives of Ireland. The father died in Ireland, but the mother, who had come to the United States about 1852, passed away on the Markey farm in Edgington township, in 1865. Her children, all of whom also came to the United States, were as follows: Bernard; Mary, who afterwards became a convent sister; Catherine, who was Mrs. James McShane, died in Rock Island; and John, who served in the Civil war, as an officer, at the close of the struggle entered the U. S. service.

Bernard Markey came to the United States in 1849, landing at the same time as James McShane, who afterwards married his sister Catherine. They had but a quarter of a dollar between them, but as they immediately secured work on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, then in process of construction, this did not matter much. Mr. Markey finally reached Rock Island, February 14, 1856, and worked for farmers by the month, being anxious to buy a farm so as to furnish a home for his beloved mother, in which he succeeded. In 1863, Mr. Markey was married in Rock Island to Catherine Longbaugh, who survives him, now being sixty-eight years old. They had children as follows: Anna, who died at the age of sixteen years; John J., born on the home farm, October 8, 1866, attended the district school; Thomas N., born March 14, 1868, married Millie Garrett and lives at Reynolds, Ill.; James B., born on the home farm, November 4, 1870, took charge of it sixteen years ago, and bought it in 1908; Mary, who is Mrs. Richard Hogan of Aledo; and Margaret, unmarried, who lives at Homer. Mr. Markey was a member of St. Patrick's Catholic Church of Edgington. Politically he was a staunch democrat. Mr. Markey died July 16, 1908, after a well-spent, industrious life, and is sincerely mourned.

MARMERSDORFF, Ernest.—The substantial farmers of Rock Island county have attained their present prosperity through industry, thrift and perseverance, and are to be congratulated on the foresight that made them select this very desirable portion of the state for their field of operation. One of them who has gained a good livelihood from the soil is Ernest Marmersdorff, of Hampton township. He was born in Oldenburg, Holstein, Germany, June 20, 1844, being a son of Franz and Catherine (Maemstroff) Marmersdorff, both of whom died in Germany.

Until 1881, Mr. Marmersdorff worked as a farmer in Germany, but in that year left his native land for the United States, and came direct to Davenport, Iowa. There he was employed in the Argillo works and later went to Carbon Cliff, Ill., where he remained for a number of years. He then bought 20 acres of land, farming it for one year, when he was able to sell at a profit, and then rented land until 1906, when he bought 40 acres on section 14, Hampton township, which is his present home. The frame farmhouse was on the property when he bought it, but he has built the barn and other outbuildings, and made many other improvements, until he now has a very good farm, all of which yields a fine crop under his skilled management.

Mr. Marmersdorff was married in Germany, in May, 1872, to Catherine Lang, born in Germany. Their children were: Anna, Mrs. Henry Willie of Hampton township; Henry Ernest at home; and Dora, Mrs. Adam Wildermuth, of Geneseo, Henry county, Ill. During the Franco-Prussian war in 1870-71, Mr. Marmersdorff saw active service in the German army. He is a consistent member of the Lutheran church. In political faith, he is independent, preferring to vote for the man he believes best fitted for office, than to bind himself by party ties. He is one of the reliable, sound men of his township, and one whose industry and strict probity have never been questioned. Mrs. Marmersdorff died September 17, 1911, and is buried in the Lutheran cemetery in Hampton township.

MARRON, John Thomas.—Probably there has been no greater agent for the advancement and benefit of mankind than that of electricity, known as a powerful physical agent which makes its resistance manifest by attractions and repulsions, by producing light and heat, commotions, chemical decompositions and other phenomena. Ever since 600 B. C., when Thales discovered that when amber was rubbed with silk it became capable of attracting light bodies, through the centuries to 1600 A. D., when Gilbert first used the word "electric," in regard to science, in his book, "De Magnete," through the times of Benjamin Franklin and his famous kite, down to the present date, man has been engaged in trying to harness this great power to his own needs, but it has only been in the last few years that nature has given up one of its great secrets and even now it still remains to be discovered what electricity really is. Electricity has been used as a means of locomotion, as a medium for carrying messages through the telegraph, wireless and telephone, as a means of heat and light, and even in the execution of criminals, but it is probable that the greatest benefit to mankind has accrued from electrically driven machinery, which in late years has so largely superseded that driven by steam, and which has made easy the working out of engineering and construction problems that in former years would have seemed impossible of accomplishment. John Thomas Marron, who is engaged in the electrical construction business at Rock Island, has been interested in electrical work all of his life. He was born March 9, 1872, at Grand Mound, Ia., a son of John and Marcella (Emmis) Marron. John Marron was born in County Down, Ireland, August 9, 1835, and was a farmer by occupation, coming to this country when but sixteen years of age. He was married at Grand Mound, Ia., in 1868, to Marcella Emmis, who was born in County Longford, Ireland, February 20, 1838, and they were the parents of three children, of whom John Thomas was the only son.

John Thomas Marron received his education in the common schools of Grand Mound, and later the degree of electrical engineer from the Scranton School of Correspondence. He lived in western Iowa until sixteen years of age, removing thence to Clinton, Ia., and later to Rock Island, Ill., where he has since been in business. All of his active life has been devoted to the study of electrical problems and electrical construction work, and he is one of the best informed men of his day and locality on the subject. He has always taken a great interest in the growth of Rock Island, and his public-spirited services caused his appointment as a member of the industrial commission. Fraternally, he is connected with the Knights of Columbus, being a charter member, a past grand and district deputy of that order. Personally, Mr. Marron is very popular, and he has gained quite a reputation as an after-dinner speaker and entertainer. Mr. Marron's religious connection is with St. Joseph's Catholic church, in which he takes the utmost interest, and he has always been ready to assist with his time or means any movements of an educational, religious or charitable nature. Mr. Marron was married at Sterling, Ill., to Mary E. Lyons, one of three daughters of John and Bridget Lyons, her sisters being Julia and Katherine. Mr. and Mrs. Marron have had the following children: Leo, James, Charles, Eileen and Katherine.

MARSHALL, William H., an honored and representative citizen of Rock Island, whose term of residence covers over thirty years, for twenty-two of these was identified with the drug trade, as proprietor of the Harper House Pharmacy, in the Harper House, then the leading hostelry of this city. Mr. Marshall was born in Warren county, Ind., April 23, 1851, a son of Edward P. and Ann (Kellam) Marshall. They were natives of Pennsylvania from which state they moved to Indiana in the early forties, and there the father followed an agricultural life until 1854, when he removed to Vermilion, Ill., his wife having died in 1852, and his death occurred there in 1857. They were members of the Society of Friends.

William H. Marshall, one of a family of eleven children, obtained his education in the local schools. When twenty years of age he entered a drug store at Rossville, Ill., as clerk and student, later went to Shipman, Ill., in the same capacity and remained there for five years, during a part of that period being in business for himself. In April, 1880, he came to Rock Island, purchasing the Harper House Pharmacy and during his long connection there became acquainted with people from every section of the country. Frequently tempting offers were given him to induce him to locate at other points, but Mr. Marshall has always been loyal to Rock Island. He has shown his faith in her enterprise and stability by investing at different times in her infant industrial enterprises, which have developed into large concerns since then, and in real estate in city and county. He has additional property interests in the West. Mr. Marshall is nominally a republican but his activities are confined to the performance of the duties of citizenship as concerns himself.

On September 3, 1893, Mr. Marshall was married to Miss Elise Augusta Denkmann, a daughter of Frederick C. A. and Catherine Denkmann of Rock Island, and they have one son and one daughter. The family is well known in the city's pleasant social life and in times of public disaster Mr. Marshall has always been one to come forward to not only give judicious advice but to give financial aid. He has long been identified with the Masonic fraternity.

MARSTON, Ernest Linwood, M. D., now retired from the active practice of his profession, has made a success of farming in Rock Island county, owning a large and well improved estate. He was born at Gardiner, Kennebec county, Me., April 13, 1860. John Marston, the emigrant ancestor of the family, came in 1700 from Marston Moor, England, nine generations ago. The grandfather of Dr. Marston, Daniel Marston, of Kennebec, Me., married Nancy Freeman. Their son, Gustavus Adolphus Marston, a native of Kennebec, was a farmer by occupation, who in 1869 came to Illinois with his second wife. They located in Buffalo Prairie township, Rock Island county, securing a farm on section 34. He died in 1882. His first wife, the mother of Dr. Marston, died in Maine. His second wife, Mary E. Gardner Holland Marston, returned to Maine after her husband's death, and was married again. Gustavus A. Marston had several children, of whom three now survive, namely: Mary E., Mrs. R. B. Platt who is of Billings, Mont.; Herbert G. who is a farmer of Mercer county, married Minerva E. Gridley; and Ernest L.

Dr. Marston attended the public schools of Maine until he was nine years old, when the family came to Illinois. He continued his education after the removal here, and was graduated from Rush Medical College, Chicago, in the class of 1887-88. For fifteen years after receiving his degree he practiced his profession in Buffalo Prairie township, and won distinction in his profession, but then retired from active practice and engaged in farming, being now the owner of a fine farm of 240 acres of land. He is well known in his part of the county and is active along the lines of public improvement and progress.

Dr. Marston and others established on August 7, 1912, the Buffalo Prairie Bank at Buffalo Prairie, capitalized at $10,000, backed by probably $1,000,000. He was elected president, an office he still holds. In less than six months after its establishment, the bank had received $60,000 in deposits. Dr. Marston is a staunch democrat, and fraternally is connected with Buffalo Prairie Lodge No. 679, A. F. & A. M., which he served as master five terms. Dr. Marston was married in April, 1884, to Miss Adeline P. Volkel, of Buffalo Prairie township; a daughter of George and Mary (Platt) Volkel, and children have blessed this union as follows: Carroll G. and Elmo V. who are both at home; Catherine M. who is Mrs. John Flaherty, of Buffalo Prairie township; Frances E. and Alice M. who are both at home; Gladys E. who died in infancy; Ernest Linwood, Jr., and Freeman Burr, all having had good educational advantages.

MARTENS, John.—Germany occupies a prominent position in the foremost ranks of colonizers, for its men and women go forth with the strenuous purpose of bettering their condition and founding homes in whatever new land they select as the objective point of their emigration. For this reason any region that has a number of German born residents, is certain to be prosperous. Rock Island county fortunately has attracted a number of these substantial people, and one of them is John Martens, of Black Hawk township. He was born in Holstein, Germany, June 3, 1842, being a son of John Martens, deceased. The latter was born in Germany, and in 1867 came to America with two children, John and Anna, the latter now the widow of Fred. Willhoff of Davenport, Ia. The father died at Davenport in 1876. John Martens, Jr., was educated in the public schools of Germany, attending them until he was sixteen years of age, at which time he began working on farms in his native land. When he was twenty-two years old the family came to American shores, and he secured employment on farms in the vicinity of Davenport, Ia. Ten years later John Martens bought a farm of 120 acres, in Bowling township, but sold 60 acres, residing there for sixteen years, but then moved to Black Hawk township, buying 100 acres, now known as Turkey Hollow Farm, which he has developed and upon which he has made many improvements.

On April 4, 1878, John Martens was married at Davenport, Ia., to Johanna Kielenbeck, born in Bremen, Germany, January 21, 1852, a daughter of William Kielenbeck, who came to the United States in 1871. Mrs. Martens has one brother, Fred Kielenbeck, a stonemason, residing in Rock Island county. Mr. and Mrs. Martens became the parents of a family, the living ones being as follows: John, born August 3, 1879; Annie, born April 10, 1881, married to Robert Kane, and they have five children—Dorothy, Thomas, Frederick, Gretchen, and Virginia; Freeda, born June 20, 1883; Bertha, born May 18, 1885; Leopold, born September 6, 1887; William, born May 20, 1889; and Karl, born April 14, 1893. One son, Henry, born April 11, 1891, died August 13, 1893. Religiously, John Martens is a member of the German Lutheran church. Politically, he is a democrat, but his farming interests absorb his time, so he has never entered public life. He is a sound, reliable citizen, excellent farmer, and a man whom anyone can trust implicitly, knowing they will get from him a perfectly square deal in every particular.

MARTIN, Hugh R., proprietor of the only blacksmith shop in the village of Coal Valley, and the best equipped one in this section of the county, is one of the best known men of Rock Island county. His plant is operated by gasoline power so that he is prepared to do all kinds of wood work and execute orders along similar lines. He was born in Coal Valley, October 27, 1874, being a son of Hugh and Mary Ann (McGimpsey) Martin. The parents were natives of Ireland, who came to America in 1868, locating in Coal Valley, where the father operated a blacksmith shop until his death, in 1900. His wife passed away in 1897. They had nine children: John, deceased; Matilda; Mary; Katy; Edwin; one that died in infancy; Janette; Blanche, who died at the age of four years; and Hugh R.

Hugh R. Martin was reared in Coal Valley, here attending the common school, and worked in his father's shop, thus learning his trade. Having grown up in their midst, Mr. Martin controls the patronage of the miners and farmers, and has honestly earned their confidence, for he is an excellent workman and honorable business man. He takes great pride in his plant, and is constantly improving it.

In 1898 Mr. Martin was married to Nellie Webster, who was born in New York state, but brought here by her parents. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Martin: Katherine M. and Edwin. In politics Mr. Martin is a republican and has served as trustee of the village of Coal Valley for eight years. Several years ago he joined the Masonic fraternity and belongs to the Coal Valley lodge. Few men stand higher in the village than this energetic, honorable young man, who is competent to execute any orders given him, and public-spirited enough to give of his time and energy towards the bettering of existing conditions and securing of good government.

MARTIN, John S.—After a man has spent thirty-seven years in one community, his character is generally pretty well known to his fellow citizens, who have had ample time to become thoroughly informed as to his manner of doing business, his ideas of public citizenship and his worth as a man of family and a neighbor, and the high esteem in which John S. Martin is held by all who know him, testifies to the fact that he is one of Bowling township's representative men. John S. Martin, who is the owner of a 320-acre tract of land on section 23, was born November 28, 1847, in Bavaria, Germany, the oldest of eight children of Mathias and Katherine (Castner) Martin. Mathias Martin was born November 30, 1809, and was married in Germany to Katherine Castner, who was born June 5, 1828. In his native country Mathias Martin learned the trade of a shoemaker, and on first coming to the United States settled at Farmington, Jefferson county, Wis., where he followed his trade and engaged in farming for twelve years. He had come to this country in 1849, and in the following year sent for his wife and baby, who joined him at Farmington. John S. Martin still loves to relate the experiences of the Wisconsin pioneer days, when on one occasion he froze his feet while keeping the deer from eating the winter crop of wheat on the home farm. In 1864 the family came to Rock Island county, where Mathias Martin purchased a farm, and here resided until his death, September 10, 1890, while his widow survived him until March 8, 1907.

John S. Martin received a public school education, and until twenty-seven years of age worked on the home farm. He earned his first dollar of wages as a wood chopper in the Wisconsin lumber camps, where for two years he worked at a wage of four dollars a month, the next year being paid six dollars and the last year twelve dollars per month. He assisted in building the house on the old homestead, but after coming to Rock Island county worked for Thomas Johnson for twenty-nine dollars per month, but was paid in "shin-plasters," currency which was much in use at that time but which averaged only about one dollar's worth of gold money to two dollars and one-half of the "shin-plasters."

On November 22, 1882, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Weiss, who was born June 27, 1857, a daughter of Michael and Hannah W. (Hyme) Weiss, natives of Wittenberg, Germany, who came to the United States at an early date and were among the first settlers of Rock Island county. Mrs. Martin died March 8, 1903, having been the mother of five children, namely: Elmer M., born in 1888; John E., born August 1, 1890; Wilbur, born September 27, 1894; May, died March 8, 1903; and Emma, died August 30, 1907. Mr. Martin is a consistent member of the Methodist church and is a democrat in his political views, having served as pathmaster and a member of the election board of Bowling township. He has been successful in his farming operations, now being the owner of 320 acres of valuable land, and can look back over a useful and well-spent life.

MATHEIS, George A.—Persistent endeavor along legitimate lines will bring its own reward, as many a farmer of Rock Island county has proven. Their broad acres, comfortable houses and commodious barns prove this, and add to the general prosperity of their townships. One of these is George A. Matheis of Coe township. He was born in a Rhine province, Germany, September 11, 1853, being a son of Joseph and Mary (Engel) Matheis, who never left their native land, where both died. They had six children, George A. being the fourth in order of birth, and he is the only one now living. These parents were excellent people who brought up their children to industrious and thrifty habits and firm in the faith of the Catholic church.

George A. Matheis went to the public school in Germany and remained in his native land until he was nineteen years old. He then came to America, making his way to Rock Island county. Upon his arrival here he worked by the month for a start, finally buying 218¼ acres of land one and one-half miles southeast of Port Byron. When he came to it there was not even a shed on it, and he has made all the improvements. His house, barns and other buildings are substantial and kept in fine condition. He believes in modern methods, and is always willing to adopt those he thinks will be of aid to him in his work.

On March 1, 1881, he married Anna Martina, born in Hampton Bluff, daughter of Weigand and Elizabeth (Good) Martina. Mr. and Mrs. Matheis are the parents of five children: Dave, Peter, Lizzie, the latter wife of William Buckley of this county; Veronia and Mary. He and family belong to St. John Catholic church of Rapid City, and are faithful to its creed. He is a thrifty, hard-working man, whose interests have been centered in his farm, and he has every right to be proud of what he has accomplished.

MATHIAS, George Lee, is one of the younger farmers who has made a notable success in agricultural pursuits in Rock Island county. He brings to bear on his work the results of his study of modern methods, and is an enthusiastic and energetic farmer. Mr. Mathias spent several years in teaching school, but was born and reared on a farm. He has taken great pleasure in improving his estate, both for the purpose of increasing its productiveness and to add to its attractiveness, and the attractive residence he and wife occupy is fitted with modern conveniences including hot water appliances and a gas plant for lighting. This farm, comprising 104 acres of choice land, on section 24 of Edgington township, bears the pretty name of "Rose Lawn," and is one of the most picturesque and beautiful spots between Taylor Ridge and Reynolds.

George Lee Mathias is of German descent and was born on his father's farm near Winchester, Ohio, July 17, 1880, son of Coleman and Mary C. (Hall) Mathias and grandson of Joseph Mathias. Joseph Mathias, who was born in Germany, brought his wife and family to the United States, locating first in Marion county Ohio. He was a shoemaker and worked at his trade for some time at New Hope, Mercer county, Ohio, where his death occurred. He was married a second time, in Brown county, where his wife died, having been the mother of two children, Coleman and Mollie, the latter being Mrs. John R. Shaw, who lives near Winchester.

Coleman Mathias, father of George L., was born and reared in Ohio and from Adams county moved to Winchester. He married Mary C. Hall and they became parents of children as follows: George Lee; Jesse E., of Cherry Fork, Ohio, who married Ruth Patton; Charles, living near Winchester, who married Mary Eckman; Ada, who is the wife of Alfred Kepperling, a machinist of Cherry Fork; Bert, who is a school teacher in Mercer county, Ohio; and Laura, who is the wife of Gus Stephenson, a school teacher at Cherry Fork.

In boyhood George L. Mathias was educated in the district schools which he entered at the age of eight years, and the high school, which he entered when fourteen years old, from which he graduated. At the age of eighteen years, he began teaching in the local schools, and continued four terms. Later he spent two ten-week terms at the Ohio University, and thus endeavored to add to his educational advancement. In 1904 he came to Illinois and for a time was employed as bookkeeper, but later was engaged by Alex Mayhew, a farmer living near Aledo, for whom he worked by the month. Afterward he rented a farm near Aledo, of his father-in-law, and conducted the same for two years. His marriage occurred August 12, 1908, when he was united with Miss Rose Aletha Sterling, daughter of the late Michael F. Sterling and Susan Chowning. Her mother survives. Mrs. Mathias was born on the home farm, "Pinehurst," in Perrinton township, Mercer county, July 11, 1886, and was educated in the Aledo schools, from which she graduated with the class of 1903. Subsequently she became a successful teacher, spending four years in Mercer and one in Henry county.

In the autumn of 1909, Mr. and Mrs. Mathias located on their present farm, which he then purchased. They are well known in social circles and have many friends, both being actively interested in the general welfare and prosperity of their township and county. They have no children. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Millersburg, Mercer county, Ill. Mr. Mathias is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In politics he is a republican.

MATTHEY, Frederick C. (deceased).—The custom prevailing in Germany of teaching each child a trade is one that could be followed with profit in this country. Brought up to work hard and save money, the German people are as a class prosperous, and they bring with them these habits into their new homes when they emigrate. For this reason they are always welcomed, for they make good citizens. One of the men belonging to this class in Rock Island is Frederick Matthey, a stone mason, born June 25, 1841, in Germany. He was a son of Charles M. and Louisa (Karntz) Matthey, who came to the United States in 1870. They settled in Rock Island, where the father died in 1902. The mother passed away twenty-five years ago. They were farming people.

Frederick C. Matthey came to the United States in 1869, and landing in New York city, he proceeded direct to Rock Island where he obtained employment on Government Island as a stone cutter, thus continuing for fifteen years. He then embarked in a dairy business, and remained in it for some twelve years, following which he bought eleven and one-half acres of land and resided on it afterward for about ten years, prior to death living retired. Landing in this country with but $37 in his pocket, Mr. Matthey attained remarkable success, all of his money having been gained by slow, but ever increasing degrees. He was a member of the German Lutheran church of Rock Island. In politics he was a republican.

Mr. Matthey was married August 21, 1868, in Germany, to Miss Minnie Seidletz, born in Germany March 18, 1841. They had these children: Margaret, who married Christ H. Hildebrandt, of Rock Island; Minnie, who married William Campbell, also of Rock Island; William, who is employed in the Sash and Door Works at Rock Island; and Annie, who married William Trone, of Rock Island, a dining car conductor on the Rock Island Railroad. There are ten grandchildren in the family. Mr. Matthey was a man who gained the confidence and respect of his community, one who was trusted in every relation of life. He was ever ready to give a hearty support to all measures looking towards the betterment of the section in which so many years of his life had been spent.

MATTSON, John.—No country produces finer workmen than Sweden, and its people are respected wherever found for their reliability and industrious and thrifty habits. One of the men who has set an example of faithful endeavor and economic living is John Mattson, a retired carpenter residing at No. 612 Fourth avenue. He was born in Sweden, June 21, 1840, a son of Mattias and Christine Mattson, farming people. Mr. Mattson attended public school in Sweden, and did whatever work he could find. His country had a term of service in the army from him, and he was faithful in that, as in all other positions he has filled.

Marrying in Sweden, in 1867, Helena M. Hendrickson, he came to the United States two years later, landing at New York City. He spent two years at Moline and Rock Island and was then joined by his wife, who had remained in Sweden to that time. He began working as polisher for the Rock Island plow factory, continuing in the employ of this company for thirteen years. Never feeling himself too old to learn, he began at the carpenter trade, mastered it, and followed that line of work until his retirement quite recently. Mr. Mattson was one of the founders of the Swedish Lutheran church here, helping to blast the stone for the foundation of the little church edifice. In politics he is a republican. Mr. and Mrs. Mattson became the parents of four children: Matilda, who died in Sweden; Ida M., who was born in Rock Island, married Louis J. Wessel, a shoemaker, issue—Helen V. Myrtle, Mildred O., Dorothy I., Carl John Louis, Elmer Nels and Emanuel; Emma, who died in childhood; and Charles John of Moline, who married Anna O. Samuelson, issue—Carl M. and Virgil Theo. Mr. Mattson has a number of warm, personal friends, and to them he and Mrs. Mattson enjoy extending a warm hospitality that makes the visitor seem at home immediately.

MAUTHE, Capt. John, captain of fire station No. 4, Moline, to which responsible position he was appointed on January, 1911, is one of the old and experienced men of the department and has shown his courage and resourcefulness in many a conflagration and bears honorable scars. Captain Mauthe was born on a farm near Fort Wayne, Ind., in 1871, and is a son of John Mauthe and his wife, who came to the United States from Germany, where they were born. For a number of years the family lived on a farm near Fort Wayne, Ind., but moved to Fort Wayne in 1880, where the mother died eight years later, the father of Captain Mauthe surviving until 1900. They were parents of four children, namely: Martin, Agnes, John and Mary.

Up to the age of nine years John Mauthe lived on the farm where he had his appointed duties even in boyhood, and ever since has led a busy and useful life. After his school days were over, ending in the public schools of Fort Wayne, he went to work in a wheel factory and remained for five years, thoroughly learning the wheelwright trade. Afterward he worked at this trade for two years at Kalamazoo, Mich., and one year at Lansing, in the same state, and in 1891 came to Moline and here entered the employ of the Mutual Wheel Company, where he continued until he entered the fire department in 1896, when it was organized as such, although for five years previously he had been a member of the volunteer company. It requires a high degree of real courage to be an efficient and capable fireman and before promotions in this branch of city service are made, many tests are applied. Mr. Mauthe served as a regular fireman from 1896 until 1911, a period of fifteen years, and it is not difficult for residents of Moline to recall the occasions when they felt the deepest gratitude to this fearless body of trained men through whose courage and promptness lives and property were saved. Proper appreciation was shown when Mr. Mauthe received his present appointment. In 1897 Captain Mauthe was married to Miss Mayme Mueller, of Rock Island, and they had two children, both of whom died in infancy. Captain and Mrs. Mauthe reside in their own comfortable residence which is situated at No. 342 Second street, Moline. In politics he is not bound by any party tie and fraternally he is identified with the Masons and the Red Men.

MAYER, John.—Germany is certainly to be credited for many of America's best and most responsible men, for in any community those who are numbered among the most thrifty and reliable are either of German birth or parentage. One of the most representative of these German-Americans of Rock Island is John Mayer, now retired, living at No. 820 Twenty-first street. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, April 1, 1828, a son of Leonard and Catherine (Frey) Mayer, the former of whom was born in 1793. These parents never came to the United States, the father dying in 1873, and the mother in 1863, both in their native land. The father was a soldier in the German army, and fought in the Napoleonic wars. He and his wife had six children, two of whom survive: Catherine Beal of Sandusky, O., and John Mayer.

In 1848 John Mayer sailed from Rotterdam, Holland, and after sixty-seven days on the water, landed in New York city. He first went to Buffalo, N. Y., where he remained a year, working at the trade of weaving, which he had learned from his father. He then went to Sandusky, O., and from there to Michigan, thence to Chicago and spent two years in that city. Mr. Mayer then went to Bloomington, Ill., from there to Springfield, Alton, St. Louis and up the Mississippi river to Burlington, Ia., and then to Rock Island by stage, arriving in this city December 25, 1852, which place has since continued his home. He then embarked in a shoemaking business, giving employment to four men, but in 1897 he retired and in 1898 he bought his present comfortable home.

Mr. Mayer was married in Rock Island, February 15, 1853, to Christina Bently, born in Germany, in 1831, but brought by her parents to Pennsylvania, from whence they came to Rock Island in 1842. They died soon thereafter, having been among the early settlers of this county. Mrs. Mayer died in 1890, having been the mother of seven children: Kate, married, lives in Rock Island county; Rose, married, lives at Fort Madison, Ia.; Christina, married, lives at Washington, D. C.; and Malby and Clara L., both of whom live at home. There are seven grandchildren, and the three great-grandchildren are named: Bessie, Margery and Clarence. Few men stand higher in the respect and esteem of their neighbors than Mr. Mayer, whose long life of probity and usefulness has been filled with so many good deeds and thoughtfulness for others.

MAYHEW, George E.—Mount Pleasant Farm is one of the most desirable properties in Rock Island county, being favorably located in Edgington township, and its owner, George E. Mayhew, has put in all the improvements and developed it into its present excellent condition. Mr. Mayhew is one of the progressive farmers of this region who believes in employing modern methods in his work, and reaps benefits accordingly. He was born in Mercer county, Ill., June 1, 1866, being a son of D. S. and Betsy (Cooper) Mayhew, the former born in Washington, Pa., August 31, 1834, and the latter, November 13, 1838. They were farming people. The father came to Illinois in 1856, locating in Perryton township, Mercer county, where he bought 160 acres of land, remaining on it for three years, when he moved to Duncan township, which continued his home until 1897, when he retired to Aledo, Ill., and is now living there. His wife died August 3, 1910. She was a daughter of Levi and Lucy (Sproston) Cooper, who came here in 1848, from England, and the marriage of Miss Cooper and D. S. Mayhew took place in Mercer county. Their children were as follows: Emma, who is the wife of George E. Close; Levi C.; L. H.; George E.; Effa, who is the wife of George Hartman of Montana; Bertha, who is the wife of Fred Hartman; John and Alexander, twins; a babe that died unnamed; Ira D., and Edward E.

George E. Mayhew bought the place where he now lives in 1902, and is proud of his fine farm, as he has every reason to be. He has been assisted very materially in his work by his wife, to whom he was married September 16, 1891, her maiden name having been Lena Krueger. She is a daughter of William H. and Minnie (Kreist) Krueger, both natives of Germany. The father was born August 24, 1854, and died April 13, 1908. The children in the Krueger family were: Mrs. Mayhew; Charles; William; Lena, wife of William Krueger; Lydia, wife of E. J. Platt; Lewis; George; Minnie, wife of Orville Whiteside; Mary, deceased; Emma and Christian of Illinois City. Mr. and Mrs. Mayhew have had four children: Fern T.; Minnie E.; David W. and Adria L.

Mr. Mayhew is a member of the Baptist church, and for the past two years has been superintendent in the Sunday school. He has served as church trustee, and also as deacon. For three years Mr. Mayhew has been assessor, being elected the first time in 1906, and for four years was school director. Fraternally, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, and is one of its most enthusiastic members. His experience has made of him a good farmer, and he is naturally ambitious to extend his operations and own more land to bring into the high state of cultivation he believes necessary to insure success.

McADAM, John Allen, proprietor of the McAdam Marble and Granite Works of Reynolds, and one of the old-established business men of this place, having been a factor of its commercial life for thirty-two years, as well as one of its first settlers, and for five years previously actively associated with interests in Mercer county, is a man of natural ability who has won well-merited prosperity. He was born on a farm in West Deer township, Allegheny county, Pa., May 10, 1851, a son of Samuel and Ann (Keown) McAdam, and grandson of Samuel McAdam. The latter died in County Down, Ireland, where his son, Samuel, was born May 11, 1813. The latter attended school, securing a fair education, and came to the United States in 1833, landing in either New York city or Philadelphia. For some time he lived in the latter city, doing work by the day, but went from there to Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was a lock tender for two years along the Pennsylvania canal. Following this, he located on a farm in West Deer township, working it and making it his home until his death. John Allen McAdam attended the district schools in the winter until eighteen years old, and then on March 4, 1869, he began learning marble and stone cutting with Forrester & McGraw, of Allegheny City, Pa. Coming to Chicago, he did his first work there just prior to the big fire in 1871, and watched the flames wipe out so much of that city. For two seasons, Mr. McAdam worked at Chicago, but in the spring of 1872, he came to Hamlet, Ill., to be married, afterward returning to Chicago, where he resided until the fall of 1872, when he located at Hamlet, built a house, and remained until 1879. He then moved to Reynolds, Ill., and once again built a home, and moved into it on his birthday, May 10, 1880. He has built up a large trade in his business, specializing on monumental work, his patrons coming to him from a radius of fourteen miles. He has also done all the stone work on many buildings at Reynolds and its vicinity. Beginning his business life without a dollar, he has succeeded because he was ambitious, industrious and thrifty, so that his early poverty made but little difference to him. During his first year at Chicago, he saved $200, but spent the greater part of this amount in moving to Hamlet.

On February 8, 1872, Mr. McAdam was married at Hamlet, Ill., to Ann E. Gilmore, daughter of Joseph G. and Lettie A. (Brady) Gilmore. The children of Mr. and Mrs. McAdam are: Samuel Gilmore who is of Reynolds, married Sarah Manning, and they have: Lee Francis, Clyde, Theodore and an infant; George who died in infancy; Allen who is at home; Frank Ira who is of Reynolds, is a rural mail carrier and married Nettie Millett, has two children: Margaret and John A.; Edward Reynolds, who is of Davenport, married Grace Mier, and they have: Catherine, Gertrude and Priscilla; and Maud S., who is Mrs. Milo Cooper of Reynolds, had issue,—John, who died in infancy, and Morris. Mr. McAdam is a staunch republican, and has held a number of the township offices. He was elected a justice of the peace, but would not serve. Both he and his wife belong to the Presbyterian church. Fraternally, he is a Mason and belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and Court of Honor. Unswerving devotion to duty has made Mr. McAdam what he is today, and he has every reason to be proud of what he has accomplished during his useful life.

McADAM, Samuel Gilmore.—Samuel Gilmore McAdam, proprietor of the cement block works of Reynolds, and one of the county's most enterprising business men, was born at Hamlet, Mercer county, Ill., January 14, 1873, a son of John Allen and Eliza Ann (Gilmore) McAdam, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. McAdam's school days began at Hamlet, under Elda Crabs, but as he was only five years old when his parents moved to Reynolds, most of them were spent in Rock Island county, he attending school until he was eighteen years old. In the meanwhile, however, when only fourteen years old, he began learning to lay bricks under his father's instruction, and he also learned to be a plasterer, becoming expert in the latter work. As a side issue, he also began learning stone cutting. The cement business which he has built up to such gratifying proportions is the outgrowth of an experiment he made with a cement block chimney. His efforts being successful, he bought cement block machinery, and established his business in 1906. Mr. McAdam manufactures cement blocks, fence posts and concrete tanks, having a patent on a round concrete watering stock tank, and he also handles sand, lime and cement in large quantities. He has specialized on his patented tanks, installing a number in this section.

On March 5, 1894, he was united in marriage by Justice Hawes, with Sarah Catherine Manning of Reynolds, born March 21, 1878. She is a daughter of Philip and Barbara (Crumbley) Manning. Mr. and Mrs. McAdam have five children: Lee Morris, born January 1, 1895; Francis Allen, born July 20, 1899; Clyde Samuel, born August 6, 1902; Theodore, born January 6, 1909; and Kenneth H., born August 21, 1912.

In politics Mr. McAdam is a liberal republican, and has held the office of tax collector of Edginton township. Mr. and Mrs. McAdam belong to the Methodist church, of which they are liberal supporters, giving both time and money to help to carry on its good work. Fraternally Mr. McAdam belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, and enjoys his connection with his lodge. He has been very successful in his line of business and has built up an extensive trade. Enterprising and aggressive, willing to venture much to carry out his ideas, Mr. McAdam belongs to that class of public-spirited men who are always in favor of what will help the growth of their community even if this advancement may entail a little temporary sacrifice.

McBRIDE, James S., foreman of the trimming department of the Wilson Moline Buggy Co., is an example of merit suitably rewarded, for his progress has been the result of intelligent effort along legitimate lines. He was born in Davenport, Ia., November 1, 1863, being a son of James and Jane Seymour, both born in Ireland. Mr. McBride was a cabinetmaker who came to the United States in 1850, settling in New York, and later in Davenport, Ia., where he resided until his death, in 1876, his widow surviving him until 1881. Both are interred in Pine Hill cemetery. They were most excellent people, who did their full duty as they saw it, and were beloved in their family, as well as by outsiders who appreciated their many virtues.

James S. McBride was taught in the Davenport public schools, and upon finishing his education, he entered as carriage trimmer in the factory of John L. Mason. After four years with this concern, he came to the Wilson Moline Buggy Co. as trimmer, and in 1886, his ability was recognized by his appointment as foreman of the trimming department, and he has been in charge of it ever since.

The marriage of Mr. McBride occurred in Rock Island, September 3, 1889, to Wilhelmina Boltz, born in Rock Island, daughter of Charles Boltz, a native of Germany and a machinist by trade. He and his wife died in Chicago, where they were living at the time of their demise. Prior to that, however, they were early settlers of Rock Island county, having come about 1840. Mr. and Mrs. McBride became the parents of two children: Raymond, who was born in 1891, is deceased, and buried in Riverside Cemetery; and Adrian, who was born January 2, 1893, in Rock Island, is now attending Augustana College. Mr. McBride is a Mason and belongs to the Independent Order of Foresters and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is liberal in his religious views. Politically, he is a republican, but his business affairs have kept him from aspiring to public office. Mr. McBride owns his pleasant home at No. 715 Forty-fourth street, Rock Island, and property in Edgewood Park, Rock Island. He is one of the sound, reliable men, capable of handling his associates so as to be fair to them and to his employers as well. Few men are more popular than he, and he numbers his friends by the legion.

McBURNERY, Adam R., D. V. S., a prominent veterinary surgeon of Rock Island, Ill., who has been a resident of this city for a number of years, is engaged in a large practice at No. 1611 Fourth avenue. Dr. McBurney was born in Bowling township, Rock Island county, Ill., November 7, 1860, a son of John and Elizabeth (Irwin) McBurney. John McBurney was born January 13, 1820, in County Armagh, Ireland, and his wife in the same country, and they were married on the Emerald Isle. Shortly thereafter they came to the United States, and Mr. McBurney engaged in farming, an occupation which he followed here all of his life. The children born to John and Elizabeth McBurney were: Mrs. Anna Miller, Mrs. Maria Miller, Mrs. Helen Heath, Mrs. Eliza Huleat, Mrs. Ida Forgy, Adam R., James and John. James and John McBurney were painters by trade, and the latter is now deceased.

Adam R. McBurney received a common school education and then entered the McKillip veterinary college at Chicago, taking a three-year course and then returned to Rock Island, where he established himself in practice, and with the exception of seven years, when he resided in Hamilton county, Kas., where he homesteaded a farm of 160 acres, he has lived here all the time. He still owns the farm in Kansas, and until recently was the owner of some valuable Rock Island property, but sold this. He has a pleasant home at No. 122 Aiken street. Dr. McBurney has been very successful in his treatment of diseases of animals, and as a consequence has built up a large and lucrative practice. He is a republican in his political views, and his fraternal connection is with the Modern Woodmen of America.

Dr. McBurney was married in 1883 at Rock Island, Ill., to Netta Hillier, who was born in Rock Island, May 14, 1863, and to this union there have been born the following children: Lester, James, Sherman, Helen, Mabel, Vera, Elsie, Gladys and Bessie.

MCCARTHY, Thomas.—Every large establishment is dependent upon the energy, acumen and foresight of the foreman in charge of each department, for upon the ability of these employees to handle men, rests the amount of the output and freedom from labor disturbances. One of the men who has the full confidence of those in authority, as well as the respect of his associates, is Thomas McCarthy, foreman of the foundry of Williams White & Co., of Rock Island. Mr. McCarthy was born in Providence, R. I., August 26, 1852, a son of James and Bridget (Killion) McCarthy, both natives of Ireland, he being born May 20, 1826, and she in June, 1834. The father came to the United States in 1833 when a boy, locating at Boston, from whence he moved to Providence, where he learned his trade as moulder, and in 1857 he came west to Davenport, Ia. In 1867, he located in Moline where he went to work for Williams White & Co., remaining with them until 1887, when he retired, living thus until his death in 1898. His wife died in 1899 and both are interred in the cemetery of Rock Island. The paternal grandfather was in the battle of Waterloo, being an English soldier.

Thomas McCarthy attended school in Davenport, and there began learning the trade of a moulder in 1869. He first worked for John S. Davis Co. for three years, when he came to Moline to engage with Williams White & Co., as a moulder, and from 1872 to 1901 worked in that capacity. In the latter year recognition of his services was shown in his appointment as foreman, and he has since continued to hold that position, now being one of the most valued employees of the large concern.

Mr. McCarthy was married in Welton, Ia., April 18, 1877, to Mary Gregoire, born in Clinton county, Ia., daughter of John and Ann

Rufus Wacker & Wife

(Head) Gregoire, farming people. He is now dead, but his widow survives, living in Dewitt, Ia. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy are: Harry, who was born in February, 1878, married Florence Beebe of Blunt, S. D., and lives in Kewanee, Ill., being a mechanical engineer—issue, Harriet; Florence, who was born in September, 1879, married Rollen Willis of Willis & Son, sheet metal manufacturers of Moline—issue, Willis, Pattie and Mariam; and Estella, who was born in October, 1881, is a teacher in the Alton high school. Mr. McCarthy belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. In politics, he is an independent. While not connected with any religious organization, Mr. McCarthy is a believer in church work, and tries to govern his life according to the Golden Rule. He owns his house at No. 1116 Twelfth avenue, and is recognized as one of the substantial men of his neighborhood.

MCCARTHY, William Anthony, member of the well-known grocery firm of McCarthy Brothers, of No. 416 Twenty-third street, Rock Island, is one of the sound, reliable business men of this city, whose financial standing is second to none. He was born at Rock Island, in 1889, son of William J. and Elizabeth Cecelia (Green) McCarthy, natives of Cork, Ireland, and Davenport, Ia., respectively. The father came to America in 1867 and married in 1887. He was a sawyer by trade. His death occurred December 27, 1906, but his widow survives, having borne her husband eight children: John J.; William A.; George W.; Edwin F.; May; Daniel J.; Margaret, and Francis, all of Rock Island.

William Anthony McCarthy received a good, practical education in the public schools of Rock Island. After leaving school, his first work was clerking for the grocery firm of J. T. Shields Company, and he continued with this concern for five years. For the next two years he clerked in different grocery stores to learn the business and then formed a partnership with his brother, John J. McCarthy, under the present caption. The latter is traveling salesman for the Smith Bros. & Burdick Grocery Company of Davenport, Ia., while William A. McCarthy manages the retail store. These young men began business in a small way, but by honest methods and willingness to serve have built up a fine trade, and their future prospects look very bright. In politics Mr. McCarthy is very liberal. He is a Roman Catholic and fraternally belongs to the Knights of Columbus. As yet he has not married, but lives with his widowed mother at the family residence, No. 2524 Five and One-half avenue, Rock Island. Mr. McCarthy is an excellent example of the live, progressive young business men of Rock Island county who stand for high standards and civic reform.

MCCARTNEY, Edwin (deceased).—The McCartney family have been identified with Rock Island county interests for a period of seventy years.

Edwin McCartney, son of a pioneer farmer, was born near Rockingham, Ia., December 24, 1839, but was brought to Rock Island county in infancy. He was a son of Samuel and Emily (Hall) McCartney, the latter a native of Indiana. The father was born in an eastern state and was a farmer by occupation. As a young man he located in Iowa, where he engaged in farming for several years, and in 1841 came to Rock Island county and entered land from the government, which he operated until his death. He and his wife had four children, all sons, and of these but one now survives, Frank, a farmer of Nebraska.

Edwin McCartney spent his early life on a farm. His father died when he was nine years of age and the mother continued to live on the farm until 1860, when she moved to Milan and lived there several years. Later she went to live with her son in Nebraska, where she died. As a young man Mr. McCartney carried on farming in Coal Valley township, following this occupation until his retirement from active life in 1898. He then purchased residence property at Rock Island and there spent his remaining years. He was well known in social, religious and fraternal circles, being affiliated with the A. F. & A. M. and the I. O. O. F., and a member of the Congregational church. He was actively interested in local affairs and in politics was a democrat.

Mr. McCartney was married on the old home place in Rock Island county December 30, 1860, to Mary E. Cheney, daughter of William C. and Emily (Sayre) Cheney, born in the northeast corner of Rock Island county, near Mercer county, September 17, 1843. Both parents were born in Logan county, O., and in 1842 the father came to Rock Island county, where he entered forty acres of land and engaged in farming, which occupation he continued until his death. The mother died on the old home farm and the father died later at the home of a son. They were the parents of three sons and three daughters, and the three daughters, of whom Mrs. McCartney is the oldest, now survive. The others are: Mrs. H. M. Coffee, of Eldora, Ia.; Mrs. L. Metzler, who lives near Coal Valley, Rock Island county.

Seven children were born to Mr. McCartney and wife, of whom six now survive: Anna married Marion Norman, of Texas, and they have two children, Florence and Clarence, the latter married Genevieve Trosper and lives in Missouri; Francis E., of South Dakota, married Miss Nannie Miller and they have two children—Raymond and Sylvia; William S., of Tennessee City, married Miss Myra J. Johnson, who died, leaving two daughters—Daisy and Edna; Emily, wife of August Olson, of Rock Island, has two living children—Ella E. and John L., one dead, Alice E.; Arthur A., of Rock Island, married Miss Emma Powers, of Davenport, and they have three children—Arthur M., Helene and Mary E. and Rush W., unmarried, lives in South Dakota. Florence Norman, daughter of Marion and Anna Norman, married Carl Biggs, of Missouri, and they have one child, Inez. Mr. McCartney died July 21, 1909, sincerely mourned and is remembered as an upright, Christian gentleman, and a public-spirited, useful citizen. His widow owns a nice home in Rock Island.

MCCARTY, James A.—Nearly all of the residents of South Rock Island are engaged in market gardening or the raising of small fruits. The land in this locality is so rich and transportation facilities so good as to make this line of agriculture very profitable. One of these enterprising farmers taking advantage of these conditions is James A. McCarthy, born in Gallia county, O., September 3, 1841, a son of George Adam and Lydia (Knopp) McCarty. The father was a farmer who moved to Illinois in 1856, settling on a farm in Morgan county, spending the remainder of his life there, where he died about 1891. His wife also died in that locality.

James A. McCarty was the second child and son of his parents, and was given a country school education in Ohio and Illinois, and taught farming from the bottom up. After growing to manhood, he worked on a Mississippi river steamboat for eleven years, but in 1898, he bought his present place of about five acres, and here he is raising fancy vegetables for the market, and succeeding way beyond his early hopes.

Mr. McCarty was married in Rock Island, in 1872, to Miss Elizabeth Bennett of this city. They have four children: Fred, who is of Albion; William, who is at home; Harry; and Mabel, who is the wife of Robert Cushman of Rock Island. Mr. McCarty is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. In political faith, he is a republican, but personal affairs have so occupied his time that he has never entered politics. He is a practical farmer, an excellent business man, and a kind neighbor. Few bear him any ill will, for he makes and retains friends, and his merits are generally recognized by all who know him.

MCCARTY, Michael (deceased).—Were this country to be deprived of its citizens, either born in Ireland, or descended from those who came from it, many of the best business men, brilliant statesmen and efficient workmen would be lost to us. There is something about these sons of Erin that makes them succeed not only materially, but cements friendships, and raises up for them those who defend their memories and extol their virtues. The late Michael McCarty, one of the old residents of South Rock Island, who belonged to this class, was born in County Wexford, Ireland, in 1834, and in 1854, he came to America, and direct to South Rock Island, where he bought a small farm. His parents were also natives of Ireland, and never left that island, but lived out useful lives there.

Michael McCarty was married, on February 8, 1857, at Rock Island, to Bridget Gannon, daughter of John Gannon. Mrs. McCarty was born in Ireland, in December, 1836. A brother, Patrick Gannon, lives at Rock Island, and another, James Gannon, lives in California. Mrs. Gannon died forty-five years ago, in 1866, outliving her husband, who passed away in 1847. Mr. McCarty was a laborer until he located on his farm, when he devoted himself to the development of his land, and there spent the last seventeen years of his life, dying November 5, 1886, firm in the faith of the Catholic church, of which he was a devout member. In politics, he was a democrat.

Mr. and Mrs. McCarty had nine children: Margaret, who is employed in Chicago; Katherine, who is Sister Clementine in the convent at Dubuque, Ia., having entered it twenty-six years ago; Henry, who is a cement contractor; Gilbert, who is a fruit grower, lives at home; William, who is a railroad engineer; James, who married Jennie Doyle; Mary, who is the wife of Frank Thompson; Nellie, who is the wife of J. W. Graham, lives in South Rock Island; and Daniel, who married Mary Whilms. There are eleven grandchildren in the family. Mr. McCarty was a faithful worker, and good, kind-hearted man, who made many friends, and was attached to his home and family. His children are all respected, and have done well in life, and he lived to be proud of them, and to enjoy the home his labor had provided. Mrs. McCarty is an excellent woman, whose kind heart makes her a good neighbor, especially when sorrow enters the door.

MCCAULEY, John, postmaster at Port Byron, Ill., and adjutant of Eugene Lyford Post, No. 603, G. A. R., has every claim to be called a true American except the mere matter of birth, which occurred three years before his parents emigrated from Scotland to America and settled in the state of Wisconsin. Mr. McCauley was born in Lanarkshire, Scotland, July 9, 1846, one of a family of ten children. His father, Alexander McCauley, lived to be ninety-five years of age. His mother, Eliza (Stuart) McCauley, traced her ancestry to the royal house of Stuart. She died in 1899, aged sixty-five years.

John McCauley was reared in a log cabin and was educated at Janesville, Wis., and although his advantages were meager compared to those of the present day, a good foundation was laid and the experiences of a long and active life and association with others have taught all that is necessary for an intelligent man of today to count as educational training. In 1853 his parents moved to Dane county, Wis., and three years later he went to Richland county and was there when the Civil war broke out. By inheritance Mr. McCauley was a soldier and in family talk he had learned of the military valor of his great-uncle, who was a member of a Scottish brigade and died bravely on the field of Waterloo. A brother of his mother was a member of the Scotch Grays and took part in the Crimean war and the Baker expedition at Cawnpore, India, and became general lance sergeant in the Lanciers of the Forty-second European Bengal Fusileers. At the close of his long service he was retired with honors and was awarded a large pension. Mr. McCauley enlisted in Company B, Twentieth Wisconsin Infantry, which regiment was assigned to the army of the Frontier. He participated in all the engagements in which his regiment took part. On December 7, 1862, the battle of Prairie Grove, Ark., was fought and the above regiment followed the enemy across the White river, marching from there to Lake Spring, Mo. In the following April the regiment was ordered to join General Grant at Vicksburg and was attached to the Thirteenth Army Corps and took part in the whole Vicksburg campaign. From there, Mr. McCauley, with his regiment, went on to Port Hudson and from there to New Orleans, then up through the Atachafalia country to Brownsville, Tex. The regiment was stationed there until July, 1864, when it was ordered back to New Orleans and then to Fort Morgan, where the Confederates surrendered to this regiment on August 23, 1864. Mr. McCauley was discharged April 15, 1866, at Madison, Wis., and with a fine record as a soldier turned again to peaceful pursuits.

Mr. McCauley returned to the home farm and in the following year, on January 21, 1867, was married to Miss Ursula E. Graham, a daughter of Isaac and Harriet (Hennan) Graham. Mrs. McCauley was born at Clearfield, Pa. To Mr. and Mrs. McCauley the following children were born: William, who lives at Rock Island, Ill.; James, who lives at LeClaire, Iowa; Samuel, at Davenport; Wesley J., at Soperton, Wis.; Jessie A., at Des Moines, Iowa; Mabel, who is the wife of Elmer Nelson, lives at Albany, Ill.; Cyrus, at Dubuque, Iowa; Grace, who is the wife of James G. Roberts, at Port Byron; and Howard Albert, who died in 1873, aged two months.

In February, 1869, Mr. McCauley moved to LeClaire, Iowa, and from there came to Port Byron in March, 1870. Here he was engaged at lime burning for L. B. Chase and later for the Port Byron Lime Company continuously until 1897, when he was appointed postmaster, an office he has filled with the greatest efficiency ever since. He has taken a great deal of interest in G. A. R. matters and has twice been commander of the post at Port Byron, of which he is now adjutant. With his family he belongs to the M. E. church and has served as trustee, steward and treasurer, but has resigned a part of his offices on account of the pressure of business. He is held in high esteem by his fellow citizens.

McCONNELL, John S.—Many of the more thrifty agriculturists combine with their farming operations working at a trade, in this way being able to fill in all their time. In any rural community there is always a demand for the services of a good carpenter, and John S. McConnell of Black Hawk township has found it very profitable to work as one in addition to farming. He was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., March 7, 1850, a son of James and Margaret (Lytle)

McConnell, the former born in Ireland, and the latter in the vicinity of Pittsburgh. The father came to America about 1836, and in 1854 came to Illinois settling on a farm in Bowling township, Rock Island county, which continued his home until his death. He and his wife had six children: Andrew W. of Rock Island; James and George, deceased; John S.; Charles of Cherokee county, Ia., and Olive, wife of George Young of Harlem, Ia.

The education of John S. McConnell was secured in the public schools of Rock Island county, he attending them during the winter months until he attained his majority, while in the summers, he worked on the farm. In 1871, Mr. McConnell began farming for himself, renting land until 1881, when he bought eighty acres, which land he had to develop. He put up all the buildings, and now has a fine place, in which he takes great pride. He has also worked all these years at the carpenter trade, and has his affairs in a prosperous condition as a result of his industry and thrifty management.

On December 7, 1871, Mr. McConnell was married to Elizabeth Lickfett, by Rev. George W. Brown of Milan, born July 3, 1847, daughter of Francis and Christina (Gheilmacher) Lickfett, natives of Germany who came to the United States in 1853, locating on a farm in Rock Island county. Mrs. McConnell was born in Hanover, Germany, but was only a little girl when brought here. She has a brother, Frederick, who lives also in Rock Island county. Mr. and Mrs. McConnell are the parents of children as follows: Frank, born February 4, 1873, married Phoebe Oakley of Bowling township, and they have three children, Lelia, Sydney and Elizabeth; Walter, born August 5, 1878, married Jessie Blakley of Bowling township, and they have two children, Bessie and Alta; and Charles, born December 21, 1885, lives at home. Mr. McConnell has five grandchildren. The family are Methodists. In politics, Mr. McConnell is a democrat, and has served as school director for twenty-eight years. He is a man widely known, and universally respected, and his family is one that has been a credit to him, and to the several communities in which the various members have settled.

McCONNELL, Samuel (deceased), for many years a farmer of Rock Island county, was highly esteemed as a man of upright character and good habits, a public-spirited and useful citizen and a devout Christian. He died before reaching the prime of life and his death was a great sorrow to his family and many friends. He was born in Ireland, May 17, 1864, a son of William and Janette McConnell, natives of that country, who spent their last years near Milan on their farm. Samuel McConnell was reared on a farm, coming to America with his parents when a child, was educated in Milan schools, and after marriage engaged in farming in Black Hawk township, on land given him by his father. He continued living on this farm until 1892, when he and family came to

Mr. McConnell was married first to Mary Hall, who died in 1895. There were two sons, John, who is deceased, and Noble, who lives at Savannah, Ga. Mr. McConnell was married (second) in Rock Island, to Emma Coyne, July 14, 1890. She was born in Rock Island, daughter of John and Margaret (Coyne) Coyne. Mr. Coyne was born March 30, 1821, came to America in 1850, landing in New Orleans, and soon afterward he located in Rock Island. Mrs. Coyne was born in Ireland in 1826; came to the United States with her parents a few years previous to her marriage in 1852, when she was a resident of Davenport. There were six children in the family, namely: James, deceased; Charles; Mrs. J. L. Rice; Emma, Mrs. McConnell; Amy and Clara. The Coyne children were educated in the common and high schools of Rock Island. One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. McConnell, Jeanette, who died July 13, 1892. Mrs. McConnell lives at No. 415 Nineteenth street, where she owns a nice home, and she also has other property in the city. She and her husband both belonged to the Presbyterian church. In politics he was a republican.

McCONOCHIE, William.—During his useful life, William McConochie has demonstrated that those virtues which have made the Scotch celebrated through the centuries of history may be profitably transplanted to American soil. Successful contractor, chief executive of Rock Island many times over, and public-spirited representative of numerous interests, William McConochie is one of the city's most desirable citizens. He was born at Gatehouse, Scotland, January 11, 1847, son of John and Annie (Campbell) McConochie. On the paternal side, the family had resided on the southwestern coast of Scotland from the days of Wallace and Bruce, while the Campbells, as is well known, are celebrated in Highland history, and this branch belonged to the house of Argyle. In 1853, the McConochie migration to the United States took place, and a few weeks were spent at Joliet, before the father died. The widow survived him twenty years, dying on the same day, and her remains were laid to rest by his side in the Joliet cemetery. It was at Joliet that William McConochie was educated, his scholastic attainments being supplemented by instruction by his mother in the homely lessons of virtue. Although entirely too young, William McConochie was determined to defend his adopted country in its hour of need, and during 1861-2, ran away and followed a regiment to Cairo, Ill., where he secured admission as a drummer boy, and later re-enlisted with a Chicago regiment. He served until he received his discharge in 1865.

Returning to Joliet, he learned to be a stone-cutter, and two years later, crossed the plains to the western coast. However, he found that he preferred the more developed regions, and returning, lived at Rock Island, although his contracts took him to other places, for he advanced rapidly in his work. When the government began to improve the Island, opportunity was found for his ability, and he continued in the employ of the government for twenty years. Severing his connection with the department, he became a contractor, and has held the contracts for some very important work. It is as a public official, however, that William McConochie is best known. From the time he was elected alderman from the sixth ward, in 1887, he has been in the public view. His first election to the office of mayor of Rock Island was in 1889, and he was returned in 1891, in 1899, and 1903. While occupying the executive chair, he laid the first paving brick in the city; organized the present system of the fire department, aided in the beautifying of the park system, extended the sewerage system and laid miles of water mains. Mayor McConochie rebuilt the reservoir, laid the foundations for the building of the library, and secured the contract for its construction. The building of two iron bridges across Rock river was done during his administration, and countless other improvements instituted and carried out by him, might be mentioned.

The marriage of William McConochie occurred in 1868, when he was united with Isabel Kitson. Three sons and three daughters have been born of this marriage, namely: Captain John who died in 1896; Captain W. H. and Robert F. who are with their father in business; Isabel who is Mrs. Hollingsworth; Mary who is Mrs. Dade; and Maggie. Mr. McConochie belongs to the Methodist church of Rock Island. Fraternally, he is a member of Trio Lodge No. 57, A. F. & A. M., Barrett Chapter, and Rock Island Commandery, K. T. John Buford Post, G. A. R., and Shiloh Command, Union Veterans' Union, also hold his membership.

McCORMICK, Emanuel, an honored veteran of the Civil war, and a man whose activity in the business world resulted in his amassing a comfortable fortune, has resided on his present property in Drury township, since 1866. He was born at Martinsburg, W. Va., August 6, 1840, a son of Joshua and Jane (Carr) McCormick. The father learned the carpenter trade and spent his youth and early manhood working at it in Washington county, Va., but moved to Schuyler county, Mo., in 1854, settling near Queen City, where he engaged in farming on a large scale, owning 600 acres, a part of which he entered from the government. In 1883 he moved to Drury township, and here died, March 29, 1892. The mother passed away February 13, 1890, both having been consistent members of the Christian church. In politics, he was a republican. Their children were: Margaret, Mrs. Cy Wylie, deceased; George, who went to the South prior to the Civil war, and served as commander of a battery in the Confederate army, under General Price, and he and his brother, Emanuel, faced each other for thirty-six hours, in the opposing armies; Emanuel; Martin Van Buren, who died in a hospital at St. Louis, during the Civil war, a member of a Missouri regiment; Ellen, who married John Gardner, died in Missouri; Asa, who served in the Seventh Iowa Cavalry during the Civil war, is now living in Queen City, Mo.; Lewis, who served in a Missouri regiment, was taken sick in St. Louis, and died soon after he reached home; William, who lives in Schuyler county, Mo.; and Sarah, Mrs. Andrew McGrew, of Florida.

Emanuel McCormick spent his boyhood on farms in Ohio and Missouri, and was about fourteen years old when he went to the latter state. The little education he secured was in subscription schools, which he attended when his father was able to pay for his tuition. On July 20, 1862, he enlisted in Company D, Eighteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel John A. Edwards, and he served under Generals Scofield and Steele, participating in the battles of Poison Springs, Ark., Prairie Grove, and in many skirmishes. At Poison Springs, after three color bearers had been shot, Mr. McCormick picked up the flag and carried it through the battle. At the reunion of his regiment in the fall of 1910, at Sheridan, Ia., Mr. McCormick had the honor of once more carrying the colors of his regiment, blood-stained and torn. At the close of the war he received his honorable discharge, and then went to the West, and for eight years was employed in various lines. Coming to Illinois City, he worked in the stoneware factory, for a time, finally confining himself to caring for his property.

On January 5, 1868, he was married in Edgington township to Mary Jane Shuttler, daughter of Jonas J. and Harriet (Hoyes) Shuttler. Mrs. McCormick was born near Pittsburgh, Pa., one of a family of nine children, and was brought to Buffalo Prairie township by her parents, who were farming people. Mr. and Mrs. McCormick have had the following children: William, of Illinois City, married Becky Tyler, issue.—Howard and Hugh; Ancy, Mrs. Cal Diehl of Mercer county, issue.—John, George, Ernest, Emma, Jessie, Clarence and Susie; Maggie, deceased; Simon, of Mercer county, married Cora Elliott, issue.—Lulu, Lillie and Merle; Hattie, Mrs. William Navis of Drury township; and Annie, Mrs. Edward Navis of Drury township. Mr. McCormick belongs to the W. J. Wyllie Post, G. A. R., No. 377. Mrs. McCormick belongs to the Methodist church, and is a faithful worker in it. A staunch republican, Mr. McCormick is proud of the fact that he cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln. During a long and useful life, Mr. McCormick has done what he felt was his duty, and tried to give to each one a fair deal.

McCOY, Louis Leonard, a machinist, living at No. 518 Fourth avenue, Moline, was born at Cadiz, Harrison county, O., May 14, 1843, a son of William Means and Esther (Whalen) McCoy, the latter born in Connecticut. The parents came at an early day to Cadiz, O., where they met and married. About 1847 removal was made to Muscatine, Ia., and in 1852, to New Boston, Ill. In 1861 the parents moved back to Muscatine, but in 1870 went to Brighton, Ia., where the mother died in 1895, and the father in 1896. The mother had two brothers in the Mexican war, one of whom died on the way home. The father was a tin and copper smith, and worked hard all his life. Louis L. McCoy had two brothers who served their country during the Civil war. William H. was in Company 1, Twenty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for three years, or until the close of the war; while another, Matthew Sheler McCoy, was in Company 1, Seventeenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the battles of Fort Donelson and Shiloh, but died while on his way home from the latter battle, at Cairo, Ill., having been discharged for disability.

Louis L. McCoy was brought up to temperate habits and hard work, and attended the common schools at New Boston, Ill., and Muscatine, Ia. He learned the machinist's trade in Williams, White & Co.'s shops at Moline, Ill., where he has remained since 1864. Mr. McCoy enlisted in Company B, Fourteenth Battalion, Illinois National Guard, in 1877, and was made corporal, February 3, 1878; second sergeant, July 7, 1882; first sergeant, April 29, 1886; and second lieutenant, May 16, 1887. He resigned in 1890. During his term of service he was with his company in every season of strikes to which it was called out. The battalion was consolidated and became a part of the Sixth Regiment, Illinois National Guard, in 1882, and is so designated today, so that the same company is still in the service, which was started in 1877, being now thirty-four years old. In the re-organization, Company B became Company F.

On December 22, 1870, Louis L. McCoy was married at Moline, by the Rev. A. K. Tullis, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Moline, to Alice Luella Hartzell, born in Moline, March 1, 1852, daughter of Michael and Nancy (Worman) Hartzell. Mr. Hartzell died August 19, 1893, aged eighty-nine years, while his widow died October 12, 1909, aged ninety-three years. They were from Blairsville, Pa., coming to Rock Island in 1836, being among the early settlers here. The father built the first frame structure at Rock Island. Later he went on a farm in Moline township, Rock river, where he lived during the Black Hawk war. He and his wife were the parents of a large family of children, among whom was the Rev. Joseph Hartzell, bishop of the Methodist church in Africa. Mr. and Mrs. McCoy have had two children: Rolland H., born September 22, 1871; and George L., born September 24, 1873, both married and living in homes of their own. Mr. McCoy is now an honorary member of Doric Lodge No. 319, A. F. & A. M., Moline, Ill., which he joined August 17, 1867; Eastern Star, No. 258, Moline, and White Shrine of Jeru-salet of Rock Island. On April 1, 1864, he joined the First Methodist church of Moline, and has continued a faithful member of it ever since. All his life he has been a republican and a worker in the party since its organization. He has always been steady and industrious, devoted to his home, and has given all his attention to his work. He owns his family residence and a house at 506 Eighth avenue, Moline.

McCREERY, Robert D.—Agricultural conditions have improved so materially during the past quarter of a century that the farmer of today occupies a singularly independent position. Upon him and his crops depend the welfare of the nation. Increased transportation facilities, improved machinery and a better understanding of methods, have all combined to bring about these desirable conditions, but there are many who were born and reared amid very different ones. Among such farmers is Robert D. McCreery, one of the most prosperous agriculturalists of Rural township. He was born November 29, 1833, in Pennsylvania, being a son of Samuel and Margaret (Dunlap) McCreery. Mr. McCreery was born in Indiana county, Pa., where he died in 1840, having been a farmer all his life. He and his wife had three children: Robert D.; Andrew, who is deceased; and Samuel, who died years ago. The mother later married Hugh Speedy and had four children, two of whom are living in Pennsylvania. She died in that state at the age of eighty years.

In 1854, Robert D. McCreery came to Rock Island county, and worked as a carpenter and taught school for four years. In 1857, he bought eighty acres of land in Rural township, adding to it until he now owns 280 acres. He has specialized in fruits of all kinds, and his farm is recognized as the best in his township, and he is an authority upon all agricultural matters. A democrat, he has served as justice of the peace for twenty-five years; was supervisor for one term, and a member of the school board for a quarter of a century. In religious faith, he is a Presbyterian.

In 1856, Mr. McCreery married Marian Gordon, whose parents drove to Rock Island county in a wagon drawn by oxen from Venango county, Pa. They had children as follows: Calvin; Porter; Dickson; William; Lizzie, wife of Hugh Smith; Isabell, wife of William Lewis; and Zilpah. Mr. McCreery was married (second) to Margaret Wilson November 28, 1883, at Washington, Ia. One child, Ethel, was born to this union, who is now Mrs. William J. Coughreys. Mrs. McCreery died in 1881, after a useful life as a devoted wife and mother. Mr. McCreery now operates his farm according to modern methods, but when he commenced, he did all his work with oxen, and hauled his product to Rock Island with them. No one rejoices more than he in the progress that has been made, but he can see where some good things have been sacrificed to make way for the spirit of progress that dominates everything in these strenuous days of the twentieth century.

McDONALD, Charles.—After a residence in Edgington township of over half a century, few men are better fitted to speak with authority regarding the development of this section of the state than Charles McDonald, of section 6, who has lived here since 1858. He was born in Jefferson, O., April 3, 1833, being a son of James M. and Sarah (Allabaugh) McDonald. The paternal grandfather was a native of Scotland, but came to the United States at an early day, locating in Pennsylvania. Later, he went to Ohio, dying in Jefferson county, where he had farmed for a number of years. His children were: James M., Margaret, John and Charles.

James McDonald was born in Pennsylvania, and was brought up there and in Ohio, marrying in one of these states. In 1858, he and his wife came to Illinois, locating in Edgington township, Rock Island county, where he died in 1885, his wife passing away in 1892. She was a Methodist, but he was not connected with any religious denomination. In politics, he was a republican. The children born to these parents were: John, Maria, and Harriet, all deceased; Eliza; James, deceased, and Nancy A.

Charles McDonald was a young man when the family migrated to Illinois, so that he was educated in Ohio. After coming here, he was the mainstay of the family as his father's health was never good afterwards, so that Charles had heavy burdens placed on his young shoulders. In the fall of 1858, he married Eliza Maynard, born in Ohio, but brought to Illinois in childhood by her father, Mahlon Maynard. For several years after his marriage, Mr. McDonald remained at home, then removed to his present farm, and on it his wife died in the early sixties, having borne him two children: Florence, who died when fifteen years old, and James. The latter is assisting his father in managing the home farm. James' first wife was a Miss Roush, who bore him four children: Charles, Leonard, Florence and Mabel. His second wife was Jessie Bartels. Mr. McDonald has no church connections. Having passed through all the changes incident to the development of this part of the state, during half a century, Mr. McDonald appreciates what has been accomplished and naturally is proud of his share in it. His property is a very valuable one, and has been made so through his persevering industry and thrifty management.

McDONALD, James Butler (deceased).—The late James Butler McDonald, a successful and well-known farmer of Rural township, was a representative of the hardy class of pioneers who did so much during the early development of this region. He was a native of Brown county, O., born in 1822, a son of Jesse and Mary (Butler) McDonald, natives of Scotland. His mother died when he was a child and he early learned habits of industry and self-reliance. He was educated in the public schools and when fourteen years of age became self-supporting, going at that time to Indiana, where he worked at farming. His marriage occurred in 1848 and during the same year he was one of a party coming to Illinois. There were several families in this company, among them that of his wife's parents. They located first in Mercer county, but soon afterward James Butler McDonald came to Rock Island county. He purchased his first forty acres of land in Rural township and set about improving it, and as he was an industrious and energetic man he was able to add to his holdings until he became possessed of 640 acres of choice grain and stock farming land. On this farm he erected a comfortable house and other suitable buildings and had one of the best managed properties in the township. A Methodist in religious views and in politics a democrat, he took great interest in local affairs and he and his wife won many sincere friends among their neighbors. Mrs. McDonald continues to reside on the home farm and still displays the friendly hospitality for which she is famed.

James Butler McDonald was married to Jane Spiney, born at Richmond, Ind., in 1829, a daughter of John and Lasada (Alfred) Spiney, the father born in Hamilton county, O., died in Bowling township, at the age of thirty-eight years. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald had children as follows: J. Newton, who was born in Mercer county, Ill., in 1848, was educated at the state normal school, and is now living in Chicago, having married Louise Wilmerton, who died, leaving two children,—Charles and Flora; Frances, who is deceased; Lawrence, who lives in Rock Island; Ettie, who is living on the farm with her mother; and Sherman, who died at the age of thirty-two years. Mr. McDonald died at his home and his loss was deeply deplored by the entire community, where he was held in the highest esteem.

McDONALD, Matt, formerly secretary of the Tri-City Bakers' Union, is a man whose ability as an organizer and leader of men, is directed towards the betterment of his fellow workers. Mr. McDonald was born in Rock Island, in 1890, a son of Matt and Ella (Goodman) McDonald, both natives of Illinois, and excellent people. Growing up in his native city, Mr. McDonald enjoyed the advantage of a good public school education, and upon finishing his studies began earning his own living. After making several changes, he began working for, and finally became foreman for the Eagle Bakery, which position he held until the opening of 1912 when he began working for the Mt. Ida Bakery at Davenport, where he has since continued to be employed. A Socialist, he endeavors to put to practical use the doctrines he advocates, and is a power in working for the laboring man.

In January, 1911, Mr. McDonald was married to Orpha Gratz, daughter of Alexander and Louise (Finkenauer) Gratz, excellent representatives of substantial people. Mrs. McDonald came from Dubuque, where her father still lives, but her mother died in 1908. The children in the Gratz family were: Hattie, Amelia, Ollie, Arthur and Orpha. Fraternally, Mr. McDonald is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, but his time is well occupied with his work for his union. He fully believes that the principles of Socialism are the only ones to solve the many questions of the times, and looks towards the general acceptance of them. In the meanwhile, he is laboring to bring about a betterment of conditions for those who need such aid. His affection for Rock Island, and his work here, make him feel that this will continue to be his home, although his duties as a labor leader may call him elsewhere in the future.

McDONALD, Patrick (deceased).—Steadfastness of purpose, fidelity to duty, and honesty of action, were characteristics of the late Patrick McDonald, formerly residing at No. 602 Twenty-fourth street, Rock Island. He was born in County Mayo, Ireland, about 1814. Until he came to the United States, in young manhood, he worked with his father on the latter's farm. He came to Rock Island on the first train to enter the city, and immediately secured employment as a laboring man, for he was ready and willing. For years he worked for many prominent people, and later because of his faithfulness, was made watchman at the Mitchell & Lyon bank, and was never known to violate a trust reposed in him.

In 1866 Mr. McDonald was married in Rock Island to Bridget Corbett, born County Galway, Ireland, in 1835. She came to the United States when eighteen years old, with her brother Peter, landing in New York City, having been four weeks on the voyage from Liverpool. She visited friends in Boston and New Bedford, and then spent twelve years in Massachusetts. In 1865, she came to Rock Island, and was married the following year. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald had three children: Thomas M., who died at the age of thirty-six years; Mary E., who died at the age of twenty-eight years; and Edward F., who is of Rock Island, married Ellen Sherman.

Mr. McDonald died at his home, July 9, 1897, and his remains are interred in Calvary cemetery. He owned his residence and two other pieces of property adjoining, all earned by his work as a laborer. This indicates that not only was he a good workman, but a thrifty one as well, and that he was ably assisted in his economies by his good wife. Mrs. McDonald belongs to the Church of the Sacred Heart, being a devout Catholic.

McDONALD, William.—A pleasant feature of agricultural life is that when a man has accomplished his allotted work, he has accumulated a sufficient amount to permit him to retire from the activities which have hitherto engrossed his attention, and give more time to civic affairs and the improvement of his community generally. One of the substantial retired farmers of Rock Island is William McDonald, of No. 520 Sixth street. He was born in Fayette county, Pa., August 26, 1836, being a son of Abraham and Patience (Helmick) McDonald, natives of Scotland and Pennsylvania. The father was a farmer, who came to the United States in young manhood, settling in Fayette county where he became the owner of two large farms, living there until his death, in the fall of 1836, three months before the birth of William McDonald, who was the youngest of eight children, of whom he is the only survivor.

William McDonald grew up in Fayette county, attending school, and working on the farm, until his marriage, when he moved to Morgan county, Ohio. From this state, at Marietta, he enlisted in 1862 in Company B, Ninth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, serving under Capt. John Williams and Col. Joseph B. Daniels, in the Army of the Potomac. He participated in the battle of Knoxville and General Sherman's campaigns, marching with him to the sea. Mr. McDonald was discharged at Lexington, Ky. in August, 1865. Returning home, he soon thereafter moved to Ogle county, Ill., and later to Coal Valley, Rock Island county, where he farmed. He then moved to Rock Island where he engaged in teaming until his retirement in 1906. Both as a soldier and business man he did his full duty, and is now interested in the workings of the republican party, of which he is a staunch supporter; and the good works of the Methodist church, of which he has been a consistent member for many years.

Mr. McDonald was married in Fayette county, Pa., July 4, 1858, to Mary Dunaway, a native of that county, daughter of Thomas and Mary Ann (McCloy) Dunaway. Mrs. McDonald died July 5, 1911. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, only two of whom survive: Thomas, of Rock Island, who married Nettie Mars; John, a successful contractor of Rock Island, who married Agnes Cushman. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald have seven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Mr. McDonald owns property at Rock Island, and has ample means besides. A grateful government pays his pension, not as any adequate recompense for his services, but as a token of appreciation. Fifty years have passed since the outbreak of the Civil war, and in the minds of the present generation, it will never assume the importance it did to those who offered up all they had, their very bodies to the bullets of the enemy, that the Union be preserved. Because of this unselfish bravery and patriotism, the veterans of this great war can never be too highly rewarded.

McELROY, James, one of the pioneers of this locality, who is known far and near as one of the men who helped to make Rock Island county what it is today, was at one time an important factor in the business life of the city, but is now living retired at No. 701 Twenty-third street. He was born in the Parish of Calugher, County Tyrone, Ireland, seventy-eight years ago. His father was James McElroy, a farmer who died in Ireland; his mother was Ellen (Doherty) McElroy, and they had children as follows: Bridget, who came to America, married a Mr. Holland, and died in New York City; Margaret, of Providence, R. I.; and James.

James McElroy received but a meager education, but added to his knowledge by reading and observation. He was left an orphan at a tender age, and he lived with relatives, working on farms, until, when eighteen years old, he came to America, sailing from Liverpool for Boston, on the sailing boat Meridian. It took twenty-four days to make the voyage. At first he located at Blackstone, Mass., where he worked on a farm for a year, and then learned mule spinning, following this trade in different woolen manufacturing towns. In 1865, he came from Springfield, Mass., to Rock Island, Ill., and worked in the Davenport Woolen Mills. Afterwards, he opened a restaurant on Twentieth street, across from the old Rock Island station, still later adding a first-class cafe, conducting it and his restaurant in conjunction for five years. He then went into the retail liquor business at the corner of Fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, thus continuing until he retired, in 1901. During the Civil war Mr. McElroy served for three months in a Rhode Island regiment.

While living at Blackstone, Mass., Mr. McElroy was married to Agnes McCabe, both born in County Monaghan, Ireland. Mrs. McElroy came to America in girlhood, and died at Rock Island in 1901, having been a Christian lady of high character. One child, Mary, was born to this couple, she now living with her aged father. Mr. McElroy owns much valuable real estate at Rock Island. He is a member of the Sacred Heart Roman Catholic church. In politics, he is an independent voter, and has never desired public office. All his life he has endeavored to do what he believed was right, and he enjoys the esteem of a wide circle of friends.

McELVAIN, Augustus T.—While the life history of almost every individual, if candidly and sincerely written, would be of interest to other human beings, that of one who has advanced himself to honorable positions through his own efforts is particularly so. Augustus T. McElvain, who is secretary and sales manager for the D. M. Sechler Implement & Carriage Co. of Moline, was born at Webster, Hancock county, Ill., December 9, 1854, a son of Isaac Newton and Sarah L. (Downey) McElvain, who in 1856 moved to Bushnell, McDonough county, Ill. Isaac Newton McElvain was of Scotch parentage and was born August 7, 1828, at Marion, Ohio, and died at Red Oak, Iowa, February 21, 1902. He was a blacksmith by trade, but spent several years in general merchandising. He married Sarah L. Downey, who was born at Montreal, Canada, May 22, 1836, and died at Red Oak, Iowa, June 29, 1901. She was brought to Illinois by her parents when she was four years old, one of a family of ten children, all of whom lived into old age. Eleven children were born to Isaac Newton McElvain and wife, three of whom died in infancy, those surviving being: Lodemia, Katie, Flavilla, Lola, Blanche, Frank, Clarence and Augustus T. The family were all musically inclined, a little more so than the ordinary family, and Mr. A. T. McElvain's two children inherit the musical qualities of their ancestors. During the Civil War a number of relatives on both sides of A. T. McElvain's family served their country and it is on record that in the father's family there were Mexican War patriots.

Augustus T. McElvain attended the common grade school at Bushnell, Ill., until he was fourteen years of age and was then called on to provide more or less for his own necessities and, as far as able, to assist his hard-working father take care of the family. His first work was done in a brick yard and his second on a farm where he spent two summers, after which he entered a printing office, where he worked as errand boy and printer's devil for two years, during this time learning quite a little of the printing business. He was then offered a clerkship in the postoffice by his uncle, Capt. S. A. Epperson, who was postmaster at that time, and he gladly accepted and remained in that position for four years, making so excellent a record that he was appointed deputy postmaster and served as such until 1886. For one year afterwards he worked as a bank clerk, gaining experience in that direction, and then in the fall of 1888 entered the employ of the D. M. Sechler Implement & Carriage Co., Moline, Ill., becoming a traveling salesman for this house. He continued in the above business until the fall of 1893 when his ability found further recognition and he was appointed sales manager and a few years later became secretary of the company with which he has been identified for twenty-four years.

Mr. McElvain was married at Bushnell, Ill., by Rev. S. H. Parvin, pastor of the Presbyterian church, to Miss Florence Ketter, who was born at La Harpe, Ill., January 15, 1861, a daughter of Charles and Margaret (Lafferty) Ketter, the former of whom is deceased. Florence (Ketter) McElvain was a prominent member and active worker in the Presbyterian church at Bushnell. There were two children born to Mr. and Mrs. A. T. McElvain: Roy, who was born May 15, 1891, at Bushnell, Ill., and resides at home, having just completed his high school course, and Juliette, who was born December 15, 1896, at Moline, Ill., and is now a student in the high school. Roy and Juliette's mother died at Nevada, Mo., January 24, 1900. The family has a home and fine residence in a pleasant part of the city, where Mr. McElvain has kept his little family together since the death of his wife and he still remains a widower. Politically Mr. McElvain is a republican and fraternally he is identified with the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America. He enjoys the respect and high regard of his fellow citizens and is looked upon as one of Moline's representative men.

McENIRY, Matthew James, attorney-at-law of Moline, Rock Island county, resides at No. 1910 Third avenue, Moline, with his sister, Miss Mollie McEniry, presiding over the household. He was born in Zuma township, a son of William and Elizabeth (Coughlin) McEniry, both of whom were born in Cork, Ireland, the former in 1817, died in 1874, while the latter was born in 1819 and died on Decoration Day, 1907. William McEniry was the first brick manufacturer at Moline, owning and operating a brick yard in 1842, that is now almost in the heart of the city. He and his wife had six children, four sons and two daughters. In 1854 they moved to a 500-acre stock farm along the Rock river, that is still in the family and kept at a high state of cultivation.

Matthew James McEniry attended the public schools of Zuma, this county, and later Notre Dame university of Indiana, from which he was graduated with highest honors, after a four-years' course in the scientific department, in 1881, with the degree of B. S. Returning to the farm he remained there until entering the State University of Michigan, being graduated therefrom in law in class of 1888. Immediately thereafter Mr. McEniry came to his present location and began the practice of his profession in partnership with his brother William of Rock Island with offices in both Moline and Rock Island.

Mr. McEniry was a charter member of the Illinois Naval Militia and became ensign. He was prominent as supervisor from Zuma township, and was a member and secretary of the board that built the new Carnegie public library and he is proud of the work accomplished by it. In 1894 Mr. McEniry was appointed postmaster by President Cleveland and served for three and one-half years, although he did not allow the duties pertaining thereto to interfere with his large general practice. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, the Red Men and North Star, in each of which he not only has passed all the chairs, but has represented the orders in the law-making bodies. A charter member of the Moline Club, he has served it acceptably as a director and vice-president, as well as on various committees. During the past twenty years he has been a member of the executive committee of the Old Settlers' Association that has charge of the numerous picnics which are so delightful a feature of that organization, and he has also long been active in the county bar association. Mr. McEniry has always been active in promulgating the drainage of farm lands and at the present time is serving as president of a drainage district that drains a large portion of the Rock river bottoms where he is interested in some of the land. Good roads have been his hobby, and he has always advocated the passage of laws providing for their improvement. Although his efforts have met with strong opposition, the dawn is breaking of an era that will see his plans perfected, and give good roads to Rock Island county.

McGIMPSEY, John.—Coal Valley township is one of the most prosperous of the divisions of Rock Island county, for not only is farming carried on to a large extent, but here are located the rich mines that give the section its name. Many of the residents combine farming and mining, while others restrict their operations to one or other of the two callings. One of the prosperous men of both village and township, is John McGimpsey, who belongs to the well-known family of that name. This family originated in Ireland, where Mr. McGimpsey was born October 2, 1864, a son of Robert and Jane (McGimpsey) McGimpsey, who came to America in 1869, locating in Coal Valley, and in 1870 went to Henry county, Ill. He still later moved to Moline, where both died and are buried in Homestead cemetery in Rural township.

John McGimpsey attended common school, and helped his father until his marriage, which occurred when he was twenty-two years old. He was then united with Annie M. Moss who was born September 16, 1869, and died May 6, 1905, buried in Coal Valley cemetery. Her mother is still living in Coal Valley. Seven children were born of this marriage: Robert W., who married Annie Heintz, and they have one son, Lawrence, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work; John F., who married Ruby Kay; James A., born April 18, 1892, married Anna Coon, one daughter, Phyllis; Nellie May, who was born September 23, 1895; Marion N., who was born December 20, 1898; Hugh T., who was born August 12, 1903; and Theodore R., who was born November 2, 1904, died September 23, 1905.

Mr. McGimpsey is a republican, and for two years was supervisor of his township. For three years he was a school director, and was a very efficient and faithful officer. He belongs to the Fraternal Reserves. Interested in and owning a fine farm of eighty-eight acres, which he operates, he is a successful agriculturalist. In the prime of life, he has many years of activity before him, which he will doubtless devote to advancing not only his own interests, but those of the community which has been his home for so many years. The family is well known in the neighborhood, and its members have made a name for themselves as men who never go back on their word, or fail to give to each a square deal. He is not a member of any religious organization but attends the Presbyterian church.

McKAUFISKY, Andrew, one of the business men of Silvis, Ill., who has always worked hard, and now is prosperous as a result of his efforts, was born in Coal Valley, Rock Island county, June 17, 1876, a son of John and Amelia McKaufsky, natives of Germany and East Moline, respectively. The father alternated farming with working in the mines in Coal Valley. He died in Moline, May 31, 1910, where the mother lives. Andrew McKaufsky is the eldest of eight children, all of whom survive. Andrew McKaufsky began working when thirteen years old, for a liveryman in Moline, and continued with him for five years, when he engaged with the Moline Malleable Iron Works. After two years there, he became a core worker in the Moline Iron Works, then went to the Moline Plow Works, and was a moulder for four years; next was in the employ of A. O. Johnson for two years; later going to several other men in the same line of business, until 1906, when he and a Mr. Kuhne established a business of which Mr. McKaufsky is now sole owner, having bought out his partner in 1909.

On May 31, 1904, Mr. McKaufsky married Nellie Kassenberg, born in Mercer county, Ill., daughter of Alfred and Mary Kassenberg. He is a member of the F. O. E., No. 1839 of Silvis, Ill. Mr. McKaufsky is a man of genial manner, and charitable disposition.

McKEOG, James.—The Irish people are represented in the United States in every branch of activity. They are numbered among our greatest statesmen, our merchant princes, our brilliant professional men, our substantial business men, our prosperous agriculturists and our hard-working laborers. Rock Island, fortunately, has a full quota of these energetic men, and one who has achieved enviable success as a farmer is James McKeog, of Coal Valley township. He was born in Ireland, December 14, 1840, a son of James and Sarah (McQuoid) McKeog. The parents were both natives of Ireland, and there the father died in 1859, and the mother in 1887. They had ten children, as follows: Eliza Jane, David, Mary, Sarah, John, Nancy, James, Ann, James (II) and Margaret.

James McKeog was reared in Ireland, where he attended school and learned to farm, remaining in his native land until he was forty years old, when he left for the United States, and upon landing came direct to Coal Valley township. He obtained employment on various farms until he was able to rent land, and in 1906 he bought 160 acres in Coal Valley township, and on it he is carrying on general farming. He has made a success of his work and has every reason to be proud of what he has accomplished.

On June 22, 1866, Mr. McKeog and Mary Eliza McKeog (a relative) were married in Ireland, and eight children have been born to them: Sarah, who is the wife of Robert Cooper; Mary, who married John Guinty, and died in 1889; James; John, who was killed by a train in Coal Valley in 1902; Lizzie, who is the wife of John Johnson; David, who is of Preemption, Ill.; Andy, who is at home with his father; and Thomas, who was born on the ship Georgia, while the family were on their way to America. In politics Mr. McKeog is a republican, but has never cared for public honors. All of his life he has been a hard-working man, and he has been helped in all of his undertakings by his wife. They both have many friends in the neighborhood which has been their home since coming to the United States. Mr. McKeog is a consistent member of the United Presbyterian church.

McLAIN, Charles R., general cement contractor, who specializes in every line of cement construction, whose business connections have been secured through honest endeavor and faithful carrying out of contracts, is located at No. 2321 Fifteenth street, Moline, and has been in this calling for six years. He was born in North Carolina in 1879, a son of James and Sarah (Fanshee) McLain, both born in North Carolina. The father was a farmer, who came to Illinois, and in 1912 moved to East Moline, where he is now engaged in teaming. The mother died in 1895, in her native state. They had six children: Charles R., Robert, Victor, a cement contractor of East Moline, Byrd, Fred, and Lela, who died at the age of five years.

Charles R. McLain was reared on the North Carolina farm, and attended the district school. When he was twenty-three years old, he came to Moline, and engaged with the Moline Plow Company, continuing with this concern three years as a moulder. In 1904, he embarked in the concrete business, and his success has proven the wisdom of his choice.

In 1907, Mr. McLain married Winona Fonshee, also born in North Carolina, and they have one child: Toice, three years old. Mrs. McLain is a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. McLain belongs to the Royal Arcanum. While voting the democratic ticket, he is very liberal in his political views. Having achieved a well-merited success in his business, and formed many warm friendships, it is only natural that Mr. McLain should purpose remaining in Moline, where he is so highly respected.

McLAIN, Victor C., has been one of the leading concrete construction contractors of East Moline for some years, and has built up a good business, becoming closely identified with the city's growth and development. He has become well known in building circles, for he has been taking contracts on his own account since 1906. His birth occurred in North Carolina, February 26, 1886, he being a son of James P. and Mary (Foushee) McLain, farming people.

Victor C. McLain attended the public schools of Wilkesboro, N. C., until he was about thirteen years of age, when he began working for farmers. Later he followed the trade of a moulder, for about one year and a half. He came to Rock Island and about two years later began working at concrete construction. Coming to East Moline to work for the East Moline Land Company, and realizing the future prospects for concrete work here, he embarked in business as a contractor, since which time he has prospered. Victor C. McLain was married in 1906 to Maud T. Noah.

McLAUGHLIN, John (deceased).—To be a veteran of the Civil War is something worth while, for it shows that there was a time when patriotic loyalty triumphed over natural caution, and love of country was greater than love of self. Such was the case with the late John McLaughlin, old soldier and retired farmer, who resided on his farm of 160 acres in Edginton township, until death claimed him. He was born in McKeesport, Pa., October 6, 1843, son of David and Hannah (Brady) McLaughlin, born in Westmoreland county, Pa. The grandfather, John McLaughlin, came to America from Ireland, in young manhood, and married in Westmoreland county, Pa. He operated a farm, and had charge of a boat on the Ohio river, and he and his wife died in the county in which they were married. David McLaughlin was educated in the common schools of the period, and worked as a laborer and farmer. He and his wife were married in Westmoreland county, Pa., and in 1853 came west to Illinois, settling on the farm now owned by their son, John. Here the father died about 1873, aged fifty-seven years, while the mother passed away in 1897. Their children were: James; John; Joseph E., who died in 1888; Marks, who is deceased; and Barbara, who is now Mrs. John Dillett of Mercer county.

John McLaughlin was ten years old when the family came west, and he went to school both in Pennsylvania and Rock Island county, and was brought up to farm. He took charge of the homestead in 1877, buying out the other heirs after his father's death. In addition to this, he owned another eighty acres, in Edginton township. In September, 1862, he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served until August 1, 1865, participating in the siege of Vicksburg, and battles of Helena, and Little Rock, and many skirmishes.

On October 1, 1877, Mr. McLaughlin was married, to Hattie McBeth by Rev. G. W. Powell of Davenport, Ia. She was born in Scott county, Ia., December 26, 1847, a daughter of Hezekiah and Rebecca (McCoy) McBeth. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin were: Augustus, who was born May 17, 1881, married Minnie Kell, has two children, Harold and Helen, and lives in Edginton township; and Ernest, who was born October 17, 1887, is also at home. Mr. McLaughlin and his wife were members of the Baptist church. Politically he was a republican. After long years of hard work, he enjoyed a well-earned ease and the comforts his industry and thrift provided for him. His death was lamented by a wide circle of friends.

McMURPHY, Edward Hubbard.—It sometimes happens that a son inherits his father's tastes and succeeds him in business or public life. When such is the case, the people served by such a successor are to be congratulated, for the son can profit by the advice and experience of the older man, and give better results than one less well equipped. The present supervisor of Canoe Creek township, Edward Hubbard McMurphy, is an instance of a son occupying a public office several times very admirably filled by his father. Mr. McMurphy, one of the rising young men of this locality, was born in Canoe Creek township. He is a son of George W. and Aveila (Hubbard) McMurphy; grandson of George Rodney McMurphy, and great-grandson of George McMurphy. The last named gentleman came to Rock Island county with his family at a very early day, and they helped to develop Hampton township. Members of this old family are to be found in different parts of Rock Island county, and are always numbered among the leading people of their several communities.

Mr. McMurphy grew up on his father's homestead in Canoe Creek township, and is now assisting in operating the same. He has been very active in politics, having served as school director for two years; was town clerk for two years more, and then in 1910, was the successful candidate for the office of supervisor, which he has now held for some years. He is one of the live, progressive young men of this section. During his occupancy of the office of supervisor, as well as during the time when his father represented the township on the board, many much-needed improvements have been inaugurated and carried through, and this locality owes much to these two men.

McMURPHY, Edward M. (deceased), whose death occurred in Zuma township, November 29, 1906, was for many years closely identified with the agricultural interests of Rock Island county, and was known throughout his community as a public-spirited citizen, a friend of progress, and a representative of the best type of American citizenship. He was born in Hampton township, Rock Island county, Ill., April 24, 1843, a son of George R. and Amanda (Howard) McMurphy, the former of whom owned a saw and grist mill at Hampton for many years and later purchased a farm in Canoe Creek township. George R. McMurphy was one of the first county surveyors of Rock Island county, a position which he held at the time of his death in 1866, after being an incumbent of that office for sixteen years.

Edward M. McMurphy attended the public schools of Hampton township and the Davenport business college, taking special study in drawing and penmanship, and as a young man was for some time a writing teacher. With his brother he purchased a farm in Canoe Creek township, and this association continued for two years, when Edward M. sold to his brother and came to Zuma township, buying a tract of 220 acres of improved land, and also owning a farm in Canoe Creek township. After his marriage he farmed his Zuma property for thirteen years, but on account of failing health he moved to Moline, from whence he directed the operations on his land, often paying visits to take charge of a shipment of stock which usually found its way to the Chicago markets twice a year. In 1900 he moved from his residence on Fifth avenue, Moline, to the farm, and there he continued to live until his death, since which time his widow has continued to live on the old homestead, her residence in Moline being rented as is also a tract of eleven acres in the corporation of Hillsdale.

On May 30, 1872, Mr. McMurphy was married in Zuma township to Miss Mary E. Moody, who was born in that township, June 18, 1849, a daughter of John and Mary P. (Graham) Moody. Mrs. McMurphy is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church in the faith of which her husband died, and he was buried in the Zuma cemetery. He was a republican all of his life, but never cared for public office, preferring to give his time and attention to his business interests.

McMURPHY, George W.—In these days of foreign occupancy of so many of the offices and business chances of our country, those who can claim American ancestry of long duration feel especially proud of the distinction. One of those thus fortunate is George W. McMurphy, of Canoe Creek township, but a native of Hampton township, where he was born February 24, 1841. The McMurphy family originated in America in New Hampshire, from whence members migrated to Vermont, thence to New York state, and finally to Illinois. While residing in New York state, a member of the family built the first house at Rochester. The grandfather of George W. McMurphy, George McMurphy, was a married man when the family left New York state to come to Pike county, Ill. Later removal was made to Wayne county, and in 1832, settlement was made in Hampton township, Rock Island county, near Rapid City, where he died. George McMurphy married Mary Graham, born in St. Lawrence county, N. Y. His son, George Rodney McMurphy, was born at Rochester, N. Y., and was only eight years old when the family left for Illinois, so he was reared in the latter state, and followed farming, clearing up a valuable property north of Hampton, now owned by the Altman family. He later traded this for a grist-mill at Hampton, which he operated until 1865, when he came to Canoe Creek township with a view of buying a farm on the bluffs, but caught cold, dying of pneumonia in April, 1866. He is buried in Hampton township, two miles north of Hampton. His wife bore the maiden name of Amanda Howard, and they had these children: Eunice, George W., Edward M., Mary E., Henry, Albert, William, Lucy and Lucinda and an unnamed infant. The mother died in 1854. All of the deceased members of the McMurphy family are buried in the little cemetery north of Hampton, save one, who is interred in the Bethesda cemetery.

George W. McMurphy was educated in the old brick schoolhouse of his district, and farmed during the summer months. In 1866, he went into the milling business with his father, thus continuing until he commenced farming for himself, being a tenant of Captain Robinson for three years. He and his brother Edward then bought land, working it in partnership for some years, when Edward bought a farm in Zuma township, and they divided their land. Mr. McMurphy now owns 480 acres in Canoe Creek township, and has made many improvements upon his property, as well as cleared off the heavy debt incurred when he invested in the land. He has been supervisor for several terms, as well as school treasurer and justice of the peace. Fraternally, he is a Woodman and Workman, while his religious affiliations are with the Methodist church.

In 1869, Mr. McMurphy married Avelia Hubbard, daughter of Moses and Maria (Crandall) Hubbard. Her grandfather Hubbard was in the battle of Sackett's Harbor, while another ancestor took part in the battle of Buffalo. Three children were born of this marriage: Leonora, who died in 1907, aged thirty-six years; George R., who died when nine months old, is buried in this township; and Edward H., who lives with his father. Mrs. McMurphy, who had been an invalid for twenty years, died in Alabama in 1904, and was buried here. Mr. McMurphy is one of the most representative of the men of this locality, and he stands very high in the estimation of his neighbors and business associates.

McNABNEY, George Francis.—The village of Hampton, is one of the best governed communities in Rock Island county, its citizens having been fortunate in their selection of men to handle its affairs. The president of the village at this time is George Francis McNabney, whose long experience in positions of an official nature have fitted him eminently for the one which he now occupies, and in which he is contributing materially to the public welfare. He is a native son of this village, and was born November 17, 1855, a son of William J. and Josephine (Borck) McNabney, the former born of Scotch-Irish descent, near the city of Rochester, N. Y., and the latter in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany.

George Francis McNabney was educated in the schools of Hampton, and spent his boyhood much as other youths, growing up alert in mind and strong in body. He early identified himself with affairs pertaining to the government of the village, and after serving for some time as assistant postmaster, was made postmaster of Hampton, a position which he held for eight years. For sixteen consecutive years he acted as school treasurer of nine districts in Hampton township, and for a like period has served as justice of the peace and notary public. He became president of the village in 1911, and as such has given the people of Hampton a clean, progressive and businesslike administration, which has been marked by numerous advancements. In his conduct of the affairs of the community he has been zealous and conscientious, and has won the full confidence of the people whose interests he represents.

On March 22, 1877, Mr. McNabney was married to Miss Ettie May Underwood, and they are the parents of three children—two sons and one daughter.

McNALL, James Otis, is a prosperous farmer of Drury township, who is operating his eighty acres in such a manner as to be profitable to himself, and add to the general agricultural supremacy of Rock Island county. In addition to his own farm he operates 180 acres which he rents, specializing on corn, and because of his progressive methods, he is raising bumper crops of this grain. He was born in this township, on the farm now owned by him, August 20, 1879, a son of Ozias and Minerva (Hesser) McNall, natives of Canada and Iowa, respectively, who were married November 7, 1858. In young manhood Ozias McNall left Canada, to go to San Antonio, Texas, where he was a mail carrier for the Government. During the Mexican war he served as a soldier and when the Civil war broke out he once more took up arms in defense of his country, enlisting in Company A, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, at Davenport, Iowa. During the trouble with the Mormons, in Illinois, he took an active part and in every way proved himself a loyal American. Prior to his enlistment for service in the Civil war, he had bought land in Drury township, and rounded out his life on it, dying at the age of seventy-nine years. He carried with him into the grave, a bullet received at the battle of Belmont. His widow survives, making her home with her son, Mr. McNall. She and her husband had twelve children; Hemond, deceased; George, Rachel, Edwin, Minnie, Jane, Adie, Jesse, John, James Otis, Phoebe, deceased, and Natban.

James Otis McNall attended the district schools and has spent his life upon the farm he owns. In addition to raising corn, Mr. McNall is interested in Poland-China hogs and Jersey cows. He owns a part interest in a threshing outfit and does threshing for others.

On the twenty-fourth day of February, 1898, Mr. McNall married Catherine Hanson, born in Clinton county, Iowa, and they have two children: Ethel, born February 24, 1900, and Melvin, born December 26, 1903. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Brotherhood of America. Politically he has been a republican since casting his first vote. A man of purpose, industrious and thrifty, Mr. McNall has steadily advanced and stands very high in his community.

McNEAL, George, who is now living retired in his comfortable residence at Hampton, after a long and useful career spent in agricultural pursuits, is a native of Hampton, having been born here November 27, 1833, a son of Henry and Louisa (Wells) McNeal, the former a native of New York and the latter of Vermont, and grandson of Daniel and Ranny (Wells) McNeal. The grandparents of Mr. McNeal came to the southern part of Illinois about 1827, with ox-teams, soon thereafter coming to the present site of Hampton. Henry McNeal ran away from home when he was a boy and worked on the great lakes and various other places until 1828, when he came to Hampton and was married. After working in the lead mines for a time he became the proprietor of a wood yard which he conducted for many years, and later purchased a farm south of Watertown, in Hampton township, where he spent the remainder of his life, dying in 1878, his wife having passed away in 1848. Their children were: George; Daniel, who is of Watertown; and Ellen, who died in 1871, was the wife of Erastus Carlton.

George McNeal resided with his parents until he reached the age of nineteen years, at which time he went to Port Byron and learned the trade of a blacksmith, two years later buying out his employer and continuing the proprietor of the place until his enlistment, on August 21, 1862, in Company G, One Hundred Twenty-sixth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War, and did service in the Mississippi Valley, his honorable discharge being granted August 2, 1865. He then returned to Port Byron, where he conducted his blacksmith business until 1878, at which time he sold his place and bought a farm at Watertown, Ill., where he cultivated the land until 1903, in which year he retired and went to live in the town of his birth.

On May 1, 1856, he was married at Port Byron, to Caroline N. Addison, who was born August 3, 1836, in Erie county, Pa., a daughter of Charles and Adeline (Metcalf) Addison. Both parents came to Henry county, Ill., in 1839, and the mother died in 1840 and the father in 1846, so that the little orphan girl went to live with her aunt, Luraine Holmes, at Geneseo, Ill. One daughter, Louisa A., was born to Mr. and Mrs. McNeal, but she died at the age of fifteen months. Mr. McNeal is a republican in politics, and he has served as trustee of Port Byron, and as a school director, township collector and road commissioner. For many years he has been a member of the Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America.

MCNEILL FAMILY, The.—Among the early settlers of the country, state and county, McNeill has been a well-known and respected name. Members of it settled in Vermont in 1633, and since then the family has had a representative in every war of the United States. Daniel McNeill settled in Illinois in 1819 after serving through the War of 1812 under Andrew Jackson, as a minute man at New Orleans. He occupied several offices of trust; he was made Monmouth's first postmaster in 1831; in 1832 he was commissioned by Governor Reynolds to organize the militia to protect the frontier, which he did in an able manner. He held the offices of circuit clerk, county clerk, probate judge, and recorder of deeds while at Monmouth, and was aid-de-camp to Gen. James McCallen in the inspection of the Nauvoo legion, by order of Gov. Thomas Ford. Daniel McNeill moved to Dewitt, Clinton county, Iowa, in 1854, where for a number of years he was county judge.

Quincy McNeill, son of David McNeill, came to Rock Island county in the early forties, and lived here until 1889, when he went to the Old Soldiers' Home at Quincy, Ill., where he died in 1895. On November 23, 1852, occurred the marriage of Quincy McNeill to Mary McLaughlin, she coming to Rock Island from Pennsylvania in 1850 with her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Drinn. Quincy and Mary McNeill reared a family of eight children: N. Ella, of Olympia, Wash.; Charles D., of Clinton, Iowa; Arthur N., of Rock Island, Ill.; and Ralph of Cleveland, Ohio, who are still living; and Lura, George Q., Grace, and Ruth, who are deceased.

Besides serving four years in the Civil war as captain of the Thirtieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, he was major of the Second Illinois Cavalry and colonel of the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Louisiana Colored Troops. Mr. McNeill also was city clerk in 1853; alderman from the First Ward in 1857; circuit clerk and recorder of deeds. Many of our early settlers received their education from Quincy McNeill, who taught school in a building which occupied a site now included in Spencer square.

Arthur N. McNeill, the plumber, son of Quincy and Mary McNeill, was born in Rock Island county, February 14, 1869. After attending the public schools he was graduated from the grammar grades in 1885. From 1878 to 1884, while attending school, he carried and sold papers and worked in F. M. Wheaton's drug store, which occupied the corner store room in the old Buford block, which stood where the Best building now stands. From 1885 to 1886, he worked in the Christie Cracker factory, but in the fall of 1886, he went to Clinton, Iowa, to learn the plumbing trade, returning to Rock Island, July 3, 1892, after working one year each at Chicago, Ill., and Minneapolis, Minn., to take charge of the plumbing and heating business for Baker and Houseman. After working two years for this firm he entered into co-partnership with Willard Baker and John Sessler, who bought the interest of Baker and Houseman, under the name of Baker, McNeill and Sessler, which continued until 1897, when he sold his interest to J. W. Knox, under contract not to go into business in Rock Island for a term of five years. From 1897 to 1903 he worked at his trade at Kansas City, Mo., Clinton, and Webster City, Iowa, returning to Rock Island, March 17, 1903. The period of limitation having expired he started in business for himself at Rock Island, and through industry and honesty has built up a flourishing and prosperous plumbing and heating business conducted in a manner to convince people that they can get from him the best there is to be had in his line.

On October 4, 1893, occurred the marriage of Arthur N. McNeill and Laura H. Beardsley, daughter of Hannah and Capt. Jas. M. Beardsley, who were early settlers at Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. McNeill have the following children: Neil I., born July 11, 1895; Marvin C., born October 5, 1899, at Camanche, Iowa; J. Quincy, born September 26, 1903; and Norman B., born May 19, 1905. All are attending the public schools.

McNUTT, David (deceased).—The economic virtues of the rural classes are being more and more appreciated, and their importance in the general welfare of the nation is now generally recognized. The late David McNutt, one of the men belonging to this class who bore his part in the development of his community was the owner of 160 acres on sections 1 and 36, Buffalo Prairie township. He was born on a farm in this township, May 27, 1854, being a son of William McNutt. The latter was born in Jefferson county, Ohio, in 1840, and reared to a farm life. He was a son of Byron McNutt, a native of eastern Ohio. Marrying Jane Stephenson of Ohio, Byron McNutt moved to Buffalo Prairie township, about 1836, there entering a large tract of land. Thus the McNutt family was established in the county among the pioneer settlers. These grandparents of David McNutt passed away on their farm, he when sixty years old, and his widow at the age of eighty-four years and both were consistent members of the Presbyterian church. Their children were: Elizabeth, Mrs. Arthur Campbell, who had a daughter, Mrs. S. E. Roberts; John, who died in this county, having married Mary Bope; Margaret (Peggy) who died unmarried; Jane, Mrs. Sidney Gillette, who died in this county; William; and Alexander, who died in Kansas, having married Elizabeth Ferguson.

William McNutt was seventeen years old when his father brought him to Rock Island county, and he secured his education in the common schools of Ohio and Illinois. Growing up amid strictly pioneer surroundings, he developed sturdy traits of character. About 1840, he went to Washington county, Pa., where he married Sarah Jane McClurg, daughter of Joseph McClurg. For three years he lived there, and then brought his wife and the two children that had been born to them to Illinois, locating in Buffalo Prairie township, where he died in 1897, his wife dying there in 1894. They, too, belonged to the Presbyterian church. In politics, William McNutt was a republican. The children in his family were: James Huston, who enlisted in Company B, Sixteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for services during the Civil war, re-enlisted a year later in the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, at Galena, Ill.; Anna Mary, Mrs. James Gilbert, who is deceased; Jane, who is Mrs. James Bell of Garnett, Kas.; Elizabeth, who is Mrs. Chalmers Fleming of Washington county, Pa.; Joseph, who died about 1881, having married Mary Brown, now residing in Nebraska; Lysander, who died at the age of two years; David; Lottie, who is Mrs. Herbert Andrews of Buffalo Prairie township; and Rachel, Mrs. James Steward, who died at Gilman, Iowa.

David McNutt attended the old Eureka school of Buffalo Prairie township, and had Isaac Roberts, Charles Rood, Augusta Davis and Lina Jamison as teachers. He worked on the farm practically all his life, with the exception of five years when he was located near Garnett, Kas., herding cattle and working on a ranch. He was reared in the faith of the Presbyterian church. Politically he espoused the principles of the republican party. Quiet, unassuming, Mr. McNutt made a success of his undertakings, and worked hard to attain his ends. He stood very high in public esteem, and had many warm friends who mourn his loss. His death occurred April 26, 1912.

McQUOID, Thomas Campbell.—Some of the farmers of Rock Island county are fortunate enough to own the farms on which they were born, being thus attached to their homes by old ties, and one of these is Thomas Campbell McQuoid, owner of eighty acres of choice farm land in Rural township, on which he raises corn, cattle and hogs. He was born here, in 1877, a son of James and Martha (McGimpsey) McQuoid, natives of Ireland. James McQuoid came to Rock Island county when twenty years old, settling in Rural township on the property now owned by his son, and this continued to be his home until his death, which occurred in 1888. The mother also came early to Rock Island county, and here she was married. Three children were born to James and Martha McQuoid: Mary, deceased, wife of Robert McGimpsey; Thomas C., and Esther, second wife of Robert McGimpsey.

Thomas Campbell McQuoid was reared on the home farm, and was sent to school during the winter months. In the summer, he worked on the farm, thus early acquiring habits of industry, and learned how to manage the property which later came into his capable hands. With the exception of three years, when he worked in a machine shop, Mr. McQuoid has spent his life in farming, and has been successful in his undertakings. In politics, he is a republican, but he has never desired public office. He is an enterprising young man who thoroughly understands his business, and he stands high in the estimation of his neighbors.

McROBERTS, William.—Every community has certain men who govern affairs because of their superior knowledge and ability to control others. To such men the affairs of the township can be safely entrusted, and to them is due the honor of existing improvements. William McRoberts, now supervisor of Coe township, is one of the representative men of Rock Island county, whose energies have been directed towards a betterment of conditions for many years. He was born in Allegheny county, Pa., September 6, 1856, a son of William and Elizabeth (Alcott) McRoberts. The former was born in Ireland, but came to America when about twenty-five years old. His death occurred in 1901, when he was seventy-four years old. His wife died in 1894, aged sixty-seven years. Their children were: Mary, William, James, Emma, Frank, Edward, John, George, and Annie, the latter dying in infancy. Mrs. McRoberts, with her parents, is buried in Fairfield cemetery. When the younger William McRoberts was a year old, the family came to Rock Island county and for some years the father rented land, then bought eighty acres. This he sold, to buy 120 acres, to which he added until he owned a farm of 280 acres, upon which he made many improvements, continuing to live upon it until his death.

William McRoberts was educated in the district schools of his neighborhood, and was brought up on the farm. In 1896 he bought his present farm of 160 acres. Later he purchased sixty acres of pasture land two miles west of his original farm. William McRoberts has made many improvements upon his property, and has a valuable farm. He carries on general farming and stock raising, and has been remarkably successful in all his undertakings.

On October 3, 1882, he married Lura K. Barrett, daughter of Daniel T. Barrett. Two children have been born of this marriage: Grace L., and William Morris, both of whom are at home. Mr. McRoberts is the present supervisor of Coe township, and has held the office for four years. He was road commissioner for three years, and for twelve years was a school director. Equally prominent in religious affairs, he is a consistent member of the Methodist church, as are the family, and is now a trustee of it. He is a Knight of Pythias and belongs to the Court of Honor. Few men stand any higher in public esteem than Mr. McRoberts, and he has friends all over the county who recognize his merits and unflinching integrity of purpose.

McSHANE, William, owner of 200 acres of as fertile farm land as can be found in Rock Island county, and a man widely known and universally respected, has spent his entire life upon his present farm, where he was born July 3, 1865, and he and his father are counted among the progressive agriculturists of Edgington township. William McShane is a son of James and Catherine (Markey) McShane, the former born in Ireland April 18, 1833, being a son of Owen and Mary (McCabe) McShane. James and Catherine McShane came to the United States in early life, landing at New York City. He worked on different railroads in the United States and Canada, but was injured, so abandoned this kind of labor, and coming to Rock Island in 1854 rented a farm. Later, he bought the farm on which his son William was born, and lived upon it until he retired to Rock Island in 1901, where he now resides. His wife died June 4, 1908, and is interred in Calvary cemetery. She was a consistent member of St. Joseph's Catholic church. In politics he is a democrat. The children born to James McShane and wife were: William and his twin brother John. The latter lives at Rock Island.

William McShane was educated in the district schools of his neighborhood, and those of Milan, and was brought up to work on the farm. He was married on April 2, 1902, to Ellen Doolley, born December 31, 1868, and they have children as follows: Catherine Anna Marie, born October 21, 1904; Rosella Margaret, born July 15, 1906, and Florence Cecilia, born May 12, 1908. In politics Mr. McShane is a democrat. He is an excellent farmer, having bought the homestead in 1909, and takes great pride in this property, bound, as he is, to it by lifelong association. Some years ago William McShane spent seven years in California, Nevada and Texas, but returned to his old home feeling it was the most desirable place he had seen. His family is one of the best in the county, and he is living up to the high standard set by his father when he came here so many years ago.

MEESE, Hon. William A., counselor at law by profession, public worker at heart, and student of pioneer history by taste and inclination, has been identified with the city of Moline since infancy. He was born in Wisconsin in February, 1857, but was brought to Moline by his parents when he was a babe in arms. He was educated in the Moline public schools, at Griswold college, Davenport, Ia., and at Rock River Seminary, Dixon, Ill. Mr. Meese was trained for the profession of law at the University of Iowa, and immediately on graduation therefrom began his career in Moline. During a practice extending over a period of thirty years, he has earned for himself a place among the prominent members of the bar of Rock Island county and the state of Illinois. He is attorney for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company in Rock Island county, for the People's Savings Bank and Trust Company of Moline, the Tri-City Manufacturers' Association and other corporations.

Few men in Illinois have been so actively and so long identified with public effort as has Mr. Meese. This service has carried him into the field of politics and among the public men of Illinois and the nation; it has identified him closely with the upbuilding of his home city and has developed him into one of the best informed men in the country on the national cause of waterways; it has won for him the reputation and recognition of being one of the most widely known men in the middle west. He served the city of Moline as member of the municipal cemetery and library boards, being on the library board when it acquired and constructed the present Carnegie-Moline library building; he was president of the Business Men's Association when it was a potent force in securing a lock in the Mississippi river which would insure a harbor at Moline for Mississippi boats and when the citizens made possible a new and modern opera house; he served the state of Illinois as trustee of the Northern Illinois State Normal School at DeKalb and as attorney for the Illinois and Michigan Canal commission. Mr. Meese's natural taste is centered in the perpetuation of the history of

Lawrence M. & wife & family

Illinois and the Northwest during the period that the pioneers were wresting the broad expanse of prairie from the Red Man and through the constructive period when the foundations for the government and development of Illinois and her neighbors were being laid. He has gathered through years of research what is considered to be the most complete collection of books and papers of pioneer times in Illinois. The distinguishing feature of this collection is the story of Abraham Lincoln, his life and work and associations as reflected by writers contemporaneous with the various periods of the life of the martyr president. Mr. Meese is one of the active spirits in the work of the Illinois State Historical Society to preserve and permanently dedicate as public grounds various historical spots about which center the story of sacrifice and struggle of the pioneers. An imposing shaft erected by the state of Illinois in 1908 in memory of Lieutenant Campbell and the United Rangers who gave their lives in 1814 in battle with the Sac and Fox Indians on the shore of an island in the Mississippi near Moline, stands as a local monument to the efforts he put forth in conjunction with the local chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution. In the national cause of waterways Mr. Meese is devoting his energies to the education of the public toward the preservation of these natural highways for their progressive and ultimate development as practical arteries of commerce.

MENAS, Charles, who is a leading business man of Moline, Ill., being proprietor of the European Bakery, located at No. 1326 State street, East Moline, has built up a large and profitable trade within a comparatively short time, through enterprise, courtesy and honest and palatable goods. He is one of the younger business men of the city, but is looked upon as one of the most dependable. Charles Menas was born in Greece, in 1881, and is a son of James and Alice (Castersat) Menas. The father died in Greece in 1910, and the mother still lives on the family estate there. In his native land Charles had school advantages and afterward worked on a farm until 1902, when he accomplished his ambition of coming to America, of which country he had heard from boyhood. After reaching the United States he went to Michigan, where he remained for three months and from there to Chicago, Ill., where he learned the bakery trade, after which he went to Davenport, Ia., and opened a bakery in that city, where he continued until 1911, when he came to East Moline. Mr. Menas purchased property here and carries on his business in his commodious two-story brick building and inspectors give him credit for having the most sanitary and best equipped bakery in the city. He supplies a large district by wagon, his trade being both wholesale and retail, his output including all kinds of choice bakery goods and some specialties. It is certainly creditable that he should, in so short a time, and practically in a strange city and country, be able to win the confidence and patronage of so many people and do so satisfactory a business. Mr. Menas has three brothers still living in Greece. He has become a thorough American, but still retains love for his native land and doubtless will return to visit it, but East Moline does not wish to lose him as a citizen. He is not married. He has membership in the Christian church.

METSCH, Christ, formerly a guard at the United States government bridge for twenty-six years, and a resident of the city since 1858, is one of the best known men of Rock Island. He was born at Wurtemberg, Germany, September 23, 1836, being a son of Christ and Rosa (Negley) Metsch, farming people and wine producers. Both parents died in Germany, having had the following children: Mina, who came to America, and married at Pittsburgh; Fred, who died in Germany in 1910; Christ; Mary, who came to America, was married at Moline to Ludwig Niedenmann, and died there; Louisa, who came to America, was married at Denver to Andrew Bitzer; Caroline, who died in Germany, 1879; Annie, who died in Germany in 1905; Fredericka, who died in Germany; and Eva, who is living in Germany.

Christ Metsch attended school until he was fourteen years old, when with his eldest sister, he came to America, sailing from Liverpool for New York. They were thirty-six days on the water, and were glad indeed to reach port. From New York they went to Philadelphia, and later to Pittsburgh. Mr. Metsch learned the trade of a baker in the latter city, and worked at it until he came to Rock Island in 1858. At that time he established himself in a bakery business, and conducted it until the outbreak of the Civil war. He then sold it and teamed for some time. Following this he was baker for Jacob Kiser, who had a contract with the United States Government for supplying bread to the prisoners at this point. Still later, Mr. Metsch teamed again, when he was made a member of the Rock Island police force, thus continuing for ten years, when he was made bailiff at the courthouse. He then secured the position as guard on the Island, holding it for twenty-six years, or until December, 1911.

In October, 1861, Mr. Metsch was married at Rock Island to Dora Straley, who died January 15, 1895. In September, 1895, he married Rosa Schaff. No living issue from either marriage. Mr. Metsch is a faithful, loyal citizen, and excellent man whose life has been spent in hard work. His devotion to duty is recognized by the government he served so long, and is appreciated by all who know him.

METZGAR, Marcellus R.—It is not sufficient to make mention of the heroes of the Civil War in the Military History of Rock Island county, for their deeds deserve more extended notice. Theirs was the great work of preserving the Union, and now that their task is accomplished, it is not fair or just to forget the debt owing to them. One of the men who bravely bore his part in this mightiest struggle of the times, in Marcellus R. Metzgar, secretary of the Bennett Organ Company, of Rock Island, whose residence is at No. 1520 Tenth avenue, Moline. He was born at Mt. Pleasant, Westmoreland county, Pa., April 16, 1843, a son of David Swartz and Mary Ann (Crumbaugh) Metzgar. The father resided in Pennsylvania until the family moved to Port Byron, Ill., where he is now living retired. The great-great-grandfather enlisted July 13, 1781, in the Revolutionary Army, under Captain Tudor, of the Fourth Pennsylvania Continental line, commanded by Colonel William Butler. He was in the battles of Trenton, Brandywine and Paoli, and was wounded in the last named engagement. His honorable discharge was given July 13, 1783.

Marcellus R. Metzgar attended the public schools, and when he finished, he entered his father's store as a clerk. On December 7, 1861, he enlisted in Company H, Fifty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but was transferred to the Signal Corps, Army of the Cumberland, in January, 1864. His discharge was received at Chattanooga, Tenn., December 27, 1864. He was at New Madrid and Island No. 10, siege of Corinth, battles of Farmington, Tenn., Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Rocky Face, Resaca, New Hope Church and Dallas. During the fight of Altoona Pass, Mr. Metzgar was on signal station duty at General Sherman's headquarters.

On June 19, 1867, Mr. Metzgar was married at Port Byron, to Mary E. Brown, born at Port Byron, August 3, 1849, daughter of A. J. and P. R. Brown. They have had two children: Judson D., born December 5, 1870; and Frank M., born September 4, 1874, both at Port Byron. Until 1880, Mr. Metzgar continued to reside at Port Byron, but then moved, and Moline has been the family home since 1882. Mr. Metzgar owns his house at No. 1520 Tenth avenue, Moline. He belongs to the G. A. R. Post. Until 1896, he was a democrat, but has been a republican ever since. A man of sound principles, he has always lived up to his ideals of right and his influence for higher standards of business integrity and personal morality has been strong in the communities in which he has lived during his useful life.

MEWES, Albert Henry, profitably engaged in farming 190 acres of land in Drury township, known as the Charles Mewes estate, is one of the successful agriculturists of Rock Island county, where he is recognized as a man of ability and business acumen. He was born on the farm he now occupies, August 26, 1877, a son of Carl and Fredericka (Fuhlmann) Mewes, natives of Germany, who came here in 1862. They first lived at Muscatine, Ia., for eighteen months, and then came to Drury township, where the father died, the mother still living, making her home with one of her sons. A full history of the Mewes family is given elsewhere in this work. Albert Henry Mewes grew up on the homestead, where he worked for his father, and after the latter's demise, took charge of the farm. Here he carries on general farming and has been eminently successful. Progressive in his ideas, he has made some experiments, and is ready and willing to adopt new methods in his work.

In 1912, Mr. Mewes married Emma Kiel, born in Dallas City, Ill., daughter of Adolph and Mary (Flaig) Kiel. The Methodist church holds his membership, and he takes a deep interest in its good work. Since casting his first vote, Mr. Mewes has been a republican. His time and attention have been given to his farming, so he has had but little time to devote to public matters, always, however, being ready to lend a helping hand to any movement which in his judgment will work out for the benefit of the majority. His success in his farming ventures has resulted in his being accepted as an authority upon all matters pertaining to agriculture.

MEWES, Charles W., a successful farmer of section 13, Drury township, is a native of that township, where he is well known and highly respected. He was born September 12, 1869, a son of Carl M. and Fredericka (Fuhlman), natives of Germany, who married in that country. The father was a coachman and expert horseman in his native land, and he and his wife came to the United States about 1861, landing at New York City, from whence they came to Muscatine, Iowa. At first he obtained employment chopping wood but later worked in a slaughter house and about 1868 came to Drury township. Still later he purchased the home farm of 190 acres, where he died September 29, 1910, his widow also passing away upon it on January 15, 1913. Carl M. Mewes was a man of education, influential in his community, and for some years was a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was a republican and for twelve years served as a school trustee. The children of Carl M. Mewes and wife were: Ferdinand, of Drury township, married Sophia Kettlecamp; Annie, is Mrs. Lewis Kliest of Drury township; Charles W.; William, of Muscatine, Iowa, married Miss Hattie McCormick; Martha, is deceased; Albert, on the home place, married Emma Kiel; Edward, of Drury township, married Annie McCormick.

Charles W. Mewes grew to manhood in Drury township and attended the White Oak district school until he was fourteen years of age, among his instructors having Jessie Brownworth, Henry Vandolah, and J. G. Britton. He worked on the home farm until he attained to young manhood and then for three years worked for others. In 1898 he bought his present farm of over 200 acres, since which time he has remodeled the house, put up several new buildings, repaired fences, built new ones, set out trees in his orchard, and in many other ways added to the appearance and value of the place. He now has a very pleasant home and is recognized as one of the able and prosperous farmers of his township.

On October 13, 1909, Mr. Mewes married Mrs. Jessie M. Deakman, daughter of Otis and Minerva (Hesser) McNall, born in Drury township, January 21, 1873, and educated in the Foster district school. Her first marriage was to John Deakman, a son of Charles Deakman, who died in April, 1907. She had one child by her former marriage, Lela Minerva Deakman, born in Drury township October 21, 1897. Mr. Mewes is a member of the German Methodist Episcopal church and his wife of the Methodist Episcopal church. He has prospered through his industry and perseverance, as his father did before him. The latter reached Muscatine, Iowa, with but two pennies as his entire cash capital, but was possessed of pluck and energy to carry him forward, until he had attained position and influence, as well as a fair share of this world's goods. Fraternally, he holds membership with the Masonic order at Buffalo Prairie, and is also affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America of Illinois City. At the present time he is efficiently serving in the capacity of school trustee.

MEWES, Edward Alfred Henry.—The Mewes family is one that is very well known in Rock Island county, where many of its representatives are leading useful lives, for they are responsible, reliable men and women, valued additions to any community. Many of the men have devoted their ability and talents to farming, so that a great deal of valuable land is in the Mewes name, and the county is enriched by heavy taxes paid on it by the prosperous owners. One of these agriculturalists who possesses in marked degree the sterling characteristics of his family, is Edward Alfred Henry Mewes, of Drury township. He was born in the township, February 12, 1881, and is a son of Carl and Frederika (Fuhlmann) Mewes, natives of Germany, where the father was a coachman. Upon coming to this country, they first lived at Muscatine, Ia., but later located in Drury township, where the father died in 1910, being buried at Illinois City, but the mother survives and lives on the home place. A more complete sketch of this interesting family is given elsewhere in this work.

Edward Albert Henry Mewes attended the public school, and was graduated from the Muscatine business college, in June, 1905. He then worked as traction engineer for five years, and spent one year at Moline, as a machinist. In 1911, he purchased his present property, on which he has erected a handsome residence, as well as made other improvements. On March 9, 1910, Edward Albert Henry Mewes married Anna I. McCormick, born in Illinois City, of parents still residing in that village. Mr. Mewes is a Methodist and republican, and belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Energetic and progressive, he is numbered among the leading farmers of his locality, and regarded as in every way worthy his honored name.

MEWES, Ferdinand Charles August, owner of the magnificent farm known as Indian Grove Farm, comprising 200 acres of as valuable land as can be found in Rock Island county, is justly numbered among the best agriculturalists of this locality. He was born in Prussia, Germany, October 4, 1859, a son of Carl and Fredericka (Fuhlmann) Mewes. The father was a coachman. In 1862, with his wife, son and a daughter, Martha, he started for the United States. A pitiful story belongs here, for the little girl died on the voyage, and the bereaved mother concealed the fact and carried the tiny corpse on her lap for four days to prevent burial at sea, and the remains were tenderly laid to rest in Rochester, N. Y. After this sad rite was attended to, the family came west to Muscatine, Ia., where they remained eighteen months. However, as the father had come here to farm, he later removed to Drury township, this county, and there tilled the soil until his death, in 1910. He is buried in Illinois City, but his widow survives, living on the home place. The children born in this family have been, in addition to Ferdinand and baby Martha: Charles; Annie, who is the wife of Louis Kleist; William, who lives in Iowa; Martha (2), now deceased; Albert, living on the home place; and Edward, who lives in Drury township.

Ferdinand C. A. Mewes grew up on the farm, and attended the district school. Having a strong inclination towards an agricultural life, he bought his present property, and made all the improvements, including building his residence and substantial barns. Here he carries on general farming, with very profitable results.

On May 6, 1885, Mr. Mewes married Mary Krueger, born in Drury township, who died in 1893. They had the following children: Elizabeth, Edward, Elmer and Ella. On April 25, 1901, Mr. Mewes married (second) Sophia Kettelkamp, born in Edwardsville, Ill., a daughter of Herman and Bethia Ann (Chambers) Kettelkamp. Mr. Mewes belongs to the German Methodist church, and is superintendent of the Sunday school. He has always been a republican, and is a school director; served eight years as assessor; six years as supervisor, and was township clerk for three years. He is very active in politics, and manifests his interest in public matters by giving his time and attention to the same as he deems the duty of citizenship. For some time, he has been a member of the Republican County Central Committee, and in every way is an efficient man. Through experience, he has proven that agriculture is a paying business, and is satisfied with his success. In addition to his Rock Island county land he also owns a big farm in Texas.

MEWES, Fred, owner of the fine farming property known as the Rolling Home Farm, comprising 100 acres in Drury township, is one of the progressive agriculturalists of Rock Island county, and a thrifty German-American. He was born in Brandenburg, Germany, May 16, 1849, a son of William and Charlotte (Rustow)

Mewes, both of whom were natives of Germany, where the father was a laborer, and died in 1878, his wife having passed away in 1864. They had ten children, three of whom are living: Charles, who is deceased; August, who is living in Germany; Minnie, who is deceased; Johanna, who is deceased; Johanna (II), who is the wife of William Seidler, lives at Illinois City; William, who is deceased; two unnamed infants; Fred; and Caroline, who is deceased.

Fred Mewes attended school in his native land until he was thirteen years old, when he went to work as a stable boy. In 1868, he entered the German army, being then nineteen years old, and in 1870 participated in the Franco-Prussian War, being in seven or eight battles, and two horses were shot from under him. Among these engagements was the important one of Sedan, which had so remarkable an influence over the destinies of Europe. In 1871, his term of service having expired, he left the army, and was coachman for the officers of the army, and was noted as an excellent horseman. This continued until 1873, when he came to the United States to locate in Drury township, where he found employment as a farm hand. Saving and industrious, he kept his money, and in 1887, was able to buy his first land, to which he added more, and has kept on making improvements ever since. He also owns two lots in Muscatine, Iowa.

In 1877, Mr. Mewes married Augusta Kleis, born in Germany, by whom he had one child: Mary, who died in Portland, Ore., and was buried there. Mrs. Mewes died in 1879. On January 7, 1880, Mr. Mewes married at Muscatine, Ia., Christina Deakman, born June 19, 1859, in Germany, and they have had children as follows: Rosa Johanna, who is deceased; August, who died at the age of twenty-two years; Fred W.; Arthur; Oscar; Emma. The two who are deceased were laid to rest in Reynolds cemetery. The German Methodist church holds his membership. He is a republican, and for the past nine years has been a school director. One of the leading German-Americans of his locality, he is a man most highly respected by all with whom he is associated.

MEYER, Fred.—Truck farming is carried on with considerable profit in South Rock Island by thrifty farmers who are beginning to appreciate the value of marketing their product themselves. One of the progressive farmers who is devoting himself to the production of fancy vegetables for the home market is Fred Meyer of Ninth street, South Rock Island. He was born in Rock Island, in March, 1872, being a son of Sebastian Meyer, born in Germany in 1846. He came to America, via New York city, and thence to Rock Island. He and his wife engaged in truck farming in South Rock Island, and there he died July 4, 1893. Mrs. Meyer, who bore the maiden name of Adaline Cramer, bore her husband three children: Fred; Mary, deceased, and John of this county.

Fred Meyer went to St. Mary's Catholic school in South Rock Island, and while still a boy he worked with his father on the truck farm. His marriage took place at South Rock Island, November 16, 1894, to Ida Alexander of Michigan. Following this important event, Mr. Meyer began truck farming for himself, and bought his present place sixteen years ago. He has made all the improvements upon it, and his elegant residence was built in 1893 by Christ Thomas. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer are parents of four children: Charles, William, Annie and Margaret. The family are consistent Catholics, and belong to St. Joseph's Catholic church. He is independent in politics, but does not care for public life. Fraternally, he belongs to Camp No. 362, Modern Woodmen of America. For years Mr. Meyer has been experimenting with different methods of farming, and now carries on his operations in a scientific manner, with the result that he is realizing large profits from his investment of time and money.

MICHAELS, William.—Some of the families well represented in Rock Island county today, were founded here many years ago by men who are numbered among the pioneers of this region, and to whom much is owed because of their self-sacrificing bravery and sturdy endeavor to develop the wilderness. One of these families bears the name of Michaels, and one of its representatives here is William Michaels, a prosperous farmer of Coe township. The pioneer of the family was Philip Michaels who came to Rock Island county, from Muncie, Ind., about 1835, bringing with him his wife and four children: Henry, Rebecca (Mrs. Gilbert Edwards), Maria (Mrs. William Williams) and Simon.

Simon Michaels was only six years old when he was brought here, and as his father entered 120 acres of government land, all thought the family well provided for, but this was jumped by others, and Philip Michaels was forced to go through the same process to secure 120 acres more, this time selecting Zuma township as a place of residence. On the new land he built a log house, having prior to this lived in the schooner wagon in which the journey had been made from Indiana to Illinois. Improvements were made upon the land, and new buildings erected. Later in life, Philip Michaels moved to Port Byron with his daughter Maria. When she married, he lived among his children, finally passing away about 1887, when he was seventy years old, on the homestead where his son Simon was then living. His wife had died about 1875.

Simon Michaels married Alice Ann Bryant, daughter of Samuel Bryant, and they had two children: Thomas, who died young, and William. These excellent people adopted a baby girl, Grace, now residing on the home farm. William Michaels married, December 24, 1883, Camilla May McNabney, daughter of William Joseph and Josephine (Burk) McNabney, who was born December 25, 1863. Mr. and Mrs. Michaels became the parents of children as follows: Jennie, Mrs. Frank Sanchau of Zuma township; George Henry, at home; Alice Ann, Mrs. Joseph Savage of Zuma township; Bell, a student in the Greenwood school, as are Edith and Bryant. Mr. Michaels belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America of Port Byron, Camp No. 34, and at one time was a member of the Odd Fellows of Rapid City. Both Mr. Michaels and his father espoused the principles of democracy.

When Mr. Michaels married, his father bought forty acres of land for him in Coe township, and he has lived here ever since. He has put in all of the improvements, including the house, barns and other buildings, and broken a good deal of the ground. During earlier days Mr. Michaels often put in a hard day's work grubbing and has passed through every phase of agricultural life. He was born in a log cabin similar to the one pictured as the birthplace of the immortal Abraham Lincoln, and grew up in it. His parents planted corn on the present sites of Moline and Rock Island clear up to the court house. There was only one saw-mill and one store where now stands Rock Island and Mr. Michaels remembers well hearing his parents tell of the births of the first white children born in the county. Mr. Michaels also remembers hearing of corn being sold in Rock Island county for one dollar per bushel. Many troublesome incidents happened to members of his family but none of them ever complained much of the inevitable hardships or the dangers incident to frontier life. Probably they were too brave and inured to suffering to rebel against them.

MIER, Charles L., who is operating 211 acres of fine farming land in Edginton township, is one of the prosperous farmers of Rock Island county. He was born at Rock Island, August 10, 1884, a son of Joseph and Mary (Seherman) Mier, both natives of Germany, where the former was born in 1853, and the latter in 1859. They were married at Rock Island. The father was in the Rock Island fire department for eighteen years, having come to America in boyhood. He began farming here, fourteen and one-half years ago, but moved to Minnesota in 1907, and his son Charles L. Mier took charge of the farm in this county which he now rents. These parents had children as follows: William; Theresa who is the wife of Dennis Bennett; Charles L.; Joseph who is of Minnesota; Lawrence; Minrodt who is at home; and Louis, Anna and Emma who are also at home. The maternal grandfather served in the Civil war.

Charles L. Mier was married February 19, 1907, to Minnie L. Hartmann, daughter of Albert and Rosa Hartmann, natives of Switzerland, who both live in Rock Island county. Their children were: John, Mrs. Mier, Julia and William. Mr. and Mrs. Mier became the parents of two children: Ruth, born November 24, 1908, and Dorothy, deceased. Mr. Mier is one of the representative young men of the county, and was born and educated within its confines, and all his interests are centered here. He is an independent in his political views, but is anxious to see advancement made in every way. He belongs to Camp No. 4803, M. W. A., of Taylor Ridge, and both he and his wife belong to the Court of Honor. They are very popular socially, and have many friends all over the county, whom they entertain at their hospitable home.

MEIER, Fritz, now living retired from active life in his very pleasant home at No. 2613 Thirteenth avenue, Rock Island, Ill., is well known as an enterprising and public-spirited citizen, who is interested in the public welfare and prosperity. He is a native of Holstein, Germany, born June 14, 1843, a son of John F. and Elsie (Pierce) Meier, both natives of the same place, the father born in August, 1799, and the mother in 1806. The father, who was a blacksmith by trade, brought his family to America in 1865, sailing from Hamburg and landing in New York City, after spending thirty-four days on the water. The family came direct to Moline, Ill., where they remained about three years and the father lived retired the remainder of his life, his death occurring in September, 1879. The mother died in 1885. They were parents of four children, of whom Fritz is the only survivor.

Fritz Meier lived at his father's home until he was fifteen years of age, receiving his education in the public schools of his native place. When sixteen years of age he took up the life of a sailor, being employed on five or six different ships during the six years he followed this line of work. At first he was put to work at various tasks, but eventually became a practical sailor. He accompanied his parents to America in 1865 and after spending five years at farm work spent twenty years working in a sawmill at Davenport, Iowa, then came to Rock Island and for ten years conducted a boarding house. He then retired from active life and came to his present home. His father had been a soldier in the German army, but Fritz Meier was not obliged to give his services in this connection.

April 21, 1888, Mr. Meier, was united in marriage, at Davenport, Iowa, with Mrs. Margaret Heuck Deitrich, daughter of Joachim and Margaret (Heur) Heuck, who was born in Germany. Both her parents were born in that country, the mother in 1818, and died in 1900, and there they spent their entire lives, having had a family of eight children, of whom four now survive: Henry, of Davenport; Teddy, of Omaha, Neb.; Dora, in Germany, and Mrs. Meier. Two of the sons served in the German army during the War of 1870. Mrs. Meier had been previously married and by her first marriage one child was born, Albert Deitrich, in 1871, who is now engaged in the grocery business in Rock Island, and there are four grandchildren in the family: Albert, Lester, Margaret and Emma. Mr. Meier is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Scott Lodge No. 37, of Davenport, of which he has been a member many years. He is independent in politics and actively interested in public affairs.

MILES, John T.—No outsider realizes how much dependence is placed in the foremen of different departments by those in charge of the large manufacturing concerns of the country. These men not only must thoroughly understand their work in every detail, but must be able to manage their associates in such a way as to get sufficient work from them, while not violating their confidence. Such a man is John T. Miles, foreman of the foundry of W. H. Cooper Sad-Hardware Manufacturing Co., of Moline. He was born in LaPorte, Ind., January 31, 1867, being a son of Martin O. and Annie (Reed) Miles, the former born at Middletown, Md., and the latter at Hagerstown, the same state. The father was a brickmaker by occupation, who came to Illinois in 1869, locating at Moline, where he found employment in a brick yard. There he remained until his death July 7, 1892, his wife passing away December 24, 1898. They were the parents of five children. Martin O. Miles served ninety days during the Civil war, enlisting from Maryland.

John T. Miles was educated in the public schools of Moline, and after leaving them, he went to work in a foundry connected with the Union Malleable Iron Co. He was made core maker, continuing with this concern for three years, when he began moulding. In 1898 he was made assistant foreman, and continued thus for ten years, when he left to accept his present position. He is regarded as one of the most reliable men in the employ of his company.

On November 14, 1890, Mr. Miles was married in Moline, by the Reverend Johnson, to Louisa Johnson, born in Sweden, daughter of Henry and Louisa (Anderson) Johnson. Her parents came to the United States in 1879, settling at Moline, the father obtaining employment at the United States Arsenal. Mr. and Mrs. Miles became the parents of four children; Leslie, who was born April 23, 1892; Ethel, who was born August 28, 1895; Raymond, who was born August 11, 1898; and Tom, who was born November 4, 1909. Mr. Miles owns his home at No. 737 Twenty-fifth street. He attends the Congregational church, to which his family belong. In politics, he is an independent. He belongs to the Improved Order of Red Men, and the Modern Woodmen of America. Hard-working, faithful, devoted to his employers' interests, Mr. Miles has steadily forged ahead, and stands high in the estimation of all who know him.

MILL, William (deceased).—In spite of the natural sorrow attendant upon the loss by death of a loved one, it is pleasant to look back upon a well-spent life and to realize that it was filled with helpfulness to others and dominated by charity of both word and deed. When the late William Mill passed away he left behind him not only material prosperity for his loved ones, but the heritage of a good name and a reputation for stainless honor. Mr. Mill was born at Bedford, England, October 10, 1835, and lost his parents in England. In 1855, he came to the United States, locating first in Wisconsin, but after two years spent at Linden, that state, he went to the gold mines in Idaho. Spending three years there, he came to Rock Island, where he remained while working in a livery at Davenport, Ia., until he bought land at Moline. Later he sold this property for cemetery purposes, and bought 1,200 acres, in Coe and Canoe Creek townships, and in Whiteside county, thus becoming a very heavy land owner. For many years he farmed and raised stock, and became noted all over this and Whiteside county. A strong republican, he was always a great worker for his party. Having been brought up in the Church of England, after coming here he was an Episcopalian. Fraternally, he belonged to the Blue lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Moline, and was also a member of the Knights of Pythias of the same city.

On November 9, 1865, Mr. Mill was married at Moline to a cousin, Rosannah Bell, born there, of English descent. They had four children: James of Hillsdale, Ill.; Mary of Los Angeles, Cal.; Grace, Mrs. Morris Gearhardt of Pasadena, Cal.; and Sallie of Los Angeles, Cal., who live, and one child, Rose Rebecca, who died at the age of two years. Mrs. Mill died February 19, 1878. On August 15, 1897, Mr. Mill married Agnes Hutton, born near Cologne, Germany, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Schumacher) Hutton, of the same place. They came to Sterling, Ill., in 1866, and became farmers. The father died January 8, 1911, while his wife passed away June 4, 1884. One son was born of this second marriage, William B., on August 30, 1901, who died a few hours later. Mr. Mill died May 28, 1910. Since his death his widow has operated the farm herself, having been in full charge of the 668 acres since 1903, when Mr. Mill was stricken with the disease which eventually caused his death. She raises Shorthorn cattle and Duroc-Jersey hogs, but when Mr. Mill was alive they also raised sheep and horses. This farm has long been known as the Mill Stock Farm. Mrs. Mill is a very capable lady, who thoroughly understands her business, and is carrying it on very successfully.

MILLER, Addison Jackson, who during the past three years has been engaged as mail carrier on Rural Free Delivery Route No. 2 Milan, Ill., is the owner of a nice home in Milan, and is well known and highly esteemed by those who know him. He was born September 19, 1855, in Tompkins county, N. Y., a son of Aaron S. and Louisa M. (Hall) Miller, whose parents were Scotch and English, respectively. Aaron S. Miller was born May 10, 1818, and his wife May 9, 1824, both near New York City, and they came to Illinois in 1855, settling first in Whiteside county, where Mr. Miller was for fifteen years engaged in farming in Tampico township. The family then moved to Henry county, near Geneseo, where they resided three years, and then spent two years in the village of Geneseo, after which they returned to the Whiteside county farm, where Mr. Miller died in 1893, and his widow in 1899. They had three children: Addison Jackson; Celesta M., the wife of Charles Smille, living in Nebraska; and Benadjab, who is married and lives in Canada.

Addison Jackson Miller was educated in the public schools of Geneseo and Whiteside county until about seventeen years of age, at which time he became employed as a hand on farms of his neighborhood, and in 1879 he went to Kansas, but returned one year later. In 1881 he went to Clinton, Ia., where he learned the trade of stone mason, at which he worked two years, and remained in that city for fifteen years, being employed by the city railway. In 1891 he took up farming in Whiteside county, but in 1906 came to Rock Island, where he purchased a home and two lots adjoining, and continued to live here since that time. He has always been a staunch republican, and during the past three years has been in the government service. On October 2, 1876, Mr. Miller was married to Miss Jennie Noon, who was born November 22, 1855, and died December, 1886, daughter of Charles and Martha (Hughes) Noon, natives of England who came to the United States as young people. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller, namely: Norah D., the wife of Edward Pierce, a farmer of Jackson, Minn., have children by this marriage: Harlan F., Frankie, Clifford, Edward, Elsie. She was married first to Harry Hotchkiss, now deceased, one child, Herbert S.; Frank A., employed by the government and living at home; and Nettie, who is the wife of Clyde Potts, one child, Fay D., also living at home. Mr. Miller has six grandchildren.

MILLER, Millard, proprietor of 120 acres of extremely valuable land in Drury township, has been experimenting in sheep raising with profitable results, and combines this branch of agriculture with general farming. He was born in Mercer county, January 20, 1876, a son of John T. and Mary (Reed) Miller, natives of Indiana. The father came to Mercer county in 1837, being one of the pioneers of that locality, and remained on his farm there until 1911, when he moved to Muscatine, Ia., which continued to be his home until his death May 11, 1913. He and his wife had eleven children, of whom five survive: Fred, Kate, Effie, Adna and Millard.

Millard Miller was reared amid strictly rural surroundings, and learned farming from the bottom up, at the same time attending district school. During 1895 and 1896, he put his educational knowledge to practical use by teaching school in Mercer county, but has since then devoted himself to his farming operations, taking a great interest in making his property a model one. The changes already effected by him are remarkable, and he is making rapid strides forward.

In December, 1897, he was married to Lesta Dell Smith, born in Mercer county, August 22, 1879. Six children have been born of this union:

Clifford, Helen, Clayton, Victor, Lawrence and Carl. Mr. Miller is devoted to his children and very ambitious for them, being resolved to give them better opportunities than he was able to obtain. For seventeen years, he has been a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. A democrat in political faith, in 1911, was the unsuccessful candidate of his party for supervisor. Although beaten, he ran far ahead of his party on account of personal popularity, and is proud of the race he then made. He ran again and was elected supervisor in 1913, receiving out of 172 votes, 117. The township is republican three to one and so his majority was very flattering. Industrious, upright and ambitious, Mr. Miller is an excellent representative of the progressive spirit displayed by the agriculturalists of Rock Island county, that is proving so effective a factor in its onward movement towards prosperity.

MILLER, Samuel H., D. V. S., of Rock Island, Ill., whose reputation as a veterinary surgeon extends throughout the state of Illinois, and whose practice is heavy in many counties and in the tri-cities, comes of a family of men of this profession, he being in the fifth generation. Dr. Miller was born August 10, 1866, at Hagerstown, Md., son of Dr. Jacob M. and Elizabeth (Neibert) Miller, natives of Hagerstown.

Dr. Jacob M. Miller came to Rock Island county in 1868, locating near Milan, owning a farm where he lived for thirty-two years, then retiring and removing to Orion, Ill., where he and his wife are now residing, aged respectively, seventy-nine and seventy-six years. Twelve children were born to them, of whom seven are now living: Frank, a government employee residing in Rock Island; Ida, living in Rock Island; Scott, connected with the Patten Mfg. Co., of Los Angeles, Cal.; Samuel H.; John, residing in Rock Island; Ella, the wife of William Peterson, residing in Rock Island; Nannie, the wife of Frank McCartney, living in South Dakota. Dr. Jacob M. Miller is a member of I. O. O. F. and the A. O. U. W. He is liberal in his religious views.

Samuel H. Miller attended the district schools and as a youth assisted his father in veterinary practice, and in the work of the home farm. He attended the McKillip Veterinary College, at Chicago, and after a three-year course graduated with the class of 1902, when he immediately entered upon the practice of his profession, which he has since followed at Rock Island. He has made this profession a life study and hence is well qualified. In 1903 he established the Miller Veterinary Hospital, where he has every modern instrument for the treatment of all diseased animals, as well as some instruments that have been handed down in his family from father to son for the past five generations. In his political belief, Dr. Miller, like his father, is a staunch republican, and like him has never cared for office, nor really had time to serve.

as he prefers to give all of his time and attention to his profession. He is connected with the American, Illinois State and Iowa State Veterinary Societies, Richard Coe Lodge No. 697, A. F. & A. M., Chicago, Rock Island Lodge No. 18, I. O. O. F., Moline Lodge No. 556, B. P. O. E., and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is liberal in his religious views.

On December 8, 1896, Dr. Miller was married at Clinton, Ia., to Sarah Long, born at Bala Bay, Ireland, where her parents died, she coming to the United States with her uncle, James Sanderson, when but thirteen years old, at whose home in Hanover, Ill., she was living at the time of her marriage to Dr. Miller. The two sons of this union, Jacob and Richard, are attending school.

MILLER, William.—Germany is responsible for many of our best citizens who came here with the desire of rounding out their lives amid more congenial and lucrative surroundings. One of the prosperous German-Americans of Rock Island county is William Miller of Barstow. He was born in Prussia, Germany, in July, 1845, and lost his father when he was only three years old. His mother married a Mr. Tape, and both died in Germany. William Miller was educated in his native land, and taught the carpenter trade. At the age of twenty years, he entered the German army, and served faithfully for eleven years, participating in the Franco-Prussian war. In 1882, he left Germany for America, and upon his arrival in this country came direct to Osborn, Zuma township, where he found ready employment as a carpenter, and also did some farming. In 1898, he bought 130 acres of land in Hampton township, operating it until 1908, when he retired to his beautiful home at Barstow.

In 1870, William Miller was married in Germany to Louisa Lippelt, born in Prussia, Germany, who died in August, 1900, after a long and useful life of devotion to her family. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller were: William of South Dakota; Herman of Columbus, Mont.; Charles of Andalusia township; Emil of Zuma township; Anna at home; Henry of East Moline; and Augusta, wife of Ernest Denhardt. In politics, William Miller is independent, preferring to cast his vote for the man he deems best fitted for the office in question. In religious faith, he is a Lutheran, and takes a great deal of comfort in his religious connections. He is an earnest, good man, faithful to what he believes to be his duty, and his success has been gained through hard, unremitting labor and thrifty habits.

MILMAN, Francis Frederick.—In no other line of endeavor have such remarkable changes been effected as in farming. The modern agriculturist produces more with less effort than his forebears could ever have hoped to do, and his product is sold at excellent prices all over the country. Modern inventions and the application of them to everyday life are largely responsible for this gratifying progress, and one of the men who has profited accordingly, is Francis Frederick Milman of Cordova township. He was born in Devonshire, England, March 29, 1850, being a son of William and Fanny (Daly) Milman, both of whom died in England. Mr. Milman came to Hinsdale, Illinois, in 1871, and for a few years worked at whatever he could find to do, saving his money all the while, as he had in view the purchase of a farm. Later, he went to Chicago and for two years was in the supply store of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company. Following this, he went to Dyer, Ind., and worked on a farm for a few months; still later going to Hammond, Ind., in 1880 he went to Whiteside county, Ill., where he worked along several lines, finally moving to Cordova township. Marrying, he went to Albany, Ill., but after eleven months, moved to the homestead of his father-in-law, and renting the farm operated it until the death of that gentleman, when Mr. Milman bought the property. It consists of 160 acres on section 20, Cordova township, and on it he carries on general farming and stock raising.

Francis Frederick Milman was married October 21, 1883, to Mary Isola Field, born in Coe township, this county, a daughter of Solomon and Hannah (Hewitt) Field, natives of New York and Pennsylvania, respectively. They were married in the latter state, and in 1858 came to Coe township, where they lived until 1859, when they moved to what became the Field homestead in Cordova township, and here Mr. Field died, January 15, 1892, his widow surviving him until June 24, 1895. Mr. and Mrs. Milman have had four children: Henry Harrison of Rock Island county, married Florence Burg, and they have one son, Leonard H.; Hannah Antoinette; Francis Edward, married Edna A. Rose, and they have a son, Francis J.; and Solomon W. died in infancy. The family is well and favorably known throughout the township and have many friends here and in other parts of the county.

MINTEER, John H., proprietor of a livery, feed and sale barn at Reynolds, Ill., and operator of a line of dray and express wagons, is one of the progressive business men of this part of the county. He is a son of the esteemed Lewis Minter, a retired farmer of this same place, and was born in Mercer county, Ill., August 15, 1863. John H. Minter spent his boyhood days on the farm with his father, attending the district schools and learning the details of an agricultural life. Until he was twenty-three years old he remained at home, and then began renting land, continuing to farm for five years, when in 1892 he moved to Iowa. For the following twelve years he made that state his home, living chiefly at West Liberty, Ia. He then bought land in Mercer county and lived on it two years. In 1905 he came to Reynolds to enter the livery business, which he has conducted ever since with remarkable success, he being well fitted for the work. John H. Minter is an Odd Fellow, belonging to the Reynolds lodge, which he joined fifteen years ago, at West Liberty, Ia. He has been very prominent politically, having been a member of the city board for the past four years, and is now its president. The Methodist church now holds his membership and his children belong to the same denomination.

On August 15, 1890, John H. Minter was married to Minnie McHard, born in May, 1865, a daughter of William and Nancy (Daak) McHard, farming people. Mr. and Mrs. Minter have had children as follows: Florence M., born in 1891; Harold J., born in 1893; Beatrice M., born in 1895; and Kenneth D., born in 1897, all of whom live at home in Reynolds. It is just such live, energetic men as Mr. Minter who advance the interests of a community, and bring it up to the present standard of Reynolds. They are farsighted and can see where reforms are needed, and know how to go about to inaugurate and carry them out to a successful and economical completion. With him at the head of the city board, Reynolds has a prosperous, businesslike career ahead of it, and the people are to be congratulated upon their chief executive.

MINTEER, Lewis.—Years of constant endeavor combined with thrifty management earn for any man a certain amount of peaceful rest, and especially is this true when his active life has been spent in an agricultural calling. Perhaps no other kind of work makes such heavy demands upon its followers as does farming. One of the men now retired from farm life is Lewis Minter of Reynolds, Ill. He was born near Cadiz, O., December 19, 1835, a son of John and Katherine (Simons) Minter, the former born in Fayette county, Pa., and the latter in Germany. The father died in 1874, but his wife passed away in 1847. She and a brother came to America when young. In 1863, John Minter came to Mercer county, Ill., to engage in a veterinary practice, which he followed until his death. He had a family as follows: Eli, who is deceased; Elizabeth, who is deceased; John, who is deceased; Katherine, who is deceased; Joseph, who lived in Mercer county (deceased); and Lewis.

In 1860, Lewis Minter was married to Sarah Moffitt, by Reverend Creedy of Cadiz, O., daughter of Henry and Agnes (Collins) Moffitt, the former of whom was a weaver by trade and one of the first settlers of Harrison county. Later he went to Cadiz, O., where he died in 1847. His widow survived him until February, 1876, when she, too, passed away. Their family was as follows: Mary, wife of John Braden, lives in Ohio; Nancy, William H., and Joseph, are all deceased; and Mrs. Minter who was born July 14, 1839. Mr. and Mrs. Minter became the parents of children as follows: Joseph; John H., in the livery business at Reynolds; Elizabeth, wife of David Spence of Aledo, Ill.; Elly, a farmer of Reynolds; Laura, wife of William Morgan, a farmer; Charley, a farmer, residing near Preemption; Lena, wife of J. W. Jones of Reynolds; and Lewis C., a teamster of Reynolds. Mr. Minter has eight grandchildren. Mrs. Minter belongs to the Presbyterian church. In politics, Mr. Minter is a democrat, and served as a school director for fifteen years in Mercer county, and as road commissioner here for three years. He is a man of unquestioned honesty and uprightness of character, and during the time he was engaged in farming, he was a recognized authority on all matters pertaining to agricultural questions. Few men stand higher in the esteem of the people of both Rock Island and Mercer counties, than this genial, intelligent retired farmer of Reynolds, and his wife is equally popular.

MISFELDT, John Henry.—When a man centers his interest on any one line of endeavor, and is capable and intelligent, success usually crowns his efforts, and in nothing is this more true than in those pursuits connected with an agricultural life. One of the men of Rock Island county who has proven what can be accomplished by farming is John Henry Misfeldt of Canoe Creek township. He was born in Schleswig, Germany, December 10, 1842, and in 1873 came to the United States, traveling direct to Moline, and for a few weeks worked at any kind of labor he could find, until he went on a farm. For six years he worked among the farmers of this county, and then bought property in Whiteside county, operating it for farming purposes for four years, when he rented this farm. Following that, he came to Coe Creek township, and bought eighty acres, but disposing of it, rented some land in Coe township. One year later, in 1890, he moved to a farm in Whiteside county which he owned, and lived upon that property until he sold it and bought his present farm in Canoe Creek township, which he has improved considerably. These improvements have been planned and carried out according to modern ideas, and are very complete and satisfactory. He carries on general farming, and has been exceedingly successful in all his operations.

On March 27, 1879, he was married to Catherine Schaeve, born in Holstein, Germany, daughter of James and Dortha (Rodgers) Schaeve, who in 1866 came to Rapid City, Ill., and settled in Hampton township, where Mrs. Schaeve died November 15, 1905. Mr. Schaeve lives with his son, William, in Buffalo Prairie township. Mr. and Mrs. Misfeldt became the parents of children as follows: Mary, Mrs. Jacob Rivers, who is of Coe township; Christian, Louis, Sophia, George, Lillie, Clara, William and Louisa, who are all at home, and Grover, who died at the age of fourteen years. Mr. Misfeldt is a member of the Lutheran church. Politically, he is a democrat, but has never desired office. He is an excellent farmer, good business man, and kindly neighbor, interested in the development of his community and the welfare of those with whom he is associated.

MITCHELL, Daniel G., inspector of the Moline Plow Co. for seventeen years, and one of the most representative men of his class in Rock Island county, has done much to advance the interests of his company, and place it among the reliable concerns in this part of the state. Mr. Mitchell was born at Quincy, Adams county, Ill., a son of Cyrus P. and Sarah B. (Ham) Mitchell, natives, respectively, of Chesterville and Mercer, Me. The father was a farmer and mechanic, who came to Moline in 1868, and here he died, November 15, 1906. The mother passed away November 29, 1909. A sketch of them appears elsewhere in this work.

Daniel G. Mitchell was educated in the public schools of Rock Island county, and brought up on his father's farm. After leaving school, when only sixteen years old, he entered the implement business, in the employ of Deere & Co., and after sixteen years with this firm, he went with the Moline Plow Co., where he formerly was general expert in looking up various complaints, but is now a general inspector, there probably being few men in the business so competent for this line of supervision.

On August 18, 1884, Mr. Mitchell was married in Iowa City, Ia., to Minnie C. Warner of Hampton township, daughter of Jacob and Lucinda M. Warner, natives of New York and Virginia, respectively. Mr. Warner was a railroad man, who assisted in building the Rock Island road. Mr. and Mrs. Warner are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell have one son, Carl E., born December 2, 1885. He was educated in the public schools, and at Augustana College, and spent one year at a commercial college. On January 1, 1908, he married Hattie E. Haley, and they live in Moline, where he is employed at Deere & Co., having charge of the steel shed office.

Daniel G. Mitchell owns a magnificent residence at No. 1111 Fifteenth street, Moline, and is now building a nine-apartment flat building, near his home, which is to contain three elevators, and other modern improvements. In addition Mr. Mitchell owns several lots in Rock Island, and seventeen lots in East Moline, and two large lots near his residence. He carries risks in the New York Life Insurance Company and the Bankers Insurance Company of Des Moines, Ia. He belongs to the Court of Honor at Moline. In politics he is a republican, but does not seek office. In his religious belief he is a Spiritualist. Mr. Mitchell is a very conscientious, high-minded man, one who has always endeavored to do his full duty, and has never sacrificed right for private gain.

MITCHELL, Phil.—The financial interests of any important city like Rock Island are enormous. The banking institutions here will compare favorably with any in the state, for they are in the hands of sound, reliable, conservative men, possessed of that enlarged responsibility which breeds appreciation of complicated affairs, and a deep insight into human nature.

These bankers are the very bulwarks of organized society, for upon their integrity and commercial foresight depend the stability of industrial life. One man associated with the banking interests of Rock Island county for fifty-two years, is Phil Mitchell, of No. 720 Twentieth street, Rock Island. He was born at Georgetown, Scott county, Ky., November 30, 1846, a son of Philemon Libby and Catherine Norris (Hall) Mitchell. The paternal grandparents were Isaac and Martha (Libby) Mitchell, the former born in Maine, and the latter in Ireland. Isaac Mitchell died at Limington, Me., in 1853, being then eighty-two years of age. His widow survived him until 1877, when she passed away, having attained to the remarkable age of ninety-four years.

Phil Mitchell was brought to Rock Island in October, 1856, by his parents and has since resided in this city. He attended the public schools of Rock Island, and going abroad, studied at Dresden, Germany. Upon his return, he reentered his father's bank and has been connected with financial matters all his business life, at one time being a member of the firm of Mitchell & Lynde. At present he is the executive head of the State Bank of Rock Island, one of the sane financial institutions of the city. In addition to his connection with the banking business, he was president of the Rock Island Plow Co. for fifteen years and is now vice president of the Rock Island Stove Company, secretary of Chippianock Cemetery Association, and is interested in the Smith System Heating Company. He was president of the Bankers Association of the state of Illinois in 1901.

In 1877, Phil Mitchell married Ella Judd, a daughter of Dr. F. H. and Harriet J. Judd, old residents of Rock Island. Mrs. Mitchell was born at Rock Island, January 1, 1857. Phil Mitchell and wife have had six sons, namely: Philemon Leon, who died in infancy, Ben Judd, Leon Wadsworth, Ardo Watson, Robert Chamberlin and Frederick Lynde, all of whom are residing at Rock Island, where they are in business. Two of these sons are married. During the years he has been connected with the financial history of Rock Island, Mr. Mitchell has proven his worth, and has been associated with many industrial reforms for the relief and betterment of society.

MITCHELL, Philemon Libby, (deceased), was born at Limington, Me., October 16, 1812, and died at Rock Island, January 23, 1895. Growing up in the city of his birth, Philemon L. Mitchell attended school there for a short period, and later added to his store of knowledge by study and reading. When only thirteen years old, he began earning his own living and succeeded so well that at twenty-five he was able to embark in a mercantile business at Georgetown, Ky. In 1850, he began his banking career as cashier of the Farmers' Bank of Kentucky, but left to come to Rock Island in 1856. Here he and P. L. Cable bought the banking house of Cook, Sargent & Parker, which had been founded in 1852, the new firm being Mitchell & Cable, which was succeeded in 1860 by Mitchell & Lynde, P. L. Mitchell and Cornelius Lynde being the partners. Mr. Mitchell's activities were not confined to this bank, he having organized the first National Bank of Rock Island in 1863, and served as its president. He was also the executive head of the Rock Island Plow Company; secretary of the Chippianock Cemetery Association; a large stockholder and director in the Moline and Rock Island Street Railroad Company, the Rock Island Glass Co., and the Rock Island Stove Company.

On October 11, 1837, P. L. Mitchell was married at Exeter, N. H., to Catherine Norris Hall, and they had five children: Annie M., who is the widow of William C. Wadsworth; Mary H., who is the widow of Henry T. Wadsworth; Phil, who is president of the State Bank of Rock Island; Laura J., deceased, who married General Charles Shaler, U. S. A.; and Kate, who is the wife of Henry S. Fraser of Indianapolis, Ind. Mrs. Mitchell died October 4, 1868. Mr. Mitchell was a consistent member of the Christian church, and an honorable, upright man, who did what he believed to be his full duty in whatever he undertook.

MIXTER, Frank.—For many years Frank Mixter has been at the head and front of several of the most important industries of Rock Island, while he has also been either an officer or a directing factor in numerous other successful business enterprises. He is yet in the prime of life, his birth having taken place at Rock Island November 7, 1853, and he is a son of George and Susan Elizabeth (Gilbert) Mixter. The father of Frank Mixter was of English ancestry and a native of Massachusetts. After his graduation from Yale college, in 1836, he came to Rock Island, and for many years was prominent here in the business world and was also identified in the law. His death occurred here in 1897. In 1845, he married Miss Susan Elizabeth Gilbert and they became the parents of eight children. Frank Mixter attended the public schools at Rock Island and after being creditably graduated from the Rock Island High school, was given university advantages at Heidelberg, Germany. He has been financially interested in many of Rock Island's enterprises and has been particularly concerned with the Rock Island Stove Company, of which he is president. He is also a member of the board of directors of the State Bank. A man of poise, foresight, good judgment and superior business acumen, he has secured and still occupies a position of commercial prominence in Rock Island county. He has little taste for politics, although he is a loyal and interested citizen. He is affiliated politically with the republican party.

Frank Mixter was married at Southport, Conn., April 5, 1877, to Miss Elizabeth Bradley, a descendant of the old Bradley and Sherwood families of colonial days, prominent in the aunals of New England. Mr. and Mrs. Mixter have had two children: Florence Louise and William Bradley. The former is the wife of Frederick Brown Wells, residing in New York city, and the latter is a graduate of Yale college and of the Yale scientific school. He settled at Portland, Ore., but after a fine start in life, he died in New York, June 30, 1912. Mrs. Mixter is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and has been regent of Fort Armstrong Chapter. She also belongs to the Society of Colonial Dames. Mr. Mixter and family are of the Presbyterian faith.

MIXTER, George (deceased).—To the early settlement of Rock Island, all New England contributed in no small degree and in recalling those of eastern birth who left an indelible impress on this part of Illinois, it will be noticed that very many were of old colonial families and were college-bred men. They brought with them the scholarship and the culture that were needful factors to assist in the ultimate civilization of the emerging west. Of all the eastern states, perhaps Massachusetts gave most generously and today some of the most representative people of Rock Island may proudly claim an old Bay State ancestry. George Mixter, who for sixty years was closely identified with Rock Island, was a notable example of the type of early settler here above referred to. He was born at Hardwick, Worcester county, Mass., April 28, 1815, and was descended from sturdy English stock and of a maritime family, the first of the name, Captain Mixter, commander of an English vessel in 1632, landing at Plymouth, Mass., but little more than a decade after the landing of the Pilgrims on the same spot. He was of worthy parentage and was reared in a home of plenty and comfort and his early education was of such a nature that he was able to enter Yale college in early manhood and was creditably graduated from that institution in 1836. Before settling down to the business of life, he decided to travel for a season and turned his attention to what was then the far, far west and in the same year reached Rock Island for a visit. That surroundings, climate and business prospects pleased him, was evident as in the following year, 1837, he returned to Rock Island, and made this city his home ever after, with the exception of two years during which period he was connected with the land office at Dixon, Ill. By profession, Mr. Mixter was a lawyer, but his long years of study had so impaired his health, that he found it better to put aside professional engagements and to engage in other lines of activity, and perhaps to his surprise, he found himself well equipped by nature for the management of vast business enterprises. In giving rein to his abilities in this direction, he became interested in large manufacturing concerns and in financial institutions, his cultivated intellect making him a leader in numerous business and public enterprises of the early city. His interest in all that concerned Rock Island continued until the close of his busy and useful life, April 20, 1897, he then being the senior member of the Rock Island bar. He was never particularly active in politics but was thoroughly public-spirited and for a long time consented to serve as a member of the board of education.

On January 1, 1845, at Moline, Ill., Mr. Mixer was married to Miss Susan Elizabeth Gilbert, and eight children were born to them, four of whom are now living. The oldest, William G. Mixer, for many years was professor of chemistry at the Yale Sheffield scientific school. The second son, Frank Mixer, is president of the Rock Island Store Company, of which the third son, Charles Knox Mixer, is treasurer and superintendent. The one daughter, Carrie, is the wife of Charles W. Cook, of Shawnee, Okla. Mr. Mixer possessed a pleasing personality and as an honest man and genial, kind-hearted gentlemen he left an impress on the life of his community.

MOELLER, John Frederick.—It is often the case that the men whose lives have been spent in instructing the young, make the best public officials. The severe training necessary before they are fitted for educational work, develops character and raises high ideals, and the man who has learned how to control others, seldom fails to exert a strong influence over his own acts. John Frederick Moeller, assessor of Rock Island, is a man long associated with educational circles in Rock Island county. He was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1840, a son of Ernest and Elinore (Ohman) Moeller, both natives of Germany. These parents had four children: Clamor, deceased; Henry, of Cleveland, O.; Mary, deceased; and John Frederick. In 1852 the family came to America, locating at Cleveland, O., where the father was a confectioner. Here he and his wife died.

John Frederick Moeller attended school at Cleveland until he was seventeen years old, and then entered Concordia College at Fort Wayne, Ind., from which he was graduated. In 1862 he came to Rock Island, Ill., to take charge of the German Lutheran school, and remained at its head for forty years, developing it into an institution whose fame was widespread. In 1902 Prof. Moeller was appointed deputy assessor of Rock Island city, and in 1903 elected assessor for a term of two years. His work in the office was of such a character that in 1910 he was re-elected to the same office, and is its present incumbent. Since casting his first vote he has been a republican, and was elected to office on the straight party ticket.

In 1864 he was married to Augusta Fathaner, born in Germany, the ceremony taking place at Cleveland, O. Mr. and Mrs. Moeller became the parents of the following children: Frederick, George, August, William, Louie, Charlie, Edward, Eliza, Emily, Augusta and Anna. For many years he has been a faithful member of the Lutheran church. The German Society has in him an enthusiastic member. The family residence of the Moellers is at No. 1000 Sixteenth street. Mr. Moeller is very active as a republican, and also as a public-spirited citizen, and has rendered very valuable service to his community both as a citizen and educator.

MOHL, George (deceased), who was a highly respected retired citizen of Rock Island, spent the larger part of his life in this city, where he accumulated an ample fortune and through his sterling qualities won the esteem and confidence of his fellow citizens. Germany has contributed largely to the best citizenship of America, and no better example of admirable qualities of the native German, in whatever country he may be found, than was shown in the history of the quiet, useful life of this venerable citizen of Rock Island.

George Mohl was born in Germany in 1836 and attended school in his native section and enjoyed as fair a chance as his parents could give him. They were Adam and Ursula Mohl, who never ventured across the Atlantic ocean, their entire lives being passed in Germany. When the time arrived for the son to choose a self-supporting trade, his father, who was a carpenter, suggested his own, but George was strong and robust and chose that of stone mason and cutter, one that he continued to follow until advancing years caused his retirement. He was a boy of fourteen years when he sailed for America, making the voyage on the steamship Henrietta, which landed him in New York city twenty-nine days after embarking. He was accompanied by his brother, John Mohl, and they remained in New York for three years. From there he came to Rock Island, Ill. He was engaged in the construction of many of the important buildings in this city and vicinity and helped to build the first bridge over the Mississippi river between Rock Island and Davenport. He never took a very active interest in politics, always devoting his main attention to his business, but after becoming a voter, gave his support to the republican party.

In 1865, at Rock Island, Ill., Mr. Mohl was united in marriage with Rachael Evener, who was born in the city of New York and died at Rock Island in the summer of 1910. To this union three children were born, namely: Charles, who is a resident of Rock Island; Alice, who is the wife of John Healy, also of Rock Island; and George, Jr., with whom Mr. Mohl resided, the family home being at No. 2519½ Fifth avenue, Rock Island.

George Mohl, Jr., was born at Rock Island, March 7, 1871, and attended school in this city. His first employment was in a saw mill and later he was in a grocery store, and for the past two years he has been connected with the Rock Island Lumber Company. He married Anna Aye, a native of Rock Island, and they have a family of five children: Alice, Helen, Ethel, Minnie, and George, the third bearer of the name. They are all young people in whom the grandfather took a large amount of pride.

MOHR, John A. (deceased).—The business interests of Hampton have been carefully conserved by the enterprising men located here, although some of them have been called away from the scenes of their activities, when still in the prime of life. One of these was the late John A. Mohr, born at Hampton, February 24, 1860, son of Paul and Henrietta (Zeaman) Mohr, of Germany. When a small boy, John A. Mohr began working on a railroad, later entering the coal mines of Rock Island county, where he continued with the exception of six months spent in the mines of Cuba, Ill. Mr. Mohr thus continued until 1901, when he went into business for himself, and was thus engaged when he died, June 15, 1911.

On September 9, 1884, Mr. Mohr was married to Elenore Glanz, born in Hampton township, a daughter of Peter and Catherine (Aloff) Glanz, he born in Germany, and she in France. John Glanz, the paternal grandfather, died in Germany. The maternal grandparents, Andrew and Catherine Aloff came to the United States, via Baltimore, and there Mr. and Mrs. Glanz met and married in 1854. Mr. Glanz was a cooper and came to Rock Island county, locating in Hampton township, where he worked at his trade for many years, then bought an eighty-acre farm on Hampton bluff, and there died in 1873. His widow lived there until 1897, when she moved to Hampton, there dying February 13, 1911, having been born February 20, 1833. Mr. and Mrs. Mohr became the parents of the following children: Philip W., born July 7, 1886, died when four years and three months old, October 28, 1890; Gertrude, Mrs. T. S. Willis, born July 1, 1888, lives with Mrs. Mohr; and Raymond lives at home. Mrs. Mohr owns three valuable houses at Hampton and one hundred and sixty acres in Kiowa County, Colo. the same having been government land which Mr. and Mrs. Mohr proved up in 1907, since which time a cement house has been erected on it. She is also the owner of a business block at Watertown. She, like her husband, is a Catholic, and devout in her religious observances. Mr. Mohr was a democrat and served as township clerk of Hampton township for ten years. Fraternally he was a member of Moline Lodge No. 1112 F. O. E. Kind-hearted, charitable, always willing to lend a helping hand to those less fortunate than himself, Mr. Mohr was a man who made and retained his friends by the score, and his death was regarded as a calamity by those who knew and appreciated him.

MOHR, William, a well-known business man of Hampton, was born March 9, 1856, in Hampton township, Rock Island county, Ill., and is a son of Paul and Henrietta Mohr, natives of Germany. Paul Mohr came to the United States in 1848, and settled in Davenport, Ia., where he began working at his trade of shoemaker. In 1854 he was married at Hampton, Ill., to Henrietta Mohr, and settled in that place, where he spent the remainder of his life in the shoe business, his death occurring in 1902.

His widow still lives there at the age of seventy-six years. At the first call for troops, when the Civil war broke out, Paul Mohr enlisted in the Union army, and served throughout the struggle. He and his wife had these children: William; Peter, who died at the age of nine years; John, who died in June, 1911; Joseph, of Blue Grass, Ia.; and Gertrude, who married Steven O'Dell, of Hampton.

William Mohr received his education in the public schools, and remained at home with his parents until his marriage, February 20, 1879, to Mary Glant, born in Hampton, daughter of Peter and Catherine Glantz, natives of Germany. After his marriage, William Mohr became a coal miner in Hampton township, and in 1888 went to Seattle, Wash., where he continued to work in mines until the fall of 1910, then returned to Hampton. Here he started to assist his brother, John Mohr, in the saloon business, and continued until the latter's death, at which time he took charge of the establishment, which he has since conducted. Mr. Mohr is the owner of four building lots in Hampton and the residence in which he lives.

Mr. and Mrs. Mohr have had the following children: Ella, who married Andrew Hernis of Janesville, Wis.; George, who is in the employ of the United States Government on the Mississippi river; Joseph, who is living in Colorado; and Mabel, Columbia, Henrietta, Theodore and Elvina, all living at home. Mr. Mohr is a member of the Catholic Church. Fraternally he is connected with the Mystic Workers of the World, of Hampton. A staunch democrat in politics, he has been an active worker in the ranks of his party, and has served as alderman of Hampton for fourteen years and as street commissioner for one year.

MONTGOMERY, Daniel, a retired farmer who lives at No. 806 Twenty-second street, Rock Island, Ill., is a native of the county, born in Edgington township January 8, 1840, a son of Daniel and Margaret Montgomery, who came to Rock Island county in 1836 and secured a homestead from the Government. They became owners of 400 acres of land, on which the father died in 1849, at the age of fifty-five years. He married as his first wife a Miss Griffin, who bore him one child, William G., who died in Colorado, at the age of eighty-six years. The children of the second marriage were: Robert, who died in 1900, was captain of Company B, Sixty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry in the Civil War; John, who lives in Mercer county, was a volunteer soldier in the Civil War; Daniel and James, who died in Rock Island, enlisted in the Sixty-fifth Illinois Infantry during the Civil War and were discharged with the rank of captain.

Daniel Montgomery attended the country schools in early boyhood and later entered Knox College, which he was attending at the time of the Lincoln-Douglas debate, which he remembers hearing. At the age of twenty years he left school and he and his brothers carried on the home farm. The family lived in Rock Island for two years after the death of the father in 1849, then returned to the farm. Mr. Montgomery was married in Rock Island county January 2, 1871, to Martha Parks, daughter of H. H. Parks, an early settler of the county. They lived on the Montgomery farm until 1903, when Mr. Montgomery was able to retire from active life, and he has since lived in Rock Island. He is a worthy representative of one of the highly respected pioneer families and is well known in Rock Island county. He is a republican in politics and cast his first presidential vote for General Grant. He is a member of the Presbyterian church and is interested in everything affecting the public welfare and prosperity.

Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery: Walter L., of Sioux City, Ia.; Mary, of El Paso, Tex.; Ella, also of El Paso, and Sarah and Martha, at home. The family have a wide circle of friends in the city.

MOORE, London C., M. D., who has been in active practice at Reynolds for the past fourteen years, is one of the best exponents of the medical profession in Rock Island county, and a man in whom the people have entire confidence. He was born on the home farm of his family two miles west of Reynolds, January 24, 1860. His father, John C. Moore is one of the old residents here, coming from his native State, Ohio, in 1854, and marrying here, Theda Gray. They located on what is now known as the Thomas Kekeher farm in Edgington township. The parents are now living retired at Reynolds, being ninety and eighty years old, respectively. Their children were as follows: Dr. Moore; Cassie, deceased, who married a Mr. Dunn; Mayme G.; and Olive, who became Mrs. Cochran, of St. Louis.

Dr. Moore went to the district schools and worked on the farm until he was nineteen years old, when he entered the Washington, Ia. academy. The lad was very ambitious, and resolved to study medicine, so entered the office of Dr. Cozad of Reynolds, and when he was prepared, he entered Rush Medical College, from which he was graduated in the spring of 1886, after a four-years' course. He began his practice at Blue Grass, Ia., from whence he went to Muscatine, then to Buffalo, all in Iowa, eventually locating at Reynolds, Ill., in 1897, where he has since continued, building up a large practice, endearing his patients to him because of his skill and kindly sympathy. He belongs to the County, State and American Medical associations. Fraternally he is a Mason and Modern Woodman. In politics, he is a republican.

Dr. Moore was married at Washington, Ia., in 1891, to Miss Flora White of Iowa. They have two children: Floyd and Louise.

MOORE, William R., who for more than thirty years has earnestly devoted his energies in behalf of the progress and development of the city of Moline, Ill., has been constantly in the public eye for a long period and is one of the best known of Moline's public-spirited citizens. Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., he is a son of John and Catherine Moore, the former a merchant tailor of Moline for a number of years.

William R. Moore was but a lad when brought to Illinois by his parents, and he secured his education in the public schools of Moline, later attending the Davenport business college and eventually beginning the study of law in the office of Mr. Browning. He was admitted to the bar in September, 1873, and immediately entered upon the practice of his profession, and he has carried on a large general practice to the present time. Mr. Moore was town clerk of Moline for one term and city attorney one term by election and two terms by appointment, and he also has served as corporation counsel for the city. He was a candidate on the democratic ticket for circuit judge, but owing to political conditions at the time he met defeat. He has always been a leader in movements to promote the welfare of the city, having interested himself in the city sprinkler system; was largely instrumental in securing the bridge across the Rock river while he was serving as city attorney; and was later secretary and eventually president of the Fifteenth Street Electric Railway, which was the second electric line in the state of Illinois. Mr. Moore was one of the charter members of the Moline Club, and his work in behalf of this large organization was recognized by his election to the office of vice-president. To such men as Mr. Moore, who have given of their time and means to promote public-spirited enterprises, must be given the credit for the city's present prosperity, for without these men of civic pride and progressive ideas little advancement would be made.

MOREHEAD, John, one of the oldest citizens of Buffalo Prairie township, and owner of 286 acres of fine land, is a man whose character is expressed in his every day life, and who numbers his friends by hosts. He was born in Jefferson county, O., October 10, 1820, being a son of Andrew and Margaret (Hesser) Morehead, and grandson of Robert Morehead. The latter was born in Ireland, coming to the United States with three brothers when young. In 1776 he settled in Virginia, and there married, dying on his farm in that state. This was located in that part of Virginia that afterwards became West Virginia, near the Ohio line. His children were: James, who settled at Fort Wayne, Ind., and died quite wealthy; Alexander, who died on the homestead in West Virginia; William, who died at Fort Wayne; Samuel, who died in Ohio; and Andrew and Margaret.

Andrew Morehead was a carpenter and millwright. He married in Jefferson county, O., from whence he moved to Crawford county, O., and there died. In early life he was a noted Indian fighter, and was a soldier in the War of 1812. His children were as follows: John, Alexander, Jane and George, all deceased except the eldest.

John Morehead was reared in Jefferson and Crawford counties, amid strictly pioneer surroundings, and attended one of the little log schools so often described in early history. Even in boyhood he was forced to work very hard, knowing none of the relaxations of modern youth, and did a man's work long before he attained his majority. After the death of his parents he went with his maternal grandparents to Muscatine, Ia., being then about nineteen years old. They settled in Fairport village, and for three seasons Mr. Morehead worked in a brick yard. While in Iowa he married, in Muscatine, Phoebe Hesser. Later he moved to Lynn county, Ia., and took up government land; then went to Jefferson county and about 1850 came to Rock Island county, locating on his present farm. By his first wife there were three children: Andrew, Elizabeth and Mary Ann. On October 9, 1849, Mr. Morehead married Cornelia Harbough, and they had seven children: John W., Theo., George, Henry, Samuel, Percie and May. He married for his third wife Laura Fritz, who died in 1909, no issue. In politics Mr. Morehead is a staunch democrat. Fraternally he belongs to the A. F. & A. M., being the oldest Mason in this locality, and he is also a member of the Odd Fellows. Few men stand higher in public esteem than he, for during the sixty-two years he has made Rock Island his home, he has always given to each man with whom he has had dealings, fair treatment, and lived up to his belief that honesty is not only the best policy, but the only one.

MORGAN, James Westfall (deceased), for many years one of the beloved physicians and surgeons of Rock Island county, was born at Thorntown, Boone county, Ind., December 4, 1837, and died at No. 1223 Fourteenth street, Moline, Ill., May 11, 1911. Dr. Morgan was a son of Isaac and Cynthia (Westfall) Morgan, the former having been born in Kentucky about 1789. The grandfather, a farmer by occupation, came to America at an early age, settling in Virginia, where he met and married his wife. They moved from Virginia to Kentucky, where Isaac Morgan was born, and later moved thence to Ohio, and then to Indiana, where Dr. James Westfall Morgan was born. Then still seeking better conditions the family went on to Scott county, Ia. The trip was made in a covered wagon, and although a small boy, Dr. Morgan remembered the incidents distinctly. They settled on property now included in the city of Davenport, Ia., and endured the vicissitudes incident to pioneer life. The parents became extensive landowners and substantial citizens, the father dying about 1856, and the mother about 1872. Isaac Morgan served as a soldier in the War of 1812. He was a cousin of the famous Confederate general, John Morgan. Mrs. Morgan was of Quaker ancestry. Dr. Morgan was graduated from Keokuk, Iowa, Medical College. Prior to entering medical college he studied with Dr. Hume of Moline, and his brother, Dr. Asa Morgan at DeWitt, Ia. While studying at Moline, Dr. Morgan boarded with the Hon. William Jackson, then of Moline, who afterwards took so important a part in the history of Rock Island. Mr. Jackson at that time was preparing himself for the profession of law, and it is a fact worth mentioning here, that both used to spend hours of study in the seclusion of the old Moline cemetery. It is a remarkable fact that Dr. Morgan and his three brothers became physicians. These brothers, together with the other eight children in the parents' family, are now all deceased.

After finishing his medical course, Dr. Morgan located at Lytle City, Iowa, and began the practice of medicine, interrupting it to offer his services in 1861, and was assigned to the Fourteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry as contract surgeon in the Civil war, without a commission, but acted as any other doctor might when there was need of another surgeon in the regiment and he could have been moved from one command to another just as well as not if there had been a necessity for so doing, for he did not belong to any regiment, but he stayed with the Fourteenth until after the battle of Shiloh. His first experience was at Fort Donelson, and from there he was sent to Shiloh. The work of these brave surgeons in the field hospitals were terrible, and Dr. Morgan often stated that he could never forget the terrors of witnessing so much suffering. In the battle of Shiloh alone his regiment lost 273 in killed, wounded and prisoners, for they belonged to the celebrated "Hornet's Nest Brigade" in Prentice's Division, Army of the Tennessee, which made history in that engagement. After the battle of Shiloh he returned home and practiced medicine until February 24, 1864, when he was commissioned assistant surgeon of the Fortieth Iowa Infantry, serving with it until mustered out, August 2, 1865, at Fort Gibson, Cherokee Nation.

At the close of the war he settled at Princeton, Ia., and from there moved to Cordova, Rock Island county, where he practiced his profession about ten years, when he moved to Port Byron, and after seventeen years there, went to Erie, Ill., where he spent two years. He then came to Moline in 1892, making this city his home until his death, with the exception of one year spent in New Mexico. Not an office-seeker, he served as a school director while at Cordova, and was president of the village board of Port Byron for two terms.

Dr. Morgan was married (first) on June 10, 1860, to Maria E. Norcott, a daughter of Lauson and Eliza (Haven) Norcott, and they had four children: Clara, now Mrs. Samuel W. Odell, and three who died in childhood. Mrs. Morgan died August 11, 1887. On December 24, 1890, Dr. Morgan married (second) Miss Belle S. Morehouse, of Moline, who survives him. She is a daughter of Charles B. and Margaret (Williams) Morehouse, the latter being a second cousin of Mark Twain. Mrs. Morgan's paternal great-grandfather was a soldier of the Revolutionary war. Mrs. Morgan owns her homestead at No. 1223 Fourteenth street, and another residence on Fifteenth and One-half street, as well as other city property.

Dr. Morgan was a member of the Masonic fraternity for over forty years. He belonged to the Modern Woodmen of America and Odd Fellows, and for several years was chief examiner of the Home Forum Benefit Order. He was department commander of the Union Veterans' Union for two years, and also a member of Graham Post, G. A. R., of Moline, from its organization to his death. He was president of the Association of the Surviving Members of the Hornet's Nest Brigade up to the time of his death, and was a charter member of the Moline Chapter of Eastern Star, and was prominent in everything he undertook. The Methodist church had in him a member. A republican, he followed that wing of his party who supported William Jennings Bryan in his silver views, and some of his other opinions, and was proud of the fact. Dr. Morgan was a warm personal friend of Mr. Bryan, having made eighty-two speeches for him during his first campaign. Mrs. Morgan has a letter from Mr. Bryan written her, expressing his sympathy at the death of Dr. Morgan. Dr. Morgan was an energetic and conscientious practitioner in his profession, and was widely known as one of the ablest physicians of Illinois and Iowa. He was constantly called into consultation on important and critical cases. Always responding to the calls made upon him, he attended gladly both poor and rich, giving to all the benefit of his skill and kindly, cheerful disposition, bringing light and hope into thousands of sickrooms. He did not collect from the poor, was open-handed and generous to a fault, and would not take compensation from his old comrades. Hundreds of the latter remember him with love and veneration. He was always found on the progressive side of every movement, and was a worker for what he thought the best interests of all concerned. A staunch, true friend, he could be depended upon to perform all that he promised. Patriotic, useful, able and upright, his memory will long be cherished by the thousands who knew him.

MORGAN, Thomas H.—The agriculturalist of today not only must understand all about farming, but he must also know how to breed stock, and attend the state fairs and stock shows to learn all he can about the best strains to develop. One of the progressive farmers and stockmen of Rock Island county is Thomas H. Morgan of Coal Valley township, born in England in 1862, a son of Thomas and Emma (Timmis) Morgan, also born in England. The father was in the stock business there, buying cattle for the aristocracy. He was born in 1826, and died in 1864. The mother was born in 1828. When her husband died, she came to the United States with her six children, and located at Rock Island, Ill.

Thomas H. Morgan was reared in Rock

Island county, where he alternated attending district school with working on a farm. When he was eighteen years old, he went to Dakota, and took up a claim, remaining on it until he attained his majority. He then went to Nebraska, and became a range rider, going all over the western country, and was with the surveyors as guide, when the B. & M. railroad laid out the route through the sand hills. Some of his stories of those days are very thrilling. In 1894, Mr. Morgan returned to Rock Island, and embarked in farming, and now owns a fine property of 160 acres, and in addition to raising grain, is a stock raiser, having two stallions, one of which he imported from England. It took second prize at the London Fair. He is very much interested in fancy hogs and stock, and attends all the exhibits in order to learn what he can about breeding and caring for them.

In 1891, Thomas H. Morgan married Alzina Applegarth, and they have five children, all of whom are at home: Raymond, Mabel, Lester, Florence and Thomas. In political faith, Mr. Morgan is a republican, and has served very acceptably as a school director for six years, and also as collector of Rural township. He is a Presbyterian, and has been an elder in the church for some years. Mr. Morgan is very prominent in the affairs of the township, exerting a strong influence over his associates, directing his efforts towards obtaining good government, and a general moral uplift of existing conditions.

MORRIS, George O., electrical contractor of No. 2312 Fifth avenue with a branch office at his residence, is one of the practical men of Moline who have recognized the important part electricity is playing in modern civilization, and specialized along such lines. He was born at Troy, N. Y., in 1870, a son of Jacob and Mary (Lockrow) Morris, natives of New York state, where they still reside. They had eleven children, seven of whom are living. George O. Morris was reared in New York state, and there received his educational training. Leaving school, he came to work at Waterford, making pliers. In 1889, he came to Moline, and engaged in the scale works here. While thus employed he began studying electricity, and fitted himself for electrical work. Since leaving the scale works, he has been connected with electrical work exclusively, first on his own account, but after a year, he became associated with the Rock Island Electric Construction Company. For the following ten years, he so continued, but in 1909 he severed this connection, to once more embark in business for himself.

In 1892, Mr. Morris married Clara Barracough, born in England, and they have seven children: Mabel, Sarah, Willie, Charlotte, Beatrice and George. Mr. and Mrs. Morris are Episcopalians. Fraternally, he is a Modern Woodman of America. Since attaining his majority, he has voted the republican ticket. The family residence is at No. 4132 Third avenue.

MORRIS, Hon. John (deceased).—Born and reared on a farm, the late John Morris, who was a distinguished member of the Illinois State legislature in 1870, was more or less connected with agricultural industries all his life. He was born in Madison county, Ohio, May 6, 1823, and died on his farm near Rock Island, Ill., in December, 1874, from tuberculosis, contracted while giving service to his country in the War of the Rebellion. His parents were William and Sarah (Allen) Morris.

William Morris was born in Ohio, February 28, 1803, and Sarah (Allen) Morris was born in Pennsylvania, October 23, 1804. His occupation was farming and dealing in cattle. He was a plain, honest man, a wise farmer and good neighbor and of a genial disposition, which his son, in great part, inherited. His wife was a capable housewife, saving and thrifty, and they prospered and through their natural qualities and many virtues, were valued as friends and neighbors. They moved from Ohio to Rock Island county in 1853 and settled on a farm in Buffalo Prairie township, later moving to Andalusia, in the same county, where William Morris died in 1876, his widow surviving until 1880. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Of their four sons and three daughters, the late John Morris was the eldest born.

To the district schools John Morris was indebted for his educational training and his boyhood and youth were passed in those diversions natural to that time of life, when not assisting his father, with whom he learned the principles of agriculture and the methods of dealing in cattle. In 1848 he came to Rock Island county and engaged in buying and selling cattle, in which he continued to be interested during his entire active life. In 1852 he settled with his family on a farm of 300 acres near Rock Island and this remained his home throughout life. In August, 1862, he enlisted for service in the Civil war, becoming a member of Company I, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteers, entering as a private and being promoted for gallantry until he was commissioned major. This regiment was mainly kept on special duty in Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi, and often was in the midst of dangers, but Major Morris was never either wounded or taken prisoner, although he served throughout the entire war. After peace was restored he returned to his farm, which his capable wife had conducted during his absence, and resumed his former occupations, never being fully restored to health however.

At Galesburg, Ill., April 29, 1850, John Morris was married to Miss Abbie L. Gardner, who was born at Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, April 29, 1828, and at that time was visiting her sister, Mrs. Nathan Price and attending the Preparatory Department of Knox College. Her father, John V. Gardner, was first a teacher and then a farmer and died at Kent, Ohio, when over ninety years of age. The mother of Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Sarah (Spear) Gardner, was born at Springfield, Mass., May 3, 1794, and died at Brimfield, February 19, 1838. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Morris removed to Rock Island, although she still retains the ownership of her farm. She is a member of the Presbyterian church as was her husband. In politics he was an ardent and influential republican and a number of times served as supervisor of his township, and in 1870 was elected to the state legislature and served out his full term, with a clean record.

MORRIS, William J. (deceased).—In reviewing the history of the Civil war, the historian is struck by the youth of the volunteers, many of whom were mere lads when they enlisted, offering their lives in order that the Union be preserved. Through the long years of bloody conflict, they bravely fought, coming out, many of them maimed, the remainder with some disability, which if it did not develop immediately, eventually showed itself, a pitiful witness of hardships endured, and exposure experienced. These noble veterans as they step to the sound of martial music upon Memorial Day, bear little likeness to the lads that went off so bravely fifty years ago, and yet they are the same, now changed by years of conflict in the battle of life that was a losing one from the start owing to the handicap placed upon them by their military career. One of these veterans of whom Rock Island county had reason to be proud was the late William J. Morris, formerly a government guard in this city. He was born at Philadelphia, Pa., September 9, 1840 and died at Rock Island, August 21, 1911. Mr. Morris was a son of John and Sarah (Armstrong) Morris, natives of County Tyrone, Ireland. The father was a linen weaver in his native county, where he probably married his wife. They had the following children: James who was born December 25, 1835, William who was born September 9, 1837 and Marguerite, who was born in 1845. When James was three years old, the family emigrated to the new world, first arriving at Boston, from whence they came to Philadelphia, where the parents lived until death.

William J. Morris attended the common schools of his native city, and started to learn the butchering trade, but upon the outbreak of the war, he ran away from home to enlist in Company H, First New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, serving until June 23, 1864, when he was honorably mustered out. He participated in the battles of the Wilderness, Stony Ridge and others. Returning home, he resided at Philadelphia until 1866, when he enlisted in Company B, Sixth United States Regular Infantry and served three years in this company, being mustered out at Fort Arluckle, I. T. December 28, 1869. The following April he enlisted in the Ordnance Department at Frankfort Arsenal, April 20, 1870. In 1871 he was transferred to the Rock Island Arsenal, where he served until April 20, 1875. He then began work in the shops at the Arsenal, later being appointed guard, and served fifteen years in that capacity at the Twenty-fourth street approach in Rock Island; or to within one week of the time of his death which occurred August 21, 1911.

On January 28, 1873, Mr. Morris was married at Rock Island to Isabella Curran, born in Ireland, who was brought to this country in 1857, when fifteen years old. The children born of this marriage were: Mary E., William H., James A. Mr. Morris was a republican, and interested in the success of his party's candidates. He was a genial, kindly man, whose recollections of earlier days were exceedingly interesting.

MORROW, James F.—Farming in Rock Island county is not as difficult as in other communities where conditions are not so favorable, and yet here as elsewhere, it takes foresight, knowledge and ability to attain the best results. One of those who have made a success of their undertakings is James R. Morrow, owner of eighty acres of section 33, Buffalo Prairie township. He was born in this township, January 15, 1856, a son of William and Susan (Lair) Morrow, the former born at Pittsburgh, Pa., and the latter in Westmoreland county, Pa. The date of the father's birth was 1810, and the mother's, December 25, 1818. By trade the father was a tanner, and seeking a wider field, he came to Illinois in 1839, locating on the farm now owned by his son, James F. Here he died in 1890, and his wife in the same year. Their children were: Mary J. Heseman; James F.; Elizabeth Stanley; Maggie Harris; Susan Rosemew and four who are deceased.

Until he was twenty years old, James F. Morrow attended the public schools of his district, and was brought up on the farm as any boy of the period. Leaving school, he began farming for himself in Nebraska, where he entered and improved a farm of eighty acres, which he still owns. This property continued to be his home for twenty years, but he then returned to Rock Island county and bought in 1892, the Morrow homestead, where he has since continued to reside. Right on this farm, Mr. Morrow hunted deer and other wild game in his boyhood, although this seems almost impossible to those who look over the well cultivated fields and at the comfortable, neat-appearing buildings.

On January 1, 1886, Mr. Morrow married Mary Peterman, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Lair) Peterman, natives of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Peterman died in Ohio. Mrs. Morrow died in 1909, after a useful life devoted to her husband and children, the latter of whom were as follows: William, and Hazel. Mr. Morrow belongs to the Odd Fellows of Illinois City. He has served as constable, and been an efficient officer. His son is also a member of the Odd Fellows. Both in Nebraska and Illinois, Mr.

Morrow has seen some important changes, and passed through pioneer conditions. His hard work has resulted in his accumulating a comfortable property, and he has also firmly established himself in the confidence of his neighbors.

MORROW, William L. (deceased).—Only a little more than half a century has passed since war was declared between American citizens, and yet so many of those who participated in the mighty struggle have gone to enlist in the Army of the Infinite. Rock Island county had its full quota of veterans a few years ago, but the ranks are sadly thinned, and soon these participators in the Civil war will only be represented by lowly mounds in the cemeteries. One of those who did his duty as a soldier and citizen was the late William L. Morrow, for many years a farmer, and always a reliable and responsible man. He was born in Pennsylvania, in 1845, a son of William H. and Susan Morrow, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work.

William L. Morrow was a small boy when his parents came to Rock Island county, and he grew to manhood in this locality. His boyhood was passed alternating attendance at school with work on the home farm, where his brother James now resides. Although he was reared on a farm, and devoted the greater part of his life to agricultural pursuits, he would have succeeded equally well in many other lines of endeavor. He enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, when his country had need of him, and during his service suffered much from exposure. Indeed, it is doubtful if he ever fully recovered from the effects of his experiences. Upon his return home, he was engaged in various kinds of work until his marriage, when he settled on a farm in Buffalo Prairie township. From there he went to Polk county, Mo., and took up a claim of 120 acres. Having proved up his claim, he came back to Rock Island county, renting land for one year in Buffalo Prairie township. He then bought a homestead of twenty acres at Illinois City, on which he built a comfortable house, and set out an orchard. All of his improvements were solid ones, and increased the value of his property very materially. Mr. Morrow was a member of the J. W. Wyler Post, G. A. R. of Illinois City. In political faith he was a republican. His death occurred in Illinois City in 1907, and in his passing away, Rock Island county lost one of its best citizens.

On August 15, 1867, William L. Morrow married Julia E. Bailey, a daughter of Henderson and Susan (Mason) Bailey. Mr. and Mrs. Morrow had three children: Edward G. of Hannibal, Mo., is married; Susan, is Mrs. Robert Reeves of Iowa; and Nola is Mrs. Fred Dunker of Illinois City. Mrs. Morrow was born June 18, 1851, on an island in the Mississippi river, in Rock Island county. She grew to womanhood there, and in the neighborhood of Illinois

City, and attended the country schools. She lost her father when she was twelve years old, he leaving five children, of whom she was the eldest, and she began working to help support them and her mother. In those days wages were small, she receiving but $1.25 per week for doing the work for a family of nine, not counting the hired help. These experiences made her a fine housekeeper, and she is proud that she was able to assist her widowed mother take care of the little ones.

MORSE, John Henderson, a substantial farmer of Drury township, comes of an old and honored family and is properly proud of his connections. He was born in Kinsman township, Trumbull county, O., March 3, 1853, a son of Elias Hastings Morse and a grandson of Elias Morse. Elias Hastings Morse was born in Trumbull county, O., July 21, 1826, after his father and mother, Elias and Lucy (Stanton) Morse, had moved there from Massachusetts. He grew to manhood there and was married February 22, 1850, in Ohio, to Margaret Reed, and they had five children: Melissa, who is Mrs. F. E. Metson, of Alabama, was born in 1850; John Henderson; Alfred Tesley, who was born June 18, 1857; George, who was born in 1862, died in July, 1864, and was buried in Henry county, Ill.; and Lucy, who was born May 7, 1865, is the wife of John McLaughlin, of Henry county.

John Henderson Morse came with his parents in 1854 to Henry county, Ill., where they lived for the next half century. On April 19, 1883, Mr. Morse was married to Miss Mary Adeline DeMosse, a daughter of Peter and Melissa (Drury) DeMosse. Peter DeMosse was born in Butler county, O., February 23, 1816, and died December 27, 1899, and was buried in Reynolds cemetery. He came west in 1839, settling first in Muscatine county, Ia., then moved to Bloomington (now Muscatine), Ia., and from there came to Rock Island county, in 1845. Here in the same year he bought his farm of eighty acres, in Drury township, of Stephen Ward, this being the same farm upon which John H. Morse now resides. For this land Mr. DeMosse paid three dollars an acre, as it was but a wilderness. He improved the land and later added forty acres, and still later, some time in the fifties, took up a government claim of eighty acres, bringing his possessions up to 200 acres. This beautiful tract of valuable land is yet in the family. He became a man of prominence in his township and at the time of the building of the arsenal, he was supervisor of Drury township, an office he filled for twenty years, and the family still preserve one of the first passes ever issued to strangers to enter this fortress. Mr. DeMosse assisted James Shirkey to build the first school-house in the township, while Jerry Lequatt, another early settler, furnished the logs. The first teacher in the newly completed building was a Mr. Waller, who, with his family, lived there.

On November 4, 1841, Peter DeMosse was married to Melissa Drury, a daughter of Isaiah Drury and a granddaughter of William Drury, the last named coming to America from Drury Lane, England, and settling in Baltimore, Md., in 1780. He married Rachel Willits. Melissa Drury was born in Morgan county, Ind., January 2, 1821, and died November 15, 1891, in Drury township, and was interred at Reynolds cemetery. To Peter and Melissa DeMosse the following children were born: Priscilla, who was born January 11, 1843, died July 7, 1844, and was buried in Muscatine county, Ia.; James Drury, who was born September 15, 1844, died September 2, 1910, went to Texas in 1879, was a veteran of the Civil war, having served under the call for 100-day men, under Captain Duffield, in a company raised at Illinois City, and was buried in the National Cemetery at San Antonio, Tex.; Sarah Priscilla, who was born February 26, 1847, lives at West Liberty, Muscatine county, Ia.; Miles Morton, who was born May 4, 1849, now lives in Osborne county, Kas.; Mary Adeline, who was born December 20, 1851; Isaiah Lesley, who was born August 22, 1854, lives in Osborne county, Kas.; Flora Helen, who was born August 21, 1859, lives in Osborne county, Kas.; William S., who was born April 17, 1865, lives in Idaho; and Homer and an infant, the last named deceased, born March 9, 1863.

Mr. and Mrs. Morse have had four children: a daughter, born May 17, 1884, died the same day and was buried at Cambridge; Margaret Melissa, who was born May 21, 1866, died January 8, 1898, and was interred at Cambridge, Ill.; Flora Priscilla, who was born September 4, 1888, is a graduate of the Bellevue training school for nurses, practicing her profession in Kansas; and Elias DeMosse, who was born September 7, 1890, and now owns the eighty acres of school land which his grandfather, Peter DeMosse, homesteaded. Mr. and Mrs. Morse are connected with the Methodist church at Pine Bluff. In politics he is a republican and has served as township school trustee, but otherwise has not accepted office. The DeMosse, the Morse and the Drury families have all been representative ones in this part of Rock Island county from early times.

MORTIER, Henry.—Successful farmers are the rule rather than the exception in Rock Island county. Not only are climatic conditions excellent, the soil fertile and local demand large, but the transportation facilities are such as to afford the agriculturist a market in all of the large cities of the county. One of the men who is taking advantage of all these opportunities is Henry Mortier. He was born in Scott county, Iowa, February 20, 1885, being a son of August and Louise (Vanhoordeke) Mortier, the former born in Belgium, July 3, 1856, and the latter in the same county, April 20, 1855. The father was a general laborer in Rock Island for twenty years until he bought a farm in Bowling township, and there he died October 29, 1907. The children born to these parents were: Sophia, born in Belgium, July 18, 1877; Ma-filda, born May 9, 1881; Mary, born July 18, 1883; Henry; and Frank, born January 16, 1896, lives in Lincoln. Sophia married Ivo Slock of Wisconsin. Matilda married Julius Veschoore, while Mary married Charles Hedrick of Rock Island.

Henry Mortier was educated in the Rock Island public schools, attending them until he was fourteen years old, when he began working in the Rock Island sash and door works, remaining there for five years. He then began farming, and has never changed his occupation. He now owns a fine farm of 120 acres in Bowling township, and has made many improvements since it came into his possession.

On September 17, 1907, he was married to Carrie Freund, daughter of George A. and Kate (Cawezell) Freund. Mrs. Mortier has three brothers and one sister: Paul, George, Julius and Agnes. Mr. and Mrs. Mortier have had three children: Mildred, born July 26, 1908; Henrietta, born May 1, 1910, and George, born August 17, 1911.

Fraternally Mr. Mortier is a member of the F. O. E., Circle No. 956. He is a Catholic, belonging to the parish of St. Paul. A steadfast young man, earnestly endeavoring to do his full duty, and to give each man a square deal, he has won the confidence of his neighbors, and is recognized as one of the rising young men of his section.

MORTON, Alva E., who is engaged in a general teaming, express and transfer business at East Moline, Ill., where he has adequate quarters at No. 615 Second avenue, is one of the solid, reliable, property owning citizens of this place. Mr. Morton was born on a farm, in the state of Iowa, and is a son of Joseph and Martha (Oliver) Morton. The father was born in Canada and the mother in Illinois. Farming was the father's occupation both in Iowa and later in Henry county, Ill., and he continued to be concerned in agricultural activities until the time of his death, in 1892. The mother, who was a native of Henry county, survived until 1905, and both parents were buried in that county. They had a family of eight children, namely: Norman, Willis, Alva E., Bert, Mary, Harvey Oliver and Hattie, deceased.

In the public schools of Henry county, Mr. Morton obtained his education and he continued on the old homestead in that county until 1906, when he came to East Moline. Here he secured employment as a teamster and worked hard and long, gradually acquiring capital to go into business for himself and at the present time gives employment to a force of men and works four teams, the transfer, express and carrying business in a place like Moline being one of great importance. He has had to meet competition and his success is a tribute to his perseverance, energy and excellent business judgment.

In 1894 Mr. Morton was married to Miss Grace Brisefain, who was born in Bureau county, Ill., and they have one child, Merle. In his views on public questions, Mr. Morton is an outspoken republican. With him it is a matter of principle because he is not one to seek public office, the demands of his business sufficiently claiming his attention. He is social in his disposition and finds recreation and congenial companionship in the Modern Woodmen of America to which he belongs.

MOSE, John.—While a number of the farmers of Rock Island county are specializing in their work, there are many others that believe that there is more money in general farming. By raising a variety of products, the crops can be rotated, and the fields given necessary rest. One of those who incline to this belief is John Mose, one of the prosperous agriculturalists of this region. He was born in Prussia, Germany, October 11, 1850, being a son of Chresten and Christina (Johannassen) Mose. When he was born this portion of the German Empire belonged to Denmark, but was acquired by Germany in 1864.

Until he was nineteen years old, Mr. Mose worked in his native land, and at the same time secured a common schooling. Coming here, he located first in Michigan, where he spent three years. Following that, he came on to Rock Island county and rented land until he could buy eighty acres in 1894. This was partly improved land, but he had to remodel what buildings were on the place, and erect others to meet the demands of his work. Now he has one of the neatest farms in Coe township, and is very proud of it and what he has accomplished, as he has every reason to be, for he is a self-made man in every respect.

On August 9, 1872, he married Catherine Christensen, also born in Prussia, Germany. They have two sons: John C., who is living in Coe township; and Lawrence, who died when six years old, being buried in the Zuma township cemetery. Mr. Mose is a man who believes in attending to his own business, and while he wants to see his township keep abreast of others, he does not care to meddle in political matters.

MOSE, John Christopher.—Some men are born leaders of their associates. No matter where they happen to live, they take command and lead their men to victory. When such men are of high moral character, and take a public-spirited interest in the advancement of their locality, things prosper, and it is fortunate for Coe township that John Christopher Mose belongs to this class. He was born in Hampton township, October 9, 1873, and is one of the most prominent men of his section. His education was secured in the schools of Hampton and Zuma townships, and with the exception of three years when he worked as a carpenter, he has farmed all his life. However, he still occasionally does odd jobs of carpenter work, on his own place, or for his neighbors. Mr. Mose was elected tax collector of the township for a two-year term. He has also been town clerk, and for the past nine years has been a school director. For the past four years he has been director of the Coe and Zuma Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and for two years has been a director in the Port Byron Mutual Telephone Co.

James Wiggins

Mrs James Wiggins

Mr. Mose was married December 21, 1898, to Fannie C. Behrens, daughter of Henry and Dora (Kirchhoff) Behrens. Mr. and Mrs. Mose have had five children: Harry Lawrence, Walter Justin, Florence Katie, Ralph Le Roy, and Dorothy Marie. The four eldest are students in the district school of this section, and are doing well at their studies, being bright young people. Mr. Mose is an intelligent, responsible, reliable business man and public official, and under his wise care all the affairs with which he is connected are prospering finely.

MOSHER, William W.—Substantiality is a note often struck in Rock Island county, for the majority of the people here are well-to-do as a result of intelligent effort conscientiously directed and they know how to enjoy the prosperity which has come to them. One of these is William W. Mosher of Milan, Ill., who owns a comfortable house, surrounded with two acres of berry and gardening land. He was born in this county, October 5, 1847, a son of Jonathan and Elen (Banty) Mosher, the former of whom was born in 1837, and died November 21, 1872, and was a native of New York. His wife was born in Switzerland and died in Rock Island county. In early life, Jonathan Mosher learned to be a shoemaker, and still later the trade of knife making and also taught school in New York. In 1829, he came west, locating in Illinois, then went to Michigan, where he operated a saw-mill for two years. In 1832, he settled on a farm in Rock Island county, having taken up land from the government to the extent of 160 acres, and this continued to be his home until his death.

William W. Mosher has always been a farmer, having been brought up to the work, remaining at home until he attained his majority. He was the youngest in the following family: Alonzo, Malcolm and Helen, all of whom are deceased; John, who lives in Mississippi; Mary M., who is the widow of Joshua Griffin lives in Rock Island county; Hiram and Julius are both deceased; one half brother is deceased and another, Scott Walter, lives in Rock Island. All were educated in Rock Island county.

On September 12, 1868, Mr. Mosher was married to Lucinda Willhite, daughter of John and Mary (Paugh) Willhite, the former of whom was born in Indiana, November 8, 1828, and died May 28, 1901. The latter was born in Pennsylvania, August 13, 1828, and died July 25, 1868. There were the following children in the Willhite family: Mrs. Mosher; William; Elizabeth, who married Henry Wilson; James of Rock Island; Amelia, who married James Kell, is now deceased; Ella, who married Ney Wilson, lives in Milan; and Noda S., who lives in Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Mosher have had the following children: Giralda S., a farmer of the county; Carrena, wife of Charles Ruge who is deceased (one child, Ruth) married Fred Saulspagh, children as follows: Irene, Bryant, Gertrude (deceased); Gertrude, died December 16, 1898, married Harry Brown, one child, Alfred C.; Edna, married William Biscart and lives in Rock Island, one son, Louis; John A. is a merchant in Iowa, married Mabel Brookman, three children, Dale, John and Madalene; Doris, married Frederick Davis and lives in the State of Washington, have two children, William and Catherine; Katy, married Thomas Kennedy and lives in Rock Island, one son, Thomas; and Bessie, who lives at home, is cashier at the Harper House in Rock Island, now married to Benedict Walters of Rock Island county, one child, Josephine J. There are thirteen grandchildren in the family.

The family has been reared to the Methodist faith, and attend the church of that denomination in Milan. Mr. Mosher is a man well and favorably known throughout the county, where he has made many friends through his unswerving honesty and good business ability.

MOSS, H. T., one of the pioneer merchants of Moline whose privilege it has been to assist in the growth and development of this thriving city, and at the same time build up his own business from small beginnings to its present proportions, is conveniently located at No. 1630 Third avenue. He was born at St. Louis, Mo., December 17, 1857, a son of Bernard N. and Kathenia (Ottens) Moss, the latter born in 1827, and still living. The father was one of the pioneers in the mercantile trade at Davenport, where he died, in 1899, aged seventy-three years. He was born in Hanover, Germany, but was married at St. Louis, Mo., in 1855. He and his excellent wife had twelve children, and his other sons form the firm of the Moss Clothing Co., of Davenport. Moving from St. Louis, to Davenport, fifty-two years ago, Bernard H. Moss laid the foundations of the present large concern bearing his name, and bore an important part in the development of the clothing trade of this entire locality.

H. T. Moss took a business course, after finishing the common schools, and has always been in the clothing trade. Twenty-five years ago, he came to Moline, where he established himself, and during all these years has made his name stand for reliability and quality. Just prior to leaving Davenport, Mr. Moss was married to Katherin Reagan, and they have one child, Mary Elizabeth, a graduate of Villa De Chantel. Mr. Moss belongs to St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, of which he is one of the leading members. He also belongs to Leo Council No. 716, Knights of Columbus, being a past grand master of it, and has often served as delegate to state conventions. Outside his church connections, Mr. Moss' interests are centered upon his business, and he has thus been able to make it the success it is. His trade is a very large one, extending over a wide territory, and some of his customers have been his ever since he founded his house.

MOUGIN, Clement (deceased), for many years a respected and useful citizen of Rock Island, Ill., was a native of Balfour, France, born November 24, 1824, and his parents spent their entire lives in that country. The father was a soldier in the Franco-Prussian war, serving many years under the great Napoleon. Clement Mougin attended school in boyhood and in his native country learned the trade of spinner. When about twenty-nine years of age he went to Germany, was married there and worked several years at his trade. In 1854 he came to America, landing at New Orleans, after spending ten weeks on the water. He came up the Mississippi river to Davenport, and engaged in farming at Blue Grass, near that city; later joined a surveying party in the employ of the Government and went to California, where he spent two years. Returning to Davenport, he soon afterward removed to Quincy and engaged in farming near there, but after a short time he and wife came to Rock Island and made a permanent residence.

Upon coming to Rock Island, Mr. Mongin worked as spinner for the Rock Island Woolen Company, and later was employed by the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company, with which he remained several years. He afterward worked for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, until his retirement from active life, a few years before his death. He was a member of the Roman Catholic church, as are his widow and children, and all have been active and useful in its interests. He always took great interest in public affairs and in politics was a democrat.

In August, 1852, Mr. Mougin was united in marriage with Charlotte Bahl, a native of Germany, who died June 23, 1912. She was a daughter of Frank and Elizabeth Bahl who came to America in 1854 and settled on a farm near Davenport, where they remained until their death. Mr. and Mrs. Bahl had six sons and one daughter, and of these the only survivors are: William, of Moline; and Louis and Henry, farmers, living near Sac City, Ia. Ten children were born to Mr. Mougin and wife, survivors: Anna, wife of William Egan, of Milwaukee, Wis.; Louisa, wife of Louis Glockhoff, of Milwaukee; Julia, wife of George Schneider, of Rock Island; and Louis and Mary, both of Rock Island. There are eleven grandchildren and one great-grandchild in the family. Mr. Mougin died at his home in Rock Island, December 29, 1898, deeply mourned by his sorrowing family and friends. Mrs. Mougin owned a nice home at No. 601 Twenty-fourth street and other residence property in the city, where she was well known and had a large number of friends.

MUCHOW, Herman August, owner of 160 acres of excellent farming land in Drury township, specializes in raising the improved Gold Mine seed corn, Jersey cows, Poland-China hogs and fancy horses, so that he is a recognized authority upon all matters relating to agriculture and stockraising. He is a man who recognizes the value of improved methods, and is always making experiments in order to discover the best way to carry on his work. Mr. Muchow was born in Brandenburg, Germany, December 21, 1863, a son of Augustine and Amelia (Lindeman) Muchow, both natives of Germany. The father, Augustine Muchow, born March 24, 1823, for twenty-three years was a coachman, and then was made overseer on a large estate. In 1872, the family, consisting of the parents and their four children, came to this country, locating in Wisconsin, where he bought a farm, remaining on it until his death, which occurred December 22, 1897, when he was killed by a mad hog. The good mother passed away many years before, dying April 29, 1874, born April 26, 1828. The children born to these parents were: Anna, who is the wife of Henry Westard of Wisconsin; Gustave, who married Bertha Krueger and is farming in Wisconsin; Charles, who married Minnie Prelate and is farming in Wisconsin; and Herman August.

Herman August Muchow attended school for three years in Germany, and went to school in this country until he was confirmed in the Lutheran faith. He is now a member of the Muscatine Lutheran church, and takes an active part in its good work. In 1899, Mr. Muchow came to Drury township, and since then has developed a very fine property, so that he has become one of the leading farmers of his locality.

In 1889, Mr. Muchow was married to Agnes Colberg by Reverend Puffer. A sketch of the Colberg family appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. and Mrs. Muchow have two children: Edgar Paul, born August 28, 1890, at home; and Anker Amelia, born August 28, 1901. Mr. Muchow is a democrat, and for six years served as the successful nominee of his party on the School Board, being as efficient in that capacity as he is in other walks of life; a member of the Lutheran Mutual Aid Society and the Mechanics Aid Society. Both of his parents are buried in the German Lutheran cemetery in Washington, Sauk county, Wis.

MUELLER, Carl J., manager of the New Harper House of Rock Island, and one of the best known hotelmen in this part of the state, is proving his ability in the conduct of this popular hostelry. He was born in Rock Island January 11, 1874, a son of John and Caroline (Gall) Mueller, both of whom were born in Germany. They came to the United States with their parents, in 1850, the former being four years old, and the latter three. The father's family came direct to Rock Island, but the mother's family, went first to Joliet, but later also came to Rock Island. The paternal grandfather of Carl J. Mueller here engaged in farming, but later leased and conducted the Union House, which stood just south of where the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad passenger station now stands. It faced what was then Madison street, now Twentieth street, and was one of the early hotels that was very popular. In the meanwhile, John Mueller, after obtaining his educational training, had learned the cooper trade, and followed it until he attained his majority, when he took charge of the Union House. He was married soon afterwards to Miss Caroline Gall who resided on Third avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and whose parents were also old settlers here, coming from Joliet. John Mueller remained in the hotel business until his death, which occurred in 1892, when he was forty-five years of age, his wife having died one week before. Twenty years prior to his death, he bought the Union House and the block of land on which it stood. He left a family of seven children, five sons, and two daughters, of whom Carl J. Mueller was one. The youngest child was but nine days old at the time of its mother's death.

In the meantime Carl J. Mueller had been getting his education while helping his father in the hotel. He attended the Davenport business college, becoming at sixteen years of age, an expert accountant, and most expert rapid calculator. So expert was he, he gave exhibitions in rapid calculations in various parts of the country under the auspices of the college, and he could not be excelled in this line of work. At the time of his father's death, he was seventeen years old, but his sister, Katherine, being two years his senior, was appointed guardian of the children. The hotel business was continued for the next two years, with Carl J. Mueller as manager. Later, the Union House property having been sold to the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, for terminal purposes, Mr. Mueller engaged as bookkeeper for the Henning Brewing Company, in whose employ he remained for fourteen years, being manager for them during the last six years of this period. This position he resigned in July, 1909, to take the Harper House, the city's leading hotel, under a twenty years' lease. He organized a stock company for this purpose, known as the New Harper Hotel Company, and the name of the house was changed to the New Harper Hotel. He is secretary and treasurer of this company, and manager of the hotel, having entire control. About $120,000 were spent in remodeling and refurnishing the house, making it a strictly first-class, modern hotel, and one of the best furnished in the Tri-Cities. In August, 1910, Mr. Mueller purchased the Rock Island Hotel lease, and furniture, and that popular house is also entirely controlled and managed by him. In the autumn of 1911, Mr. Mueller and A. L. Anderson bought the Weyerhaeuser and Denkmann building opposite the New Harper, on Second avenue, at a cost of $50,000, and remodeled and improved it at a further large outlay. The end is not yet at hand, as he has plans for still further development of his various interests, with the probability of acquiring more. Mr. Mueller is a republican in politics. He is a man of abundant energy and has done much to advance his city and county. As yet, he is unmarried.

MUELLER, Conrad.—The successful farmer has to know well many things, and to be able to decide upon the nature of his crops and the desirability of the breeds of stock he carries. He must also know about markets and be able to command sufficient transportation facilities, so that taking it all in all, his calling is a varied one. Conrad Mueller is one of the prosperous farmers of Rock Island county who has been able to overcome all obstacles, and win out in his work, now owning 360 acres of good land on sections 13 and 24 Buffalo Prairie township, on which he has just completed a $7,000 residence, supplied with hot and cold water, and lighted with acetylene gas. Mr. Mueller was born in Johnson county, Ia., September 21, 1866, being a son of Henry and Christina (Dverres) Mueller, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work.

Conrad Mueller was three years old when his parents returned to Illinois, and he grew to manhood in Buffalo Prairie township, attending Buffalo Center school until he was fifteen years old. He labored for his father until attaining his majority, and then worked out by the month for two years, and then he farmed for himself for one year. Having married, he rented the Widow Vetter farm for four years; three years the Swain farm, then his father-in-law's farm in Duncan township, Mercer county, for five years, when he bought 120 acres in Buffalo Prairie township. Three years later, he bought seventy-five acres of John Hofer, and six years later, 165 acres of Childs Wheaton, his house standing on his first purchase.

On January 15, 1891, Mr. Mueller was married by the pastor of the Lutheran church to Annie Attig, daughter of Nicholas and Margaret (Gearhardt) Attig. Mr. and Mrs. Mueller have had children as follows: Nicholas H., Henry J., William G., Clara C. and Albert. Mr. Mueller belongs to the Lutheran church, being one of its trustees, and in politics, he is a staunch democrat. He has always worked hard, but all of his efforts were directed by intelligent comprehension of the possibilities of his calling, and success has come to him, in no small degree.

MUELLER, Fred C.—The Mueller family is one of the old-established ones in Rock Island county, and its members have gone out into the world from this section, well fortified by sound, sane upbringing and moral teaching. Those who remained have done their best to assist in the development of their special localities, and have maintained the high standard of living set up by the founders. One of the members of this family is Fred C. Mueller, owner of the old Mueller homestead of 250 acres, section 16, Buffalo Grove township. He was born on this farm, February 15, 1873, being a son of Henry and Christina Mueller, a full sketch of whom is given elsewhere in this work.

The education of Fred C. Mueller was obtained in the Buffalo Center school, his first teacher having been Eva Whitney. Another teacher was Augusta Davis, and still another, Nora Johnson, all of whom he gratefully remembers. When he was fourteen years old, he left school there and spent a year at the German Lutheran school in Rock Island. With the exception of five years, Mr. Mueller has spent his life on the farm, and after his marriage, he bought eighty acres his brother Lewis now owns, and spent five years on it. In 1903, he purchased the homestead, and since then has made some important improvements, for he is a progressive agriculturist who believes in utilizing modern methods, and machinery. He also bought forty acres in section 16, forty acres in section 14 and forty acres in section 15, all fine land.

Mr. Mueller was married February 16, 1897, to Clara Attig of Marston, Ill., daughter of Nic and Margaretta (Leonard) Attig. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Mueller: Carl Alvin, Emma, Clifford, Leonard and Anna. They are German Lutherans, and active in the good work of their church, Mr. Mueller being trustee and treasurer of it. In politics, he is a republican, but he has not desired public office, his time being absorbed by the duties of his farm.

MUELLER, George C.—The Mueller family is one of the old established ones in Rock Island county, and its representatives compare favorably with any of the residents of the state. Many of them have devoted themselves to farming, so that it is as agriculturists that they are best known. One of this family who has been more than ordinarily successful is George C. Mueller, owner of 240 acres of richly improved land in Edgington township. He was born in Johnson county, Iowa, May 31, 1868, a son of Henry and Christina (Doeres) Mueller, the former born in Germany in 1847. He was brought to the United States by his father when he was a boy, and as they settled in Rock Island he grew up in the county. The grandfather of George C. Mueller was proprietor of the Union Hotel, one of the first houses of its kind at Rock Island. This grandfather died at Rock Island three years after his arrival. Henry Mueller, his son, was one of his ten children.

Henry Mueller grew up at Rock Island and learned the hotel business, as well as the cooper trade, working at the latter until his marriage, when he commenced farming in Johnson county, Ia. After five or six years, he returned to Rock Island county, locating on a farm in Edgington township, where he died in 1904, although he lived retired during the last few years of his life. His religious views made him a member of the Lutheran church, while politically, he was a democrat. His first wife died in 1884, aged thirty-eight years. Later, Henry Mueller married (second) Mrs. Welness, who died within a few years. By his first marriage, Henry Mueller had children as follows: Conrad; George C.; Lizzie, Mrs. Nick Steann, of Johnson county, Ia.; Fred; Lewis; Emma, Mrs. John Kadel of this county; and Bertha. The latter is married and resides in Kansas. By his second marriage

Henry Mueller had two children: Lena and Katy.

George C. Mueller was two years old when his father located on the farm in Edgington township, and he grew up here, attending school. He worked for his father until he was twenty-four years old, and then for himself for two years, when he was married, on December 13, 1893, to Miss Mary Attig, of Marston, Ill., a daughter of Nick and Margaret (Leonard) Attig. Mr. and Mrs. Mueller have had children as follows: Ernest, Laura, Lottie, Bertha, Florence, Herman and Lawrence, who range in age from two to seventeen years.

After his marriage, Mr. Mueller operated his father-in-law's farm for two years, and then rented 200 acres in Edgington township. Later, he bought 160 acres of his present farm, adding another eighty acres some time thereafter. His beautiful home, two and one-half stories in height, was erected in 1909, and contains eleven rooms, conveniently arranged, and supplied with all modern conveniences, including light and hot and cold water. He built one barn in 1901 and another in 1911, and these are constructed according to the latest sanitary regulations, for Mr. Mueller is one of the progressive farmers who realizes that farming must be conducted scientifically. He keeps abreast of modern thought along agricultural lines, and his farm is a model for others to follow. He is a member of the German Lutheran church, and politically is a democrat, although his business ties have been too close to permit of his holding public office.

MUELLER, John H., is one of the many worthy citizens of Moline that Germany has furnished. He was born in Bredenbeck, Holstein, Germany, July 16th, 1852. His parents were Frederick J. and Johanna (Johansen) Mueller. His father was a blacksmith by trade and also the owner of a small tract of land of fourteen acres at the edge of the village.

In early boyhood John H. Mueller had to work both as a helper on the farm and in the smithy, hence he became somewhat familiar both with farm work and the trade of a blacksmith. He, however, attended school regularly until he was sixteen years of age, working on the farm or in the smithy both before and after school hours. When he was sixteen years of age he quit the school and became a hand in his father's shop and being naturally gifted and intelligent mastered the blacksmith's as well as the toolsmith's trade. When about eighteen years of age he became possessed of a desire to seek a home in America, and to this end began the study of English in the City of Kiel.

At nineteen years of age the youth emigrated to America and arrived at New York on November 2, 1871, taking the first train for Davenport, Ia., where he remained three days and then came to Moline. Here he secured work as a blacksmith with the Moline Wagon Company and was so employed there until 1875. He longed to become an American and hence secured the necessary papers of naturalization as soon as the law would permit, the final papers being issued to him early in November, 1876, and never were naturalization papers granted to a more worthy foreigner or held by a more loyal and conscientious American. By reason of ill health he was forced, in 1875, to give up the shop work, but idleness did not suit him, hence in the month of May in that year he established bottling works at No. 1517 Second avenue this city. In 1889 he started a wholesale business. He afterwards erected a fine brick block at the corner of Second avenue and 16th street, using the ground floor for the retail and wholesale business and the upper story for flats. His son, William C. Mueller, now was taken in full partnership with him.

On July 17, 1875, Mr. Mueller was married to Catherine Wriedt, who also was born in Holstein, Germany, and who came to Moline in 1873. To the happy and worthy couple were born the following children, namely: William C., born October 1st, 1876, and who, as above stated, is now in partnership with his father, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this history; Henry F., born May 11th, 1878, who graduated from the Chicago school of Pharmacy in 1897, and up to 1908, practiced his profession, but died in that year; Alvina, who married G. H. Flick, engaged in the insurance business in Moline; and Alma, who is the wife of Fred Kunkel, a hardware dealer of Davenport, Ia.

Mr. Mueller was reared a Lutheran and has always in politics been a republican, but in religion as well as in politics he has been independent, wearing no one's collar, but has acted as his noble conscience and good sense dictated. He belongs to lodge No. 556, B. P. O. E., of Moline, of which he is a charter member, and in which he has held the office of treasurer for many terms or until his health failed, making it impossible for him to attend to business. He is also a member of the Turner Society.

His fellow citizens generally have the most profound respect for Mr. Mueller and the sincerest friendship for him, based upon his sterling character and his open, friendly and lovable ways, which have made him beloved by all. He has been a devoted husband, a dear father, a true friend, a good neighbor, a skilled laborer, a successful business man and a patriotic and loyal citizen.

MUELLER, Louis.—Buffalo Prairie township is a section of Rock Island county particularly favored by nature so that it is well adapted for agricultural purposes. This was recognized long ago by the pioneers who soon took up land, and developed it to a remarkable degree. Those who came later profited by the farsightedness of the earlier farmers, and the entire township is in a magnificent state of advancement. One of the prosperous farmers who belongs to the younger generation is Louis Mueller, owner of 160 acres of rich land on section 11. He was born on the home farm of his family, May 13, 1875, a son of Henry and Christina Mueller, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. They are most excellent people who brought up their children carefully, giving them good advantages, and teaching them good moral lessons. Louis Mueller was educated in the district schools of Buffalo Prairie township, having among others Mary Kell and Mary Ross as teachers. He left school when sixteen years old, and worked on the home farm both before and after his marriage. This event took place December 20, 1899, to Mary E. Wellnitz, born in Germany, December 14, 1880. She came to the United States with her parents, and was brought up in Rock Island county. Her parents, Julius and Minnie (Kitzing) Wellnitz, were Germans, and the former is deceased. In 1903, Mr. Mueller bought 120 acres on sections 22, 23 and 16, erected all the needed buildings, and improve those standing, and then sold to his brother Fred. On October 2, 1912, he purchased his present farm and takes great pride in his premises, and their neat condition shows that he is a careful manager. Mr. and Mrs. Mueller are the parents of five children: John, Donald, Dorothy, Julius, and Walter. They are members of the German Lutheran church, and Mr. Mueller is a staunch republican. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mueller are very popular among their neighbors, where they are recognized as being responsible, reliable and prosperous farming people, and kind-hearted and generous to all who need their sympathy and help.

MUELLER, William C., a well known business man of Moline, has spent his entire life in this city, where he is recognized as an enterprising and public-spirited citizen. He was born in Moline, October 1, 1876, son of John and Catherine (Wriedt) Mueller. The father, a native of Holstein, was born July 16, 1852, and came to the United States in 1871, reaching Moline November 2 of that year. He first worked as blacksmith for a wagon manufactory, but in May, 1875, started in business for himself as a merchant. In September, 1901, he erected a large brick block on Second avenue, where he carries on a retail business. In April, 1912, on account of increase in trade, the business was moved to Fourth avenue and Fourteenth street, where the firm continues operations on a much larger basis than formerly. He is interested in other enterprises and has been successful in his business undertakings. He was married, July 17, 1875, to Catherine Wriedt, a native of Holstein, Germany, who came to Moline in 1873, and they became the parents of the following children: William C., who is his father's business partner; Henry F., who died in 1908; Alvina, Mrs. G. H. Flick, whose husband is engaged in insurance business in Moline; and Alma, who married Fred Kunkel, in hardware business in Davenport.

William C. Mueller, the only surviving son of his parents, attended the German-American school in Moline for five years, then took a course in the public schools, completing his education in a business college at Davenport, Ia. His first employment after leaving school was as bookkeeper for the Moline Channel Ice Company, where he remained two years. He then began to work in his father's bottling establishment, later purchased a half interest in the business of Tietgen & Company, which he retained six years and then sold. In the meanwhile he had been working for his father, and in 1908 bought the interest of the latter in a retail business, and in April, 1911, he became his father's business partner in the wholesale bottling works. They are wholesale and retail dealers and have an extensive business throughout the county, supplying about twenty establishments with their goods and controlling five retail establishments of their own. Both are men of business and executive ability and have built up their present large enterprise through industry and good management. They have good standing in business circles.

On September 4, 1901, Mr. Mueller married Esther N. Wenberg, a native of Moline, daughter of August and Selma (Johnson) Wenberg, who were born in Sweden and came from that country to the United States. Mr. Mueller and wife have two sons, John H. and Richard C. Mr. Mueller is independent in politics and fraternally belongs to Lodge No. 556, B. P. O. E., of Moline.

MUMMA, Daniel Webster, operating the Shady Maple Farm, in Zuma township, Rock Island county, is one of the well known citizens and has been prominent in various lines of industry. He was born in Belmont county, O., April 2, 1852, a son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Sheppard) Mumma, also natives of that county. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, was born December 13, 1815, and died September 14, 1898, and the mother was born January 1, 1818, and died January 1, 1878. He was a son of John and Mary (Fox) Mumma, natives of Hagerstown, Md., he born in 1782 and she in 1787, and at the time they moved to Belmont county, O., they saw soldiers going to serve in the War of 1812. While John Mumma was chopping down a tree it fell and killed him, December 24, 1817. His widow survived him a great many years, passing away June 22, 1876. Elizabeth (Sheppard) Mumma was a daughter of James and Hannah (Green) Sheppard, natives of Belmont county, O. Daniel and Elizabeth Mumma had children as follows: Melinda, Mrs. J. H. Neptune; Oliver, Benjamin F., Daniel W., and Louis Harlan, who survive, and three who are deceased: Isaac N., John W. and Mary. All now surviving reside in Belmont county except Daniel W.

Daniel W. Mumma was educated in his native county and reared on a farm. At the age of twenty years he came to Sterling, Ill., and joined an aunt who was residing there, and worked during the summer months and in winter attended school. In the fall of 1874 he came to Zuma township, Rock Island county, and engaged in teaching school winters and working at farming summers, until June, 1876, teaching fifty-two months altogether. He then went to Port Byron, Ill., and learned telegraphy in the railroad station, remaining until 1880, when he came to Moline and took charge of the American Union office. One year later he became night watchman in a machine shop, remaining in the position two years. In the fall of 1883 he engaged in a feed business for a time, then became driver for the American Express Company, holding that position fifteen months. He then returned to the feed business, but in 1890 sold his interests in the city and came to live on his present farm, the birthplace of his wife, they having purchased the interests of the other heirs. He is highly successful as a general farmer and pays considerable attention to stock raising, and as a man of intelligence and education, represents the best interests of his community. He fitted himself for teaching by a course in the Normal School at Llopedale, O., and has always kept up to the times in his knowledge of current events and issues. Possessing the natural gift of music, he has cultivated it and teaches this branch, giving a few private lessons. In politics he is a republican and has served two terms as assessor and as town clerk. He is held in high esteem as a citizen and his circle of personal friends is large.

On October 30, 1881, Mr. Mumma was united in marriage with Loretta M., daughter of John and Mary P. (Graham) Moody, who was born September 23, 1855, in Zuma township, where her parents were early settlers. The father was born October 17, 1811, and died May 30, 1875, and the mother was born January 1, 1814, and died October 6, 1902. They were married in Kentucky, November 4, 1835. He was born in Tennessee and she in Morganfield, Union county, Ky. Mr. Moody came to Rock Island county in 1832 as a soldier in the Black Hawk war, serving to its close. After his marriage he lived ten years longer in White county, Ill., which had been his home since the Black Hawk war, and in 1845, he returned to Kentucky to take charge of his mother-in-law's farm, remaining there three years. His mother had died when he was twelve years of age and he had then been bound out until reaching his majority to Judge Wilson, for whom he worked two years after he was twenty-one years of age, overseeing a farm. On May 1, 1848, he came to the northeastern portion of Zuma township, where he rented a farm for one year. He then purchased eighty acres of land, part of which had been put under cultivation. This land contained a log cabin and a straw barn. He brought the rest of the land under cultivation and made many improvements, adding to it until he owned 117 acres, and in 1861 erected a brick house. He was prominent in public affairs, served as road commissioner, and school director for many years, and always took an interest in the development and welfare of the community. Mr. and Mrs. Moody had nine children, of whom three are now living: Fannie J., Mrs. Samuel S. Stewart, of Ansley, Neb., whose husband is deceased; Mary, widow of Edward M. McMurphy, of Zuma township; Mrs. Mumma, the youngest. Mrs. Mumma attended school in Moline, and after finishing a course in the high school there taught school seven years. She has spent a large part of her life on the farm where she was born and is well known in the community, being prominent in advancing the cause of Temperance and a member of a local committee in this connection. Mr. Mumma has served in all the offices of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he is an active member. He and his wife have three children: Edna Pearl, a school teacher, at home; Holmes Oliver, a graduate of the Chicago Embalming School and now in the undertaking business at Sterling, Ill.; Verna Noel, now attending Port Byron Academy.

MUNGER, J. Frank, a well known resident of Rock Island, Ill., who is prominent in fraternal circles of Illinois, is now serving as chief auditor of the Modern Woodmen of America, one of the largest fraternal organizations in the United States. Mr. Munger was born in Kendall county, Ill., October 17, 1856, a son of William H. and Roslinda (Shaw) Munger, and a great-grandson of a native of England who came to the United States, became a hotel proprietor and saw service during the Revolutionary war.

William H. Munger was born March 7, 1833, in Oneida county, N. Y., one of the seven sons of his parents, and came to Illinois as a farmer in 1855, settling on a property in Grundy county bordering on Kendall county, where he lived for five or six years. In 1861 he embarked in the hotel business at Sandwich, Ill., and later owned hostleries at Princeton, Oregon, Sterling and finally at Rock Island, where with his son, J. Frank, he conducted the Rock Island House until 1890, in which year he retired from business activity. His death occurred in 1908, while his widow, who survives him, still makes her home here. J. Frank Munger had one brother, G. E., who died at the age of eighteen months, and his parents adopted a daughter, Margaret, who still lives with Mrs. Munger.

After leaving the common schools, J. Frank Munger took a course of two years in the Princeton High School, and he then became a telegraph operator on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, where he remained six years, then engaging with his father in the hotel business, under the firm name of William H. and J. F. Munger. When his father retired from business, Mr. Munger became timekeeper for the Rock Island Plow Company, but at the expiration of two years he engaged as bookkeeper and office manager for Davis & Company, which concern closed out its business some time afterwards. Mr. Munger was appointed chief auditor of the Modern Woodmen of America in 1895 and this office he holds at the present time.

He also holds membership in the Court of Honor and the Knights of the Maccabees, as well as the Presbyterian Men's Club, he being a member of that church. In politics he is a republican.

On May 25, 1885, Mr. Munger was married at the home of the bride, on a farm in Ogle county, Ill., by the Rev. Hoyt of the Presbyterian Church, to Celestia E. Crowell, who was born February 15, 1862, in Marion, Ogle county, Ill., daughter of Putney and Mary E. (Blakely) Crowell, the former born February 13, 1835, in Hopkinton, Vt., and the latter June 30, 1845, in Illinois. Mr. Crowell died on his farm in 1895. Mrs. Munger had one brother, Frank, who died in infancy. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Munger, namely: Guy E., born July 31, 1886, who became a mechanical engineer through a college course and is connected with the John Deere Plow Company, at Moline, Ill.; Nina M., born September 15, 1888, who is a clerk in the office of the Modern Woodmen of America; and Hazel M., twin of Nina, who is a musician and located at Pueblo, Col.

MUNGERSON, Frank A., an energetic young farmer of Bowling township, Rock Island county, has spent his entire life in agricultural pursuits. He was born at Cable, Ill., March 11, 1875, a son of Charles and Christina Lindstrom, natives of Sweden. The father was born in July, 1841, and came to America soon after his marriage, settling in Cable, where his wife died April 2, 1875, at the age of thirty-eight years. She was the mother of five children: Frank and his twin sister, Amanda, the latter of whom died at the age of five months, were the youngest; Edwin lives in Kansas; John was accidentally drowned in Kansas, and another daughter died when young. The father was married (second) to Matilda Swanson, who bore him two daughters, Phoebe, Mrs. Peter Alstead, of Saline, Kan., and Sadie, Mrs. Alfred Alstead, of Smolan, Kan.

Frank A. Mungerson was but a few weeks old when his mother died and he was adopted by Jonus and Marie (Sammett) Mungerson, the former of whom was born in Sweden May 22, 1820, received a common school education and learned the trade of shoemaker, which he followed in Sweden in connection with farming. He was married there December, 1841, and some years later came with his wife and their four children from Gothenberg, Sweden, to New York city, thence to New Windsor, Ill., where he spent a few months with friends, and in September of the same year (1871) located in Cable and worked in the coal mines there four years. He then rented a farm and later lived in the vicinity of Preemption and Reynolds until he purchased the homestead now owned by his adopted son and a daughter.

Jonus Mungerson and wife had the following children: Matilda, who lives at home; Charles, who lives in Rock Island county; Edward, who died in infancy; Sophia, who died at the age of nine years; Emma, Mrs. J. M. Anderson, who lives at Houston, Tex.; Claus, who died in infancy; Claus (2), who lives at Taylor Ridge, Ill.; a child who died in infancy; and Katrina Sophia, who died in infancy. Frank Mungerson, their adopted child, was reared as one of the family and has done credit to his foster parents. Jonas Mungerson died August 12, 1910, and his wife June 14, 1907. They were originally Lutherans but for the last few years of her life Mrs. Mungerson attended the Methodist Episcopal church. She was an earnest Christian and a woman of high character. She was the only mother Frank Mungerson ever knew, and he, as well as her own surviving children, revere her memory. Mr. Mungerson was held in high regard in the community where he located permanently. In 1896, he purchased an eighty-acre farm on sections 16 and 17, Bowling township, and in 1905 deeded it to Frank A. Mungerson and his daughter, Miss Matilda Mungerson, his oldest living child.

Frank A. Mungerson was reared on various farms in the vicinity of Preemption and Reynolds, and attended the local schools during the winter months until he was eighteen years old. He remained with his foster parents until their death and cared for them and their interests in every way. He is an independent voter and much interested in the welfare and development of the community. He is an industrious and able farmer and enjoys a very pleasant home, the farm being well developed and brought to a high state of productiveness. Mr. Mungerson and his sister are well known and have many friends.

MUNSON, Nels A., formerly foreman of the Cady Rock Crusher Company, is a man who has fought his way upward through sheer energy and persistence. He is one of the indomitable men of Rock Island county who have conserved their energies towards the development of natural resources, and the utilization of them to practical purpose. He was born in Sweden, August 8, 1873, and is a most excellent example of what his countrymen can accomplish under the favorable conditions of this land. Mr. Munson is a son of Nelson and Bothilda (Swenson) Munson, both born in Sweden. After receiving a common school education in Sweden, Mr. Munson decided to come to the United States, realizing that more opportunities were afforded here than in his own land. He arrived here in 1892, and came direct to Moline, where he obtained employment in the Dincock-Gould Lumber Company. Through faithful discharge of his duties, he established a reputation for capability, and in 1901 was made foreman of the Cady Rock Crusher Company, the largest concern of its kind in the county. In 1908, seeing a good opportunity, he opened what is known as the Mid-River Ice and Coal Company, in East Moline, and has developed a large ice and coal business in that locality.

The success which has attended his efforts is due to his willingness to work hard and faithfully, and his ability to save his money and make good investments. No man stands higher in the confidence of those who know him than he, and his prosperity has been of his own earning. The Cady Rock Crusher Company is located between Moline and East Moline, while Mr. Munson's other enterprise is situated in East Moline, so he is interested in the development of the entire region comprised in both cities. Mr. Munson is a member of the Swedish Odd Fellows, and enjoys his fraternal connection. In 1904, he married Justina Swenson. Such men as he, hard-working, faithful and capable aid very materially in the onward progress of any section in which they may locate.

MURPHY, James F., the senior member of the law firm of Murphy & Larson, of Rock Island, was born in Chebanse, Ill., on July 14, 1877, a son of Patrick and Bridget (Clabby) Murphy. He attended the public school of Chebanse for a number of years and then from March, 1892, to June, 1897, was a student at St. Viator's college at Kankakee, Ill., and from September, 1897, to June, 1900, was at Notre Dame university; was admitted to the bar in 1900, and practiced for a time under William J. Hynes, one of the leading trial lawyers of Chicago. In September, 1901, he located in Rock Island, and in 1908 he formed a partnership with Nels A. Larson, the firm now enjoying a substantial practice. Mr. Murphy is secretary of the Trio Manufacturing Co., vice president as well as a director of the Crowley-Sallshury Construction Co., a diector in the East Moline Sash & Door Works, the Peoples National Bank and German Trust & Savings Bank.

On August 8, 1906, Mr. Murphy was married to Alice Eleanor Hayes, who was born at Annawan, Ill., April 24, 1884, a daughter of Cornelius and Margaret Jane (Smith) Hayes. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy have three children: Hayes Francis, born June 14, 1907; Myron Jerome, born July 18, 1910; and Patricia Maria, born March 15, 1912, deceased. Mr. Murphy is a member of the Knights of Columbus and has served as district deputy for Illinois in that organization. He also belongs to the Rock Island Club, and in politics he is a republican, while his religious affiliations are with the Roman Catholic church.

MURPHY, James H., a retired coal miner, who after years of the hard, unremitting work required of those who labor below the earth's surface to produce that very necessary article of commerce, coal, is now comfortably situated at Milan, Ill. He was born in Rural township, this county, February 26, 1861, so is one of the native sons of Rock Island county. His father was James Murphy, who was born in Ireland, and married Annie Burren, a native of Pennsylvania, after he came to this country. James Murphy was a general laborer and an honest, industrious man, who came to Rock Island in 1849. He and his wife had four children: James B. who served in the Civil war in Company K, One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Illinois

H B Wyli & Family

Volunteer Infantry; Charles who lives at Boden; James H. and Ellen who married L. L. Fuller of Rock Island.

James H. Murphy was educated in the public school of Black Hawk township, attending school until he was fourteen years old. At that time he was forced to abandon his studies in order to help to support his mother who had been left a widow in 1875. The lad secured employment in the paper-mill of George Hakes, there learning the business of paper making, and continuing there for seven years. In the latter part of 1881, Mr. Murphy moved to Greenwood, Kas., where he spent eighteen months, but returned to Rock Island county. In 1883, he began working in the coal mines of Coal Valley, and thus continued until his retirement several years ago.

In 1889, Mr. Murphy was married to Mrs. Emma Von Ach, widow of August Von Ach, who died in 1887. Mrs. Murphy was born in Germany. She had two children by her first marriage, Frank Von Ach, born May 6, 1886; and John, born July 28, 1888. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy have had two children; a daughter who was born March 4, 1890; and a son who was born September 2, 1893, and is now working on a farm in the vicinity of Milan, Ill., although both he and his sister reside at home. Mr. Murphy belongs to the Roman Catholic church.

MURPHY, Joseph Edwin.—The handling of real estate and the writing of insurance policies constitute a line of business that engrosses the attention of some of the most substantial men of Moline. These two lines of endeavor have been the roads which have led many to affluence and civic prominence. One of the men thus engaged is Joseph Edwin Murphy, whose office is conveniently located in the Mechanics & Merchants Bank building, Moline. Mr. Murphy was born in this city, August 9, 1881, a son of James H. and Mary (Sparks) Murphy. The father was born in Connecticut, and is still living, making his home in Moline, being a traveling salesman for a machinery house. The mother died April 14, 1908. These parents had five children: Lucy A., whose death occurred in December 1912; Mary E., who is the wife of John Cunningham of Moline; Margaret J.; Alice L., and Joseph E.

Joseph Edwin Murphy attended the public schools in Moline, and when he had finished his educational training, began working for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. Later, he was with the Pennsylvania Railroad, rising from tracking to be chief clerk, and freight solicitor, holding the latter position for six years. Leaving the Pennsylvania road, he went as freight solicitor to the New York lines, continuing thus until 1909, when he embarked in business for himself. Mr. Murphy does a general real estate business, buying and selling realty and stocks and bonds, and writes up insurance, representing a number of the old line companies.

Fraternally, he is very active, belonging to Knights of Columbus, Elks, Eagles, being secretetary of the last named, and past grand knight of the Knights of Columbus. He was esteemed leading knight of the Elks. Mr. Murphy belongs to the people's party of Moline, and has been its local chairman. A live, energetic young man, he has already built up a large business, and is steadily forging to the front. Expecting to make Moline his permanent home, he is deeply interested in its progress, and is willing to do all in his power to advance the best development of this locality.

MURPHY, Thomas J.—The representatives of the Irish people in Rock Island are many, and this contingent is held in high esteem because of the sterling characteristics of this race. Warm-hearted, quick to respond to any call upon their sympathies, brilliant of intellect, and able to forge ahead to positions of trust and responsibility, they are welcome in any community. One of the able men who is proud to call himself a son of the Emerald Isle, is Thomas J. Murphy, of Coal Valley, Rock Island county. He was born in Bonmahon, Parish Kill, County Waterford, Ireland, August 1, 1844, being a son of William Murphy, and a grandson of William Thomas Murphy. The old way of writing the name was O'Murich, and the family came originally from Tipperary and Wexford counties. The patriot priest, Father John Murphy, of Revolutionary fame was a member of the same branch of the family. Both the grandfather and the great-grandfather of Thomas J. Murphy fought in the Revolution of 1798.

In 1815 William Thomas Murphy married Ann Power, who, on her mother's side, descended from the Wise (or La Wise) family of France. The second William, father of Thomas J. Murphy, married Alice Jordan, February 6, 1843, and she was a daughter of James and Mary (Murray) Jordan. William Murphy, Jr., worked in the copper mines at Bonmahon, and Mr. Murphy distinctly remembers many incidents connected with the work in them. He attended school in the parish, but his advantages were poor. When he was only four years old, his father left to come to the United States, and when he was seven, his mother, a brother James, his grandfather and grandmother Murphy came, arriving in 1851. The grandmother died within two days' sail of Boston, Mass. He remembers all of the various changes and occurrences of the long voyage, including the death of his grandmother and her burial at sea. After their arrival, it was deemed necessary for the father to set out once more to look for work, and more than a year elapsed before word came from him. Then he wrote, sending money for his family to join him at Gosport, Ind. Before they could come, James sickened and died, and was buried in the cemetery at Lowell, Mass., and then they once more journeyed to rejoin the father. During the summer of 1853 they lived along the White river, Indiana, the father working in a rock quarry, but in the fall they moved to Yellow Creek, Ohio, three miles below Youngstown. In the spring of 1854, they moved to Slabtown, Ohio, thence, in the fall, to Darlington, Beaver county, Pa., in order that the father get work in the coal mines, but the winter was a hard one, and employment scarce. Mr. Murphy well remembers the kindness of his associates, who, pitying the little lad who had only corn bread to eat, used to share the contents of their dinner pails with him.

In the meanwhile the father had come to Illinois, and worked in the coal mines at La Salle in 1853, but returning to Pennsylvania, he took his family to Pittsburgh, but unfortunately arrived just as the miners had gone on a strike. Then they started for Omaha, Neb., via St. Louis, but upon arrival at St. Louis there learned it would be dangerous to continue further west on account of the Indians, who had been very troublesome. The little party took a boat for St. Paul, Minn., but were stopped just below Rock Island by the ice. They, therefore, located in Rock Island, remaining until April 1, 1857, when they tried to resume their journey, only succeeding in getting as far as the foot of Lake Pepin before there was more trouble from the ice, but eventually they reached St. Paul, and landed their little possessions. In doing this, the father injured one of his hands and was unable to work for two weeks, but meeting an old friend, Thomas O'Connor, they threw their lot together and managed to get along, although they endured many hardships. The little lad went to the Catholic Brothers' school, and it was while living in St. Paul that he was confirmed by Bishop Smith of Dubuque, Iowa.

Work in St. Paul was found to be scarce, pay poor, and provisions dear, and then there was trouble from the Indians, and so the father decided to return to Rock Island. They arrived here without serious mishap, and the head of the family obtained employment with the Coal Valley Mining Company, then building a railroad from Rock Island to Coal Valley, a distance of twelve miles. In the spring of 1858, the father built a small house on two lots, and for the first time since coming to America, the family were comfortable. Still work was hard to get in the mines, and the pay very poor. Giving up the idea of securing any more schooling, Thomas J. Murphy began working in the mines. There were exciting times, and as 1860 dawned, the young fellow began to take a lively interest in politics, although not bound to any party, only content to follow the leadership of the man who had been poor like himself, Abraham Lincoln, the one-time rail-splitter.

With the outbreak of the war, Coal Valley was not found lacking in patriotism, for nineteen men enlisted almost immediately in Company D, Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, the greater part of which was raised in Rock Island. Mr. Murphy tried to enlist in the Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but was refused for he was not yet eighteen years old, but he kept on drilling with a number of his associates. His father had enlisted in Company II, Thirty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and he burned to follow his example. In June, 1862, he and several others tried to enlist in the Thirty-seventh regiment, but were refused, but finally another company was recruited in Coal Valley, and after much consultation with his mother, Thomas J. Murphy was the fifth to sign his name on the second day of August, the day after he was eighteen years old. After many changes, this company became a part of the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and brave boys they all were. Mr. Murphy tells many side-splitting anecdotes of his experiences in the various camps to which his company was assigned, but space cannot be here given to them. Mr. Murphy participated in the capture of Humboldt, Tenn., of which he gives a stirring account; the battle of Chattanooga; siege of Vicksburg; campaign of White River; Little Rock campaign; Red River campaign; and Pine Bluff, being kept here for some time on special duty.

On the return of the soldier boys to Coal Valley and other parts of Rock Island, the good housewives outdid themselves in providing good things for them to eat, while the girls received them as the heroes they were. Mr. Murphy had gone away a beardless youth of just eighteen, and returned a seasoned veteran, looking and feeling much older than his years. On February 4, 1866, he consummated a romance begun in childhood by marrying at St. Mary's Catholic church in Rock Island, Father McElhehorne officiating, Miss Annie Callahan, daughter of Richard and Ellen Callahan. She was a little over seventeen years old, and he not much past twenty-one. They were poor, but love dwelt with them, and their happy married life only ended with her death, January 11, 1910. Her burial was in the Coal Valley cemetery. In time they managed to get a little house of their own, which they built on land belonging to his parents, and when the latter died, Mr. Murphy inherited it. Twelve children were born in that house: six boys and six girls, three of the boys dying. The living children are: Thomas R., married Kate Bardsley; John A., married Lizzie Studer; Joseph J., married Stella Jan Kousko; Alice, married John McGraw; Anna E., married Ross Ulman; Hannah, married George W. Park; Mary, A., married Edward Normoyle; Josephine; and Cecelia, married Albert H. Ellis, on July 22, 1911. These children settled about their parents, all residing within a couple of hours' travel of the homestead. All were born in Coal Valley, and there are twenty grandchildren.

It was Mr. Murphy's intention, upon his return from the war, to enlist in the regular army, for he liked the life, and had proved himself upon numerous occasions as worthy of the fullest confidence and capable of discharging heavy responsibilities, but fate decided otherwise, and he developed into as valuable a private citizen as he was a good soldier. Mr. Murphy has some very strong views relative to army life. He believes, and has without doubt carried out in his own life, the truth of his statement, that soldiers are not harmed by service. Being forced to obey their superior officers, they learn the importance of submission to those in authority, and when they return to private life it is easy to conform to the laws. Having lived through the hardships of war, they appreciate the comforts of peace.

Mr. Murphy has oftentimes contributed valuable papers relative to his war service and recollections of early conditions not only in Rock Island county, but the country at large. He draws a vivid picture of the struggles of the early emigrants, who, willing to work hard, were driven from place to place in search of employment. Such descriptions as these do much to enlighten people and make them appreciate the debt owed those pioneers of civilization who endured much that never comes into the lives of the present generation. Mr. Murphy is a typical Irish-American, and his friends are to be found wherever he has been. Genial, warm-hearted, generous to a fault, he is beloved by many, and esteemed by all.

MURRIN, John A.—Among railroad men of a quarter of a century ago, the name of John A. Murrin will be easily remembered, as from the time he finished his educational training until his retirement from railroading, he served various companies in the capacities of fireman and engineer. He is now engaged in a successful livery business at No. 1615 Third avenue, Rock Island, and is numbered among the substantial men of his community. Mr. Murrin was born in County Donegal, Ireland, May 12, 1854, a son of Edwin and Mary (McHugh) Murrin, also natives of County Donegal, where the former was born in 1818 and the latter in 1828. When Mr. Murrin was but a small lad his parents brought him to this country, and here both resided until their deaths in Rock Island, the father passing away in 1892, and the mother, May 6, 1911.

John A. Murrin attended the common schools of Rock Island, and as a youth decided that he would take up railroading for a career, subsequently securing employment as a fireman on the Rock Island & St. Louis Railroad, now the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, where he remained until 1888, the last thirteen years of which period he handled the throttle as engineer. From 1889 until 1899 he was superintendent of the Rock Island water works, and in the latter year he embarked in the livery business at Rock Island, in which he has been engaged to the present time, meeting with much success. He is a member of the Woodmen, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Western Catholic Union, and the Knights of Columbus. In political matters Mr. Murrin is a democrat. Mr. Murrin is connected with St. Joseph's parish of the Roman Catholic church, where he was married January 31, 1883, by Rev. Father Thomas Mackin, to Miss Missouri E. Pierson, who was born in Indianapolis, Ind., April 7, 1862, daughter of Joseph and Ellen (McCarty) Pierson, the former a native of Yorkshire, England and the latter of County Cork, Ireland.

Three children have been born to this union: Nellie, Mary and Blanche. The comfortable family residence of Mr. Murrin is situated at No. 1030 Twentieth street, Rock Island.

MYERS, William Frederick, M. D.—Germany leads all other countries in scientific advancement. Her physicians and surgeons have contributed more towards the betterment of humanity and the alleviation of pain and the destruction of disease than those of all the other countries combined. Every year something new is given to the world, which is the result of a lifetime of earnest study and countless experiments on the part of these learned scholars of the Fatherland. Some of the best physicians of the United States are of German birth, and among those of this class in Rock Island county is Dr. William Frederick Myers of Coal Valley, Ill. He was born in Germany, in 1867, being a son of Frederick and Mary Ann (Heyl) Myers. The father was a cabinet-maker in Germany, and is still living, but the mother died when Dr. Myers was but a child. They had three children: Jacob and Ernestine, both residing in Germany, and William Frederick of Rock Island.

William Frederick Myers attended school in his native land. When sixteen years old, he came to the United States, and joined his uncle, who was a carpenter at Rock Island county, Ill. The lad was not content to remain long in any one place, but traveled about to some extent and in Louisville, Ky., he began the study of medicine, attending the Hospital College of Medicine, in that city. Coming back to Coal Valley, he began the practice of his profession, which he has since successfully continued. His practice is a large and constantly growing one, for his skill is generally recognized, and his sympathetic manner and genial personality make him a favorite socially as well as professionally. In addition to other interests, Dr. Myers owns 700 acres on Section 1, underlaid with coal.

In 1896, Dr. Myers married Laura H. Myers, born in Coal Valley, Ill., and two children have been born to them: William Henry and Charles Frederick. Until the free coinage of silver became so strong a doctrine with the democrats, Dr. Myers adhered to that party, but since then has been a republican. He is a Mason, and active in fraternal affairs. Young, energetic, possessed of the confidence of all who know him, Dr. Myers is easily one of the leading men of his community, and his influence has always been directed towards the moral uplift of the people.

NAAB, Carl.—The wholesale and retail handling of meats has grown into mammoth proportions to meet the enormous demand for goods of this class, not only in this country, but all over the world. This line of business is one that has been developed by men of keen business sense, who recognized the possibilities of it, and brought about its present proportions.

One of the reliable meat men of Rock Island county who bore an important part in this onward movement, is Carl Naab who with his father and brother, has devoted strength, time and energy to make the family name stand for purity and quality. Mr. Naab was born at Rock Island, April 22, 1874, a son of Christian and Rosa (Hartel) Naab, the former born in Bavaria, Germany, March 5, 1852, and the latter born in Rock Island, January 25, 1857. Christian Naab was a butcher, who came first to New York, and then to Rock Island, early in the seventies. Here he met his future wife, whom he married at Rock Island, February 10, 1873. Their children were as follows: Carl, Joseph, Frederick, John, Christian, Thomas, Agnes, Mary, Lucy, Rosa. Joseph is married, but the rest are unmarried. Mr. Naab died early in 1911, but the business he founded is being carried on by his two sons, Carl and Joseph.

Carl Naab attended the common schools of the city, and then entered his father's butchering business, growing up in it. It is a large wholesale and retail meat and fish market, in a thriving condition, and patrons receive the best of meats, while the prices quoted are as low as is consistent with the high quality. In political faith, Mr. Naab is a democrat, and he served very acceptably as alderman, from 1902 to 1904, and again from 1910 to 1911, retiring on account of change of form of government. Fraternally, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, No. 29 Local, St. John's Branch of the Western Catholic Union, the Krankan-Verein (German), and the Owls. Being a Catholic, he belongs to St. Joseph parish. He is an enterprising, enthusiastic business man, quick to adopt new methods, and to do everything in his power to increase his facilities and give his patrons the best of service.

NEBEL, Gottlieb, a well known resident of Rock Island, Ill., for the past thirty years, is an upright, honest citizen, who has many friends here. He owns a very comfortable residence at No. 1218 Seventh avenue, and for the past few years has been retired from active life. Mr. Nebel is a native of Germany, born December 1, 1835, a son of Daniel Nebel, who was a farmer, born in Germany, where he and wife spent their entire lives. There were several children in the family, but Gottlieb is the only survivor. In boyhood Gottlieb Nebel worked on his father's farm and attended the public school. Later he learned the trade of stove molder, which he followed in his native country until 1881, when he sailed for the United States, landing in New York. From there he came on to Rock Island, where he found employment with the Rock Island Stove Company, with whom he remained until his retirement. He had become a skilled workman in his line before leaving Germany and was one of the valued employes of the Rock Island company and won a reputation for high class work. By reason of his industry and good habits he prospered and has been able to accumulate several pieces of very desirable property in Rock Island. He is a member of the Lutheran church, and in politics is a democrat.

Mr. Nebel was married in Germany to Mrs. Anna (Paulsen) Erickson, daughter of Peter Paulsen. Her parents never came to America. Mrs. Nebel died in her home at Rock Island in September, 1911, the mother of nine children, five of whom are now living: Mrs. Anna Bachman, Hans Erickson, Mrs. Mary Ericks, and Martin Erickson, all of Davenport; and Mrs. Jennie Nissen, widow of Nicholas Nissen. Hans Erickson has four children: Anna, Mary, Ella, and Della; Mrs. Mary Ericks has two children: Daletta and Arthur; Martin Erickson has three children: Walter, Fleta and Martin; and Mrs. Nissen has three sons and one daughter: Edward, Elma, Harry and Walter.

NELSON, Andrew, a successful contractor of Rock Island, Ill., has been living in this city most of the time for the past forty years and has been identified with various interests here. He was born in Seldebrotten, Trykeved Soken, Wernmland, Lan, Sweden, June 16, 1884, and is a son of Nels and Brita (Olson) Ericson, natives of that country. The father was a farmer by occupation and both he and the mother spent their entire lives in Sweden, where she died about 1885, and the father in 1867. Andrew Nelson had one brother, John, who came to America with him in 1870. They landed in New York and came thence to Rock Island, where Andrew Nelson engaged in work as a carpenter, having learned the trade of cabinetmaker in his native country. He received a good common school education in Sweden and after learning his trade had done some contract work on his own account. Mr. Nelson has two other brothers: Swan, of Rock Island, and Charles, of Little Rock, Ark., who came to the United States after he did.

After living about one year in Rock Island, Mr. Nelson engaged in contracting in the line of plaster, stone and brick, in which work he continued about twenty years. He went to Mississippi and Tennessee in 1880-81 and did contracting there. He received his first patent October 30, 1906, for a machine he invented for manufacturing cement building blocks, and the patent on the improved machine December 17, 1907, being at that time the best machine of its kind in the country. He has established a factory for the manufacture of artificial stone for buildings, trimmings, steps, copings, cement walks and driveways, for which he takes contracts, and has worked up a large business in this line and stands well in business circles, being well known in his part of the state. He is a member of the Lutheran church and a republican in politics.

Mr. Nelson was married in Rock Island in August, 1873, to Caroline Kendgren, born in June, 1846, in Sweden. Mrs. Nelson had two sisters, who came to America and one is now living in Rock Island. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, namely: Jennie, born 1874, died 1881; Elmer Arthur, born 1883, died same year; Elmer R., of Rock Island; and Theresia, living at home, is employed in the M. W. A. office in Rock Island. There are two grandchildren in the family. Mr. Nelson owns a nice home at No. 418 Third street and another residence on Twenty-first street.

NELSON BROTHERS.—The enterprising members of the firm of Nelson Brothers, of Rock Island, cement contractors and manufacturers of cement products have, in the past few years, built up the largest business of the kind in the city. They are three brothers, two of whom, Robert and Charles, were born in Sweden John A. being born in Rock Island. Their names are: Robert Swan, John Arthur and Charles Oscar Nelson, sons of Swan and Matilda (Anderson) Nelson, natives of Sweden. The father was a brick mason in Sweden and he and his wife had three sons and three daughters. The family came to America in 1885 and the parents now live in Rock Island, where they are much respected.

Robert Swan Nelson was born in 1881 and received his education in the United States. He was married in 1910, in Rock Island, to Miss Emma Limburg, a native of that city, and a daughter of Henry Limburg, of German descent. She is a Lutheran in religious faith. One daughter has been born of their union, Roberta Marie. The two younger brothers, J. A. and C. O. Nelson were born in 1888 and 1884, respectively, and are unmarried. The three sisters are: Ella Matilda, who lives in Rock Island; Gertrude, who is the wife of E. E. Bossler, of Moline, a blacksmith's assistant; and Marie, who still lives in Sweden.

In 1907 the three brothers started in business on their own account, doing a general line of cement and brick contract work and manufacturing artificial stone, cement burial vaults, also designers and manufacturers of all kinds of cement products. They have won a good reputation in business circles in the county and have taken an active part in local affairs. John and Charles live at 1642 Fourteenth Street, while Robert lives at 1402 Eighteenth avenue. They are liberal in local politics and all are members of the Order of Eagles and the Mystic Workers. They are recognized as being among the best citizens of Rock Island and are held in high regard for their honest activities and their personal worth. All are upright and honorable in their dealings and all have many friends.

NELSON, Charles John, president of the East Moline Sash and Door Works, who is one of the men that by reason of his own success gives standing to his community, and has shown through prosperous experience how to organize enterprises of magnitude, is one of the representative citizens of East Moline. He was born in Sweden July 5, 1871, being a son of Edward John and Clara (Johnson) Nelson, both of whom are still living in Sweden, where the father operates the family farm.

Growing up in his native land, Charles John Nelson attended school, and assisted his father, but he was too ambitious to remain content there, and in 1891 came to the United States, stopping first in Pennsylvania, where he worked in coal mines. That same year, however, he came to Rock Island county and located in Moline, where he obtained employment as a laborer. Every cent he could spare was thriftily saved, and in 1907 he organized what is now known as the East Moline Sash and Door Works, of which he is president and general superintendent. The business shows a steady and healthy increase, and the product of the plant is recognized to be exceptionally good.

On April 4, 1894, Mr. Nelson was united in marriage with Flora Herring, in Rock Island. Three children have been born to them: Mae, Ceile and Arval. In city and county matters Mr. Nelson votes for the candidates of the republican party, but in presidential elections he feels that more attention should be paid to the character and ability of the man than to party platforms. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. Hard-working, thrifty, able to look ahead and plan intelligently for the future of his concern, Mr. Nelson has proven himself a valuable adjunct to East Moline, and his hearty co-operation is sought in matters looking towards the advancement of civic conditions. In addition to being identified with the East Moline Sash and Door Works, Mr. Nelson is a stockholder in the Trio Manufacturing Company, of Rock Island.

NELSON, Ezekiel, who for many years was engaged in agricultural operations in Rock Island county, is now living in retirement in the city of Rock Island, where he has a home at No. 714 Ninth street. He has been a lifelong resident of Rock Island county, having been born here August 30, 1845, a son of Ezekiel and Sarah (Williams) Nelson, the former a native of Logansport, Ind. and the latter of Kentucky. Ezekiel Nelson, Sr., was a farmer by occupation and located in Rock Island county in 1855, coming overland via prairie schooner and settling four miles east of Port Byron, where he entered land from the government and continued to farm until about twenty years before his death which occurred at Cable in 1880. His wife died August 22, 1852. He and his wife were the parents of thirteen children, of whom three are now living.

Ezekiel Nelson was educated in the public schools of Rock Island county and during his boyhood days worked on the home farm until enlisting for service during the Civil War on February 9, 1864, when he became a private in Company D, Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and his services were completed July 10, 1865, when he was mustered out of the service at Louisville, Ky. He then returned to Rock Island county and continued his agricultural operations until failing health compelled his retirement from active work. He is a member of John Buford Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and his services to his country have been recognized by a comfortable pension. In his political views Mr. Nelson is a democrat, and he takes a keen and active interest in public matters in Rock Island, although he has never found time to hold a position of public preferment.

March 18, 1871, Mr. Nelson was united in marriage to Mrs. Lucinda Haskins, whose maiden name was White, who was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., and came to Illinois with her brother-in-law, Jesse Newell and his wife Mary Ann and family at an early date. Mrs. Nelson's father was a farmer by occupation, and died in Pennsylvania when Mrs. Nelson was a child. Her mother survived him many years. To Mr. and Mrs. Nelson there have been born three children, namely: John F., who resides at home; Anna L., who married W. D. Koester, of Rock Island; and George W., also living in this city. Mr. Nelson is the owner of some valuable Rock Island county property and is looked upon as one of the substantial men of his community.

NELSON, Gus C.—Long experience combined with natural ability are necessary to insure success in obtaining a position of responsibility with any of the large concerns of the country. Moline, the home of many important industrial companies, numbers among its citizens many men who have been placed in charge of large affairs, and that they are discharging the duties pertaining thereto, speaks well for their responsibility. One of these men is Gus C. Nelson, general foreman of Borg & Beck Machine Shops. Mr. Nelson was born in Sweden, August 13, 1881, being a son of Frank and Margaret (Anderson) Nelson, both natives of Sweden. The father is night watchman of the concern with which his son is also connected, and is reliable and competent. He came to the United States in 1882, locating first at Lemont, Ill., but he came to Moline in 1897, working first for the Deere Plow Works, but later accepted his present position.

Mr. Nelson was educated in the public schools of Lemont, Ill., and learned the machinist trade. He worked at this trade with several concerns before engaging with Borg & Beck. After two years in their employ as a machinist, he was made general foreman, and since 1906, has held this responsible position to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. Mr. Nelson was married at Moline, October 23, 1902, to Margaret Canon, born in Moline, January 4, 1883, daughter of Gustave and Hannah (Nordstrom) Canon, natives of Sweden who came here in 1875. The father is now deceased, but his widow survives, residing in Moline. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have a daughter—Dorothy, born August 24, 1903, already attending school. Mr. Nelson owns his home at No. 538 Twentieth avenue, and also a piece of property on Thirty-eighth street,

The Swedish Methodist church holds Mr. Nelson's membership and receives his hearty support. An independent in politics, he votes for the man, rather than for a party ticket. His life is insured in the Bankers Life Insurance Co. Earnest, conscientious and faithful, Mr. Nelson is a man who lives up to his religious belief, and tries to do his full duty not only by his employers, but also by the men under him. Such a man makes a good citizen, and raises the general tone of his community, wherever he lives.

NELSON, John Alfred.—The fact that the Civil war soldiers who lived afterward often suffered more than those who died on battle fields, is not as generally appreciated as it should be. It was impossible for these men to undergo all they did without feeling the effects of these hardships and privations in after life, and few, if any, escaped without disability of some kind or other. One of the men whose heroism in working faithfully during the nearly half a century which has elapsed since he served his country is greater than that displayed when he went to the front, is John Alfred Nelson, a farmer of No. 1423 Twenty-fourth avenue, Moline. Mr. Nelson was born in Ostergotland, Sweden, December 28, 1845, a son of Nels Peter and Margaret Elizabeth Nelson, both from the same place. The father was a farmer. These parents came to the United States in 1851, locating first at Andover, Henry county, Ill., but later moved to Moline, where they died, the father about 1902, aged eighty years, and the mother in 1889, aged seventy-six years. The family farm was located on Moline Bluff, Moline township, and this the father operated as long as he lived.

John Alfred Nelson was educated in the Moline public schools, and brought up on a farm, learning early to work hard and faithfully. He left school to enlist, on December 25, 1863, in Company C, Sixty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, known as Birge's Sharpshooters, or Western Sharpshooters. He was wounded in the right shoulder in the battle of Atlanta, Ga., July 22, 1864, and sent home on a furlough, but recovered in time to rejoin his regiment and go with Sherman on his march to the sea. He also participated in the Grand Review at Washington, D. C., and arrived home July 9, 1865. Since then, he has lived in the city that is now his home, and has been employed on a farm and in shops. The service in the army having broken his health to a large extent, he has not found it easy to keep on laboring, but has done so, bravely and faithfully, and deserves much credit for his efforts. He owns his homestead where he lives. The Grand Army of the Republic and the Modern Woodmen of America hold his membership. The Lutheran church of Moline has been his religious home for years, he being a consistent member of it. All his life he has been a republican.

The first marriage of Mr. Nelson occurred in Moline, May 9, 1867, when he was united by the Reverend Benson of the Moline Lutheran church to Matilda Johnson of Rock Island. She died November 27, 1875. There were four children by this marriage, all of whom died young, except Alfred Leonard Nelson, who served two enlistments in Company F, Seventh United States Infantry, one at Fort Logan, Colo., and one in Cuba, the Philippines and Alaska. He died at West Newburg, N. Y., after getting his discharge, on his way home, May 31, 1902. Mr. Nelson was married (second) to Caroline Sophia Malm of Moline, on December 26, 1877, by the Reverend Zetterdahl, of the Moline Lutheran church. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have had six children: Arnold Ebenezer, born September 17, 1878; Carl Victor, born June 12, 1880, died a few days later; Carl Oscar Barnhard, born December 29, 1882; Joseph Elisha, born September 8, 1886; Clark John Phillips, born September 8, 1890, and Edmund David, born August 28, 1895.

NELSON, Mons.—Every branch of industrial activity is represented in East Moline, for this locality is not only a flourishing community, but furnishes a large contiguous territory that looks to it as a source of supply. For this and other reasons the city is constantly expanding, thus making heavy demands upon the contractors here, whose skill is called into constant requisition. One of those closely associated with building activities is Mons Nelson, a stone and brick mason. He was born in Sweden, in 1870, being a son of Nels Nelson, and came to the United States in 1892, locating at Rock Island. In 1899, he moved his business interests to East Moline, foreseeing its future growth, and in 1903, began contracting for himself. He is the largest brick and stone contractor at East Moline, and controls a fair majority of the work in his lines.

In 1905, Mons Nelson was married to Dora Odell of Moline. They have three children: Helen, Helmer and Elma. Mr. Nelson belongs to the Swedish Odd Fellows of Moline. Believing in exercising his intelligence in voting, Mr. Nelson does not bind himself with party ties, but gives his support to the best man. Hard-working, thrifty, willing to enter into a matter if he can see his way clear to the end, no matter how much effort is required of him, Mr. Nelson has firmly established himself in the business world, and won for himself some loyal, devoted friends who appreciate his many excellent qualities.

NELSON, Nels.—Government experiments and years of crop rotation combined with other causes have resulted in a remarkable development of the agricultural resources of Rock Island county, and the farmers of this locality are profiting from it. One of those who has become prosperous as a farmer is Nels Nelson, owner of eighty acres in Buffalo Prairie township. He was born in Skona, Sweden, August 24, 1846, a son of Nels and Ellen Nelson, both of whom passed away in their native land.

They had a family as follows: Hannah, Ellen, Nels, Elsie and Christian. Until he was fifteen years old, Nels Nelson the younger attended school, and he farmed and worked in a distillery until he was called upon for army service in the Swedish army. On October 17, 1872, he was married in Sweden to Annie Oleson, and after four children had been born to them, they decided to seek a new home for them, so came to the United States, arriving at Boston, from Liverpool, over the Allen line, in 1882. From that city, they came direct to Moline, Ill., where Nels Nelson secured employment in the Moline Wagon Shops, thus continuing in the wood-working department for twenty-six years. Having all this time, though, been anxious to own a farm, four years ago he bought one of forty acres planted in fruit. Later he added forty acres more, and moved upon the property three years ago. In 1896, Mr. Nelson lost his first wife. On December 25, 1897, he was married to Carrie Hornburg, born in Skona, Sweden, October 13, 1857, who came to the United States when she was thirty years old, landing at New York city, from whence she came direct to Moline. By his first marriage, Mr. Nelson had four children, two of whom survive: Olaf of Moline; and Nels. There is one child by the second marriage.—Gunard, aged eleven years. Mr. Nelson is a republican. He has always been a man of industrious, thrifty habits, and his success is certainly well merited.

NEWBERRY, George Washington.—One of the most responsible positions in the city government is that of chief of the fire department. Ever since the organization of this department for public protection to householders and business men from the destructive effects of fire, those belonging to such a department are forced to exhibit just as much bravery as any soldier on the battle field. During the years that have followed the fatalities have been numerous and the cases of serious injury so many as to be appalling. Within the past few years a terrible tragedy removed one of the bravest fire chiefs of the service from a sister Illinois city, and every head of a similar department risks a like fate each time he leads his men in their charge upon the deadliest foe known to civilization. Fortunately, however, these intrepid men seem to know no fear, and daily exhibit a heroism that seems almost unbelievable to the outsider. The fire chief of Rock Island belongs to this class of dauntless heroes, although with the real modesty of the truly brave, he is unwilling to lay claim to any undue amount of credit for his work. He was born May 3, 1864, a son of Charles S. and Mary (Grey) Newberry, both of whom were born in New York State. The father was a photographer, and continued in that line until his death, February 24, 1882. His widow survives, residing in Chicago, aged eighty-four years. She and her husband had five children, all living: Lizzie, widow of Robert Shaw; Clara, wife of C. J. Carl; Lella; Charles H. and George Washington.

Chief Newberry was brought up in his native city of Rock Island, attending the public schools until he had received a good education, when he began working with his father. Later, he was employed by the government as surveyor, but in 1889 returned to Rock Island and entered the fire department. So efficient did he prove himself, that in 1893 he was appointed driver at the central station, and in 1901 he was made captain. On May 4, 1907, he was made chief of the entire department, and under his wise and effective management, the entire system has been benefited to a remarkable degree.

On June 22, 1893, Chief Newberry was married to Kate Kanely, born in Rock Island. Four children were born of this marriage: George M., Lella Marie, Florence E. and Frank. The family belong to the Catholic church. The chief is very liberal in his political views, and is a broad-gauged man in every respect. His love for Rock Island is strong, and he feels that no other place will ever be his home.

NEWCOMB, Thomas (deceased).—The late Thomas Newcomb was prominent for many years in various circles at Rock Island, Ill., and was worthy of honor as a veteran of the Civil war. A stonecutter by trade, he helped in the erection of various buildings on Government Island, where he was employed for twenty years. He was born at Oak Creek, Wis., December 20, 1844, a son of John and Ellen (Norton) Newcomb. The parents were natives of Ireland and came to America at a very early day, locating first on a farm near Milwaukee, Wis. For a time they were engaged in the retail grocery trade at Aurora, Ill., and in 1865 they located at Rock Island. The father was a stone mason and worked for many years at this trade. He and his wife had children as follows: John, James, Daniel, Nicholas, Thomas, Edward, Frank, Charles, William, Mary and Ellen. The father died at the age of seventy-five years and the mother passed away February 14, 1911, at the age of one hundred and three years.

Thomas Newcomb enlisted in 1865 in Company F, Fifty-first Wisconsin Infantry, serving until August 7, 1865, and holding the rank of corporal. His brothers, Daniel and James, also served in the Union army. He moved from Rock Island to Springfield in 1888 and two years later went to Decatur, where he lived fifteen years, and then returned to Rock Island, living retired from active life for the last three years before his death. He had worked in Springfield for Cal Culver, and in Rock Island was employed for some time by J. H. Cleland, in the marble business, also for Mr. Oglehart, and as before mentioned, was employed many years on Government Island. He was an industrious and conscientious workman and had the esteem and friendship of his fellows. He had spent a large part of his life in Rock Island where he had a large circle of friends, by whom his death was sincerely mourned.

Mr. Newcomb was married September 14, 1876, to Miss Nancy McCarthy, daughter of Michael and Emily (Hall) McCarthy, of Kentucky. Mr. McCarthy was born in Cork, Ireland, in 1821, came to America at twenty years of age, and located in New York, whence he soon afterward moved to Kentucky. There he met and married Emily Hall, an orphan. Children were born to this union as follows: Mrs. Newcomb; Mary, wife of Nicholas Barry, Jr., of Muscatine, Iowa; Sarah, wife of Michael Kelly, of Rock Island; Daniel and Charles, both deceased. Mrs. Newcomb was born in Rockford, Ill., in 1854, and was married at Rock Island. Mr. Newcomb and wife became parents of the following children: Charles, who is employed by the Blake Specialty Company, of Rock Island; William, who is deceased; Mamie, who is the wife of Henry Lamb, a plumber; Thomas, who is a tailor in Peoria, Ill.; Johnny, who is deceased; Edward, who is foreman for the Blake Specialty Company, married and had one child, named Edward, who died February 14, 1909; Marie, who is the wife of William Kahle of Rock Island; Frank, who is shipping clerk at the Blake Specialty Company, married Mrs. Estella Johnson; and Nettie, who is deceased.

Mr. Newcomb died at his home in Rock Island December 31, 1895. His widow still lives in that city, where she has a large circle of friends. She has occupied her present residence, No. 217 Twelfth street, for the past six years.

NEWMAN, John.—The year 1911, marking as it did the fiftieth anniversary of the outbreak of the Civil War, centered special attention upon the veterans of that mighty conflict, and each community fortunate to have a living witness to the great deeds of those days, was glad to do him honor. Rock Island is the home of many of them, who not only were brave in war, but during the years that followed, have built up successful business houses, or engaged in the practice of one or other of the learned professions. One of the best known of these veterans is John Newman of Sears, this county, who conducts a transfer business. He was born in Greencastle, Greene county, Pa., April 15, 1836, a son of William and Martha (Wilson) Newman, natives of Pennsylvania. William Newman was a farmer in Greene county, where he lived until he went to Scioto county, Ohio, to continue farming. Here he died as did his wife. There were eight sons and nine daughters in their large family. Many of the sons served in the Civil War, and the grandfather of the family was a Mexican War soldier.

John Newman went to school in Ohio, and worked as a boy on the Ohio canal. After seven years on it, he engaged with the Dan Rice Circus, and traveled throughout the country for several years, after which he located at Fort Madison, O., and for several years more was kept busy at various kinds of employment. Still later he worked on the Mississippi river, finally going to Danville, Ill., where he farmed for a couple of years. He then went to Lynn county, Mo., where he spent six years, finally arriving in Rock Island county. Here he farmed until he established himself in a transfer business. He had enlisted in 1862, from Greene county, Pa., in the Sixteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, and until he was mustered out at Washington, was a brave and capable soldier. John Newman belongs to New Boston Post, G. A. R., and is interested in it. At Macomb, Ill., on February 22, 1867, John Newman was married to Almeda Bice, born in Ohio, October 24, 1845, a daughter of Nicholas and Elizabeth (Proctor) Bice, natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. Bice was a farmer, who moved to McDonough county, Ill., there farming until death claimed him. He and his wife had eight children, five of whom survive. Mr. and Mrs. Newman are the parents of five living children: Minnie, who is the wife of Henry Graff of Wisconsin; Oscar, who is also of Wisconsin; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Frederick Langrhear of Spriggville, Ia.; Rose, who is the wife of James Marburger of Muscatine, Ia.; and Mamie, who is living at home. There are fifteen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren in the family. Mr. Newman owns his home in Sears, and is a man of some means. His reliability is unquestioned, and he has many friends in the district in which he has made his home for so many years.

NEWTON, James Allen.—The call of the country, coming to the city man, especially if his progenitors have been agriculturists, is a strong one, and has been listened to by many individuals, who have found that their activities can be most profitably engaged in cultivating the soil. One of Rock Island county's representative farming citizens who returned to the occupation of an agriculturist after an experience in commercial life is James Allen Newton, the owner of a well-cultivated property in Black Hawk township. He was born in Rock Island county, Ill., May 26, 1882, a son of Charles F. and Anna (Griffiths) Newton, farming people of this county. James Allen Newton has three sisters: Maggie, the wife of Worth Ransom of Rock Island county; Julia, the wife of Louis Hamer, of East Moline; and Jennie, the wife of Julius Kolemman, of Moline.

James Allen Newton received his education in the public schools, and at the age of fifteen years began to work on the farms of the vicinity of his home as a hand, continuing as such until his marriage, October 21, 1903, to Miss Zella L. Park, who was born in Rock Island county, August 6, 1887, a daughter of George Park, who was engaged in farming in Rock Island county, where his death occurred in 1890, but his widow still survives. Mrs. Newton has one brother, John, a farmer of East Moline. Mr. and Mrs. Newton have one child: Harry Allen, who was born October 10, 1906. After his marriage, Mr. Newton was employed in the plow works of John Deere & Company until the fall of 1910, at which time he purchased the thirty-acre farm in Black Hawk township on which he is now carrying on agricultural operations.

He has brought his property to a high state of cultivation, has substantial buildings, and cultivates his land along scientific lines, getting the best of results from his operations.

NICE, Arthur W., whose farming operations are carried on on section 9, Black Hawk township, is one of the agriculturists of Rock Island county who has entered this field after spending a number of years in other pursuits. He is not the only one in his district who has listened to the call of the country, for there are a large number who have given up commercial pursuits in the cities to devote their attention to cultivating the soil, and the success which has attended his efforts has justified his proceeding. Arthur W. Nice was born in Buffalo, N. Y., February 13, 1874, and is a son of Carl Nice, a native of Saxe-Weimar, Germany, born July 11, 1832. Carl Nice came to America at the age of seventeen years and learned the trade of a machinist in Buffalo, N. Y., and in 1874 went to Mercer county, Ill. After two years there he removed to Rock Island county, and followed his trade in the cotton mills of Sears for a number of years, but is now living retired at Milan, having reached the age of seventy-nine years. Carl Nice was married to Emma Zable, who was born March 7, 1836, in Magdeburg, Germany, and came to the United States with her parents at the age of seven years. She died at Milan, May 5, 1893. Arthur W. Nice received his education in the public schools of Milan, completing his schooling at the age of sixteen years, at which time he learned the butcher's trade. After spending fourteen years in the butchering business, Mr. Nice learned the ship-caulker's trade and for about eight years was employed in the government boat yards at Silver Lake Harbor, Milan, but in October, 1910, he purchased his present farm in Black Hawk township. He is a member of Modern Woodmen Camp No. 67, of Milan, is a republican in politics, and was reared in the Lutheran faith.

On August 3, 1898, Arthur W. Nice was married to Miss Lydia Blaser, who was born April 4, 1878, in Biglin, Canton Bern, Switzerland, a daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth (Shepard) Blaser, the former born October 8, 1838, and the latter October 28, 1843, both being natives of Switzerland. They came to the United States in 1882 and settled in Rock Island county, where Mr. Blaser was engaged in farming until his death, in 1907. His widow is still living, at the age of seventy years. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Blaser, namely: Rosie, the wife of Henry Vonach, living at Milan; Gottlieb and Fred, of Rock Island county; Mary, the wife of Fred Hoover, of Rock Island county; Sophia, living in this county; Mrs. Nice; Elizabeth, the wife of Verne Castor of Mercer county; and Albert and Ernest, both of Rock Island county. Mr. and Mrs. Nice have had two children: Dorothy E., born October 4, 1899; and Arthur T., born March 27, 1904.

NICEWANNER, Alonzo, the owner of a thirty-acre farm lying along the banks of the Missisissippi river, is a native of Missouri, born December 25, 1855, a son of H. M. Nicewanner, a native of Maryland, born in 1818, and his wife, Rebecca (Brown) Nicewanner, born in Ohio. The mother died in 1864 and the father in 1897. Besides Alonzo there are three sons and two daughters who live in Iowa, one who lives in Dakota, and one who lives in Nebraska.

Alonzo Nicewanner came to Illinois, August 11, 1880, but soon afterwards located in Iowa, and two years later came to his present place, which is known as the Greenbush Farm and lies one mile west of Andalusia. He devotes some attention to stock farming, having an excellent dairy herd, but specializes in fruit. He was married August 11, 1880, to Miss Eliza Vanlaninghau, a daughter of John and Permelia (Littleton) Vanlaninghau, born in Indiana and brought to Illinois at the age of eight years. Her father died January 19, 1909, her mother surviving him. Mr. Vanlaninghau served during the Civil war, as did six of his brothers and a brother-in-law. Mrs. Nicewanner has one brother, Frank, and a sister, Gertrude, who married a Mr. Boney and lives at Carbon Cliff. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Nicewanner: Bertha, who is the wife of Frank Dunlap, of Rock Island; Dana E., who lives at home; Minnie, who is the wife of Edward Webster; Electra, who is the wife of Gilbert Lancaster, of Minnesota; and Floyd, who is at home. There are four grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Nicewanner and his son Dana belong to Andalusia Camp, M. W. A., he is also a Mason and he and his wife belong to the Eastern Star. Mrs. Nicewanner is also a member of the Royal Neighbors. He attends the Baptist church. Always a republican, for twelve years he was a school director. The entire married life of Mr. and Mrs. Nicewanner has been spent in this neighborhood. They represent the best interests of their community and are ready to advance every measure which seems to them calculated to forward any worthy object and benefit the people in general.

NICHOL, George, one of the pioneer coal merchants of the new town of Silvis, purchased the first lot that was sold here. He has built up a good trade at Silvis and the surrounding region and enjoys to a large degree the confidence and esteem of the residents. He has been active in public affairs, having served from 1909 until 1911 as treasurer of the village, and for some time was a member of the school board. Mr. Nichol is a native of Northumberland, Scotland, born March 11, 1855, eldest of the eleven children born to George and Mary J. (Myce) Nichol, eight of whom now survive.

George Nichol was a miner in his native land, and at the age of twenty-five years came to the United States and coming to Rock Island county found a position in the coal mines of Hampton. Six years later he left the mines and for two years conducted a furniture business, selling out at the time the town of Silvis was established. He worked in the car shops in the new town, to which he came with a Mr. Shannon, and was one of the first men to vote here. After he had been employed in the shops for about a year and a half his right arm was hurt and it has since been stiff, so that he had to give up work of that kind. In 1906, in company with Charles Hansen, he engaged in a coal business and soon afterward purchased the interest of his partner, since which time he has carried on the business alone. He now handles about one thousand tons of coal annually, and since 1908 has conducted a general hauling and transfer business. He also takes contracts for excavating, and employs three men and uses three teams of horses in this business.

In 1891, George Nichol was united in marriage at Rock Island with Anna Stephens, a daughter of John and Johanna (Davis) Stephens. They have two children, namely: Margaret Elizabeth, who died in 1894, at the age of two years and was buried at Decatur, and Myra Ada, who lives at home with her parents. Mr. Nichol is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is active in its work. He is well known at Silvis, and has done his part in securing the development and growth of the village, being ready at all times to further any cause for the general welfare of his community.

NICHOLS, Frank B., for some years past a resident of Coal Valley, Ill., is well known in various circles and is considered a representative, upright citizen, devoted to the best interests of the community. He is a native of Fayette county, Iowa, born June 24, 1871, and a son of Benjamin and Ellen (Reinheimer) Nichols. His father was born in New York and his mother in Canada. Benjamin Nichols and wife had eight children: Orlando, of California, who married Mary Engalls; Bell, of California, who married E. J. Topper; Carrie, who married Chas. Nichols of Iowa; Fred, who married Nora Bakeman of Iowa; Nora, who married John Nicholson of Nebraska; Frank B.; Nellie, who married Chas. Mische of Iowa; and Arthur, who married a native of Oregon.

Mr. Nichols attended the public schools of Independence, Iowa, and was reared to farm work, which he followed several years. He removed with his family to Thornburg, Iowa, and there in 1891 he was united in marriage with Ora Carr, by Rev. Jasper C. Smith of Iowa; she was born in DeKalb county, Ill., December 5, 1868, and a daughter of Edwin and Elizabeth (Dennis) Carr, one of six children: Jennie C., who married John Baker of Iowa; Eugene, who married Nellie Reill of Illinois; Frank S., who married Daisy Cameron of Rock Island; Ora E., George T. V., Mabel R., the two last being deceased.

In 1903 Mr. Nichols accepted a position as chief engineer for the Volunteer Coal Company of Coal Valley, which he filled satisfactorily until June, 1913, when he went with J. J.

Bryce & Son, in the same capacity. He brought his family to Coal Valley in 1904, and they have a nice home there. They have formed many friendships and are identified with the life of the community. Mr. Nichols is a republican in politics and belongs to the Fraternal Reserves, the Odd Fellows, and the United Mine Workers of America.

NICHOLSON, William I.—The history of Rock Island county would not be complete without the record of the lives of its agriculturists, for they form the very backbone of its existence. The country over, the farmers are the most important of the citizens, for from them come the foodstuffs that keep the world alive. One of the progressive farmers of the present day is William I. Nicholson, of Canoe Creek township, born August 5, 1870, a son of William F. and Mary J. (Smith) Nicholson, natives of Greene county, Ill., and Pennsylvania, respectively. Miles Nicholson, grandfather of William I. Nicholson, born in New York state, came to Coe township in 1839 and bought and improved a farm on which he lived until 1886, when he retired, going to Port Byron, where he died in 1899. William and Lilly (Welch) Smith, the maternal grandparents, were early settlers of Coe township. William F. Nicholson and wife lived in Coe township on a farm adjoining his father's which he purchased, but in 1891, he sold it and moved to Port Byron. After some years he went to Quincy, Ill., which is now his home. During the Civil war, he enlisted in Company H. Fifty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and after two years was made a corporal. He was with General Sherman in his historic March to the Sea, and during his long service, from the first call to the end of the war, he was shot but once, receiving a gunshot wound in his right foot. He and his wife became the parents of children as follows: Miles who is of Watertown; William I.; Jesse who is of Moline; Irene who died when nine years old; Albert who is of Rock Island; and Homer who died when seven years old.

William I. Nicholson remained at home until his marriage, when he rented land in Coe township for three years, and for two years in Canoe Creek township. Returning to Coe township he rented land for six years more, then rented land in Zuma township for three years. In 1905, he rented 175 acres of S. W. Woodburn, in Canoe Creek township, following which he bought sixty acres of his grandfather Miles Nicholson's original farm, which has always been owned by some member of the family. William I. Nicholson carries on general farming, and has been very successful in his operations. On November 19, 1891, he was married to Mary M. Kail, born near Port Washington, O., a daughter of John and Narcissa (Foreman) Kail, both of Ohio, cousins of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. They both died in their native state. The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Nicholson are, in the order of their birth as follows: Rozilla, Adam B., Eliza J., and Elzina. Mrs. Nicholson is the youngest of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson have had the following children: Jesse Verner who died at the age of two years; and Charter T., Lloyd F., and Altha Inez, all of whom are at home. Mr. Nicholson and wife are Methodists and energetic and devout workers in the church. He belongs to the Court of Honor of Joslin, and the Modern Woodmen of America. Mrs. Nicholson is a member of the Royal Neighbors No. 43. Live, thoroughly abreast of the times, interested in the development and uplift of the neighborhood, Mr. Nicholson is an excellent representative of the modern agriculturist and a worthy descendant of the sturdy pioneer Miles Nicholson, whose history is interwoven with that of the early records of Rock Island county.

NIKAS BROTHERS, proprietors of the Buffalo Candy Company at No. 324 Twentieth street, Rock Island, are natives of Greece, and young men of industrious habits and business ability. They are named Spiros and Jim, while a third brother, Tom, is working in East Moline. They are the sons of Vercella Nikas. Jim Nikas, in addition to being interested in the Buffalo Candy Company, has a pantatorium at No. 1928 Fourth avenue. In connection with the candy factory, they conduct an elegant ice cream parlor, and serve the best of dainties. These brothers came to America in 1905, and spent the first two years at Chicago. In 1908 they arrived in Rock Island county. For a time, they all worked in East Moline, but with the frugality and ability which marks the Greek people, they saved and invested, until they had sufficient capital to open up their present place. The brothers have a fine establishment, and make their own candy and ice cream, and handle cigars as well. Jim is twenty-three years old; Spiros is twenty-one years old, and Tom is nineteen years old. It is a remarkable fact that this line of business is almost entirely in the hands of people from Greece. They are all expert candy manufacturers, and know just how to make a success of their business, while their accommodating spirit and courteous manners bring them custom. These young men cherish the hope of inducing their parents, both of whom still survive, living two hours' ride from Athens, Greece, to come and join them in this country. Those who patronize the Buffalo Candy Company may rest assured of securing first-class goods at prices that are very low when the quality of the product is considered.

NISSEN, George P., justice of the peace, of Rock Island, is a man whose conservative judgment, keen understanding and broad sympathies, have been exerted for the public welfare, for the preservation of law and order, and the protection of the weak and unfortunate. He was born in Davenport, Ia., June 22, 1870, a son of Ingwer Peter and Maria Fredrika (Thomsen) Nissen. Both parents were born in Germany, where the father served in the army, and learned and followed the cabinetmaking trade. Upon his arrival in this country, in young manhood, he established himself in Davenport, where he worked as a carpenter. The death of this most excellent man occurred twenty-seven years ago, and his burial was in Rock Island where he passed away. At Davenport, he married Maria Fredrika Thomsen, who survives him and is now residing in Montana. They had ten children, four of whom died in infancy. Those still living are: Theodore, living in Montana; George P., August E., living in Davenport; Helena, wife of Sam Samuelson, living in Rock Island; Anna, wife of William Bailey; and Samuel L., living in Montana, a carpenter and farmer.

George P. Nissen lived in Davenport with his parents until six years old, when the family moved to Wilton, Ia., and there he attended the public schools for four years. The family then came to Rock Island, where he had the further educational advantages of four years more of school attendance and following this he worked with his father in a butcher shop for a year, when he engaged with the Rock Island Railroad Company, as car sealer, thus continuing for two years. Mr. Nissen then attended the Davenport Business College from which he was graduated in 1887. During the succeeding two years he alternated bookkeeping with braking on the Rock Island Railroad, and then gave all his time to this company for six years.

In April 1898, he enlisted in Co. F, 6th Illinois Volunteer Infantry for service during the Spanish-American War, going through the Porto Rico campaign, receiving his honorable discharge at Springfield, Ill., November 25, 1898. Returning to Rock Island, he served on the police force for a short time, and then, in 1900, opened an office as a general real-estate and insurance agent, handling properties and writing policies with all the leading old line companies. He also conducts a private detective agency, and in 1909, was elected a justice of the peace. Having seen something of the world, and made good use of his opportunities, Mr. Nissen has developed into a broad-gauged man, and is noted for the wisdom of his decisions, while his justice and equitable adjustment of matters has gained him a wide reputation. Mr. Nissen makes a specialty of handling Montana and North Dakota lands. Politically he is a republican in national matters, but very liberal in city affairs.

NORDQUIST, Jonas.—If Sweden did nothing else but give us our solid, reliable, industrious Swedish-Americans, in the eyes of the people here, it would be a great nation. These sturdy people from the far north bring with them such a persistent hopefulness and thrifty appreciation of opportunities, that they seldom fail to succeed and become prosperous citizens of their adopted land. One of these men is Jonas Nordquist, owner of 112 acres of land in Drury township, which he devotes principally to corn. He was born in Sweden, August 29, 1876, and came to this country, with his wife, in 1903. For five years he lived in Elisha township, Mercer county, Ill., but three years ago came to Drury township.

The father of Mr. Nordquist was a farmer and carpenter in Sweden, where he and his wife still reside. Jonas Nordquist therefore grew up amid agricultural surroundings, and naturally turned to farming when he came to this country. He was one of a family of eight children, four of whom came to the United States, the remainder staying in Sweden. In addition to working to help his father, Jonas Nordquist attended school. In 1909, prior to coming to this country, he married Cora Carlson. The money for their passage he earned himself, and when he had paid for their tickets there was but little left, so it was some time before he could commence buying land. With characteristic thrift, however, he and his wife soon had money saved up, and in addition to their farm, rent other land which he cultivates. Mr. Nordquist belongs to the Swedish Lutheran church, and is active in its good work. He is commissioner of his drainage district, and is a very efficient man in every particular.

NORRIS, William A., for over sixty years a resident of Rock Island, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil war, retired now from active life, and has occupied his present home at No. 914 Nineteenth street since 1867. He is of English descent, born in Crawford county, Pa., June 30, 1838, a son of James M. and Mary Lawrence Norris. The father, who was born in Vermont in 1810, was a cabinetmaker by trade, and when a young man went to Ellington, N. Y., where he was married. Later he went to Crawford county, then returned to Ellington, and in 1851 went to Rock Island, where he worked some years at his trade, and here his death occurred in 1893. He enlisted from Rock Island in the Sixty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry for service in the Civil war. He was a republican in politics. His wife died in Rock Island in 1891, aged sixty-nine years. In earlier life she was well known as an active worker in the Christian church, and during the Civil war the mother worked, with other loyal women, for the Sanitary Department of the Government. Children were born to them as follows: William A.; Wilbur F., of Altoona, Tex.; and J. Mark, who died at Manning, Iowa.

William A. Norris attended the public schools of Rock Island, and Smith's Academy, and later learned molding, with C. C. Weber & Company, but took up various occupations after learning the trade. He was the first postmaster of Sears, Ill., and later for several years was storekeeper for the government at Milan. He enlisted in September, 1861, as a private in Company I, Thirtieth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, from Mt. Vernon, Iowa, being a member of Crocker's Iowa Brigade. At the battle of Shiloh he received a gunshot wound through the body and was sent to the hospital at Mt. Vernon, Ind. Later he came home and re-enlisted in the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving until the close of the war.

David R Ziegler

He has a record of which he may well be proud, and is an influential member of Buford Post No. 243, G. A. R.

On December 25, 1866, at Rock Island, Ill., Mr. Norris married Sarah J. Tenny, who was born there December 29, 1842. Her mother died when she was two and one-half years old. She was taken by her aunt, Mrs. Lovinia Dow, wife of Samuel Dow, of Galesburg, Ill., and by her reared, receiving her education in Lombard University. Her father and mother were Sampson H. and Miranda (Jenks) Tenny, both of old New England families. Her great-grandfather Parker served in the Revolution. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Norris. They are Universalists in religious belief. Both have many sincere friends in Rock Island, being identified with the best interests of their community. He is a republican in politics and a member of the Court of Honor No. 31.

NORRLEN, Victor Martin, junior member of the thoroughly reliable firm of Lundberg & Norrlen, proprietors of the Electric Laundry and dry cleaning establishment at No. 1614 Fourth avenue, is a man who has developed his present prosperity through individual effort. Mr. Norrlen was born in Sweden in December, 1885, where his father John and his mother Anna (Swansen) Norrlen were also born, and passed away, the former in 1903, and the latter in 1901. After the death of his parents, Mr. Norrlen came to America. He had passed through the usual training given boys in his country, attending public school and being confirmed. After completing his school course, he went to work on a farm, thus continuing until his departure for a new home in America. Arriving in this country, he came direct to Moline, where he found employment in the shops of the Deere Plow Co., thus continuing until he entered into his present association, in 1908.

The laundry is conducted along scientific lines, and the machinery and other equipment is thoroughly modern, so that the class of work turned out compares favorably with that of any establishment of its kind in the county. The firm also carries on a dry cleaning and dyeing business, and the partners leave nothing undone to insure their patrons complete satisfaction, as they also work for such a consummation in the laundry. Although still a young man, Mr. Norrlen has proven his worth, and developed a business that is a factor in the commercial life of Moline. Individually, he is regarded with high esteem, and his firm is calculated to maintain its present standing in the business world.

NOWACK, William.—The dairy interests of Rock Island county are immense, and those concerned in promoting them are numbered among the wealthy men of this part of the state. One of those thus engaged is William Nowack, of South Rock Island. He was born in Germany, May 7, 1859, a son of Frederick and Christina (Schultz) Nowack, both born in Germany, where they died. There were six children in their family, three of whom came to America: William; Ernest, deceased; Henry, deceased. The father was employed in general work in different places all his life. William Nowack was educated in Germany, attending school until fourteen years old, when he went to work on a farm, thus continuing until he attained his majority. He came to America in 1881, sailing from Hamburg and landing at New York City, from whence he came to Rock Island. Here the independent German lad found employment in the saw-mill of the Weyerhaeusers, remaining there for thirteen years. Later he engaged in general farming, and continued this work for eleven years. In 1905, he bought his property at Seventeenth street, which continues to be his home.

In 1884, William Nowack was married at Rock Island to Emma Seidlitz, a native of Germany, whose parents never left the old country. She has two sisters in this city: Pauline, who is the wife of Fred Seidlitz, and Minnie, who is the wife of Fred Matthey. A brother, Albert, married Anna Kurth of Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Nowack have six children: Charles, Freda, Fred, Minnie, William and Edward. Freda married Henry Raithel, a teamster, and they have one child, Dorothy. The family belong to the German Lutheran church. Mr. Nowack is a member of Camp No. 309, Modern Woodmen of America of Rock Island. Mrs. Nowack is a member of the Royal Neighbors of America. They have many friends in this locality where their sterling virtues are appreciated. Whenever trouble or sickness enters a home, these good neighbors are to be found, giving sympathy and material aid. They live out in their lives the creed they profess in their church, and those coming into contact with them benefit accordingly.

NYENHUIS, Hiram Garrett.—The Nyenhuis family has been associated with agricultural matters in Rock Island county for a number of years, and representatives of it have developed fine farms in Drury township, one of them being Hiram Nyenhuis, owner of 148 acres of fertile land. He was born in Muscatine, Ia., August 28, 1870, a son of Garrett and Johanna (Boynik) Nyenhuis, natives of Holland, who came to the United States. After a stay in Baltimore, Md., Pittsburgh, Pa., and Rochester, N. Y., the father moved his family to Muscatine, Ia. By trade he was a cabinetmaker, but when he came to Iowa he farmed for a few years, and then established himself in a brick business, continuing it until he died in 1887, his wife having passed away in 1882.

Hiram G. Nyenhuis was educated in the public schools of Muscatine, and learned business methods with his father in the brick business. However, as he inclined towards farming, he took charge of a farm owned by his father in Drury township, Rock Island county, and in 1889, when the estate was divided, he secured 100 acres of it, later adding forty acres, his brother, Wendell Nyenhuis, taking the remainder. While Mr. Nyenhuis specializes on corn, he also raises cattle, horses and hogs, and is a very successful farmer. He has named his property Riverside Farm, which describes it, and indicates one of its desirable features.

On October 18, 1906, Mr. Nyenhuis married Jennie Ricketts, born in Drury township, near Illinois City. They have five children: Alice, James, Grace, Alfred and Richard, all at home. The Baptist church holds his membership and benefits from his generosity. Since casting his first vote Mr. Nyenhuis has been a republican. Steady, upright, hard-working, Mr. Nyenhuis is one of the leading men of his township, and is universally respected. In addition to his farming interests in Rock Island county, he also owns a half interest in some city property in Muscatine, Ia.

NYENHUIS, Wendell B., owner of the Moore farm, a property of 180 acres on section 6, Drury township, has proven himself one of the progressive agriculturalists of Rock Island county by his treatment of his land and the improvements he has made upon it. Mr. Nyenhuis was born in Muscatine, Iowa, in 1867, a son of Garrett J. and Johanna (Boyink) Nyenhuis, natives of Holland, who came to Baltimore, and later went to Pittsburgh. From the latter city, they went to Rochester, being there at the time of the great cholera epidemic, and that decided them to come to Muscatine. The father had learned the cabinetmaking trade in Holland and Berlin, and was a competent workman, but although he followed his calling in the East, after coming to Iowa, he farmed for a time, and then went into the brick business, in which he was interested until his death, in 1887. He lost his excellent wife in 1882. They had six daughters and three sons, nine children in all.

Wendell B. Nyenhuis grew up in Muscatine, Iowa, where he was given a good public school education. Leaving school, he went into the brick business with his father, continuing in it until 1910, when he came to Drury township, this county, and has since engaged in farming. He has built a large brick house and a commodious barn, and tilled his land, all of these improvements not only adding to the value of the property, but the comfort of the occupants. His principal crop is corn, and he has great faith in it.

On October 27, 1892, Mr. Nyenhuis was married to Amelia V. Frye, born in Pennsylvania, but brought west by her parents. Two children have been born of this marriage: Maura and Wendell, both at home. Mr. Nyenhuis belongs to the Baptist church. He is a Modern Woodman of America, and belongs to the Masonic lodge of Muscatine. Since casting his first vote Mr. Nyenhuis has been a republican, but the Progressive movement meets with his approval and support. In every way, he is a fine man, and not only has comfortable surroundings for his family, but provides a good tenement house for his help. Such men as he keep up the high standard of efficiency among Rock Island county farmers.

O'BRIEN, Andrew, a prosperous merchant of Barstow, is a native of Rock Island county, where his entire life has been spent, and where the family is well known. He was born at Carbon Cliff, Hampton township, November 1, 1862, the youngest child of John and Catherine (Murray) O'Brien, both of whom were born in Ireland. The parents came to the United States and settled first near Chicago, Ill., later removing to Hampton township, Rock Island county, and there they carried on farming the remainder of their lives. The father died in 1894 and the mother about 1889. They had children as follows: Phil, who is an employe of a railroad company, lives at Davenport, Ia.; Bridget, who is Mrs. John Hennegan, of Carbon Cliff; Trena, who is the widow of Stephen Eiker, of Moline; John, who is of Carbon Cliff; and Andrew.

Until attaining his majority Andrew O'Brien lived with his parents, acquiring his education in the public schools and early beginning to help with the farm work. His father's farm was located at Carbon Cliff, and upon starting out in life on his own account Andrew O'Brien became clerk in the employ of Clark Corbin, general merchant and postmaster at that place, where the young man worked six years. He then engaged in a similar business on his own account at Carbon Cliff, remaining there three years longer, and in 1895 moved his stock of goods to Barstow and placed them in the store that was being conducted by W. J. Swisher. Later he became assistant postmaster of Barstow under Mr. Swisher and held that position until he received the appointment of postmaster June 14, 1897. He has shown himself to be an enterprising and reliable merchant, dealing in a general line of goods and also carrying agricultural implements, having handled the latter since 1896. In 1904 he and Fred Klebe began conducting the creamery, which is owned by a stock company, and they make a high grade of butter, specializing on buttermilk. Mr. O'Brien is actively interested in everything affecting the general welfare and prosperity of his community and is held in high regard by all who know him, as a man of good moral character and integrity. He is a republican in politics and served one year as township collector in Hampton township, two years as township supervisor and four years as assessor. He is a Catholic in religious belief. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America at Carbon Cliff.

Andrew O'Brien was married June 24, 1903, to Catherine McQuaid, born at Cedar Rapids, Ia., but reared at Rock Island, where she was a teacher for many years. She is a daughter of Patrick and Elizabeth McQuaid, natives of Ireland. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien, namely: Catherine E., born March 29, 1904, and Irene, born June 23, 1906.

O'BRIEN, John (deceased).—The agriculturists of today bear but little resemblance to the old-fashioned farmer who was content to live and die on his homestead without having seen anything of the outside world. Today, the farmer is not content until he has seen what those of his class are doing in different parts of the country so that he may apply the best of their methods to his own work. One of these up-to-date agriculturists of Rock Island county was the late John O'Brien, of Carbon Cliff, Ill. He was born at Carbon Cliff, in May, 1862, a son of John and Catherine (Murray) O'Brien. These parents had nine children, of whom Mr. O'Brien was the fourth in order of birth.

During his boyhood, John O'Brien received a common school education, and remained at home until he had attained his majority. He then went to Grand Island, Neb., where he worked on a farm for one summer, but returned to Rock Island county and bought eighty acres of valuable farm land in Hampton township and continued to operate it until 1906, when in that year he rented his farm and returning to Carbon Cliff, interested himself along commercial lines. He made a number of trips throughout the country and was well posted with regard to farming operations in different states. A very active democrat, Mr. O'Brien was called upon to serve as road commissioner for three years and as trustee of Carbon Cliff for one term. In both offices he displayed ability and honest zeal for the welfare of the people. In religious faith he was a Catholic, and was a liberal supporter of his church. His death occurred August 11, 1912, and his memory is cherished by a wide circle of friends as well as by his family.

O'BRIEN, Thomas (deceased).—Years of faithful, earnest endeavor sometimes are properly rewarded not only by material prosperity, but also by the appreciation of family and friends. When a man whose character has been above reproach and whose business instinct was keen, passes away, the community loses what it is difficult to replace, a good citizen. The late Thomas O'Brien of Buffalo Prairie township was just such a citizen. He owned two fine farms, amounting to 210 acres, all in this township, and was a man of considerable moment in his day and locality. Mr. O'Brien was born in Ireland, about 1830, being a son of James and Mary (King) O'Brien. Although James O'Brien made two trips to the United States, one prior to the settlement here of his son, and one afterwards, he died in Ireland, as did his wife. They had three children: Thomas, Ellen, Mrs. Owen Sheridan, who died in Ironton, O.; and Michael who came to the United States later than Thomas, locating at Ashland, Ky., where he married Mary Morgan, reared a fine family and there died.

Thomas O'Brien was educated principally by himself, as his advantages along that line were meagre. He was brought up along the Irish coast, and fished and farmed for a living. Acting on the advice of his father, who had already been here, Mr. O'Brien came to the United States when he was twenty-one years old, and spent two years in Ohio, working on the Ohio-Chesapeake canal. He then went to Ashland, Ky., where he worked on various public buildings then in process of construction, owning his own horse and wagon. After five years, he came to Rock Island county, arriving here in 1870. He bought a farm, now owned by Albert Boneen, in Buffalo Prairie township, and later another property, of 130 acres, in the same township. Mr. O'Brien died on the latter, in 1903. He was a consistent member of the Catholic church of Edginton. Politically, he was a democrat. His widow died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Ferkle, in 1906.

Thomas O'Brien was married in 1856, to Miss Ann Conway, born in Ireland, who was brought to the United States by her parents. They settled at Ashland, Ky., where her father built a fine home and was a builder and contractor. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien had one daughter, Agnes, born in Ashland, Ky., February 13, 1857. She was thirteen years old when her parents came to Illinois. In 1877, she married James W. Kelley, who died in 1892, leaving five children.—Rose, Bertha who died at the age of seventeen years, Kate, Fred and John. Mrs. Kelley married (second) in 1905, George Ferkle, no issue. The family is one of the best known in Rock Island county, and Mr. O'Brien is well and favorably remembered by the many who knew and appreciated his excellent characteristics.

ODEAN, Martin William, an able representative of the contracting interests of Moline, residing at No. 311, Forty-sixth street, owns in addition, two residence properties on Fifty-first street, Moline. He is one of the substantial business men of Rock Island county. Mr. Odean was born in this city, in 1883, a son of John and Matilda (Anderson) Odean, both natives of Sweden; where the father was a pattern worker. He brought his family to Moline, from his native land, in 1870, and continued working here until his death in 1899. He and his wife had nine children, seven of whom are living in Moline. Charlie and Olevea, who are deceased; Frank, who is foreman of the pattern shop for the Moline Tool Co.; Amanda; Alma; Martin; Leans, who is assistant foreman to his brother Frank; Helen and Alice.

Growing up at Moline, and being taught habits of industry and thrift by his excellent parents, Mr. Odean attended the public schools, until he entered the employ of the Mutual Wheel Company at fifty cents per day. For five years, he continued with this company, and when nineteen years old, began learning the carpenter trade. Three years ago, he embarked in business for himself, and has proven his ability and reliability, executing and holding some very important contracts at Moline and in the vicinity.

On June 29, 1905, Mr. Odean married Bessie Olive Hummer, born at Moline. They have two children: Wallace Russell, and Mildred Violet. Fraternally, Mr. Odean is a member of the order of Odd Fellows. It is his belief that the doctrines held by the Socialists are those which will prove most beneficial to humanity at large, and belongs to that party.

O'HERN, Michael James, A. B., M. D., physician and surgeon at No. 326½ Twentieth street, Rock Island, is one of the skilled professional men of the county, one whose reputation extends outside the state. He was born at De Witt, Ia., September 11, 1877, son of Michael and Mary (Kelly) O'Hern, the former born in Ireland in 1845, and the latter in the same year at Vernon, Ind. The father came to America with his mother, Elizabeth O'Hern, and his two brothers, the father having died in Ireland. They located on a farm in Clinton county, Ia., where Michael grew to manhood, making it his home until 1874, when he moved to De Witt, Ia., to embark in a general merchandise business. This place continues to be his home. He and his wife were the parents of seven children, six of whom are living: Mrs. Margaret Conole; John; William; Michael J.; Alexander F. and the Rev. Father Frank O'Hern, S. J.

Michael James O'Hern was reared at home, worked for his father, and attended public and parochial schools. Later he went to St. Mary's College, of Kansas; St. Ambrose College, of Davenport, Ia.; Creighton University of Omaha; and Rush Medical College, of Chicago, from which last named institution he was graduated June 15, 1904. After graduation, Dr. O'Hern practiced medicine as an interne in St. Joseph's Hospital, Chicago, until December, 1905, and in the fall of that year located in Rock Island, where he has been in active practice ever since. Dr. O'Hern was a candidate for coroner of Rock Island county in 1908, on the democratic ticket, but was defeated. He is a democrat both by accident of hereditary connection and conviction. Fraternally he belongs to the Knights of Columbus, Modern Brotherhood of America, Modern Woodmen of America, W. C. U., Fraternal Aid Society, Western Catholic Union, Phi. Rho Sigma Medical Fraternity, and professionally to the Rock Island County Medical Society, and the Iowa and Illinois Medical Society. He is a young man who is enthusiastic with reference to his profession, and having been carefully trained, is recognized as one of the most successful men in general practice not only in Rock Island county, but a wide territory surrounding this section. Dr. O'Hern is a Roman Catholic. He is not married.

OHGE, Charles H. (deceased), was a well known citizen of Rock Island, Ill., who had been retired from active life the past few years and owned a comfortable home at No. 2607 Thirteenth avenue. He had been a resident of Rock Island for twenty-seven years and during that time had witnessed notable development in the city and its surroundings. He was a native of Holstein, Germany, born March 10, 1838, a son of John and Catrina (Harpe) Ohge, natives of the same country, the father born in February, 1815. The father, who was foreman of an estate in Germany, spent his entire life in his native country and died in 1872. The mother had died in November, 1847. They were parents of ten children, of whom there are five now surviving. One son and one daughter came together, to America and another daughter came a year later, and Charles H. came in 1865.

Charles H. Ohge received his education in the public schools of his native country and in 1855 began learning the trade of wagonmaker, serving four years as an apprentice. In May, 1863, he sailed for New York on the ship Bavaria, and landed after spending two weeks on the water. He came direct to Davenport, Ia., where he followed his trade one year, then came to Rock Island. He continued work at his trade two years, then engaged in business for himself in 1868, at Blairstown, Iowa, continuing with success until 1885, and then returned to Rock Island. From 1885 until 1908 he was employed as foreman for Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann, lumber dealers, and since then had been retired from active life. He had a wide circle of friends in the city and was recognized as an upright, useful citizen. He was a member of the German Lutheran Church and was affiliated with Camp No. 309 Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Ohge died January 8, 1913.

On December 7, 1867, Mr. Ohge was married at Davenport, Ia., to Sophia Reiners, daughter of Claus and Lena Reiners and one of eight children born to her parents, of whom five now survive. Besides Mrs. Ohge those of the family living in America are: John, William, Margaret and Antje. Eight children were born to Mr. Ohge and wife, namely: George and Louis, of Rock Island; Katherine, wife of Fred Musfeldt, a merchant of Rock Island; William, a saw-maker, of Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Marie, wife of Robert Seefeldt, of Rock Island; Anna, of Denver; and Clara and Anthony living at home. There are seven grandchildren in the family.

OHLWEILER, John.—Every branch of commercial and industrial endeavor, has its representatives in Rock Island, for this city has been from its earliest history an important center of business life. One of those who has assisted in maintaining this desirable supremacy for more than forty years, is John Ohlweiler, proprietor of a large bottling plant in Rock Island, the firm being Carse & Ohlweiler. He was born in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, February 2, 1843, but came to the United States at the age of seventeen years. Locating in Rock Island county, he learned the coopering trade, following it for some years.

Like many of his countrymen, when the Union was in danger, Mr. Ohlweiler enlisted, in 1862, in Company D, Seventy-first Illinois Infantry, for three months, and then re-enlisted, in January, 1864, in Company D, Twelfth Illinois Infantry. He was assigned to the Fifteenth Army Corps, under General Logan, and participated in a number of important engagements of the war, including Rome's Crossing, Resaca, battle of Atlanta of July 22, 1864, also the battle of July 28, of the same month, in front of Atlanta, these being the two most severe engagements of the siege of Atlanta; battles of Jonesboro, Altoona Pass, and finally the battle of Goldsboro, S. C. He participated in Sherman's famous "March to the Sea," and was also with Sherman through South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia, finally taking part in the grand review of the victorious army in Washington City in 1865. During his long service he was only off two days. Returning to Springfield, he was mustered out, and then came back to Rock Island.

Settling down in Rock Island, Mr. Ohlweiler resumed his ordinary occupations, at first engaging with his uncle, but later bought a business of his own, and was in the retail liquor trade in Rock Island and Coal Valley for three years. He then embarked in a soda water and bottling business, which he has conducted for forty years, at the corner of Eleventh street and Fifth avenue. His ginger ale has become famous and is recommended by physicians for use in families and for sickness.

On October 23, 1867, Mr. Ohlweiler was united in marriage with Anna Ehlers; no issue. Mrs. Ohlweiler died December 21, 1897, and is buried in Rock Island. On November 22, 1900, Mr. Ohlweiler was married (second) to Martha Rohweder. One son, William John, was born of this marriage. He is a bright little fellow, attending public school in Rock Island. Mr. Ohlweiler belongs to the Odd Fellows, being a member of Rock Island Lodge No. 18, in which he has passed almost all the chairs. He belongs to Rock Island Lodge, No. 980, of the Elks, of which he is a charter member, and is the oldest living member of the Rock Island Turners' Society. Of pleasing personality, Mr. Ohlweiler has made many friends, and is recognized as one of the solid men of his community.

OHRT, William H., whose residence in Rock Island, has covered a period of forty years, is a veteran of the great Civil war, and for many years was engaged in the transfer business in this city. Mr. Ohrt, who is now living retired, was born in Holstein, Germany, September 4, 1835, a son of Jacob Henry and Mary (Colman) Ohrt, the former born in 1800 and the later in 1815. Jacob H. Ohrt spent his entire life at Holstein, where he was employed as overseer of the forests, and where he died in 1861, his widow passing away several years later. William H. Ohrt had one brother who came to America in 1855 and enlisted for service during the Civil war, but after eighteen months took sick, and at St. Louis, when he was on his way home, he died in July, 1863. He has three brothers and three sisters still living in Germany.

William H. Ohrt was educated in the schools of Germany, after leaving which he learned the trade of ship carpenter, which he followed for one year. He then came to the United States, starting from Hamburg on the Capaucus, a sailing vessel, and landed at New Orleans, from whence, during the same year he made his way to Davenport, Iowa. In 1864 he enlisted from Davenport, becoming a member of Company C, Fourteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and served until June, 1865, when he was honorably discharged at Davenport, most of his service having been spent in guard duty. On his return to this city he was again engaged in general work for a time, and in 1871 he came to Rock Island, where he took up transfer work with Captain Garbert. After two years thus spent, Mr. Ohrt purchased teams and outfits for himself and he was engaged in the transfer business in Rock Island until his retirement in 1908. While a resident of Davenport, Mr. Ohrt served as a member of the police force for two years. He is a republican in politics, and a member of the German Lutheran church. His residence is at No. 614 Thirteenth avenue.

On August 13, 1855, Mr. Ohrt was married at Davenport, Iowa, to Mary Kulper, who was born January 15, 1838, daughter of John and Louis Kulper, who came to America in 1853 and located in Davenport, where the father carried on agricultural pursuits until his death in 1871, the mother passing away in 1885. Of their seven children but two survive, Mrs. Ohrt and a brother who lives in Davenport. Mr. and Mrs. Ohrt have had nine children, all of whom are now living: Lena, who married Herman Meese, of Rock Island; Augusta, who married Jacob Bluer, of Chicago; Minnie, who married Stephen Marshall, of Rock Island; Marie and Sarah who are residing at home; Emma, who is the wife of Henry Hughes; Ellen, who is residing at home; and William, who is residing in Rock Island. Mr. Ohrt has thirteen living grandchildren.

OLINE, John N.—Undoubtedly the United States is largely indebted in the matter of worthy citizenship to her sister country, Sweden, and every encouragement has been offered to that northern land to induce its people to find a home in America. Away back in his boyhood, John N. Oline, who, for forty years has been identified with the Moline Plow Company, of Moline, Ill., began to cherish the determination of becoming a resident of the United States, his ambition being realized in 1866. He was born in Sweden, May 12, 1846, and is a son of Swen Nelson, a farmer, who died in Sweden. He married Magnel Oaksaan, who came to the United States as a widow in 1871, and died at Manson, Ia., when aged eighty-five years.

John N. Oline was permitted to attend school until he was about fifteen years of age, in the meanwhile working on his father's farm as his assistance was needed. For six months prior to emigrating to America, he was foreman on the large estate of Lord Workmaster, in Sweden. On May 7, 1866, Mr. Oline left his native land and came to the United States, reaching Moline, Ill., on June 5, 1866, where he joined his brother-in-law, who had acquired property on Government Island. He immediately secured work as a laborer with the firm of Kennedy & Swan, now the Moline Plow Company, and in 1869 entered the foundry and learned the trade of moulder which he followed for forty years. He was promoted to offices of responsibility in the shops and became foreman of the wheel department under Superintendent McKinley and held that position for ten years. As he grew older he desired less responsibility and was then made night police of the wood department plant, a position he has efficiently filled for some five years. His many years of faithful service is appreciated by the company and the most cordial and friendly relations exist between them. He has been a hard working man and has also been a provident one, investing at different times in property and is in very comfortable circumstances. He owns property in East Moline, near Forty-first street and his handsome residence at No. 1216 Tenth street, and sold the site on which stands House No. 2 of the Moline Fire Department. He has been interested in this organization for many years. Politically he is a republican but has never desired public office.

Mr. Oline was married the first time, at Moline, April 12, 1871, to Cecelia Olson, who died March 21, 1883. She was the mother of four children: Ida, who died in infancy; Hjalmar, who died January 9, 1903, was a valued member of the Moline Volunteer Fire Department; Frank T., who was born at Moline, in February, 1881, married Bessie Martis and they have one son, Leonard, and they live at Rock Island; and Almeda A., who was born in 1883, who married Roy Govig. She is a capable business woman and was bookkeeper in the John Stanley Printing Office for many years. On September 20, 1884, Mr. Oline was married at Omaha, Neb., to Miss Minnie Kallstrom, and they have one son, Chester, who was born at Moline September 9th, 1892, and a graduate of the High School, is assistant to Mr. McDonald, manager of the Otis Elevator. By the second marriage, there were two children who are deceased, Manguel, born in 1884, died when nine months old and Herbert born in 1887 and died two years later. Mrs. Oline has built up a large business as a caterer and her services are in demand at all high class functions both in Moline and Rock Island. She is a member of the Swedish Methodist church. Mr. Oline was formerly an active member of the A. O. U. W. and was a delegate to the Grand Lodge on several occasions, and belongs also to the M. W. A. and is an officer in the Moline Plow Company's Aid Association.

OLMSTED, Robert W., Circuit Judge for the Fourteenth Judicial District of Illinois, is a charter member of the Olmsted Family Association, organized in 1911 at Hartford, Conn. James and Richard Olmsted, the founders of the family in America, were English Puritans, who arrived in the ship Lyon at Boston, Mass., September 16, 1632, and were among the first settlers of Hartford, Conn. Denison Olmsted, the eminent scientist, Frederick Law Olmsted, the leading landscape gardener of the world, and other of lesser fame have sprung from this ancestry. Prof. Everett Ward Olmsted of Cornell University, is president; and Congressman Marlin Olmsted of Harrisburg, Pa., is vice-president of the association.

Judge Olmsted was born in Edgington township, Rock Island County, Ill., May 6, 1868, being a son of Robert B. and Mary M. (Linn) Olmsted, the former born April 13, 1832, at Havensport, Fairfield county, Ohio, and the latter in Mercer county, Ill., March 22, 1844. The father, after sixteen years' service as deputy sheriff, retired and lives in Milan, Ill. He and his wife were married August 14, 1862, in Mercer county, Ill., and recently celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Four children were born to them.

Judge Olmsted, in his boyhood days, labored in factories and on farms, clerked in stores and taught school. With money earned at hard work, he acquired an education and was graduated in the scientific course from the Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa, in 1890, after which he studied law with Jackson and Hurst of Rock Island, finishing his legal studies while at Orange City, Iowa, and was admitted to the bar by the Supreme Court of Iowa, January 16, 1895. He was elected county attorney of Sioux county, Iowa, in 1896, and after serving his term, returned to Rock Island county in May, 1899. On April 6, 1907, he entered upon his duties as county judge, having been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge E. E. Parmenter. In 1911, he was elected president of the County and Probate Judges' Association of Illinois. Following the death of Judge W. H. Gest, he was elected, on November 5, 1912, as judge of the Circuit Court for the Fourteenth Judicial Circuit.

Judge Olmsted was married at Lewiston, Ill., August 25, 1892, to Jennie E. Fahnstock, who died April 27, 1911, leaving four children: Margaret, Elizabeth, Robert Ernst and Jeanette. Mrs. Olmsted was a daughter of a popular writer of several decades ago, whose "Give the Boy a Chance" and "We'll Have to Mortgage the Farm" were sung all over the country.

As a public man and one interested in public affairs, Judge Olmsted is deservedly popular with all classes of people and has become well known and appreciated throughout western Illinois. His public speaking is characterized by clearness, simplicity and directness of statement, keen analysis of his subject matter, and a ready, forcible delivery; the invariable verdict of his hearers being that what he said was really worth while. His legal attainments were just becoming appreciated and understood when he was first elected county judge. In that office he was able to demonstrate grasp of legal principles, power of rapid analysis and a poise and judgment that recommended him for promotion.

To the office of circuit judge, he has brought years of study and preparation; habits of great industry and fidelity to his work; ideas of duty that commend him to the people and it is believed that his future, even more than his past, lies along the line of a useful and honorable career.

OLTMAN, John F., proprietor of a general store at Hampton, is a native of the county, where much of his life has been spent. He was born in Hampton township, where the family is well known, October 15, 1861, a son of Friedrich and Dorethe Oltman, natives of Germany. The parents came to Rock Island county about 1848, and located in Hampton township, where they engaged in farming. They were parents of eight children. John F. Oltman was reared on a farm and educated in the local schools, remaining with his parents until he was sixteen years old, when he started out in life for himself, finding work on farms and in a coal mine. He was early taught the habits of industry and thrift which have so materially assisted him in life, and he has always sustained a good reputation for reliability and integrity in his dealings. On April 9, 1885, he married Catherine Reiling, also a native of Hampton township, a daughter of Louis and Elenora Reiling, natives of Germany. They have the following children: Elmer, who is on his father's farm; Wernum; Herbert; Esther; and Dewey. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Oltman removed to Greene county, Ia., where for the first year they rented a farm. They then purchased one of their own, and occupied and conducted it for five years. At the end of that period they returned to Rock Island county and for seven months Mr. Oltman worked at Moline as a carpenter. He then purchased a farm of 240 acres in Hampton township, which he operated until the spring of 1910, when he rented it. Prior to that time he had sold 140 acres of the land.

On November 1, 1907, John F. Oltman bought a general store at Hampton and has since conducted it successfully. His store contains a well assorted stock of general merchandise and he has an excellent local trade. He has been a resident of the village since June 10, 1910, and has taken an active part in local affairs, being well known in various circles, as he is a member of the Lutheran church, a republican in politics, and has served several times as a school director and since 1909, as a school trustee.

OLTMANN, William A.—In proportion to its size, Rock Island county has as many representative and successful farmers as any county in the state, and among these may be mentioned William A. Oltmann, who is engaged in cultivating the excellent farm that was the home of his father for many years, located in Hampton township, on Hampton rural route No. 1. Mr. Oltmann has been a resident of Hampton township all of his life, having been born here, December 25, 1870, a son of Frederick and Dora (Denhardt) Oltmann, natives of Oldenburg, Germany, the former of whom died April 10, 1911, while the latter resides on the home farm at the age of seventy years. Frederick and Dora Oltmann had the following children: Frederick, who resides in Hampton; Edward, who is on the home place; Charles, who is a resident of Hampton; William A.; Wilhelmina, who married Henry Reiling of Hampton township; Emma, who married Edward Stormeister, of Hampton township; Louis, who lives in Rapid City, Ill.; and Louisa, who married Louis Stormeister, of Green River, Henry county, Ill.

William A. Oltmann attended the district schools, after leaving which he began farming in Hampton township, on a rented farm, his sister keeping house for him until her marriage, after which he lived alone for three years, and on November 25, 1906, he was married to Clara A. Vogel, who was born in this township August 9, 1876, a daughter of John and Mary Vogel, of German descent. After his marriage, Mr. Oltmann worked on the home farm for two years, and then moved to Rapid City, Ill., where for three years he cultivated a rented property. On June 22, 1911, he returned home and took charge of the old homestead, which will belong to his mother as long as she lives. Mr. and Mrs. Oltmann have had two children: Theresa, who died in infancy; and Anna Margaret, who was born January 21, 1907. Mr. Oltmann belongs to the German Lutheran church, in which he has held office, but his wife is a member of the Catholic church. He is a democrat in political matters, and served as judge of election in the fall of 1910 and the spring of 1911. Since the death of his father, Mr. Oltmann has taken care of his aged mother, and has proven himself a faithful and devoted son in every respect, winning the esteem and admiration of his fellow-townsmen as such, as well as a public-spirited citizen and excellent agriculturist.

OOSTERLING, Phil.—In the life of Phil Oosterling there is presented a lesson for the youth of any land; something to be found in it of a nature encouraging to the young aspirant, who, without friends or fortune, is struggling to overcome obstacles in his efforts to acquire a comfortable competence, if not absolute wealth. Starting in life with no advantages of any kind, thwarted in his efforts to acquire an education, meeting with the greatest discouragements at critical times, he has sturdily forged on, and now, through the sheer force of his own industry and indomitable spirit, he has become one of the successful men of South Rock Island, and as such commands the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens.

Phil Oosterling was born in Holland, October 22, 1858, a son of Peter and Bertie De (Decker) Oosterling, both of whom died when he was but a lad. He became a bound boy at the age of six years, and when ten years of age was forced to start to work at three o'clock in the morning and continue to toil until five o'clock in the evening, which left him but two hours for study and this only in the winter time, between the hours of five and seven, when the exhaustive labor which he had been compelled to do all day had left the mind and body weary and in anything but a receptive mood. At the age of eighteen years, feeling that he could better his condition in the United States, he secured passage money and boarded the ship Fatherland from Antwerp, landing after a stormy voyage of thirty days at Philadelphia. Having relatives in Atkinson, Ill., he made his way west to this point, where he began working on a farm, and during the first year received twelve dollars per month, which was increased to sixteen dollars the second year and to twenty-one dollars the third year. Carefully hoarding his slender wages, he was able to save $900, and with it began farming on his own account in Atkinson, but he was to meet with misfortune, for the first year his crops were killed by frost, and during the second year they were drowned out, and his hardly earned capital was swept away. Somewhat discouraged, but nothing daunted, he started all over again, going to Alexandria, Hanson county, S. D., where he worked at the mason trade, a knowledge of which he had managed to pick up at odd times, and finally, in 1892, came to Rock Island, where he was married during 1902 to Emma Canwelz. He and his wife have had two children.

A few weeks after his marriage he moved to South Rock Island, where he rented land for three and one-half years, and then purchased his present truck farm of six acres, which he has successfully operated ever since. He has engaged in raising grapes and fruit of all kinds, and during the year of 1911 had the largest crop of grapes of any farmer in this part of the county. Mr. Oosterling is a republican in politics, and is a consistent member of the Catholic church.

OPPENDIKE, Henry, of Port Byron, is a representative German-American of Rock Island county, where he formerly was a leading agriculturist, and he is honored as a veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Holstein, Germany, June 6, 1841, son of August Frederick and Margaret (Sleiter) Oppendike, both natives of Germany. Henry Oppendike was eleven years old when he was brought to America by his parents, they spending thirteen weeks on the ocean voyage. He lived in the city of New York until 1865, having in 1861 enlisted for service during the Civil war in Company B, Tenth New York Volunteers, the First National Zouaves, being assigned to the Army of the Potomac and serving two years. He participated in the seven days' fighting before Richmond, Fredericksburg, the battle of Antietam, second battle of Bull Run, Malvern Hill, and many others, and was wounded at Haines' Mill. Soon after being discharged and mustered out at New York city, he came to Rock Island county and purchased 200 acres of land in Coe township, which he has since greatly developed and improved. In 1896 he retired from the farm and since then has been living at Port Byron. Since 1907, Mr. Oppendike has served as a member of the town board, which fact speaks well for the estimation in which he is held by his fellow-citizens. He is ready to forward every cause for the betterment of the community and performs his public duties faithfully and well. He was reared in the Lutheran church and in politics he is a republican.

Mr. Oppendike was married in Rock Island county to Anna, daughter of Marcus Weis, and eight children have blessed their union, namely: Frederick who is at home; John Henry who is of Zuma township; Lillie who is Mrs. Rollin Whiteside; Frank who is a butcher of Port Byron; Rosa May who is Mrs. Ben Luster, of Minnesota; and three who died in infancy. The family is well known throughout the county, where they are highly respected.

ORMAN, Harry H.—Owing to the centralization of trade in Rock Island, the dealers here do a large amount of business every year. Not only is the city a source of demand itself, but the surrounding territory looks to it as a center of supply. One of the men who have succeeded along more than one line of endeavor, is Harry H. Orman, now a dealer in shoes, but formerly a general contractor. He was born in 1879, a son of Levi and Minda (Bover) Orman. The father was born in Watertown, N. Y., and the mother in Michigan. They were married in the latter state, where Harry H. was born. By trade, the father was a millwright and saw filer in the woods of Michigan. In 1884, he took his family to Central City, Neb., and engaged in farming until 1896, when he came to Rock Island. He soon went on a farm in Andalusia township, but later came back to Rock Island, where he worked at carpentering until his death which occurred December 7, 1911, the result of being injured by an automobile. The mother survives, residing in Rock Island county.

Harry H. Orman attended the country schools in Nebraska, and at the same time helped on the farm. In 1905, he began contracting for himself, building and selling houses. In 1911, he suffered a heavy loss from fire, and so decided to engage in another line. On August 12, 1911, he opened a first-class shoe store at No. 517 Seventeenth street, Rock Island, and in 1912, moved to No. 217 the same street, where he handles all the best makes in boots and shoes.

In 1901, Mr. Orman was united in marriage with Lulla Faucett of Industry, Ill., and they have one daughter, Bertha Capitola, now six years old. Mr. Orman belongs to the Odd Fellows, to the Mystic Workers, of which he was one of the organizers, and to the Owls and the Rangers. Mrs. Orman is a member of the Christian church. The republican party receives Mr. Orman's vote and support. He is one of the live, progressive business men of the city, and one whose endeavors have met with a well merited success.

OSBORN, Charles H.—The rich farming lands of Rock Island county respond readily to the care expended upon them, yielding banner crops of many varieties. One of the men who has become prosperous through tilling the soil here is Charles H. Osborn of Zuma township, who owns 308 acres in this township, and ninety acres in Canoe Creek township. His residence is located in Zuma township, and on this homestead he has four large barns and a beautiful residence. He feeds a large number of cattle and horses. During 1911, he planted 135 acres in corn. In addition to his farming activities he owns a steam threshing outfit.

Mr. Osborn was born in Oneida county, N. Y., in 1863, a son of John G. and Hattie (Machin) Osborn, both of whom reside with Mr. Osborn on his farm. These parents came to Zuma township in 1864, and developed a fine property from comparatively wild land. Mr. Osborn was brought up on this farm, attending the district schools while he assisted his father. His only sister, Emma, married Myron Nicholson, and they reside in Montana. In 1884, Mr. Osborn married Ida Netser, born in Geneseo, Ill., and they have six children: Forest, Mildred, Bertha, Josephine, Beulah and Lawrence, all at home. In politics, Mr. Osborn is a republican in national matters, but is liable in local issues to vote for the man rather than confine himself to party ties. Mr. Osborn has been called upon to hold a number of local offices, having been a member of the school board for fifteen years, justice of the peace for four years, and constable the same length of time. In each office he showed the same conscientious regard to detail and duty that characterizes his conduct of his private affairs, and the people profited accordingly. Mr. Osborn has the full confidence of his constituents, and will doubtless be called upon to fill higher offices within their gift before he is allowed to retire to private life. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America.

OSENBURG, Henry.—South Rock Island has a number of substantial German-Americans who are a credit to their native land as well as to the one they later adopted. They are thrifty, loyal and industrious, and some of them who are more advanced in years, are now enjoying the fruit of years of labor. One of the latter class is Henry Osenburg, now living retired at 616 Second street. He was born in Holstein, Germany, November 25, 1830, a son of Hans and Mary Osenburg, both of whom were born in Holstein, Germany. The paternal grandfather was a carpenter and contractor, in later years, but earlier in life was a cabinetmaker. The parents of Henry Osenburg never came to America, but lived to a ripe old age in Germany, where both died. Henry Osenburg was educated in the public schools of Germany, attending them until he was sixteen years old. After leaving school, he farmed until coming to America in 1864, sailing from Hamburg to New York City. Prior to leaving home, he served in the German army. From thence he went direct to Davenport, Ia., to be employed in the saw-mill of Weyerhaeuser and Denkmann. For forty years he remained in their employ, but is now retired.

While still in Germany, Henry Osenburg was married to Christina Possell, daughter of Carl Possell, who with his wife rounded out useful lives in Germany, where both died. Mr. and Mrs. Osenburg became the parents of twelve children, of whom six survive: Annie, who is the wife of Frank Reiger of Denver, Colo.; Minnie, who is the wife of Richard Arf, of Rock Island; Mary, who is the wife of Herman Paulsen, resides with her father; Emma, who is the wife of William Wilhen, a farmer of Mercer county, Ill.; Tillie, who is the wife of August Schnert of Rock Island; and William, who is of Wisconsin. There are twenty-two grandchildren in the family. Mr. Osenburg lives in a comfortable cottage, which he built many years ago. He and his family are all members of the German Lutheran church of Rock Island. Having worked hard all his life, Mr. Osenburg is certainly entitled to the rest and comfort he is now enjoying. No man stands higher in the estimation of his neighbors than he, and their confidence in him is well founded.

OSTROM, Louis, A. B., M. D., of Rock Island, was born in Helsingland, Sweden, May 1, 1874, and came to the United States when six years old. His father is a pipe organ builder, known in hundreds of churches all over the country, and now retired, living at Cokato, Minn.

Louis Ostrom attended school in Moline but went to work as soon as able, at one time or another during vacations being employed in nearly all the shops of Moline. After becoming a student at Augustana College, he worked for two summers as a section hand on the street car line; was a printer in Robert Clendennin's job office; pressman on the Moline Daily Dispatch and in the Augustana Book Concern. While at school he also studied music under Dr. Gustaf Stolpe; was director of bands, orchestras and mandolin clubs; was a member of the Sixth Regiment Band, I. N. G., of Moline, and of Strasser's Second Regiment Band, I. N. G., of Davenport, Ia. He also took an active part in all college athletics, being a member of both base and football teams. In 1895 he was graduated from Augustana College, in the English classical course, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts. During the summer of 1894 he was assistant organist to Dr. Stolpe, in the Moline Lutheran church, and after graduation was at Cokato, Minn., as organist and music teacher. While there he received a call to become professor of wind and stringed instruments in the Augustana Conservatory of Music, but after a short time resigned, having decided upon a medical career.

Mr. Ostrom then entered the medical department of the State University of Iowa, entirely dependent upon his own efforts and courage to carry him through. As a medical student he earned his tuition by playing with orchestras and in churches; caring for a doctor's office for his room rent, and earning his board by acting as waiter and cook at a restaurant until the end of his course. After leaving Iowa City he was employed by the State Hospital at Independence, Ia., but wishing to continue his medical studies he resigned and entered the Missouri Medical College and Polyclinic, at St. Louis. During his medical studies he paid particular attention to diseases of the eye and ear. After his course at St. Louis, in 1899 he located at Leonardsville, Kan., and there engaged in general practice. There he received a call from the medical college at Topeka, to the chair of chemistry in that institution, including direction of the chemical laboratories, but he found the duties of the position would entirely prevent private practice and decided to resign. He came then to Rock Island and established himself as a specialist in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. He is local oculist to the C., R. I. & P. Railroad.

During the spring term of 1903, Dr. Ostrom was acting professor of botany at Augustana College, during the absence of Prof. J. A. Udden, and later was professor of anatomy, physiology and histology in the pre-medical department. During 1904-5 he was professor of natural history at Upsala College, Kenilworth, N. J., and at the same time took post-graduate studies in his specialty in New York city, and was appointed clinical assistant in the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, also assistant surgeon in St. Bartholomew's Clinic, and had charge during that time of the nose and throat clinic in St. Mark's Hospital. In 1913 Dr. Ostrom became president of the staff of St. Anthony's Hospital, Rock Island. In 1897 he was elected alderman from the Seventh ward. He is one of the directors of the German Trust and Savings Bank; has been a director at different times in the Y. M. C. A.; and is a Knight Templar Mason and Shriner and belongs also to the Elks.

In 1899 Dr. Ostrom was married to Miss Sophia C. Hult, who was formerly secretary to the business manager of Augustana College, with which institution his connection covered so many years. Dr. and Mrs. Ostrom have five children: Meredith, aged eleven years; Ralph, aged five years; Clifford, aged three years; and Richard and Robert, twins, who are one year old. The family residence stands at No. 1037 Twenty-first street, Rock Island, Ill.

OUNEN, John.—It is a remarkable fact that a number of the prosperous men of America came here at an age when many lads are still tenderly sheltered in good homes, and thrown entirely upon their own resources worked their way up the ladder to affluence. One of these men so essentially self-made is John Ounen of Coe township, born in Hanover, Germany, March 4, 1874, who inherited the sturdy characteristics of his people. He came to the United States when only fourteen years old, and settling at Port Byron, Ill., began working for farmers, attending school as he had opportunity. For fourteen years, he worked by the month, and then for two years rented the Ashdown farm. Following this he spent five years at Sioux City, Ia., from whence he went to Minnesota for a year. Returning to Rock Island county, he worked for others for a year, and then bought forty acres from Ed. McRoberts which he now rents to Vere Woodward.

In 1901, Mr. Ounen married Mary Gilbert, daughter of Edward Gilbert of Port Byron township. They had two children: Altga, attending school, and Geneveive. In 1909, Mrs. Ounen was taken away from her husband and children, who needed her so sorely, and her remains were tenderly laid to rest in Fairfield Cemetery. She was a woman of sweet, Christian character, faithful and conscientious in the performance of the duties of life, and her place is empty. Following his great loss, Mr. Ounen returned to Germany where he spent three months trying to forget his sorrow. He is a man well liked by all who know him, and has many friends among those who have watched his struggles, and his successes. All his life he has been very industrious, and his thrift and self-denial have resulted in his present prosperity.

PALMER, Charles A.—The men who have given their energy, skill, ambitious vigor and enthusiasm to build up a community, are the benefactors of humanity, and their names cannot be held in too high esteem. In every undertaking there must be a logical beginning, and the man who lays the foundations of what afterwards may become a valuable addition to a large and flourishing city, has the courage of his convictions, and unlimited faith in the future of the location he selects as his scene of endeavor. Charles A. Palmer is a man whose keen mind foresaw a future in the addition he helped to make to East Moline, known as the Palmer and Hartzell Addition. It is the first to be made to this city, and is beautifully located on the river front. Mr. Palmer is devoting all of his time to the development of this valuable property, and proposes to make it an ideal residence district.

Charles A. Palmer was born in 1858, a son of Stephen W. and Amanda (Graham) Palmer. The father was born in New York in 1818, and died in Rock Island county in 1863 on the farm now occupied by his son. This place of eighty acres was purchased by the father soon after his arrival in the county. The mother died in June, 1911, and she and her husband are laid to rest in Watertown cemetery. They had two children, Charles A. and Luella D., the wife of H. R. Albright. Mr. Palmer was reared on the home farm, and attended the district schools. Until he became interested in his addition, Mr. Palmer was a farmer, but now he realizes that his duty and inclination lead him to devote himself to improving his new venture.

In 1885, Mr. Palmer married Mary A. Livergood, born in Clearfield county, Pa., daughter of Ellis and Mary Jane (Meese) Livergood, both of whom are now deceased, dying in Watertown, where they are buried. One child, Harry A., has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Palmer, and he is attending school. He was the first child born at East Moline. In religious faith, Mr. Palmer is a Methodist, having been brought up in the faith of which his father was a preacher. In politics, he is a republican. In coming years the results of Mr. Palmer's planning, his sacrifices and development will live, for he is building upon the solid foundation of merit, honesty and faith in humanity. He recently laid out a new addition, known as Cottage Grove Addition, of about eighteen acres.

PALMGREN, Carl Victor (deceased), was well known in the business and fraternal circles of Moline and Rock Island, where he erected some of the finest buildings. He was known in business as Victor Palmgren, not using his first name. Carl Victor Palmgren was a native of Sweden, born April 22, 1870, a son of Otto and Matilda (Johnson) Palmgren, who spent their entire lives in Sweden. Attending the public schools of his native land he later took a collegiate course at Eskejö, Smoland, and at the age of nineteen years came to America, locating at Orion, Ill., where he learned the trade of a carpenter, and after spending two years there came to Moline and continued to work at this trade. Two years later he branched out as a contractor. After spending four years in Moline, he returned to Orion and continued contracting there until 1907, when he came to Moline and opened an office. He carried on general contracting at Moline and Orion, although he lived in the latter place. Among the fine buildings he put up in Rock Island county, are the following: City fire station No. 4, the A. H. Cole Building on Fifth Avenue, Moline; the J. Arslin garage, Moline; and many fine residences. Among the latter are those of W. A. Salter, and A. G. Abraham. Prior to his death he was engaged in erecting various large business blocks and his business was expanding, owing to his ambition and integrity, coupled with his high business standing and reputation. He was closely associated with the development of the county, taking an active interest in public affairs. Fraternally he was a member of the Elks, of Moline, and of the Odd Fellows and Modern Woodmen of Orion, having passed through the chairs in the Modern Woodmen and held several offices with the Odd Fellows.

Carl Victor Palmgren was married at Moline, in 1896, to Miss Jennie Bengston, born September 15, 1870, a daughter of Lewis and May C. Bengston. They had five sons: Philip, Fred, Gilbert, Carl and Quentin, all of whom are attending school at Orion. Mr. Palmgren died May 2, 1913.

PARCHERT, Hans D.—The agricultural interests are safely conserved by some of the most representative men in the country, and in Rock Island county, while a fair proportion of the farmer boys go to centers of industry, many prefer to remain at home, as they realize how much better the possibilities for advancement are among their ordinary surroundings than in a strange place. One of the young men here who has already been exceptionally successful as a farmer is Hans D. Parchert, owner of 160 acres of fine land in Buffalo Prairie township.

He was born on his brother's homestead, in this township, December 7, 1876, a son of William and Augusta (Fuhlman) Parchert. When Hans D. Parchert was three years old his father moved to the farm adjoining the one now owned by him, and the lad grew up there, attending the White Lily public school, having for teachers Maggie Brunner, Charles Young, John and Newton Crawford, Rose Sedam, Miss Cannan, Joseph Carlisle and William Mardis. He left school when eighteen years old, and worked for his father until twenty, when he began working for others, thus continuing for six years. He then rented for two years what is now the George Schmidt farm near Edgington. For one year he rented land in Muscatine county, Ia., returning to the George Schmidt farm, which he rented for two years more. Following this, he bought his present farm, and has put it into magnificent shape. His fences are all well kept, his buildings in excellent repair, and the entire property reflects his industry and thrifty management.

On December 10, 1902, Mr. Parchert married Elizabeth Schmidt, a daughter of Adam and Barbara (Bauer) Schmidt. Mrs. Parchert was born in Buffalo Prairie township, May 20, 1888, and educated in the public schools here. Being the eldest daughter, and her mother an invalid, she remained at home managing the household almost constantly from the time she left school until her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Parchert have had children as follows: Floyd Frederick, born near Edgington, June 19, 1907; and Myrtle Margaret, born July 12, 1909. In politics, Mr. Parchert is a republican, but not an office seeker. He was reared a Methodist, while his wife is a Lutheran. They are delightful people to know, kindly and hospitable, and their pleasant home is often visited by their many friends who appreciate their excellent qualities.

PARCHERT, William Frederick (deceased).—In the earlier history of this country there are many accounts of the trials and brave sacrifices of those who are numbered among the pioneers of certain districts. The tide of civilization then was ever moving westward, and as soon as a section was fairly well developed, there would be some venturesome souls eager to press still further towards the frontier, making new boundaries for the outposts of civilization. Among the early pioneers of Rock Island county, who for many years figured prominently in the upbuilding and development of this county, no name is more worthy of mention than the late William F. Parchert. He was the owner of a fine and well improved farm of 140 acres, located on section 16, Buffalo Prairie township. He was born in Prussia, Germany, December 13, 1844, being a son of William Frederick and Wilhelmina (Radmice) Parchert, farming people, who died in Prussia. Their children were: Frederick, who died in Prussia; William Frederick; and Carl John, who served in the Franco-

Prussian war, as a non-commissioned officer, now resides in Prussia.

William Frederick Parchert was educated in his native land and brought up on a farm. When twenty years old he entered the German army, and served in the war with Austria in 1866, participating in three battles. He came to the United States in 1868, landing in New York city, after a trip of two weeks. From there he came direct to Rock Island county, to join his friend, William Calberg, then living in Mercer county. For some time he worked among the farmers in both counties. After his marriage he rented for a time, then bought property in Buffalo Prairie township, on which he put up a new house, barn and other buildings. Prior to the erection of the new house the family lived in a little log one that was on the place.

On December 28, 1872, Mr. Parchert was united in marriage with Augusta Fuhlman, in this county, and their children were: Mary, Mrs. Theo Wolfe, deceased; Martha, Mrs. Val Vetter, of Buffalo Prairie township; Mrs. George Rausch, of the same township; Hans F.; Emma, Mrs. Omer Duffield, living in the vicinity of Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Wilhelm and Carl John, twins, the latter of whom died in 1911, and the former is employed in the German Bank of Muscatine, Ia., and married Lucy Kadel; and Augusta, Mrs. John Furst, now living on Mr. Parchert's farm. He belonged to the German Lutheran church, and was a republican, but never desired office. A man of strong character, determined to succeed, he forged his way to the front and certainly earned all he possessed. He died February 16, 1912, and his remains are interred in the Illinois City cemetery.

PARIDON, John M.—Some of the most beautiful homes in Rock Island county belong to those men who have already passed through the bitter struggles of life, and are now enjoying the victory over poverty and hard work. One of these retired residents of Rock Island, living at No. 1520 Eighteenth avenue, is John M. Paridon. He was born in the Province of South Holland, the Netherlands, being a son of Anthony and Sophronia (Scurin) Paridon. His birth took place January 5, 1844, and his parents were born in 1812 and 1806, respectively. The paternal grandfather, Cornelius Paridon, served in the Napoleonic wars, being in the Russian campaign. Anthony Paridon never left Holland, where he died in 1892. A sister of John M. Paridon is still residing on the family estate.

John M. Paridon received a public school education in his native place, and also private instruction from a tutor. He learned broom-making and later the trade of painting and paper hanging. He gave his country fifteen months military service, belonging to the militia. In 1870, desiring a better opportunity for expansion in his business, he came to America, landing in New York City, from whence he came to Chicago and spent five years in that city. In 1875, he arrived in Rock Island, which has continued his home ever since. During the years that followed, he made two trips to Holland, to visit his people.

On August 15, 1865, Mr. Paridon was married in Holland to Mary Gerling, now deceased. In the fall of 1874, while still residing in Chicago, Mr. Paridon was married (second) to Jane Kieve, daughter of Lawrence and Margaret (Housman) Kieve, both of whom spent their lives in Holland. Mr. Paridon has three children who are now living: Henry A. J., married Kate Coy, and lives in Rock Island; Anthony, married Clara Graham, and works for the Paridon Wall Paper Co.; and Lawrence, married Edith Woods. There are seven grandchildren in the family. Mr. Paridon has a comfortable home, which he owns, in addition to other valuable property, and is in very easy circumstances. He carried on a very large and profitable business as a painter and paperhanger for many years, and was regarded as one of the best men in his line in the entire county. During these years of active business life, Mr. Paridon was characterized by his honesty and fairness of dealing, and he is honored by all who know him.

PARK, Andrew, for many years actively identified with the coal mining industry, now lives retired, enjoying the comforts of a very pleasant home, at Viola, Mercer county, Ill., where he owns property accumulated through his own industry. Andrew Park was born at Manchester, N. H., October 3, 1839, a son of Andrew and Alice (Irwin) Park. Andrew Park, the father, was born in Scotland and was young when he came to America and took up his residence at Manchester, N. H., where he continued to live until 1852, when he moved to Rock Island, Ill. Being a practical miner he followed mining as an occupation until the time of his death. He married Alice Irwin and they had three sons and seven daughters born to them, of whom Andrew was the youngest, a sister, Mrs. Ellen Lewis, who lives at Moline, Ill., with him, being the only survivors of this family. Andrew Park was eleven years old when his father came with his family to Rock Island county, and as soon as his school days were over he became a miner and was working in Rock Island county when the Civil War broke out. Company A, of the Thirty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, was mainly recruited at Rock Island and he enlisted in this company for three years, the commander of his regiment being Col. Julius White. After his first term of enlistment expired, he reenlisted in the same regiment, at Brownsville, Tex., and his second enlistment did not expire until May 16, 1866, when he was honorably discharged. He returned home by way of New Orleans and from there up the Mississippi river to St. Louis, Mo., and thence by railroad to Rock Island, reaching that city June 2, 1866. Although he was a brave and faithful soldier, never shirking any duty, he was never either wounded or made a prisoner, and returned to peaceful pursuits practically unharmed. During his service he took part in many battles and among them are included: Pea Ridge, Cape Girardeau, Vicksburg and Fort Blakeley, together with all the skirmishes and long marches of his regiment. He is a member of Viola Post, No. 440, G. A. R.

After Andrew Park came back to Illinois he resumed mining and followed it until he retired from active labor. He began at the bottom and through his industry and reliability climbed until he became a mine manager, a position of great responsibility, the comfort and even lives of many men frequently being more or less in his charge. On August 1, 1866, at the Harper House, Rock Island, Andrew Park was married to Miss Johanna Hunter, who was born in Mercer county, Pa., July 23, 1844, a daughter of Elliott and Catherine Hunter. Her parents were born in Pennsylvania and came to Rock Island county in 1852, where the father followed farming. To Mr. and Mrs. Park six children were born, four sons and two daughters, and the survivors are: Elliott, who is a farmer living near Moline; Erwin, who is residing at Moline; Catherine, who is the wife of Asbury Griffen, living at Viola, Mercer county; John, who is living at Peoria; and Ira, who is residing at Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Park have been blessed in many ways and not the least of these has been the possession of a creditable family which in the second generation has increased until they have 189 grandchildren. They are members of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Park is no active politician, but is a republican in his views.

PARMENTER, Hon. Elwin Elbert (deceased).—The life of a good and just man offers a noble example and preaches practical sermons which are incentives to high endeavor, and the influence of such a man for good, is lasting, existing long after he has passed off the arena of life. Such a man was the late Judge Elwin E. Parmenter. He was born on a farm in Edgington township, Rock Island county, Ill., May 24, 1843, a son of Lorenzo and Kezia (Robbins) Parmenter, who were early settlers in Rock Island county where they both died. Elwin E. Parmenter received his early education in the public schools of Muscatine, Ia., where he prepared for entering the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he was graduated from the law department. Shortly afterward he began the practice of his profession at Rock Island, Ill., which city was his home until his death. In 1872, he was elected state's attorney for Rock Island county and held the office for three consecutive terms of four years each, his last term ending in 1884. His administration of the office was forceful, vigorous and successful and especially distinguished by the care with which he prepared his cases for trial. As showing this carefulness, it can be stated that he never had an indictment quashed because of error or carelessness in preparation. While in the above office, he prosecuted one of the most notable criminals in the history of the Rock Island courts, the infamous Heilwagner, being assisted by Hon. William Jackson. The result was conviction with the imposition of the death penalty and the sentence of the court was carried out, it being the last execution in Rock Island county. After his retirement from this office, Mr. Parmenter returned to his general law practice, in which he was engaged until 1884, when he was appointed master in chancery by Judge Gest, holding the office for six years. In 1902, he was elected county judge, and, at the expiration of his term of four years, was re-elected in November, 1906, and served until his sudden death a few months later. His administration of this office, which involves the supervision of the administration of numerous estates and various other matters, was conducted in the same systematic manner as was his work in the two important offices previously held by him.

Judge Parmenter was married on October 3, 1872, to Miss Anna B. Oloff, who stood nobly by his side in his sorrows as in his joys. They had but one child, Frank Elbert, a son, who died at the age of five years. Judge Parmenter was an earnest Christian. On March 20, 1892, he was admitted into full membership with the First Methodist Episcopal church of Rock Island, of which he remained a consistent member and served as one of its trustees. He was a member of Trio Lodge No. 27, A. F. & A. M.; of Rock Island Chapter No. 18, Royal Arch Masons; Rock Island Commandery No. 18, Knights Templar, and of Kabba Temple of the Mystic Shrine of Davenport. He held various offices in the different degrees of Masonry and was valued in the highest degree. On December 27, 1906, Judge Parmenter returned home from his official duties feeling somewhat ill, and in a few brief minutes had passed away.

PARR, Bunn, inspector of the waterworks, residing at No. 631 Second avenue, East Moline, is one of the most responsible men of this rapidly growing city, which owes so much to the progressive spirit of its citizens. He was born August 23, 1869, in Macon county, Ill., son of William and Mary (Reed) Parr, the former born in Ohio, in March, 1845; and the latter in Indiana, in February, 1847. Both were reared on a farm, and the father came, with his father, to Macon county, Ill., his wife coming later with her parents, and there they grew up and were married in 1866. Following marriage, they rented a farm and operated it. They were consistent members of the Christian church. About 1902, they retired from the farm, going to Argenta, Ill., where they bought a hotel. This they are conducting at present. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom Bunn Parr was the oldest. Of this family six survive.

Bunn Parr was educated in the district schools of Macon county, growing up amid rural surroundings, and learning the homely lessons taught on a farm. Leaving the farm, he learned the plumbing and heating trade, working as a journeyman until 1907, gaining a thoroughly practical experience in every branch of his work. In the spring of 1907, he formed a partnership with Jim Canney, and bought a plumbing and heating business at West Liberty, Iowa, where he continued for two years. Mr. Parr then sold to his partner, and came to East Moline, where he entered the machine shop of the Root & Vandervort Engine Company, remaining there for two years. In January, 1910, he became an employe of the city of East Moline, acting as plumbing and water inspector, and has since held this responsible position, in which his expert knowledge is used for the benefit of the municipality. Politically, he is a republican, and was elected constable while residing in Macon county, holding the position from 1898 to 1899, when he resigned. Fraternally, he is an Odd Fellow.

On June 3, 1897, Mr. Parr was married to Lillie Jamison, born in Macon county, Ill., in May, 1880, a daughter of George and Elizabeth (Weed) Jamison, farmers of Macon county. Mr. and Mrs. Parr became the parents of one son, Maurice R., born in April, 1905. Mr. Parr is a man who understands his special work thoroughly, and the city is to be congratulated on securing his services.

PATE, William Sherman.—The man who is selected from among his fellow citizens for a responsible position under the government, must of necessity possess certain distinguishing traits of character, and his office alone is a testimonial to his high character and public spirit. William Sherman Pate of Sears, Ill., merchant and postmaster, is a man who has long stood well with those who know him, and both as a business man and official, richly merits the consideration in which he is held. He was born in Warwick county, Ind., in 1865, a son of Philip and Sarah (Pulkerson) Pate, the former born in Kentucky, and the latter in the same state. These parents had eight children, six of whom are living: Virgil; John, who is deceased; Simon; Hiram; Martha; Mary, who is the wife of S. Stone; Noah, who is deceased; and William Sherman. Both parents are deceased. Until his death the father was a carpenter.

William Sherman Pate attended the public schools in Boonville, Ind., and was graduated therefrom. He then learned the carpenter trade, and for four years, followed farming in Indiana. In 1891, he came to Rock Island county, spending a year at Rock Island, when he went to Sears. In 1906, he established his present business, handling groceries and notions. President McKinley appointed him postmaster, and he was re-appointed by Presidents Roosevelt and Taft.

In 1892, Mr. Pate married Cora Campbell of Sears. They have two children: Della and Harry, both at home. Fraternally, Mr. Pate is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. Politically, he has always voted the republican ticket, and served as assessor two terms from Rock Island township. He also served on the school board one term, and was president of the village board of trustees of Sears for one term. It is such men as Mr. Pate who give substantiality to any community.

PATTIN, Ralph T., a property owner and responsible and respected citizen of Rock Island, Ill., who occupies a position of considerable trust in connection with one of the large business houses of this city, was born at Kewanee, Henry county, Ill., November 27, 1859, and is a son of Oliver and Angeline S. (Guard) Pattin. Oliver Pattin, the father, was a grandson of Benjamin Pattin, whose name is enrolled as one of the soldiers in the American Revolution, who served under General Washington. It is probable that the Pattin family moved to Pennsylvania shortly after and Oliver Pattin was born at Hammarville, May 22, 1833, but spent the greater part of his life in Illinois, coming to Kewanee when eleven years of age. His business was teaming and contracting and he owned his own teams and wagons. He remained a resident of Kewanee until 1874, when he moved to Aledo, Mercer county, Ill., and from there to Luthersburg, and two years later to Viola, and then to New Windsor, as his different contracts made advisable, and in 1880 came to Rock Island, where he lived until his death, which occurred at the age of seventy-two years. He married Angeline S. Guard, who was born at Brownsville, Ohio, and died December 31, 1897, at the age of sixty-one years. Of their four sons and four daughters, four are now living: Henry, of Rock Island; Ralph T., of Rock Island; William, of Davenport, Iowa; and Ella, widow of James A. Piatt, who died at Tacoma, Wash., in the early days of that city's founding.

Ralph T. Pattin attended school mainly in Kewanee and then went to work in a saw-mill, where he made shingles, and continued at that work for twenty-six years. For the past five years he has been night watchman for Colkey Brothers' Boat Yard. Large interests are in his charge in this position and his reliability and fidelity recognized by his employers. During his many years of constant industry, Mr. Pattin has accumulated real estate which is quite valuable and he has a residence at No. 525 Fifth street, Rock Island.

At New Windsor, Ill., July 1, 1880, Mr. Pattin was married to Miss Catherine Faque, who was born in the city of New York, November 21, 1848, a daughter of Michael and Margaret Faque. Her parents were born in Ireland and came unmarried to America, but were united in New York and lived in that city for some time. The father of Mrs. Pattin was a railroad contractor. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Pattin. One is deceased. Mary is the wife of James Cronk of Rock Island and they have two children, Ralph and Ada; George married Lulu Wilhelm, of Rock Island, and they have one daughter, Gertrude.

PAULI, Christian (deceased).—It is remarkable that those of foreign birth have the courage to brave the unknown in coming to our shores in search of better conditions. This tendency on the part of those of the old world demonstrates that this country has a wide-spread reputation for fair dealing, and the giving each man a chance to make something of himself provided he is not afraid of honest work. One of the men who, coming here in young manhood, achieved a well-earned prosperity, was the late Christian Pauli, one of the representative farmers of Bowling township, who owned a fine farm of sixty acres. He was born in Switzerland, November 26, 1843, a son of Christian Pauli. The latter died when forty-seven years old, and his wife died when forty-five. Neither of them, or any other member of their family, save Mr. Pauli, ever came to the United States.

In 1869, Christian Pauli, the younger, came to the United States. He had attended public school in his native land until he was seventeen years old, and then learned farming. Mr. Pauli settled in Rock Island, and in 1893 was able to buy his farm, which he improved very materially, making it an excellent property.

In 1884, Mr. Pauli married Mrs. Katherine Krassen, born in Switzerland, who came to this country in girlhood. By her first marriage she had one daughter, Mrs. Rosy Fry, widow of Jacob Fry. Mr. Pauli was a republican, but never sought office. He was a hard-working, thrifty man and an excellent manager, whose success in life was won through the practice of these virtues. His standing in his community was excellent and he had a number of friends throughout the country who mourned his death on June 7, 1912. Mrs. Pauli later sold the farm and came to Andalusia where she is now living, having a comfortable home.

PAULSEN, Henry F., a well-known contractor of Rock Island, has demonstrated what a man of energy and perseverance can accomplish in a few years, having built up a good business since 1901. He was born in South Rock Island, Ill., May 27, 1878, a son of Mathias and Mary (Willadsen) Paulsen, natives, respectively, of Germany and Denmark. The father came to the United States as a young man and soon afterwards located at Rock Island, where he engaged in the manufacture of brick, and continued in that business until his death, in 1888. His widow survives and makes her home in Davenport. They had children as follows: Henry F., Harry, Walter, and Etta, who is the wife of George Diesenroth.

Henry F. Paulsen started business on his own account as a contractor and takes contracts for the entire construction of houses, and has completed large jobs so satisfactorily that he established a reputation for ability and integrity. He has a beautiful residence at No. 1201 Twelfth street, in which he has his office, and in the rear he has a planing mill, where he manufactures many articles used in his building work. Having everything convenient and near at hand, he is able to secure the material without waiting so long as he might otherwise be compelled to do. For a man of his years, he has attained a high degree of success. He and his wife belong to the M. E. church. In his political views he is liberal, voting for men and measures rather than for party. Fraternally he is affiliated with the M. W. A. and the B. P. O. E.

On October 19, 1896, Mr. Paulsen married Jessie Mae Burton, who was born at Quincy, Ill., daughter of Joseph and Alice (Cockrell) Burton, her father a native of England and her mother of Virginia. The Burton family live in St. Louis, and there were seven children, all except one surviving: Lilly, Annie, Mrs. Paulsen, John, Alice, Arthur and Joe (deceased). Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Paulson: Cheval, Lilly and Helen, the last named of whom died in infancy.

PAULSEN, John H., proprietor of Paulsen's second-hand store at No. 1513 Third avenue, Rock Island, is one of the men of the city who has met a demand with an establishment that caters to a certain line of trade. He carries a large stock of furniture, stoves and trunks, and it is all of value. Mr. Paulsen was born in Germany, January 13, 1864, a son of John and Anna Paulsen. Both died in Germany, where the father was a general merchant.

John H. Paulsen attended school until he was fifteen years old, securing a fair knowledge of the German language. Following this, he clerked in a grocery for two years. He then sailed for America, from Bremen for Baltimore, where he arrived in 1881. From that city he went to Wyoming, Iowa, and for a year was at Oxford Junction as clerk in a dry goods store. He then spent three years in a grocery store at Omaha, and two years in Orlin, Iowa, as clerk in a general store. Leaving Orlin, December 20, 1887, Mr. Paulsen came to Rock Island, and learned the trade of a painter, but followed it but little, for in 1889, he began clerking in the grocery store of Frank Young, and later went with Jerry Darragh. Still later, he clerked for the Arnolds, who sold to the Hess Bros., with whom Mr. Paulsen remained for four years. He then engaged in a retail liquor business for five years. For the next four years, he again clerked for Hess Bros., and then opened a second-hand store in Davenport, which he conducted for two years, when he moved it to his present location.

Mr. Paulsen was married January 1, 1887, to Mary Utka, daughter of August and Wilhelmina Utka. Mrs. Paulsen was born in Germany in 1867, but was brought to America by her parents in 1880. The family located at Olin, Iowa, where her father was interested in agricultural matters. Mr. and Mrs. Paulsen have had one child—John T., born at Olin, Iowa, September 29, 1887. Mr. Paulsen is a republican. Fraternally, he belongs to the Eagles and Mystic Workers of America. He is a man widely known, not only in Rock Island city and Davenport, but throughout the county, where he is recognized as a business man of sterling qualities, worthy of all commendation.

PAUWELS BROS.—One of the branches of the building business is the purchasing of lots and the erection thereon of substantial houses for the use of homeseekers of moderate means, and perhaps no firm in this line is better known in Rock Island county than that of Pauwels Bros. The members of the firm are Camiel and Achiel Pauwels. They are the sons of Peter and Julia (Lehman) Pauwels. The entire family was born in Belgium, where the father was a farmer. In 1890, the father came to the United States, and for three years was a laborer at Detroit. Coming then to Moline, he worked at the Union Malleable shops for fourteen years, but is now employed by the city. The three eldest children, Virginia, Erma and Cyril, came to join the father in 1894; and in 1896, Camiel and Achiel, with their mother and sister, Phrailde, now the wife of A. A. Bruynooghe, completed the family circle at Moline.

When Camiel Pauwels arrived in Moline, he had already attended school for two years in his native place, but entered St. Mary's school of Moline, and also went to the public schools of the city. His brother, Achiel, also attended St. Mary's school and the public schools of Moline. The children were brought up in the Catholic faith, all belonging to that church. Camiel Pauwels is a member of the Belgium Workingmen's Union. Both he and his brother are very liberal in their political views, and are valued citizens of the city they are helping to develop. Their place of business is at No. 1834 Twelfth street, and they have been engaged in their present line for the past three years. They live in a comfortable house which they own, and have substantial interests elsewhere in the city. Shrewd business men, they know how to carry on a profitable business, and yet their sterling integrity of purpose guides them in their transactions, and makes their name stand for uprightness and solidity.

PAYNE, Hon. William, whose fellow citizens have distinguished him by election to the state legislature, and with whom he stands high as any man in the county, is one of the representatives of the best class of people in this part of the state. He was born March 8, 1841, in the then territory of Iowa, in what is now Pleasant Valley, Scott county, Iowa, a son of Jeremiah and Letitia (Orr) Payne, who located in Scott county, in 1837, coming there from New York state and Ohio, respectively. William Payne was educated in the public schools near his home, and in the winter of 1859 and 1860, attended Quincy College. In 1860, he began teaching school in Posey county, Ind., and later in Adams county, Ill. However, the Civil war breaking out, he felt that his duty lay in the field, and he enlisted in Company D, Thirteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving the greater part of the four years he was in the army in this company. At the close of the war, he found employment in various mercantile establishments, and on farms. Mr. Payne's career as a public official began in the spring of 1866, with his appointment as deputy county treasurer, and in the fall of the same year, he was appointed deputy sheriff, serving two terms. In the early seventies, he was elected county sheriff, and was re-elected to the same office. In 1875, he bought a farm in Zuma township, which continued to be his home for a quarter of a century, but in 1900, he moved to Rock Island and has since disposed of his farm property. In 1890, his services as a public official were further recognized by his election to the lower house of the state assembly, and he was re-elected for three successive terms, serving in all eight years as a representative of his people in that high office. He was then elected to the state senate, and for four years gave the state the benefit of his advice and influence, but retired in 1902, steadily refusing to accept further nomination. His ability and dignified discharge of duties placed upon him, has resulted in his being chosen for various positions of trust and responsibility, among them being that of president for several years of the Rock Island Agricultural Association. Mr. Payne is a Mason in high standing, having passed through all the orders, including the Consistory. He belongs to Rock Island Lodge No. 658, A. F. & A. M.; Rock Island Chapter No. 18, R. A. M.; Rock Island Commandery No. 18, K. T.; the Oriental Consistory of Chicago; and the Kaaba Temple Ancient Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Davenport, Iowa. He also belongs to the Grand Army of the Republic and has been very active in his post.

On October 26, 1870, Mr. Payne was married to Miss Jennie Wilson, daughter of Maj. F. and Arsenath (Norris) Wilson, both pioneers of Rock Island county. Mr. and Mrs. Payne are the parents of the following children: William True, who was born March 19, 1872, died in July the following year; Frank, who is a farmer and stock feeder of Hampton township, married Clara Frells, in November, 1901, and has one son, Wilson, born in 1904; the second living son, Ben, of Rock Island, is now practicing law in Chicago, but holds his residence in the former city, and has taken all the Masonic degrees; Lucy, who married in 1899, Hon. Martin B. Bailey of Danville, has three children—Joe Cannon Bailey, born in 1900; Helen Payne Bailey, born in 1904, and Martin Bailey, Jr., born in 1909; and Mabel, who resides with her parents in Rock Island.

The record of a life like that of Mr. Payne teaches many valuable lessons, and shows that honesty and ability are recognized and rewarded. Although out of public life, Mr. Payne has never ceased to be interested in current matters, and is always lending his influence to secure civic improvements and the betterment of government.

PAYSON, Wesley H.—Long after all the survivors of the Civil war have passed over to answer to the last roll call, the memory and results of what their bravery accomplished will live in the hearts of Americans. The veterans of that great conflict are still to be found in almost every community, and one of those highly esteemed in Rock Island county, is Wesley H.

Payson, a retired paper maker of Milan. He was born in Massachusetts, October 6, 1834, a son of Marshal H. and Mary (Hicks) Payson, also of Massachusetts, where the father was a manufacturer.

Marshal H. Payson moved to Saratoga Springs and thence to Erie, Pa., where he both farmed and manufactured paper. Still later, he went back to Massachusetts to take charge of a paper mill at Lee, Mass., but at an early date came to Rock Island county. His death occurred in Eau Claire, Wis., October 29, 1853, but his wife died when Wesley H. Payson was a child.

Educated in the public schools of Rock Island county, Wesley H. Payson grew up here, learning to be a paper maker. He enlisted in the Civil war, in Company G, Twenty-second Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving three months, and then re-enlisted in the three-year service, September 5, 1861. His first engagement was at Fort Donelson. He was also present at Pittsburg Landing, Corinth, siege of Vicksburg, and from the latter he was sent to Helena, Mont. At this time he was transferred from the Sixteenth to the Seventh Army Corps, and stationed at Little Rock, Ark., where his term of service expired, and he was mustered out at Camp Denison, Cincinnati, O., November 18, 1864. From there he went to Louisville, Ky., working in the paper mills there and in other southern states, for eight years, when he returned to Rock Island. Mr. Payson was married by Rev. S. Sise, at Quincy, Ill., May 22, 1869, to Henrietta Keller, born June 1, 1851, a daughter of George and Elizabeth Keller, natives of France and Germany, who came to America at a very early day. After their marriage, they settled at Quincy, Ill., where the father was a brick manufacturer. In 1849, he went to California, remaining there for four years. Mr. and Mrs. Payson had three children: William, who was born at Quincy, Ill., March 2, 1870, is at home; Fred, who was born at Ottawa, Ill., December 29, 1874, married Lillian Collins, has been employed for twenty-five years in the blacksmithing department of the Deere Plow Works; and Arthur (of Rock Island), who was born at Clinton, Iowa, July 1, 1884, married Myrtle Rymer and they have two sons, Chester and Harry, the only grandchildren.

In politics, Mr. Payson has always been independent, casting his vote for the man or principles he felt best represented his own ideas of right, and as is quite natural, he is an enthusiastic member of John Buford Post, G. A. R., No. 243, of Rock Island. Mrs. Payson attends the Presbyterian church and Mr. Payson the Methodist church.

PEARS, Arthur F.—This is the age of the young man, and he is proving that he belongs in the position where circumstances have thrust him. Business activities need the energy, ambition, constant endeavor which belong to the young man. Thus it is that large concerns are putting young men in charge of their affairs, and results have proven the wisdom of their choice.

One of the flourishing young business men of Rock Island county, is Arthur F. Pears, of Moline, a clothier connected with the Hub Clothing Company of this city. Mr. Pears was born at Moline, June 19, 1873, being a son of John and Hilda (Anderson) Pears, both of Sweden, where the mother was born in 1813. By occupation John Pears was a plow fitter, coming to this country when seventeen years old. His wife was brought here in childhood, and the two met and married at Princeton, Ill., which was their home for some time. The father died January 1894, having firmly established himself in the confidence of all who knew him. Mrs. Pears died January 10, 1913. John Pears and wife had five children, two of them are deceased, the others being: Robert J., Arthur F., and Hilda E. During the Civil war, John Pears served his adopted country as a soldier and made a record for bravery.

Growing up at Moline, Arthur F. Pears attended the common schools and took a course in the business college, after which he filled several clerical positions, until he became connected with his present firm, where he has proved his worth and reliability. Mr. Pears belongs to the Sons of Veterans, the Woodmen of the World, serving as secretary of the same; the Odd Fellows, Red Men, and Eagles, and is exceedingly prominent fraternally. As yet Mr. Pears is unmarried.

PEARSALL, Jere, whose business activities include the management of a productive farm of eighty-one acres and the feeding and shipping of live stock to the great central market at Chicago, has still found time, in a particularly busy and practical life, to look into local affairs pertaining to good government and has assisted in administering numerous offices in Coe township. It often requires considerable pressure to convince a busy farmer that he should, in the interest of his community, consent to turn from his private affairs to those which concern the body of his fellow citizens, for often the emoluments of these local offices do not in any way repay the trouble incurred. Mr. Pearsall has frequently been selected by his fellow citizens for such offices and has served faithfully and satisfactorily as highway commissioner and township treasurer, at the present time filling the latter office. He was born in Cook county, Ill., November 26, 1843, and is a son of William C. and Jane (Ellingham) Pearsall, and a grandson of Nathaniel and Sarah (Grove) Pearsall.

William C. Pearsall was a son of Nathaniel Pearsall, who was a native of New York city, while his wife, Sarah Grove, had been born in Connecticut. They were early settlers in Cayuga county, N. Y., and died in Rock Island county, Ill. The father of Nathaniel Pearsall was a Revolutionary soldier. When William C. Pearsall was seven years old the family moved to Steuben county, N. Y. He bought 1,000 acres of land (Mexican war land warrants) in Coe township and moulded and pressed the brick for his house at a later date, with his own hands.

William C. Pearsall was born in Syracuse county, N. Y., and when old enough learned the cooper trade and later, in 1838, went to Canada and was there during the McKenzie Rebellion. Before Cook county, Ill., was surveyed, he settled there and remained until 1848, when he drove to Rock Island county, where he took up 160 acres of land in Coe township. It was all wild country at that time and until he could provide a shelter for his family he left them at Cordova, where they lived for a year. In the meanwhile he hewed out timber from his land and erected a small house which the family occupied for seven years. Later he burned brick and erected the handsome brick residence which is the present home of Squire Rathbun. Mr. Pearsall occupied it until his death, which occurred May 16, 1891, and his burial was in the cemetery at Pleasant Point. Soon after his settlement in Coe township he set out orchards and a fine nursery. During the Civil war he was enrolling officer of Coe township and took an active part in giving support to the government during that trying period of history. He was prominent in all movements for the public good and publicly and personally his life was useful to his fellow citizens. He was permitted to celebrate the anniversary of his wedding on June 16, 1883, and there are many who recall that celebration of fifty years of happy wedded life. His beloved partner survived until September 16, 1906, her death occurring at the age of ninety-three years. Her maiden name was Jane Ellingham and she was brought from England to America when small, a daughter of Robert and Sarah Ellingham, who located in Canada. To William C. and Jane Pearsall thirteen children were born, three of whom came before the family left Canada. The record is as follows: William C. who was drowned in boyhood in the Mississippi river; Sarah Jane who married George Pearsall; Robert E. who lives in Coe township; Emily N. who is deceased, died a few years after her marriage to Rev. O. Tanner; Jeremiah; Elizabeth who is the wife of Andrew Taber, of Colorado; Mary and Martha, twins, the former being Mrs. Rathbun, of Coe township, and the latter being Mrs. J. W. Miller, residing on the old homestead in Coe township; Luther S. who died at Port Byron, in 1909; Adelia who died at the age of eighteen years; Rosetta who died in childhood; and Phebe, Mrs. Louis Rathgeber, who lives at Fulton, Ill.

Jeremiah Pearsall attended a military school at Fulton, Ill., in youth and later took a course in a commercial college at Davenport, Ia. Brought up on a farm, his main interests have been connected with agriculture. Formerly he did a large business in buying, feeding and shipping livestock but in late years has not been so active in that direction, paying more attention to his general farming along the line of grain producing. He owns eighty-one acres of the old homestead and lives in great comfort and content, and also owns additional land in Coe township, 171 acres in all, on sections 23 and 14, as well as his beautiful home.

On December 6, 1865, he was united in marriage with Miss Martha Louisa McConnell, a daughter of William and Sidney L. (Irwin) McConnell. She was born in Allegheny county, Pa., November 22, 1847, and was four years old when she accompanied her parents to Illinois. Her father died July 5, 1887 and was buried in Pleasant Point cemetery, and the mother died February 21, 1892, aged seventy-two years. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Pearsall, namely: Colwell, of Nebraska; Luther L. of Coe township; Jeremiah, of Nebraska; Cecelia, wife of Clyde Trowbridge of Canoe Creek township; Morris Roy, of Canoe Creek township; and Louisa, widow of Homer Russell. Mr. Russell died April 22, 1907, and she resides with her parents. There are seven grandchildren in the family. Politically Mr. Pearsall is a republican, and with his family he belongs to the Baptist church. He is identified fraternally with Port Byron Lodge of Odd Fellows and has passed all the chairs; with the Port Byron Knights of Pythias, and the Modern Woodmen of America, at Hillsdale.

PEARSALL, Luther Irvin (deceased).—Long experience has taught that stock raising can be profitably combined with general farming in Rock Island county, as the natural conditions are almost perfect and the transportation facilities unsurpassed. One of the men who became a successful agriculturalist was Luther Irvin Pearsall, who resided on section 10, Coe township. He was born on the old Pearsall homestead, in Coe township, June 30, 1871, a son of Jeremiah Pearsall. Luther Irvin Pearsall was educated in the district school of his township, and from childhood taught to farm. In 1906, he bought eighty acres of section 10, and began at once to improve the property. He added to his buildings, put up fences, and enriched his land, and for years carried on general farming and stock raising, specializing in the dairy industry in more recent years.

On April 17, 1895, Luther Irvin Pearsall was married to Ida Coffman, a daughter of Alvah and Louisa (Pratt) Coffman, born in Reynolds, this county. Mr. and Mrs. Pearsall have had two children: Alvah L., born March 26, 1898; and Orpha G., born September 30, 1906. Mr. Pearsall was elected tax collector in 1908, and held that office for two years. In 1911, he was elected a school trustee, which position he held for a number of years. He was a consistent member of the Baptist church, as is his wife, and for three years served as superintendent of the Sunday school. Mr. Pearsall died in St. Anthony's Hospital, July 26, 1912. It was his aim to carry out in his daily life the faith he believed, and no man was more highly esteemed for his uprightness and probity of character than he. Mr. Pearsall was a good farmer, excellent business man and kind neighbor, and his many friends throughout the county mourn his loss.

PEARSALL, Robert L., whose comprehensive knowledge of the vast interests centered in the supplying of the immense demand for seasonable merchandise throughout Rock Island county, has placed him at the head in his line, in Watertown, Ill., was born in Port Byron township, this county, April 18, 1884. He is a son of William W. and Ella T. (Trent) Pearsall, natives of Rock Island county, born near Port Byron, where they now reside.

Growing up in his native township, Robert L. Pearsall attended school there and at Port Byron, and then began his business career as clerk for his uncle, a general merchant, at Port Byron, Ill. Apt to learn, and possessing those qualities requisite to success, the young man was soon able to grasp the details of the business, and in March, 1908, established himself in a business of his own at Watertown, Ill. Here he is located in a new building, erected for him, which is the only business block in the little city. His store is well equipped with the newest fixtures, and he carries at all times a complete line of the latest ideas in merchandise of every kind. Recognizing the fact that his customers are intelligent people who keep abreast of the times through reading and travel, he aims to give them right in their own city metropolitan fashions and that he succeeds in pleasing them his large trade testifies. He began with a stock valued at $1,200, but now carries one worth $6,000, and it is as fine as any in the county.

As yet unmarried, Mr. Pearsall is numbered among the leaders in the younger social set here, and is immensely popular with all classes, for he has a winning personality and many pleasing characteristics. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias of Watertown. A republican, he is now serving Watertown as village clerk.

PEARSALL, William Colwell (deceased), was born in Steuben county, N. Y., June 16, 1812, and came to Rock Island county, Ill., in 1848, taking up 640 acres of land, where he and his wife lived until death. He married at Brockville, Canada, Jane Ellingham, a daughter of Robert Ellingham, and they had thirteen children, of whom the eldest was William C. Another child, Sarah Jane, became Mrs. George Pearsall, and now resides at Tacoma, Wash. The second son was Robert Ellingham, who lives in Coe township, where he has held office. Robert E. Pearsall married, September 19, 1860, Elizabeth Stout and their children have been as follows: Elizabeth and Robert F. who are deceased; and Levi Colwell, William N., and Nathaniel B., all of whom are living.

PEARSON, Christ, a cement contractor at Moline is profiting from the increasing demand for cement construction, and bringing to bear upon his work a ripened experience and wide knowledge. For the past six years, he has been in business for himself, and for seven years prior to that, was in the employ of a construction company. He was born in Wermland, Sweden, August 3, 1867, a son of Pear Christian and Louisa (Anderson) Pearson, both natives of Sweden. The father was a farmer in his native land, and died when Christ was but seventeen weeks old. He was the third child, but the others died in infancy, so that he is the only survivor. The mother married Olof Frederick Olson and had four children: Emma S., Anna O., Hulda Louisa, and Carl F., all born in Sweden. The good mother died in 1901.

Christ Pearson was reared on the farm in Sweden and went to school there, remaining at home until he attained his majority. At that time he learned the concrete business thoroughly, working for a large railroad company for eight years. In 1896, he and his wife came to the United States, locating first at Chicago, Ill., but that same year came to Moline, where he obtained employment in the Deere shops, thus continuing for five years. Following this, he resumed his concrete work.

In 1895, Mr. Pearson was married to Selma Hagman, born in Westergatland, Sweden, June 3, 1868. Mrs. Pearson is a daughter of Johannas and Charlotte (Valentine) Hagman, who still survive, being over ninety years old. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Pearson: Clarence, Hildegard, and Lillie, all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Pearson belong to the Swedish Methodist church. Mr. Pearson votes the republican ticket. The family residence is at No. 1120 Eleventh street. It is his intention to round out his days in the city where he has been so successful, and he is naturally interested in its growth and development. So much faith has he in it, that he not only owns his home, but has invested money in another residence.

PEARSON, Captain James Peter. With some men efficiency is the keynote of success. From boyhood they earnestly strive to do thoroughly everything they undertake, with the result that each duty is faithfully and capably performed and every responsibility met and shouldered with a due sense of its value. Perhaps no man of Rock Island county has more clearly demonstrated in his work and business the value of this one quality of efficiency, than Captain James Peter Pearson, organizer, president and manager of the Moline Sand Company; organizer, president and manager of the Moline Channel Ice Company; vice-president of the Moline Pole and Shaft Company, and vice-president of the Mechanics and Merchants Savings Bank of Moline. Captain Pearson was born at Halmstad, Sweden, September 4, 1868, a son of Bengt and Bendikta (Swenson) Pearson, and the youngest in the following family born to his parents: Eric, Berta, Johannes, Christine, Nellie, Bernhard and James P.

Growing up amid healthy surroundings in an excellent home, James P. Pearson was trained to discharge faithfully the duties which lay at hand, and at the same time, while assisting his father with the work of operating the homestead, attended school at Halmstad. Although only seventeen years old when he left Sweden for the United States, he had already taught school for three terms, so that he possessed more than average ability even at that early stage in his career. With his arrival in the United States, he came to a farm in the vicinity of Galva, Ill., where he remained for two years, gaining there a knowledge of the country and language, and then came to Moline where his activities have since centered. At first he was in the employ of the Moline Ice Company, and during the three years of his connection with this concern, he served his employers faithfully and learned the details of the ice trade. So well did he master these that at the age of twenty-two years he entered into a partnership with W. H. Robinson and Emil Carlson for the purpose of conducting an ice business. Within three years, Captain Pearson and Mr. Carlson bought the interest of Mr. Robinson, and organized and incorporated what is now known as the Moline Channel Ice Company, the former being its president and manager from that date until the present day. This important company handles coal as well as ice, and is one of the solid concerns of the county, treated of in the Manufacturing chapter, as is the Moline Sand Company, which was incorporated in 1903, with Captain Pearson as its efficient president and manager. The latter company owns three steamboats, one of which, the Marquette, is frequently used as an excursion steamer, in that capacity carrying excursion parties to Pearson's Park, and other desirable points of interest and recreation up and down the Mississippi river. The energies of Captain Pearson have not been confined to the conduct of these companies, for in 1913 he incorporated the Moline Cement Products Company of which he is the executive head, and he is serving both the Moline Pole and Shaft Company and the Mechanics' and Merchants' Savings Bank of Moline as vice-president.

A man of social tendencies, he finds relaxation and pleasant companionship in his membership with the Elks, Red Men and Odd Fellows. For some time he has been a recognized factor in the Moline Commercial Club, while in politics his influence is strong. For four years, from 1905 to 1909, Captain Pearson served the Fourth ward as alderman, and gave it and his city a wise and business-like administration of the affairs which came within the scope of his action. Unmarried, Captain Pearson resides at No. 1809 Third avenue, Moline. Essentially a self-made man, Captain Pearson has found no royal road to fortune, but has accomplished much through his own unaided efforts, seconded by native ability and common sense. It is such men as he who give stability to any community, and place it among the important factors in the industrial world.

PEARSON, Joseph, is one of the substantial residents of Rock Island. He was born in Yorkshire, England, May 27, 1831, a son of James and Nancy (Beans) Pearson, both of whom died when the lad was only ten weeks old, and he was reared by an uncle, George Earnshaw. The latter was a stone cutter, and taught Joseph his trade, training him so carefully that he was considered an expert in this line of work. After completing his eleven years' apprenticeship to his uncle, Joseph Pearson at the age of twenty-one years, sailed for New York, arriving in the Empire state in 1856. On February 4, 1857, he arrived at Chicago, and was there employed on the postoffice. He and his wife then went to Indianapolis, where he was engaged as a stone cutter on the new postoffice building. On June 10, 1869, they moved to Rock Island, and Mr. Pearson was engaged as a stone cutter on the first two buildings of the United States arsenal, and was retained in the employ of the government for twenty-four years. He then worked on the stone work of the new courthouse, which stands as a monument to his thoroughness and artistic ability. In addition he did the stone cutting for the Y. M. C. A. building. He was one of the stone cutters who donated their time and experience to cutting the ornaments in Spencer Square.

On February 13, 1858, Mr. Pearson was united in marriage with Ellen McCarthy, born in County Cork, Ireland, in 1836. Left an orphan at the age of ten years, she joined her brother who had come to this country, and she went to school in New York City. She is a daughter of Daniel and Margaret (O'Neal) McCarthy, members of the gentry, who died in Ireland. They were people of means, and their children inherited their property. Mr. and Mrs. Pearson have two children: Charles, of Chicago; and Missouri E., wife of John Murin. Mr. Pearson is an Episcopalian, while his wife is a Catholic. During the many years he was connected with government work, Mr. Pearson's services received proper appreciation, for there are few who could execute the designs with the accuracy and fineness of cutting which were so characteristic of him. Now he is enjoying a well-earned rest, looking after his property, and advancing the interests of his friends with kindly intent and generous purpose.

PEITSCHER, August Henry (deceased).—The late August H. Peitscher of Rock Island, Ill., was known as a successful farmer and capitalist, and spent the last few years of his life retired from business cares. He was a native of Prussia, Germany, born June 24, 1830, and received but a limited education in his native country, starting out in life for himself in early youth. In 1864 he came to the United States, landing in New York. He located first in Genesee, N. Y., and went from there to Ottawa, Ill. He was married at Rock Island to Miss Ernestine Ott, and they went to Scott county, Iowa. Mr. Peitscher was a farmer in Scott county, Iowa, and came to the city of Moline and later to Rock Island when he retired. He was a devout Methodist. In politics he was a republican, taking an intelligent and active interest in public affairs.

Children as follows were born to Mr. Peitscher and wife: Annie, who is the widow of Henry Topp; William, who lives at Princeton, Iowa, married Lena Scharf; Albert, who lives at Rock Island, married Emma Miller; George, who lives at Princeton, married Annie Volder; Emma, who was born in Moline, April 13, 1875, was educated in the public schools and was married there May 24, 1893, to Adolph Dublin, and they have four children—Paul E., Mabel D., Myrtle E., and Pearl L.; Edward, who lives at Princeton, Iowa, married Lena Kroeger; Lewis, who lives at Princeton, Iowa, married Lena Wies; Frederick, who is a resident of Holstein, Ida county, Iowa, married Maggie Kurtz; Sophia, who is the wife of Christ Kroeger of Eldridge, Iowa; Ernest, who lives at Rock Island, married Ruth Anderson.

Mr. Peitscher died at his home in Rock Island, July 9, 1903, and his loss was much deplored by his many friends. His memory is revered and respected by his children, who are proud of his record of an upright, useful life. He was generally regarded as a public-spirited citizen and a man of high character.

PENTLAND, James.—It takes keen business instinct and sound judgment to pick out desirable property, for unless land is well situated, supplied with proper drainage, and near transportation, it is difficult to develop it properly. James Pentland is fortunate in his location, for his 105-acre farm in Port Byron township has all the necessary requirements, and he has made it a desirable farm. The substantial buildings, neat fences and other modern improvements have been installed by him, and he is reaping the well-earned results of his industry and foresight. Mr. Pentland was born in Beaver county, Pa., July 6, 1851. When he was three years old, his parents moved first to Le Claire, Iowa, but soon thereafter came to Port Byron, where Mr. Pentland was reared and educated.

Always interested in developing property, Mr. Pentland has frequently bought and sold land. In 1868, he bought forty acres, and after partially improving it, sold in 1876, to buy eighty acres, which farm is now owned by A. Wiggins. After four years, he sold it, moving to Scott county, Ill., where he purchased 140 acres, and lived on it for two years. Once more he sold, and going to Osceola county, Iowa, invested in 160 acres. After a year he again disposed of his property, and coming back rented land for three years, then in 1894, bought his present farm. Under his watchful care, this property has developed and he has every reason to be proud of what he has accomplished.

Mr. Pentland was married in Davenport, Iowa, to Abbie Graham. In 1895, he married Charlotte Lagrelins, born in Sweden.

Mr. Pentland understands his work thoroughly and studies new methods, adopting those he believes will suit his land and community. As a result of his operations, he has accumulated considerable property, and is one of the sound, substantial men of his township, where he holds the respect and confidence of his neighbors and business associates.

PEPPING, John, is one of the prosperous business men and successful bakers in Moline, having a large establishment and giving employment to a number of people. He has built up a reputation for the high grade of his output and for the modern methods used in carrying on all his work. He is a native of Luxemburg, Germany, born September 18, 1861, a son of John and Katharine Pepping. He received his education in his native country and there grew to young manhood, leaving the parental roof when but fifteen years old, and has been back only twice since then. He went from Germany to France and worked on farms for five years, having but two employers during this time.

When about twenty years old, Mr. Pepping decided to come to America, and before starting, made his parents a visit of some two months. He secured passage on the Red Star line, and after landing at New York, came direct to Chicago, where he worked for some time at day labor, then learned the trade of molder, and followed the same until 1903. In 1891 he came to Moline and worked for Charles Hill in the Union Malleable Iron Co., until engaging in business for himself, in June, 1904, when he opened his place at Sixteenth avenue and Twelfth street. In 1910 he erected a modern building for his own use, at No. 1852 Fifteenth street, where he has since been located. He does all kinds of plain and fancy baking and employs ten persons, besides members of his own family, and has three delivery wagons in addition to an automobile which he uses for this purpose, it being operated by his eldest son, Frank Pepping. Mr. Pepping is an able and enterprising business man, and has created a large demand for his goods, by reason of their excellence.

Mr. Pepping was married in Chicago, in 1885, to Miss Julia Moszezynski, daughter of Frank and Paulina Moszezynski. She was born in Neimark, Germany, January 4, 1865, and came to America alone when sixteen years of age, joining a brother in Chicago. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Pepping: Frank, Matthew, John, Benjamin, Katharine, George and Frederick. Frank married Louisa Gannon and lives in Rock Island, but is in the employ of his father. Matthew married Mildred Nelson and lives in Moline. John, Jr., married Grace Cecelia Gannon and they also reside in Moline.

PETERS, Capt. Christ, formerly captain of Truck Company No. 1, which position he held for three years, was one of the thoroughly competent officials of the fire department of Moline. He joined the volunteer fire department of Moline when he was eighteen years old, and was placed at the head of a company. When the paid department was organized, in 1896, he entered it as fireman, and served faithfully for thirteen years, when he was promoted to captain of Company No. 2. Captain Peters was born at Albany, N. Y., in 1858, a son of John G. and Caroline (Banks) Peters, natives of Saxony and Germany, respectively. They were married at Albany, N. Y., and came to Moline in 1868. The father worked at the arsenal for the government for years, dying in 1892, but his widow survived him until 1904. They had four children: Gustaff, Christ, William and Amelia, wife of Lewis Shallow of Moline.

Captain Peters was reared at Moline, where he attended public school, and later learned the machinist trade, working for the firm of Williams & White for twenty years, when he became connected with the fire department. During his long period of service, Captain Peters had some narrow escapes, once falling from the third story of Deere & Co.'s factory. He was also injured in a gasoline explosion, which occurred in the basement of a grocery store, being badly burned about the face and hands. On August 1, 1912, Captain Peters resigned from the fire department and engaged in the saloon business at 309 Twenty-third street, which he is now successfully operating.

In 1885, Captain Peters was married to Madge-line, Johan of Davenport, Iowa, who died October 29, 1909. Two children were born of this marriage; Harry, of Moline, married Lillie Banks, of Moline; and Edna, wife of J. Becker, a mail carrier, of Moline. The Modern Woodmen of America, Court of Honor, Eagles, and the Turner Society all hold Captain Peters' membership. He is very liberal in politics, but leans towards the democratic party. He and his children live at No. 1811 Twelfth avenue, where he owns his residence. It is to such brave, honorable men as Captain Peters, that the people of Moline were indebted in the past for their immunity of serious loss from fire, and the security to life and limb in case of a conflagration.

PETERSEN, Jens Thomas.—Rock Island county is one particularly fitted for farming activities, and those who have embraced an agricultural life within its confines are reaping abundantly from their foresight and faith in the future of this locality. One of the prosperous farmers of the county is Jens Thomas Petersen, of Sears, born in Denmark, December 3, 1835, a son of Henry and Christina (Stormer) Petersen, both of Denmark.

The father was a fisherman and lived out his life in his native land, as did his wife. They had twelve children, only four of whom survive, and one of them a sister still lives in Denmark. Henry Petersen was a soldier and participated in the Danish struggle for liberty in 1848 and 1849.

Reared in Denmark, Jens Thomas Petersen there received a common school education and assisted his father on the farm. In 1860, he came to America, landing at New York, where he remained but a short time, as he secured employment as fireman on an ocean liner plying from New York to Boston and other ports. Inspired by a love of liberty, which his father had taught him, he offered his services to his adopted country, upon the outbreak of the Civil war, enlisting in Company K, Fifty-ninth New York Volunteer Infantry, serving until 1865, receiving his discharge on July 17th of that year at Washington, D. C. He took part in many battles, and was wounded in the shoulder. After the war was ended, he went to Minnesota to engage in farming until 1868, when he began traveling. He first went to New Orleans and worked as fireman on a steamer plying from that port to New York and return. After several years, he went to South America, where he visited his sisters who lived in Buenos Aires and San Fernando, and from there went back to Denmark. In 1874, he returned to America, and settled in Rock Island county, where he resumed farming. Later he worked on one of the Mississippi river boats as fireman, and also on the Missouri and Yellowstone rivers in the same capacity. Once more he resumed his farming in Rock Island county, but later made a four-years' visit to Arkansas. Returning again to Rock Island county, he farmed, and has continued since then to make this locality his home. He owns and farms five acres of land near Sears, South Rock Island.

In 1876, Mr. Petersen was married in Rock Island to Catherine Ferkell, born in St. Louis, December 9, 1855, daughter of Nicholas and Elizabeth (Davenport) Ferkell, the father being born in Germany, and his wife on Government Island in Rock Island county. Mrs. Ferkell was a daughter of the late Colonel Davenport, a mine owner and operator of Belleville, Ill. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ferkell survive, making their home at St. Louis. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Petersen, four of whom survive: Henry, who is a farmer residing near Sears; Annie, who is the wife of John Passmore, living near Sears; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Harry McBride, living at Peoria; and Emma, who lives at home. There are three grandchildren in the family. Mr. Petersen is a member of John Buford Post, No. 243, G. A. R. In religious faith he is a Lutheran. He and his family are highly respected in their neighborhood, and he is a man of more than ordinary ability, whose many travels have sharpened his intellect, and made him observant of his fellow men.

PETERSON, Andrew (deceased), who was for many years a resident of Rock Island, Ill., was highly esteemed as a man of honest and upright character. He was industrious and ambitious and won financial success, being able to accumulate property and leave his widow in comfortable circumstances. He was born in Sweden, February 14, 1845, and his parents both died in that country. There he received a common school education and learned the trade of shoemaker, which he followed several years, and also served the required time in the Swedish army and afterwards was married in that country and subsequently came to America with his wife and one child. They landed in New York and came from there to Chicago.

Soon afterward Mr. Peterson reached Rock Island and entered the Rock Island Plow Works, where he was found to be a faithful employe, and during the last years of his active life he was employed as grinder in the plow factory. Later he moved to Keokuk, Iowa, and there his death occurred, April 8, 1886. His first wife died in Rock Island, leaving four children: Carl, of Rock Island; Mary, of Des Moines; Fred and Tillie. Mr. Peterson was married (second) in Moline, in 1882, to Caroline Swanson, who was born in Sweden in 1851, and came to the United States at the age of twenty-eight years, landing in New York city. Her parents had come to the United States nine years before, and both died in Iowa. She is a woman of beautiful character, highly esteemed by all who know her. She studied the writings of Mrs. Eddy for many years and finally was converted to belief in Christian Science, and takes great comfort in the teachings of this religion. She owns a beautiful home at 4302 Fifth avenue, Rock Island.

PETERSON, Carl August.—A number of the most progressive and successful of the agriculturalists of Rock Island county are natives of Sweden. It is seldom that one from this country of the far north is found in straightened circumstances, for the Swedes know how to work, save and invest. For these and other reasons it is fortunate that men possessing so many qualities that make for good citizenship, have selected this part of the state as their homes. One of those belonging to this class is Carl August Peterson, of Coe township. He was born in Selbarn, Sweden, September 4, 1810, being a son of Peter and Anna (Vandlun) Peterson. Mr. Peterson was reared on a farm, but not satisfied with existing conditions left his native land for America in 1873. Coming on to Rock Island county, he worked among the farmers for two years, when he was able to buy ten acres. Five years later, he added thirty acres, all on section 32. He has put up all of the buildings, including the house, barn and other structures, and has a very nice place. While his farm is smaller than those of some of his neighbors, he knows how to utilize every inch of his land, and his crops are satisfactory. The property is devoted to general farming, although Mr. Peterson raises a little stock, carrying six hogs, four cows and two horses.

Before leaving Sweden he was married, April 14, 1873, to Josephine Nelson, daughter of Nels Erickson and Lena Nelson. Mrs. Peterson was born June 17, 1842. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson had one son, Oscar, a carpenter of Moline.

Having already accomplished as much as he has, Mr. Peterson is planning other improvements and additions, and in all of his work he was aided by his wife, who was one of the best housekeepers in the neighborhood. She died January 8, 1913, and was buried in Port Byron cemetery. He has made many friends by his kindness of heart and he holds the confidence and respect of all who know him.

PETERSON, Carl O.—In every community where there is an influx of new people, and an internal growth, the building interests are certain to be important features in its industrial history. One of the men who has been shrewd enough to realize these facts, is Carl O. Peterson, a contractor of Moline, born at Port Byron, November 16, 1877, a son of Charles and Josephine Peterson, natives of Sweden. They came to Port Byron in 1873, and soon thereafter the father bought a farm in Coe township, where he and his wife still reside.

Carl O. Peterson came to Moline in 1900, and worked at the carpenter trade until the spring of 1907, when he established himself as a general contractor. He has built some of the finest residences at Moline, his work being characterized by fidelity to the terms of the contract, and originality of execution. For the first eighteen months, he was in partnership with Charles Hink of Moline, but severing that connection, has since continued alone.

In October, 1900, Carl O. Peterson was united in marriage with Rosa Nelson, born at Clinton, Ia., and one daughter, Cleone, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, September 14, 1904. Mr. Peterson belongs to the Swedish Lutheran church, and served as a trustee for one year. Fraternally, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen, No. 38, and the Elks, No. 1112. In political faith he is an independent. While Mr. Peterson received a common school education, he is practically a self-made man, for even during the time he was attending school, he worked on the farm for his father. Always willing to work, capable of forging to the front, Mr. Peterson has made a remarkable success of his work so far, and belongs without a doubt, to that class of reliable, upright citizens that are the real bulwark of Americanism.

PETERSON, Charles August, who has spent most of his life in Rock Island county, is well known as an industrious and successful farmer and an enterprising citizen. He was born on a farm near New Boston, Mercer county, Ill., February 7, 1855, a son of Gustave and Fredericka Rachel (Johnson) Peterson. The parents were born near Stockholm, Sweden, the father on October 31, 1820, and the mother on September 19, 1831. He received an excellent education, learned the trade of shoemaker, and served for three years in the Swedish army, attaining to the rank of corporal. Gustave Peterson was married in March, 1852, and the day after that event left his native land for America, sailing in the brig Manona from Guttenburg to New York city, and spending fourteen weeks on the water. For a few months he was at Boston, and then came as far west as Chicago, where he remained for a short time, working on the La Salle railroad. Following this, he moved to New Boston, Ill., and for three years worked by the day. He then came to Buffalo Prairie and for five years was employed by Sanford Hartman for fifty cents per day, during that time working from dawn until dark, using a "double-shovel" plow, drawn by one horse, the sickle, scythe and cradle. His methods and implements show in sharp contrast to those of the modern farmer. After renting land for twelve years, Gustave Peterson bought what became the homestead farm, which contained an old log house, and this was the home for some time. He afterwards erected a frame L-shaped addition, which was used for a kitchen. This house now stands in the rear of the present beautiful home, and is the oldest log house in the region. Gustave Peterson and his wife were members of the Swedish Methodist church and he was a republican in politics. They had children as follows: Charles August; Anna S. E., who was born in Mercer county, Ill., May 18, 1857; Mary E., Mrs. Edwin Potter, of Sweetland Center, Ia., who was born in Mercer county, Ill., September 8, 1859; Edwin, who was born in Rock Island county, July 3, 1872, died in infancy; and Louisa B., who was born in Rock Island county, December 29, 1875. All were educated in the public schools, and became members of the Methodist Episcopal church. The father died March 18, 1905, having lost his wife on March 12, 1892.

Charles A. Peterson remembers as some of his early teachers a Mr. Dickey, Mattie Castle and Sarah Thornton. He has worked on the home place all his active life, having come here with his parents and three sisters when a young man. After the death of his father, Charles A. Peterson bought the interest in the home farm belonging to his married sister, Mrs. E. H. Potter of Sweetland Center, Ia. He now owns a half interest in the old homestead with his two unmarried sisters, Anna S. E. and Louisa R. Peterson. They are living together, he never having married, in the new house erected by them in the fall of 1911. Gaining a well merited reputation for integrity and capability, he stands well with his neighbors. Like the others of the family, he is an active and useful member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and in politics he is a republican, having served as a school director. Fraternally he is a member of Lodge No. 229, I. O. O. F., of Illinois City.

PETERSON, Hedley Robert.—Black Hawk township has some of the best farms in Rock Island county, and consequently its farmers are numbered among the leading agriculturalists of this part of the state. One of those who has made a success of his life work is Hedley Robert Peterson, who belongs to one of the old families of Rock Island county. He was born in Black Hawk township, June 9, 1867, a son of Lawrence and Augusta (Nordell) Peterson. The former was born in Sweden, March 9, 1838, and the latter in Stockholm, August 5, 1835. Lawrence Peterson was a fisherman in his native country, but desiring better conditions, came to the United States in September, 1858, settling immediately in Rock Island county, where for several years he was employed in the paper mill. In 1860 he moved on a farm on Big Island, but is now living in Rock Island retired, aged seventy-three years. His wife died February 24, 1906.

Hedley Robert Peterson was educated in the public schools of his native township, attending them until he was eighteen years old. He then began working for his father, thus continuing until the latter's retirement in 1901. In that year he took possession of the homestead, since which time he has made many improvements. His farm consists of eighty-one acres of rich farm land on section 34.

On October 16, 1901, Mr. Peterson was married to Miss Otilia Wistrand, born in Paxton, Ill., September 12, 1870. She is a daughter of J. H. and Louise (Linstrom) Wistrand, both natives of Sweden. Mrs. Peterson is a graduate of the Moline public schools and Teacher's Training class, and taught school for ten years in Rock Island county. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson have had two children: Edward W., born January 31, 1903; and Robert W., born March 7, 1907. For six years Mr. Peterson was a school trustee; for four years he was road commissioner, and during his incumbency of the office, he did much to secure much needed improvement, including the erection of two bridges. At present he is school trustee. He was reared in the Baptist faith, and inclines towards that church. His wife is a devout member of the First Swedish Lutheran church of Moline. He is a live, energetic young man, whose efforts are constantly being directed to the improvement of his locality, and the advancement of his own affairs. His success has been well deserved, and in addition to material prosperity, he has earned the confidence and respect of those with whom he is associated.

PETERSON, John A.—Like so many of his neighbors, John A. Peterson has devoted the best years of his life to agriculture and has been repaid manifold for his untiring efforts, as his farm is one of the best cultivated in the township and his crops are banner ones. He was born in Sweden, September 12, 1857, a son of John and Margerta (Anderson) Peterson, the former born in Sweden, May 23, 1833, while the mother was born in 1816. The father survives, living in the land which gave them all birth. Mr. Peterson, Jr., has a sister, Sophia Anderson, wife of Gus Anderson, who resides in Rock Island.

On May 19, 1894, John A. Peterson was married to Christina Johnson, born January 31, 1862, daughter of John and Stena Johnson. The father died in Sweden, where they were all born, but Mrs. Johnson came to America in 1897, and now makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Peterson. There is one other child in the Johnson family, Peter Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson became the parents of four children: John P., who was born March 23, 1896; Esther Pauline, who was born January 15, 1899; Edith, who was born May 10, 1904; and Ellen, who was born March 24, 1908.

Mr. Peterson was educated in Sweden, in its excellent public schools, attending them until fourteen years old. From boyhood, Mr. Peterson farmed, and after coming to this country, in 1888, he continued his agricultural operations. In 1903, he bought his present property of forty acres known as the Jacob Maloman farm. Mr. Peterson and his wife belong to the Mission church, and in politics, he is a republican. He is a straightforward, honest, reliable man, hard-working and thrifty, and his aim is to add to his holdings until he becomes a large landowner.

PETERSON, Oscar A.—Rock Island county has long been recognized as one of the leading agricultural sections of the state, and those who have realized upon its possibilities are numbered among its most prosperous residents. One of the thoroughly modern farmers of Black Hawk township who has done much to advance existing conditions, is Oscar A. Peterson, born at Rock Island, February 19, 1862, a son of Lawrence and Augusta Peterson. The father was born in Sweden, March 15, 1838, but came to the United States in 1858. He was a fisherman and general laborer, and upon arriving at Rock Island found ready employment as a teamster for the United States Government, continuing as such for two or three years, when he commenced farming. In 1864, he moved on a farm in Black Hawk township, known as Big Island, and this continued to be his home until his retirement, since which time he has lived at Rock Island. Oscar A. Peterson was educated in the public schools of Black Hawk township, attending them until sixteen years old, when he began working for his father. When he was twenty-seven years old, he commenced working for himself. He owns a farm in Cordova township, on which he resided for eight years, and then bought his present property, moving on it in December, 1894. This property he has materially improved, and devotes it to general farming.

In 1887, Oscar A. Peterson married Elizabeth Johnston, born March 20, 1892, daughter of Robert and Marietta (Tanner) Johnston, the former born June 12, 1839, in Ohio, while the latter was born at Hillsdale, Ill. Robert Johnston was a farmer of Rock Island county. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson became the parents of eight children, namely: Myrtle who was born September 2, 1891; Ethel W. who was born January 22, 1893; Elbert Russel who was born January 17, 1896; Mark Harold who was born March 20, 1897; Rodney who was born December 27, 1898; Helen O. who was born June 1, 1903; Eva May who was born June 27, 1905; and Sarah E. who was born December 25, 1906. Oscar A. Peterson was reared in the faith of the Baptist church. In politics, he votes the republican ticket on national issues. He has served as a school director of Black Hawk township for thirteen years. Reliable, solid, sound, Mr. Peterson is one of the representative men of his locality, whose efforts are directed towards the betterment of local government, and the securing of needed improvements.

PETTIT, Guy V., editor of the Reynolds Press, and a man known, not only locally, but throughout the county, is one of the independent newspaper men of Rock Island county. He was born July 17, 1868, seven miles south of Geneseo, Henry county, Ill., son of Charles E. and Ellen M. Pettitt. The family on both sides extends back several generations in American history, and a number of his ancestors were associated with events in Pennsylvania, on the paternal side, and New York on the maternal. Charles E. Pettitt served in Company E, Eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, acting as private secretary to General Grant at Cairo, in 1862. Mrs. Charles Pettitt was a student at Lombard University, Galesburg, Ill.

Until he was fifteen years old, Guy V. Pettitt went to a country school, and then entered the Northwestern normal school of Geneseo. Having taken a three-year course in science and literature, he began teaching, and when only twenty-one years old, was made principal of the schools at Hampton, Rock Island county. In August, 1891, he went to Reynolds, to assume the duties of a similar position, which he held for three years, then he went to Brimfield, Peoria county, to act as principal of the schools there.

Always interested in newspaper work, Mr. Pettitt found an opportunity to indulge his inclinations, in February 1897, and bought the Reynolds Press, which he has since conducted on broad-gauge lines, making it the organ of the people. Since locating in Reynolds, Mr. Pettitt has served as village clerk, and two terms as president of the village board. Since casting his first vote, he has been a republican. Mr. Pettitt has taken an active part in the Sons of Veterans, Knights of Pythias, Modern Woodmen of America, Eastern Star, Elks and the Masonic orders, and has held high offices in a number of these societies.

On June 19, 1890, Mr. Pettitt was married to Jennie Repine of Galesburg, Ill. Royce Edgar, born May 5, 1895, and Earl Clyde, born April 19, 1902, form their family. The power of the fourth estate is generally admitted, and Mr. Pettitt recognizes his responsibilities in conducting an organ that influences his readers much more powerfully than if they formed a part of some congested community, where local news did not personally concern them. He is a man of right ideals, and his endeavor is to live up to them and develop his talents and those of the people associated with him.

PINNEO, Daniel T.—While the agricultural interests are heavy in Rock Island county, there are others which engage the intelligent consideration of some of the leading men, who have developed industries of considerable magnitude, and the output from them is marketed all over the country. One of these captains of industry of the county is Daniel T. Pinneo of Cordova, often called the father of the canning industry of Rock Island county. He was born in Scott county, Ia., in 1847, being a son of Matthias and Maria (Hire) Pinneo, natives of Vermont and Indiana, respectively. They married in Scott county, Ia., where they engaged in farming. When his services were needed in defense of his country, the father enlisted in Company A, Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and died of fever during his enlistment. His widow survived him until 1870. They had five children: Daniel T., John, Jennie, Hannah, who is the wife of George Custis, and Giles, who died in infancy. Daniel T. Pinneo was reared on the farm in Scott county, Ia., where he attended the district schools, and when twenty years old, he went to Mt. Vernon to enter college. After a year's course, he returned to Scott county, and taught school for two years. He then began farming in Clinton county, Ia. In 1873, he came to Cordova township, Rock Island county, to continue his farming operations, but in 1893 he sold his farm and located at Cordova, intending to live retired, but seeing the possibilities of a canning industry, he opened the Cordova Canning factory, where he produces the best canned tomatoes in this locality, his brand being known as the "X. T." Having inaugurated the industry in this section, he is proud of the progress that has been made, and also of his cement business. Instead of having leisure since leaving the farm, Mr. Pinneo finds that his time is more fully occupied than ever. A staunch republican, he has served with businesslike capability as mayor two terms, and has also been alderman several terms. Always a leader in everything he undertakes, his influence is strongly felt in politics, and to the end of securing good government and purity of administration.

In 1872, Mr. Pinneo was married to Emma Bell of Rock Island county, and their children are: Rodger D., who is assistant manager of the Pacific Steamship Co. of Seattle, Wash.; William B.; Peter W.; Mary, who is the wife of W. T. Lockhart; Louis; and Verinda, who is the wife of James W. Pindell. Fraternally, Mr. Pinneo belongs to the Court of Honor, and enjoys his associations with it. Cordova owes much to the efforts of this capable, loyal, public-spirited man, who not only is able to plan and carry out big things for himself, but also for his city, of which he is very proud.

PLEASANTS, Judge George W. (deceased).—Holding a prominent position among the names of those individuals who were prominent in legal circles sixty years ago, is that of the Hon. George W. Pleasants, for years master in chancery and judge of the Circuit Court of Rock Island county, and a legal practitioner who was connected with many of the leading cases of his day. He was born November 23, 1823, at Booneville, Ky., was there reared and educated, and after his graduation from Williams college was admitted to the bar.

After coming to Rock Island in 1853, Judge Pleasants was elected county superintendent of schools, and subsequently, by appointment of the presiding judge, was given the position of master in chancery of the Circuit Court, an office which he held for some years. Previous to his election as judge of the Circuit Court, he formed a law partnership with Judge Ira O. Wilkinson, and this connection was considered the strongest in the county at that time. In the great chancery case of John Deere & Company versus Caudley, Swan & Company, Judge Pleasants and John B. Howley represented Deere & Company, while Grant & Whitaker, of Davenport, were solicitors for the defendants. We are allowed to quote in this connection from an article written by Maj. Henry C. Connelly, himself an early lawyer and prominent citizen of Rock Island, who had been appointed special master in chancery by the circuit court and took all the testimony in the case: "We were thirty days doing this work. Judge Pleasants drew the bill filed in this case, and one day, in discussing some points in the bill we heard Judge Pleasants remark that he considered this bill the most artistic piece of legal work he had ever executed, and that he had felt almost inspired when he was preparing it. Deere & Company had never patented their plows or the marks and brands stamped thereon, but claimed that they were original with them and that the defendants could not use them or adopt them as their own and had no legal right to appropriate the work of their brains without compensation. Andrew Friberg had been employed by Deere & Company for many years and thoroughly understood the manufacture of their machinery, was an expert in his line, and a very valuable man for the defendants, as he knew all about the construction of the plows, and how and where to use all the brands and marks intelligently. The defendants had secured his services and practically duplicated the implements of Deere & Company. Friberg was the most important witness in the case, and his cross examination was searching. The writer remembers "Bob" Swan coming into his office to notify him that we could not proceed with Friberg's cross examination that day, as the latter had walked the floor of his room all night and that he was afraid his mind would become unbalanced under the strain. Deere & Company lost the case. Up to that date this was the most expensive piece of litigation we had ever had in the county. While the work was proceeding, the venerable, kind-hearted and lovable John Deere talked to me freely about the case. 'Too bad! Too bad!' was the exclamation of the venerable manufacturer. He had been opposed to the litigation, but 'the boys,' as he called them, meaning Charles H. Deere and George W. Riveton, had insisted that the case should go through, the courts. John Deere said there was room enough for both factories and business enough for all, and time has proven the truth of his remark."

On the bench Judge Pleasants was a model of dignity and courteous and kind to all members of the bar under every circumstance. As is now the case sometimes, but less frequently then, occasionally some obstreperous member would "fly off the handle" and make himself conspicuously ridiculous. On such occasions it was Judge Pleasants' frequent habit to merely lean back in his chair and laugh the turbulent legist to shame, and the offense was not soon repeated. One of Judge Pleasants' leading cases occurred in 1855. At that time Dr. Hayes was pastor of the Second Presbyterian church at Rock Island, where he had laid the cornerstone of that edifice, which has been but recently razed. When he left the church he went to Iowa to preach and finally died there, his widow continuing to occupy the homestead in Rock Island. They had no children, and after the doctor's death his nephews in Iowa brought suit in the Rock Island circuit court to secure one-half of the estate, to which they were entitled as then claimed. The fight was a bitter one, and after three or four years was decided in favor of Mrs. Hayes, who had been represented by Major Connelly, formerly quoted in this article. When the case was closed Mrs. Hayes presented Judge Pleasants with a gold-mounted cane, inscribed "To the Just Judge," a title which seemed to voice the sentiment of the entire community.

As a writer, Judge Pleasants was clear and forceful and his sentences were constructed with skill and elegance. As a judge he was wise, firm and dignified. As a lawyer no member of the Rock Island county bar has ever had higher attainments. Further commentary upon his career would be superfluous.

POEHLMAN, S.—The merchants all over the country recognize the fact that their customers require not only efficient service and reasonable prices, but pure foodstuffs, and govern themselves accordingly. S. Poehlman is one of the reliable grocers of Rock Island county, belonging to this class, who is doing a flourishing business in handling staple and fancy groceries at Sears. He also handles dry goods and meats, and is a recognized factor in the progressive life of this thriving community. Mr. Poehlman was born in Rock Island, in 1873, son of Simon and Margaret (Itner) Poehlman, natives of Bavaria. In 1865, the father came to the United States, locating at Rock Island, where he worked as a laborer. His death occurred in 1898, but his widow survives and makes her home in Rock Island. Eight children were born to these parents: Barbara, who is deceased; Simon; Kate; Lena, who is deceased; Nicholas; Charles; and two who died in infancy.

Mr. Poehlman grew to manhood in Rock Island, there receiving a liberal educational training in the public schools. Leaving school, he was employed in different lines until 1898, when he moved to Sears, and recognizing the opening here, established his present business, which he has developed into its present large proportions. He owns his store property. In 1896, Mr. Poehlman was married to Amanda Anderson, born in Sweden, but came to the United States in 1890. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Poehlman: Arnold, Harold, deceased, and Chester.

In politics, he has always been a republican, and has served as trustee of Sears for three years, is now president of the board, having held this responsible position for the past two years and in 1913 was re-elected for two years more. Mr. Poehlman has always been ready to serve the people of his community, and for three terms was collector. His fraternal relations are with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Royal Mutual. Both as a public official and private citizen, Mr. Poehlman has had the good of the village at heart, and has rendered valuable service, and gained a well-earned reputation as a man of ability and public-spirit.

POIROT, Theophile, now retired from active life, has been living in Rock Island, Ill., since 1871, and is a representative and useful citizen. He was born in Paris, France, March 8, 1839, son of Louis and Emily L. Poirot. The father was a manufacturer of bronze statues and other articles of the same material, and he and his wife spent their entire lives in France. There were three sons in the family and two of them now survive.

In boyhood Theophile Poirot attended the schools of Paris and there learned the trade of making statues and other articles which his father manufactured. He served four years in the Crimean war, then resumed working for his father, which he continued until coming to America in 1856. He landed in New York and remained in that city for a short time, then went to New Orleans, after a short time returning to New York, where he was married. Soon after his marriage he came to Chicago and remained in that city two years. While in New York city he had studied the science of cookery, becoming a first class chef, which occupation he followed many years. In 1871 Mr. Poirot came to Rock Island and for a period of twenty-seven years worked as chef in the Harper House there, which position he filled with skill and ability, winning a fine reputation in his line of work.

Mr. Poirot was married in New York November 23, 1862, to Julia Juyer, who was born in St. Mary's, France, in August, 1844, daughter of John Rudolph and Catherine Juyer. Her parents were both natives of Switzerland, and her father came to France as a young man and there established himself in business as a manufacturer of machinery for weaving. He and his wife died in France, having had one son and six daughters, of whom but two now survive, Mrs. Poirot and her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Bluffton, of Minneapolis, Minn. Four children were born to Mr. Poirot and wife, of whom but two now survive, both of them residents of Rock Island: Emily, wife of Louis V. Eckhart, and Eugenie, wife of Paul Bollinger. Mr. and Mrs. Eckhart have one son and three daughters, namely: Guy, Julia, Hazel and Evelyn. Mr. and Mrs. Bollinger have three children: Joseph D., Roy and Alberta. Mr. Poirot is a member of the Roman Catholic and his wife of the Presbyterian church. They have lived in their present home at 734 Fourteenth street for the past forty years and have many friends and acquaintances in the city.

POLZIN, John.—In nothing is modern development shown more fully than the recognition of the superiority of first-class bakery goods. Once the housewife did all her own baking, but her many other duties now make it impossible for her to give the time to it as formerly, and the high cost of living renders buying in small quantities, very expensive. In the eighteen years he has been in business as a baker, John Polzin has not only seen his own concern expand, but others, and he has advanced with the tide of improvements, adding to his equipment, and furnishing at all times pure articles for public consumption. For the past nineteen years he has remained at his present stand, No. 1917 Fourth avenue, Rock Island. Mr. Polzin makes all of his goods, and enjoys a heavy retail trade. He owns his building, and his affairs are in a very prosperous condition. He was born in Posen, Germany, in 1848, and in 1882, came to this country. Locating at Rock Island, he worked at his trade for four years, and then established himself in business. Prior to coming here, he gave his native country a full measure of military service, and was well educated in his own tongue.

In 1877, Mr. Polzin was married to Amelia Schmidt, born in the same place as her husband, where they were married. After Mr. Polzin had been here for fourteen months, his wife followed him. They have one child: Max. Politically, he has always voted the republican ticket. Kindly of disposition, earnest in his endeavors to be a good citizen, Mr. Polzin has made many friends, and stands high in general estimation.

PORTER, Burt N., junior member of the Abrahams-Porter Construction Company, of East Moline, is one of the rising young business men of this thriving community. Mr. Porter was born in 1880, at Moline, a son of John H. and Mary F. (Nurse) Porter, natives of Long Island, N. Y., and Moline. The father is sales manager for Barnhart Bros. & Spindler, which position he has held since the Paris exposition. Burt N. Porter was brought up at Moline, and graduated from the Moline high school in 1899. Immediately thereafter, he began working as office boy for the Moline Plow Company, remaining with that concern for twelve years, rising until for the last two years of this period he was assistant manager of the Freeport buggy plant of this company. Following this, Mr. Porter took an agricultural course but has not put this knowledge to practical use, owing to his entering into his present associations. He has full charge of the office, and oversees the mechanical details, for he has a working knowledge of several trades.

Prominent in Masonic circles, he has risen through all the degrees, and belongs to the Consistory of Freeport, and the Shrine of Rockford. Always he has voted the republican ticket, but is a strong admirer of Colonel Roosevelt. Energetic, practical, a man of action, accustomed to secure results, Mr. Porter has already achieved much, and has many plans for further advancement in the future.

POTTER, John William (deceased), for many years was one of the leading newspaper men of Illinois and a recognized factor in democratic politics. He inherited his journalistic tendencies from father and grandfather, both of whom were men of literary talent and founded and for years conducted newspapers. The birth of John William Potter took place in Ireland, August 17, 1861, and his death occurred at Rock Island, Ill., from the effects of a surgical operation, January 11, 1898.

John William Potter, the father, was born at Skibbereen, County Cork, Ireland, a son of John W. Potter, who was a native of England. From England he went to Ireland and there engaged in the publishing business, founding the West Cork Eagle, at Skibbereen, which he conducted until his death, in 1871, at an advanced age.

The newspaper was then conducted by one of his sons and was still in the family at a recent date. John William, son of John Potter, was reared in Ireland and in his father's printing office learned the trade. In 1853 he came to America and while working at his trade at Buffalo, N. Y., he married, in 1856, Miss Josephine Ryan, a native of Buffalo, and soon afterward they went to Ireland and resided there until 1865. Mr. Potter and family returned then to Buffalo, N. Y., where he continued to work at his trade until he came to Illinois and located at Freeport. From there he moved to St. Louis, Mo., where the family resided for four years, when he recognized a good business opening at Bolivar, Mo., and there established the Bolivar Herald, which he subsequently sold and returned to Freeport, where he founded the Freeport Bulletin, which he published until his death, in 1885, at the age of fifty-one years, his wife having preceded his death in 1880. Both Mr. and Mrs. Potter were members of the Episcopal church. He was a thorough newspaper man, established the first daily paper in Freeport and wielded a wide influence politically for the democratic party through his journal. He was a delegate to the democratic national convention at Cincinnati, in 1880, which nominated General Hancock for the presidency. In 1882 he came to Rock Island and purchased the Argus from Richardson & Powers, and placed his son, John William, in charge as business manager. Another son, Osler F., was connected and is still associated with the Freeport Bulletin.

John William Potter, Jr., was educated in the public schools of Freeport, Ill., and in that other school, his father's newspaper office, beginning to learn the trade when only nine years old. His tastes in this direction did not need to be acquired, they were inherited; and when he was but eleven years old he had been given charge of the mechanical department of the Bolivar Herald before the family moved to Freeport. He was what is described as an all-round newspaper man, proficient in every department. In 1880 he established a branch of the Freeport Bulletin at Lena, Ill., and, on attaining his majority, in August, 1880, came to Rock Island and took editorial charge and the general management of the Argus, of which he became sole owner at his father's death. Cradled, as it were, in the democratic party, that organization claimed his fealty until death. Beginning with 1888 he served as a member of the democratic state central committee for eight years, and was a delegate to nearly every state convention up to the time of his death.

At Cordova, Ill., on March 5, 1889, John William Potter was married to Miss Minnie E. Abbott, a native of Cordova, a daughter of Fisher and Sarah (Whitman) Abbott, one of the best known of the earlier families in Rock Island county. To this union three children were born: Marguerite Frances, John William, and Ben Hurst, all born in Rock Island. Since her husband's death Mrs. Potter became president of the J. W. Potter Company, which was organized in 1899 to continue the publication of the Argus, and has retained that position ever since, holding a majority of the stock of the company. Mr. Potter had not been a large investor in real estate, his business site, residence and some other realty in Rock Island comprising his holdings. He was essentially a newspaper man and political office had little attraction for him, but he served as postmaster of Rock Island from 1893 until 1897, under the administration of President Cleveland. With his wife and family he was a member of Trinity Episcopal church at Rock Island. Personally he was reserved and dignified in manner, but possessed underneath those engaging and sterling characteristics which made him beloved by his family and trusted by his friends.

POTTER, Wyman F.—East Moline offers exceptional opportunities to energetic business men because of its natural resources and excellent transportation facilities. For these and other cogent reasons, many of the leading business men of Rock Island county have organized large industries here, and are interested in developing them and the community. One of these progressive men is Wyman F. Potter, junior member of the firm of Aldrich & Potter, proprietors of the Sheet Metal Works of East Moline, the only establishment of its kind in this section. The members of the firm are Ellis D. Aldrich and Wyman F. Potter. Mr. Potter was born in Lyndon, Ill., in 1876, being a son of Henry and Phoebe (Richmond) Potter, both of whom survive. They had five children: Wyman F., Edna, Glyn, Hazel, and Grace, deceased. The father is a blacksmith and has made his home in Kirkman, Iowa, for some years.

Wyman F. Potter attended school at Harlan, Ia., and during the summers worked on a farm. Early in his career he became interested in the production of sheet metal, and associated himself with Mr. Aldrich in the organization of their present business.

On December 23, 1900, Mr. Potter was united in marriage with Lucinda Steen, of Kirkman, Ia. In politics he is a republican. His religious affiliations are with the Baptist church, and he is active in its good work. A Mason, he belongs to the Blue Lodge No. 130, Sioux Falls, So. Dakota; Rock Island Chapter; and Commandery No. 18, K. T. Mr. Potter is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. His upward progress has been steady and marked by persistent effort that has resulted profitably for all concerned. He is recognized as one of the sound, reliable men of Rock Island county, is widely known and universally respected.

POTTIGER, Daniel D., who conducts an up-to-date restaurant in Rock Island, Ill., has been engaged in several different lines of business, but is best fitted by preference and experience for the one now receiving his attention. He has been so successful in the venture that he has also established a small restaurant in the village of Silvis, which is a source of very fair profit as well. He has secured a reputation for high-class service and for upright and honorable business dealings. Mr. Pottiger was born in Harrisburg, Pa., November 1, 1854, second child of Daniel D. and Sophia (Boddinger) Pottiger, also natives of Pennsylvania, as were the mother's parents, Henry and Elizabeth (Bundvitch) Boddinger. Daniel D. Pottiger was a butcher by trade and also conducted other lines of business. He and his wife never left their native state. They had nine children.

At the age of sixteen years, having acquired his education in the public schools, Daniel D. Pottiger left home and went to Lancaster county, Pa., where for four years he worked in a saw mill. He then removed to Canton, Ohio, and for more than a year worked there at the trade of painter, after which he labored for two years on a farm near Geneseo Henry county, Ill. After his marriage Mr. Pottiger conducted a farm in Henry county until 1881, when he came to Rock Island and entered the employ of David B. Sears as head packer in the flour mill, where he remained four years. He then spent seven years as manager and collector for the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and had for a time conducted a restaurant in Barstow, where his place was burned out. About 1892 he purchased the Rock Island City Restaurant, which he conducted for more than a year, then sold and opened a restaurant at No. 1610 Second avenue, which he conducted two years, afterward working about a year in the Pacific Restaurant. Following this he opened the restaurant which he still conducts, and on September 31, 1910, started a restaurant at Silvis, and carries it on in connection with his Rock Island establishment. He is an enterprising business man and by his ability and modern methods has built up a substantial business and won the good will of his patrons.

On November 6, 1877, Mr. Pottiger married Emma Adams, a native of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and daughter of James and Wealthy (Bennett) Adams, her father a native of New York and her mother of Pennsylvania. Mr. Pottiger is connected with the Christian church, and in politics is independent. Fraternally he is affiliated with Camp No. 329, M. W. A., of Rock Island; F. O. M., No. 91, and the Order of Owls, also of Rock Island.

Mr. Pottiger and wife have three children, all living at home; Myrtle, wife of L. Dorman; Mabel, wife of Frank Olson; and Arthur. Mr. Pottiger and family have a pleasant home.

POWELL, Sherman M., a leading farmer and prominent citizen of Drury township, Rock Island county, was born on the Powell farm in that township, April 12, 1868, son of John and Amanda (Batchelor) Powell, being the youngest of their four children. The father was married twice, the mother of Sherman M. being his second wife.

Sherman M. Powell attended the Hazel Dell public school and also took a course in Brown's Business College, at Valparaiso, Ind. He then went to the far West and spent three years in Washington, Oregon and California and then returned to the home farm. He has made farming his occupation since and has met with success. In 1903, Mr. Powell bought and located on his present place. He owns 260 acres of land in sections 13 and 24, which he has brought to a high state of cultivation and development, and operates along modern lines. He has just completed a fine new residence costing nearly five thousand dollars. He was married February 28, 1901, by Rev. E. S. Shepherd, to Miss Margaret Tyler, daughter of William C. and Mary (Brunner) Tyler, prominent people of Buffalo Prairie township. She was born on the home farm of the family, near Illinois City, January 17, 1878, and attended school at Illinois City until sixteen years of age. She won the free scholarship in the Rock Island Business College, when C. B. Marshall held the office of county superintendent of schools, and after completing her course there taught school, first in the Fuhr school, later in the Wrayville public schools, then in the Timber school. She then took a course in Hedding College, at Abingdon, Ill., after which she resumed teaching and continued in the profession two years longer. She is well known in the county and she and her husband are both popular in this neighborhood. Children have been born to them as follows: Vaughn Tyler, born December 13, 1901; Allan Eugene, March 17, 1903; Bernice Ethyl, March 20, 1905; Jeanette, February 10, 1907 and Eva Beatrice, November 25, 1912.

Mr. and Mrs. Powell are members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Illinois City. He is a staunch republican in politics, has served as school trustee. Fraternally he is connected with the M. W. A.

POWELL, William, a successful farmer of Drury township, belongs to an old family of Rock Island county, and the farm he now occupies was redeemed from a wild state by the efforts of his father. He was born in Millin county, Pa., August 6, 1850, a son of John and Mary Jane (Swigert) Powell, natives of the same county. The father, left an orphan in early childhood, was a farmer all his active life. He was married in Pennsylvania, and in 1859 brought his family to the farm now owned and operated by his son William. At that time deer and other wild game were to be found in the region, and but little land had been cultivated in the neighborhood. He erected a small frame house, which later became the property of his son, this continuing the family home until recently replaced by a more commodious and handsomer dwelling. The father died on an adjoining farm about 1902, at the age of seventy-three years, his first wife having died some years prior to his death. He married (second) Amanda Weaver, who survives him. She was a daughter of Jacob Weaver, who with his wife, is deceased. John Powell and his first wife were members of the Methodist church and he was a republican in politics. They had children as follows: William; Esther, who is Mrs. Reynold Hayes, of Drury township; Samuel, who is of Indianola, Ia., married Annie Anderson; and Henry, who is of Davenport, Ia., is unmarried. By his second marriage John Powell had four children, of whom mention is made in connection with the sketch of J. G. Powell, which appears in this work.

At the time his family came to Illinois, William Powell was nine years of age, and he completed his education in the Hazel Dell district school, which he attended until he was about nineteen years of age. He was reared on the home farm, which he helped clear and improve. He was married September 2, 1872, to Miss Nancy Hessman, a daughter of Christian and Margaret Hessman. For eight years they lived on rented land, then he purchased the home farm of 100 acres of fine land, on section 23, Drury township, to which he has added improvements, which make it one of the well-kept farms in the township, including a handsome, modern residence of nine rooms, fitted with furnace heat, and other modern conveniences. He is enterprising and up-to-date in his methods of carrying on his work, and recognized as an able and successful farmer, who is one of the best-known men in his neighborhood. Being of a kindly, congenial nature and interested in the welfare of those about him, he is esteemed and honored as an upright citizen, and is popular with his many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Powell have two children: Bert, at home, and Margaret, Mrs. Charles Vanatta, of Buffalo Prairie township. Mr. Powell is a republican and has served as road commissioner. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and much interested in its good work.

PRESCOTT, Oscar F.—It is remarkable how many of the soldiers of the Civil War were mere lads when they enlisted under the flag they had already learned to revere. These young soldiers fought as bravely as those double their age, and learned valuable lessons of patriotism, endurance and faithfulness to duty, so that when they returned home they were ready for long and useful lives in whatever occupation they entered. One of those who is now a veteran, but who at the age of sixteen years entered the service of his country, is Oscar F. Prescott of Milan, Ill., a carpenter by trade. He was born in Posey county, Ind., March 7, 1848, a son of John and Eunice (Ross) Prescott, natives of Canada and Indiana. John Prescott was a ship carpenter of French Canadian birth, who came to Indiana, and later moved to St. Louis, there obtaining employment as a ship builder. For many years this continued to be his home, but desiring to make a change, he, with J. N. Davis and two others decided to go to Rock Island, and embarked in a sail boat. The little party lost their lives on the stormy waters of the Mississippi. There were two sons and three daughters in the family, of whom Oscar F. Prescott and two sisters survive, they being: Mrs. Alice Jones, who is the wife of Emory Jones, the latter having been in the Fifty-eighth and the One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving during the war; and Mrs. Dora Ross, who is of Denver, Colo.

Until he was sixteen years old, Oscar F. Prescott worked on a farm and attended the country schools, but then fired by patriotism, he enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, on May 3, 1864, for one hundred days' service. The troops were sent by rail to Cairo, Ill., thence by boat to Memphis, Tenn., where they were assigned to duty at Holly Springs, Miss., but returned to Memphis. His term expiring, he re-enlisted in Company K, Fifty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged March 15, 1865. He was injured, a box of hardtack falling from a wagon, striking him and breaking two ribs, necessitating his being placed in a hospital. Upon his recovery, he was detailed as teamster and scout, and he gave gallant service all through. Upon receiving his discharge, Oscar F. Prescott came to Rock Island, where he learned the carpenter trade, and also farmed, but later retired on account of poor health, and is now enjoying the fruits of his efforts. He owns his home and other property at Milan. Mr. Prescott is a member of John Buford Post No. 243, G. A. R., and is also a member of the Home Fraternal League. The Methodist church holds his membership, while in politics he is a democrat.

On October 4, 1872, Oscar F. Prescott was married at Davenport to Sarah E. Davis, daughter of Joseph and Martha J. Davis, born in Moline, November 8, 1855. Her father was born in New York state, and her mother in Posey county, Ind. They came to Rock Island county, where the father followed his trade of plastering and also conducted the Davis House at Milan. He served in the same regiment as Oscar F. Prescott. There were seven daughters in the Davis family, and of these Mrs. Rebecca Parks, who is of Rock Island county, with Clara Davis, who lives with her; Mrs. Susan Cathcart and Mrs. Cora Bateman, who live in the west; and Mrs. Prescott survive. Mr. and Mrs. Prescott had children as follows: Oscar Louis, who is of California; Willard Ray and Willis Roy, who are twins, the former living at home, and the latter married to Alice Orr; Sadie, who is living at home; and five who are deceased. Mr. Prescott is a man of sterling character, who has done his full duty as a soldier and private citizen, and treasures a letter of recommendation received from President Lincoln, whom he considered his personal friend.

PRICE, John Sipes, is well known throughout Rock Island county as the proprietor of Hazel Dell Stock Farm, on sections 25 and 26, Drury township. He was born on this farm, June 17, 1869, son of Willson and Caroline E. (Sipes)

Price. Willson Price was born in Sussex county, N. J., December 26, 1825, son of Samuel and Mary (Willson) Price, natives of New Jersey. The Price and Willson families were represented in the soldiers of the Revolution, and Brig.-Gen. John Sipes, who received his title of brigadier-general in the Mexican war, was the maternal grandfather of John Sipes Price. General Sipes was a native of what is now Fritout county, Pa.

Willson Price came west as a young man and was an early settler of Galva, Ill., where he erected some of the first buildings, being a carpenter by trade. During the panic of 1857 he gave up contracting and engaged in farming, first locating near Galva and later moving to the farm in Drury township now farmed by his son, John S. Price. He was a man of intelligence and enterprise, well informed on general subjects, and became influential wherever he located. He made many improvements on his farm, and at the same time helped forward many public movements. He was an active worker in the interests of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he was one of the chief organizers. He died July 21, 1901, being widely mourned and missed from many circles. He was recognized as a man of upright character and a most useful, enterprising citizen. He was a republican in politics and was well known as a lecturer in the interests of the Grange organization. In 1857 he married Caroline E. Sipes, who resides among her children. They became parents of seven children, namely: William S., who resides at Oakhill, Kan., is an ex-newspaper editor, and now a minister of the M. E. church; Florence E. and Mary died young; Margaret Elizabeth, who is Mrs. James P. Axemaker, is now principal of a school in Brawley, Cal.; John S.; Arthur, who lives at Muskogee, Okla., is a carpenter and general contractor; and Obed, who is an attorney-at-law, at Pittsburgh, Pa., represents the Pittsburgh Coal Company, and served in an Iowa regiment during the Spanish-American war.

John S. Price was educated in Hazel Dell district school and Geneseo (Ill.) Collegiate Institute, then taught three years in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri. He then took up farming in Iowa and was there married, September 3, 1895, to Miss Martha Thornton Lutz, daughter of Rev. J. S. Lutz, of Buffalo Prairie township. They have had the following children: Alfred John, born February 8, 1897; Paul L., September 25, 1901; Florence M., October 9, 1903; Margaret E., October 1, 1905; David Willson, August 27, 1907; Mary Elinore, March 3, 1910. In 1903 Mr. Price came to live on the home farm, having 120 acres of good farm land. He is a member of Hazel Dell M. E. church, being a trustee, teacher in the Sunday School and president of the Epworth League. In 1910 he had qualified and received a license to preach in the churches of the Rock Island District. He is a republican in politics and fraternally is a member of the I. O. O. F.

PRYCE, John M.—Owing to the conformation of the country, mining is extensively carried on in Wales, and many of those born there continue to engage in this line of work after coming to the United States. One of those of Welsh birth, now interested in mining in Rock Island county, is John M. Pryce, of Coal Valley. He was born in Wales, May 30, 1863, being a son of John J. and Margaret (Morris) Pryce. The parents and four oldest children came to America in 1869, locating in Coal Valley, where the father began mining, and here the remaining four of their eight children were born, the family being as follows: John M.; Mary, wife of Charles Searle, of Rock Island; Richard, a farmer of Coal Valley township; Ann Sarah, Maggie and Helen, living at home, the latter a teacher; Ida, wife of John Haddick; and Fanny, wife of Oscar Emrich, of Youngstown, O.

John M. Pryce was brought up in Coal Valley and attended the village school, but when only ten years old began working in the mines, and has been connected with mining interests ever since. He is now manager of the Pryce Coal Company. In the first named mine, employment is given to forty men. Mr. Pryce owns 450 acres of land, all of which he rents.

In 1901 Mr. Pryce married Alice Walsh, born in Rock Island county. Her parents, both of whom are now deceased, were pioneers of here. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Pryce are: John, Alice, Margaret and Helen. In politics he is a republican. Few men stand any higher in the community than does Mr. Pryce, whose honesty and keen sense of fair dealing are generally recognized.

PULLEN, David, owner of 160 acres of as choice land as is to be found in this county, is one of the retired farmers of Drury township, and a most estimable citizen of the state. He was born in Indiana March 5, 1839, a son of Dennis and Nancy (Kingham) Pullen, both born in Virginia. The father was a shoemaker by trade, and went to Indiana at an early day. There, he turned his attention to farming, and when in 1842, he brought his family to Drury township, he continued his agricultural operations until his death. His wife died when David was a child. They had four sons and seven daughters, those living being: Mrs. Elizabeth Collins, David and Mrs. Virginia McGreer.

While working on the farm, David Pullen attended the district schools in Drury township, and grew up to a useful manhood in its precincts. For many years he was very active in farm matters, but within recent years found that increasing infirmities necessitated leisure, so he has practically retired, and allows his son-in-law to operate his property for him. He is a strong democrat, and earlier in life gave valuable service as a school director for nine years.

In 1860, Mr. Pullen was married by Squire Bridgeford of Mercer county to Elizabeth Duncan, born in Mercer county, Ill., May 14, 1842. They became the parents of five children: Mrs.

Minnie Reynolds, who has three living children, Floyd, Ella and Arthur; Ella, deceased; Effie who died in infancy; Everet (deceased) who married Clara Noble, had four children, Mona, Frank, Eva and Walter; and Ada, who married Fred Miller. Mr. Miller is conducting the farm for Mr. Pullen. During his many years' residence in Drury township, Mr. Pullen has witnessed many important changes, and is proud of the progress that has been made. In his time, he has borne the brunt of hard work, and it is but right that he should now enjoy the comforts his industry has provided. No man is held in higher esteem in this locality than Mr. Pullen, and deservedly so, for he has many admirable traits of character. Mrs. Pullen died April 17, 1902, and is buried in Eliza Cemetery.

QUADE, Henry C., general contractor for brick and concrete construction, and formerly superintendent for the Victor Polgren Company, is a native son of Moline, and one who in his prosperous career has shown forth the value of real worth combined with unusual merit. Henry C. Quade was born at Moline in 1876, a son of Conrad and Anna (Kroeger) Quade, natives of Germany, who came to this country over forty-six years ago, settling at Moline. Here Conrad Quade continued in business as a contracting mason until his death, which melancholy event occurred in 1898. His widow survived him until 1907. They had seven children: John C., George H.; Henry C.; Amel, deceased; Herman; Clara, deceased; and Otto J. Growing up in his native city Henry C. Quade attended the public schools until he completed his course. He then learned the mason trade under his father and went into business for himself. Later on, in 1912, his capability and experience caused Victor Polgren to offer him the superintendency of his operations, which he held until January 1, 1913, when he left to devote all of his time to his own business.

In 1899 Henry C. Quade was united in marriage with May Weaver, born in Rock Island county. Five children have been born of this marriage: Raymond J., Dorothea A., Conrad H., Mildred F. and Quenton A., all of whom are at home. Mr. Quade belongs to the Elks and Modern Woodmen of America, and is popular in his fraternal associations. Very liberal in his political views, he has usually voted the republican ticket. At present he is building a handsome residence for himself in the outskirts of Moline, which will be an ornament to the community and a model of convenience. It is such live, aggressive men as Henry C. Quade who succeed themselves and carry with them others to well-merited prosperity.

QUINN, Rev. James J., priest of St. Joseph's Parish of the Catholic Church at Rock Island for the past six years, and a man beloved and esteemed by all who know him, has spent the entire period of his activity in Illinois, where he has labored long and faithfully in the service of the church. Father Quinn was born May 16, 1857, in Champaign county, Ill., and is a son of Patrick and Mary (Doheny) Quinn, natives of County Tipperary, Ireland, where the father was born March 15, 1832, and the mother June 10, 1830. There were six children born to Patrick and Mary Quinn, namely: Mary, who is deceased; John, who is a Catholic priest at Ottawa, Ill.; James J.; Joseph, who has been connected with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad for twenty-seven years, at Milwaukee, Wis.; Frank, deceased, formerly a well-known physician of Peoria, Ill.; and Margaret, who is deceased. All of the sons of this family were students at Notre Dame University.

James J. Quinn was graduated in law from the above famous university, but decided to enter the church, and on June 3, 1882, said his first mass. He served for some time as secretary to the archbishop at Peoria and was later transferred to Bloomington, where he remained four years at Holy Trinity church. His first charge was given to him in 1883, at Chebanse, Ill., where he built a church, and he also erected a church at Clifton, and a church, rectory and convent at Chalsworth, whence he had been transferred in 1889 and where he remained for sixteen years. In October, 1905, Father Quinn came to Rock Island, to St. Joseph's Parish, and here he has reconstructed the entire property, the rectory as well as the church, and built the new St. Joseph's school at a cost of $100,000, making the total value of the church property $175,000.

Father Quinn is universally beloved by his parishioners, and his advice on all important matters is eagerly sought and confidently followed by them. As a priest he has been able to instill in his followers a deep religious conviction, while as a kindly adviser and friend in time of need he has won the heartfelt affection of the entire parish. Father Quinn resides at No. 1316 Second avenue.

RAHN, August.—German-born Americans are men of sterling characteristics, whose industry and thrift have made them prosperous, and they have materially assisted in the development and advancement of the communities in which they located. One of those thus representative of the best class of his countrymen is August Rahn, owner of forty acres of land on section 22, Buffalo Prairie township, who was born in Germany, December 22, 1849, a son of Peter and Mary (Dieterich) Rahn, both born in Germany. The father was a farmer, after he had served in the German army, and he and his wife died in their native land. Their children were: Justine, who is Mrs. George Liedkl of Rock Island; Fred, who died in the Franco-German war; David, who died in Germany; Mary, who died in Germany; Tina, who died in Germany; Caroline, who died in Germany; and August.

Until he was fourteen years old, August Rahn attended school, and was taught the tailoring trade. He served three years in the German army, and was in the Franco-Prussian war, participating in some important battles.

In 1872, he came to America, landing at New York after a seventeen days' voyage from Hamburg, and from New York came direct to Rock Island county, arriving here in the last month of the year. Until 1876, he worked in the coal mines and on several farms, then devoted himself to mining, thus continuing until 1900, when he bought his present farm, and has made a number of improvements on it.

On October 3, 1876, August Rahn was married in Coal Valley to Julia Ann Mulder, who was left an orphan when a child, and was reared by her aunts. She came to the United States in 1874, being then twenty years old, landing at New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Rahn have had the following children: Wilhelm, who is deceased; John, who is a locomotive engineer at St. Louis, was graduated from the high school and the Scranton School of Correspondence; Annie, who is Mrs. Charles Reynolds of Buffalo Prairie township; Maggie, who is deceased; Tillie, who is deceased; Emil, who is at home; Mollie, who is his twin sister, married Andrew Carlson; and Fred and George, who are at home. Mr. and Mrs. Rahn are members of the German Lutheran church. In politics, he is a republican. During a long and active life, Mr. Rahn has worked hard, and he deserves the partial retirement from strenuous life he is now enjoying.

RAILSBACK, Fred H., city attorney of East Moline, is a native of Hopedale, Ill., born October 30, 1887, a son of Benjamin T. and Margaret (Flenniken) Railsback. The father died on September 13, 1903, but the mother still resides at Hopedale. Fred H. Railsback is the youngest of four sons, the others being R. J. Railsback of Hopedale, Ill., L. W. Railsback of Weldon, Ill., and H. M. Railsback of Moline, Ill.

After being graduated from the University high school at Normal, Ill., Mr. Railsback engaged in a grain and stock raising business at Hopedale, and still has an interest in it. In 1906, he entered the University of Illinois and was graduated from the law course with the highest honors in the class of 1910. During his years in high school and in the university he made a special study of oratory and was a member of the debating team in the latter institution which won in an oratorical contest with the team from the University of Ohio, in 1910. Mr. Railsback then being leader of his team. In 1906 his delivery won first honors in a state high school oratorical contest held at the University of Illinois. His brothers are all graduates of this institution, and from 1895 to 1911 some member of the family was a student there.

Mr. Railsback began practice of his profession at Moline in conjunction with City Attorney G. A. Shallberg, with whom he was identified for eighteen months, when he was appointed city attorney for Silvis and bought out the law practice of former City Attorney Walter G. Baker, as well as his real estate and insurance interests, his office being located at East Moline.

Mr. Railsback is a director and the attorney for the Manufacturers' State Bank of East Moline. He has made many friends in his community and has won confidence and esteem by his uprightness and integrity. Mr. Railsback became a Mason in the Home lodge at Hopedale, and also belongs to the Royal Arch Masons. Professionally he is a member of the Rock Island County Bar Association. As a member of the Presbyterian church he is identified with the religious welfare of his community and belonging to a family of refinement and culture he is recognized as one of the best class of citizens. He is unmarried.

RAITHEL, Henry J.—Fruit raising and dairy farming are often combined with profit by the conservative farmer who recognizes the fact that it is better to bring a small property to a high state of cultivation than to endeavor to operate a large one carelessly. One of those who are thus engaged is Henry J. Raithel, owner of ten acres of rich land, on which he raises fruit and carries on dairying. He was born in Rock Island December 19, 1858, son of John and Barbara Raithel, natives of Germany, who came to the United States in 1852. The father died twenty-one years ago aged seventy-two years, while his widow survived him until January 1, 1910, when she passed away, aged ninety years and fifteen days.

Henry J. Raithel was brought up in the vicinity of Rock Island, attending the schools of his neighborhood. When only nine years old employment was found for him on the farm, his father having been crippled, so the hard work fell upon the lad's shoulders. He seemed to flourish under it, for at thirteen years of age he weighed 154 pounds and is now a man of splendid physical perfection, standing six feet two inches, and weighing 248 pounds. When he was fourteen years old his father moved to Rock Island and he worked in a butcher shop for nine years. For three years more he worked at the same trade in Whiteside county, then returned to Rock Island to continue working at it. After his marriage he lived for two years on the Hilderbrand farm and three years on the Benedick farm, and on January 5, 1907, upon the death of his father-in-law, he moved to his present place. In 1910 he installed an electric light plant, which lights the house, barn and outbuildings, operates the washing machine, the dairy machines and furnishes all the power on the place.

Mr. Raithel was married at South Rock Island May 29, 1882, to Maggie Shearer, by Rev. August Minicke. She is a daughter of George and Margaret (Brookman) Shearer. Mrs. Raithel was born on her father's farm April 25, 1859, and attended the German Lutheran church school until she was thirteen years old. Her father was born in Germany and came to the United States in 1852. Mr. and Mrs. Raithel have children as follows: Maggie, Mrs. William Matthey of South Rock Island; Henry G. of Rock Island, and George at home. They have two grandchildren. They are members of the German Lutheran church. In politics he is liberal. He is a man whose prosperity is well deserved. He believes in applying modern methods to his work, and his farm is a model one, often visited by people from all parts of this and adjoining counties.

RAMSEY, Samuel (deceased), was a resident of Rock Island county for sixty years, and was one of the best known farmers in his community, and brought his place to a high state of productiveness. It is well situated in Rural township and was a credit to its owner. Mr. Ramsey was a native of Fermanagh county, Ireland, born July 2, 1824, a son of George and Jane (Hutchinson) Ramsey, farming people of that county. The father lived to be nearly one hundred and two years old and died in 1901 in Rural township, where he had carried on farming until within some years prior to his death. He had come to America in 1848, after the death of his wife in Ireland, journeying direct to Rock Island county, where the remainder of his life was spent. He and his wife had children as follows: Ann, Samuel, Mary Jane, John, Elizabeth, Susan, Margaret and Rachel, all born in Ireland. As a young man Samuel Ramsey came to America and located at Montreal, Canada, working for a year in the lumber yards there. He then came to Rock Island county, where his first employment was in a brickyard, for which work he received $13 a month, but he soon found a more lucrative position. Later he engaged in farming and became the owner of 160 acres of fertile land, upon which he made most of the improvements. He was educated in his native country and was always a keen observer of affairs and conditions, being thus able to adapt himself to circumstances and make the most of his opportunities, becoming one of the most highly respected men in his township. All of his mature life he was a devout member of the Methodist church, and was interested in whatever affected the welfare of his community, standing ready to give his support to worthy public measures. He died March 28, 1912, aged eighty-seven years and eight months.

Samuel Ramsey was married in 1854 to Eliza Gilmore, born in Ireland, who came to America at the age of sixteen years. She was a daughter of Stuart Gilmore and lived in Rock Island county before her marriage. Her death occurred on the home farm, August 16, 1885, and she was deeply mourned by her family and many friends. She had borne her husband children as follows: Eliza Jane who is now Mrs. Lemuel Tindell, of Iowa; Mary Ann who is the wife of John Palmer, a Methodist minister now located at Milan, Ill.; Samuel who is of Dakota; Isaac who is of Cushing, Ia.; Rachel who died in infancy; Margaret who is of Milan, Ill.; John who lives in Dakota; Rebecca who is deceased; and William. William Ramsey was born in 1872, and in 1905 married Jennie Doonan, born in Iowa, a daughter of James and Ellen (Shields)

Doonan, and they have three children: Dorothy, Ralph and Theodore.

RANGE, Christian (deceased).—If it had not been for the unselfish efforts of the German-Americans it is doubtful if the North would have triumphed during the Civil war. Many of Germany's best men had come here in search of freedom and liberty denied them at home, and when they found their new country in peril, they threw aside personal advantage, and enlisted from all over the country. These loyal and brave men are held in veneration, whether they still survive, or have been gathered with the comrades gone before to form the Army of the Eternal. One of the veterans, now passed away, was Christian Range, who for many years was one of the honored business men of Rock Island. The full family history of the Ranges is given in the sketch of Louis Range, elsewhere in this work.

Christian Range came to Rock Island and when his adopted country had need of him, he enlisted on August 15, 1862, in the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry for service during the Civil war, participated in many hard-fought engagements, and was slightly wounded in battle. He served until the close of the war, when he received an honorable discharge, and returning to Rock Island, where he was married, April 20, 1867, to Ernestine Seidal, who born in Prussia, Germany, August 16, 1846, was brought to America by her parents in 1857. They located at Rock Island, where her father, Gottlieb Seidal, engaged in shoemaking until within a few years of his demise, which occurred in 1876. The mother, whose name was Christiana Genter, died in 1901. They were Lutherans, and very worthy people. Mr. and Mrs. Seidal had children as follows: Mrs. Range; William; Henrietta who died at Rock Island; Herman; Lydia who is deceased; and Adolph who is deceased.

For two years after marriage, Mr. Range conducted a bakery for his brother at Rock Island, and then removed it to Burlington, Ia., where he died in 1877. His wife later returned to Rock Island. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Range: Carl of Gary, Ind., married Mamie Castello; Gustave, a barber of Rock Island, married Emma Russ; Lydia, married Prof. Ernest Selle of Freeport, Ill. Ida died when one year and eight months old; and Oscar died when three years old. Over fifty years have passed since the Civil war was declared, and yet every day new victims die, for no man ever went through that awful struggle without bringing out of it some disability, against which he had to struggle through years of sturdy endeavor. This makes the lives of these veterans all the more to be commended, and makes them living or dead worthy of all possible honor and respect.

RANGE, Louis.—A distinctive feature of all the prosperous towns and cities of Illinois is the retirement to them of those who having completed a successful life work, seek for congenial surroundings in which to round out their days. Such men demand good civic conditions, help in purifying politics, and lend their influence towards those movements they think will be for the betterment of the community. For these and other equally cogent reasons, the retired business men and farmers of Rock Island or any similar city, rank high among its substantial and highly regarded residents. One of the men representative of this class is Louis Range, a retired baker, residing at No. 728 Seventeenth street. He was born in Germany, August 13, 1828, a son of Christian and Louisa (Plock) Range, both of whom died in Germany, where the father had been a baker.

Louis Range attended school until he was fourteen years old, and then was taught the trade of a baker, working at this in various cities. While serving his three years' term in the German army, he participated in the War of 1848, and was a brave soldier. In 1853, he sailed for New York, and was forty-six days on the voyage, but eventually arrived at his destination and spent two years in that city. For several years he worked at his trade in various places, but in 1856 established himself in business on Seventeenth street, between First and Second avenues, at Rock Island. Two years later, he had prospered sufficiently to buy property on Twenty-first street and Fifth avenue, where he built a bakery and restaurant, and there conducted a flourishing business for a quarter of a century. Although busy in his work, Mr. Range found time to defend the land of his adoption, enlisting in 1861, in Company E, Forty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Tobin and Colonel Wright, and served one year in the Civil war, when he was discharged on account of disability, and his record here as a soldier was equalled by the one he made in Germany.

In 1856, Louis Range married Louisa Luebbe, born in Germany, who was brought to the United States in childhood. The children born of this marriage are: Louisa, Mrs. Peter Fry of Rock Island; Emma, Mrs. Jake Ohlweiler of Rock Island; Louis, Jr., of Ottumwa, Ill.; Minnie, Mrs. John Ohlweiler of Rock Island, and William, a farmer of Rock Island county. During the years, he has made Rock Island his home, Mr. Range has seen and participated in many changes, and is proud of the progress and the part he has taken in it all. He is a man of sterling principles who has always endeavored to do his full duty, and to deal honestly with all.

RANKIN, J. Edward, M. D.—Among the eminent physicians and surgeons of Rock Island county, the more prominent of whom find place in this volume, none enjoys to a greater extent the confidence and esteem of the community than J. Edward Rankin, M. D., whose field of practice is the village of Watertown. Dr. Rankin was born in Keokuk county, Iowa, July 28, 1868, a son of Edward Lee and Elmira (Searles) Rankin, the former a native of Menard county, and the latter of Rock Island county, Ill. The paternal grandparents were Ambury A. and Arminda A. (Rogers) Rankin, natives of Pennsylvania, who came to Menard county, Ill., at an early day, the grandmother keeping the postoffice in Menard county from which Abraham Lincoln received his first mail, and being the one to teach the future president how to read. The maternal grandparents of Dr. Rankin were James and Minna Searles, natives of Ohio, who came to Rock Island county at an early date. Edward Lee Rankin came to Illinois in 1860, leaving a large tract of land in Missouri, and was married in Springfield, Ill., from whence he returned to Keokuk county, Iowa, lived on a farm and was engaged in newspaper work and as a lawyer. J. Edward Rankin attended public school and high school, remaining at home until he was nineteen years of age, at which time he entered the Keokuk Medical College, where he was assistant to Thomas J. Moxell, professor of surgery for a year in St. Joseph's Hospital; and then for a year studied directly under Professor C. E. Ruth and was chosen to the chair prosector of anatomy. When he was graduated he was elected president of the Alumni Association of the Kansas Medical College for the year. After practicing for one year at South English, Iowa, with his stepfather, Dr. Newson, with whom he had studied from the time he was fourteen years old, he went to Chicago for a post-graduate course in Rush Medical College, and while in that city was associated with Drs. F. H. Martin and Sanger Brown. He then returned to his home for one year, after which he engaged in practice at Peoria for two years, at the end of which time he became one of the first physicians of Watertown, where for several years he was associated with Dr. Taylor Supt. He has continued to remain at the same location and has built up a large practice. Dr. Rankin is physician of Eagle Lodge, Knights of Pythias of Port Byron, and in political matters is an independent republican. He and his wife attend the Baptist church.

On December 16, 1899, Dr. Rankin was married to Miss Emma D. Upson, who was born at Watertown, Ill., a daughter of Porter H. and Permillá F. (Staneliff) Upson, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Pennsylvania and early settlers of Rock Island county. Dr. Rankin has one son: Searle Edward, who was born in March, 1903.

RANSOM, William Seymour (deceased).—Prominent among the citizens of Moline, was the late William Seymour Ransom, who for many years was well known in this city as a carpenter and builder, and who during his young manhood served as an educator throughout this section of the state. Born April 27, 1841, in Ripley county, Ind., Mr. Ransom was the son of Timothy Ransom, a native of Bennington, Vt., who was born January 26, 1800, and came to Indiana. His wife, Charlotte Austin, was born at Burlington, Vt., January 10, 1802, and both she and her husband died in Indiana, he May 16, 1890, and she July 19, 1886. Elisha Ransom, the paternal grandfather, died in this same state, at the extreme old age of ninety-six years, and his wife Abigail, passed away in this state, aged eighty-four years.

William Seymour Ransom was educated in the common schools of Ripley county, Ind., and Moline, Ill., at which latter place he attended the high school, and even as a youth was exceedingly fond of reading and study. Mr. Ransom came to Rock Island in the later fifties. He enlisted in Company H, Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, which was a Moline company, June 10, 1861, and served until about the first of January, 1862, when he was granted a furlough on account of disability, and returned home. He rejoined his company, but was sent to the hospital and finally received his honorable discharge February 21, 1862. In the spring of 1865, Mr. and Mrs. Ransom went to the old home in Indiana and there they lived until 1871. While living there he joined the home guards. His old regiment took part in the effort to capture Morgan on his famous raid. In 1871 Mr. Ransom, with his family, came to Davenport, Iowa, where he kept books for twenty-seven years and then moved to his father-in-law's farm and taught the Wills and Wendell school, following which he lived in Bowlesburg for ten years and then took up residence in Moline where he continued to reside until death, October 29, 1897, burial being at Riverside cemetery, Moline. For years he was on the school board in Stewartville, a part of the city of Moline, and he was a popular comrade of R. H. Graham Post of Moline G. A. R. Mrs. Ransom is a member of the relief corps of the post. Mr. Ransom was of a religious nature, but never held membership in any special congregation, although Mrs. Ransom was organist of Bowlesburg church for ten years. In his political faith, Mr. Ransom was always a republican.

On July 26, 1864, Mr. Ransom was married by the Rev. A. B. Hitchcock, of Moline, at the home of the bride's father at South Moline, to Margaret A. Wells, who was born in South Moline, daughter of Joshua and Barbara Ann (Taylor) Wells, the former a native of England and the latter of Alton, Ill. Both of the parents of Mrs. Ransom died in Rock Island county, where Mr. Wells had been engaged in agricultural pursuits. Mr. Wells had a brother, Samuel Wells, who came to Moline, who was a bookbinder and farmer for years, near Rock Island. He was the father of Henri E. Wells, another member of Company H, Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, who lost his arm at the battle of Stone River, and was appointed postmaster of this city, which position he held for several years. Three children of the family of Joshua Wells are now living: Sylvester of Boise, Idaho, who was a member of Company F, Eighty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, from this county; Edward, who is living in the county near Moline.

and Mrs. Ransom. To Mr. and Mrs. Ransom there were born three children, as follows: Stan-wood who was born May 4, 1867, in Indiana, married (first) Dolly Davis, who died in 1904, leaving two children—Walter and Claire, now deceased, married (second) Annie Wiser by whom he had one child—Margaret; Grace Ella, who was born in Indiana, October 20, 1870, married William Campbell, an engineer of Brereton, Ill., and they have four children—William, Julia, Nellie and Gail; and Worth, who was born in Davenport, Ia., January 26, 1872, lives with his mother in the family home at No. 1925 Twenty-eighth avenue, Moline. He was married in October, 1910, to Mrs. Maggie Skinner, and they have one child—Mildred, born in July, 1911.

RATHBUN, Oscar F.—It is interesting to trace an old family through its pioneer vicissitudes, noting the courage and resourcefulness of its earlier members and it continues interesting when its later generations not only show inheritance of its prominent physical characteristics but also of the sturdy qualities which the forefathers possessed. The Rathbun family, of which Oscar F. Rathbun, a justice of the peace and a man of large and substantial possessions in Rock Island county, is a case in point. The grandfather, M. I. Riley Rathbun, was born and married in Steuben county, N. Y., where his seven children were born, two dying young, and William, Lorenzo Dow, Sally Ann, Josephine and Guy W., living to maturity. In 1835 the family came by wagon with an ox-team to Illinois and the father took up government land near Cordova, in Rock Island county. On this land he erected the first house built at Cordova, a large log structure designed for a public house and so conducted it for the convenience of the public for a number of years. In the meanwhile he had not neglected his land but with persistence and industry had cleared it and placed it under cultivation, residing there until 1861, when he turned it over to his son-in-law, Wm. Curtiss, and retired to the home of his daughter Josephine, where his death subsequently occurred, his wife having departed some years previously. Of his children, Guy W. was the eldest and was born in 1814. He accompanied his parents to Cordova and remained with his father for several years and then took up government land for himself, which he cleared and improved and resided on until 1883. In that year he sold his farm and went to Dakota, where he invested in town and country property but subsequently returned to his home place at Cordova, and his death occurred there January 31, 1888. In early life he had joined the Baptist church but later, from religious convictions differing with this body withdrew from it and organized a church which became widely known as the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. He found many converts and for a number of years traveled as an evangelist, preaching his doctrines in many states and founding numerous churches. He was a scholarly man, understanding Greek and Hebrew and expounded the scriptures according to the early faith. During his missionary absences the church took care of his lands in his interest. The father of Mr. Rathbun was (first) married in New York and the following children were born to him there: Wheeler, Johanna, George, Henry and Henrietta, twins, Lord Mortimore and Victoria. Of these George and Lord Mortimore both died as soldiers in the Civil war. Henry and Johanna live in Washington and Henrietta in Kansas. He married (second) Emily Jane Hurd, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1824, and died December 17, 1905, aged seventy-nine years, an estimable woman in every relation of life, and she and husband are both buried in the Cordova cemetery. They had eight children, namely: Alice E., now Mrs. D. M. Sarvis, of S. Dak.; Oscar F.; Wilbur Washington, of Nebraska; Isabel E., a resident of South Dakota; Electa, now deceased, formerly Mrs. Joseph Knott; Gertrude, now Mrs. P. Y. Comstock, of Chicago; Clarence Eugene, of Helena, Mont.; and Adoniram Judson, who died when aged thirty-five years.

Oscar F. Rathbun was born on the old farm near Cordova, Ill., November 13, 1850, and obtained his schooling at Cordova. Naturally as he grew to manhood he became interested in agricultural pursuits and is one of the substantial and successful farmers of Rock Island county, where he owns 120 acres and operates eighty additional acres. He has also been very successful in handling fruit, dealing in car load lots and shipping to suitable markets. Since 1904 Mr. Rathbun has been serving in the office of justice of the peace and in this capacity has settled many cases out of court by his tact, good judgment and friendly intervention. Politically he is a strong republican. The only fraternal body to which he belongs is the Mystic Workers of the World and he has been a trustee and marshal of the lodge at Hillsdale.

Mr. Rathbun was married March 22, 1872, to Miss Mary Caroline Pearsoll, a daughter of W. C. and Jane (Ellingham) Pearsoll. She was born in Cook county, Ill., July 18, 1846, and was brought to Rock Island county in infancy. They have had the following children: Angeline N., who is the wife of Charles F. Haak, of Coe township; Phebe Clementine, who died at the age of fifteen months; Isabel Emily, who was born January 15, 1878, is the wife of P. H. Lorenz, of Moline, Ill.; Oscar Seward who was born September 28, 1887, died April 2, 1904; John Judson, who was born October 24, 1883, married Minnie Shafer, in 1908; Louisa, who was born September 26, 1887, is the wife of Samuel D. Stanley, of Coe township, and George Robert, who was born December 19, 1889, is a resident of Moline.

RAUSCH, George.—The ownership of land in Buffalo Prairie township means that the one possessing it is in comfortable circumstances, for farms in this region are very valuable, especially when they are as well cultivated as that of George Rausch of sections 18 and 19. He was born on a farm in Drury township, November 8, 1868, being a son of Adam Rausch, born in Germany as well as brought up there. Coming to the United States, he lived first in New York city, and then came to Drury township where he bought forty acres of land, farming it until his death, he being killed by a runaway team in 1870. His widow later married Peter Walker, and died in Nichols, Ia., while on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. George Umscheid. The children born to the parents were: William of Taylor Ridge; Amelia, Mrs. James McDonald, deceased; Lizzie, Mrs. George Umscheid of Iowa and George. By her second marriage, the mother had three children: Mary, Mrs. George Fuhr of Buffalo Prairie township; Emma, Mrs. John Umscheid of Milford, Ia.; and Isabelle, Mrs. S. J. Mills of Wyoming, Ia.

George Rausch lost his father when two years old, and received but few educational advantages, although he attended the Hazeldell school a little. Remaining at home until nineteen years old, he then began working out by the month, and thus continued for three years. During this time he saved his money, and was able to buy eighty acres in Buffalo Prairie township, on which he built a new barn and other structures, and set out a new orchard.

On February 22, 1889, he married Minnie Furst, daughter of Jacob and Mary Jane (Mitchell) Furst. Mrs. Rausch died December 26, 1897, having borne her husband three children: Clyde, Leonard and Minnie. In 1898, Mr. Rausch married Lena Parchert, of Buffalo Prairie township, daughter of William and Augusta (Fuhlman) Parchert. By his second marriage, Mr. Rausch had the following children: Ellen, Willard, Elizabeth, Irene and Ruth Mildred, while he and his wife adopted a daughter, Zelma Wolf. For four years Mr. Rausch was a member of the board of supervisors, and was a school director for several terms. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Essentially a self-made man, Mr. Rausch has long realized the worth of industrious, thrifty habits, and feels that he owes his success in life to his determination to work hard and save something out of what he earned.

REAVY, Edward, superintendent of the Peoples Power Company, of East Moline, has been in charge of this company for two and one-half years, and thoroughly justifies the confidence placed in him by those in authority. He was born in Putnam county, Ill., in 1876, a son of Anton and Catherine (Mattern) Reavy. Both parents were born in Putnam county, where they engaged in farming until removal to Hennepin, Ill., where they now live retired. They had ten children, eight of whom are living: Frank, George, Edward, Caroline wife of John Martin, Mary wife of Wesley Fulrath, John, Laura and Louis.

Edward Reavy was brought up on the farm, where he was taught the homely virtues of honesty and industry, and attended district school. Until he reached his majority, he remained with his parents, but following his twenty-first birthday, he entered the Davenport business college, and took a nine-months' course there. Responding to the call of his country for soldiers, he enlisted for service in the Spanish-American war, at Davenport, in Company B, Fiftieth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and was sent to Jacksonville, Fla. At the close of hostilities he came back and was mustered out. Mr. Reavy then began working for the Peoples Light Company in 1899, and in 1909 he was placed in charge of their office in East Moline.

Mr. Reavy intends to make East Moline his place of residence during the ensuing years, and he is deeply interested in its progress, willingly doing all he can to advance it. Among other things, he is president of the East Moline Theatre Company, which controls the theatres of the city. His fraternal relations are with the Odd Fellows and Modern Woodmen of America, and he belongs to the Commercial Club. A republican in national politics, locally, he is very liberal. Mr. Reavy belongs to that class of young men who have made East Moline what it is today, and are responsible for what it is likely to become in the near future, a center of many important interests.

REDDIG, William P. (deceased).—The various industrial activities of Moline give employment to thousands of skilled workmen, as well as to many experts along different lines, and their presence in the city is the foundation of its prosperity. One of the men who occupied a responsible position with the Moline Plow Works, was William P. Reddig, engineer of the wood mill of this company. He was born in Rock Island, September 10, 1856, being a son of Samuel and Eliza (Dietz) Reddig, natives of Pennsylvania. The father was a shoemaker who came from Pennsylvania to Rock Island about 1848, living in that city until his death, in 1880. He conducted a shoe shop in Rock Island for over half a century, and his stock was noted for the excellence of its quality. His wife died in 1893, and both were laid to rest in Rock Island cemetery.

William P. Reddig attended the public schools of Rock Island, and worked with his father in the shoe shop until about 1873, when he began working as engineer at the Rock Island water works. Although he left several times, he spent about eight years in the employ of these works, leaving the last time to go into the Parlin Orendoff Plow Company, at Canton. After a short period there, he went with the Davenport Plow Company for two years, as engineer, then took charge of two steam motors on the Moline-Rock Island Street Railway for two years. Desiring to see something of the West, he went to Lincoln, Neb., but after a year returned and re-entered the employ of the waterworks, remaining for two years when he began erecting filter plants for a Chicago firm, traveling extensively. Following this, he was at Chattanooga, Tenn., for ten years, and spent two years in East St. Louis, and when he came back home he entered a grocery business, but he discovered, however, that he preferred handling machinery, and in 1903 entered the firm with which he remained connected until his death, April 3, 1912.

Mr. Reddig was married at Alexander, Mo., March 12, 1879, to Nanie Dixon, born in Clark county, Mo., daughter of John R. and Emily (Scott) Dixon, farming people. Mrs. Dixon died, but Mr. Dixon is living in Edina, Mo. Mr. and Mrs. Reddig had the following children: Bessie, John, Tom and Allen, are all deceased; Cal, who was born in Rock Island, in 1884, married Dora Wolf and lives at Seartown, issue—Bessie and Catherine; Blanche, who was born in Rock Island, married William Wolf, lives in South Rock Island, issue—Cal; Raymond, who was born in Missouri, is at home, as is also George Dewey, who was born in Tennessee.

For some years Mr. Reddig was prominent in the Modern Woodmen of America, having held a number of the offices, and he also belonged to the Junior United American Mechanics. In politics, he was a republican. His religious affiliations were with the Baptist church. Few men of Rock Island had traveled as extensively as Mr. Reddig, and as he was of an observing turn of mind, he became well posted upon conditions in the various places he visited. A skilled engineer, conscientious in his work, and proud of it, Mr. Reddig was a valuable man to his company, and his services received substantial recognition. He owned property at No. 410 Fifth street, and a part of three acres near the watch tower.

REED, Hon. Charles H. (deceased).—One of the early lawyers of Rock Island, who later rose to eminent position in his profession, was the late Hon. Charles H. Reed, who, although a resident of this city for only a comparatively short period, strongly impressed himself upon the minds of his professional brethren as a man of ability, acumen and shrewdness, characteristics which in later life brought him prominently before the public. Mr. Reed was a native of the state of New York, where he was born in 1834, and in his younger days worked on a farm and later taught school. He completed his education at Yale university, and was subsequently admitted to the Henry county bar in 1858.

Not long after his admission to practice, Mr. Reed came to Rock Island, and here became a member of the firm of Knox, Reed & Webster, an association which continued until 1860, when Mr. Reed and Joseph Knox went to Chicago and formed a partnership with Judge Eustice of Dixon, under the firm style of Knox, Eustice & Reed. In 1864 Mr. Reed was elected state's attorney for Cook county, an office which he held for two terms, serving at least eight years, and during this time Chicago had no more influential citizen. A man of nervous temperament, he was full of fire and energy, and shrewd in the management of his cases. Personally he was a genial, sociable companion, making friends easily and invariably retaining them throughout his life. Probably the last case in which Mr. Reed was engaged which was of special importance was that of Gniteau, the assassinator of President Garfield, one of the most sensational trials in the history of the country, in which Mr. Reed acted as counsel for the prisoner. Mr. Reed did not live long after the close of this trial, and died at his home in Baltimore, Maryland, where he had resided for some years.

REED, Cora Emery, M. D.—In May, 1854, over the new laid irons of the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad, there arrived in Rock Island, Cyrus Emery, the father of Dr. Cora Emery Reed, who sometime later settled in Prophetstown, the home of the Black Hawk Indian prophet, on Rock river, where Dr. Reed was born in April, 1858, the third in a family of eight children. Her mother was Martha Ann (Rose) Emery, of Limington, Me., where Cyrus Emery was also born, both coming of noted Revolutionary stock. The Emerys immigrated to America, from England in 1655, this branch being descendants of Sir Gilbert Amory who accompanied William the Conqueror to England in 1066, and for valiant service, was granted an estate at Romsey, Hanto, in South England. About four years ago, Cyrus Emery received an invitation to attend the celebration of the one thousandth anniversary of the founding of Romsey.

Cora L. Emery was educated in the public school of Prophetstown; the Iowa City academy, from which she was graduated in 1884; Hahnemann Medical college of Chicago, from which she was graduated in 1887; and the Chicago Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat college, from which she was graduated in 1897. Soon after her final graduation, she married John A. Reed of Bloomington, Ill. For twenty-eight years, Dr. Reed has been a successful practitioner. During the first twenty years of this period, she was in general practice, but responding to a demand for her services, she has confined herself to office work entirely, devoting herself to diseases of women with office at No. 1918-1920 Fourth avenue. At one time she conducted a maternity house, and gave her patients her personal supervision during their stay in her institution. Broad-minded, sympathetic, a woman of wide experience and delicately balanced skill, Dr. Reed has built up a remarkably large practice, and is eagerly sought by those who feel it a boon to have one of their own sex minister to them.

REED, Leonidas Volney (deceased), for many years a prominent factor in the agricultural life of Drury township, was genuinely mourned at death, in many circles, for he had been an active, useful, upright and reliable man. Leonidas Volney Reed was born in Indiana, April 19, 1833, and died on his farm in Drury township, December 9, 1887. He was a son of Harper Reed, and a grandson of Harper Reed. The last named was born in South Carolina, went from there to Pennsylvania and thence to Illinois, dying in

Eliza township, Mercer county. He was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Drury, and children were born to both unions. Leonidas V. Reed was two years old when he was brought to Mercer county, and grew to manhood in Eliza township. Following farming all his active life, he eventually secured a farm in Drury township, Rock Island county, which he brought into a high state of cultivation. He was thrice married (first) in Buffalo Prairie township, Rock Island county, to Eliza Fuhr, a daughter of Valentine Fuhr, and they located on a large tract of land in Drury township, she dying after having had the following children: Maria who is Mrs. Hays of Iowa; Harper who is a cattle raiser in Texas, married Miss L. Kennison; Stuart who is of Big Pine, Cal., is bee and honey inspector for Inyo county, and married Emma Elder; Gideon; Leonidas Volney, Jr., who is a farmer in McLain county, Neb., married Maggie Moore; Jennie who is now Mrs. Charles France of Wilton, Ia.; and Walter who is now deceased, was formerly a veterinary surgeon of Inyo county, Cal., and married Lottie Kennison. For his second wife Leonidas V. Reed married Lucretia Hillhouse. His third marriage occurred March 20, 1884, to Elizabeth Swigart, who survives him. She was born in Lewistown, Mifflin county, Pa., January 5, 1849, a daughter of John Swigart, a carpenter by trade, and she was six years of age when her parents came to Rock Island county, locating in Drury township, where her father died in 1897. Her mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Clarkson, died in Iowa county, Ia., in 1877. John Swigart and wife had children as follows: Mrs. Susan Beardsley who is deceased; Esther who died at the age of eighteen years; Mrs. Reed; Sarah, Mrs. Daniel Graff, who is deceased; Albert H. who was born in Mifflin county, Pa., February 21, 1853, is a farmer of Rock Island county; Mary who is deceased, was Mrs. Simon Shettler; William and John, who are deceased; Juniata who is Mrs. James Graff of Kansas City, Mo.; George who lived in Iowa; and Frank who is of Illinois. Elmer Elwood Reed, a farmer and the only child of Leonidas V. and Elizabeth (Swigart) Reed, was educated in the Hazel Dell school, some of his instructors being: Rosie Spyker, Bessie Gillett, Hattie Parker, Gustie Snell, and Grace Hessman. He was married on December 29, 1909, to Maud, a daughter of Theodore and Ruth (Brayton) Morehead, and they have one child, Merlyn Ernest, born March 13, 1911. Leonidas Volney Reed was an independent thinker and possessed strong opinions. He was a man of great industry and did not spare himself while he was making his way in the world and providing for his family. For twenty years he held the office of justice of the peace, and he was always influential in the affairs of his community. A republican in politics, he served as a delegate to every republican convention for a period of twenty years. He belonged to the Masonic order and represented his lodge in the grand lodge of Illinois.

REEDE, R. E., secretary of the Andalusia Memorial and Historical Association, was born January 23, 1843, in a log cabin near the mouth of Pine creek, Muscatine county, Iowa. The name was originally spelled Rede but always pronounced as though spelled "read." His paternal great-grandfather William was a soldier under General Washington at Valley Forge; his grandfather, Robert, a soldier in the War of 1812; his father in the Civil war; and he served with Company B, One Hundred Pennsylvania ("Roundhead" regiment), during the same conflict. He was severely wounded at Tower Fort, James Island, S. C., June 16, 1862; again wounded at Spottsylvania, Va., May 12, 1864, and was taken prisoner at Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865, but was fortunate enough to have his stay in the infamous Libby prison limited to a few days on account of the close of hostilities. In 1839 James M. Reece, father of R. E. Reece, traveled on horseback from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Bloomington, now the city of Muscatine, Iowa. He taught school on the prairie and became well known as an educator of those early days. In 1841 he married Sarah Malone Wright, a daughter of Edward Wright, who, with his family, came from Kentucky and camped on the site of Andalusia, on Hallowe'en eve, 1836. The following day the party crossed the river via Clark's ferry and Edward Wright became one of the pioneers of Iowa. James M. Reece returned with his wife and child to Pennsylvania in 1847. In 1880 R. E. Reece left Pittsburgh, Pa., for Topeka, Kas., where he remained two years and then went to Muscatine, Iowa, dividing the following three years between that place and Buffalo, the same state. In 1885 he located at Andalusia, Rock Island county, which has since continued to be his home. For forty years a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, a portion of the time being on the state staff or the department, as mustering officer, he organized Alfred Bing Post, G. A. R., at Andalusia January 10, 1885, which disbanded in 1908, as so many of the veterans had died. In younger life Mr. Reece was a piano-tuner, but now gives his attention to raising small fruits and garden products. He has served with dignified capability as postmaster, police magistrate, justice of the peace, and in minor offices. For twenty-seven years he has been the local correspondent for the Rock Island Union, published at Rock Island.

On August 16, 1883, R. E. Reece was married to Mercy A. Reynolds, a daughter of C. C. Reynolds, formerly of Knox county, Iowa, then of Buffalo, Iowa, and still later of Andalusia. Mrs. Reece was born at Nauvoo, Ill., December 7, 1857. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Reece are as follows: Earl W., born June 20, 1884, now of the United States coast artillery; Blanche, born October 27, 1888, is Mrs. B. C. F. Heinze of Andalusia; and Clair R., born November 30, 1891, is at home. During a long life of useful endeavor R. E. Reede has always been actuated by high principles and has wrought much good both as a public official and private citizen. He enjoys universal respect from people not only in Rock Island county, but the surrounding counties, and is certainly representative of the best class of intellectual people of this section of the state.

REEVES, Manassa (deceased).—Farming has always been an important calling, for upon the crops of the agriculturalist depend the lives of the people. Within the past decade many remarkable changes have taken place, but many of them would have been impossible without the efficiency and bravery of the pioneers who made ready for further development. One of the venerable figures of Rock Island county was Manassa Reeves, born in Stark county, O., August 25, 1820, being a son of Vanmeter Reeves. The father was a native of Ohio, who after the death of his first wife, the mother of Manassa Reeves, married Matilda Stull. With his second wife and his children, one a half-brother of Mr. Reeves, Andrew Jackson Reeves of Fairport, Ia., Mr. Reeves came to Illinois sixty-one years ago, after a short time spent in Iowa, settling in Drury township. There he died forty years ago, his wife having passed away thirty years ago.

When there was need of his services, Manassa Reeves responded, and enlisted in 1864 during the Civil War, and served for a year, being mustered out in Texas, in March, 1865. He served in Company I, Twenty-eighth Illinois Infantry. Settling down to an agricultural life, he rounded out his days, dying March 30, 1891. On April 22, 1861, he married Mrs. Matilda (Hall) Hawks, daughter of O. W. and Nancy (McKinley) Hall. The maternal grandmother's maiden name was Elizabeth Chapman, and she came of English parentage, but was born in New Jersey. Mrs. Reeves is a cousin of the late President McKinley. Mr. and Mrs. Reeves became the parents of children as follows: James, who is of Iowa; Andrew M., who for twenty years was foreman of the Moline Plow Co.; Robert, who is a farmer of Rock Rapids, Ia.; George, who died in Moline; and Edward, who died in Moline February 16, 1909. Mrs. Reeves had the following children by her first marriage: David L. Hawks of Chicago; Jessie Lee Hawks of West Pullman, Ill.; Mrs. John Maher of Herdsfield, N. D.; and Mrs. Frank Smith of Basset, Neb. Mrs. Reeves has thirty-nine grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. Although twenty years have passed since the death of Mr. Reeves, he is kindly remembered by all who then knew him, for he was a man of generous disposition, who made friends and retained them. Although not a public man, he exerted a strong influence in his community.

REID, David O. (deceased).—One of the early residents and highly esteemed citizens of Moline, was the late David O. Reid, who was engaged in business in this city for forty years, and was a veteran of the great Civil War, throughout which he served in the Union army as a brave and valiant soldier. Mr. Reid was born June 1, 1834, in Harrisburg, Pa., a son of Robert Findlay and Sara (Ogle) Reid. The father was born in the northern part of Ireland, and came to the United States in 1827. A shoemaker by trade, he worked at this calling for a time in Harrisburg, Pa., where he married. Later he went into business on his own account, finally moving to Indianapolis, Ind., where he died in 1843. The Ogle family were pioneers of Pennsylvania, and members of the name took part in the Revolutionary War, and the War of 1812.

David O. Reid attended the public schools of Harrisburg for several years, but upon the death of his father, when he was nine years old, he was apprenticed to learn the trade of a tinsmith. In 1856, Mr. Reid came to Rock Island, where he formed a partnership with M. A. Swiller, and conducted a hardware store and tinsmithing business until 1869, with the exception of the time he spent in the service of his country. In that year, he moved to Moline, where he continued in the same line of business, until his death, August 25, 1909.

Mr. Reid helped to organize Company H, Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and ran for the office of first lieutenant, but was defeated by one vote. His enlistment is dated September 23, 1861, and he was appointed first sergeant of his company. On June 1, 1862, he was promoted to the rank of second lieutenant, and on October 14, 1863, received a second promotion which made him first lieutenant of his company. On June 26, 1865, he was made its captain, but on account of the size of the company, he was not mustered in as captain, although kept in command, until they were mustered out, July 12, 1865, he as first lieutenant.

The brother of Mr. Reid, Robert F. Reid, also enlisted at the same time and place, as a private, and was appointed sergeant-major of the regiment, and was promoted to first lieutenant and adjutant, on July 9, 1865, but was not mustered in as such, for the same reason as kept his brother out. He was mustered out as sergeant-major, although he had been acting as adjutant until they were mustered out, July 12, 1865. Both were re-enlisted as veterans, and served with distinction in their command. Company H, Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry was a Rock Island company, with headquarters at Rock Island, and the majority of the members were from Rock Island county. The regiment was called the Lead Mine Regiment, and took part in nearly all the battles of the Army of the Tennessee, from Fort Henry to the grand parade and review at Washington, in 1865. The Reid brothers were participants in all the campaigns of the regiment, and came home at the end of the war loaded with honors. David O. Reid was twice wounded, and never fully recovered from the disability. Mr. Reid became a member of Graham Post, G. A. R., and belonged to Dorie Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Eastern Star, and Harmony Lodge, A. O. U. W. A republican from the Fremont campaign until 1896, when he supported Mr. Bryan's views on the money question, he served ably as city clerk of Rock Island, for two terms; was county treasurer of Rock Island county, and supervisor from Moline township, and was appointed overseer of the poor of Moline township, serving faithfully in every connection. In every respect, he was a true citizen of his time and place. While not a member of any religious denomination, he supported the Unitarian church.

On February 12, 1861, Mr. Reid was married in Rock Island, to Amanda Lois Webster, born January 22, 1843, in Bridgewater, Pa., daughter of John B. and Hester (Osmond) Webster. Mrs. Reid's people all came of old Pennsylvania stock. Mr. Webster came west to Rock Island county, where he became one of the early merchants. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Reid were: John Donaldson, who died at the age of two years; Caroline, deceased, who was the wife of Fabian Lawson; Sarah, who married George E. Evans, resides on Nineteenth street, Moline; Robert F., who is deceased; David Ogle and Katherine, who died in infancy; Henrietta, who is residing at home; Frances, who married Edgar H. Fuller; William Morris, who is living at home; Arthur Webster, who is a traveling man, and Elizabeth Lois, who died in infancy.

The death of Robert Findlay Reid, son of David O. Reid was a very sad event. The young man had served as corporal of Company E, Sixth Illinois Infantry (National Guards) in the Spanish-American War, and was in the campaign of Porto Rico. He was a good soldier, and always willing to do his full duty. Upon his return, it was discovered that he had contracted some climatic disease, which grew upon him until his mind became affected, and his death resulted April 9th, 1910. Father and son lie buried in beautiful Chippianock cemetery, near the city of Rock Island, and on each Memorial Day, their graves are decorated with the flags both suffered to preserve, and exquisite flowers put there by loving hands. The family residence is at No. 835, Nineteenth street, where Mrs. Reid now lives.

REID, J. A., for the past fifteen years connected with the City Steam Laundry Company, of Rock Island, was one of the original proprietors of this business. It was started as a partnership by J. A. Reid and Thomas Bollman, in September, 1897, and at No. 226 Seventeenth street, where it was conducted for a period of eleven years, when the present plant was built and modern machinery installed, at No. 417 Seventeenth street. There are about fifteen persons employed and the business is now managed by J. A. Reid and Michael Bollman, a son of Thomas Bollman, who has been a member of the firm since 1901. They do all kinds of laundry work and use two wagons in making deliveries. This is perhaps the largest enterprise of its kind in the city and has an enviable reputation for the excellence of its service. The men who have made it successful are well known in business circles and old residents of Rock Island.

J. A. Reid was born at Kampsville, Ill., January 22, 1866. He received most of his education in Illinois, but when twelve years old moved to Missouri, which continued his home until 1892, when he came to Rock Island. He entered the employ of the C. O. D. Laundry, and there learned the details of the business, so that he was well fitted by training and experience to carry on the same line for himself. He has followed the laundry business almost all of his active business life, but before engaging in it had worked for a time as a stationary engineer.

In 1895 J. A. Reid married May E. Bollman, a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Frisht) Bollman, of Rock Island. The Bollman family is well known and highly respected in the county. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Reid: Glenn L., Nina M., Stella E. and Blanch M., all of whom are students in the public schools, the two first-named being in the high school. Mr. Reid is a member of the Odd Fellows and has passed all the chairs of the lodge and served as its representative to the Grand Lodge, and is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church and for the past three years has held the office of steward. Regarded as an upright and useful citizen, he has a large number of friends, in social, business, fraternal and church circles.

REIDY BROTHERS.—Real estate values have greatly increased in all parts of Illinois during the past twenty years, and values in Rock Island county have at least kept pace with the general movement. One of the oldest firms in business here is that of Reidy Brothers, which was established in 1890 by J. E. Reidy. A year later his brother Thomas B. joined with him, and since that time the firm has held its present name. Besides a general line of real estate they handle insurance and loans. They are the local representatives of the Home Insurance Company, of New York, and do a good business for that concern.

J. E. Reidy was born in Moline, Ill., June 25, 1878, son of Martin and Marcella (Conway) Reidy, who came to Rock Island county in 1851, from New York city. The father was a wagon and carriage maker and for many years was in business in Moline, but for the last twenty-five years of his life was in the government service at Rock Island, being Post carriage man, inspecting all kinds of vehicles, and working on carriages. He was employed in Rock Island for a number of years, and died there November 6, 1906. His wife died February 14, 1902, and both are buried in Rock Island. They had children as follows: J. E. and Thomas B., previously mentioned; Martin, of Rock Island;

Elizabeth, Mrs. William Bragdon, also of Rock Island, all of whom were educated in the public schools of Rock Island county, and five who are deceased.

After leaving school J. F. Reidy took up telegraphy with the Western Union Telegraph Company, and after becoming familiar with that work entered the employ of the Rock Island & Peoria Railroad, general office, following which he worked for the C. B. & Q., at different stations along their line. In 1882 he left that road and went to work for the Rock Island system, being assigned to Marengo, Iowa, later to Victor, in the same state, and still later to Marseilles, Ill. He was finally promoted to the office of assistant train dispatcher, at Davenport, and remained there until he entered the employ of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Company, being then stationed at Gibbon, Minn., as station agent. He resigned the latter position to come to Rock Island, where he was assured there was a good field for his present business operations, and his expectations in this respect have been realized. He has enjoyed a large and lucrative patronage and has won a reputation for business honor and probity that is a most invaluable asset in his operations.

J. E. Reidy was married in Davenport, January 29, 1896, to Marie Rieman, daughter of John and Ursula (Brunold) Rieman, a native of Davenport, and three children have blessed their union: Marsella Ursula, James B. and John C. They are students in St. Joseph's parochial school, and will finish their course in 1914. Mr. Reidy has always taken an active interest in politics and votes the democratic ticket. He has never cared for office for himself, but has always upheld those he considered best fitted to serve the interests of the people, and has been the friend of progress in every way. He is a devout member of the Catholic church, and fraternally belongs to M. W. A., Camp No. 1550, and Knights of Columbus, in the latter order being a past grand knight.

REIDY, Thomas B., of the firm of Reidy Brothers, the oldest real estate, loan and insurance firm of Rock Island, and the largest in Rock Island county, has been intimately connected with the business interests of this section of Illinois for more than twenty years. During this time he has built up a reputation for commercial stability and financial substantiality, while as a citizen he has ever been earnest in his desire to promote the public welfare. He is a native son of Rock Island, and was born December 8, 1867, a son of Martin and Marcella (Conway) Reidy. Martin Reidy was born in County Clare, Ireland, February 12, 1823, and as a young man emigrated to Nova Scotia, from whence he removed to New York City, where he met and married Marcella Conway, a native of County Kildare, Ireland, born October 31, 1826. In his native country Martin Reidy had learned the trade of a carpenter, and in New York City he instructed himself in the wheelwright trade, and worked at the latter for some years. About 1853 he came to Moline, Ill., and for about two years conducted a wagon shop, but subsequently disposed of his interests therein and took his family to Rock Island, where he became foreman in the wagon shop of B. F. Kimball, with whom he continued until 1871, when he became a federal employe at the Rock Island Arsenal, as a post wagonmaker, and there he remained for over twenty-six years, or until his retirement. He continued to reside in Rock Island until his death, which occurred October 30, 1904, while his wife had passed away about one year before. They were the parents of nine children: J. E., Annie, Mary, Ellen and Alice, all of whom are now deceased; and J. E., Mrs. Elizabeth Bragdon, Martin, Jr., and Thomas B.

Thomas B. Reidy received his education in the public schools of Rock Island, and when fifteen years of age put aside his studies to accept employment in a sawmill. Later he became a clerk in a cigar store, which also did business scalping tickets. Then Mr. Reidy began selling tickets for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, and continued with this company for six years. During this period he began studying law, and while he continued his studies for ten years he never took an examination for admission to the bar, but finds his knowledge thus gained of great assistance to him in his present business. On January 1, 1892, Mr. Reidy formed a partnership with his brother, James E. Reidy, under the firm style of Reidy Brothers, this being the pioneer real estate firm of Rock Island. From a small beginning, this firm has been developed into the largest enterprise in this line of Rock Island county. The partners are men of the highest reputation, and the firm prides itself upon the fact that it has never been connected with any questionable venture, and while it has loaned many thousands of dollars has had but one foreclosure, and even in that case the property was eventually deeded to the man on whom the foreclosure had been made.

On September 5, 1894, Mr. Reidy was married to Mary G. Maroney, who was born at Rock Island, a daughter of Patrick and Bridget Maroney, natives of Ireland. For many years Mr. Maroney was connected with the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, but he died when Mrs. Reidy was only two years old. The mother still survives and is a resident of Rock Island. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Reidy: Ben T. and Marguerite E. Mr. and Mrs. Reidy are members of the Roman Catholic church. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Rock Island Club, and is very popular among the members of these organizations. His political faith is that of the democratic party.

REILING, August.—There is one advantage those following agricultural pursuits possess, food and shelter are assured them, while to those willing to put energy and intelligent effort into their work, a fair amount of profit can be secured. For this and many other reasons, progressive men are devoting themselves to farming, and few are sorry because they took this course. One of the prosperous farmers of Coe township is August Reiling, born in Watertown, Hampton township, this county, December 2, 1860, a son of Louis and Elenora (Mertens) Reiling, most excellent people and early farmers in this section.

August Reiling had few educational advantages, his schooling being limited to about three months each year, but he made the most of his opportunities. Having been brought up on a farm, he understands the working of it accurately, and has confined his attention to it. In 1887, he bought 101½ acres in Section 31, Coe township, and has put in all the improvements, including new house, barns and fences. He carries on general farming, and operates a milk route, having twelve cows. His premises are in excellent condition, and he takes a pride in keeping everything up to standard.

On September 22, 1887, Mr. Reiling was married to Paulina Letsch, daughter of Reinhold and Augusta (Lubrick) Letsch. Their children are: Edna, Rolando and Frederick, who are students in the Port Byron Academy and the district school. Edna married Henry Ziegler, and they have one son, Alfred H. Mrs. Reiling was born in Henry county, Ill., November 20, 1868, and came to Rock Island county when only two years old, so grew up here. Her parents still reside in Hampton township. Mr. Reiling is a school director, having been on the board nearly all of the time he has resided in the district. Both he and his wife are members of the German Lutheran church of Hampton Bluff, and give it a hearty support. He is an excellent farmer, good business man, and one who takes a deep interest in educational matters. Having been deprived of the means of securing the knowledge he sought in his youth, he endeavors to provide opportunities for the children of today, and the present efficiency of the teachers, and the substantial school buildings may be directly traced to him.

REIMERS, Frederick W., general manager of the Peoples Power Company of Rock Island, and a man widely known for his administrative ability and keen business judgment, was born in this city, October 7, 1877, son of John J. and Mary A. (Denkmann) Reimers, the former born in Marne, Germany, in 1843, and the latter in Rock Island in 1854. John J. Reimers grew to manhood in Germany, working as a clerk in a store, but after coming to America in 1865 his natural ability had a chance to display itself, and he soon began to make his influence felt, first at Davenport, where he associated himself with the hardware interests, and later at Rock Island, where he rose rapidly, first in a hardware line, then in lumbering. In 1870 he opened a retail lumber yard in Rio, Knox county, Ill., which he disposed of in 1872, coming to Rock Island as a stockholder in the Rock Island Lumber and Manufacturing Company, and later was made secretary and treasurer of the company. In 1892 he moved to Chicago and embarked in a wholesale lumber business, continuing it until 1902, when he went to Fort Worth, Texas, where he lived practically retired, although he retained his interest in various concerns. In 1910 he went back to Davenport, Iowa, which is now his home. A strong republican, he was an alderman in Rock Island, and was on the city school board for three years, one of which as president. Fraternally he belongs to the Blue Lodge, Chapter, Commandery and Mystic Shrine of the Masonic Order. The Presbyterian church holds his membership.

About 1871 he married Mary A. Denkmann, daughter of Frederick C. A. and Catherine (Bladel) Denkmann, natives of Germany and Pennsylvania, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Denkmann came to Rock Island in 1852 and he became a member of the firm of Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann, lumber manufacturers. This firm also owned the Rock Island Lumber Company. Mr. and Mrs. Reimers became the parents of four children, three of whom are living: Charles D., who is a printer and publisher of Fort Worth, Kas., Anna C., who is now Mrs. Harold J. Richardson of St. Paul, Minn.; and Frederick W.

Frederick W. Reimers was educated in the grammar and high schools of Rock Island, leaving the latter after one year, to enter the Chicago high school, where he took a two years' course, following which he spent a year at the Northwestern university, and four years at the State university at Champaign, Ill., from which he was graduated in 1900 as electrical engineer. Following his graduation Mr. Reimers entered the employ of the Peoples Light Company of Davenport, Iowa. One year later he came to Rock Island as draughtsman for the Peoples Power Company and in 1903 was made assistant superintendent. In 1904 his ability received further recognition by his appointment as superintendent and in 1913 to manager, a position which is a very responsible one.

On September 20, 1906, Mr. Reimers was married in Rock Island to Miss Julia Fay Warren, born in Rock Island in 1883, daughter of Virgil and Georgia (Swettmann) Warren, residents of Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Reimers have one son, Warren D., born June 7, 1910, and one daughter, Marie A., born April 2, 1913. Mr. Reimers is a Thirty-second Degree Mason, and is also a Mystic Shriner. He belongs to the Rock Island Club, the Moline Club, the Davenport Commercial Club, the Outing Club of Davenport, the Marlin Rifle Club of Rock Island, and the Illinois Rod and Gun Club of Astoria, Ill. Like his father, he is a strong Republican, but his time has been too fully occupied with business duties to permit of his entering public life. Carefully trained for his work, and inheriting many of the traits so characteristic of his distinguished grandfather, Mr. Reimers has developed into a man of strength in his profession, whose knowledge is unquestioned and whose grasp of conditions is powerful.

RENOE, Thomas W., "The Drinking Water Man" of No. 414 Twenty-third street, Moline, was born in Callaway county, Mo., April 30, 1863. His parents were Thomas J. and Elizabeth Jane (Brandon) Renoe, both natives of Missouri. The father in his younger days was a plasterer, but during the latter part of his life, owned and operated a grist mill in Callaway county, Mo., where his death occurred in February, 1864. Mrs. Elizabeth J. Renoe, after the death of her husband moved with her family to Macomb, McDonough county, Ill., where she resided until her death in 1873.

Thomas W. Renoe was fourth of four children, the others being: Mollie, Nannie, who is deceased, and William S. Owing to his having been left an orphan at an early age, Thomas W. Renoe's educational advantages were limited. Following the death of his mother he was taken to a farm near Macomb, where he worked much too hard for a boy of his age and was permitted to attend school only two or three months of the year. After this, he lived in Macomb for a few months and was then sent to another farm in that vicinity where he remained two years. During the time he was employed as a farm hand in that locality he suffered many unpleasant experiences, having barely sufficient clothing, and not receiving the advantages of school, or being permitted to enter a school room while here. He eventually hired out in the neighborhood of the first farm to which he was sent and continued to work in McDonough and Warren counties until January 3, 1881, when he came to Moline, being induced to do so by a young man from that city who was visiting near Mr. Renoe's place of employment. He was first with the Deere-Mansur Corn Planter Works, following which he worked at various occupations for several months and then entered the employ of the John Deere Plow Works, and remained with them until 1886, in which year he bought a cigar and tobacco business in Moline.

On September 28, 1887, Mr. Renoe was married to Jane E. Chaney, of Moline, who was born in Montreal, Canada, a daughter of Edward and Margaret (Varner) Chaney, who came to Moline in the early '70s.

Mr. Renoe continued in the tobacco business for two and one half years and then bought a team and began teaming in Moline, and also did considerable contracting, following which he engaged in the wood business, buying the timber, sawing into stove lengths and selling. In 1901, at the suggestion of Charles R. Stephens, one of the stockholders of the Moline Plow Company, Mr. Renoe was induced to undertake the sale of artesian water coming from a flowing well located on the property of the Moline Plow Company. The first month his entire income from the sale of the water which was a new idea, was $31.00, the second month $75.00 was received from this source, but thereafter the business continued increasing until 1910, when the well gave out, and he was then compelled to get water from Rock Island, an item of considerable additional expense, and causing him a loss of $1,200.00 during the first eight months. The artesian well at Rock Island, owned by the Modern Woodmen of America, was at first his only source of supply, and to get this he was not only obliged to give up all the Rock Island patrons, shutting off over $200.00 per month of income, but in addition paying an exorbitant price for the water. In March, 1911, when the John Deere Plow Works completed their artesian well, he began getting water from them and has continued doing so to the present time. In addition to the artesian, he handles Colfax and other mineral waters. He has installed an up-to-date water still, which insures absolute purity of water.

Mr. Renoe owns the property on Twenty-third street where his business is conducted. His operations have met with gratifying success, and he not only controls a large business in Moline, but supplies many Rock Island families as well. Fraternally, Mr. Renoe is a member of the Knights of Pythias, Modern Woodmen of America, Royal Neighbors, and the North Star. He also belongs to the Moline Club of Moline. Politically, he was a democrat until 1896, when, because of the free silver issue, he became a republican. He served two years as deputy sheriff under Sheriff W. George Heider. He is now, and has been for twelve years a notary public. Always a worker, he has earned all he possesses by hard labor and earnest effort, never scorning to engage in any honorable employment to better his position.

RESCH, Jacob.—No matter how successful the German-American becomes in his adopted country, his heart turns back to his native land, and he remembers it with loyalty and faithful affection. Many of the most representative of the men of Rock Island county come from Germany, and this section owes much to their thrifty industry and patient endeavors. One of those who belong to this class is Jacob Resch, of Hampton township, long associated with the agricultural interests of this locality. He was born in the Rhineland, Germany, March 11, 1858, being a son of John and Catherine (Schoenberger) Resch, the former of whom died in Germany, in 1885. His widow came to Hampton township in 1886, to join her son Jacob.

In 1881, Jacob Resch came from Germany to Hampton township, and worked on a farm. Later on he began farming on the Rock river, and two years later, he rented the Adam Fogle farm. Within two years more, he bought fifty acres from John Mohr, but five years later sold it, and bought eighty acres just across the road from Jacob Fogle, and this has continued his home ever since. He carries on general farming and raises horses, cattle and hogs, being extremely successful in his operations, for he knows how to make everything pay, and to be economical in his work.

On February 19, 1887, Mr. Resch was married to Margaret Ruffing by Rev. Father Boerrig of Rapids City, Ill. She was born in Germany, June 24, 1864, daughter of Charles and Anna (Feld) Ruffing, both of whom died in Germany. Mrs. Resch came to the United States in 1886, locating in Hampton township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Resch are Mary Magdalene, who is Mrs. Thomas E. Buckley of Joslin, Ill., has three children, Joseph L., Robert and Lorraine J.; John Jacob, who is at home; Anna Catherine, who is Mrs. E. E. Buckley of South Dakota, has one son, Colestus; Mary Frances, who is Mrs. Joseph Gumber of East Moline, Ill.; Ida Catherine; Emma Margaret and Aloysius, at home. Mr. Resch belongs to St. John's Catholic church. He is a democrat in politics, and has served as a school director for nine years, and with the exception of two years, has been a school trustee since 1901. Fraternally, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. He is an honest, industrious, thrifty man, who knows how to farm, and his success is all the more merited as he has earned all he possesses himself.

REYNOLDS, William, one of the most highly esteemed of the brave veterans of the great Civil war, now residing in Rock Island county, is living retired at Illinois City, after a useful life. He was born in Morgan county, Ind., January 18, 1834, being a son of James and Rachel (Demois) Reynolds, early settlers of Indiana. When a boy, the father often moulded bullets for his brother to protect the family from the Indians. This brother, Eli, was a well known Indian fighter of his day. About 1836, the father moved to Drury township, having previously bought land here, and after locating on it, took up more. He owned in all 600 acres, and died on his property in 1887. His wife died on the farm while her son William was in the army. She and her husband had nine children.

William Reynolds was educated at the several subscription schools held in neighboring houses, and in the Foster school, just east of Foster, which was built of logs. His boyhood was spent in farming, and he was a sturdy young man when he enlisted on October 7, 1861, in Company A, Seventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Reed and Colonel Norman, in defense of his country. He served three years, and was honorably discharged at Rome, Ga., October 7, 1864, having participated in the battles of Belmont, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, the Atlanta Campaign, and many skirmishes. Four of his brothers were also in the army, and all lived to return, only one of the five being wounded, a remarkable record.

Mr. Reynolds was married in October, 1857, to Rosina, daughter of Enos McNall, and when he enlisted he left her and four children behind him. Mrs. Reynolds died in 1864. In the spring of 1865, he married (second) Cordelia Combs, daughter of John Combs. By his first marriage, he had the following children; Milton who is of Joy, Ill.; Anderson who is of Mercer county; Nancy, who married James Thornton, lives at Santa Fe, N. M.; Mrs. Rachel Cecors, who is of Oklahoma, and Mrs. Lydia Cornego, who is deceased. By his second marriage he had seven children; Charles who is of this county; Bertha, Mrs. E. O. McGinnis, who is of Illinois City; Effie who is Mrs. Warren Sedam of Minnesota; Hattie, who is Mrs. Grant Leach of Mercer county; Alfred who is of Illinois City, and John who is at home.

Mr. Reynolds farmed his forty-acre farm in Drury township until he moved to Illinois City in 1904. He belongs to the W. J. Wylie Post, G. A. R., No. 377, of Illinois City. In politics he is a republican, and in religious faith, a Methodist. All his life he has worked hard, and deserves the comfort he is now enjoying. Always ready to do his full duty both as a soldier and private citizen, he set a high standard of morality, and is a man whose influence is widely felt.

RHODENBAUGH, Isaiah N.—In celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the outbreak of the Civil war, due respect was paid to the men who made this country what it is today, preserving the Union and maintaining the prestige of the flag. One of the honored veterans of Rock Island county who did his full duty as a soldier, and as a citizen as well, deserving of all respect, is Isaiah H. Rhodenbaugh, of No. 2112 Ninth street Rock Island. He was born in Richland Grove, Mercer county, Ill., April 24, 1842, a son of John and Polly (Arrasmith) Rhodenbaugh, the former born in Pennsylvania in 1811, and the latter June 9, 1820. The parents, farming people, came to Illinois in 1835, locating in Richland Grove, Mercer county, entering considerable land from the government. Here they lived out their lives, the mother dying in 1888, and the father in 1890. They made the trip west overland by team and experienced many of the hardships incident to pioneer life. The grandparents on the mother's side were natives of South Carolina, who also became residents of Mercer county. The children born to John Rhodenbaugh and wife were: Isaiah; William, who lives in Idaho; John, who lives in Nebraska; Wesley, who lives in Mercer county; Frank, who lives at Davenport, Ia.; Stephen A. Douglas, who lives in Iowa;ACY, who is deceased; Elizabeth, who is the wife of William Lemcke, a farmer of Henry county; Jennie, who is the wife of James B. Valentine of Denver; and Adelia, who is the wife of William McGregor of Mercer county.

Isaiah N. Rhodenbaugh attended a subscription school in Mercer county and worked on the farm. He had the privilege of hearing both Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas during their famous debates, so it is little wonder that when his country had need of him he was ready to respond, enlisting at Berlin, Ill., August 8, 1862, in Company C, One Hundred and Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Shedd and Colonel McMettry. His first engagement was the bloody one of Resaca. He was with General Sherman in his various campaigns and had the misfortune to be wounded at the battle of Franklin and have his horse fall upon him, so that he was disabled for three months. Among other engagements in which he participated were those of Lookout Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Siege of Atlanta. He followed Sherman on his "March to the Sea" and was at the Grand Review in Washington, D. C., in May, 1865. He served until June 7, 1865, when he was honorably discharged. Mr. Rhodenbaugh recalls many interesting incidents of the war, one sad one being the burying of fifty-two men in one trench after the battle of Resaca. A brother of his served as a substitute during 1864, and proved himself a brave soldier.

Mr. Rhodenbaugh was married in Henry county, November 5, 1867, to Mary J. Davies, daughter of Thomas J. and Sarah H. (Hulms) Davies. Mrs. Rhodenbaugh was born June 9, 1848. Her father was born October 16, 1815, and her mother May 9, 1820. The parents were natives of England who came to America in 1832, landing at New Orleans, after a voyage of eight weeks. From there they came north as far as St. Louis, but after five years moved to Moline, arriving there in 1842. The father was a carpenter, and worked at his trade until he went on a farm in 1857. Still later he moved to Camden Mills, now Milan, and there died in 1869, his widow surviving until 1888. Mrs. Rhodenbaugh has still living (1913) the following brothers and sisters: Thomas H. Davies, of Nebraska; William E. Davies, of Rock Island; Mrs. Louisa Johnson, of Rock Island; and Mrs. Ruth Van Horn, of the same city. Mr. Rhodenbaugh has spent his days in agricultural pursuits, and his life has been a busy one filled with useful deeds and kindly acts, which make him well liked by his neighbors. He was reared in the faith of the Methodist church.

RICHMOND, George H., was born in what is now known as South Rock Island township, June 11, 1865, and his home has practically always been on the same section of land where he now resides. He was the second child of Roswell Richmond and Eliza (Case) Richmond. The father was a native of Covington, Ky., and the mother, of South Rock Island. Two daughters were also born to these parents, Mary E., who is the widow of Wilhelm Schmeil, who died in 1909, lives at West Plains, Mo.; and Blanche R., who married Erstine W. Robinson, lives at South Rock Island. The father, Roswell Richmond, came to Rock Island in 1855 and engaged in the manufacture of brick, in which business he remained until his death in 1893. Throughout his life he had been a staunch democrat; and, though he was active in politics himself he never aspired to hold prominent office. He was married to Miss Eliza H. Case, second daughter of Jonah Case and Julia (Spencer) Case. His wife died in 1879.

George Henry Richmond, after obtaining his education in the city schools, attended the Bryant-Stratton business college; and after this practical training entered the brick manufacturing business with his father when he was sixteen years old. He continued here for about six years when he established a brick-making plant of his own, which he still maintains, many of his patrons being those who began their business dealings with his father. Mr. Richmond has always been very active in politics and has taken a keen interest in everything which would advance his community. He has been school commissioner of his township for many years and is now (1913) in his seventh year as a member of the county board of supervisors, the past four of which he has served as president of the board, still holding that position.

Mr. Richmond was married October 2, 1883, to Miss Mary Josephine Joyce, of Kiethburg, Mercer county, Ill., a daughter of James and Margaret Joyce of that city. He brought his bride home to Rock Island, where the couple have since continuously made their home.

RICHTER, Joseph Anthony, familiarly called Tony, one of the progressive farmers of Rock Island county, owns eighty acres of good land in Buffalo Prairie township, and is one of the public-spirited men of his locality. He was born in Muscatine, Ia., March 10, 1877, being a son of Joseph and Bertha (Seidler) Richter. Mr. Richter died in Iowa just prior to the birth of his son, and his widow later married Peter Wertz and went to live at Illinois City, Ill. The mother had been born in Germany and came to this country in young womanhood. By her first marriage she had the following children: Francis George, who is of East Moline; Anna, who died at the age of two years, and Joseph Anthony. By her second marriage, she had a daughter, Mary, now Mrs. William Kadel of Duncan township, Mercer county.

Joseph Anthony Richter attended the district schools and remained with his mother until he was twenty-eight years old, being very much attached to her. He learned the carpenter trade, and followed it for ten years, becoming boss carpenter. However, his inclinations led him to begin farming in 1908, when he bought his step-father's farm of forty acres in Buffalo Prairie township. This he sold in the spring of 1910, and purchased his present property, which he is further improving.

Mr. Richter was married in Muscatine, Ia., in 1905, to Margaret Smith. A sketch of her parents appears elsewhere in this work. One child, Iona, was born June 5, 1910, to Mr. and Mrs. Richter. Mrs. Richter belongs to the German Lutheran church, but her husband is not connected with any religious organization. In politics, he is a republican. Careful in all he undertakes, conscientious in his dealings with others, Mr. Richter has established a well-earned reputation for fairness and honesty and is one of the representative men of Buffalo Prairie township.

RIPLEY, David L., owner and proprietor of Hillsdale Farm, a beautifully situated tract of cultivated fields and bits of woodland and improved so that it meets all the demands of a modern home, was born in Gallia county, O., November 24, 1839, and is a son of Stephen

Johnson and Maria (Griswold) Ripley. Stephen J. Ripley was born January 13, 1818, and died January 28, 1898, while his wife, born November 1, 1813, died in 1888, and their burials were in the Reynold cemetery, Drury township, Rock Island county, Ill.

David Lyman Ripley attended the district schools, but in his boyhood the opportunities for securing an education were very limited. He accompanied his parents when they moved to Iowa and afterward, in 1860, came to Rock Island county, and remained with and worked for his father until March 9, 1864, when he was married. One year later he enlisted in Company I, Twenty-eighth Illinois Volunteer U. S. Army and served just one year, being mustered out March 9, 1866, at Brownsville, Tex. His regiment was utilized for guard duty during the uprising on the Mexican border. He returned home by boat on the Mississippi river to Rock Island county, and rejoined his wife, and then first saw his infant son, who had been born during his absence. Mr. Ripley then rented a farm and remained on it until the spring of 1869, when he removed, with his family, to Atchison county, Mo., where he followed farming for two years. He then purchased forty acres of land four miles from Rockport, Mo., on which he made improvements and later added twenty acres and on this sixty-acre farm remained until 1884, when he sold out and returned with his family to Drury township, Rock Island county, and bought the eighty acres which now comprise Hillsdale Farm, and which is under the direct management of his son, he, to some extent, being retired.

On March 9, 1864, Mr. Ripley was married to Miss Sarah Jane LeQuatte, who was born in Drury township, February 22, 1848, a daughter of Mathew and Sarah Margaret (Morrow) LeQuatte, natives of Indiana. The parents of Mrs. Ripley are deceased, the burial of the mother being near Rockport, Mo., she having been born in 1818 and died in 1878, while the father is interred at Belle Plaine, Ia. Mrs. Ripley was the youngest born of four children, the others being: James, born in 1841, died in Drury township; William, born in 1842, died in 1865 and his burial was at Mobile, Ala.; and Jeremiah, born in 1843, died January 1, 1901, in Belle Plaine, Ia.

To Mr. and Mrs. Ripley two sons and one daughter were born, namely: Philo, who was born November 19, 1865, died March 9, 1872, and was buried in the cemetery near Rockport, Mo.; William Stevens, who was born September 14, 1867, resides on the home place; and Lillie M., who was born January 25, 1878, died February 27, 1879, and her burial was in Missouri. Mr. Ripley and family are members of the Baptist church. Both he and son are republicans in their political sentiments and he belongs to the local G. A. R. post.

William Stephen Ripley assisted his father after his school days were over and has remained on the home place which is now carried on under his capable management. On April 20, 1898, he was married to Miss Mabel Paine, a daughter of John Bruno and Janet (Gibson) Paine. They have one son, Wilbur David, who was born June 25, 1909, who promises to grow into the good citizenship of his father and grandfather.

RISTOW, David, owner of his beautiful 245-acre farm in Coal Valley township, one of the most valuable in this region, is numbered among the responsible German-Americans of Rock Island county. He was born in Germany, in 1853, being a son of Jacob Ristow. As he grew up, David Ristow heard of lands beyond the ocean that offered so much better opportunities than his own, and finally in 1879, he decided to try for fortune there. So leaving Germany, he and his wife came to Canada, and until 1881, he worked for a railroad, but not being satisfied he left Canada and came to Coal Valley, Ill., where after he had worked for five years in the mines in order to get sufficient money to make a purchase of land, he bought the property he now owns, which he has named Auf Wieder Sehn Farm.

David Ristow was married in Germany to Bertha Erdmann, to whose industry, thrift and advice he feels that he owes much of his success. They have had children as follows: Conrad, Emma, Clara, Henry, Minnie, Wilhelm and Ernest, all children of whom any parents might well be proud. The political faith of Mr. Ristow makes him a republican as he is in sympathy with the principles of that party, and he supports its candidates upon every occasion. The Lutheran church holds the membership of him and his wife, and their children were brought up in it. Mr. and Mrs. Ristow are energetic, hard-working people, who have always been economical, and they have known how to invest the money they saved. While they have made a number of improvements, they are contemplating more, and take a pride in their home and broad acres, which they have brought into so high a state of cultivation.

ROBERTS, Simeon E.—Reared to the oldest and most honorable of occupations, that of farming, Simeon E. Roberts, a substantial and representative citizen of Buffalo Prairie township, gave the better part of his whole active life to tilling and improving his land and to the raising of cattle and stock on his many acres of fertile soil, thereby acquiring both contentment of mind and continual additions to his earthly store. For some years Mr. Roberts has not given his personal attention to farm details and has disposed of more than one-half of the land he once owned, but agriculture in all its branches still interests him. He was born in Dearborn county, Ind., April 20, 1835, and is a son of Arthur P. and Mary B. (Freeman) Roberts, and a grandson of Ebenezer Roberts by his second wife, Mary Plummer. Grandfather Ebenezer Roberts was born in Maine, was a soldier in the War of 1812 and was the pioneer of the family in Indiana, owning a farm in Dearborn county and later accompanied by his son, Arthur Plummer Roberts, coming to Rock Island county, in the fall of 1852. He died on his farm of forty acres in Buffalo Prairie township, at that time being a government pensioner. He was married three times, his one child by his first marriage dying in Dearborn county, Ind. The children born to his second marriage were: Arthur P.; Emma, Mrs. James Mapes, who died in Missonri; and Elizabeth, Mrs. Benjamin Dill, who died in Henderson county, Ill. Seven children were born to his third marriage, namely: Jacob; Lydia; Sally, Mrs. William Morehead; Thomas Jefferson; Daniel; Anna, and Stephen, all being deceased, with the exception of Thomas and Stephen.

Arthur P. Roberts was born in Maine in 1809 and was yet young when the family came to Indiana, where he was reared. He married Mary B. Freeman there and they moved then to Henderson county, Ill. In 1850 he started across the plains to California, driving a team of four horses, reaching the mines in safety and spent eighteen months prospecting. When he returned he brought the sum of $1,800 in gold. He was a blacksmith by trade, having learned the same under his father who, in his early years, had worked as a smith in Maine. After Mr. Roberts returned from California, he was anxious to invest his hard-earned money in land, therefore, in 1852, in company with his father and his family, he came to Rock Island county, where he bought 200 acres of land in Buffalo Prairie township. Here his wife died in 1871, aged sixty-five years. His second marriage was to Mary (Wood) Freeman, a resident of Illinois; and to this union were born three children: Elisha, Ernest and Susie E. who married Elmer Vandavere, of Iowa. Arthur P. Roberts' death occurred in 1888. In religious faith the family were Baptists. Arthur P. Roberts voted for John C. Fremont when General Fremont was a presidential candidate and for every succeeding republican party leader. His children were: Moses; Simeon E.; Isaac, who died in the army from an attack of measles, was a Civil war veteran and a member of Company C, 102d Illinois Volunteer Infantry; Rebecca Jane, who is the wife of John McNutt, of Iowa; Philip who died when aged eighteen years; Mary who is the wife of Michael Kuhn, of Kansas; Joshua of Rock Island county, and Lydia who is the wife of George Parmenter, of Grinnell, Ia.

Simeon E. Roberts in his boyhood had the school advantages offered in the little log school-house near his father's farm. Naturally, as he grew older, he took an interest in the busy following of farm industries and as age and strength permitted, advanced until in knowledge and facility he could compete with any of his neighbors. After marriage he settled on a tract of twenty acres just opposite his present home, borrowing fifty dollars in order to start house-keeping in the old log cabin on the place. Early and late he toiled and found a large profit in the stock business. As rapidly as he was able, he added to his original twenty acres, bought more stock, again purchased land, and thus carefully and perseveringly kept on until he found himself the owner of almost 1,000 acres of fine land. He had no help from political office, in fact the only one he ever held was that of postmaster. For six years, in order to accommodate his neighbors, he held the office in his own house and afterward was mainly instrumental in getting the regular rural route established. He has always been public spirited and ready to do his part in advancing things for the general welfare. He was one of the organizers, with his father, of Andalusia Lodge No. 516, A. F. & A. M. He belongs to the Baptist church.

Simeon E. Roberts was married by Squire Dutton of Edginton, in Rock Island county, November 28, 1862, to Miss Nancy A. Campbell, a daughter of the late Arthur and Elizabeth (McNutt) Campbell, who had the following children: Mahala, married David Robinson; Jefferson H. and Nancy A. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts are the parents of twelve children: Charles, who is a resident of Rock Island, married Nellie Bopes; Arthur, who is a farmer in this township, married Annie Schueer; Ira, who lives at Rock Island; Clarence, who lives in Buffalo Prairie township, married Hattie Hayes; Frank; Emma, who is the wife of Thomas Hayes, of Edginton township; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Fred Shaffer; Alice, who is the wife of William Robinson, of Andalusia township; Priscilla, who is the wife of Otto Schutte, of Buffalo Prairie township; Mollie, who is the wife of Daniel Parmenter of Andalusia, township; Myrtle, who is the wife of Chauncey Reed, of Buffalo Prairie township; and Ella, who is at home. There are fifteen grandchildren in the family.

ROBINSON, Erskine Wilson, is a prominent resident and business man of South Rock Island where he has built up a large connection as a contractor and builder and also deals extensively in Rock Island county real estate. Erskine Wilson Robinson was born at Minerville, a small village in Henry county, Ill., in 1863, a son of Charles W. Robinson, born at Appleton, Me., in 1836. The father came to Rock Island county in the early fifties and became prominent as a lumber dealer, later buying and selling real estate. He married Miss Emma Wilson, a member of one of Rock Island county's pioneer families, born here in 1838, and they had children as follows: Grace, wife of Marion E. Sweeney, of Rock Island; Leon F., a restaurant keeper of Rock Island; Frank C., a farmer of Minnesota; Erskine W.; and three deceased.

After completing a course in the public schools of Rock Island county, Erskine W. Robinson entered Griswold College, being a student there until he reached the age of eighteen years, when he learned the trade of a carpenter, which he has since followed, having been in business for himself since 1889. In connection with his contracting, he has branched out as a realty dealer. Mr. Robinson owns a very comfortable home in South Rock Island, on which he has made many improvements. This place has been his home for twenty-two years and he is naturally identified with the best interests of his locality and actively interested in local affairs.

In January, 1891, Erskine Wilson Robinson married Miss Blanch Richmond, a native of Rock Island county and daughter of Roswell and Elizabeth (Case) Richmond, the former born at Covington, Ky., in 1826. Mrs. Richmond was born in Rock Island county in 1836, being one of the first white children born in this county, where her father had located in 1829. Mr. Richmond came to Rock Island county in 1852, having recently returned from the gold fields of California. He and his wife had three children: George, a brick manufacturer of South Rock Island; Mrs. Robinson, and Mary, widow of William Schmile. Mr. Robinson and wife have two children: Erskine W., Jr., born July 30, 1895, and Leon Edward, born October 22, 1897, both natives of Rock Island county. Mr. Robinson is a republican in political belief.

ROBINSON, James Franklin (deceased).—The death of James Franklin Robinson, which occurred May 23, 1902, removed from Rock Island a citizen whose connection with financial matters during a period of thirty years had made him one of the best known financiers in the state. Embarking upon his career in a clerical position, he rapidly rose in his chosen field of activity, and at the time of his demise was president of the Rock Island National Bank and the Central Trust and Savings Bank of Rock Island. Although a man of large and varied interests and at the head of enterprises that demanded the closest attention, he at all times was ready to give of his energy and means in the promotion of movements calculated to advance his community and was a stalwart and untiring friend of progress, education and good citizenship. He was born on a farm near Hillsdale, Ill., February 27, 1849, and was a son of the late Capt. Thomas J. and Amy Ann (Henderson) Robinson.

Shortly after Mr. Robinson's birth, his parents removed to Port Byron, Ill., where the family remained until 1853, in that year coming to the city of Rock Island. Here J. Frank Robinson, as he was generally known, received his primary education in the public schools, this being supplemented by a course in the Northwestern university at Evanston, from which institution he was graduated in June, 1872. Almost immediately thereafter, he entered the employ of the Rock Island National Bank, in the capacity of clerk, and in the following November was elected cashier of this old and substantial banking house. For more than a quarter of a century he continued to discharge the duties of this position, and so firmly established himself in the confidence of his associates that at the time of his father's death, April 12, 1899, was elected to the presidency. In the management of this institution, as well as that of the Central Trust and Savings Bank, he displayed a high order of financial ability. He was conservative in handling the interests of the bank's depositors, but was possessed of courage and enterprise in matters pertaining to the welfare of the institutions of which he was the directing force, and was generally recognized among Illinois bankers as one whose ability allowed no opportunity for the extension of business to pass. Essentially a financier, his whole interests and activities were centered in enterprises of this nature, and his ventures invariably proved successful.

Personally, Mr. Robinson is remembered as a man of kindness and generosity, who, having succeeded himself, was ever ready to assist others to prosperity. His integrity and probity were never questioned. Politically, he was a stalwart and uncompromising republican, and from the time he cast his first vote for Gen. U. S. Grant, in 1872, remained true to the principles of the party whose policies he believed would best further the interests of his country. For himself he never sought preferment, being content to allow others that honor, although he was urged at different times by his fellow-citizens to accept the offices of city treasurer and treasurer of the board of education. As a consistent member of the Methodist church he was liberal in his support of its movements, and at his death left a handsome benefaction to the American university at Washington, D. C., of which he was a trustee, and another to his alma mater. When his death came he met it courageously and uncomplainingly, and when he was laid to rest in the Chippianock cemetery, at Rock Island, he left behind him an enviable record on which there was no stain or blemish to mar its purity.

On October 29, 1879, Mr. Robinson was married to Miss Mary E. Rhoades, the daughter of Samuel and Martha (Burnett) Rhoades, of Pekin, Ill., and to this union there were born two daughters, both of whom died in infancy. Like her husband, Mrs. Robinson has been liberal in her benefactions, and the capable manner in which she is carrying on the work provided for in his will gives evidence of a superior order of business acumen. She still makes her home at Rock Island and is widely known in social circles of the city.

ROBINSON, Roy C.—The remarkable activity shown in all building operations gives impetus to every kindred line, and Rock Island county affords special inducements for progressive business men, that result in their branching out in every direction. One of those who has recently entered a special field of endeavor is Roy C. Robinson, junior member of the sheet metal working firm of Schmidt & Robinson, of No. 318 Twenty-first street. Mr. Robinson was born in Pine River, Wis., on his father's farm, in 1877. He is a son of Daniel and Jennie (Lang) Robinson. Until he was sixteen years old, Mr. Robinson remained on the farm, attending the district schools, and being reared to habits of thrift and industry. His parents never left the farm, where the father died in 1895, the widow surviving him.

Leaving home, Mr. Robinson learned the trade of wood turning in Oshkosh, Wis., and in 1899 he came to Rock Island, entering here the employ of the Rock Island Sash and Door Works, as wood turner. He attained to the position of master mechanic with this company, but having formed a partnership with a Mr. Schmidt, in May, 1912, he severed his associations with his former firm, and now devotes all of his attention to the sheet metal roofing business.

In 1900, Mr. Robinson married Olive A. Mills of Waushara county, Wis. Two children have been born of this marriage: Lisle Mills, and Ada Jennie. The family reside at No. 1626 Fifteenth street. Politically, Mr. Robinson is a democrat. Fraternally, he belongs to the Fraternal Reserves. A man of unusual energy, dependable and practical, Mr. Robinson brings to his new enterprise characteristics which can only work out for ultimate success.

ROBINSON, Capt. Thomas J. (deceased).—For a period covering forty-six years, Capt. Thomas J. Robinson was a resident of the city of Rock Island, and during this time was so closely identified with its material interests as to make his name as familiar as a household word. Vessel captain, business man, financier, philanthropist, and above all public-spirited citizen, in every walk of life, he ably performed every duty which devolved upon him, and during his long and eventful career faithfully maintained the high ideals with which he had entered life's struggle. Captain Robinson was born in the town of Hope (now Appleton), Maine, July 28, 1818, a son of John and Mary (Dillaway) Robinson, the former of English ancestry and the latter of German extraction.

A cheerful, industrious worker, Captain Robinson spent his boyhood on his father's farm, securing his early education in the district schools and subsequently learning the trade of cooper. Being desirous of bettering himself, he entered Kents' Hill academy, where he qualified himself for a teacher's certificate before becoming of age. In 1838 he came to Illinois, the greater part of the journey, which required thirty days, being made by water, and settled in Whitehall, Greene county, where he taught school with gratifying success for three years. During this period he was appointed assessor of the county, where he made the first complete list of properties in the county, and one which is still referred to as giving evidence of altogether exceptional ability. In 1841 Captain Robinson first yielded to the fascination of the Mississippi river, at that time obtaining an engagement as clerk on a steamer plying between New Orleans and Nashville, and on which he served for two seasons. The compensation, however, was not satisfactory, and he was also a little homesick, and he accordingly resigned his position to seek a more promising field. He returned to his old home in Maine, where he remained one year, long enough to realize that he had made no mistake in seeking his fortune in the growing west, and he soon returned to Whitehall, via the Great Lakes, and from this point went to Chicago, arriving in that city when it had but 9,000 inhabitants. This was in June, 1843, and while the city was growing there was no evidence of the phenomenal size to which it would attain, and the land now occupied by the Grand Pacific hotel, at the corner of Clark street and Jackson boulevard, could have been bought by Captain Robinson for fifty dollars.

From Chicago, Captain Robinson went by stage to Joliet and LaSalle, and at the latter place took a boat for Apple Creek Landing. He subsequently returned to Whitehall and taught school for two years, and then became deputy in the treasurer's and county clerk's offices, continuing as such for four or five years. It was while thus engaged on January 15, 1846, that he was married to Miss Amy Ann Henderson of Whitehall, Ill., a woman of charming personality and noble character. With his brother-in-law, Perry Henderson, Captain Robinson purchased a farm on the Rock river, near Hillsdale, where he resided nearly two years and then, selling his interest in the land, removed to Port Byron, Rock Island county, and engaged in merchandising and milling. In the former he became the junior partner of the firm of Temple, Dickerson & Company, and in the latter the junior partner of the firm of Temple, Dorrance & Company, and in both of these lines proved successful during the five years he remained at Port Byron. In 1853 Captain Robinson came to Rock Island and entered into partnership with Judge John W. Spencer in the ownership of the Rock Island and Davenport Ferry, and forthwith took charge of the boat as captain and master, and was recognized as managing owner for Spencer, Robinson & Company.

From that time, Captain Robinson's rise in the business world was rapid. He was one of the organizers of the Rock Island Stove Company and its president for a number of years, and during this time also became one of the organizers of the Rock Island Glass Company, of which he was for a long period vice-president. He likewise assisted to organize the Rock Island Quilt Manufacturing Company and the I. I. Watch Company, and in the latter served as president for several years. In the organization of the Rock Island & Moline Railway Company, he materially assisted, and served as its secretary for some years thereafter. In 1871 he was the prime mover in the organization of the Rock Island National Bank, of which he continued to serve as president until the time of his death. Much of the credit for the great success of that institution is due to Mr. Robinson's foresight, judgment, shrewdness and acumen, and his associates constantly looked to him for leadership, guidance and counsel. He was identified with Fred Weyerhaeuser in a number of his most successful lumbering operations, and was a director in the North Wisconsin Lumber Company of Hayward, Wis.

Captain Robinson was known as a broad philanthropist and as a promoter of all enterprises for the upbuilding of Rock Island. He was one of the earliest workers for the establishment of a national armory and arsenal on the island, co-operating with others and devoting his energies and means to this end. He was one of the originators of the Hennepin Canal, and probably the most liberal of that devoted band, including Utley, Allan, Russell and others, who kept it alive by successive conventions and delegations, until the congressmen began to see and heed. Fraternally the captain was a Mason, being a member of the Blue Lodge and of Everett Commandery No. 18, Knights Templar. Originally a whig, upon the dissolution of that party he became a republican, being an opponent of slavery and continued to give his support to that party throughout his life. In his younger years he took an active part in public matters and knew the leading public men, but in his later years gave his undivided attention to his business interests. For two terms, beginning in 1849, he served as associate justice and for some years was a member of the county board of supervisors, serving as chairman of the board during the dark days of the Civil war. Captain Robinson and his wife were consistent members of the First Methodist Episcopal church in the work of which he took an active part, being a liberal contributor to the work of all of its departments. He was one of its trustees until his death. After a happy married life, extending over a period of almost fifty years, Mrs. Robinson died in 1895, at the age of seventy-three years. On April 12, 1899, the Captain followed her to the grave. A man of generous impulse, of broad sympathy and of genial disposition, he was one of the best known and most highly esteemed figures in the city, while as a public-spirited and patriotic citizen his signal services to his adopted city were such as to make his name live in the memory of coming generations. Two children were born to Captain and Mrs. Robinson: J. Frank, who died May 23, 1902; and John, who passed away at the age of two years.

ROBINSON, Winthrop (deceased).—The records of Rock Island county show a surprising number of reliable men whose lives were devoted to agricultural pursuits and who have now passed from earthly activity. One of these was the late Winthrop Robinson, who was born at Aurora, Ind., July 23, 1826, a son of Sidney Robinson, a native of Massachusetts. It is thought that Sidney Robinson lived during his early life in Vermont, but at any rate he left New England in early manhood and went to Indiana. There he was married to Abigail Harding, born in the Mohawk Valley, N. Y. For some years Mr. Robinson operated a tannery near East Enterprise, Ind., and later, in 1848, came to Illinois, where he entered government land in Edgington township, Rock Island county, becoming the owner of 1,000 acres. There his death occurred. The children born to Sidney and Abigail Robinson were: Eliza, who died as Mrs. James Waugh; Winthrop; Nancy, who became Mrs. William Seymour, and is now deceased; David, who married Mahala Campbell and died in Rock Island in 1911; Isabella, who died as Mrs. Eli Allen in Nebraska; Emily, who became Mrs. John Collins, of Muscatine, Ia.; William, who married Sarah Spickler and lives at Longmont, Colo.; Abigail, who became Mrs. William Bell; and Edmond, who married Laura Anderson and died in Nebraska.

Winthrop Robinson attended the country schools, but, although he became a man of scholarly attainments, the greater part of his learning was self-acquired. During his boyhood, he worked in his father's tanyard, but in 1849 came to Rock Island county, traveling overland by team and built his pioneer home one-half mile south of Edgington. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Wenks, of Edgington, January 22, 1909. His religious views were liberal, while his wife was for thirty-five years a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Robinson took great pride in the fact that he could trace his ancestry back to the Pilgrim Fathers.

On March 25, 1849, Mr. Robinson was married to Miss Maria Ransom, at the home of the bride in Indiana, and they had children as follows: Mary born February 19, 1850, who died October 9, 1867, unmarried; Sarah, who married M. D. McLaughlin, was born April 27, 1853, and was left a widow September 10, 1911, having been the mother of five children:—Clarence E., Harry and Ella E., who are living, and Mary J. and Bernard L., deceased; Martha, born in March, 1860, who died in infancy; and Harriett Bertha who was born June 20, 1862, was married January 25, 1883, by the Rev. T. R. Johnson, of the Edgington Presbyterian church, to W. H. Wenks, of Reynolds, now a merchant of Edgington, and they have one daughter—Orpha Mildred, born June 22, 1885, who married Louis Gould, of Edgington township, a farmer, and has two children—Estelle Gwendolyn and William Allen. All the deceased members of this family are buried in Edgington cemetery.

Winthrop Robinson was a whole-souled man whose interest in the welfare of his township was marked. His life was spent in earnest endeavor, and when he died there were many besides his immediate family to mourn his loss. An obituary, printed in a local paper at the time of his demise, said: "Many mourn the loss of Winthrop Robinson, one of the earliest settlers of Edgington. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Bertha Wenks, in Edgington, on Friday, January 22, 1909, having reached the age of eighty-two years, five months and twenty-nine days. His last illness covered a period of only one week, the immediate cause of death being septic infection. He was the eldest son of Sidney and Abigail Robinson and was born at Aurora, Ind., on the 23d of July, 1826. At the age of twenty-three he married Maria Ransom, and in the same year, 1849, the young couple set out for what was then known as the 'far west,' moving overland by team to Rock Island county. Soon after coming to Illinois, he settled and built his pioneer home one-half mile south of the village of Edginton. During the early years of his residence here he endured many of the hardships and privations that are always encountered by the advance guards of civilization in a new country. His chief characteristics during a long life were rigid uprightness in all his dealings, sterling honesty, activity in the business of cultivating and improving his well chosen acres and the love of home and family. While others sought pleasure abroad, he found his chief enjoyment in an active life at home. He was a strong man, a type of the pioneer whose untiring zeal changed Illinois from the home of the wild deer and the buffalo to the beautiful land in which he peacefully lies at rest. He retained his faculties to the end in a remarkable degree and during his declining years took much pleasure in recalling his early struggles on the Illinois frontier and gave much valuable information to the compilers of the early history of Rock Island county. He took much interest in times gone by and it is said could trace his own ancestry in direct line back to the Pilgrim Fathers who landed on Plymouth Rock in 1620. He is mourned by two daughters, Mrs. Sarah McLaughlin of Rock Island and Mrs. Bertha Wenks of Edginton, Ill.; one brother, William Robinson of Longmont, Colo.; one sister, Mrs. Emily Collins of Muscatine, Ia.; four grandchildren, Clarence, Harry and Ida McLaughlin and Mrs. Orpha Wenks Gould, and three great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon, January 25, at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Gould, on the old home place, where the deceased had spent forty-seven years of his life. Interment took place at the Edginton cemetery. A large circle of friends extend sympathy to the bereaved."

ROCHE, John W. (deceased), was identified with various business interests in Rock Island, which city was his home for a number of years. He was a native of County Waterford, Ireland, born February 22, 1839, son of Michael and Ellen (Powers) Roche, who spent their entire lives in Ireland. They had three children: John W.; Edward, died in Rock Island; William, of Rock Island.

John W. Roche attended school in his native country and lived there until he was about twenty-one years old, then came to the United States, landing in New York. He located at Shullsburg, Wis., where he worked in the lead mines and attended night school, remaining there three years, after which he came to Rock Island, working his way here by selling books and pictures. He was married in Fulton, Ill., October 25, 1869, to Miss Ellen Mulcahy, and they came to Rock Island to live. He continued to sell books for a time after his marriage and later started in business for himself at the corner of Twelfth street and Fifth avenue, remaining in that occupation nineteen years, after which he became assistant superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company. Later he erected a laundry at Twelfth street and Fifth avenue, which he conducted six years, then sold to his son-in-law. He was a thorough business man, enterprising and aggressive, and was able to accumulate considerable property. He was well regarded in business circles and was recognized as a citizen of public spirit and upright character. He was a member of St. Joseph's Catholic church and was an independent voter.

Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Roche: Mary, Mrs. Charles Souders, of Rock Island; Kate, Mrs. P. J. Colligan, of Texas; Josephine and Edward, at home; Mark, of Oklahoma; Nell, Mrs. Clarence Clifton, of Rock Island; and John W., at home. The family have a nice home at No. 1231 Fifth avenue, which they have owned and occupied for many years, and there Mr. Roche died June 8, 1909, deeply mourned by family and many friends.

ROHWEDER, Henry, contractor for sheet metal, roofing and cornice work, specializing on furnace work, is located at No. 817 Fifteenth street, Moline, where he is doing a flourishing business. He was born in Geneseo, Ill., in 1870, son of Timothy and Dorothea (Steffen) Rohweder, both natives of Holstein, Germany. The father came to this country in 1857 prior to the Civil war. When that conflict broke out, in 1861, he enlisted in Company E, Thirty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, at Rock Island, and served for three years. Following this he married and went to Geneseo, where he worked at the coopering trade. At present, he and his wife live retired. They had seven children, George, Henry, Charles of Portland, Ore., Louise and Julius of Geneseo; Anna, deceased, and Ida who is living with her parents.

Henry Rohweder was brought up in Geneseo, where he attended the German and public schools. After leaving the latter, he learned the trade of sheet metal worker, in Geneseo, and went to Iowa to follow it; later moved to Chicago, and thence to Moline, arriving here in 1890, where for seventeen years he was in the employ of William B. Samuel. In 1912, he established his present business, and does all kinds of sheet metal work, installs furnaces, and takes contracts for roofing and cornice work. He gives employment to seven men all the time. Although his is a new concern, his reputation as an expert man is fully established.

In 1899, Mr. Rohweder married Tillie Felske, born in Coal Valley. One son, Willard, was born in 1900. Mr. Rohweder is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. Hitherto, he has always voted the republican ticket. The family residence is at No. 1406 Sixteenth street, and is a comfortable one. Mr. Rohweder's success has come from steady persistence and honest endeavor, and he is rewarded by the confidence of all with whom he is associated.

ROSE, John F.—Undertaking has been elevated to a profession, for the modern requirements for directing funerals increase constantly, and this business must be in the hands of competent men, who have gone through long training to prepare them for it. One of the leading funeral directors of Moline is John F. Rose, of No. 1525 Sixth avenue, who also served as county coroner. Mr. Rose was born in Sweden, May 9, 1880, a son of Axel and Josephine (Berg) Rose. The parents were farming people, who came to America in 1883, settling on a farm at Varna, Ill. This has continued to be their home ever since. The family is of old Swedish stock, its members being agriculturalists, and not soldiers.

John F. Rose grew up in Marshall county, Ill., on a farm, attending country school. When he was seventeen years old, he left the farm to enter the employ of the Moline Plow Company. In 1905, Mr. Rose embarked in the undertaking business. He has also been interested in the Moline and Bettenfork ferry and the Moline Glove Works, but has disposed of his interests in these, to devote all his attention to his profession. In 1908, Mr. Rose was elected on the republican ticket coroner of Rock Island county.

On March 8, 1906, Mr. Rose was married at Moline, Ill., to Jennie Wellnitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wellnitz, natives of Germany. One daughter, Katherine, was born of this marriage, on February 16, 1909. Mr. Rose is a member of Doric Lodge No. 319, A. F. & A. M., Royal Arch Chapter, thirty-second degree Mason of Peoria Valley, a Shriner of Rockford; belongs to the Swedish Olive lodge of Odd Fellows of Moline; the Moline lodge of Red Men; St. George's Lodge No. 28, Knights of Pythias; Moline Eyrle of Eagles; Svitheoids; Modern Woodmen of America; Royal Arcanum; Moline Club and the Rock Island Club. The Swedish Lutheran church of Moline holds his membership and receives his generous support. A conscientious business man, efficient and intelligent public official, and good citizen, Mr. Rose is representative of the best interests of Rock Island county, and is a credit both to his native land and the one which is his by adoption.

ROSENFELD, Walter A., son of Morris and Julia Rosenfield, was born in Rock Island, June 13, 1877. He was educated in the public schools and at St. John's Military School at Manlius, N. Y. Upon the death of his father, in 1889, he assumed the management and was president of the Moline Wagon Company, which position he held until its sale in 1910 to Deere and Company. In 1913 he identified himself with the Rock Island Bridge and Iron Works, and is treasurer and general manager of that corporation. He is vice-president of the Rock Island National Bank, and also a director in the Central Trust and Savings Bank of Rock Island and the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company of Moline.

Mr. Rosenfield is a republican, and for several terms has been a member of the state central committee from the fourteenth congressional district. In 1912 he successfully managed the campaign of Lawrence Y. Sherman for the United States Senate. From May, 1910, until August, 1913, he was president of the Illinois and Michigan Canal Commission. Fraternally, Mr. Rosenfield is a thirty-second degree Mason and Elk. He is also a member of the Illinois National Guard, being captain and commissary of the First Cavalry.

In 1908, 1909 and 1910 he was president of the Rock Island Club, being the only man ever elected for three successive terms. During his administration the new club house on Nineteenth street was financed and built.

In June, 1911, Mr. Rosenfield was married to Miss Etta M. Orendorff of Minnesota.

ROSS, James W.—When a man has risked his life for a cause, he has proven his faith in it as truly as it is possible for anyone to do. The soldiers of the Civil war were especially brave, for in their case it was not fighting a foreign enemy, but their fellow-countrymen, for a principle, so their valor is all the more to be praised. One of the veterans of that mighty struggle now residing in Rock Island county, is James W. Ross, a flagman for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad, on Twelfth street, Moline, now living at No. 1266 Fortieth street. He was born at Lexington, Ky., June 3, 1844, being a son of Samuel B. and Betsy (Baskin) Ross, natives of Ireland. They came to the United States, settling in Kentucky, where they lived out their useful lives. The grandparents on both sides were also natives of Ireland, and none of them ever left that land.

James W. Ross received a country school education, attending subscription schools in his neighborhood, and he alternated this with work on the farm. Owing to the troubles engendered by the Civil war. Mr. Ross came to Green county, Ill., in 1861, and there in September of that year, he enlisted in Company C, Sixty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving four years and four months, under Captain Bennett. He was mustered out September 15, 1865, at Washington. He had the distinction of participating in the Grand Review at Washington, and prior to that was with General Sherman in his famous march to the sea. He took part in both battles of Bull Run, Nashville, Shiloh, Corinth, and Lookout Mountain, as well as many skirmishes. During all this time he was never wounded or taken prisoner. His first term of enlistment expired after the second battle of Bull Run, and he was mustered out as orderly sergeant. Following the battle of Shiloh, he was given his commission as first lieutenant. Naturally, he is an ardent member of the Buford Post, G. A. R., Rock Island.

Mr. Ross was married at Rock Island, in October, 1872, to Julia Bushno, born at Davenport, Ia., in 1850, a daughter of Vital and Rachel (Wright) Bushno. Mrs. Ross had a brother, George, who was also a soldier in the Civil war, enlisting in an Iowa regiment. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Ross are: Harry, George, Charles, Samuel, Clinton and Fannie.

There are seven grandchildren in the family. Mr. Ross owns his pleasant eight-room house, and is in comfortable circumstances. In politics, he is a republican. Not connected in any way with religious denominations, Mr. Ross is very liberal, believing that each person should be permitted to worship as he pleases, in accordance with the dictates of his conscience. He is a man of more than average ability, possessing fine traits of character, and is held in high esteem by all who have the honor of his acquaintance.

RUDGREN, Martin Theodore.—It is a remarkable fact that many who have suffered from physical disability, the greater portion of their lives, are those in whom mental faculties are most keenly developed. There are many instances throughout history which cite this fact, and afford striking illustrations of what a man endowed with determination and ability can accomplish, no matter what his handicap may be. A weighty one is afforded in the life history of Martin Theodore Rudgren, commissioner of accounts and finances of Rock Island, who, although suffering from an injury to his leg in childhood, has never allowed himself to be discouraged, but steadily forged ahead, preparing himself for the kind of work he deemed himself best fitted to perform. He was born at Rock Island, where his life has been spent, April 7, 1879, being a son of Carl John and Christina Wilhemina (Glad) Rudgren, the former of whom was born in Sweden June 22, 1836. The father came to America in 1868, locating at Rock Island, which has practically continued his home ever since. His wife came to Mercer county, Ill., from Sweden, in 1870, and shortly thereafter to Rock Island, where she was married to Carl John Rudgren on March 14, 1878. There were two children in the family of these parents, Martin Rudgren, and a brother who died in childhood. The mother died February 4, 1881. Carl J. Rudgren was a very active and conscientious worker and member of the First Swedish Lutheran church of Rock Island, being one of the charter members and organizers of that denomination. He died on September 24, 1912, being over three score and ten years old, and was satisfied to leave this earth and go to the home beyond, for which he lived and longed for.

Martin Theodore Rudgren was educated in the public schools of Rock Island, Augustana college and the Gustus school of business. He took the latter course so as to fit himself for clerical work, knowing that the injury he had sustained in childhood would not interfere with his usefulness in this line. Leaving business college, he accepted a position as clerk in the office of the Deere and Mansur Company of Moline. A strong republican and a man who has gone into political matters more thoroughly than many, he has given his party yeoman service, and has been called upon to fill the positions of township collector for one term; deputy township collector for one term; city clerk for two terms, and at present is holding the office of commissioner of accounts and finances of Rock Island, for which office he is especially fitted. He is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Loyal Order of Moose, and Independent Order of Svithiod. Having been reared in the Lutheran faith, he is a faithful member of that church. On October 21, 1908, Mr. Rudgren was married at Rock Island to Mary L. Lindgren, born in Sweden, June 17, 1861, daughter of Charles Gustaf and Hannah Christina Lindgren. Mrs. Rudgren is a member of the Lutheran church, in which she is very active. She also belongs to Fay Hawes Camp No. 281, Royal Neighbors of America. Mr. Rudgren owns his very comfortable home at No. 500 Fourth street, and his former home at No. 508 Fourth street. An excellent business man, faithful in the discharge of his duties both public and private, Mr. Rudgren has honestly earned the high esteem in which he is held, and is justly numbered among the substantial business men of the city.

RUETH, Anton (deceased).—Like thousands of other worthy men whose lot in their native country was simply that of a drudge and who in all probability would there always continue poor, the late Anton Rueth saw in the western world a rainbow of promise, and subsequently came to the United States, where, in Rock Island county, Ill., there was a chance for him to exercise his native ability and rise to a position of prominence among his fellow men. Born in Prussia, Germany, December 14, 1829, he was educated in the public schools of the Fatherland, served the customary three years in the German army, and in 1865 came to America, and established himself in a dairy business in Rock Island in 1872, continuing therein for eighteen years. He then purchased a tract of twenty-eight acres of land in South Rock Island, and there he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred December 8, 1893. Possessing the traits of honesty, integrity and fair dealing, he was also industrious and energetic, and it was only natural that his efforts should be crowned with success. In 1870 he was married to Miss Philomena Hottner, who was born in Byrne, Germany, March 25, 1847, and came to the United States in 1869, her parents, George and Margaret Hottner, having died in the Fatherland. Mr. and Mrs. Rueth had four children: Charles; Alice M., who is the wife of Joseph Burkhart of Rock Island; and Hannah and Adam, who are deceased. Charles Rueth was born March 31, 1870, and for twenty years was employed at the Rock Island Plow Works, but is now engaged in cultivating the old homestead, in addition to which he also owns several other valuable properties. His mother lives with him. Like his father, he is a democrat, and the family is connected with St. Mary's Catholic church of Rock Island. Charles Rueth was married August 3, 1897, to Miss Mattilda M. Mandel, of Rock Island, born February 12, 1877, daughter of George and Mary Mandel, and they have had six children: Fred, Marie, George, Clara, Josephine and Dorothy.

RYERSON, Samuel.—Not only in the business world, are the young men succeeding, but the number of them in political life supports the contention that this is the age of the young man. Their enthusiasm, quickness to grasp the subject in hand, and resourcefulness, make them valuable adjuncts to any line of endeavor. The recorder of deeds of Rock Island county belongs to this class, for Samuel Ryerson has not much more than entered his thirties, although he has already made his name stand for much in this community. He was born in Moline, October 5, 1880, a son of Peter Smith and Mary E. (Nolan) Ryerson.

Peter Smith Ryerson was born in Orange county, N. Y., May 10, 1840, while his wife was born in Dublin, Ireland, April 14, 1847. For thirty-two years Peter S. Ryerson lived in Orange county, N. Y., but then came to Rock Island county, settling in Moline, which has continued his home for thirty-six years. He spent three years in Los Angeles, Cal., where he is now living retired, having been an iron moulder during his active years. When his country had need of him, he enlisted in Company E, Seventy-fourth New York Infantry, Second Brigade, Second Division, Third Army Corps, Army of the Potomac, and participated in all of the battles of his corps, from 1861 to 1865, and was severely wounded at the battle of Gettysburg. For two days he lay on the battle field, before being found and taken to the hospital, where he remained for fifteen months. His wife was an army nurse for three years, and served in the Jarvis General Hospital in Baltimore, Md. Mrs. Mary Ryerson's death occurred in November, 1910. Both Mr. and Mrs. Peter S. Ryerson received government pensions.

Samuel Ryerson attended public school in Rock Island, going through both the grammar and high school grades, and then took a course in the commercial college of Moline, from which he was graduated June 29, 1899. Immediately thereafter, Mr. Ryerson entered the office of the circuit clerk, remaining until July, 1904, when he was made chief deputy recorder, which office he retained until December 1, 1912.

On August 5, 1902, Mr. Ryerson was married to Mabel Myers, daughter of Fred W. and Mary (Smith) Myers. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson: Samuel Robert and Herbert Edwin, both students in the public schools of Rock Island.

Mr. Ryerson is very prominent fraternally, belonging to the Knights of Pythias, Modern Woodmen of America, Court of Honor, Elks, and has held many offices in these orders. He has passed all the chairs in the Knights of Pythias, and represented the local lodge in the grand lodge; has been secretary for five years of the Elks, and treasurer of the Elks Illinois Association for two years. During 1909 and 1910, he was a member of the executive committee of the Illinois Elks' Association. Mr. Ryerson was a candidate for the office of recorder of deeds and in November, 1912, was elected to that position, being one of three republicans elected to office on the Rock Island county ticket, and receiving a plurality of 2,513 votes.

SACHAU, John G.—There is always an opportunity for the progressive, wide-awake agriculturist to take up property and develop a profitable farm where others have been discouraged through lack of knowledge of the new methods and conditions, and many of the leading farmers of Illinois have made themselves independent in this way. One of this class, John G. Sachau, of Rock Island county, is the owner of a well-cultivated tract in Zuma township, and his perceptivity has made him one of the successful farmers of this section. Mr. Sachau was born in Holstein, Germany, December 4, 1850, a son of Fred and Catherine (Eek) Sachau, the former of whom died in the Fatherland. Later his widow came to the United States, and in 1867 settled in Moline, Ill., where she was married to John F. Schwenicker, and died in 1887. John G. Sachau received a public school education in Germany, and in 1867 came to the United States and joined his mother, a week after his arrival going to work on a farm, where he remained until 1876. He then went to Crawford county, Ia., remaining from July until October, when he returned to Zuma township and for three years worked for Nelson Wells, and also spent a long period on the farm of Dr. Johnson.

On March 4, 1882, Mr. Sachau was married to Miss Emma C. Weidemann, who was born in Holstein, Germany, daughter of Peter H. and Mary A. (Mahlsted) Weidemann, who came to the United States in January, 1868, locating in Moline, where Mr. Weidemann worked on a farm a few years and then purchased 120 acres in Zuma township, the farm on which Mr. Sachau is now operating. There his death occurred in January, 1885. His widow farmed for one year with her sons, and then retired and lived with her eldest son for some years, then coming to the home of Mr. Sachau, where she died in February, 1889.

After his marriage, Mr. Sachau rented a farm in Zuma township, and lived there until July 2, 1892, at which time this section was visited by a cyclone, which demolished the house and flooded the land which formed the farm of the Weidemanns. In 1892, Mr. Sachau purchased the property from the heirs of his mother-in-law, drained it and made it into one of the most valuable farms in Zuma township. Farming and stockraising have claimed his time and attention, but he has also found opportunity to serve his township as collector for two terms, as commissioner of highways for nine years and as assessor for one year. He is a republican in his political views, and is fraternally connected with Port Byron Lodge No. 9, Court of Honor. He and Mrs. Sachau are consistent members of the United Brethren church. Mr.

and Mrs. Sachan have had the following children: Mamie C., who died in the fall of 1885, at the age of one year; Franklin H., who is engaged in farming in Zuma township; and Mamie C. (II), Daniel W., George W., Benjamin F. H. and Clara L., all living at home.

SACKVILLE, William E., Jr.—The growth and development of every community depends largely upon the resourceful efforts of its leading men, who through their energy build up enterprises that bring into the locality not only outside capital, but an influx of population. One of the institutions of East Moline that has had its part in the onward progress of this section is the Sackville Coal Co., of which William E. Sackville is the proprietor. Mr. Sackville was born in Coal Valley township, June 28, 1887, a son of William E. and Mary (Norton) Sackville. The father was born in Illinois, and having retired is now residing at East Moline. For years the father was active in the coal interests of Coal Valley. The mother was born in Rock Island county. These parents had three children: Lizzie, wife of Robert Berger; William E., and Margaret.

William E. Sackville, Jr., was reared in his native township, attending the schools there. As soon as he had finished his educational training, he began working in the mines, gaining an experience that has since been very valuable to him. In 1905, he came to East Moline, and organized his present business, which consists in dealing in coal and carrying on an express line. He is the heaviest coal dealer at East Moline, and his operations extend over a large territory. In politics, he is liberal, and although he is very public-spirited, he has not aspired to office. Mr. Sackville belongs to the Catholic church. Socially, he belongs to the Commercial Club of East Moline. Having made a success of his undertaking, he realizes that East Moline is a good field for his work, and is enthusiastic about its development. It is just such live, energetic young business men as he that bring about the many changes that are constantly taking place in the various communities in Rock Island county.

SADDORIS, Clarence Henry.—The value of specializing in agricultural work is being impressed upon the farmers of Rock Island county, and many of them are following out this idea. One who has made a success of stock raising, in connection with his farming is Clarence Henry Saddoris, of Coe township, born in this township, December 13, 1879, a son of Henry and Emma (Flickinger) Saddoris. Mr. Saddoris attended the Fairfield district school and Port Byron academy, and is a well-informed man. Being brought up to farm work, he has devoted himself to agriculture. In 1906, he bought the old Bruner farm of 160 acres, on section 9, and since then has re-modeled the house on the place, as well as the barn, and put in some woven wire fencing. It is his intention to fence his whole farm with this kind of fencing. Mr. Sad-doris feeds all the grain he raises to his hogs, carrying about 100 head annually, as well as ten horses. He raises a few of the latter for market each year, but devotes the greater part of his attention to his hogs. Recently he has been experimenting with alfalfa with gratifying results.

On January 20, 1903, Mr. Saddoris was united in marriage with Metta L. Riewerts, daughter of John and Maggie (Jansen) Riewerts. Mr. and Mrs. Saddoris have an adopted daughter, Julia Puzznack who is eleven years old. Mr. Saddoris was made a Mason, and belonged to the Port Byron Lodge. He is not connected with any religious denomination, but tries to live his life according to the teachings of the Golden Rule. A hard working man, interested in the development and improvement of his property, and in the advancement of his community, Mr. Saddoris is a good type of the successful farmer of today.

SAFE, August.—One of the most remarkable features of the transformation of a foreign-born man into an American citizen, is the facility with which he learns the customs and habits of his adopted country. Not only that, but in most instances he forges ahead in a business way, of those who have the advantages attendant upon continual residence here. One of the men of foreign birth who has made a name for himself as a general builder and contractor is August Safe, who controls a large share of the contracts not only at Moline, but in the surrounding country. He was born in Wermland, Sweden, June 3, 1868, and grew up as any boy of his country and time, attending school and learning the cabinetmaking trade. In 1888, he came to the United States, and for a year worked in Chicago at anything that came to hand. In 1889, he located at Moline, and for the first five years spent his winters working in the corn planter department of the Moline Plow Company, and in the summers engaged in carpentering. In 1890, his brother Carl had joined him, and these two formed a partnership as general contractors and builders. In 1897, they dissolved their firm, Carl farming for two years in South Moline township. He then again joined his brother, and the two continued together until the former's death in August, 1906. With the exception of one year, when he was in partnership with Emil Anderson, Mr. Safe has continued alone ever since, and has held the contracts for the construction of some of the most important buildings in this vicinity.

On September 5, 1896, Mr. Safe was married to Nettie Clementson, born at Andover, Ill., daughter of Hans Alfred and Josephine (Heeg) Clementson, natives of Sweden, who came to the United States in childhood. Mr. and Mrs. Safe became the parents of the following children: Chester Rudolph, Lenau, Irving, Ernest Orlando, Paul August Raymond, Floyd Clement and Marvin Willard. Mr. Safe is the guardian of his niece, Nellie Cecelia. The Swedish Lutheran church holds Mr. Safe's membership, and receives a generous support from him. Fraternally, he belongs to the Odd Fellows, No. 583, of Moline and the North Star Fraternal Insurance order. Earnest, hard-working, capable, Mr. Safe merits the prosperity that has come to him, and is one of the most highly esteemed men of his community.

SALA, St. Elmo Morgan, M. D., physician and surgeon of Rock Island, residing at the corner of Nineteenth street and Fourth avenue, was born at Bloomington, Wis., September 8, 1870, a son of Dr. Orlando P. and Ina (Stewart) Sala, natives of Wisconsin and Iowa, respectively. The paternal great-grandfather, Dr. O. J. Sala of Cincinnati, was an own uncle of George Augustus Sala, the distinguished English author. He married a daughter of General Morgan of Revolutionary fame. The paternal grandfather, Dr. Eli Morgan Sala, was born in Ohio. For a period he practiced medicine in Rock Island, later moving to Beetown, Wis., where he died in 1880, aged sixty-six years, having been the father of seven children. The maternal grandfather, W. R. Stewart, was first a glassware merchant at West Point and Des Moines, Ia., but moved to Seattle, Wash., where he died in 1903 aged eighty-nine years.

Dr. Orlando P. Sala, father of Dr. Sala, resides in Bloomington, Wis., where he practiced medicine until 1910. His wife died in 1880, a Baptist in religious faith. He originally belonged to the same church, but is now a Congregationalist. During the Civil war, he enlisted in the First Iowa Cavalry, serving for four years. He married (second) Alice Bowen who is also deceased, and is now living with his third wife whose maiden name was Ella Boringier. There were five children of his first marriage, the only daughter dying in infancy, the sons being: William O. of Kansas City; St. Elmo M.; Ona Polk, M.D., of Davenport; and Albert Franklin, a graduate of Augustana college, manager of the Tri-City Auto Supply Company of Rock Island.

St. Elmo M. Sala was educated in the Bloomington public and high schools, following which he taught school for one year in that town, when he entered the medical department of the State University of Iowa. He was graduated from the Keokuk Medical college, March 8, 1892, and on March 9 of the same year opened an office at Rock Island where he has since successfully practiced. In 1901, he took a course in the Chicago Post-Graduate college. In 1911, he took an X-ray course in the Polyclinic hospital at Vienna, Austria. Without any question, Dr. Sala is one of Rock Island's leading physicians and surgeons. In connection with his profession, he belongs to the International Anti-Tuberculosis Association; is a member and director of the Illinois Anti-Tuberculosis Association; president of the Rock Island County Anti-Tuberculosis Association; member of the American Medical Association; the Illinois State Medical Society; the American Medical Association of Vienna, Austria; the American Electro-Therapeutic Association; the Western Surgical Association; the Physicians' Club of Rochester, Minn.; the Iowa and Illinois Central District Medical Association; a member of the medical and surgical staff of St. Anthony's Hospital of Rock Island, being president of the staff until two years ago, and has been its secretary for over ten years; honorary member of the adjunct staff of Mercy and St. Luke's hospitals of Davenport; was president of the Iowa and Illinois Central District Medical Association for one year, and has never failed to do all within his power to promote the welfare of these organizations. He was elected secretary of the surgical section of the Illinois State Medical Association at its annual meeting, May, 1913. Dr. Sala is a member of the American College of Surgeons, recently organized in this country; of the Rock Island County Medical Association; of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America; of the Davenport Pathological Club; and has attended clinics held by leading surgeons in ten different countries.

Fraternally, he is a Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery Mason, and Mystic Shriner; belongs to the Sons of Veterans; Mystic Workers of the World; Modern Woodmen of America; Fraternal Aid Society and Knights of Macca-bees. Socially, he is a director of the Rock Island Club, and a member of Rock Island Business Men's Club. Dr. Sala is medical examiner for several insurance companies and societies. For three years, he served as city physician of the poor of Rock Island. In May, 1895, was appointed health commissioner of Rock Island, serving two years. While a staunch republican, he holds no office, but is interested in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the party and public good.

On December 28, 1892, Dr. Sala was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Krell, daughter of Ernest and Elizabeth Krell, very well known people. Mrs. Sala is a member of the First Methodist church, and like her husband, occupies an enviable position in social circles. To this union was born one daughter, who died soon after birth. Dr. Sala owns and lives in the Sala Apartments, a building of three stories and basement, containing twelve apartments, on the corner of Fourth avenue and Nineteenth street. It is an interesting fact that Dr. Sala, his father and grandfather all were graduates of the Keokuk Medical College.

SALE, Joseph H., M. D. (deceased).—In naming the representative men of Rock Island county, Ill., extended mention should be given to the late Dr. Joseph H. Sale, a leading Illinois physician and surgeon, who for years was engaged in active practice in Moline and a man well known for his sterling integrity and uprightness of character. Dr. Sale was born April 10, 1838, in Laporte, Ind., a son of John F. and Jane C. (Sanford) Sale and a grandson of John Sale. John F. Sale, who was born in Xenia, Ohio, in 1814, was an early settler of Evansville, Wis., where he carried on farming on a large scale, and there his death occurred in 1845. He married Jane G. Sanford, a native of Chillicothe, Ohio, born 1814, who died in 1892, and of their children two sons were doctors, two were lawyers and one is Judge John W. Sale of Rock county, Wis., the only survivor. John Sale, grandfather of Joseph H., was a minister of the Methodist church, who established the first church of that denomination at Cincinnati, Ohio.

Joseph H. Sale first learned his lessons in a little log schoolhouse on a farm which is now the site of Evansville, later attended the celebrated Evansville Seminary, and when the Civil war broke out he began a musical career with the regimental band of the Thirteenth Wisconsin Volunteers, enlisting December 12, 1862. This band was afterwards consolidated into a band being formed for the Gen. John Gibbons Brigade (Iron Brigade) of the First Division, First Army Corps. In August, 1865, he was mustered out of the service, and went to Dayton, Ill., to study medicine with his brother, Dr. R. R. Sale, attended lectures at Rush Medical College, in Chicago, and after becoming a physician practiced with his brother until 1871, when he went to Cleveland, Ill., and established a drug store. In 1878 he was appointed postmaster at that point, a position he held for several years, but eventually he located in Moline, where after years of lucrative practice he died March 11, 1897. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, a trustee of the Methodist church, and a republican in politics.

On December 28, 1871, Dr. Sale was united in marriage with Miss Ann E. Fiedler, daughter of Sarah (Miles) and Casper Fiedler. Mr. Fiedler was born in Germany and was educated there, and when fourteen years of age came to America, landing in New York, and going thence to Columbus, Ohio, where he worked as a clerk in a dry goods and grocery store. He then went into business for himself and later came to Rock Island, where he carried on extensive business operations until his death in 1854. Mrs. Fiedler was born at Newark, Ohio, in 1825, and after the death of her first husband she was married to the Rev. Philip K. Hanna, for years a member of the Legislature. Mrs. Hanna was one of the oldest living members of the order of Rebekah, having been given the degree in March, 1854. She was for a great many years a member of Wyandotte Lodge, No. 6, of Kansas City, Kans., and was appointed state chaplain of the Rebekah Assembly in 1890, holding that office up to the time of her death. Several years ago, at the Des Moines session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, Mrs. Hanna was the recipient of the Degree of Chivalry, by order of that body. This remarkable woman, whose death occurred in 1907, was loved and honored by all who knew her. Two sons were born to Dr. and Mrs. Sale: Fred, who died July 25, 1896; and Francis Joseph, whose death occurred April 11, 1911.

Francis Joseph Sale was born June 11, 1875, and attended the public schools of Moline. For a time he was employed in Moline and he then went to Muscatine, Ia., where he was foreman of a lumber yard. He was married at Muscatine, by Rev. J. F. Robinson, November 10, 1896, to Cora M. Fisher, daughter of Abe Fisher of Muscatine. He was a faithful member of the Methodist church, a republican in his political views, and was fraternally connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Elks.

SALLOWS, Leo B., an enterprising citizen and business man of Port Byron, is a native of Rock Island county, where he has spent nearly all his life. He was born at Cordova, May 9, 1885, a son of Charles and Hannah (Vandenburg) Sallows, who still live there. The parents are natives of Canada and New York. The father has always taken an active part in the affairs of the republican party, has been a delegate to many political conventions, and stands high as a citizen.

Leo B. Sallows was educated in the public schools and then spent about two years working at the machinist's trade in Wisconsin, then returned to Illinois and learned the blacksmith trade at Poplar Grove, in Boone county, which he has since followed. He operated a shop of his own at Cordova for about eighteen months, then in April, 1911, came to Port Byron and bought out the interest of J. H. Spade, and has since been the leading blacksmith in Port Byron. His shop is located on the main street of the village and shoes horses with great satisfaction to his patrons, and has equal success in the line of job and general repair work and wagon-making. Being a skilled workman he has easily established a large trade in this vicinity. He joined the Modern Woodmen at Cordova and is still a member of the order and has served in official positions.

Mr. Sallows was married at Cambridge, Ill., February 22, 1906, to Grace Hartman, daughter of Charles and Sophia Hartman, and three children were born of this union, of whom but one survives, Morris L., now in his third year. Glen, the eldest, died at the age of four months, and the second child, unnamed, died in infancy. Both these children were buried at Cordova. Mr. Sallows has established himself in the good will and esteem of his fellow citizens and has a large number of friends. He is much interested in the welfare and progress of the community with which he has identified himself and is ready to promote any worthy public movement.

SAMPLE, Frank Luther.—It is not always an easy matter for the public officials of any community, to satisfy all their constituents. The more progressive ones are anxious to have their locality keep step with modern advancement, but there are others who fear to go into any improvements for fear that the expense will counterbalance the benefit. To keep from offending either element requires sound judgment, good diplomacy and a fearlessness of action which enables a man to take and maintain the attitude he believes will be for the best of all concerned. Such an official is Frank Luther Sample, road commissioner of Coe township. He was born in this township, February 20, 1880, and is one of the rising young men of this part of the county. He is a son of Charles R. and Isabella (McRoberts) Sample, whose ancestors were early settlers in the state of New York. These parents came from Westmoreland county, Pa., by boat in 1848, on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, taking up eighty acres of the place Mr. Sample now occupies. The father cleared up a fine farm, putting in all the improvements, and died upon it, January 13, 1896, aged seventy-six years, and is buried in Pleasant Point cemetery, beside his wife who passed away in 1884. They had six children, of whom Frank Luther is the youngest: John, Mary, Charles, Lucy, James and Frank, but of them Charles, James and Frank are the only survivors. The father never cared for politics, but was interested in the development of his township.

Frank Luther Sample was educated in the district schools of this township, and grew up on the homestead. He was married September 28, 1904, to Sarah J. Heeren, daughter of Rense and Angie (Rab) Heeren of Coe township. Mr. Sample was made a Mason in Port Byron in 1902. He has always taken a strong interest in politics, and in 1906 was elected to the office of road commissioner, and re-elected to the same office in 1909. Few men have given more general satisfaction as road commissioner, and surely none have been more conscientious about giving personal attention to every detail. He is a successful farmer, excellent business man and faithful public official and stands very high in his neighborhood.

SAMPLE, James Clark.—The most progressive of the young men of Rock Island county are realizing the possibilities of agriculture, and instead of leaving the farm are investing in rural properties, and devoting themselves to the cultivation of the soil. They appreciate the dignity and importance of their work and are proud of the relation they bear with regard to the world's supply of foodstuffs. One of these men thus representative of the agricultural spirit of the twentieth century is James Clark Sample of Coe township. He was born at McRoberts, this township, September 6, 1872, a son of Charles and Isabelle Sample. He was educated in the Greenwood school, and with the exception of one year when he was engaged with Robert Woodburn, an implement dealer, he has spent his life in farming. About 1903 he bought 120 acres of the home farm and has put in all the present improvements, with the exception of the house. This property he has developed into one of the fine farms of the region, carrying on general farming with remarkable success.

On June 1, 1904, James Clark Sample was married to Nellie Jane Genung, a daughter of George and Ellen E. (Pettitt) Genung, also of Coe township. Mrs. Sample was born January 31, 1883. Mr. and Mrs. Sample became the parents of children as follows: Walter, born March 7, 1908; Lester, born October 22, 1909, and Floyd J., born March 9, 1911. James Clark Sample belongs to the Masonic fraternity of Port Byron and the Mystic Workers. He is a live, energetic, public-spirited man, whose position among his neighbors is a solid one, and who enjoys in the highest degree their confidence and respect.

SANDERSON, Walter C., an enterprising and progressive citizen of South Rock Island, who is devoting his six-acre tract to the growing of fruit, has met with signal success in his operations. He was born in South Rock Island, September 20, 1875, and is a son of William H. and Adaline E. (Pilgrim) Sanderson, the former born February 29, 1831, in New Haven, Conn., and the latter June 29, 1836, at the same place. William H. Sanderson was a polisher by trade and worked at various places throughout the East prior to coming to Muscatine, Iowa, about 1866. He was there married and returned to the East for about two years, when he came to this county and purchased a forty-acre farm in South Rock Island, which he continued to cultivate up to the time of his retirement, fifteen years ago, and his death occurred April 10, 1910.

Walter C. Sanderson received his preliminary education in the public schools, and he later entered Davenport business college, which he attended until he had reached the age of eighteen years, after which he was employed on farms and in dairies in the neighborhood of his father's farm, and also worked on Government Island for about six years as a machinist. In 1910 he purchased his present tract of six acres, situated on rural free delivery route No. 1, Brashear street, and here he intends to spend the remainder of his life. He is a member of the Knights of the Maccabees. On November 30, 1897, Mr. Sanderson was married to Miss Cora Brasher, daughter of William and Almira P. (Sanderson) Brasher, natives of Rock Island. Mr. Brasher being the first male white child born in Rock Island county. Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson have been the parents of four children, two of whom, Gertrude E. and Mildred, are deceased, while the survivors are Cora A. and Hazel, who reside at home.

SANDUSKY, Levi, one of the prominent retired citizens of South Rock Island, who now lives in his own comfortable home at No. 1726 Twentieth avenue, was born in the state of Kentucky, January 5, 1849, and is a son of Christopher and Caroline (Wright) Sandusky, natives of Kentucky, the former of German and the latter of Scotch descent. Christopher Sandusky died in 1858 and his wife in 1899, after having brought her family of five children to Newton, Jasper county, Ia.

Levi Sandusky was married to Mrs. Powers, who was born in Ireland, April 14, 1843, a daughter of John and Bessie (Allen) Graham, both of whom spent their lives in Ireland, Mrs. Graham dying when her daughter was but a small child. The latter immediately came to the United States, and made her way to Rock Island, where her three brothers, Joseph, William and James, and her sister, Margaret, the wife of James T. Armstrong, were living. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sandusky, Ada, who is the wife of Otto Post, lock-tender on the Hennepin canal. Mr. and Mrs. Post have these children: Glenna, Sydney, Edmund, George, Russell and Lester. Mrs. Sandusky is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and her husband belongs to the Presbyterian denomination, and is independent in politics. Mr. Sandusky was a teamster on Government Island for a long period of years, and owned his own team there, but nine years ago he decided that he had earned a rest, and subsequently sold his team and came to South Rock Island, where he purchased a home, and has lived here retired to the present time. Both he and his wife are well known in their part of the city, where they have a wide circle of acquaintances and a large number of warm personal friends.

SAULPAUGH, Lewis E. (deceased).—The records of Rock Island county would not be complete without mention of the late Lewis E. Saulpaugh who for many years was a moving factor in its life. He was born at Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. Y., August 21, 1815, and lived on a farm until he was fifteen years old. At that time his parents moved to New Berlin, N. Y., and he found employment in its cotton factory for three years. Then leaving the factory, he engaged to work for a man by the name of Squire Brown for six months, the agreement being that he was to receive $8.50 per month. During that period he only spent $1.50 of his wages per month, so had some saved when he left to work for a Mr. McKibby for two years as an apprentice to the carpenter trade. At the expiration of six months, the young man who was to have received $5 per month, had been paid no money. Hands were needed in the hay fields and he found that he could get a dollar a day. His employer refused to let him work in the fields, to pay him his wages, or even to give him enough to buy two shirts, so Lewis E. Saulpaugh once more sought an employer, riding home with Deacon Morris for whom he had worked in the cotton factory, paying twenty-five cents for the transportation over the intervening sixteen miles.

In the spring of 1834, Mr. Saulpaugh went with his father on the Delaware and Hudson canal and until fall he worked hauling hard coal, but was then sent home by his father with money for his mother. The next spring, he engaged with his half-brother, Henry Banard at $17 per month. Later on the two started for home with one horse, and alternated riding it until they reached Ellenville where Lewis E. Saulpaugh had an uncle living, and while he was calling upon him, his half-brother left him. As he was seventy-five miles from home and had no funds, he asked for advice from his uncle, who told him to remain at his house until he secured employment. Going to Nepennock, another New York town, he applied at a tannery for work, and was at first refused, but when the owner, a Mr. Southwick learned the circumstances he set him to joining hemlock for making vats for the tannery, with a promise of other work in the near future, which he secured. The winter which followed, that of 1835-6, was one of the most severe in history, the snow falling to a depth of eleven feet so that people going through the path made between the drifts, had to carry horns to prevent accidents. In the following spring, Mr. Saulpaugh returned to the canal, but after making four or five trips, he received a letter from Mr. McKibby asking him to come to Staten Island. Complying with this request, Mr. Saulpaugh had employment until he left for a visit home, traveling on the first railroad he was ever on. The trip from Staten Island to Albany took two days and two nights. The railroad trains of those days were very primitive affairs. Old stage coaches were utilized as railroad carriages, the engineer and fireman standing on the outside to drive the train. From Albany, Mr. Saulpaugh took the stage to New Berlin, which was still the family home.

In the early part of 1837, he went to work on the Erie canal cutting stone, thus continuing until 1843, when he began cutting stone for himself, getting out door sills, steps and platforms. In 1845, he went on the Springfield and Connecticut Railroad at Hadley Falls cutting stone for John Warner; and in 1846 was working on the Pittsfield and North Adams Railroad. He was also employed on the Harlem Railroad, and during the four months there did two pieces of masonry, receiving from $1.50 to $2.00 per day for his labor. In the several years that followed Mr. Saulpaugh was engaged in Vermont for John Warner, having charge of his quarrying; for Henry Baxter cutting coping; for Brown, Reed and Frost at Mont Holly on Green Mountain, contracting with them for drilling a hole eighteen feet into a granite boulder, and later did 200 yards of work for the firm. In the winter of 1849, he and his brother Thomas, took a contract on the Rutland and Troy Railroad to build the bridge work out of marble. The next year they went to Virginia and did the bridge work on the Alexander and Gordonville Railroad of sandstone. On July 4, 1850, Mr. Saulpaugh was at Washington and called upon President Taylor, just three days prior to the latter's death. In the fall of 1851, Mr. Saulpaugh built two street bridges on the Hudson River Railroad between Albany and New York, following which he went to Fultonville, Montgomery county, N. Y.

The opening up of more western states, drew him to Chicago, in the spring of 1852, he taking the New York Central to Buffalo, from whence he went by steamer across Lake Erie to Detroit, Mich. He then took a steamer for Chicago. After spending a day at the old Tremont House, he went down the Illinois and Michigan canal to Ottumwa, Ill., and on the trip met John Warner. He put up the derrick at the bridge and quarry of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad at the Fox River bridge. Mr. Saulpaugh loaded a flat boat with stone and took it down to the site of the proposed bridge, which was the first one to arrive for that construction work. While attending to this work, Mr. Saulpaugh met Judge Grant who was one of the directors of the road, and these two, with John Warner started for Rock Island. Mr. Saulpaugh and Mr. Warner traveled with one team, and Judge Grant with his own team. Four days were consumed in the trip, the party stopping over on the 16th at Geneseo so that they arrived at Rock Island April 17, 1852, at noon. On the 18th, Mr. Saulpaugh went to the lumber yard owned by Messrs. Gallop and Mixters where he bought 10,000 feet of lumber, loaded it on a flat boat and took it up Rock river to a place then called Sugar Tree Point. He built a boarding house for the men, a blacksmith shop, and other buildings that were needed. With 100 men he began quarrying stone for the first railroad bridge that was thrown across the Mississippi river, it being built between Davenport and Rock Island. He also built the slough bridge, erecting it before commencing the greater work, which was started in the fall of 1853 and finished January 1, 1856. When Mr. Saulpaugh laid the corner stone on the Davenport side, he suffered serious inconvenience for the dam broke, and he was forced to stand in water waist high to perform the ceremony, witnessed by John Warner and a party of 100 guests who had come over on the boat Lightfoot. In the winter of 1856, Mr. Saulpaugh secured the contract for building the bridge across Rock river, the first abutment of which was built next to Searstown. Work was commenced at that point in March, and finished in September. He continued in this line of work until the spring of 1858, when he went into a partnership known as E. P. Reynolds, Saulpaugh & Co., for the purpose of taking contracts and furnishing men for work in the pine regions of the north in getting out railroad ties. These were floated down the Mississippi.

Mr. Saulpaugh bought his first residence at Rock Island, from David Hawes of this city, which property is now owned by Augustana College north of Seventh avenue. Later he bought half a block on Sixth street between First and Second avenue. When he retired from his railroad work, he purchased a farm of 112½ acres in Black Hawk township, five miles west of Milan, in 1876, where he resided until his death on January 21, 1901.

Lewis E. Saulpaugh was married to Cinderella Miller at Olney, Ill., April 26, 1863. They had three children: Lewis, Jr., Frederick and Mary L.

SCHAAB, J. M.—One of the important business enterprises of Rock Island is conducted by Joseph Michael Schaab, a native son of Rock Island county, who has won a high order of success here. He was born three miles west of Edgington, Ill., April 13, 1858, son of Michael and Catherine (Fuhr) Schaab, natives of Bavaria, Germany, and of Buffalo, N. Y., respectively. He began his education in the schools near his birthplace, and when he was seven years of age his parents moved to Lake township, six miles from Muscatine, Ia., and he continued his education in the public schools there, later taking a course in a business college at Davenport.

After leaving school, J. M. Schaab worked two years for Captain Streckfus, who was engaged in a grocery business. He later spent two and one-half years with Mr. Fuller, in Muscatine, and for the next two years was engaged in a live-stock and farming business. At the end of this period, he formed a partnership with John Streckfus, of Rock Island, in the line of milling and groceries. Mr. Streckfus later sold his interest to Mr. Schaab, who has continued the business alone. He operates a grocery store, deals in hay, grain and feed, and runs a mill where he manufactures many corn products. His business address is 1601-1607 Fourth avenue, and he has another place of business at 1713-1715 Fifth avenue. His corn product enterprise has grown to large proportions, being one of only a few of its kind, and it shows the result of his commercial sagacity. He has spent his entire life in the vicinity of his present home.

Mr. Schaab was married in Davenport, in 1888, to Mary Wolter, daughter of Henry and Mary (Prestler) Wolter, and seven children have blessed their union: Edward, died at the age of twelve years and two days, and is buried in Rock Island; Joseph Cyrilla, Lucy, Mary and Wolter, at home; an infant, deceased. The family are devout and faithful members of the Catholic church and Mr. Schaab belongs to the Western Catholic Union and the Modern Woodmen of America.

SCHAAB, John, a well known contractor and prominent citizen of Rock Island, Ill., was born in Pekin, Ill., August 6, 1851, a son of George Adam and Marie Catherine (Albright) Schaab. The parents, who were natives of Germany, were married in St. Clair county, Ill., having come to the United States in early youth. In the spring of 1855 the father came with his family to Rock Island and there followed teaming. He died in February, 1910, at the age of eighty-eight years, and the mother, who still lives in Rock Island, is now eighty-two years of age.

Their children were: John; Louis, of Peoria; Mrs. Annie Smith, of Moline; Mrs. Mary Henshaw, of Rock Island; and Mrs. Augusta Folsinger, living near Milan, Ill.

John Schaab was educated in the German Lutheran school of Rock Island and can read fluently and write both English and German. He helped his father in the teaming business until his marriage in Rock Island, in May, 1875, to Miss Catherine Roithel. After marriage he engaged in business for himself, and about 1896 purchased his present nice home at No. 603 Seventh street. During the time since he established his own business he has served seven years as a member of the Rock Island police force. He takes contracts for excavating and similar work and has a good reputation in business circles, owns several teams, and is an aggressive, industrious business man. He is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and in politics is an independent voter. Although not connected with any religious organization, he is ready to support various movements for the general welfare and improvement.

Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Schaab: Joseph; Mary, Mrs. William Brunswick, of Rock Island; Minnie Emma; Annie, Mrs. Walter Smith, of Rock Island; and George and John, at home.

SCHADT, Conrad H.—The mining interests of Rock Island county are very considerable, and the coal produced is of excellent quality. A number of prosperous men have gained their wealth through mining operations, and one who is deserving of special mention in connection with this industry, is Conrad H. Schadt, one of the progressive young men of Hampton township. He was born in Osborn, Zuma township, October 7, 1883, a son of Emil G. and Anna (Guldenpfennig) Schadt, he born in Rock Island, and she in Hampton township. The father was a millwright by trade, and worked in Rock Island for some years, dying, however, in Zuma township in 1894. His widow now resides in Rock Island. Their children are: Emil and Otto, who are of Rock Island; Anna, who died when five years old; and Conrad H.

Conrad H. Schadt received but a meagre schooling, for when only twelve years old he began working on a farm for $2 per month, with board. He continued with his first employer for a year, and for two years longer worked on farms, and then was in a sash and blind factory in Rock Island for a year. Mr. Schadt then began mining coal in Hampton township, thus continuing for two years, leaving this employment to work on dredges and hoisting engines. About ten days after he had attained his majority, he secured an engineer's license in the state of Illinois, and a few months later began hoisting coal for the Silvis Mining Company. In 1905 he and Edward Stoehr leased the old Silvis mine, working it for three months, when they leased a tract of land from Mrs. Mary Gribbon, and opened a mine. This they worked for two years, then leasing a tract from Mary J.

Wilson, and opened another mine where they have a vein of coal three and one-half to four feet thick which they are now mining. In May, 1911, they leased a tract of land from A. Kamp and Mrs. Miller and are now developing, having opened up a vein three and one-half feet thick and expect it will be a good mine. Mr. Schadt is in charge of the new mine, while his partner has the other.

On February 17, 1908, Mr. Schadt was married to Elsie Steckman, born in Andalusia township, daughter of David and Ada (Bird) Steckman of Port Byron. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Schadt are: Frank, who was born December 23, 1908; Rollo, who was born March 7, 1910, died January 19, 1911, and Edward, who was born December 2, 1911. Politically Mr. Schadt is a republican in national matters. He was elected township collector in March, 1910, for two years, and for six weeks acted as census enumerator during 1910, canvassing one precinct of Hampton township. He belongs to the I. O. O. F., No. 684, of Colona, I. O. R. M. of Silvis, Fraternal Reserves of Carbon Cliff, the Rebeccas of Colona, F. O. E., No. 1839, of Silvis and has been secretary of the I. O. E. since 1909. Mr. Schadt has every reason to be proud of what he has accomplished, for he is essentially a self-made man. Denied proper education in his childhood, he remedied this by taking a course in steam engineering by correspondence, and studying to such good effect that he had no difficulty in passing his examinations so as to secure a license. Such perseverance sets an example to others, for in these days no man need stand still if he is only willing to work hard to attain his honest ends.

SCHAFER, Charles F., is one of the well known farmers of Zuma township, Rock Island county, where he was born October 18, 1865. He is a son of Charles F. and Barbara (Shoek) Schafer, natives of Wurtemberg, Germany. The parents came to America in 1847, locating first in Huntington county Pa., where they lived until 1850. In that year they came to Zuma township and engaged in farming. The father first purchased forty acres of land, to which he added from time to time as he was able, until he had over 400 acres, most of it being in Coe township, and much of it being originally covered with timber. He cleared and improved it and developed one of the best farms in his part of the county. He farmed on this place until his death in March, 1895. His widow survived him three years and passed away in March, 1898. They had ten children, namely: Margaret, deceased; Christina, Mrs. Arthur Mead, of Zuma township; Louisa, Mrs. George Bihlmeier, of Coe township; Anna, deceased; Joseph, of Coe township; Catherine, Mrs. Charles Hafer, now deceased; Charles F. Jr. and John J.

Charles F. Schafer, like his brothers and sisters, received his education in the public schools of Rock Island county, and was reared on a farm. He has always had a liking for this line of work and began helping on his father's estate as soon as he was old enough to do so. After his father's death he received (by the provisions of the will) 103 acres of the home farm, with the house and other farm buildings. The farm he owns is highly improved and he carries on a general line of agriculture, making a specialty of raising Norman horses and short-horn cattle, in which he is very successful. He and his brother, John J., carry on the place in partnership, which arrangement they have continued ever since the death of their parents, and neither one has ever married. Both are able and energetic farmers and are held in esteem by their fellow citizens. Charles F. Schafer is a democrat in political views and is actively interested in everything relating to the general progress and welfare of his community. He is a worthy representative of an old and highly respected family of Zuma township and has a large number of sincere friends. He is the owner of the home where his parents located in 1850 and has carried on the improvements and plans which they ably began, adding much to the appearance and productiveness of the farm since he and his brother have had charge.

SCHAFER, David Herman, is a native of Zuma township, Rock Island county, where he still resides, and belongs to one of the old families of the region. He was born April 9, 1883, son of Henry and Elnora (Ziegler) Schafer, both also born in this township. The grandparents, John and Christina Schafer, and George and Charlotte Zeigler, were all natives of Germany, and all were early settlers of Zuma township, where they became farmers and landowners. They were among the most substantial citizens and took an active part in local affairs. All are now deceased except Grandmother Schafer. The parents of David H. Schafer were both born in 1858 and were married in Zuma township in 1882, and settled on a farm of 180 acres. This place was only partly improved and the father erected all the buildings upon it and thus made their home on the farm until 1907, when they retired and moved to Port Byron, where they own some property. Two children were born to them: David H.; and George, of Port Byron.

David Herman Schafer attended Rose Hill district school and Port Byron Academy, and early began working on his father's farm. He has had charge of its management since the parents moved away and rents it of them. He is one of the most progressive and intelligent young farmers of the county and achieves very satisfactory results. He was married November 7, 1906, to Mabel Allsbrow, born at Watertown, Ill., daughter of George and Amanda (Margilett) Allsbrow, natives of New York. Two children have blessed their union, Elnora, born September 16, 1907, and Neva, July 12, 1909. Mr. Schafer is a democrat in political views and fraternally is connected with Allbright Lodge No. 307 K. P., of Port Byron, and Philo Lodge No. 436, A. F. and A. M., of the same place. He and his wife have spent their entire lives in Rock Island county, where both have a large number of friends.

SCHAFER, Samuel.—Ever since scientific investigation has proven the importance and necessity for having pure milk, the production of that article has become an important factor in the agricultural life of Illinois, so that many farmers are specializing along the lines of dairy work with profitable results. Samuel Schafer, a well-known farmer of Zuma township, Rock Island county, has found that dairy work has increased his income, and he has no trouble in disposing of the product of his well-regulated dairy. He has been a resident of this township all of his life, having been born here October 7, 1861, and is a son of John and Christina (Shock) Schafer.

John Schafer was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, and came to the United States in 1846, settling in Huntington county, Pa., where he was married to Christina Shock, who was brought to this country by his uncle, Charles Schafer, in 1848. Shortly after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Schafer came to Zuma township, where he took up 300 acres of timberland, and eventually became one of the prosperous farmers of his section, at one time owning 487 acres of land. He later sold this off at various times to his children, and at the time of his death, July 18, 1901, when he was eighty-two years of age, he had disposed of all of his land. His widow is now eighty-two years old and resides with her daughter, Mrs. George Setzer. Mr. and Mrs. Schafer were the parents of the following children: Matthew and John, who are deceased; Charles, who is a retired farmer of Zuma township; Louisa, who married Gottlieb Weiss of Rock Island; Mary, Louisa's twin, who died at the age of seventeen years; Henry C., who is of Port Byron; George J., who is living in South Dakota; Samuel, who is a resident of Zuma township; Emma, who married George Setzer; Frank, who is prominently connected with the banking interests of Port Byron; William, who is living at Malta, Ill.; and David, who died at the age of three years.

Samuel Schafer attended the district schools in the vicinity of the home farm, and at the age of twenty-six years left the parental roof and for a time was engaged in farming with his brother Matthew in Zuma township. After his marriage, he purchased a forty-acre tract, part of which was improved, and he has added to his land from time to time, now being the owner of 120 acres of good land, 100 acres being under cultivation, while twenty acres are in timber for pasture land. He carries on extensive general farming operations, and specializes in dairy work, keeping a herd of fifteen blooded cattle, and manufactures butter for the market. He has erected good, substantial buildings, among which may be found clean, well-kept structures for the housing of his stock, and the general appearance of his land shows the presence of able management.

On April 2, 1890, Mr. Schafer was married to Miss Prudence Holsapple, who was born at LeClair, Ia., daughter of Edward and Albina (Bryan) Holsapple, and they have had the following children: Vera, Vitula, Marguerite, Lillian, Prudence and Garnett. Mr. and Mrs. Schafer are devout members of the United Brethren church. Politically he is a democrat, and has served his township in the capacity of school director, although he is not an office seeker, preferring to give his time and attention to his farm.

SCHAFER, Thomas J., an undertaker and embalmer of East Moline, was born in Rock Island county, March 28, 1882, a son of Charles and Mary E. (Bryan) Schafer. The father was born in the same county as his son, but the mother was born in Kansas. The parents are living, being farming people of Znma township. Their family was as follows: Nora Tilbert, who lives at Watertown, Ill.; Emma Donahue, who lives at Moline; Thomas J., and Ella Wainwright, who lives at Watertown. Growing up at Port Byron, and in its vicinity, Thomas J. Schafer attended the public schools and the Port Byron Academy, remaining in the latter institution until he attained his majority. Having decided upon becoming an undertaker, Mr. Schafer entered the Chicago Embalming School, and after a thorough course, came to East Moline where he established himself in business, although his residence is at No. 201, Fifth avenue, Watertown.

Thomas J. Schafer was married to Miss Bertha Derrich, born in Rock Island county, September 20, 1885. She is a daughter of John and Mary E. (Hudson) Derrich, born in Rock Island county, who are now farmers of Bowling township. Mr. Schafer belongs to the Knights of Pythias of Port Byron, the Eagles of Silvas, and to the Automobile and Commercial Clubs of East Moline. Sympathetic by nature, and skilled in his line of work, Mr. Schafer is a comforting man to have in time of sorrow. His readiness to assist and take upon himself all the last offices to the dead, combined with his ability and facilities for carrying on funerals of every kind, win him confidence and respect.

SCHAFER, Henry C., a leading real estate and insurance dealer of Rock Island, has for many years been in the public eye as a city official, and has held some of the highest offices in the gift of his fellowtownsmen. Mr. Schafer was born October 16, 1851, in Baltimore, Md., a son of Conrad and Mary (Hoffmeister) Schafer, who came from Hesse Castle, Germany, and became acquainted in Baltimore, Md., where they were married. Conrad Schafer, who was a merchant tailor, died in that city in 1854, and Mrs. Schafer was married a second time, becoming the wife of John G. Mosher, a native of Nuremberg, Bavaria, Germany, and also a merchant tailor. She died at Baltimore in 1873, having been the mother of two children:

Henry C., and Augusta, the latter now being the wife of Henry Young of Baltimore.

Henry C. Schafer remained at home with his mother until reaching the age of eighteen years, at which time he went to Chicago, and there learned the trade of a brick layer, but in 1875 he went to Indianapolis, Ind. There he served as timekeeper and assistant bookkeeper for the Eagle Machine Works until 1879, when in the latter year he came to Rock Island and became superintendent of the Rock Island Glass Company, a position which he held until 1892, when he became bookkeeper for the sash, door and blind firm of John Volk & Company. He had served from 1885 until 1889 as a republican alderman, and in 1899 he was elected city clerk, a position which he held continuously until 1907, when he was elected to the office of mayor, which he held until 1909, at which time he severed his official connections, and has since established himself in a real estate and insurance business.

On August 4, 1878, Henry C. Schafer was married to Elizabeth Frances J. Delveaux, who was born at Baltimore, Md., of French descent, and to this union there were born the following children: Ida, who married John Hawkins, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Esther, who married John Elcock, by whom she has two children, Harry and Violet, and after his death in Los Angeles, she married (second) F. J. Wall, of Long Beach, Cal.; Harley W., an employee of the auditing department of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad at Chicago, Ill., married Elinor Wagner; Carl B., salesman for Henry Davis' Sons of this city, married Edna Peters, of Davenport, Ia., they have one son, Chas. H.; and Henry C., who died September 20, 1891. The first wife of Mr. Schafer died August 23, 1891, and on September 19, 1895, he was married (second) to Catherine J. McQuaid, born at Rock Island, the daughter of John McQuaid, and two children have been born to this union. Calvin H., born August 8, 1896, and Helen Margaret, born September 17, 1910. Mr. Schafer and his family attend the Catholic church. He is a republican in politics, and is fraternally connected with St. Paul Lodge No. 107, Knights of Pythias, B. P. O. E. No. 980, and Allouez Council, Knights of Columbus.

SCHAIBLE, Jacob A., a general contractor and builder, specializing on superintending large contracts, is a man whose knowledge of his work is thorough, and whose career shows that he takes a pride in carrying out the terms of his agreements. Mr. Schaible was born in Port Byron, Ill., in 1869, a son of Jacob F. and Joanna (Dougal) Schaible, natives of Germany and Pennsylvania, respectively. The father came to this country with his parents when two years old, and grew up in Pennsylvania. In 1852, the family moved to Port Byron, Rock Island county, and there he was successful as a blacksmith, continuing in that line of work until his death, which occurred in 1898. His widow survives.

and makes her home in Zuma township. There were nine children, in the family: Elizabeth who is the wife of John G. Clark; Mary Jane who is the wife of D. S. Adams; Etta who is the wife of William Filbert; David F. who is of Port Byron; James L. who is of Kansas; George S. who is of Port Byron; Jacob A.; and Charlotte Victoria who died in infancy. Jacob A. Schaible is a fine example of a self-made man, who has developed his present prosperity from small beginnings. Even his educational advantages were limited, for he left school at the age of ten years to work in his father's blacksmith shop, and when fourteen years old, was a journeyman blacksmith. For the following three years, he worked on a farm, and at the age of seventeen years, went west and spent two years. Returning to Port Byron, he remained a short time and in 1899 began working in a sawmill, but soon commenced learning the carpenter trade. He worked for different contractors, until he gained a full knowledge of the business, and in 1898, he established himself as a contractor and builder. He is his own architect and has drawn plans for other houses as well. Some of the most comfortable and handsome residences in the city have been designed and constructed by him. While accumulating his present means, he has been very charitable and has given assistance to different members of his family.

In 1897, Mr. Schaible married Margaret Cowley, born in Zuma township, but she died within ten months of his marriage. Two years later, he married (second) Louise Dorothy Thomson, born and reared at Moline. Two daughters have been born of this latter marriage, namely: Elsie Anna, and Catherine Lillian. These children attend the Sunday school of the Christian church. Mr. Schaible is a Mason. He has always voted the republican ticket. The family residence at No. 1831 Seventeenth street, cost Mr. Schaible $10,000, and is an excellent example of his work. He is a man widely and favorably known as an honorable man and good citizen.

SCHATZ, Christian (deceased), for many years engaged in business in Rock Island, Ill., was a self-made man who, by his own efforts, acquired considerable property, and left a well established business. He was a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, born June 22, 1840. Left an orphan at the age of eight years, he went to live among strangers and attended school until thirteen years of age, when he came to America, sailing from Liverpool to New York City. He learned the trade of glassblower, near Rome, N. Y., and later came to Rock Island, living here several years. In 1871 he married Miss Magdaline Fisher, who was born in Bavaria, October 18, 1849, a daughter of Martin and Appalonia (Meyer) Fisher, both of whom died in Rock Island. Magdaline Fisher came to America at the age of twenty-two years and her parents came later.

Soon after his marriage, Christian Schatz moved to Ravenna, O., but shortly afterward returned to Rock Island and entered the employ of Jacob Ohlweiler, a merchant in this city. Later Mr. Schatz engaged in business for himself at the old Shaffer corner on Eighth street and Ninth avenue, remaining there three years, after which he erected a building at Seventh avenue and Ninth street, where he carried on his business successfully until his death, since which it has passed into the hands of a son. Mr. Schatz was recognized as a public-spirited citizen and was actively interested in public affairs. He was a member of the Lutheran church and in politics was a staunch democrat. He was a kind and indulgent husband and father and had a number of sincere friends in Rock Island, where he had been residing so many years.

Nine children were born to Mr. Schatz and wife, namely: Emma, who lives at home; Mary, who married George Banker and they live in Rock Island; Bertha, who lives at home; Christ, who succeeded his father in business, married Miss Mary McMahon and they live in Rock Island; Anna, who is Mrs. Otto Rood, of Rock Island; and George, Rosa, Joseph and Harry, all at home. Mrs. Schatz and family now reside at No. 818 Seventh avenue and have many friends and acquaintances in Rock Island. Mr. Schatz died June 13, 1899, deeply mourned by his family and those who knew and appreciated his many sterling qualities.

SCHAUM, Jacob W., is one of the substantial and well-known business men of Rock Island, where he has spent almost his entire life. He has built up an extensive business from a modest beginning and is an example of the successful, self-made man. He is a native of Saarbrücken, Germany, and is of German descent, born December 5, 1868, son of Jacob N. and Helen Schaum. The parents were born and married in Saarbrücken, and in 1879 emigrated to the United States. They first located at Detroit, where the father worked at his trade—window glass-worker. A year later the family came to Rock Island. The father retired from active life and lived on a farm in South Rock Island, but for many years followed the trade of glass-worker. His death occurred in December, 1912. There were five children in the family, all of whom are living.

Jacob W. Schaum received his education in the public and German Lutheran schools of Rock Island, and early learned the habits of industry and self-reliance, which he has always followed. At the age of fifteen years he left school to learn the trade of window-glass making, which he followed in various parts of Indiana for a few years and in Rock Island until the factory discontinued business. In 1909 he founded his present business, and is the proprietor of one of the automobile stores known throughout Rock Island county for its high-grade machines, and the business is conducted as the Rock Island Auto Company. Mr. Schaum deals principally in taxi service, repairing and automobile accessories, and he has established a good trade, being well located at No. 2309 Third avenue. He has earned a high reputation in business circles for his integrity and upright dealing, and has a large number of friends in the city, where so much of his life has been passed. He is interested in the affairs of the city and county and always ready to help movements for the general welfare. In political views he is independent.

On August 23, 1891, Mr. Schaum was united in marriage with Josephine Yeager, a native of Rock Island, daughter of Joseph and Lena Yeager. One child has blessed this union, Leo A., born June 31, 1893. Mrs. Schaum's parents were born in Germany, but have been residents of Rock Island for many years.

SCHAVE, Hans.—Hampton township is the home of some exceedingly self-reliant agriculturalists who, understanding the possibilities of their land, are operating their farms in such a manner as to make them yield a good profit on the investment. One of these is Hans Schave, owner of 198 acres in this township. He was born August 4, 1854, a son of Claus F. and Dorothea (Misfeldt) Schave, born in Holstein, Germany. In 1855, they came on a sailing vessel to New York City, and thence to Davenport, Ia. After six months in that city, they located in Hampton township, where the father rented land until 1867, when he was able to buy eighty acres of timber land in this township. Here he died in the fall of 1894, his wife having passed away July 4, 1879. Their children were: John, who is deceased; Fred, who is of Buffalo Prairie township; Hans; Mary, who died in January, 1896; and Frank of Hampton township.

Mr. Schave's educational advantages were limited, he only attending the district schools two winters, but he has learned by experience, and is a well-informed man. In 1890, he bought twenty acres of the homestead, later buying 120 acres called Willow Grove Farm and to this he has added until he has a property of 188 acres, on which he raises horses, cattle and hogs in addition to doing a general farming business. On March 28, 1879, he was married to Louisa Klieks born in Germany, July 2, 1859. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Schave: Claus, who is on a portion of his father's farm, is married; Andrew, Henry, Ernest and Linda at home, and Hulda who died when two and one-half years old.

Mr. Schave is an independent democrat, and has served on the school board one term as director and six years as trustee. He has always been deeply interested in educational matters, and the present excellent schools are an outcome of some of his efforts. A member of the Lutheran church for many years, he has given it support in many ways, for several years being trustee and also deacon. He is a most excellent man, who lives up to what he believes to be the best standards, and his word is regarded as good as his bond among those with whom he is associated.

SCHERER, Peter, a retired business man of Rock Island, now living at No. 931 Fourth avenue, is one of the sturdy German-Americans of this county. He was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, August 15, 1835, and when only seventeen years old, he landed in New Orleans. He is a son of Jacob and Hannah (Walrath) Scherer. These parents came to the United States with their family, from Havre, the voyage consuming forty-two days. After arrival here, the father and his two sons worked on railroad construction, eventually locating in Rock Island, where the parents died. In their family were three children: Peter, John of Rock Island and Mrs. Elizabeth Raivle, the latter being deceased.

After working at railroad construction, Peter Scherer cleared land for three years, and then bought a team and hauled for ten years. Following this he went into business, in the building which is now his residence, thus continuing for seventeen years, and then operated a grocery and butchering establishment until his retirement from active life.

In 1858, Mr. Scherer was married at Rock Island to Miss Mary Miller, daughter of Joseph and Christina Miller. Mrs. Scherer died in 1896, firm in the faith of the Presbyterian church, of which she had long been a consistent member. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Scherer were: George, deceased; Susan; Mina. For many years Mr. Scherer devoted himself to his business affairs, and took but little part in public matters.

SCHERRER, Harry.—To become an engineer upon one or other of the great railroads, it is necessary for a man to go through severe training, and to possess steadiness of purpose, keenness of perception and unquestioned courage. One of the most valued of the locomotive engineers of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad who possesses these qualities, is Harry Scherrer, owner of property in Rock Falls, Ill. He was born in Vermont, Ill., September 16, 1870, a son of Joseph M. and Mary (Miller) Scherrer. The father was born in France on the historic Rhine, near the German frontier, March 16, 1812, and died in Beardstown, Ill., in 1901. By trade he was a butcher, and followed it for many years. When only thirteen years old, he was brought to America, and grew to manhood's estate in Pennsylvania. He was one of five to settle in the town of Vermont, Ill., where he established himself in a butchering business and became the owner of some property. Later he came to Illinois, where his wife died in 1877. The children of this couple were: Joseph, who is deceased; James, who is of Minneapolis, Minn.; Jane, who is Mrs. S. F. Hamer, of Vermont, Ill.; Edward who is of Beardstown, Ill.; Nellie, who is Mrs. J. B. Carithers, who is of Vermont, Ill.; John, who is of Chicago; Maggie, who is Mrs. Rerer Snowden of Missouri; and Harry.

Harry Scherrer attended school in Vermont, Ill., until he was sixteen years old, and learned the butchering trade from his father, following it until he went into railroad work, in 1892, first as a fireman on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad at Beardstown. He continued thus for eleven years. At the expiration of this period, he was made engineer, and has well proven himself worthy of the trust reposed in him.

In 1898 he was married at Rock Falls, Ill., to Miss Oda Ottaw of Rock Falls, a most charming young lady. They have three children: Fred, Thelma and Charles. Mr. Scherrer is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. In political faith, he is a democrat, but his time is so occupied by the exacting duties of his position, that he has no time for public affairs.

SCHEUERMANN, John.—Almost every branch of industrial life is represented in Rock Island for this city is the center of a rich district that looks to it as a source of supply to meet immense demands. These industrial activities are in the hands of first-class men who understand their business, and one of them is John Scheuermann, carpet weaver, of No. 2705 Eighth avenue, Rock Island. He was born in Birkenau-Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, January 14, 1857, a son of John and Anna M. (Miller) Scheuermann. The father was a farmer and weaver, who came to Columbus, Ind., in 1880. In 1887 he came to Rock Island, where he died June 6, 1909. His wife died in Germany. The grandfather was also a farmer and weaver, who gave his term of service in the German army during the Napoleonic wars. There were five sons and one daughter in the father's family, but John and a brother, Andrew, are the only survivors.

In 1880, these children, with their father, came to New York, and thence to Columbus, Ind. For seven years, John and Andrew lived there, then came on to Rock Island where John's first employment was in a saw-mill, but after several years, the family returned to Germany. However, two years later, they again left their native land, the father and four children returning to Rock Island, and upon his arrival in this city, John established himself in a carpet-weaving business, which he has continued ever since. His brother Andrew is in partnership with him, and the two do a large business, which extends throughout the county. The quality of the work, beauty of design, and general excellence keep custom once it is gained. Mr. Scheuermann has never married. He owns the home and business, and is in comfortable circumstances. His religious faith is that of the German Lutheran church, and he is a valued member of that denomination. Sturdy, hard-working, strictly honest, Mr. Scheuermann has justly won the success which is his and is numbered among the representative men of Rock Island county.

SCHILLING, Walter Irving, of the well-known firm of H. C. Schilling Co. of East Moline, is one of the representative young business men of this locality. He was born at Muscatine Ia., February 2, 1893, a son of Gustaf and Jennie (Van Gent) Schilling, and attended the public schools in both Muscatine and East Moline, and was always considered a very apt pupil. The family moved to the latter city when he was ten years old, and here he grew up, and his first business experience was as a clerk in the grocery and meat store of W. E. Wichelmann. Later with his brother, Henry Christ Schilling, he purchased the establishment, conducting it under the name of H. C. Schilling Co. This business is conveniently located on the corner of Ninth and Second avenue, and here a full line of groceries, fresh and salt meats, cigars, tobacco and hardware is carried. The young men are obliging and capable and have sufficient reserve capital to maintain desirable connections with large supply houses, and thus give their patrons the best quality at prices within the reach of the most careful buyer. These young men are products of East Moline, and the city has every reason to be proud of them.

SCHILLINGER, Martin (deceased).—German thrift and industry, when exerted amid the business surroundings of this country, generally result in a well-merited success that sometimes appears no less than marvelous. Our German-American citizens are among the best in the country, and one who is an excellent example of this honored class, was Martin Schillinger, manufacturer of boilers whose boiler shop was located at Ninth St. and Railroad Ave., Moline, and residence No. 432 Eighth St., Moline. He was born in Baden, Germany, June 3, 1834, a son of John Jacob and Eva Rosena (Keanly) Schillinger, both natives of Baden, Germany. The parents came to this country from Baden, arriving at New York city, July 26, 1846, from whence they went to Utica, N. Y., remaining there until November 1, 1853, when they came to Rock Island, arriving on the twenty-fifth of that same month. The father passed away in this city on July 3, 1893, aged ninety years, having been born November 25, 1803; while his wife died in March, 1895, aged eighty-eight years. Martin Schillinger had an uncle who served under the great Napoleon.

Martin Schillinger was a self-educated man, having received little or no schooling after coming to America. He worked on the Erie canal for about four years, and helped to build the railroad from Utica to Watertown, N. Y. Following this, he worked in a dairy. After coming to Rock Island, he went to work on the Rock Rock Island railroad construction, and after the completion of the road, he was employed, in April, 1854, in the freight house at Rock Island. From this position, he was promoted to be baggage master in the passenger station, where he remained until he went to New Orleans, in 1857, to engage in railroading with the New Orleans & Jackson Railroad, now the Illinois Central Railroad. In April, 1861, on account of the southern sentiment prevailing there, he returned to Bloomington, Ill., where he enlisted in Company I, Third Illinois Cavalry, on August 10. This company was composed in great part of Bloomington men, and this city was made headquarters of the company. Mr. Schillinger served with this regiment until it was mustered out September 4, 1864, as sergeant. He was in every engagement of the company, and had the record of never having been in the hospital, or absent from duty during his enlistment. The regiment was composed of twelve companies, from different parts of the state, containing 1,433 members. It was organized at Camp Butler, near Springfield, in August, 1861, by Eugene A. Carr, a graduate of West Point Military Academy. This regiment did its first duty in Missouri. The Third Battalion, of which Company I was part, was with General Siegel's Division. It was with Carr's Division when it had its fight near Springfield, Mo., with Price's army. Following this, it was with General Siegel in the battle of Pea Ridge, on June 7, 1862. The command was surrounded by the enemy, but cut itself out, losing eight men. The regiment participated in the Vicksburg campaign, and those of Arkansas Post, Haines' Bluff, in 1863; Tupelo, Oklahoma, Guntown, Salem and other engagements later on. This regiment was in active service, scouting and escort duty until leaving for home, August 21, 1864. The members from Rock Island county, arrived home at Rock Island in September. Mr. Schillinger then began learning the trade of boiler maker and in two years' time had mastered it and purchased the interests of his employers who were thereafter employed by him. He then came to Moline, which had been his home since 1867. In 1867 Mr. Schillinger, in partnership with Thomas Trumble, built a boiler factory in Moline, and the partnership continued until 1886 when Mr. Schillinger became sole proprietor and owned the building until his death.

He was very prominent as a republican, and was alderman from the Second Ward in 1879-80, and during 1885 and 1886, served the city as mayor. While loyal to his party in national matters, he was inclined to support the best man for the office in local events. Fraternally, he was an Odd Fellow and belonged to the A. O. U. W. He was the oldest living Odd Fellow in the point of continuous membership in the county, an affiliation of fifty-six years' standing.

On July 26, 1866, Mr. Schillinger was married in Rock Island to Caroline M. Watrous, born December 22, 1842, daughter of Jerome T. and Olivia Burke (Muse) Watrous, the former born in Columbus, Ohio, May 14, 1818, and died March 11, 1904; while the latter died in July, 1843. Jerome T. Watrous was a man of superior literary attainments and a civil engineer. He came to Hancock county, Ill., in 1842, and was joined by his wife and only daughter in January, 1843. Mrs. Watrous lived but a few months after coming to Illinois. After his second marriage, Mr. Watrous made his home in Henderson county during the balance of his life. His life work was farming, but in the early days he taught school and did surveying.

Mrs. Watrous was related to Edmund Burke, one of the British peers, and Mrs. Schillinger can trace her ancestry back to the Mayflower, and a number of her family took part in the Revolutionary war. Mr. and Mrs. Schillinger became the parents of the following children: Luella, born March 10, 1869; Albert Jerome, born February 21, 1871; Anetta Gault, born December 31, 1873; Josephine, born December 5, 1875; Anna, born October 31, 1877; and Mary Rebecca, born January 27, 1879. During his long residence in Moline, Mr. Schillinger proved himself as loyal to what he believed to be his duty, as when he marched in defense of the Union, and was numbered among the city's most desirable citizens.

SCHLEMMER, Peter (deceased), spent a large part of his life in Rock Island, Ill., where he was well known as an upright and useful citizen. He was a native of Baden, Germany, born May 2, 1842, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Schlemmer, also natives of that country. His parents came to America about 1850, landing in New Orleans. Six weeks after landing the father died and was buried in that city. The mother and children came direct to Rock Island. There were five sons and four daughters in the family: Jacob, John, Peter, Philip, Charles, Elizabeth, Catherine, Margaret and Dorothy, all of whom are deceased.

Peter Schlemmer was about nine years of age when his parents came to America, and received most of his education in the public schools in Rock Island. After leaving school he learned the trade of painter and for fifteen years worked as foreman of the painting department of Buford & Company, of Rock Island. He engaged in the grocery business for himself for a period of five or six years, and about 1899 retired from active life. He stood high in business circles and was well regarded by all who knew him. He was a democrat in political affiliations and served one term as alderman from the Third Ward, where he lived, and was elected three terms on the democratic ticket as a member of the board of review. He was also well known in fraternal circles as a member of the Odd Fellows and Masons of Rock Island. He was a member of the German Lutheran church and interested in various movements for the welfare of his city and county.

Mr. Schlemmer's marriage occurred in Rock Island, February 21, 1864, when he was united with Jane Hardin, who was born in Nauvoo, Ill., daughter of John and Mary (Hill) Hardin, natives of England, the mother born in 1810. The father died in Rock Island, when Mrs. Schlemmer was a child. The parents were married in England and came to America in 1843, landing at New Orleans, whence they came direct to Nauvoo and later to Rock Island. They had seven children, namely: James, John, Charles, Henry, Mary, Harriet and Mrs. Schlemmer, of whom the last named is now the only survivor.

Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Schlemmer: Clara, wife of Peter Schleuter, a butcher and meat buyer, of Rock Island; John, a printer in the M. W. A. office in Rock Island; and Charles, who lives at home. There are two grandchildren in the family, Arthur Schleuter, born November 18, 1889, and Myra Schlemmer, born February 4, 1894. Mr. Schlemmer died February 18, 1910. His widow has a nice home at No. 1419 Seventh avenue and owns adjoining property.

SCHLUETER, Frederick R., who is proprietor of the largest wholesale and retail market in East Moline, is a man who has developed himself into a substantial business factor and is a credit to the community in which he resides. Mr. Schluter was born in Moline in 1886, and came to East Moline in 1903. He sells meat at wholesale throughout Rock Island, in addition to his large retail trade. His father, Ferdinand Schluter, is a native of Germany, who came to the United States when a boy, locating in Davenport, Ia., at first, but later came here and it was he who opened the first meat market in East Moline, which he sold to his son in 1912. He now resides in Hampton. He married Caroline Rossmussen, and they have seven children: Catherine, Emma, Caroline, Charlotte, Chrystal, Marie and Frederick. The elder Mr. Schluter has been prominent in civic matters, having served as alderman for three terms in the city council of East Moline, and also as street commissioner of this city.

Frederick R. Schluter was educated in Moline. He was in the butchering business at Hampton, to which his father had moved when he was small, but came to East Moline in 1903. For two and one-half years he served on the police force of East Moline, and was an efficient officer. Politically he is a republican and is now an alderman. The Modern Woodmen of America and Odd Fellows hold his membership, and he is well liked in these orders, as well as generally, for he is recognized as being one of the representative young business men of East Moline, and deeply interested in its growth and progress.

SCHMALE, Frederick (deceased).—In writing a record of this nature it is necessary not only to include the living who have attained to a distinction which places them above their surroundings, but also those who have passed away, for while they are no longer among those whom they love and labored for, the influence of their blameless lives and worthy deeds still exists. One of the men most deserving of special mention herein, is the late Frederick Schmale, formerly of No. 321 Fifteenth street, Rock Island, who not only was a good business man, and faithful worker in his special line, but a loyal citizen and devoted family man. He was born in Hanover, Germany, September 3, 1832, being a son of Frederick and Charlotte Schmale, natives of Hanover, Germany. The father was a shoemaker, who lived and died in Germany. After his demise, the widow and her family came to America, and she passed away at Leavenworth, Kan.

Frederick Schmale, the younger, was educated in Germany, and taught his father's trade. He reached New York in 1852, but after a short stay, came to Rock Island, where he first worked at his trade and in time was able to establish himself in a shoe business, which he carried on for twenty-seven years, when he retired, having accumulated considerable property. His death occurred October 4, 1905. During his business career in Rock Island he made his name synonymous with honesty of purpose and fairness of dealing.

On August 24, 1857, Mr. Schmale was united in marriage in Davenport, Iowa, with Anna Cismmer, born July 2, 1829, in Germany, where both her parents died. Mrs. Schmale came to America with a sister, Mrs. Sophia Patus. There is a brother, John, who resides in Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Schmale became the parents of nine children, four of whom survive: Anna, wife of Herman Spitznas, of South Rock Island; Sophia, wife of William Trefz, proprietor of a dray line; Henry, of St. Louis, proprietor of a barber shop; and Margaret, wife of Guy Settle, of Rock Island. Mrs. Schmale owns her home and several other desirable properties, being in comfortable circumstances. She is a member of the German Lutheran church as are her children, and Mr. Schmale was also a consistent member during his life. He was one of the first members of that denomination in the county, and did much to further the interests of the church in every way. In political faith, he was a democrat, but his inclinations did not point in the direction of public life, for he was strictly a home man. His pride lay in his family and business and church, and he had no time for politics. When he died Rock Island lost a substantial citizen, his family a beloved husband and father, and his church its most valued member.

SCHMID August F.—One of the substantial residents of Rock Island county, who, after some changes, decided that the city was the most desirable and who since then has been living here engaged in promoting its best interests, is August F. Schmid, born in this city November 30, 1863, a son of August C. and Caroline (Rendt) Schmid, natives of Germany. When he was only seven years old, August F. Schmid began to earn his own living, and has continued to support himself ever since, so he is essentially a self-made man. He learned the barber trade, working with Charles Emigh in the Rock Island National Bank building. Later he was with M. G. Mills, a prominent drygoods merchant here. He attended school up to the seventh grade and then went with L. S. McCabe & Co. with whom he remained several years. He worked at carpentering for some years, assisting his father, and in 1891 he went to Davenport, Iowa, where he remained three years, but once more returning to Rock Island, has continued to live here ever since. Seventeen years ago he bought three lots at his present address, 2001 Seventeenth street, where he has a beautiful home. Mr. Schmid is engaged in a real estate and insurance business in connection with the firm of H. H. Cleveland of Rock Island.

Mr. Schmid was married to Miss Laura Otto, daughter of John August and Katherine Otto, natives of Holstein, Germany, where the father was born in 1826, and the mother in 1834. They were married in 1865, in Davenport, Iowa. Mrs. Schmid is the only living child of her parents, and was born August 6, 1872. Her father was a fresco painter and decorator, working at his trade until his death in 1884. His widow survived him until September 8, 1910. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Schmid are: Laura Louisa, born in 1892; and Ida Philippine, born in 1894. Miss Laura is bookkeeper and stenographer at the M. & K. Clothing Company store of Rock Island, while Miss Ida is a milliner at Dawson's Millinery store in Rock Island. Mr. Schmid has been a Mason since 1888, being a member of Trio Lodge, No. 57, A. F. & A. M. He has served as constable and township assessor for fifteen years, and has recently (1913) been elected for another term of two years. His many re-elections are the best evidence of his strict integrity in the performance of his official duties. There is a curious coincidence in the Schmid family. Mr. Schmid, his father, and Mrs. Schmid's father were all named after the eighth month of the year. Mrs. Schmid was born in August, and she and Mr. Schmidt were married in that month, so they naturally consider it the lucky month of the family.

SCHMIDT, Adam.—One of the heaviest land-owners of Rock Island county, Adam Schmidt, is a native of Germany, but has become thoroughly identified with his adopted country, and is one of its best citizens. He was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, December 4, 1840, being a son of Peter and Elizabeth (Spilgar) Schmidt. Prior to the Civil war in the United States, Germany sent here a large influx of desirable citizens. This last named land was not then as prosperous as it has since become, and many of its residents sought a newer one in which to bring up children, unrestricted by conditions the parents felt to be prohibitory. For these and many other reasons, Germans came here in large numbers, and perhaps it is as well that they did, for without their sympathy and material support, the outcome of the mighty civil struggle might have been different. As it was, they not only were good soldiers, but excellent farmers and working men along other lines, and aided in developing many industrial as well as agricultural regions. Rock Island county owes much to them, and among the other pioneers of German birth who came here in the fifties, was Peter Schmidt, who brought his family via New York, in 1856, and settled in Buffalo Prairie township. He was very poor, so had to rent land at first, but they were saving, and soon he was able to make a payment on 120 acres of land, to which forty acres more were added, and all were paid for before he died. He and his wife were members of the German Lutheran church, and he was a republican. The children born to these parents were: George, of Nichols, Ia., Catherine, Mrs. Peter Schmidt, deceased; Adam, deceased; Adam (2); Peter, of Iowa, and Michael, of Buffalo Prairie, Ill.

Adam Schmidt went to school until he was fourteen years old in his native land, but during the two years that followed before the family emigration, he was forced to work to help along, as they were very poor. After coming here he began working driving oxen in hauling timber, for which he was first paid $5 per month. From time to time he was raised in pay, and when he left his employers after five or six years, he was receiving $18 per month. He had also worked some in Iowa, and out of his small wages, he managed to save. When he married, he went on his father-in-law's farm, remaining there for some years, then left to operate a hotel in Andalusia, where he was for about eight years. Returning to the home farm, he bought it, and lived on it until six years ago, when he bought his present farm. He owned 700 acres, the greater part being in Buffalo Prairie township, until recent years, when he sold all but 400 acres. He also had 211 acres in Muscatine county, Ia., which he has lately disposed of. All he has, Mr. Schmidt has gained himself, for he has known how to save, and then profitably to invest his earnings.

In 1867 Mr. Schmidt was married to Miss Margaret Bauer, the Rev. Obermann of Muscatine, Ia., officiating. She died September 9, 1909, having been a devoted wife and mother, and a lady of Christian character, who was beloved by her own family and all who knew her. She is buried in the Lutheran cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt had children as follows: George, Louis, Lizzie, William, John and Emma, living, also three deceased, Margaret, Mary and Peter. Mr. Schmidt is a devout Lutheran, and gives liberally to the support of his church, not only of his money, but his influence and time as well. Politically, he is a republican. During the years he has lived here, Mr. Schmidt has proven himself a good citizen, excellent farmer, and fine business man, from whose example others may well take a lesson in what a man can accomplish if he is willing to work, and save carefully what he earns.

SCHMIDT, Fred W.—Having devoted the greater portion of his life to the cultivation of the soil, Fred W. Schmidt is justly considered one of the most experienced farmers of Rock Island county, and his well-kept farm shows the effect of his care. He was born in Germany, June 21, 1841, being a son of Samuel and Ranetta (Seibert) Schmidt, the former of whom lived to be seventy-five years old, but the latter died in 1874. They were the parents of eight children, three of whom survive: Julia and Christine, who reside in Germany, and Fred W. Three daughters and two sons are deceased.

Fred W. Schmidt came to America in May, 1872, landing in New York city, from whence he came direct to Davenport, Iowa, and for a year he was in the employ of Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann and then moved to Milan, Ill., where for three years he was employed in the distillery. He bought his present place ten years ago, it comprising twenty-eight acres in the village of Edgington. Mr. Schmidt remembers two summers of hard work on a farm in Iowa when there were no binders or other modern machinery made use of.

Mr. Schmidt was married March 16, 1874, to Matilda Johnson, in the old Court House of Rock Island, Judge Adams performing the ceremony. She is a daughter of Jacob and Anna Elizabeth (Gustafson) Johnson, both of whom were born in Sweden. Mrs. Schmidt was born in Sweden, July 18, 1842, and came to the United States in 1872. A brother had come here in 1870, and he now resides in the State of Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt are consistent members of the German Lutheran church of Buffalo Prairie township. In politics, Mr. Schmidt is independent, and he has never desired public office, preferring to devote his attention to his work. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp 404, of which he has been a member for the past twenty-two years. Prior to coming to America, Mr. Schmidt participated in the Franco-Prussian War, having served in the army from 1861 to 1871. He is one of the best citizens of the county, and is a valued addition to his neighborhood, where he is honored and respected.

SCHMIDT, Frederick Diedrich. Although his spheres of influence have not extended beyond the circle of his acquaintances, yet few men have warmer personal friends than Frederick D. Schmidt of Rock Island, now living practically retired at 1606 Second avenue, after years of useful endeavor. Ingrained in his nature have been German habits of industry and thrift, super-imposed upon American principles of fair play and love of justice, and with his well-earned prosperity, has come the keen appreciation of all with whom he has been associated. Mr. Schmidt was born in Hoya, Germany, in 1856, a son of Frederick and Dorothea (Bruns) Schmidt. The parents were both born in the same place as their son, and there the father was a commission merchant. While still conducting a large business, the father died, in 1886, his widow surviving him until 1890, both passing away in their native land, having never visited this country. Their five children were: Dora, married, who lives in Germany; Lizzie, who is also in Germany; Frederick D.; Henry Frederick, who is of Germany; and Mary, who is also of Germany.

Frederick D. Schmidt came to the United States in 1872, locating at St. Louis, which remained his home until 1900, when he brought his family to Rock Island, and for five years he was shipping clerk for the Rock Island Company. In that year, he bought the Turner Hall, and is financial secretary of the Turners' Verein Kranken Verien and the soloist. In 1880, Mr. Schmidt married Matilda Hohman, a native of St. Louis, where she was born in 1860. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt became the parents of five children: Fred; Bertha, who is the wife of Charles Reynolds of St. Louis; Florence, who is the wife of Nat Andrews; Matilda, who is the wife of Hugo Ginapp of Chicago; and Albert, who is a hotel man of Rock Island. While residing at St. Louis, Mr. Schmidt was in an oil business, and was very successful in that line. He is a Lutheran in religious faith, and politically, a republican. Genial and accommodating, talented in a musical way, Mr. Schmidt is a leader among the Germans of Rock Island county, and is one of the most popular men here.

SCHMIDT, George.—Rock Island county is fortunate enough to have some farmers who have been born within its confines, and spent useful lives here, because such have their interest firmly centered upon local matters, and devote their energies towards the advancement of their home sections. Such a man is George Schmidt, born in Buffalo Prairie township, August 6, 1869, a son of Adam and Barbara (Bower) Schmidt, natives of Germany and Buffalo Prairie township, respectively. The father came to the United States when sixteen years old, landing at New York city, from whence he came to Buffalo Prairie township. Later he went to Andalusia, where from 1870 to 1878 he operated a hotel. After marrying, he bought 100 acres in Buffalo Prairie township, adding to it until he now owns 800 acres. He is the most prosperous of his brothers and sisters who were as follows: Katherine, deceased; George of Iowa; Adam, deceased; Peter, a farmer of Iowa; Michael, of Rock Island county, and Adam (2) of Rock Island county. The latter is a member of the Lutheran church, and a republican. His wife died September 9, 1909, she having been an invalid for twenty-one years. Adam Schmidt and wife had children as follows: George; Louis, of Iowa; Elizabeth, wife of Hans Patchard, farmer of Rock Island county; William, a farmer of Iowa; John, on the home place; and Emma, Mrs. Gustave Belm. This good old German began the struggle of life as a poor boy, but worked himself up until he not only is a wealthy man, but also has held the office of school director for many years. George Schmidt attended the public schools of his native place until fourteen years old, and then began working for his father. He eventually bought land, now owning a fine farm of 206 acres, formerly known as the "Fred Pitterington Farm," and now as the "Maple Dean Farm," located one-half mile west of Edgington.

George Schmidt was married on December 8, 1897, to Emma Frenzel, a daughter of J. C. and Anna (Hucke) Frenzel, natives of Germany who came to this country at an early day, settling on a farm in Iowa. Mrs. Schmidt died in 1905, having had three children: Mabel, Henschel and Miona. On January 25, 1910, Mr. Schmidt was married (second) to Mrs. Pauline Umlandt, daughter of Ludwig and Amelia (Schultz) Gust. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt have one child, born September 23, 1911. Mrs. Schmidt had two children by her first marriage: Bertha A. and Walter A. The family belong to the German Lutheran church, and have been actively identified with it for years. Mr. Schmidt is a splendid example of the progressive farmer of today, and his bountiful crops show that he understands his business thoroughly.

SCHMIDT, Henry, proprietor of one of the best brass foundries in the county, is one of the far-sighted, substantial men of Moline, and his attachment to this city, and his desire to promote its interests, have resulted in the development of an excellent citizen, and the building up of a flourishing business. He is most conveniently located at No. 428 Third avenue. His brick foundry and the adjacent machine shop were built by him. The foundry is 50x92 feet, and the machine shop is 26x52 feet, and two stories in height. The latter was built in 1898, and the former in 1907. In these two buildings, Mr. Schmidt carries on a large business, doing brass, aluminum and manganese bronze work, and sustains his reputation of doing the finest quality of work in the city.

Henry Schmidt was born in Missouri, a son of Peter and Amanda F. (Zimmerman) Schmidt, natives of Germany. The parents located at Moline, the former in 1854 and the latter in 1856, and were married there, later moving to Missouri, but in 1865 returned to Moline, which continued to be their home during the balance of their lives. The father died in 1878 and the mother in 1905. Henry Schmidt's maternal grandfather, August Zimmerman, came to Rock Island from Chicago with an ox team, but some years later returned to Chicago, which continued to be his home until in old age he once more came to Rock Island county, where his death occurred.

Henry Schmidt grew to manhood at Moline, attending the public schools, and learning the moulder's trade, in the Malleable Works. For sixteen years he followed his trade before going into business for himself. At one time, he was in partnership with J. F. Hall in a furnace business, under the name of the Moline Furnace Company, and continued this connection for four years.

In 1890, Henry Schmidt was married to Ann C. Schaab, daughter of George A. and Marie C. Schaab. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt have children as follows: George Henry, who died at the age of seventeen days; Clara Mary Amanda, who died when five and one-half years old, and is buried in the Moline cemetery; and George Henry Willam, who was born June 4, 1906. For some years, Mr. Schmidt was a member of the Knights of Labor, and held all the offices in the Moulders' Union. At present he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, the Macabees and Knights of Pythias, and has held some of the offices in the first named order. His life has been a very busy one, so that he has had but little time for public matters, but he has always striven to do his full civic duty as he saw it, and is one of the men upon whom dependence can be placed under almost any conditions.

SCHMIDT, John (deceased), who for a number of years was a prosperous business man of Moline, was taken away in the very prime of life, and left behind him a host of friends to mourn his loss. Mr. Schmidt was born at Alton, Ill., March 13, 1861, and died June 7, 1893. He was a son of Peter and Amanda (Zimmerman) Schmidt, natives of Germany, who came to America at an early day. The father died at Moline, in 1880, but the mother survived until 1903, when she too passed away at the Schmidt homestead in Moline.

By trade, John Schmidt was a moulder, and worked at his calling for some years, then, in 1891, went into business for himself, and continued to be thus engaged until his demise. While he had made his own way in life, Mr. Schmidt had made good use of his public school education, and was a well informed man. On May 21, 1885, Mr. Schmidt was married to Maria Magdalena Weitnauer, born in Bavaria, Germany, November 23, 1863, a daughter of Conrad and Katherine (Raible) Weitnauer, who came to America in 1871, landing at New York City, from whence they came to Rock Island. The father was a butcher and also, during 1872, conducted a bus line, and finding it profitable, so continued until his death, May 3, 1910. His wife passed away September 29, 1900. Their children were: Mrs. Schmidt; Sophie, wife of Olof Olson of Rock Island; Mary, wife of Miles McKinney of Rock Island; and Katherine, wife of Adolphus Kause of Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt had one son—Robert H., born March 20, 1886, now employed by the Standard Oil Cloth Company of Rock Island as chief clerk, which position he has held for four years. Prior to that, he was with the Rock Island Sash and Door Works as traveling salesman for six years, and prior to that was bill clerk in the office of that company. However, he began earning his own living when fifteen years old, when he engaged with the Deering Manufacturing Company of Moline. As he earned the money, he continued his studies, and was graduated from the business college of this city, June 27, 1901. There are few finer young men in the city than he, and his beloved mother is his first thought and care. Mrs. Schmidt was reared in the faith of the Roman Catholic church. Although Mr. Schmidt was a democrat, his son is a republican. Mrs. Schmidt has built several houses at Rock Island, and owns her home at No. 1920, Eleventh street, South Rock Island. She is a most estimable lady, who has always been devoted to her home and family, and her neighbors find her charitable and sympathetically kind whenever they are in need of her friendly services.

SCHMIDT, Louis A. (deceased), whose business interests connected him with Rock Island continuously from 1893 until his death, April 27, 1912, as proprietor of the Seventh Avenue Pharmacy, a drug house which commands the confidence of the citizens of Rock Island. He was born in Sachsenberg, Waldeck, Germany, February 27, 1845, and was a son of Adolph and Henrietta (Brunkenshitz) Schmidt. The father of Mr. Schmidt was a furrier by trade and died in Germany in the same year that his youngest son was born, leaving one other son, Gustave. In 1850 the mother came to America with her two sons, the older son subsequently becoming a resident of Chicago, where he died in 1875. Mrs. Schmidt contracted a second marriage, with a Mr. Huhm, and they settled at St. Louis, Mo., where he died in 1874.

Louis A. Schmidt was five years old when his mother took passage on the small sailing vessel, the Leonidas, bound for New Orleans, La., which port was safely reached after a stormy voyage of nine weeks. The passengers suffered greatly from hunger and thirst and their lives were endangered during the greater part of the voyage from terrific storms. Mr. Schmidt was reared at St. Louis and there attended both private and public schools. In 1858 he was apprenticed to the drug business with F. W. Sennewalt, a prominent druggist at that time at St. Louis, and for three years was a drug clerk. In 1861 he enlisted in Company G, Second Missouri Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel Shaffer, and was honorably discharged at Benton Barracks, Mo., after a faithful service of two and one-half years, having participated in the battles of Pea Ridge, Springfield, Corinth and Resaca. At the later place he was appointed to duty in the division hospital, with the rank of orderly sergeant.

After his discharge from military service, Mr. Schmidt returned to St. Louis and then went to Chicago, Ill., where he was employed in a wholesale drug house until 1865, when he came first to Rock Island and became a drug clerk for the firm of Gleim & Huckley. In 1866 he embarked in the drug business in Rock Island, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, in partnership with Otto Grotjan, which association continued until 1868, when Mr. Schmidt removed to Coal Valley, where he opened a drug store and remained for two and one-half years and then went into a wholesale drug store at St. Louis, in 1878 coming back to Rock Island. He was connected with a wholesale drug house here for the next eight years, when he went to Lincoln, Neb., where he was in business until 1893, when he again returned to Rock Island and after that time was proprietor of the drug store above mentioned and numbered among the most reliable pharmacists and chemists in the city.

Mr. Schmidt was married first, in 1865, in Rock Island, to Miss Marie Wichman, who was a sister of the late Dr. Wichman, of St. Louis. Three children were born to this marriage, namely: Gustav, who died at San Francisco, Cal., when aged thirty-eight years; Ida, who is Mrs. Al Brockmann, of Oil City, Ill.; and Marie, who died at the age of twenty-eight years. His second marriage took place at Rock Island in 1878, to Mrs. Catherine Smith, who died August 4, 1911. By this marriage there were two sons, Louis and Edward, both of whom died in infancy. Besides his daughter, Mrs. Brockmann, Mr. Schmidt is survived by the following step-children by his second marriage: Mrs. Emma Myers of Moline, Mrs. Lillie Bauer, Mrs. Ida Evers and Mrs. Clara Garrison of Rock Island, Mrs. Mary Miller of Sionx City, Ia., and Henry N. and Charles J. Smith of Rock Island. After the death of Mrs. Schmidt, Mr. Schmidt made his home with his step-daughter, Mrs. Clara Garrison. His death was the result of an injury sustained from a fall in his store. In his political views Mr. Schmidt was independent. He was reared in the Lutheran church, Mr. Schmidt was a member of the G. A. R., John Buford Post, and the Rock Island County Druggists' Association. He was the first president of the latter organization and later served as its secretary.

SCHMIDT, Michael.—The time has come when the industry of farming is acknowledged so important that it looms up large among the other very necessary callings of the world. Because of this, the agriculturist has come into his own, and is a recognized power among the other captains of industry. One who has achieved praiseworthy prominence along this line is Michael Schmidt, owner of 275 acres of land on section 15, Buffalo Prairie township. He was born in Germany, May 17, 1850, being a son of Peter and Elizabeth (Spitgar) Schmidt, a sketch of whom is given elsewhere in this work. Michael Schmidt was six years old, when brought to this country by his parents, who landed in New York City, and after a short stay in Buffalo, N. Y., they came to Buffalo Prairie township, this county.

Until he was fifteen years old, Michael Schmidt attended school, but then left to devote all his time to farming, working for his father until he was twenty-four years old. At this time he purchased his present farm, and since then has gone on improving it, there having been no buildings upon it when he took charge. He has good buildings and fences, and takes a pride in the appearance of his premises. The land is devoted to general farming and stock raising, and the soil has been developed into splendid fertility.

Mr. Schmidt was married on January 28, 1876, by Rev. Carl Overmann of Muscatine, to Barbara Lentz, daughter of Nicholas Lentz of Nichols, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt have the following children: Nicholas, married Flaverne Wagener and lives in Iowa; George, married Katy Sullivan and lives in Buffalo Prairie township; Margaret, Mrs. Tony Richter of Buffalo Prairie township; Daniel, married Emma McCullough; Louis and Edward, at home; five are deceased—Lizzie and Henry and three in infancy. The family belong to the German Lutheran church. Mr. Schmidt has lived in this township nearly all his life, and upon his present farm about forty-seven years, so that he is one of the solid residents of the community. His interest in the development here has been marked by public-spirited endeavor, and he is justly numbered among the representative men of the county.

SCHMIDT, Oscar W., senior member of the firm of Schmidt & Robinson, proprietors of the sheet metal works at No. 318 Twenty-first street, Rock Island, was born in Oshkosh, Wis., in 1876, a son of Charlie and Fredrika (Schumann) Schmidt. The father and mother were natives of Germany who came to this country in childhood, and were married in Wisconsin. They survive and are living in Oshkosh, Mr. Schmidt having retired. They had ten children: Ida who died in infancy; Emma; Albert, who is deceased; Willie, who is deceased; Otto; Josie, who is the wife of Frank Brasch of Rock Island; Mary, who is deceased; Oscar W.; Eddie, and Richard, who died at the age of two years.

Oscar W. Schmidt was reared in Wisconsin, where he attended the public schools. After completing his education, he entered the sash and door works in his native place, and he also learned the sheet metal trade. In 1898, he came to Rock Island, where he put some of the experience he had acquired to practical use, working in the sash and door factory here, remaining with this concern until he started in business for himself in 1911. The firm manufactures all kinds of sheet iron metal and installing contrivances, specializing on shaving and dust-collecting systems, high grade warm air heating systems and general tin work. Although a new firm, the partners, Mr. Schmidt and his associate Roy C. Robinson, have proven their ability, and are enjoying an excellent trade.

In 1900 Mr. Schmidt married Minnie Albrect of Iowa. They have three children: Leonard, Erma and Myrtle. The Lutheran church holds his membership, and he gives it a liberal support. Fraternally, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Politically, his connections are with the Democratic party. Mr. Schmidt has worked hard, and forged ahead, so deserves the success which has accompanied his efforts. He is one of the earnest, substantial men of the county.

SCHMITT, Valentine (deceased).—With the growing demands of any community come new opportunities for commercial endeavor, and those quick enough to take advantage of this, reap accordingly. One of the enterprising men of Rock Island was Valentine Schmitt, who conducted a news stand, and sold cigars, office supplies and periodicals of all kinds, in the Safety building. He was born on a farm in Missouri, September 19, 1844, a son of Joseph and Beatrice Schmitt. From Missouri, the family moved to Scott county, Ia., where the parents died. The father spent his life in agricultural pursuits. The paternal ancestors were from Alsace-Lorraine, France. There were five children in the family of Joseph Schmitt. Valentine Schmitt was nine years old when taken to Scott county, Ia., where he grew to manhood, securing his education in the public schools of his neighborhood. When he was sixteen years old, he began learning the baker's trade, and when he enlisted as a private in Company H, One Hundred and Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, his knowledge of this work was found valuable, and during his five months' service he was kept busy baking bread for the prisoners on the Island. After the war, he followed his trade in various parts of the country, and had his own bakery in several places, the last being Geneseo, Ill. He then retired, but being too active a man to be content, he started in business about 1908, locating in the Safety building, and developing it to large proportions.

In 1864, Mr. Schmitt was married at Davenport, Ia., to Miss Augusta Littig, a daughter of the late Peter Littig, who came to Rock Island in 1837. Their children were: Rosa C., Theresa A., Henry A., Ernest C., Mary D., P. Conward and Raymond. Mr. Schmitt belonged to Buford Post, G. A. R. His religious affiliation was with Sacred Heart Roman Catholic church. He was one of the reliable men of Rock Island, and stood high in the estimation of all who knew him. His death occurred August 16, 1912.

SCHNEIDER, Godfrey.—Prominent among the successful agriculturalists of Rock Island county, Ill., may be mentioned Godfrey Schneider, the owner of a 238-acre tract situated in Edgington township, a part of the old homestead of Scott Taylor. He was born in the Canton of Bern, Switzerland, in February, 1853, and is a son of John and Christiana (Stucky) Schneider, natives of that place. They were farming people in their native country, and on coming to the United States in 1870 made their way from New York to Rock Island county, where John Schneider purchased fifteen acres of land in Andalusia township. Later he removed to a tract of 107 acres, just south of Andalusia, and there he spent the remainder of his life, dying in 1884, at the age of seventy-four years, his wife having passed away on the first farm in 1872, when forty-five years of age. They had the following children: Annie, who married Gustave Hindermeister, residing in Andalusia, Ill.; Godfrey; Louisa, who died in 1877; Adolph, of Davenport, Ia., who married Jennie Kruey; Charles, who resides in Washington, Ia.; and Carrie, who married August Hartman, of Edgington township.

Godfrey Schneider was educated in the schools of Switzerland, where his instruction included the reading and writing of Swiss, German and French, and he was seventeen years of age when he came to America. He first worked among the farmers of Rock Island county, and also spent some time in Iowa, but returned to this county and for seven years was employed by Joseph Scott Taylor. In 1877 he was married to Miss Eliza Carruthers, daughter of Sammel and Elzira (Mounds) Carruthers, and after marriage he rented land for twenty years, then purchasing eighty acres of his present property. At the time that he settled here, Mr. Schneider had only a team of horses, but year by year he has added to his stock and equipments and has purchased more land, and he now has one of the finest properties in this township. Mrs. Schneider is a member of the Presbyterian church, and her husband is affiliated fraternally with the Woodmen. They have two children: Clyde, operating the home farm, who married Rosa Brusard and has one child, Marcus; and Cora, who married Robert Brookman, of Center Point, Ia., and has a daughter, Doris.

SCHNEIDER, John (deceased).—It is a very generally acknowledged fact that among the best citizens of foreign birth that we have, are to be found Germans. Bringing with them from the old country, thrifty habits and strong physical bodies, which appear almost untiring, very few become a dead weight on the hands of the public. They have an old saying which is trite but true: "Work fills the stomach and drives the devil away." Following this precept they are nearly always able to make a living, and often amass considerable property where those of other nationalities might not be able to keep clear of debt. An excellent example of the prosperous German-American agriculturist was the late John Schneider, in whose death, which occurred March 1, 1903, Hampton township lost one of its sterling citizens and efficient farmers. Born June 24, 1824, in Prussia, Germany, he was married there to Elizabeth Gumber, and in 1866 came to Zuma township, Rock Island county, where he first purchased an unimproved stump farm of forty-four acres, to which he later added six acres and built a good residence. He then added seventy acres, sixty acres of which were in Hampton township, cleared and improved the whole place, and here was engaged in farming and stockraising until his death. His children were as follows: Frances, Marie and Nicholas, who are deceased; Benjamin A. of East Moline; John, of Watertown; Abeline, the wife of Charles King, of South Moline; Elizabeth, who married John Coleman of Stillwater, Okla.; Nicholas, of East Moline; and Mary, who was married November 29, 1906, to Matthew P. Buckley. Mr. Buckley was born in Canoe Creek township, December 19, 1878, and is a son of P. H. and Mary A. (Murry) Buckley, the former of County Cork, Ireland, and the latter of Brazer Falls, N. Y. They had fifteen children, of whom two are deceased: Cornelius and Ellen E. Those living are: Matthew, John H., William A., Cornelius J. (2), Thomas A., Eugene E., Leo, Harry D., Mary C., Raymond A., Ralph S., Catherine R., and Alice M. Mr. Buckley's grandparents, Cornelius and Ellen (Sullivan) Buckley, came to the United States in 1849, when P. H. Buckley was about six years old, settling in Zuma township. The grandfather lived to the age of ninety-one and the grandmother to the age of eighty-eight. The maternal grandparents, Patrick and Catherine (Killman) Murry, came here about 1866 and settled in the same township, but a few years later went to Port Byron, where Mr. Murry met his death in 1867. The parents of Mr. Buckley lived in Canoe Creek township until 1893, when they moved to Coe township, where Mr. Buckley died on March 27, 1910, while his widow still resides on the farm. Matthew P. Buckley attended the district schools, after leaving which he went to a commercial school for six months. He rented land in Whiteside county for one year, but since his marriage he has been operating his mother-in-law's farm, where he carries on general farming and raises cattle, horses and hogs. He and his wife have had three children: Marie Elizabeth, born January 14, 1908; Francis Joseph September 6, 1909; Matthew J., born June 18, 1912. Mrs. Buckley, who attended the public schools and the German Catholic school at Rock Island, belongs to the Catholic church at Rapids City, as do the entire family.

SCHNEIDER, John (deceased).—It has often been said that a man is what his mother and wife make him, and this has been proven true in countless cases. The influence of good women upon the lives of men associated with them is powerful, and few men attain to any prominence unless aided by a wife or mother. A man who gladly attributed his well-deserved reputation as a merchant tailor to the influence of his women folks was the late John Schneider, a pioneer in this line in the state. He was in business for many years at Sterling, Whiteside county, Ill., but was born in Germany, and came to the United States at the age of twenty-eight years, having learned his trade in the old country. After landing in New York, he came direct to Sterling and engaged in business. His death occurred in that city four years ago. He was a Catholic.

After coming to Sterling, Mr. Schneider was married to Sarah Myers, and they had one child, John. The latter is a blacksmith of Silvis, although residing at No. 1820 Fourth avenue, Rock Island. He married Rose Seider. After the death of Mr. Schneider, Mrs. Schneider came to Rock Island to reside with her son. She owns two valuable properties at Sterling. Mrs. Schneider was born in Maryland and is the one surviving member of the family of nine children born to Luther and Sarah Myers. Luther Myers settled in York county, Pa., when twenty-five years old. Mrs. Schneider, mother of John Schneider, went to Lancaster county, Pa., where she lived with a sister until going to Sterling, Ill. She was a kind and generous lady whose delight was to do good to others and was greatly beloved by all who knew her, her lovely Christian character having been something everyone might profitably seek to imitate. This good lady passed to the beyond November 16, 1912, mourned by family and friends.

SCHNITZER, John (deceased), who spent the last twenty-five years of his life working at the carpenter trade at Rock Island, was a representative citizen and highly esteemed as a man of upright character and reliability. He was born in Hesse Cassel, Germany, May 14, 1834, a son of Ballthasser and Elizabeth Schnitzer, both of whom died in Germany. John Schnitzer attended school for a time in his native country, and as his father was a farmer his early years were spent on a farm. His mother dying when he was nine years old, he was sent to an uncle in New York city, and here he later learned the trade of a carpenter and worked on a church in Albany, N. Y., also helped construct other buildings in that vicinity. He became an expert carpenter and was an adept at any kind of woodworking. For some years John Schnitzer lived at Augusta, Ga., and while there was associated with Gen. Flagler, and he also worked for the Government in the Carolinas during the Civil war, not as an enlisted soldier, but as a carpenter.

John Schnitzer was married at Augusta, Ga., June 19, 1871, to Miss Augusta Caroline Dressel, a native of Germany. After his marriage he came to Rock Island, making the trip from Memphis by water. For about twenty-five years after his arrival he worked as a carpenter at the arsenal and during that period erected a comfortable home at No. 2814 Seventh avenue, where the family lived many years, but after his death his widow built a double house in that city. John Schnitzer was actively interested in any movement for the progress and welfare of his community and was recognized as a man of strict honesty and integrity. In politics he was a democrat. While not a member of any church, he was interested in the success of religious organizations. Fraternally, he was affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. John Schnitzer died July 11, 1897, and his loss was deeply deplored in many circles. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Schnitzer: Frederick C., of Rock Island, married Emma Schroeder and they have two children,—Margaret Marie and Frederick J.; William Henry, of Rock Island, married Mary Elizabeth Plunket and they have two children,—Katherine C. and Robert W.; and John W., is unmarried, and lives with his mother. Mrs. John Schnitzer was born in Saxony, Germany, September 2, 1844, and was baptized on the 7th of that month. She is a daughter of Christian Frederick and Johanna Sophia (Johnin) Dressel, the latter dying in Germany. Christian F. Dressel came to America when Mrs. Schnitzer was about nine or ten years of age and located at Augusta, Ga. He sailed a ship under Captain Whitney. Mrs. Schnitzer remembers when soldiers marched through her native village, and she distinctly remembers the day her father first took her to school in Germany. She was one of five children and is the only one surviving. Since the death of her husband she has joined Broadway Presbyterian church and is much interested in its good work.

SCHOCKER, Henry A., junior member of the Schocker Paper Company, of Nos. 1918-1920 First avenue, Rock Island, jobbers of paper and cordage, is an excellent example of the supremacy of the young man in modern business. The commercial world has awakened to the fact that it needs the vim, energy and hopeful resourcefulness of youth, and never before in the history of the country, has the young man received such universal recognition. Mr. Schocker was born in Rock Island, on the corner of Twentieth street and Sixth avenue, January 11, 1881, a son of Christian H. and Julia (Glockhoff) Schocker. The father was born in Germany, the mother in Rock Island. She is a daughter of Alexander and Catherine (Schneider) Glockhoff.

Henry H. Schocker was the third son and child born to his parents, and attended the public schools, Augustana College, and Brown's Business College, completing his education when twenty-two years old. Following this, he entered the employ of Ward & McMahon as bookkeeper and office man, and continued with this Rock Island firm for three years, when, with his brother, Louis H. Schocker, he formed the Schocker Paper Company, with quarters at No. 219 Twentieth street. After three years, however, removal was made to No. 1724 First avenue, and two years later the present site was taken, at Nos. 1918 and 1920 First avenue. The company are jobbers in wrapping paper, bags, twine, writing tablets, envelopes, notions, galvanized ware, wooden ware, cordage and folding boxes, and control a large trade. It is a reliable house, both members being men of unusual business ability and integrity of character.

Mr. Schocker belongs to the Elks, the Rock Island Club, the Rock Island Business Men's Association, and the Tri-City Credit Men's Association. He votes independently, preferring to support the man rather than party.

SCHOEDE, Charles, who is one of the respected citizens of Rock Island, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil war, was born February 18, 1839, in Rupersdorf, Prussia, Germany, a son of Gottfried and Maria (Minch) Schoede, also natives of that country. The father was a wagonmaker by trade and came to America in 1850, landing in New York, with his family, consisting of his wife and their eight children: Gottlieb, Christian, John, Helena, Wilhelm, Rosa, Charles and Dorothy. They voyaged up the Hudson river to Troy, N. Y., and from there traveled to Milwaukee, Wis., soon afterward locating on a farm in Sheboygan county in that state, where the father died May 11, 1862.

When Charles Schoede accompanied his parents to America he was about ten years of age and he completed his education in the schools of Sheboygan county, Wis. After completing his education he learned the trade of carpenter, which he has since followed. He has been a resident of Rock Island since 1858 and has helped in the erection of many buildings here, and as an expert workman, has reason to take pride in the stability of the work he turns out. He enlisted from Rock Island in Company E Forty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and among the important engagements in which he participated were the following: Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Saline River, Siege of Vicksburg. His regiment was first to enter Little Rock, Ark. He was mustered out in December, 1864. At the close of the war, Mr. Shoede resumed work at his trade.

On September 13, 1866, at Jacksonville, Ill., he married Christine Keller, who was born in Wuitenburg, Germany, February 1, 1843. One son and one daughter were born to them: John Edward, born April 16, 1877, and Martha, who died when five months old. Mr. Schoede has a comfortable residence at No. 517 Twenty-sixth street and also owns other property. The family are members of the Lutheran church and have a wide circle of friends in the city. Mr. Shoede is a republican in politics and has always been interested in everything affecting the general welfare and prosperity of the city in which he has lived so long.

SCHOESSEL, Mrs. Myrtle E. Dade.—After twenty years of active business life, the subject of this sketch takes up the more quiet and natural duties of womanhood in home life, becoming the wife of Mr. C. A. Schoessel, one of Rock Island's prominent business men. This marriage occurred September 14, 1911, and they are domiciled in their own beautiful home at 1230 Twentieth street, Rock Island.

It was in November, 1890, when Mrs. Schoessel, then Miss Myrtle E. Dade, first began making her own way in life, and as a clerk was employed in the head office of the Modern Woodmen of America at Fulton, Ill., when the membership of that society numbered in the neighborhood of 42,000. She took up the study of stenography at the Northern Illinois College and a few years later became stenographer for the Woodmen, enjoying the distinction of being for some months the only stenographer employed in the head clerk's office.

In 1895 the ladies' auxiliary of the M. W. A., known as the Royal Neighbors of America, was taking up the insurance feature for women, similar to that of the M. W. A., and after assisting with the clerical work for a few months, she was appointed recorder of the beneficiary or insurance department. Many of the plans of the office were similar to those of the M. W. A. but much originality was also incorporated into the system of keeping the records while it was a young growing society, to make the work less difficult to manage as it took on its thousands of members. A most difficult task, and perhaps the most beneficial of office equipment, was the installation of the card system by Mrs. Schoessel, when the society had a membership of some 50,000, being an evolution of her own adapted to the society's needs, and which other societies did her the compliment to imitate.

To care for the vast amount of business which finally amounted to the handling and recording of over a million dollars annually and keeping the individual record of over 200,000 members required the services of some seventy-five clerks at the time of the Denver convention in 1911. Another most difficult task was the amalgamation of the beneficiary and social departments which had previous to 1908 been conducted separately, but which was accomplished during the three years in which Mrs. Schoessel was supreme recorder for the society, having been elected to this position at the Chicago convention in May 1908. She took great pride in her work, requiring the best efforts of all connected with it to maintain the highest standards of efficiency. At the Denver convention held in May, 1911, Dr. Hada Burkhart was elected to fill the office of supreme recorder, thus bringing to a close sixteen years of active service for the largest society of its kind for women, which was followed in a few months by her marriage.

Mrs. Schoessel was born in Fulton, Ill., March 23, 1872, and with her husband is a member of the Broadway Presbyterian church.

SCHOONMAKER, Martin, president of the Farmers' State bank of Reynolds, one of the most experienced and conservative financiers of his part of the country, and a man widely known and universally respected, founded his present institution in 1903. In 1888, he established the Reynolds bank, being its president, developing it from a private bank he had operated for ten years. Mr. Schoonmaker was born in Greene county, N. Y., October 21, 1834, a son of Christian and Sylvia (Marquette) Schoonmaker, both natives of New York state. Their children were: Martin, Mary E., George, Charles and Walter.

Martin Schoonmaker grew up in New York state, receiving an ordinary district school education. When but eighteen years old, he began life for himself as a teamster, but in 1856, he decided to seek his fortune in the then western state of Illinois. He landed in Rock Island county, April 18, of that year, and at first hired out by the month to a farmer in Edgington township. He was next employed as a teamster by Edward Burrell, a merchant of Edgington. Following this Mr. Schoonmaker was engaged with three companions as a teamster and they drove an ox team to Kansas, through Iowa, Nebraska, and the greater part of Kansas and Missouri. As he did not like the more western states, he returned, through Missouri, and suffered hardships because of the refusal of those in the slave districts to sell food because of his northern birth and sympathies. Fortunately he was able to kill an occasional squirrel which kept him from starving. After his arrival home, he worked by the month for a year, and then rented land in Edgington township and began farming. For three years he rented, and then being naturally thrifty, he was able to buy eighty acres west of Reynolds. He not only operated this farm, but several others which he owned at different times, but later went into an agricultural implement business. This developed into a general mercantile business in Edgington, and finally he established his banking house. The Farmers' State Bank of Reynolds, one of the most solid and reliable institutions of its kind in this part of the state, carries on a general banking business, making collections and attending to all the details of such an establishment. Mr. Schoonmaker is at its head, ably assisted by A. L. Freeburg as vice-president and Frank T. Sherman as cashier.

Mr. Schoonmaker was first married to Elizabeth Boultinghouse, daughter of John Boultinghouse. She died in Edgington, in 1870, no issue. Mr. Schoonmaker married as his second wife, Jennie C. Smith of Bowling township, daughter of James R. Smith. They have had the following children: Elizabeth, who is Mrs. T. J. Ash of Brandford, Ill.; Lura, who is at home; M. Fay, who is deceased, passed away June 29, 1909; and two who died in infancy. The Methodist church holds Mr. Schoonmaker's membership, and receives his generous support. As a stalwart republican, he has been loyal to his party, and served with dignity and capability as supervisor for eight years, and as pathmaster, tax collector, school director, and justice of the peace for many years.

SCHRADER, George August.—The officials of Rock Island county are men of ability and reliability in their respective lines, and one who has performed his duties in a satisfactory and praiseworthy manner is George August Schrader, now holding the position of deputy recorder of deeds of the county. He belongs to a family that has long been known in the region and is a native of the county, having been born at Moline, March 4, 1882, a son of Frank William and Elizabeth Barbara (Schmitt) Schrader, the former a merchant of Moline for over thirty years. Frank W. Schrader was born in Germany March 3, 1837, and his wife was born at Columbus, O., March 17, 1844.

George A. Schrader was educated in the public and German schools, and St. Mary's Catholic school, of Moline, and finished with a course at the business college and normal school at Dixon, Ill. Upon returning home he became employed in the main office of the Modern Woodmen of America, and was later appointed to his present office. He is unmarried and resides at the parental home at 1827 Fourteen and One-half street, Moline. A popular young man, he is well known in social circles, but at the same time he takes an intelligent and active interest in public affairs and is ready to promote any measure for the general welfare and progress of his community.

SCHREINER, Christian J. W. (deceased), who was one of the best examples of the sterling German-American developed in Rock Island county, was a man whose activities were such as to entitle him to a prominent place in a record of this character, and whose many virtues endeared him to a wide circle of associates and intimate friends. He was born in Heida, Holstein, Germany, December 18, 1847, and was there educated. In early life, he began the study of architecture, but when only eighteen years of age, he left his two sisters, a brother and his parents, all of whom remained in the old home, and came to this country. Even as a lad he possessed unusual determination of character to make the long journey alone to a new land, of which he had no personal knowledge, and the language of which he could not speak. Mr. Schreiner first located at Davenport, Ia., arriving there in 1868, and at once began working as an architect and contractor. Within a few months, believing there was more opportunity for him in Rock Island, he moved to that city, and established himself in his chosen line of endeavor. This city remained his home and scene of operations during the remainder of his useful life, his death taking place in August, 1897. During the many years that followed his location here, he devoted himself to architectural work and building.

On October 6, 1874, Mr. Schreiner was married to Miss Julia Eaton, born and reared in Rock Island. Her father was a building contractor, but died when she was a child, as did her mother, and her grandparents reared her until her marriage. She was born in March, 1857, and survives. A son and daughter were born of this marriage, both of whom reside with the widowed mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Schreiner traveled to a considerable extent in this country, and made a trip to Mr. Schreiner's old home in Germany, which was enjoyed very much, although both were glad to return to their home in Rock Island. In political opinions, Mr. Schreiner was a republican, and served his party as alderman. While active in public matters, he was not an office seeker, for he was fully occupied with his own affairs. His religious home was in the Lutheran church, while his wife was a Presbyterian. The Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Fraternal Tribunes and the Knights of the Globe held his membership. Mr. Schreiner owned considerable realty at the time of his death, and had bought and sold extensively for some years. He was a great reader, keeping in close touch with current events. The greater part of his residence in Rock Island was spent at No. 1119 Fourth avenue, where the family still live. Mr. Schreiner's death was an untimely one, having been caused by a fall from a building, so that he was cut off in his prime, with every prospect of years of useful endeavor stretching before him, and those who knew and appreciated him, found it difficult to reconcile themselves to his loss.

SCHRIVER, Harry M., mayor of Rock Island. The legal profession calls forth from its followers the best that is in them, and develops them to a remarkable degree. A good lawyer not only must possess natural ability, but he must be a keen judge of men, and broad-minded enough to bring to bear an unprejudiced mentality in the handling of cases. Rock Island county numbers among its representatives of the bar some of the best attorneys of this part of the state, whose names are associated with important jurisprudence. One of them who has made his name a well known one, is Harry M. Schriver, of No. 1029 Third avenue, Rock Island. He was born in Edginton township, this county, September 17, 1872, a son of William Henry and Julia Olive (Nichols) Schriver, the former born at Pittsburgh, Pa., October 20, 1836, and the latter in Searsport, Me., April 29, 1847. The father was a farmer.

Harry M. Schriver spent his childhood on a farm, growing up amid strictly rural surroundings, and developing a healthy love of outdoor pastimes, being specially interested in horses. After finishing a course in the Reynolds high school, he worked for a year on the farm, following which he taught school for four years in Edginton township, where he had formerly been a pupil. Having decided upon his profession, Mr. Schriver entered Valparaiso University, and on July 23, 1900, settled at Rock Island, which has since continued to be his home. Since that date he has been in active practice. A strong republican, Mr. Schriver has been active in the ranks of his party, and has represented it in several important offices. From December, 1908, to January, 1911, he served with resourceful force as assistant state's attorney. On April 4, 1911, he was elected mayor of Rock Island, and is now holding that office with dignified capability, giving his people a thoroughly businesslike administration.

Fraternally, Mr. Schriver belongs to the Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen of America, Court of Honor, Royal Arcanum, Loyal Order of Moose, and Knights of the Globe. In all these relations he takes a deep interest, and is one of the most progressive and substantial young men of the county.

SCHROEDER, Frederick H. (deceased), was highly regarded as an upright and useful citizen of Rock Island, Ill., where he spent most of his life after he was eight years of age. He was born in Hanover, Germany, April 30, 1848, son of Henry and Wilhelmina Schroeder, natives of that country, who came to America about 1848. They landed at New York and came on to Rock Island, where their son Frederick H. attended a German parochial school until he was fourteen years of age. The parents had six children: Henry, Caroline, Sophia, Frederick, William and Mary.

After leaving school Mr. Schroeder learned the trade of harnessmaker with a Mr. Ludolph, with whom he remained several years. He also learned the trade of carriage trimmer and later spent six years traveling for the hardware firm of McConnel & Son, after which he worked six years for Frederick & Son, of Peoria. Returning to Rock Island, he began working on the Island as a leather cutter, remaining in that capacity until compelled by sickness to leave and died December 5, 1908. He was prominent in various circles, being a member of the Lutheran church, a republican, and was past master of Trio Lodge A. F. & A. M.

Mr. Schroeder was married in 1878, to Margaret Handberg, who was born in Moline, daughter of John D. and Margaret (Griest) Handberg. The parents were natives of Germany and farming people. Both died in America. One son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Schroeder, Clarence J. H., who married Miss Bess Mierfield of Rock Island and lives in Rock Island. Mrs. Schroeder has a pleasant home at No. 1320 Seventh avenue, and has many friends in Rock Island.

SCHUETT, Fred.—The present mercantile importance of Rock Island is largely due to the efforts of those who were pioneers in this line, establishing high standards and educating the people to appreciate good quality, and first class service. One of those who has thus placed the city and county under a large debt of gratitude to him, is Fred Schuett, now retired, but for many years associated with the retail mercantile trade of this locality. He was born in northern Germany, November 26, 1845, a son of August and Dorothy (Schroeder) Schuett. The father, who was a butcher, died in Germany, and his widow came to America, dying later at the home of her son-in-law, August Rondt of Rock Island. There were seven children in the family, and four now survive: Christ, who is of Rock Island; Frederick, and two brothers who live in Germany.

Fred Schuett was educated in Germany, where he learned the butcher's trade from his father, and worked at it before coming to America. He was employed on one of the large steamboats plying between Hamburg and New York, and crossed the ocean eighteen times. Then, between 1870 and 1872, he served in the German army, and in the latter year he came to America to locate. Sailing from Hamburg, he came direct to Moline, and engaged as a butcher with Thomas and John Schindler, with whom he remained nine months. He then went to Davenport where he worked seven months. Settling at Rock Island, he established a meat business and was engaged in this line until his retirement in 1887.

Mr. Schuett was married at Rock Island, November 2, 1876, to Hannah Hay, born in this city, daughter of Peter and Mary Hay, who were early settlers of Rock Island, having come here from Germany in 1850. The father came from Holstein and the mother from Hanover, Germany. Mrs. Schuett died November 4, 1887, as a result of injury sustained from being burned, having borne her husband four children: Mrs. Hannah Huber of Rock Island; Mary, wife of Charles Lorenson, a butcher of Rock Island; Fred of Chicago; and Henry of Chicago. Mr. Schuett was married (second) May 28, 1890, to Paulina Bork, born in Germany, but came to America, with a sister, before her parents and balance of the family, who resided in Minnesota, where the family settled. The parents are now deceased. There is no issue from the second marriage. Mr. Schuett has five grandchildren. He was for many years a member of the Odd Fellows, and is ex-master of his lodge. The German Lutheran church holds his membership. Mr. Schuett owns his home and one other property in Rock Island. Having always endeavored to live up to what he believed to be right, Mr. Schuett made his name a synonym for honesty and fair dealing, and enjoys the confidence and respect of all who know him.

SCHULTZE, Franz.—Some of the most prosperous farmers of Rock Island county began their career on rented land, carefully saving every penny until a sufficient amount was accumulated to pay for land of their own. One of the men who has attained to his much desired ends through this process, is Franz Schultze, born in Hampton township, April 9, 1861, on the farm then owned by Mary Grantz. He is a son of Andrew and Elizabeth (Lyford) Schultze, born in Germany, but came to the United States in 1852. They located in Hampton township on rented land, but in 1861, bought what became their homestead. On it the father died November 26, 1898, the mother having died July 8, 1875. Franz Schultze left home when fifteen years old, and going to Seward county, Neb., worked on various farms there for seven years. Returning to Rock Island county, he worked for his father two years, then marrying, he rented land in Zuma township until his father's death, in 1898. He then bought the home farm of 120 acres, and settled down upon it. Since then, he has made many improvements, and has a fine place. Here he carries on general farming and stock raising, and is very successful in his operations.

On November 20, 1884, Mr. Schultze married Bertha Laveau, born in Westphalia, Germany, August 28, 1863, the Rev. Winter performing the ceremony. She was brought here by her parents, who went first to St. Paul, Minn., from whence they came to Rock Island county. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Schultze are: Anna who is Mrs. Albert Miller of Henry county, Ill., issue—three daughters, Elvera, Bertha and Leona; Franz, who is at home; and Amelia, Mrs. August Vollrath, who resides with her father, and is the mother of three children: William, Eleanor and Elsie. For many years, Mr. Schultze has been a member of the German Lutheran church, and is now serving as steward. In politics, he is a republican, but he has never sought or desired office, his time and attention being fully occupied with his farming. Conservative, always carefully weighing each proposition before acting upon it, through his industry and economy, Mr. Schultze, assisted by his wife, has advanced himself to a foremost position among the agriculturists of Rock Island county, and deserves the success that the years have brought him.

SCHUTTE, Otto Robert, proprietor of the Altamont Farm of 288 acres on sections 25 and 36, is one of the thrifty and enterprising farmers of Rock Island county, and an honored resident of Buffalo Prairie township. He was born at Illinois City, March 9, 1860, being a son of Christian August and Louisa (Westphal) Schutte. The father was born 200 miles from Berlin, Manctoburg, Germany, September 18, 1826, and served in the Germany army for four years. He had an excellent education, and also learned to be a stonemason, bricklayer and plasterer. It was he who built the first cement house in this part of the state, on the Ballard farm, in Drury township. For years he worked a good deal at his several trades in Buffalo Prairie and Drury townships. Perhaps no man was better known in this locality than he, for he lived here from 1852 to his death, having come directly here from New York upon landing and he gave his community the best that was in him. When his adopted country had need of him, this seasoned soldier enlisted in 1861, in the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but was discharged for disability. Coming home, he later enlisted in the Fifty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and took part in many engagements. Coming back once more, he resumed his work, thus continuing until his death at Illinois City, April 18, 1871. He is buried there. In politics, he was a republican, and fraternally, a Mason. His wife was a native of the same country as himself and lost her father in Germany, but her mother lived to come to the United States.

The mother of Otto Robert Schutte was a widow at the time of her marriage to his father, and by her first marriage had one child. She is still living, aged eighty-one years, residing at Illinois City. The children born to her second marriage were: Theodore, who died December 29, 1900, when he was forty-three years old, leaving a widow, formerly Carrie Fechner; Otto Robert; Annie, deceased; Roseanna, deceased; Lulu, who died in infancy; and Albert, who married Martha Thomas, died at Illinois City, November 18, 1911.

Otto Robert Schutte grew to manhood in Illinois City and its vicinity, and had the misfortune to lose his father when he was eleven years old. He went to the public schools until his father died, when he spent a year at the Illinois Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Normal, Ill. He then finished his education in the district schools of Rock Island county. When only fourteen years old, he began working on farms, thus continuing until he was twenty-two years old. The next two years were spent in learning the pottery trade. At that time he began farming for himself on his father-in-law's place, east of Illinois City, and so prospered that in 1895, he was able to buy his present farm, then known as the old Arthur P. Roberts farm, named for the grandfather of Mrs. Schutte.

On March 28, 1888, Mr. Schutte was married to Priscilla Roberts, the Rev. T. R. Johnson of Edginton officiating. She is a daughter of Simeon E. and Nancy Amanda (Campbell) Roberts. Mr. and Mrs. Schutte are the parents of children as follows: Estella May, born June 6, 1889; Chester Mansfield, born April 27, 1895; Bertha Esther, born November 20, 1902. Mr. Schutte and family are members of the Baptist church of Andalusia, of which he is treasurer and trustee and his wife is a teacher in the Sunday school. Fraternally, Mr. Schutte belongs to Andalusia Lodge No. 516, A. F. & A. M., while he, his wife and daughter are members of the Andalusia chapter, Order of Eastern Star, No. 417, and Mrs. Schutte is a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. Mr. Schutte has long been a staunch republican. The birthplace of Mrs. Schutte was the old log house on the home farm of her family in Buffalo Prairie township, July 16, 1865, and she was educated in the district schools of her neighborhood, having for teachers Augusta Davis, Virginia McDonald, Irwin Hayes, A. W. Smith, Annie Hayes and Mr. Ayers. The Schutte and Roberts families are old and honored ones in Rock Island county, and Mr. and Mrs. Schutte are training their children to do credit to both sides. Mr. Schutte served as school treasurer from 1895 to 1900, assessor in 1908 and director from 1906 to 1912.

SCHWENNEKER, Herman, a prosperous farmer of Hampton township, was born in Coe township, December 20, 1868, a son of William Schwenneker, a native of Germany. The father came to the United States, locating at Moline, with his first wife and two children. Four more were added to the family before her death. He married a second time, and one daughter was born to this union, Mary. Mrs. William Winterfelt of Coe township. His second wife dying, Mr. Schwenneker married Mary Biggear, also a native of Germany, and they had four children: Herman, John, of Coe township; Anna, Mrs. John Herren, of Adair county, Ia.; and Fred, of Moline. The parents of Herman Schwenneker were married in Coe township and located on a farm of 217 acres, living there until 1895, when they moved to Moline, where the mother died in 1906. A couple of years later, the father went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Winterfelt, of Coe township.

Herman Schwenneker attended the district school, working for his father until his marriage. He then began managing the homestead, thus continuing for fourteen years, when in March, 1905, he bought 150 acres in Hampton township, all of which is improved except ten acres of timber. Because of the beautiful location of this farm, it has been appropriately named Fairview Farm. Mr. Schwenneker raises cattle and hogs and carries on general farming, his long experience proving of great benefit to him.

In February, 1892, Mr. Schwenneker was married to Anna Behrandt, born in Coe township, a daughter of Fred and Mary Behrandt of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Schwenneker have had two children, Elenora and William. They are members of the German Lutheran church, and are active in its good works. Mr. Schwenneker is independent in politics, preferring to vote for the man rather than to be bound by party ties. He is a sound, sensible, reliable man, an experienced farmer and excellent business man, and holds the confidence and respect of all who know him.

SCOTT, Josiah, owner of 160 acres of rich farming land as choice as any to be found in Rock Island, is justly numbered among the prosperous agriculturists of this locality. He was born in Washington county, Pa., November 16, 1848, a son of William and Elizabeth (Scott) Scott. The father was born in Kentucky, and died in Rock Island county in 1884, and here the mother passed away in 1888. The family came to the county in 1854, settling on the farm now owned by Josiah Scott. The latter was only seven years old when the family came here, so he has been practically reared in this region, and is intimately associated with its material development. Like the other boys of his age he attended the district schools during the winter months, and worked on the farm in the summer, and thus grew up to vigorous manhood, remaining with his father until the latter's death, when he bought the homestead.

On December 12, 1877, Josiah Scott was united in marriage with Sadie Hillier, born at Pittsburgh, Pa., November 23, 1857, and they had six children: George who is a plumber of Rock Island; Temyson who is a machinist; Flossie who is at home; Tille who is deceased; May and Walter. Mrs. Scott passed away September 2, 1911, after a useful life, devoted to her home and family. Her remains were tenderly laid to rest in Chippanock cemetery. A strong democrat, Josiah Scott has served as school director, but he is willing to allow others the right of free opinions upon political matters. He belongs to the Masonic lodge at Coal Valley, and also to the Modern Woodmen of America. The Presbyterian church holds his membership, and receives his generous support. For years Mr. Scott has raised corn and oats as well as stock, specializing on hogs, and believes in rotation of crops, being fully aware that land has to be taken care of in order to get best results. He is a live, progressive business man and excellent farmer, and not only has been materially successful, but has won the confidence of his associates.

SCULLY, Daniel, one of the most representative of Rock Island's retired citizens, a man who has lived a useful life and deserves his present freedom from the cares of business, is residing at his pleasant home, No. 2128 Fifth avenue, having come to this city in 1855. He was born in Ireland, in 1827, being a son of Miles and Kate (Leary) Scully, both of whom are long since deceased. Their children were: Daniel, Mary, Kate and Margaret, all living except Mary.

Daniel Scully received but a meagre education, and early realized that better opportunities awaited him in the United States, so he left his home and came to New York city, in 1847, from there going to Great Bend, Pa., to work as a laborer, until 1855. During this period he felt that his hopes of bettering his condition had not been realized, for he had to work hard and during long hours for seventy-five cents per day. In 1855, he left Pennsylvania and made his way to Rock Island, and obtained employment on the first bridge across the Mississippi river at this point. He then worked as fireman on various boats on the Mississippi river, and at other jobs until he engaged with the Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann Lumber Company, continuing with them until his retirement.

Mr. Scully was married in Rock Island, in 1858, to Honora Slattery, daughter of Mart and Margaret Slattery. Their family is as follows: William, deceased; Margaret, widow of George Smith of Rock Island; Kate, deceased; John, deceased; Mrs. Mary Cotterell of Des Moines, Ia.; Daniel, a traveling salesman; Louisa, died in childhood; Nellie, at home; and Milo. Mrs. Scully died in 1902, having been a good mother and devoted wife. In politics, Mr. Scully is an independent. A devout Catholic, he belongs to St. Mary's parish, and not only assisted in building the church edifice, but contributes liberally towards its support. He built his present house about 1899, and owns two others on adjoining lots, which he also built. Genial, whole-souled, kind in word and deed, he is beloved wherever known, and his declining years are made comfortable by the realization of a well-spent life, and many deeds of charity of which none knew but the recipients and himself.

SEARL, James A.—The Searl family has long been prominent in Zuma township, representatives of it having secured a land claim there at a very early day. James A. Searl, who belongs to the pioneer family, is a native of Kalamazoo county, Mich., born there March 3, 1834, a son of Ambrose and Hannah (Searles) Searl, natives of Fairfield county, O., and grandson of John Searl. The parents were married in their native state. The father was a cabinetmaker, following his trade prior to 1830, in which year he removed to Michigan and purchased a prairie farm, which he improved and cultivated for a few years. In 1838 he came to Zuma township and purchased a claim on the bank of Rock river, two years later moving one mile up the river, where he entered land and lived until 1846. He then sold the property and moved to the farm now occupied by his son James A., having purchased the place in 1845. There were 100 acres in the farm which was all prairie land except thirty-five acres on the bluff. About ten acres was fenced and "broken," and there was a log house on the place, but everything was destroyed in a prairie fire which broke out some time after the Searls located on the farm. Ambrose Searl continued to improve and develop the farm, remaining there until seven years before his death, when he purchased a residence at Port Byron. He passed away April 26, 1887, in Coe township, where he was living with his niece, Mrs. Yolton, his wife having died December 18, 1885. They had children as follows: Albina, who died in August, 1885; Mary, who is Mrs. A. J. Fishback, of Michigan; James A.; Mable M., who is Mrs. Lawyer, of Ohio; Ambrose, Jr., who is of Los Angeles, Cal.

James A. Searl lived at home until his marriage on February 1, 1855, to Isabelle Bryan, who was born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Garrett) Bryan. Her father was born in Pennsylvania and her mother in England, and about 1835 they came to the present site of Moline. Mr. Bryan rented land where Moline now stands and later removed to Zuma township, where he owned a farm, and both he and his wife died there. James A. Searl and wife lived one year with his parents after their marriage, and then moved to another house, although he continued to conduct the home farm, keeping up this arrangement until 1883, with the exception of four years. In February of 1883 he bought the place from his father and has since continued to live on it. He has added 200 acres to the original farm and has made numerous improvements. Like his father, he was an energetic and ambitious farmer, and he has lived to realize the benefit of modern discoveries and machinery to the farmer in his work. One improvement which has operated greatly to his benefit is the installation of open ditches for draining the land. Since 1906 the farm has been managed by his son Ambrose. Mr. Searl always carried on general farming and of late years made a specialty of raising registered Holstein cattle and Chester-White, Poland-China, Berkshire and Duroc-Jersey hogs. His son now confines his attention in the latter direction to the raising of stock hogs and has also raised many fine horses in the past twenty-five years.

Children as follows were born to James A. Searl and wife: Ambrose, who was born January 2, 1858, is living on the home farm, and married Stella Wake who died March 26, 1896, leaving two children; Alvah, who married Rose Schwegler, had a daughter who died in infancy; Frank, who married Mabel Noah; and John, who was born February 3, 1860, died October 19, 1899, aged thirty-nine years, having married Harriet E. Deviney, who died November 1, 1909, having had two children, Clarissa, who is deceased, and John, who resides with his grandparents.

James A. Searl had but a limited education secured during a short attendance on the subscription schools of his time, but he has made the most of his opportunities and keeps well informed on the various issues and events of the day. He is a democrat in political affairs, serving ten years as constable, eight years as justice of the peace, and has also been a school director, discharging all his public duties satisfactorily and efficiently, so that he stands high in the estimation of his fellow citizens. He is a member of Masonic Lodge No. 436, of Port Byron, and is affiliated with the Chapter at Rock Island. Well known in Zuma township, where so much of his life has been spent, he has a wide circle of friends.

SEARLE, Judge Charles J., is widely known throughout Rock Island county and northwestern Illinois as an eminent attorney. Through force of circumstances, he is a self-made man, having been largely thrown upon his own resources. His father was Colonel E. J. Searle, a pioneer of Rock Island county, a veteran of the Civil war, a man well and widely known, who died at his home at Rock Island, August 18, 1906. A biography of him is given elsewhere in this work. Colonel Searle married Cassie R. Pierce, who survived her husband until September 12, 1909. Judge Searle was born at Fort Smith, Ark., May 16, 1865, where his parents had located after the Civil War. He is one of a family of six children, only two of whom are now living, the Judge and Miss Blanche Searle, both of Rock Island. After several removals with his parents, first to Arkadelphia, Ark., then to Little Rock, Ark., and later to Chicago, they settled at Pana, Ill., where Judge Searle was graduated from the high school. When about twenty years old, he went to Marshall county, Kas., and there he worked on a farm, and later taught school to gain sufficient funds for continuing his education. He entered Campbell university at Holton, Kas., partly working his way through as janitor. Once more he taught school, and then entered the Iowa state university as a law student, from which he was graduated with the highest honors of his class. Judge Searle was admitted to the bar in 1889, and located at Rock Island. His ability, especially as an advocate and trial lawyer, soon won him recognition both from the public and his colleagues and his rise in his profession was rapid. He early took an active interest in politics, and in 1892, was elected state's attorney for Rock Island county as the candidate of the republican party, running far ahead of his ticket. In 1896, he was re-elected by a still greater majority. In 1899, he received the unsolicited appointment from Governor Tanner as trustee of the Western Illinois State Normal school, at Macomb, which had just been provided for by law. Elected president of the board, the principal oversight of the details of the erection and installation of one of the state's finest educational institutions fell upon his shoulders. This trust was faithfully discharged, and when the school was completed and in successful operation, he resigned. Also without solicitation, in 1904, he was appointed by Governor Yates one of the judges of the Illinois State Court of Claims, with the rank and title of judge. This court has jurisdiction in all cases of disputed claims against the state and its institutions. From this position, Judge Searle resigned in 1909. Politically, he has always been a republican, of the progressive type, and is a power, not only in Rock Island county, but generally throughout the state. He has been thrice presented by Rock Island county as a candidate for Congress, and was chosen the republican candidate at the primaries of 1912, and endorsed by the progressive party, but failed of election by a small margin. He is a forceful and convincing speaker, and has taken an active part in many campaigns, his services in this line being in great demand. All his life he has stood for reform measures and honesty in politics. In 1898, Judge Searle formed a partnership with C. B. Marshall, under the firm name of Searle and Marshall, which has continued ever since. The firm soon took high rank in the legal field, and is quite generally regarded as the equal of any in the country.

On April 7, 1898, Judge Searle was married to Miss Mary Pryce, a daughter of John J. and Margaret Pryce, of Coal Valley. Three children have been born of this marriage, two sons and a daughter: Franklin, Charles and Margaret. Judge Searle is large, tall, but in perfect proportion, with a leonine head, an eye which flashes with earnest enthusiasm, a voice clear, distinct and vibrant, carrying conviction to his hearers. He is a commanding figure in the courtroom, on the lecture platform or on the political rostrum. Bold, independent and fearless, he scorns petty tricks, fighting out in the open for what he believes to be right, and against what he considers wrong. A man of safe judgment, weighing carefully both sides, he is fair to all interests, with a kind, dignified courtesy, yet considerate and approachable. Truly a man of the people, knowing full well from his own experience what it is to fight single-handed, he is above all known as a man of sterling integrity. To his legal and political activities, Judge Searle adds those of a farmer, being also largely interested in this line of effort.

SEARLE, Colonel Elhanan John (deceased).—No man of Rock Island county is held more affectionately in tender remembrance by those who knew him than the late Colonel Elhanan John Searle of Rock Island, who for many years rendered his country distinguished services as soldier, jurist and private citizen. He was born January 18, 1835, at Royallton, O., and came to Rock Island county with his parents when two years of age. They settled on a farm in Zuma township, where he passed his boyhood. He was called Colonel and Judge, having earned both titles, being most familiarly known as Judge Searle. When he had completed his early education, he entered Rock Island seminary at Mt. Morris, Ill., where he completed his preparatory course, and then entering the Northwestern university at Evanston, he was graduated therefrom with the highest honors of his class. At the time of his death, which occurred August 18, 1906, he was its oldest alumnus. After completing his university course, he decided to study law, and became a student in the office of John L. Beveridge of Chicago. Mr. Beveridge later becoming governor of Illinois. Mr. Searle in 1859, entered the office of Abraham Lincoln and William H. Herndon, then practicing law at Springfield, under the firm name of Lincoln & Herndon. His connection with this firm and especially with the noble character of Lincoln, must have made a deep impression upon him, and had a great influence in shaping his after life. Politically, those were tempestuous times, and Mr. Lincoln, the lawyer, became President of the United States, but the friendship formed with his student, Mr. Searle, continued until the sad death of the former, much correspondence passing between them.

In September, 1861, Colonel Searle enlisted for service in the Civil war, in Company B, Tenth Illinois Cavalry, at Springfield, as a private, through offered preferment by President Lincoln, which he declined. He was made captain of his company July 7, 1862, and sent into Arkansas as recruiting officer. Under his charge, the First Arkansas Infantry and the Second and Fourth Arkansas Cavalry were recruited, coming principally from the Ozark Mountain region of that state. He was made lieutenant-colonel of the First Arkansas Infantry, and practically commanded the regiment during its entire service, its colonel being absent from his command, and his duties thrown upon the next in command. Colonel Searle was beloved by his men and made a splendid record as a soldier and officer, taking part in over forty battles and skirmishes. Although he had three horses shot under him in battle, he escaped personal injury. During his service he often acted as brigadier-general of his brigade, and was in command of a number of important posts. For a time he was provost-marshal of a military department, and often acted as a member of military commissions and court-martials. Colonel Searle was honorably discharged at the close of the war, August 10, 1865. He then settled at Fort Smith, Ark., and began the practice of law, which had been interrupted by the call to arms. He was appointed prosecuting attorney for the ninth judicial district of Arkansas, February 19, 1866. Later, he was appointed United States commissioner for the western district of Arkansas, which also included Indian territory, and served in addition as assistant United States district attorney until January 1, 1867, when he was commissioned by the provisional governor as circuit judge of the ninth judicial circuit of Arkansas, the appointment being approved by the United States military authorities. He served in this capacity until February 10, 1871, when he was appointed a justice of the supreme court of Arkansas. This was for a term of two years, at the end of which he was elected to succeed himself for eight years, but his term was cut short by the adoption of a new state constitution containing provisions for the selection of members of that court. Colonel Searle was for several years a member of the Arkansas state board of education, and one of the board of trustees of the Arkansas state university, helping to build the latter, drafting its plan of government, together with the course of study to be used in the various departments. He was also a member of the building committee of its board of trustees. In 1875, Colonel Searle returned to Illinois, and located at Chicago, where he practiced law for several years, appearing as counsel in many important cases. He took part in the Hayes-Tilden campaign, during which he filled nearly all the speaking dates for John A. Logan, who was sick and unable to fill them. Later, he practiced law for a time in St. Louis, and then at Pana, Ill., until 1885. Following this, he spent two years in travel, but returned to Rock Island in 1887. He then purchased the well-known Rodman home, as well as the farm in Zuma township, where he had passed his boyhood. In the former, he lived until his death.

Colonel Searle was married April 1, 1863, to Miss Cassie R. Pierce at Springfield, Ill. Six children came to brighten their home. He was survived by his widow, and two children: Judge Charles J. Searle and Miss Blanche Searle, both living at Rock Island. His widow departed this life September 1, 1909. A thorough gentleman of the old school, Colonel Searle ever displayed the courtesy which was natural to him, and held friendship sacred. He early deprecated the materialistic commercial fever then taking hold of our people, believing that if it continued, it would prove the ruin of our republic. In view of recent developments and present conditions, it would appear that he was right. Although a republican, he supported men, rather than parties, and was an ideal citizen, broad, well-informed, a genial social companion, having ever at command a fund of reminiscence and anecdote. In all, he was a fine example of sturdy, upright manhood.

SEARLE, Sherman W., president of the Union Printing Company and editor of the Rock Island Daily Union, which it publishes, has been identified with work of a literary nature for a number of years. He was born December 29, 1863, in Zuma township, Rock Island county, Ill., a son of James and Elizabeth Ann (Clark) Searle. His father was born at Wheeling, Va. (now W. Va.), in 1802 while his parents were en route from Vermont to Ohio with a colony which settled Royalton in the latter state. His mother was born in Ohio in 1822. James Searle was first united in marriage to Elizabeth Quinn. Their children were: Col. Elhanan J., James, Elmer, Alva and Elmira, all of whom are dead, and Mrs. Pauline Smith, of California. James Searle removed from Ohio to Rock Island county in 1839. In 1849 his first wife died and two years later he was married to Josephine McCullough, who lived scarcely a year, leaving a daughter, Melcina, now Mrs. John Yoltou, residing near Port Byron, this county. In 1854 James Searle returned to Ohio, where he was married to Elizabeth Ann Clark. The children of this marriage are: Clark N. and Mary of Ames, Iowa; Clara (Mrs. C. M. Hubbard of Rock Island) and Sherman W.

Sherman W. Searle was educated in the country schools and in the Moline high school, and in 1889 he was graduated from the college of law of the State University of Iowa. During the following five years he engaged in the practice of this profession but in the fall of 1894 he entered the newspaper field, serving as substitute city editor on the morning issue of the Davenport Democrat. In the spring of 1895 he became city editor of the Morning Tribune of that city, but in May of the same year he accepted the city editorship of the Davenport Daily Leader, which position he held for seven years. In 1902 he accepted the management of The Citizen of Iowa City, owned by Hon. Milton Remley, then attorney general of the state of Iowa. After fourteen months at Iowa City, he was offered the position of advertising manager of the Davenport Democrat which he held for five years, coming to Rock Island to take charge of The Daily Union in July, 1908. The plant of this newspaper is located at 218-220 Eighteenth street. It was established in the fall of 1862 and has never missed an issue in over a half century of existence. It is a staunch republican sheet and always has been and has a large circulation. Under Mr. Searle's guidance it has steadily grown in influence, going into the homes, not only of the people of Rock Island but covering a large portion of the county outside of the cities, and into adjoining counties as well.

On February 27, 1891, Mr. Searle was married to Blanche Ewing, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ewing of Iowa City. While she was born at Cleveland, Tenn., her father and mother were Ohioans, Mr. Ewing being a member of the Ohio family of which Gen. Tom Ewing was a scion. Mr. and Mrs. Searle have one daughter, Ella Elizabeth, a student in the University of Iowa.

SEARS, Roy Alson, city editor of the Rock Island Daily Union, a man closely identified with journalistic advancement in Rock Island county, is one of the leading men of Rock Island. He was born at Rock Island, February 12, 1885, second son and fourth child of David J. and Naomi (Everett) Sears. David J. Sears was born at Bucyrus, O., March 9, 1848, and there obtained his educational training, aiding his father in milling and farming. He also learned the carpenter trade and prior to attaining his majority went to Oshkosh, Wis., where he was employed in a lumber manufacturing plant, later becoming a foreman. Here he was married March 24, 1874, to Miss Naomi Everett, a daughter of John B. Everett of Oshkosh, early settlers of that section. In 1881

David J. Sears resigned his position at Oshkosh and came to Rock Island to take charge of the construction of the plant of the Rock Island Lumber Company, which later became the present Rock Island Sash & Door Works. Upon the completion of the plant, David J. Sears was made its superintendent, continuing to hold this position for about eighteen years, during which time the manufacturing part of the business became the Rock Island Sash & Door Works, and leaving it he organized the Rock Island Stair Works, he managing the business until it was discontinued in 1907. He later acquired Riverview Farm in Andalusia township, where he and his family are now residing. Seven children were born to him and his wife, namely: two who died in infancy; William E., who is now at Minneapolis, Minn.; Roy A.; N. Barton, who is of Black Hawk township; Lyman H., who lives with his parents in Andalusia township; and Myrtle, who is now Mrs. Robert T. Lee of Rock Island.

Roy Alson Sears attended the public schools of Rock Island and was graduated from the high school in 1903. During his courses he took a prominent part in the school organizations, and won honors in many track events. He originated the idea of having a high school correspondent for the local papers, and this meeting with encouragement, he became such for the Rock Island Argus. This position gave him a taste of newspaper work as well as valuable experience, so that following his graduation he entered the employ of the Davenport Times, being in its Moline department. Within a month he was made Moline editor for the paper, continuing as such for about a year, when he was transferred to the local staff at Davenport. In 1904 he entered the employ of the Rock Island Daily Argus as an editorial writer, and displayed such marked aptitude for the work that he was made city editor within a year. This position he held until September, 1909, when he left to become city editor of the Rock Island Daily Union, and is still thus engaged. Soon after, the plant was almost destroyed by fire and for months the paper was published under extreme difficulties, but never missed an issue. Without official position or compensation, Mr. Sears wrote the journal of the Rock Island city council until the position of deputy city clerk and reporter was created and bestowed upon him, and he continued to hold it until it was practically abolished under the commission form of government. He has been very prominent in the work of the high school alumni association and was chairman of the committee which in 1910 and 1911 prepared a complete directory of all high school graduates from 1874, the first class, numbering at the time of compilation, about 1,200.

A young man of much more than ordinary ability, Mr. Sears has proven his worth and the literary merit of his work is unquestioned. Few men are able to rise as rapidly as he has in journalistic work, and his enthusiasm and capability combined with his willingness to work unceasingly have brought him a reward which must be gratifying. Still in the prime of young manhood, his career can scarcely be said to have been begun, and during the years which stretch before him there is no doubt but that Mr. Sears will make his name as well known outside Illinois as he has in his native section.

SEBRING, William (deceased).—It is almost impossible to do full justice to a man when he is still in our midst, for death alone reveals his true character, and in the aftermath is his life known. When a man like William Sebring passes away, many mourn, for his was a character to command universal respect, and to make friendships. Mr. Sebring was born in Ottumwa, Ia., April 27, 1839, a son of William and Matilda Sebring of Ohio, farming people. These parents came as far west as Ottumwa at an early date, settling on a farm, where they both passed away. William Sebring was only seven years old when the family came to Burlington, Ia., where he went to school, and he made that city his home for many years, although the family moved away. In the fall of 1873 he went to California, where he spent two years, and upon his return, he came to Rock Island. In a short time, however, he left for Kansas and farmed there for a couple of years. Once more he came to Rock Island, where he began farming. His health failing, he went to Omaha, where he remained until his death in 1902. William Sebring enlisted, during the Civil War, in Company K, Eleventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served three years, being honorably discharged September 30, 1865. He participated in many battles, and was a brave, loyal soldier.

The marriage of William Sebring occurred at Peoria, Ill., April 10, 1872, to Martha Hindman, born in Putnam county, Ind., September 29, 1852, a daughter of William and Melbine Hindman. Mr. Hindman was a carpenter, who moved from Burlington, Ia., to La Harpe, Ill., and there both he and his wife died. Mr. Hindman was a soldier during the Civil War, serving five years, and had the misfortune to be taken prisoner and confined in Libby prison. Mr. and Mrs. Sebring became the parents of eight children, namely: Georgia A., who is the widow of Nathan Marshall, lives in Texas; Grace, who is the wife of William Barnes of Rock Island; Charles, who is of Kansas City; Emma, who is the wife of John Van Riddle of Grinnell, Ia.; Frank, who is at home; Joseph, who is of Rock Island, and James and Fred. There are eight grandchildren in the family. Mrs. Sebring is living with her daughter, Mrs. Mr. W. D. Barnes at No. 1720 Thirty-ninth street, Rock Island. Mr. Sebring died firm in the faith of the Methodist church, to which he belonged, as does his wife. He was a staunch republican, but never would accept public office. Always suffering from the effects of exposure and hardships during his life as a soldier, Mr. Sebring lived out his days patiently, striving to model himself after the Divine pattern. A devout Christian, an excellent business man, attached to his family, he set an example the rising generation would do well to follow, and left behind him a memory years cannot tarnish.

SECHLER, Thomas Mackey.—The history of the veterans of Rock Island county shows that the bravery of these soldiers did not cease with the declaration of peace, but has been needed to carry them through the ensuing years. Not one of them came out of the struggle free from some disability, although in some cases, it did not exhibit itself at once. Those terrible days of nervous strain and physical tests of endurance, nights of exposure, and the debilitating effect of the Southern climate on those not acclimated, had their baneful effect, and all this must be taken into consideration in reviewing the work accomplished by the men who lived to return to their homes. One of Rock Island county's veterans held in special esteem is Thomas Mackey Sechler, manufacturer of carriages and agricultural implements of Moline, with residence at 1702 Sixth avenue this city, who was born at Milton, Northumberland county, Pa., October 25, 1841. He is a son of Daniel Montgomery and Pamela (Mackey) Sechler, the former born in Danville, Montour county, Pa., March 4, 1818, and the latter in Oley township, Berks county, Pa., December 19, 1819. From 1839 to 1845, the father was a carriage manufacturer; from 1847 to 1877, he engaged in the production of iron, resuming the manufacture of carriages in 1877, and so continuing until 1903, adding the manufacture of agricultural implements in 1897. From 1840 to 1845, he lived at Milton, Pa., then moving to Wooster, O., where he remained until 1847, when he went to Marble Furnace, Adams county, O. In 1852, he moved to Ironton, O., but in 1858, went to Cincinnati, where he lived until his death in 1903. His widow survives.

The first of the Sechler family came from Holland, in 1685, locating in Pennsylvania. Members of the family took up farms in what was then Philadelphia county, now Northampton county. The great-grandfather, John Sechler, served in a Philadelphia county regiment during the Revolution, and after the war, he removed to Montour county, where he acquired land and farmed for the remainder of his life, dying in his ninety-third year. From a part of his farm, he laid out the town of Danville, where his son and grandson were born. A maternal great-grandfather John Danty also served in the Revolution, and was taken at the capture of Fort Freeland. The great-great-grandfather Martin Mackey, born in Ireland, was killed at the battle of the Brandywine. His son, Andrew Mackey, the great-grandfather, was a soldier in the War of 1812.

Mr. Sechler was educated in a private school in Adams county, O., and the public and high schools of Ironton and Cincinnati, and at Marietta college, being graduated from the Hughes high school of Cincinnati, in 1860, and Marietta college July 2, 1863. He was brought up quietly, his tastes inclining him toward books, but otherwise he grew up as any normal, healthy lad. He entered the service of his country sixteen days after graduation from college, serving in the Second Ohio Heavy Artillery from July, 1863, to June, 1865, as second lieutenant, later as first lieutenant. The scene of his service was Kentucky and eastern Tennessee. A portion of the time, he was on detached duty, serving successively as engineer officer, acting assistant quartermaster, post adjutant and provost marshal.

Returning to Cincinnati at the close of his service, Mr. Sechler was bookkeeper in that city, from 1865 to 1869, and in the latter year embarked in the manufacture of iron at Clarksville, Tenn., where he continued until 1877. In that year, he commenced manufacturing carriages with his father at Cincinnati, but in 1888, came to Moline, and in 1899 established his present plant, adding the production of agricultural implements in 1897.

He is a republican on national matters, casting his vote for Abraham Lincoln when he was candidate for the presidency the second time, and for every republican president, including William H. Taft, in 1908. On minor political issues, he generally votes the republican ticket, but has supported the man rather than the party. While residing in Tennessee, he was made a school trustee. He was postmaster at Vernon Furnace, Tenn., there being no other candidates for the office which paid about $40 per year. His other offices carried no salary. For forty-three years, he has been a member of the Blue Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and belongs to the Royal Arch Chapter, having joined it forty years ago; twenty years ago, he became a Knight Templar; three years ago, a Shriner. For thirty-two years, he has been a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and for twenty-seven years, has been a member of the Loyal Legion. Since its organization, he has been a member of the Moline Club, and of the After Dinner Club since its inception. Four years before moving to Moline, he joined the Lincoln Club of Cincinnati. While residing in Cincinnati, he joined the Presbyterian church, but has been a Congregationalist since coming to Moline.

On June 7, 1866, Mr. Sechler was married at Ironton, O., to Juliet Anna McCullough, born in West Union, O., daughter of Addison and Eliza McCullough of Virginia and South Carolina ancestry, respectively. Two sons born in 1867 and 1880, died in infancy. A daughter, Mary Addison, married Howard O. Edmonds of Chicago. Mr. Sechler owns his residence and factory property in Moline, and residence property in Cincinnati. He is one of the best known men in Rock Island county, and one of those commanding the deepest respect.

SEDAM, Cornelius, an honored veteran of the Civil war, and a man widely known and universally respected, has been a resident of Illinois since 1852. He was born near the little village of Florence, in Switzerland county, Ind., April 14, 1835, being a son of William and Sarah (O'Neil) Sedam. The father was born in New Jersey, but left there in boyhood with his parents, who settled in Indiana. The grandfather Nicholas Sedam was a German by birth, and after coming to this country, served in the Revolutionary war. A further sketch of the grandparents is to be found elsewhere in this work. William Sedam settled on forty-two acres of Buffalo Prairie township land in 1852, and died there. His children were: Rachel, Mrs. Duncan Dunn, who died in Windfall, Ind.; Maria Ann, Mrs. Byron Chapman, who died in Nebraska; Cornelius; Nancy Jane, Mrs. K. K. Parmenter, who died at Bedford, Ia.; Abram who is of Fremont, Neb., married (first) Sarah Ehret, and (second) Sarah Elser; and Nicholas, who died in childhood.

Cornelius Sedam was reared amid pioneer conditions both in Indiana and Illinois, attending school in an old log house in the woods, two miles from his home. When only ten years old he commenced plowing, and worked hard on the farm before coming to Illinois, being at that time about nineteen years old. Like so many of the Illinois farmer boys, when his country had need of him, he responded, and enlisted August 8, 1862, in Company B, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for three years, or until the close of the war. He was commanded by Captain Henry Cline and Colonel Richmond. Being on guard duty, he did not participate in any battles, but did his duty as ordered, and was honorably discharged. Returning home, he resumed his farming, and continued thus until his retirement in 1891.

On September 6, 1865, Mr. Sedam married Eliza Harbaugh, and located on the eighty acres in Buffalo Prairie township where he has since resided. The birth of Mrs. Sedam took place in Drury township, this county, September 8, 1843. Her grandfather, Samuel Harbaugh, died in this township, when an old man. He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. The maiden name of his wife was Margaret Gibbs. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sedam were: Persis Harbaugh; John, of Edgington, who married Minnie Dusenberg, issue—Selma, Rupert, Raymond and Cornelius; William, of Buffalo Prairie township, who married May Dusenberg, issue—Frances, Otis, Elsie, Clifford, Esther and William; Melvin, of Andalusia, who married Elsie Kane, issue—Artis and Clarence; Sarah, who is Mrs. James Dusenberg of Buffalo Prairie township, issue—Lester, Ithamer, Delta, Mona, Anstie, Austin and John; Dora, who is Mrs. Valentine Lenz of Mercer county, issue—Alice, Mildred, Irene, Leota, Nancy and Lois; Charles, of Rock Island, who married Anna Harbaugh, issue—Dorothy and Virginia; and Anstie Marie, who is at home.

Mr. Sedam is a member of the W. J. Wylie Post, G. A. R., No. 377 of Illinois City. In polities, he is a staunch republican, although formerly a democrat. He is a sound, reliable man, whose conscientiousness has made him adhere to the principles he believed to be right, regardless of consequences. A good farmer and desirable citizen, he has fairly earned the confidence of his neighbors, and is a good representative of the veterans of Rock Island county.

SEDAM, James Thomas, a retired farmer, and a respected veteran of the Civil war, now residing in Illinois City, is one of the men who reflect honor upon their country, and prove that the "boys in blue" who defended their country so bravely fifty years ago, had something back of their patriotism, and that is solid worth. He was born in Switzerland county, Ind., March 30, 1846, being a son of Nicholas Sedam, born either in Indiana or a more eastern state, his father, also named Nicholas, having come to Indiana from New Jersey. The latter left Indiana and came to Illinois in 1855, bringing his son Nicholas with him. He bought 120 acres in Buffalo Prairie township, and died on his farm in 1870. Nicholas Sedam, the father, passed through pioneer days in both Indiana and Illinois, developed a farm, and died in Illinois City. His wife's maiden name was Margaret Kenneth. Their children were: James Thomas; George W., of Nebraska; Ann, Mrs. Edmund McNall, deceased, and an adopted daughter, Mary J., who married John Brayton.

Prior to coming to Illinois when he was nine years old, James Thomas Sedam went to school in a log schoolhouse, and after his arrival in Rock Island county, continued at school until fourteen or fifteen years old. He was reared on a farm, working for his father until 1864, when he enlisted for 100-days service in the Civil war, in Company K, One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Infantry. At the expiration of his period of enlistment, he came home, but in March of the following year, he re-enlisted, this time in Company I, Twenty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was finally discharged, March 4, 1866, at Brownsville, Tex. Once more returning home, he began farming for himself in Buffalo Prairie township, renting land, but later came into possession of forty acres and a nice home in Illinois City, with four acres of ground surrounding the house, owned by his wife.

On October 15, 1867, he married Elizabeth Brayton, of Illinois City, the Rev. John Young, pastor of the Baptist church of Edington township, performing the ceremony. She is a daughter of Steven and Catherine (Coleman) Brayton. Jacob Coleman, the maternal grandfather, came to Illinois City at an early day. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Sedam are: Rosa Lee, Mrs. Sidney Robison, of Grinnell, Ia.; Charles, of Rock Rapids, Ia., married Ida Holiday; Catherine, Mrs. William Fowler of Geneseo, Ill.; Margaret, Mrs. G. A. Rood of Moline; and Nellie, Mrs. F. T. Kelley, of Buffalo Prairie township. There are six grandchildren in the family. Having always worked hard and saved his money, Mr. Sedam is entitled to the rest he is now enjoying. As a soldier and private citizen he has always done his duty as he saw it, and is a most excellent man in every particular.

SEDAM, Peter.—Rock Island county is the home of some of the bravest of the men who, a half century ago marched to the defense of their country's liberties in time of need. One of those thus patriotic is Peter Sedam, now living retired in Illinois City. He was born in Switzerland county, Ind., January 31, 1837, a son of Nicholas and Rachel Ann Sedam, and a grandson of Graham Sedam. The father was born in New Jersey, and all his life was a farmer. Seeking for better opportunities, he first moved to Ohio, and then to Switzerland county, Ind. In 1854, with his and two other families, he came down the Ohio river on a raft, and on arriving in Rock Island county, bought land in Buffalo Prairie township and lived on it until his death in 1870, aged eighty-nine years. His wife passed away when sixty-three years old. Their children were: William, who died in 1855; Henry, who died in Missouri, married Lucy Sutton; Axie Ann, Mrs. Mitchell, who died in Indiana; Catherine, Mrs. Jacob Henry, who died in Illinois near Springfield; Abraham, who was accidentally shot in Indiana; Cornelius, deceased; Ellen, Mrs. Taylor Ross, who died in Missouri; Eliza, Mrs. Audry Harding, who died in Iowa; Thomas, who is a veteran of the Civil war, residing in Nebraska; Robert, who was a veteran of the Civil war, died in Indiana; Harriet, Mrs. Alexander Kennett, who died in Indiana in 1908; and Peter.

Peter Sedam was educated in the schools of his district, although his educational advantages were few. When old enough, he began helping on the farm. When fifteen years old, he began working among the farmers, and came to Illinois in 1854, with his brother William, driving three horses. Until his enlistment for service in the Civil war, he worked on farms, but in 1862, feeling that his country had need of him, entered Company B, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Cline and Colonel Beardsley. He received his discharge at Springfield, and was mustered out at Pine Bluff, Ark., after three years of service. Coming home, he resumed farming, and also went into a threshing business, carrying on the latter for twenty years, and during some years of this period owned his own machine. Finally, owing to his physical condition, for he never recovered from the effects of his military service, he was forced to give up farming.

On August 25, 1867, he was married to Sarah Elizabeth Morehead, daughter of John Morehead. They have one child, James Warren, of Rushmore, Minn. Mr. Sedam is a member of the W. J. Wylie Post, G. A. R. of Illinois City. In politics he is a republican, and while not holding any office, takes a pride in keeping abreast of current events, and exerting his influence to secure civic improvements.

SEDERHOLM, Carl Arvid Leonard, veterinary surgeon, is a man whose whole life has been devoted to his profession, with the result that he is recognized as one of the best in his line in this part of the state. He is conveniently located at No. 1129 Fifth avenue, Moline. Here he was born June 26, 1885, a son of John A. and Minnie (Johanson) Sederholm, natives of Sweden. The father was a tailor by trade, who came to this country about 1883.

Dr. Sederholm was educated in the Moline public schools and Chicago Veterinary College, and at the time of his graduation was the youngest veterinary surgeon in the United States. It was because of his love for animals, and his desire to know how to relieve their suffering, that Dr. Sederholm entered into his present calling. His training has been a careful one, and as he is so interested in his work, his success has been marked from the first. Animals are very like human beings, for they appreciate and respond to affection and sympathy, and no veterinary can render efficient aid who does not have the ability to get into close touch with them. Dr. Sederholm's practice not only extends all over Rock Island county, but surrounding territory, and he is regarded as an expert in his profession. His whole life has been relegated to his work, as he takes no interest in outside matters, and the results are shown in his skill and ability. Brought up in the Lutheran church he is a member of that religious denomination. As yet, Dr. Sederholm is unmarried.

SEEFELDT, Theodore.—Farming is a calling that appeals to many who like the open-air work and the independence it secures them. They are satisfied with the profits and develop into prosperous and respected citizens of the community in which they reside. One of those who has won more than ordinary success as an agriculturist, is Theodore Seefeldt, born at Davenport, Iowa, November 28, 1859, a son of Christian and Maria (Kuhlman) Seefeldt, natives of Germany, born in 1830 and 1828, respectively. They came to America in 1857, locating at Davenport, Iowa, where, until 1875, the father did general work, but in that year began farming. Later he bought land in Rock Island county, remaining there until 1895, when he moved to Andalusia, and there he died June 4, 1906, his wife passing away March 14, 1903. The children of these parents were: Mrs. August Hass of Davenport, Iowa, who is a widow; Henry, who is of Muscatine, Iowa; Sophia, who is the wife of George Kuhn; Theodore; Christian, who is of Houston, Texas; Frank, who is of Big Island, Ill.; August, who is of Red Oak, Iowa; and Mrs. Richard Payne, who is of Spring county, Colo.

Theodore Seefeldt was educated in the public schools of Iowa, and in 1883 began farming for himself. In 1886 he went to Sanborn county,

S. D., but after one summer returned to Illinois and bought a farm in Andalusia township on which he resided for fourteen years. He then lived in the village of Andalusia for two years, returning to rural life in 1905. He owns 113½ acres of excellent land in Black Hawk township, and has it in prime condition. He served as road commissioner in Andalusia township for twelve years, and is a school director at present, being a republican. Reared in the German Lutheran church, he is interested in religious work. Fraternally he belongs to Milan Camp, No. 67, of M. W. A. On February 12, 1889, Theodore Seefeldt was married to Lucy Einfeldt, born April 23, 1868, a daughter of Christian and Anna Einfeldt, natives of Germany, who came to the United States in 1865 and 1867. They were married at Rock Island June 11, 1867. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Einfeldt were: Mrs. Seefeldt; John of Rock Island county; Emma, wife of James Bostock of Rock Island; Anna, wife of Frank Pain, Maquoketa, Iowa; Mary, wife of Julius Hass of Davenport, Iowa; Emelia, wife of William Breed of Rock Island; and Sophia, widow of George Kuhl, of Buffalo, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Seefeldt became the parents of the following children: Emma, born in 1894; Julia, born in 1897; Roy, born in 1899; Myrtle, born in 1901; and Henrietta, born in 1905. The success which has attended Mr. Seefeldt's efforts has been marked, but it has been deserved, and he is a recognized authority upon matters relating to agriculture.

SELLERS, Robert.—There was a time when men seemed to fail to appreciate the possibilities of agriculture, and to flock to the large centers of industry, but the tide has turned, and the words "back to the soil" have aroused wide-spread attention. One of the men intelligently engaged in farming in Rock Island county is Robert Sellers, owner of 200 acres of rich farming land in Buffalo Prairie township, known as the Philip Frye farm. Mr. Sellers was born in Mercer county, Ill., near Hamlet, March 7, 1865, a son of Hiram and Sarah (Leeds) Sellers. The father was born near Cincinnati, O., August 11, 1839, and was brought up to be a farmer and later became a minister of the Methodist church. He survives, residing at Gordon City, Okla., having gone there in 1906, but the mother died in 1888, aged forty-six years. They had children as follows: John, Robert, Charles, Oscar, George, Lee, Pearl and Nellie. In politics, the father has always been a republican.

Robert Sellers was educated in the public schools, attending until seventeen years old, when he began working by the day for his father, and thus continued for three years, when he went to Iowa. There he remained five years, then returned to Illinois, and about 1902 bought his present property, upon which he has made many improvements, and has developed it into one of the best farms in the township.

On September 15, 1886, Mr. Sellers married Mrs. Mattie Louis, daughter of Walter and Sarah Elliott, natives of Pennsylvania, who came to Illinois at an early age, locating in Mercer county. Mr. Elliott survives, aged seventy-nine years, but the mother died in 1899. Mr. and Mrs. Sellers are the parents of children as follows: Arthur, who married Anna Wineard; Walter; Wilson; Sarah, who married Charles Ward of Edginton township; and Sylvia, Mertle and Mabel. Mr. Sellers is independent in his political convictions. For some years he served as postmaster. He is an excellent farmer, thrifty business man and good neighbor, and is respected by those with whom he is associated in the common events of life.

SEXTON, John William.—Stock raising combined with farming has proven a very profitable calling, and some of the agriculturists of Rock Island county have gained a national fame for the quality of their product. One of those who have featured the breeding and raising of high-grade stock is John William Sexton of Cordova township, manager of the Oak Grove Stock Farm. He was born in Henderson county, N. J., October 10, 1851, being a son of Jared and Ashrah (Wert) Sexton, natives of New Jersey, who, in 1860, came to Rock Island county, settling in Cordova township. Here the father farmed extensively, owning land in Coe township as well. In 1907 he retired, and now lives at Cordova. His wife passed away January 5, 1909. Their children were: John William; Mary Ann, Mrs. George Gale of Warren, Ill.; Sarah Elizabeth, deceased; Anna May, Mrs. Fred Smith of Cordova; Joseph R., deceased; Lucy, Mrs. Oscar Marshall of Clinton, Iowa.

John William Sexton was educated in the district schools and grew up to farm work, assisting his father until he was twenty-three years old. He then engaged as express messenger with the American Express Company, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, and remained with this company for seven years. For the following ten years he occupied the same position on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, and nine years on the Illinois Central Railroad, but then on account of illness, he was forced to seek some other kind of work. With this end in view, he moved to Cordova and became manager of the Charles R. Marshall farm of 144 acres. This farm is a stock farm of Hampshire hogs, Durham shorthorn cattle, Shropshire sheep and Percheron horses, all registered. Since Mr. Sexton took charge of it, there has been a remarkable increase in the quality and quantity of the product, and he exhibits at all the stock shows of the country.

Mr. Sexton was married April 22, 1886, at Cordova, to Mary Isola Marshall, born at Cordova, daughter of George and Eliza Jane (McCall) Marshall, natives of New Jersey and Pennsylvania, respectively, very early settlers of Rock Island county. Mr. and Mrs. Sexton have no children. Mr. Sexton is a democrat and has served as alderman for two years. In May, 1911, he was elected mayor of the town, and is giving the people a sane, business-like administration, having in view the inauguration and carrying out of some much needed reforms. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias, Crescent Lodge No. 23 of Milwaukee, Wis. A man of advanced ideas, public-spirited and willing to sacrifice much for the good of his town. Mr. Sexton is a good official and fine business man, and is very popular with the people whom he is serving as executive.

SHAHAN, Daniel H.—In order to farm successfully, it is necessary to possess a thorough and intimate knowledge of the work in all of its details, and to use good common sense in the various operations relating to agricultural life. One of the prosperous farmers of Rock Island county is Daniel H. Shahan, born one-half mile north of Edginton, in Rock Island county, June 2, 1867. He is a son of Patrick and Katherine (Ohuran) Shahan, natives of Ireland, where the father was born about 1821 and the mother about 1822. They came to the United States in 1851. Mr. Shahan secured his naturalization papers in time to vote at the presidential election of 1856. He and his wife settled on 120 acres in Rock Island county, and lived there nine years. They then moved north of Edginton, and this place was their home for six years. The next change took them a mile south and one west of Edginton, but after six years, removal was made to a farm a mile south of the same village. After three years in the new place, Mr. Shahan and his wife moved to the home now owned by their son, Daniel H. Shahan, and there the father died in 1893, his widow surviving him until 1909, when she passed away, aged eighty years. Their children were: Charles, of Victor, Colo.; Richard, of the same place; John, who is of Rock Island county; Mary, who is of Rock Island county; Daniel H.; Katherine, who is at home; Elizabeth, who is of Omaha, Neb.; and Honora, who died in 1861. Both these parents were members of St. Patrick's Catholic church. The father was a democrat, and served as pathmaster for years.

Daniel H. Shahan lives on the family homestead of 120 acres known as Walnut Grove farm. It is one and one-half miles south, and one-half mile east of Edginton, and is beautifully located. Mr. Shahan is a member of Camp No. 404, M. W. A., of Edginton. For the past three years he has served very acceptably as road commissioner. A man of sound principles, he is recognized as a good citizen, and his success in farming makes him an authority on all matters pertaining to agriculture.

SHASER, Frank.—Farming is an occupation that gives large returns for the investment made in time and money and those engaged in this line of endeavor in Rock Island county are amply rewarded. One of the prosperous agriculturists of this locality is Frank Shaser, born in Edginton township July 3, 1877, a son of Christopher Shaser, who, with his wife, was born in Switzerland. They came to the United States at an early date, the father becoming a farmer of Scott county, Iowa. The mother died when Frank Shaser was only six years old, and the lad was reared in the family of Fred W. Schmidt. When he attained his majority he left these people and began farming for Fred Garnet of Rock Island county; later going with Albert Hoffer. In 1898 he made a trip south, having in mind locating in Alabama, but not being satisfied, he returned to Illinois, and began working in the store of Crawford & Garnet at Taylor Ridge. For two years he continued with this firm, and then rented the L. V. Eckhardt farm, operating it for five years. He then took the M. D. McLaughlin farm south of Edgington, remaining on it for two years. By this time he was able to buy the Johnston farm, but sold it within six months, to purchase eighty acres of the old Eckhardt farm. This he also sold in 1910 and moved to his present farm in that same year.

Frank Shaser was married March 5, 1902, to Alma H. Stropes, daughter of Hugh and Martha (Jones) Stropes, who were both born in Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Shaser are members of the Methodist church. Mr. Shaser is a republican, but has not desired public office. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 404 of Taylor Ridge, having joined it in 1901. He has been successful in his farming ventures and is one of the wide-awake, progressive men of his locality.

SHAVE, Frederick J.—The possessor of a productive Rock Island county farm is fortunate in these days of heavy demand for foodstuffs, and the farmers of this region are recognizing the remarkable possibilities of their land, and through scientific management, making it produce bumper crops thus raising the agricultural average of this portion of the state. One of the men thus representative of the best class of farmers of the county is Frederick J. Shave, owner of 120 acres in Buffalo Prairie township. Having spent many years in tilling land, he has rented it during recent years, but has not lost his interest in it or agricultural matters. He was born in Holstein, Germany, August 12, 1850, a son of Claus and Dora (Misfeldt) Shave. During the troubles of 1848 Claus Shave served for three years in the German army, and was a brave soldier. During the latter forties and early fifties the German provinces experienced terrible poverty and many of the people came to the United States, Claus Shave arriving here in 1855, with his wife and three children, landing at New York City on July 5. He came from there to Rock Island county, locating on a farm, which he rented, in Hampton township, and there he spent the balance of his well-regulated life, dying in 1893. His wife died in 1881, and both were excellent people and conscientious members of the Lutheran church. Their children were: John, deceased; Frederick J.; Hans, a farmer of Hampton township;

Mary, deceased; and Frank, of Hampton township.

Frederick J. Shave was five years old when he was brought to the United States and grew up in Rock Island county, attending the district schools and learning to farm. Remaining at home until he was twenty-two years old, he then began farming for himself, renting for one year, when he bought forty acres in Hampton township. Later he sold this and rented his brother-in-law's farm in Hampton township for six years. In February, 1905, he bought 120 acres, upon which he settled. Frederick J. Shave was married in Hampton township, December 12, 1876, to Mary Belling of that township, daughter of Andrew Belling. Mrs. Shave died February 25, 1910, a consistent member of the German Lutheran church, as is her husband. She was a lady of lovely character, charitable and religious, and her loss is deeply felt by her sorrowing family. Mr. and Mrs. Shave became the parents of children as follows: Hans Andrew, born October 31, 1879; Amelia, born September 17, 1882, married Walter Tomkins and they live in Buffalo Prairie township, issue, Harold; Anna Louisa, born October 18, 1884, married December 26, 1906, Charles Miller, son of William Miller; Louis, born July 12, 1889, and William Albert, born June 17, 1892, died October 6, 1903. Frederick J. Shave is a democrat. He belongs to the order of the Northern Star.

SHEAN, Daniel J.—Those builders and contractors who understand their work and prosecute it intelligently and honestly, succeed, especially in a locality like Rock Island county, where the demand is heavy and steady. One of the men who has accomplished much in this line, not only accumulating a desirable fortune, but having to his credit some of the most substantial structures in this section, is Daniel J. Shean, of No. 609 Thirteenth avenue, Rock Island, who owns his home and is one of the reliable men of his city. He was born at Rock Island, in 1870, a son of Daniel and Celia (Nolt) Shean. The father was born in Ireland, and died twenty years ago, at Quincy, Ill., but is buried at Rock Island. His widow, born in Pennsylvania, survives, making her home at Rock Island. They had nine children, six of whom survive: John, deceased; Mary; William; Dennis; John, deceased; Daniel J.; Nellie, deceased; James and Maggie, the latter the wife of Thomas Lynch.

Daniel J. Shean was reared in his native city, where he attended school until he started to work in the sawmills. Later, he went into the sash and door works, after which he spent eleven years with the Rock Island Plow Company. For four years more he was in the freight house of the Chicago Burlington & Quincy Railroad. Leaving this road, he established himself in a building and contracting business, and has been remarkably successful. His progress is entirely due to his own efforts, as he is a self-made man.

In 1891 he married Rosa Fasserl, a native of Rock Island, who died June 2, 1902. In 1911 he married (second) Mrs. Anna McKinney. Four children were born of his first marriage: Frank, Henry, Clara, and Marie, deceased. His religious connections are with the Catholic church. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. A live, energetic business man, Mr. Shean has done his full duty and reaped a commensurate reward.

SHEPPARD, Frank E., one of the prosperous merchants of Rock Island county, belongs to one of the pioneer families of this region, being of the third generation to live in the county. He was born in Zuma township, August 19, 1878, youngest child of William and Tamer C. (Metcalf) Sheppard, natives of Hendrysburg, Belmont county, O. The grandparents were Nathan and Elizabeth (Greene) Sheppard and Abram and Nancy (Murphy) Metcalf, all natives of Ohio. Abram and Nancy Metcalf spent their early life in Ohio and there their children were born and he died. After his death in 1854 Mrs. Metcalf brought her children to Zuma township, and there spent the remainder of her life. The Sheppard family came here about the same time and located nearby, becoming owners of a tract of land lying in Zuma and Coe townships, where they developed a large and valuable farm. They spent the remainder of their lives on this place. The parents of Frank E. Sheppard were married December 9, 1855, and located on a large farm in Zuma and Canoe Creek townships, where they remained until three years before the father's death, when he retired from active life and moved to Hillsdale, Ill., here dying July 26, 1905. His widow still surviving, makes her home at Hillsdale. They had children as follows: Rachel Ann, born June 6, 1857, died March 4, 1885; Mary M. is Mrs. E. T. Howard, of Chicago; Flora B. is Mrs. E. L. Jamerson, of Norwood, Mo.; Grace M., born January 31, 1871, died October 21, 1893, and Frank E.

Frank E. Sheppard attended the district schools until fifteen years old, when he spent one year in school at Port Byron and then one year at the Gustus School of Business at Moline. He remained with his parents until his marriage in 1898, to Miss Emma Malmberg, who was born in Moline, July 9, 1877, a daughter of John and Charlotte (Olson) Malmberg, natives of Sweden. Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard have three children: Muriel M., born April 24, 1899; Grace M., born March 28, 1902; Florence E., born March 9, 1905. After marriage they spent five years on his father's homestead, which he conducted, when they removed to Moline, and be there engaged in an express and transfer business. Two years later he sold his interests in that city and returned to the home farm which he conducted four years more. At the end of that time he came to Hillsdale and bought out the only hardware business in the city, now carrying a modern, high class line of goods, having established himself in the confidence and good will of the community. He enjoys a liberal patronage and is considered a desirable, useful citizen. A republican in politics, fraternally he is connected with Philo Lodge No. 436, A. F. & A. M., of Port Byron; Hillsdale Camp No. 43, M. W. A.; and M. W. No. 109, also of that place.

SHERARD, Joseph (deceased).—No one stands higher in public opinion in Rock Island county than the late Joseph Sherrard, who, although no longer among those with whom he was associated for so many busy seasons, still is remembered. He was born in Franklin county Pennsylvania, October 8, 1815, being a son of David and Elizabeth (Gilbert) Sherrard. She was born in the North of Ireland in 1781, and he in Pennsylvania in 1782. They were married in Pennsylvania. David Sherrard was a son of Joseph Sherrard, also born in the North of Ireland, who emigrated to America about 1776, settling in Path Valley, Franklin county, Pa. He married and had the following family by his first wife: William who settled at Winchester, Va.; Robert; Lewis; Jennie; Martha who married a Mr. McConnell. After the death of his first wife, he married again, and had six children as follows: John married Lena Gilbert; James; David; Samuel; Margaret and Joseph.

David Sherrard, son of Joseph, came to America in boyhood and was a farmer all his life. He lived for a short time in Path Valley, but then went to Pittsburgh, with his parents, and was there when General Lafayette passed through that city in 1824. At that time Joseph Sherrard was about nine years old, and his father lifted him in his arms, above the throng to let him see the hero. From Pittsburgh, David Sherrard, his family and brother John and his family went to Mercer county, Pa., where John died. The grandfather and wife joined David here, where the latter died, aged fifty-five years. His widow survived until 1870, when she passed away, aged eighty-eight years. Their children were: William who lived in Lawrence county, Pa., married Elizabeth Baldwin and died at Cambridge, Ill., in 1905, having been born in 1812; Joseph; David, who came to Mercer county, Ill., with Joseph, died in Mercer county, in 1908, aged ninety years, and had married Elizabeth Sowers; Henrietta and Mary Ann, both died in Pennsylvania, aged 16 and 9 years respectively; James married Sarah A. Ash, came to Illinois in 1856, and died in Mercer county, in 1881.

Joseph Sherrard was a small boy when his parents set out for the West. He only secured three months' schooling, but educated himself. He and his wife were married in Mercer county, Pa., and with his family and brother David and his family landed in Rock Island in 1854. Mr. Sherrard bought 160 acres in Preemption township, Mercer county, paying $1,000 for it, cash down. At first he built a small frame house on the prairie and tilled his land until he retired to Reynolds, in 1889. Later, he bought Park Lodge, a farm of 200 acres in Bowling township, in 1875, and in 1895, his two daughters, Misses Rachel and Henrietta moved on this property, they having bought the farm where their mother died in 1898. Mr. Sherrard died in Reynolds in 1890. He was a republican, and staunch in his support of his party. The children born to him and wife were: Saline, Mrs. Elisha Albury, who died in 1900, at Park Lodge; David W., who died at Park Lodge in 1907; Joseph S., who died in 1908; Henrietta, who is at home; John A., who lives in Texas; Rachel A.; Elizabeth J., who is Mrs. Elliott Snyder of Nebraska; and James H. of Kansas City, Mo., who married Lillie Dawson. The sisters have built a beautiful home at Park Lodge, which they have developed into one of the finest estates in Rock Island county. The family is one of the oldest and most honored in this part of the state, and Mr. Sherrard will long be remembered as a man of unquestioned integrity, great natural ability and one who possesses the requisite knowledge to intelligently develop material resources. In every relation of life he was a fine man.

SHIELDS, John Thomas.—The demands made upon the modern grocer by his customers are exacting and almost unending. They require that he keep a full stock of varied green and staple foodstuffs, display them pleasingly, and offer them at prices that will suit the purses of all. One of the grocers who has built up an excellent trade in Rock Island, is John T. Shields, who enjoys the reputation of having one of the largest establishments in the three cities. Mr. Shields was born in Rock Island March 6, 1869, and has spent his life here, now residing at No. 1628 Twenty-second street. He is a son of Edward and Margaret (McMahon) Shields, the former born in County West Meath, Ireland, January 1, 1821, and the latter in County Monahan, in May, 1822. They were married in New Haven in 1850. After a year in New Haven they went to New York City, and thence came to Rock Island in 1854. Edward Shields was a railroad man, who rounded out a useful life, dying October 28, 1903. His wife died May 12, 1911.

After attending the common schools John Shields began working in a grocery, and gradually advanced until he founded his present store on March 18, 1889, on Fifth avenue. From the start he has kept on adding to his operations, until now his trade covers a wide territory. He is president of the Blake Specialty Company, manufacturers of plumbing specialties. Politically he is a democrat. Fraternally he is a Knight of Columbus, Allouez council; a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and Western Catholic Union, and the Catholic Order of Foresters. He belongs to St. Joseph's parish.

Mr. Shields finds great pleasure in his modern home at 1628 Twenty-second street and with his wife and four interesting children. These are: John T., Jr., who is attending St. Joseph's College at Dubuque, Iowa.; Elizabeth M., who is attending The Villa De Chantle of Rock Island; and Margaret Mary and Anna Katherine, who are at home.

SHIRKEY, Allen Jefferson, who is one of the best known citizens of Drury township, Rock Island county, resides on the old family homestead with his two sisters, Sarah and Mary Shirkey, the three representing what was once a large family. They are grandchildren of Patrick and Sarah (Allen) Shirkey, who were of Irish descent but were natives of Virginia, near Richmond. The grandfather was a farmer and in 1842 he moved to Mercer county, Ill., and three years later moved to Drury township in Rock Island county. Seven children were born to them: James; John, who died in Indiana; Mary, who married William Rutherford, both died in Mercer county, Ill.; Nicholas died and was buried in Union county, Pa.; Elizabeth, who is now Mrs. Preston Manen, lives in Mercer county, Ill.; Becky Ann, Mrs. James Manen, both died in Mercer county and were buried in Eliza graveyard; George; and Frank, who died in Carroll county, Ia., where his second wife yet lives.

James Shirkey, father of Allen Jefferson Shirkey, was born in Virginia, August 10, 1810, and accompanied his parents to Mercer county, Ill., in 1842. He lived there until early in 1846, when he came to Drury township, Rock Island county. In 1852 he was married to Eliza Rutherford, the Shirkeys and Rutherfords having come to Illinois together. After marriage James Shirkey engaged in farming later entering a claim for eighty acres, on which land he built a nice home and made many improvements. Here his long and worthy life was passed, which was prolonged to an unusual length, he being the oldest man in Drury township when he died, February 22, 1903, aged ninety-three years, six months and twelve days, and his burial was in the Reynolds cemetery. James Shirkey helped to unload the first engine that ran over the Rock Island Railroad from Muscatine to Rock Island and was a passenger on the first train out of Muscatine for Rock Island. To James and Eliza Shirkey five sons and four daughters were born: William Patrick, who died at Denver, Col., his remains being brought back and laid by those of his wife in the Montezuma cemetery; Sarah Ann, who resides on the homestead; John, who was born in 1837, died in 1849, and was buried in the Illinois City cemetery; Mary Elizabeth, who resides on the old homestead; George Washington, who was born in 1841, died in 1847; Oliver James, who lives at Muscatine; Allen Jefferson; Margaret Eliza, who was born in 1847, died at the age of fifteen years; and Rebecca Jane, who is Mrs. Bradford Whaley, of Des Moines, Ia. Of the above family, Oliver James Shirkey was born February 20, 1843, and in 1868 married Rebecca Miksell. Mr. Shirkey worked on the home farm until the Civil War broke out, when he became a soldier, enlisting in Company I, One Hundred and Fortieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served through his first enlistment of ninety days. He re-enlisted in Company A, Sixtieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, which became a part of General Hatch's division, being a part of the army that followed General Sherman on his famous march to the sea. He participated in the grand review at Washington, and received his honorable discharge August 4, 1865, after a gallant and meritorious service. After the war closed he came back to Drury township for one year, then went to Boone county, where he was married, and remained until the fall of that year, when he again returned to Drury township and until 1882 he cultivated rented land, but in that year purchased a small farm on the Illinois City road. In 1910 he retired and moved to Muscatine, Ia. The following children were born to Oliver James Shirkey and wife: a babe that died; Willard J., born March 29, 1870, died in 1873, and was buried in Reynolds cemetery; Eliza Ann, who is now Mrs. Joseph Bengle, lives on the old home place in Drury township; Sarah Ann, born July 31, 1874, married M. Kesler, and died in Mercer county, August 20, 1904, and was buried in Buffalo Prairie Cemetery; Louisa, born April 2, 1877, died May 1, 1877; Clara, born November 17, 1879, died September 22, 1881, and both were buried in Reynolds cemetery; Mecia, Mrs. Oran Rabedeaux, lives at Muscatine, Ia.; and Lona, resides there with their parents. Mr. Shirkey is a member of Shelby Norman Post No. 231, G. A. R.

Allen Jefferson Shirkey obtained a district school education but his advantages were few, his father requiring his services on the farm as soon as he was old enough to give practical help and he remained at home until 1891. In that year he went to Clay county, Kans., where he took up a Government claim, on which he lived for two years and then sold and went to Kit Carson county, Colo., and took up another claim on which he lived for eighteen months and then returned to Drury township but he retained his Colorado land until 1910. On the death of his father, the old homestead became the property of himself and two unmarried sisters and here they reside in comfort and contentment. They are all well known and are universally esteemed.

SHOEMAKER, William J.—Rock Island county not only contains two large cities, but a number of flourishing villages which compare favorably with the more extensive communities, and in many instances offer exceptional opportunities to those progressive business men who know how to grasp them. One of the men who is making a success of his enterprise is William J. Shoemaker of Sears, proprietor of the reliable transfer company there. He was born in Columbia county, Pa., in 1848, a son of Jesse and Margaret (Newhart) Shoemaker, natives of Pennsylvania. The father was an iron ore miner in his native state, but both he and his wife are now deceased.

William J. Shoemaker grew to manhood in his native place, attending school, and working on the farm. When he was eighteen years old, he began learning the shoemaking trade. In 1877 he came to Rock Island county and located at Milan, and was fireman in the paper mill at that place for fourteen years. Leaving there in 1892 he came to Sears, and recognizing the need of a first-class transfer service, established his present line. Mr. Shoemaker owns his home and three lots, and is one of the substantial men of his community.

In 1873 Mr. Shoemaker was married to Susan Alice Yenger of Buck Horn, Pa. They have had six children: Mary, Joseph, Grace, Jennie, and Louis and Lillie, deceased. In politics he has always been a democrat. In 1905 he was elected on that ticket as a member of the village board of trustees, and has rendered valuable service to Sears, in that capacity. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Shoemaker is a man universally respected, who has many warm personal friends among his business associates.

SIEGRIST, John, is one of the best known business men in Rock Island, Ill., where his entire life has been spent and where his family has been prominent since a very early day in its history. He was born here October 14, 1843, a son of John and Ann (McBratney) Siegrist, natives of France and Belfast, Ireland, respectively, the father born October 14, 1814, and the mother March 29, 1805. John Siegrist, Sr., a teamster by occupation, came to America in 1825 and settled in Chicago, whence he came soon afterward to Rock Island. He served in the Civil war in Company F, One Hundred Forty-sixth Illinois Infantry, and was a highly respected citizen, and he and his family became well known in this city. There were two sons and one daughter in the family, but the only one now surviving is John, whose name heads this sketch.

John Siegrist was educated in the Rock Island public schools and as a young man worked in the sawmill of Mead, Smith & Marsh, who later sold to Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann. He established a retail ice business on his own account in 1878, and does business throughout a large part of the city, stands high in public regard and is numbered with the public-spirited and desirable citizens. He is a member of Trio Lodge No. 57, A. F. & A. M., Chapter No. 18, R. A. M., and Rock Island Commandery, K. T. Politically he is a democrat. He owns a comfortable residence at No. 428 Third street.

Mr. Siegrist was married in Davenport, November 25, 1885, to Ella Devoe, daughter of Anthony and Lucinda Devoe, the father born in 1829 and her mother in 1830, both natives of New York. The family came to Rock Island in 1870 and made a permanent residence here. They had four children, Mrs. Siegrist and three sons, Mrs. Siegrist and one son being the only survivors of the children. Mr. and Mrs. Devoe both died in Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Siegrist have one son, George, born August 21, 1886, who was educated in the schools of Rock Island, and now is manager of his father's ice business. He married Jessie Hasson of Moline.

SIEVERS, Jasper.—Rock Island county offers almost unbounded opportunities for the various building interests, owing not only to the changes going on in business and residential sections, combined with the influx of population, but the fact of the location here of governmental offices and structures. Some of the most intelligent builders and contractors of the country early recognized the possibilities of this locality, and taking Rock Island as a basis of operation, have carried on an immense business that has rewarded them generously for their time and efforts. One of those thus fortunate is Jasper Sievers, of No. 1913 Tenth avenue.

Mr. Sievers was born in Holstein, Germany, in 1855, son of Jasper and Margaret (Scheidelmann) Sievers. The father died in 1901, and his wife followed him the next day, both passing away in Germany. In 1881 Mr. Sievers came to the United States, and locating at Rock Island, worked as a carpenter for seven years, when he established himself in a contracting and building business, continuing it for the following twenty-three years. He owns three houses which he rents. In politics, he is a republican. Mr. Siever has never married.

As this city has yielded him a good income, he feels grateful to it, and interested in its further development, being willing to do anything within his power to aid in its advancement. His work contributes materially towards this end, for his houses and business blocks are of a substantial nature, calculated to withstand the ravages of time.

SIEVERS, John, an industrious farmer and a man of progressive ideas residing in Black Hawk township, was born in Holstein, Germany, February 23, 1867, son of Jacob and Ann (Stah-johann) Sievers, both also natives of Germany. The father was a farmer and laborer and never left his native country, where he died in 1908, his wife passing away there in 1893. They were parents of seven children, six of whom now survive: Henry of Davenport, Ia.; John of Milan; Martin of Coal Valley, Ill.; and Katherine, William and Heine of Germany.

Mr. Sievers attended the public schools of his native country until he was fifteen years old and one year later sailed from Hamburg for New York, whence he came on to Davenport, Ia., remaining but a short time, when he went to South Moline township, and lived there for eight years. He then rented a farm near South Moline and lived on it until 1901. In 1900, he bought his present home and brought his family to live on it February 13, 1901. He owns 122 acres of good farm land, located on section 30, and has made improvements in the farm since he has owned it, erecting new sheds and barns and in other ways adding to its appearance and value. For the past six years he has been school director of district No. 62, and for the same length of time has held the office of pathmaster of Black Hawk township. He is a democrat in national affairs but in local matters prefers to vote for the man he considers best fitted to hold office and further the interests and welfare of the township and county. Affiliated with the Court of Honor, he is connected with Court No. 488, of Moline.

On April 5, 1894, Mr. Sievers married Miss Mary Stadler, born at Hampton, Ill., July 4, 1871, daughter of Jacob and Emma (Hassen) Stadler. The former died at South Moline, October 1, 1910, and is buried in the Lutheran cemetery at South Rock Island, while the latter resides with two sons at South Moline. Jacob Stadler was an early settler of Rock Island county and father of six children: Mrs. Sievers; Martha, who is the wife of Richard Allison, of South Moline; John, who is deceased, is buried in Lutheran cemetery; and Henry and Charles who are of East Moline. Mr. and Mrs. Sievers have had ten children: Mabel, born in South Moline, November 1, 1895; Ida, September 19, 1897; Walter, January 29, 1899; Helen, September 25, 1900; Bert, born in Black Rock township, April 16, 1902; Frank, October 23, 1903; John, July 12, 1905; Ralph, June 28, 1907; Earl, March 30, 1909; and Gertrude R., August 11, 1912.

SIEVERS, Martin.—The German element in Rock Island county is strong, and has contributed largely towards its material prosperity. The German-born American citizen is admittedly a desirable one, for he combines with intense loyal patriotism a keen business sense that allows him to not only advance himself, but his neighborhood as well. One of the best representatives of this thoroughly reliable class of citizens is Martin Sievers of Coal Valley. He was born in Germany, in 1871, being a son of Jacob and Anna (Stagoham) Sievers, who never left their native land, both dying in Germany. The following children were born to them: Claus (deceased), Henry, John, Martin, Katherine, Willis and Heinrich. Henry came to Davenport when sixteen years of age, in 1881, and two years later, John arrived at Moline. In 1888, they returned to Germany on a visit, bringing their brother Martin back with them to Moline. The remaining children are now married and reside in Germany.

During his boyhood, Martin Sievers attended school, and was well grounded in the primary branches. Upon his arrival in Moline in 1889 he farmed for two months, then locating in Coal Valley, secured employment in the brickyards. Here he worked during the summer, and mined in the winter. Always working hard, and carefully saving, he became interested in the new Eureka mine, owned by Pryce and Sievers. Later he sold his interest, and is now engaged as bookkeeper, secretary and treasurer.

In 1897, Mr. Sievers married Emma Prout, born in England, April 7, 1876, the Rev. Brown of Cable, Ill., officiating. Her father, Harry Prout, native of Cornwall, England, came to America about 1880, living in Colorado for some time and later removing to Edwards, Ill., where he remained for several years. He then moved to Cable, Ill., and later to Bevere, Mo., living there for two years, then went to Sherrard, Ill. Here his wife, Elizabeth A., whom he had married in England, died. Her parents never came to the United States, both having died in England, little being known of them. After the death of his wife, Mr. Prout came to Coal Valley, and made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Sievers, until his death, which occurred in August, 1906. Both mother and father are interred in the cemetery at Sherrard, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Prout were the parents of four children: John H. and Mary Anna, who are deceased; Mrs. Sievers, and John, who is of Sherrard, has two sons: John K. and Dale.

Mr. and Mrs. Sievers are the parents of the following children: Lester John, who is attending school, Vyra, and Gracey, who died in 1906. Mr. Sievers is not a politician, but casts his vote for the man he deems best suited for the office in question. The German Lutheran church holds his membership, and receives a generous contribution from him annually. Fraternally, he is connected with the order of the Elks. In 1912 he purchased 164 acres in Marinette county, Wis., is the owner of two business blocks at Colona, Ill., and also has property at Coal Valley and Rock Island. Coming here a mere lad, with little or no knowledge of the language, Mr. Sievers has achieved a remarkable success, and deserves much credit for his progress.

SIKES, Reuben W. (deceased), spent a large part of his life in Rock Island county, where he now has several living descendants, and where he is well remembered by many of the earlier settlers. He was a native of Palmer, N. Y., born June 25, 1825, a son of Warner and Martha (McNary) Sikes. The parents, natives of New York and Connecticut, were Mormons by religious preference, and were married in the east. They came to Nauvoo, Ill., about 1838, and there the father died in 1842. In 1844 the mother moved with a son and daughter to Hampton, Ill. Reuben W. Sikes began his education in his native state, completing it in Illinois, and at the age of fourteen years engaged in farm work, which he continued, in connection with other occupations, until the Civil war, at which time he was a clerk for a merchant at Hampton. He enlisted in 1864 in Company D, Ninth Illinois Cavalry, serving one year with credit to himself and his company. He then returned to Hampton and became a painter and paper-hanger, continuing in that occupation as long as his health would permit.

Mr. Sikes was married (first) in 1852 to Caroline Welding, a native of Canada, and they became parents of one child, May, who is now deceased. Mrs. Sikes died in 1855. On June 21, 1863, Mr. Sikes married (second) Maria J. Payne, who was born in Greene county, Ill., February 13, 1836, a daughter of Jeremiah and Letitia Marea (Orr) Payne, her father born in Long Island, N. Y., January 1, 1812, and her mother born in Ohio February 16, 1816. The grandfather Orr was killed in the Black Hawk war and his widow, who was born at Lancaster, Pa., March 12, 1790, died at Mount Sterling, Ill., March 18, 1858. Mr. and Mrs. Payne were married in Brown county, Ill., and moved to Greene county soon after. Jeremiah Payne was a brick mason and plasterer and moved to Rock Island county in 1837, living at Stevenson, now Rock Island. He followed his trade here and at Dav- enport until buying a farm at Pleasant Valley, Scott county, Iowa, where he lived until 1851. He erected a large brick house in Hampton, which is still standing, and followed his business until his death, on November 15, 1873.

Mrs. Sikes lived in the village of Hampton from May 10, 1851, until her death, and was one of the best known persons in the community, where she was held in high regard. She died August 18, 1911. Mr. Sikes was always interested in the welfare and progress of the village and county and served in a number of local offices. In politics he was a republican and he helped materially to advance various causes for the uplift and benefit of all. Mr. Sikes died August 16, 1884. Children, as follows, were born to him and his wife: Carrie M., who lives at Hampton; Warren, who is of Hampton; Jerry, who is of Hampton; Clyde, who is of Buffalo, N. Y.; Charles E., who is of Hampton; Frank, who was killed by a passenger train at Hampton January 1, 1911; and Jennie, who is Mrs. Robert E. Lee, of Hampton.

SIMCOX, Thomas, one of the business men of Rock Island, residing at No. 1616 Second avenue, this city, was born in Staffordshire, England, March 21, 1862, an adopted son of Aaron and Ann (Ridge) Simcox, both natives of Staffordshire, England, where Aaron Simcox was born in 1835, and his wife in 1837. He was a coal miner, who came to America in 1866, locating near Monmouth, Warren county, Ill., where he worked in the coal mines. In 1870, he bought a farm of eighty-two acres in Coalbrook township, Warren county, and the next year returned to England for his wife and family, whom he brought back to the home he had provided. Here they lived and grew to maturity. About 1892 the father left the mines and devoted his entire time to his farm until 1905, when he retired, moving to Monmouth, where he is now living. His wife died in May, 1911. This most excellent couple had two adopted children: Thomas and Mary, the latter, born in 1864, in 1888 married James Wilson, a farmer who died in 1896, leaving her with three of their four children. Mrs. Wilson and her family are living in Sherrard, Ill.

Thomas Simcox was reared in Coalbrook township, and attended the district schools. He worked on the farm while attending school, leaving the latter at the age of fifteen years, to begin coal mining, and continued coal mining in the winter months, and farming in the summer until 1898, when he went to Sherrard, Ill., to embark in a restaurant business. Later he added a first-class buffet. In 1910 he moved to Rock Island and purchased the buffet at No. 1616 Second avenue, where he is still doing business. Fraternally Mr. Simcox belongs to the Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Rebekahs of Sherrard and the Eagle and Moose orders of Rock Island. The republican party has always received his support. Mr. Simcox is a man of broad charities and kindly disposition, who has many friends both at Sherrard and Rock Island.

SIMMONS, Ed, of the well known Simmons New and Second-hand Store, dealer in new and second-hand furniture, is one of the progressive business men of Rock Island county, doing well in Rock Island. He was born in Andalusia township in 1867, a son of Theodore and Sarah (Gorham) Simmons. The father was one of the pioneers of Rock Island county, and a man who for years has been active in the republican party.

Growing up on the farm in Andalusia township, Ed Simmons attended district school, and worked for his father. In 1902 he came to Rock Island and started in business for himself, buying out Le Vanway. Later he took L. P. White into partnership with him, but this partnership was discontinued in 1912. He now carries a large and well assorted stock of new and second-hand furniture, trunks, traveling bags, carpets, watches, guns, harness and similar articles, valued at $5,000, and is prepared to fill all orders given, with dispatch and to the entire satisfaction of all.

In 1887 Mr. Simmons married Ellen Daugherty, born and reared in Edgington township. Six children have been born of this marriage: Gertrude, wife of L. P. White, formerly in partnership with Mr. Simmons; and Elwood, Harold, Ethel, Lelah and Edward. Politically Mr. Simmons is a republican. The family are well and favorably known not only in Rock Island but also in Edgington township, where they have many warm, personal friends. The policy of Mr. Simmons has always been to give excellent service and first-class goods. The business has grown steadily and now a fine trade is commanded and people who once become customers continue to patronize the establishment, for they recognize the fact that they can get just what they want at prices as low as is consistent with the quality of the goods.

SIMMONS, Theodore.—Among those who have a practical knowledge of various lines of industrial activity in Andalusia, is Theodore Simmons, stone mason and general contractor. He was born February 27, 1844, in Elkhart, Ind., a son of Jeremiah and Margaret (Deford) Simmons, the former born in Vermont in 1800, and the latter in 1810. The father came to Rock Island in 1847 or 1848, bringing with him his wife and three children. Being by trade a potter, the father found employment at this work in Rock Island for about two years, and then moved to Andalusia. He entered land one and three-quarter miles west of the village, and lived in this vicinity until his death, which occurred in May, 1857, he being drowned. His wife had passed away the previous March. The children born to these parents were: Andrew, who is deceased; Angeline, who is the deceased wife of Samuel Moore; George Washington, who is deceased; Frances Marian, who is deceased; Angelet, who is deceased; Theodore; Almira, who is the wife of George Griffin of Milan, Ill.; Jerry, who is deceased; Louisa, who is the wife of James Moore of Kewanee, Ill.; and Albert, who is of Washington.

Theodore Simmons enlisted for service in the Civil War in 1861, when only seventeen years old, in Company D, Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Robert Keohler, and served four years. He received his honorable discharge July 10, 1865. His first active engagement was at Fort Donelson, where he was wounded. He recovered in time to engage at the battle of Pittsburg Landing, and divided his time between guard duty over the camp, and fighting. He was also at Corinth, and in Sherman's march to the sea, siege of Atlanta, at Savannah and at the Grand Review at Washington. Mr. Simmons was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., and was discharged at Springfield, Ill., from whence he came to Andalusia, where he began learning the trade of a stone mason, at which he has since worked. He owns a beautiful home and five lots in Andalusia.

On September 10, 1865, he was married to Sarah C. Gorham, daughter of Joshua and Priscilla (Floyd) Gorham, the former born in Dayton, O. The parents came to Illinois in 1852, locating at Illinois City, where the father, a potter, worked at his trade. There he died in 1870, his widow surviving him until 1889. Mrs. Simmons has brothers and sisters as follows: Calvin, who is of Iowa; Ellen, who is the wife of Matthias Volk, is deceased; Martha Weaverland and Mrs. Simmons. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons became the parents of the following children: Edward M.; William H.; Mary L., (deceased); Priscilla, Charles, Fred; Ira E.; Theodore; Mathias; Rosa M.; Guy; Benjamin H., (deceased); and Frank. They have thirty-two grandchildren. Mr. Simmons is a member of the United Brethren church. Politically he is a republican, but has never sought public office. For years, he has been a member of Alfred Bingham Post, No. 494, G. A. R. of Andalusia. An honored veteran of the war, a man of high standing in his community, Mr. Simmons has been a desirable citizen in both war and peace, and his children are maintaining the standard he has raised.

SIMONSON, James W., well known in financial circles as president of the Port Byron State Bank, has been largely instrumental in bringing that institution to its present prosperous condition. This bank was started in 1863 as a private enterprise by W. H. Devore and William J. Shephard, the latter of whom died in 1870. Mr. Devore then continued to carry on the bank alone until 1893, when he sold to J. W. Simonson and John Schafer, who conducted it until 1903, in which year they organized it as a state bank and it took its present name. In 1893 the deposits amounted to $75,000, and when it was incorporated they were about $600,000. At the present time they are about $750,000 and the capital stock is $50,000, with undivided surplus of $35,000. The present officers are: J. W. Simonson, president; F. S. Gates, vice president; Frank H. Schafer, second vice-president; B. B. Huntley, cashier, and Henry Setzer, assistant cashier.

James W. Simonson was born in Somerset county, N. J., November 8, 1842, a son of Dennis and Ellen (Nevius) Simonson, both natives of New Jersey. He reached maturity in his native place, receiving his education in the public schools, New Jersey academy and the University of Chicago, being graduated from the latter institution in 1868. He had taken a course in law and upon his graduation came to Rock Island and practiced law until 1874, when he engaged in conducting a general store in partnership with a Mr. Schafer, and later they bought the banking business, above referred to, continuing as partners for thirty-two years.

Mr. Simonson has lived in Port Byron since 1865, with the exception of the six years between 1868 and 1874, when he resided at Rock Island and practiced his profession. He enlisted in September, 1862, in Company E, Thirtieth New Jersey Infantry, for service during the Civil War, and was assigned to the Eleventh Army Corps, Army of the Potomac. He contracted typhoid fever and was discharged in 1863 because of disability. A member of Eugene Lyford Post No. 603, of Port Byron, he is now its commander.

In 1874 Mr. Simonson married Rose Devore, daughter of William H. and Eliza (Beardsley) Devore, who was born at Prophetstown, Ill. One son survives of this union, Devore N., an attorney practicing his profession at Rock Island. The other child, Blanche E., was drowned in the Mississippi, in August, 1894, aged twelve years. Mr. Simonson is a republican in politics and has taken an active part in public affairs since coming to Illinois. From April, 1878, until 1882, he served as a member of the lower house of the state legislature. He has always been interested in the cause of education, serving as president of the village school board and has been connected with various measures to advance this cause. In addition, he has been president of the board of trustees of the asylum at Watertown and is at present a member of the visitors' board, to which office he was appointed by Governor Deneen. The associate members on the board are Mrs. George H. Hutton and W. C. Galloway. He is a member of the republican county committee, was for many years its treasurer, and has served as a delegate to various conventions. One of the prominent men of the county, he is well known in many different circles, where his efficiency and ability are much appreciated.

SIMPSON, Charles Thomas.—In every community there are certain families which take an active part in every movement for the betterment and development of the locality, and are connected with moral uplift. The representatives of such families, whether they remain in their native section, or go forth in search of a wider field, take with them that sense of responsibility their name inspires, and spread the high standards of living taught them from infancy. One such family in Rock Island county is the one bearing the name of Simpson. There are a number of public-spirited men bearing this name in the county, as well as in other parts of the country, and none of them has failed to do credit to it. One of those still remaining in the county is Charles Thomas Simpson, a prosperous farmer of Coe township. He was born here, December 16, 1879, being a son of Jesse and Matilda (Smith) Simpson. They had three children: Charles T.; Maude who died at the age of three years, and Mrs. Elsie Gilbert who is the wife of Louis Gilbert. These parents secured 100 acres, and all the improvements on the property were made either by the father or his son. The father died on this farm, February 26, 1909, his widow surviving him until June 19, 1911, when she passed away, and both are buried in Fairfield cemetery. They were excellent people whose names stood for all that was true and good. Charles Thomas Simpson was brought up on the farm, and attended the Linn Grove district school, there securing a common school education. He owns the homestead, and has it in a magnificent state of cultivation. On December 18, 1901, Charles Thomas Simpson was married to Leola Ashdown, daughter of Charles and Nellie (Saddoris) Ashdown, no issue. Mr. Simpson is a member of the Court of Honor, and enjoys his fraternal association. Having spent his life as a farmer, he understands all the best methods, and takes pride in his property.

SIMPSON, Jesse Lee.—Many of the farmers of Rock Island county are men of long experience who have spent their lives in agricultural pursuits, and are well fitted for their work. To them is due much of the credit for the present agricultural prominence of this locality in the State, and one of those who has borne his part in this rapid development is Jesse Lee Simpson of Coe township, who was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., January 21, 1853, a son of Jesse Swan and Eliza (Gunnell) Simpson. The latter came to Coe township when Jesse Lee Simpson was fifteen years old, buying forty acres upon which the parents resided, until death overtook them. The father passed away June 30, 1901, aged eighty-four years, his widow surviving him until 1909, when she passed away, aged eighty-five years. They are buried in Fairfield Cemetery. Eleven children were born to them, of whom Jesse Lee is the sixth in order of birth. He was one of a pair of twins, and is the only one of his family now residing in Coe township. Jesse Lee Simpson was brought up on the homestead, attending the Linn Grove School, where he was well grounded in the common branches. For eight years, he has been a school director, and has worked out in his district some of the ideas which came to him while attending school. He owns the homestead, to which he has added forty acres, and his life has been spent here.

Jesse Lee Simpson was married in January, 1882, to Eva Philleo, a daughter of Addison and Mary (Bedstead) Philleo. They have one child, Grace, now Mrs. William Miller of Cordova township, her husband being a farmer here. Mr. Simpson belongs to Court of Honor, and to Cordova camp, Modern Woodmen of America. He is not only a progressive farmer, but a man of sterling character whose friends are to be found all over the county.

SIMPSON, Wesley.—Coe township has a large proportion of the best citizenship of Rock Island county, and in tracing the families that make it up, it is found that many of the leading ones are of German extraction. The Simpson family of Coe township is a case in point. Wesley Simpson, who resides on his well developed farm of 200 acres, situated in section 8, was born in Pennsylvania, May 6, 1849, and is a son of Thomas and Eliza (Fisher) Simpson, and a grandson of James and Hannah (Staymates) Simpson and of Jacob and Sally (Golden) Fisher.

Thomas Simpson was born in Westmoreland county, Penn., November 5, 1811, and came to Rock Island county, November 27, 1855. He located at Moline and there went into the butchering business with a Mr. Weaver for a partner. On February 13, 1856, his residence was completed, being built of hardwood slabs and he continued to live in it until his death, on February 24, 1873. It was erected on his farm of 200 acres, in Coe township. He carried on farming and raised stock and was a successful and well known business man of this section. He married Eliza Fisher in Westmoreland county. She was born in 1818 and died January 1, 1900, aged eighty-three years, having survived her husband for twenty-seven years. Eight children were born to them, as follows: Sarah Ann, deceased; James, residing at Cordova, Ill.; Eliza Jane, deceased; John, residing in Missouri; Hannah, deceased; Jesse, deceased; Wesley; and Erastus, residing at Laporte City, Ia.

Wesley Simpson was six years old when his parents came to Illinois and settled in Rock Island county. He was reared in Coe township and attended the local schools, later helped his father and after the latter's death remained with his mother. He now owns the homestead, has made many improvements here and is looked upon as one of the substantial men of this section. The usual farm activities are carried on and in addition he makes a specialty of raising poultry. His experience has taught him that growing the Rhode Island Red strain is profitable and his hatcheries give him as many as 800 chickens annually.

On June 14, 1900, Mr. Simpson was married to Miss Alice Isola Saddoris, a daughter of Aristus and Mary (Genung) Saddoris, and they have three children: Mary Eliza, who was born August 15, 1901; Virgil, who was born April 1, 1905; and Ruth, who was born January 13, 1908.

Mr. Simpson and family attend the Methodist Episcopal church. He is a member of the order of Mystic Workers, of Port Byron. He has never been active in politics but keeps thoroughly posted regarding public affairs and performs every duty of good citizenship.

SIMPSON, William Howard, who is well known, being one of the early settlers of Rock Island county, has lived on his present farm, known as the Silver Leaf Farm, in Drury township for the past seventy-eight years, and many of its improvements were made through his efforts. He was born in Lawrence county, O., January 13, 1829, a son of Solomon and Patience (Howard) Simpson. Solomon Simpson was born May 8, 1795, and his wife on August 30, 1794, both being natives of Virginia, who after their marriage moved to Lawrence county, O. He was a farmer and blacksmith and was a magistrate in Ohio for sixteen years, as well as for many years in Rock Island county. In 1843 he located on the farm now owned by his son William H., which then consisted of forty acres of land, purchased from I. B. Essig. This farm has since been increased to 136 acres. Solomon Simpson lived on this farm during the remainder of his life, for years in a three-room log house, which was later enlarged by the addition of a frame kitchen. His son has since moved the old log house to the rear and erected the present home. The father died on the farm, October 3, 1874, and the mother September 19, 1880. They were active in the Methodist Episcopal church until old age necessarily ended their labors in this direction. The father was a republican in politics. They had children as follows: Susan, who was born September 17, 1820, became the wife of John Condon, of the United Brethren church; Diana, who was born April 3, 1825, became Mrs. Anthony Ricketts and is now deceased; James who died in childhood; and William H. William H. Simpson attended the old school in Illinois City, the teacher of which, Truman Tyler, lived in one end of the schoolhouse and taught in the other. As a boy he worked on the farm and helped to clear it, and also assisted with various kinds of farm duties, but found time for recreation as well. He was married in Rock Island county, November 11, 1868, to Miss Saloma Vandolah, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Ann Vandolah. They became parents of the following children: Charles Franklin, who is at home; Solomon B., who died at the age of eighteen years; James H., who is at home, married Leanna Heberly; William L., who is at home, married Elsie A. Davidson. When he settled up his father's estate at the latter's death, Mr. Simpson took over the home farm. He and his wife have become active in the good work of the Methodist Episcopal church and he long has been identified with the republican party.

Mrs. Simpson was born nine miles from Fort Wayne, Ind., on the old plank road, March 5, 1847. She was four and one-half years of age when brought to Iowa by her parents, who lived there for fifteen years. Her father died in Drury township August 5, 1876, his widow surviving him, dying at the age of seventy-one years. Mrs. Simpson was one of five children and was educated in the schools of Muscatine, Iowa, while living with a Mrs. Vincent Chamdère.

SINNET, Francis M.—After having experienced the heavy activities incident to a long and useful life, Francis M. Sinnet is now living retired, having been in the past closely identified with the growth and development of Rock Island. Since 1856, he has been associated with many interests which have greatly benefited his city and county. He comes of an old and well-known family. His paternal grandfather, James Sinnet, was a native of Ireland, his wife, Mary (Shaw) Sinnet, being of English descent. They crossed the Atlantic, and settled at Blandford, Mass., where Alanson Sinnet, the father of Francis M., was born, August 15, 1801. When he was six years old the family moved to Greenville, O., where they carved a farm from the wilderness. James Sinnet did not live long after the family migration, and Alanson being one of the older children, it fell to his lot to take the lead, which tested him both physically and mentally. He became a farmer and extensive cattle raiser, later giving his attention to the raising of sheep, becoming one of the largest breeders of Merino sheep and other fine stock in that section. In 1857, he and his family came to Rock Island county. At the age of twenty-five years, he married Julia Webster of East Poultney, Vt., a member of the same family as Daniel Webster, whom he met at Greenville, O. Alanson Sinnet and wife became the parents of seven children, three of whom survive: Mrs. Georgiana (Sinet) Heck, widow of George W. Heck, who lives at No. 449 Forty-fourth street, Rock Island, more fully mentioned elsewhere in this work; Francis M.; and Laura E. (Sinet) Wilson, widow of Isaiah P. Wilson, now residing in Tacoma, Wash.

In the meanwhile, having lacked educational advantages himself, and being largely self-educated, Alanson Sinnet determined that his children should not lack that opportunity. He early assisted in the establishment of schools, and was later the principal founder of Greenville college, a well-known school to this day. He contributed liberally to its building, not only money, but labor, and by liberal donations afterwards, and for twenty-two years was one of its trustees, and for that entire time was a member of its executive committee. Here his children obtained their higher education, and his benefactions have blessed generations since.

Francis M. Sinnet was born in Licking county, O., on his father's farm, May 22, 1834, and there he spent his boyhood and youth. He assisted on the farm, while gaining an education, which was obtained in the common schools and Greenville college. In 1856, at the age of twenty-two years, he came to Rock Island county, and was followed by his father and the remainder of the family, in 1857, the former having in the interim sold his farm, together with a flock of 1,000 sheep. The son first taught school. The father soon after his arrival established a retail ice business at Moline, although living at Rock Island on a tract of land which almost overhung Sylvan Water, well known to all old residents. The father continued this ice business many years, developing a wholesale trade as well, and when he retired, he turned it all over to his son-in-law, George W. Heck. He was intimately identified with the interests of Rock Island for over thirty years, during which time he, together with his immediate family, built over 100 houses, principally in Sinnet's Addition. His first wife, who was a devoted wife and mother and a member of the Baptist church, died February 11, 1868, and some years later he married Miss Pauline E. Williams, who survived him, living at 330 Forty-fourth street, Rock Island.

Politically, he was a whig, until the birth of the republican party, when he joined its ranks, continuing to support it during the remainder of his life. He would never accept an office. In religion, he was a member of the Baptist church from early manhood, dying in that faith at the age of eighty-four years. He was the principal promoter of the first street railroad, known as the Rock Island and Moline Horse Railway, which took the place of a stage line running four times daily, fare twenty-five cents for the round trip. His life was closely linked with that of the city, and he was ever ready to forward any movement for its betterment, commercially, educationally or morally. He died as he had lived, honored and respected, an inspiration for good to all who knew him.

After teaching school for several terms, Francis M. Sinnet established an independent ice business at Rock Island, being for twenty-five years in the retail trade, but later founded a wholesale business in the same line, which he conducted until his retirement from active business. He has continually resided in Rock Island since 1856, and has seen it grow from about 7,000 population to about 30,000, and land go up from a dollar and twenty-five cents per acre to $2,000 per acre. In 1856, he and his father purchased fifty-five acres of land, adjoining the city, on the northeast, which later was platted, being known as Sinnet's Addition. This is now thickly covered with residences, stores and factories, and is crossed by three railways and a double track electric street railroad, which follows the route of the first horse car.

On December 17, 1861, Francis M. Sinnet was married to Miss Jennie A. McLaughlin of Peoria, Ill., and they became the parents of three children: Jessie K., married Ralph E. Taliaferro, who died in 1907, being followed by his wife, July 18, 1912, her death occurring in Los Angeles, Calif., where she had resided for some time, her remains being brought to Rock Island by her father, and interred beside those of her mother. The funeral services were held at Edgewood Baptist church on Forty-fourth street. She was a native of Rock Island, having been born there, January 20, 1864, her education being received in the public schools, and she having graduated from the high school with the class of 1884. She was the mother of one son, Francis Sinnet Taliaferro, who lives with his wife and son at No. 319 Forty-fifth street, next door to his grandfather. Julia M. was the second child of Francis M. Sinnet and his wife, and she married Ennis G. Spaulding and they live at Davenport, Ia., with their three children—Bessie, Kingman and Thomas. Mary Florence, the third child of Francis M. Sinnet and wife, died in 1873, aged three years.

Mr. Sinnet has been an earnest republican since the birth of that party, casting his first vote for Salmon P. Chase for governor of Ohio. He has served as supervisor of Rock Island county three terms, during two of which he was chairman of the board. The new Rock Island county courthouse was built while he held that position, and this fine building is a monument to the honest work of the board, no supervisor failing to give honorable service. Mr. Sinnet served as city alderman three times, and was a member of the Rock Island city school board three terms, during which time most of the city's handsome new school buildings were erected. He has been a member of the Baptist church since boyhood, and is active in his association with the Edgewood Baptist church, and one of its deacons. His wife had been his faithful companion for twenty-eight years when she died May 12, 1899. She was from girlhood a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Sinnet practically retired from business several years ago, and is now looking after his lands and other interests in Rock Island, Los Angeles and Canada. It may be truly said of him, in the sunset of a busy life, that no man can truthfully claim to have been wronged by him. He is a deep, earnest, kindly man, and has many friends to whom his comfortable home at No. 315 Forty-fifth street is a haven of rest, and his life is an inspiration towards upright living.

SKELTON, Frank B., the popular liveryman of Port Byron, Ill., is one of that village's best-known citizens, and is a true type of the successful self-made man, having won a place for himself among the substantial men of his community through the force of his own industry, intelligence and inherent ability. Born in St. Louis, Mo., July 24, 1859, he accompanied his parents as a small boy to Rock Island, Ill.

In 1866 the family came to Port Byron, where young Skelton, after attendance at the public schools, entered the butcher business, in which he continued for nearly twenty years, one and one-half years of which he was engaged in business on his own account, and later with a partner, Richard Trever. After disposing of his interests in the butchering line he began to buy and sell stock and poultry, and continued in that occupation until December 25, 1898, when he purchased the livery business of John Hasson, and he has continued in this line very successfully to the present time. He has nine horses, all in constant demand, and his livery barn is equipped with the latest improvements. Mr. Skelton is popular in Port Byron, which is one of the reasons that he has been so successful in his operations. He caters to the best trade. For three years he has served as a member of the town board, and he is fraternally affiliated with the Woodmen of the World.

Mr. Skelton was married in Coe township, to Miss Grace Lyford, daughter of Dr. William Lyford of Port Byron, and thirteen children have been born to this union: Bassah, wife of Louis Newton, a meat merchant of Silvis; Percy Holmes, living on the Lyford farm, who married Cora Cox; James Lee; Byron McNeil; Glen Edward; Ruth E., who married Daniel Eipper, a carpenter, now residing in Port Byron; and Clara, Gertrude, Ralph, Elmer, Florence, Willbur and Margaret, residing at home.

SLOAN, Chester Collins, M. D.—The preference today is for the younger generation of physicians who have had the remarkable advantages offered by the medical courses that have adopted the new discoveries in the healing art. Within the past decade so many changes have been effected, and so many discoveries made, that the older men in the profession are forced to change their methods to conform to what is now recognized as the best and highest authority. One of the physicians of Moline, who is rapidly becoming one of the leading men in his profession in Rock Island county, is Dr. Chester Collins Sloan, physician and surgeon, of 1807 Seventh avenue. He was born at Eddyville, Ia., May 16, 1877, being a son of Walker K. and Emma J. (Collins) Sloan. The father was born in Ashland, O., in 1847, and died January 1, 1901. His wife was born in Knoxville, Ia., December 14, 1854. They were married at Knoxville, Ia., in 1875. Their oldest son was Chester, the other children being Clara Olive, and Paul, who was drowned in 1892. The family moved from Knoxville, Ia., to Eddyville, Ia., in 1875, and after three years came to Moline, the father becoming one of the beloved physicians of Rock Island county. He had three brothers who were in the Civil war, James, Milton and Joseph.

Dr. Chester Collins Sloan attended school in Moline, and then entering the University of Arkansas, was graduated therefrom with the degree of B. S. He then took a medical course at the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1904, with the degree of M. D. He spent two years as interne in several hospitals in Philadelphia, thus preparing himself for his present large practice. Coming to Moline, in 1906, he began his career as a physician, and has steadily advanced ever since. He belongs to the Phi, Kappa, Sigma, his college fraternity, and the Neu, Sigma, Neu, his medical fraternity. In religious faith, he is a Methodist.

Dr. Sloan was married in Los Angeles, Calif., January 21, 1910, to Ida Huntoon, born in Moline, Ill., January 11, 1887, no issue. A close student, possessing a pleasing, genial, sympathetic personality, Dr. Sloan is a man well fitted for his profession, and outside of it has warm personal friends, as well as among his associates, and those who have benefited from his skill.

SLOAN, Wilbert Kennedy, M. D. (deceased).—The present status of medical science is not entirely due by any manner of means to the unaided efforts of living physicians and eminent scientists, but is the culmination of the work of those who have gone before. Without their faithful service, present discoveries would never have been made, and the debt that humanity owes to the physicians of all ages, is one that can never be discharged. One of the men whose life was spent in service to others and whose name is revered whenever spoken, is the late Dr. Wilbert Kennedy Sloan, who well deserved the appellation of "well beloved physician." He was born on his father's farm near Ashland, Ashland county, Ohio, October 16, 1846, being the youngest son of Joseph and Nancy (East) Sloan, in a family of three sons and four daughters. The father was a farmer and local Methodist minister.

Dr. Sloan attended the district schools during his boyhood, and there laid the substantial foundation for his later studies at Oberlin college at Oberlin, Ohio. Following this he studied medicine under Dr. Crane of Ashland, later coming to southern Illinois, where he taught school, while continuing his reading of medicine. In 1875 he went to Knoxville, Iowa, where he studied in the office of a local physician, Dr. Cornell, recently deceased. From there he went to Keokuk Medical college, from which he was graduated in 1875. Following his graduation he located at Eddyville, Iowa, where he entered upon an active practice, continuing there until March, 1880, when he moved to Moline. From then on until 1901, when his death occurred, Dr. Sloan was actively engaged in practice, and being devoted to his profession rendered efficient service to it and the people who came under his skilful care, building up a large circle of patients, and becoming one of the leading physicians of his city. Dr. Sloan was not a man to be content with his knowledge, but was constantly studying and reading and took a post-graduate course in New York city. Politically Dr. Sloan was a staunch republican and served as a member of the Moline school board and the Moline public library board for many years. The Methodist church held his membership and found in him a faithful worker, and his wife was also a member of that body. His vacations were usually spent in travel, when he was accompanied by his wife, and together they visited various points of interest in their own land, and old Mexico. The latter place was visited with the International Health Association at a time that they were the guests of the Mexican Government.

On April 19, 1876, Dr. Sloan was married to Emma J. Collins in Eddyville. She was a daughter of Adgate W. and Susan C. (Olive) Collins, the former being a prominent merchant of Knoxville, closely associated with the banking interests there as well. Three children were born of this marriage: Chester Collins, who was born May 16, 1877, a graduate of the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, class of 1904, is in active practice in Moline; Clara Olive, who was born December 14, 1879, married August 1, 1912, Moses R. Paige, of Hardwick, Mass., now resides at Boston that state; and Paul D., who was born April 26, 1883, died September 5, 1890.

After a useful life, filled with good deeds, Dr. Sloan died January 1, 1901, following an illness of two years' duration, caused by a very unusual and obscure disease, hardening of the pancreas. The case was a puzzle to the eminent physicians of Chicago, New York and Philadelphia and was only revealed upon autopsy.

SLOWEY, Hugh (deceased).—Although Hugh Slowey never came to Rock Island, he left a large family of children who settled here and became prominent in local affairs. He was born at Glasgow, Scotland, was educated in his native country and there married. His wife, whose maiden name was Rachel Garden, was born April 10, 1820, and died in 1885, at the age of sixty-five years. Mr. Slowey brought his wife and children to America, landing at New Orleans. He was drowned in that city, soon after landing, and his wife took the children to St. Louis, Mo., and later in the same year came to Rock Island, where the family permanently settled. She kept the family together as well as she could and devoted herself to their care, rearing them in the Catholic faith.

Hugh Slowey and his wife had ten children. Among them were: Rachel, who is the wife of John Coyne, of Rock Island; Margaret, who died at the age of thirteen years; and Mary. Mary Slowey was born June 4, 1869, and now lives on the old home place, at No. 1509 Fifth avenue. This is a beautiful residence and is owned by her. She is a devout member of the Catholic church, interested in its good work. Much of her life has been spent in this city, and she is surrounded by a large circle of friends.

SMITH, Ashbel W., (deceased), an old settler of Rock Island county, and one of the solid men of this part of the state, was a veteran of the Civil war and a man whose name stood for unblemished honor and steadfast uprightness. Mr. Smith was born in Berwick, Columbia county, Pa., July 1, 1831, and grew up in the Keystone state, where he learned harnessmaking. In 1853 he came to Illinois, but returned to Pennsylvania in 1856, and taught school at Danville in Montour county, Pa. On March 6, 1851, he was united in marriage with Susan Clackner of Washingtonville, Montour county, Pa. She had been reared and educated there and was a daughter of Colonel Cornelius Clackner and his wife, Margaret (Moyer) Clackner. One child, Robert C., of Detroit, Mich., was born of this marriage, on May 18, 1872, and was educated in the country schools. He married in 1896 Miss Winona Watson. This son is a republican and a Thirty-second degree Mason.

Ashbel W. Smith had a long and honorable war record, enlisting in the Iron Guards of Columbia county, Pa., August 18, 1861. Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, Twenty-eighth Regiment, and was transferred to Captain Knapp's battery and became a veteran. He was in the battles of Cedar Mountain, Antietam and Gettysburg, Wahatchie, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, and took part in the Atlanta campaign including Sherman's March to the Sea. Mr. Smith received his honorable discharge in June, 1865, having done his full duty as a soldier. In July of that same year he came to Milan, where he proved that he had the qualities requisite for good citizenship. For several years he worked at his trade and in the spring began teaching the Green Bush school in Andalusia township, near Reynolds, becoming one of the best-known educators in this part of the county. Many of those who were taught by this kind man remember him vividly, and none who profited by his learning can fail to recall him with affection. These old-time educators shaped the lives of many who attained to high places in the history of the nation, and to them is due a large amount of the credit therefor.

SMITH, Charles E.—Among the substantial citizens of Rock Island, Ill., may be mentioned Charles E. Smith, who has been engaged in a photographic business here for many years and has followed that occupation since completing his education. Mr. Smith was born at Wooster, Ohio, July 13, 1858, a son of J. L. and Jennie (Edmonds) Smith. There were three children: Charles E., Frances A. and Nellie E.

Charles E. Smith received his education in the public and high schools of Wooster, Ohio. When but seventeen years of age, he engaged in photography, a business he has carried on continuously ever since, and his artistic work and pleasant personal characteristics have won him a large and ever increasing business. For thirteen years he was a member of the military band of the Fifteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guards. He is connected fraternally with the local lodges of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Maccabees.

Mr. Smith was married at Wooster, Ohio, to a daughter of William Yergin. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have three children: Charlotte, Lee and Mabel.

SMITH, Francis A., M. D.—A very important factor in the business life of Rock Island, Ill., is the location there of the great insurance order, the Modern Woodmen of America. That institution has not only been an important auxiliary to the business progress and development of Rock Island, but it has also been the means of bringing to that city many desirable, substantial citizens. Among those who have become residents of Rock Island in that way is Dr. Francis A. Smith, Supreme Medical Director of the Modern Woodmen of America. He has resided there since 1903, at which time he was first appointed to the high position in the order which he still holds. He has always taken an active interest in matters affecting the public welfare and such part in local affairs as appeared to him to be his duty. His character in his private life and public career is above reproach, and he has the highest reputation for honesty and integrity. He is a native of Noblesville, Hamilton county, Ind., a son of John Wesley and Cassandra (McKahan) Smith, the former born in White county, Ill., and the latter in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Smith's father was an itinerant minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a member at times of the Indiana and the North Indiana conferences of that religious body, and for that reason the early boyhood of young Smith was passed in many towns and cities of that state.

Reverend Smith was educated at the State University of Indiana, and also at what was then known as Indiana Asbury University, but is now known as DePauw University. He was recognized as an able orator, and had high standing as a theologian. During the Civil war he was a strong Union man, and helped to organize the 48th Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and went to the front as its chaplain. He also, for a time, was recruiting officer for the United States government. Dr. Smith's grand parents were natives of Georgia, North Carolina and Maryland.

As a boy Dr. Smith attended school in the various places of family residence, and when old enough, during the summer months, worked on a farm. He was fond of out door life, but was also of studious habits and tastes, and stood well in all his studies. His education, which was begun in the public schools, was continued in DePauw University, Green Castle, Ind. Upon leaving that institution he engaged in teaching, which he had followed at intervals before, by that method meeting his expenses in College. In the University he was an active member of the Greek fraternity Delta Tau Delta. His taste for medicine, however, led him to study for that profession, and in 1891 he graduated from Pulte Medical College, Cincinnati, O. His work as a student was of such high grade that, out of a large class, he was one of five to receive special mention by the Dean of the College, at the time of graduation, for proficiency in medical work. He located in Zanesville, O., for the practice of his profession, and rose rapidly, showing ability of a high degree in his chosen line of work. He not only made friends and kept them, but he produced results, and soon built up a gratifying practice. He connected himself with medical and surgical societies, both state and national, and attended their meetings and took part in their deliberations, whenever possible.

Within a year or two after locating at Zanesville, he was made a member of the staff of Physicians and Surgeons of the City Hospital, in which he took an active interest. He also became surgeon of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

In 1897, he was elected State Medical Examiner of the Modern Woodmen of America for Ohio, and held that position for six years, or until 1903, at which time he was advanced to his present position in the order, and has since resided in Rock Island, Ill., and been associated with the home office.

Dr. Smith is kindly, genial, whole souled, sympathetic, and has a large circle of friends who respect and admire him for his personal attributes, and for the line of his accomplishments in his profession. He has a high reputation in life insurance work, especially the medical part of it. Life institutions of every kind are indebted to him for agitating the movement to require medical colleges to add to their curriculum lecture courses on medical life insurance, thus enabling students to get the theory and practice of life insurance work and medical examinations before leaving college. As chairman of the committee appointed by the National Fraternal Congress in the interest of Medical Life Insurance, his work was so effective that, within four years, more than one half of the schools of medicine, in the United States and Canada, fell into line and have since been giving successfully such instruction quite generally. It is not now unusual for medical colleges to prepare students in that line of work, the idea being to not only equip them for the practice of medicine, but also to train them in the essentials of life insurance work from the medical standpoint, thereby in the end, protecting life companies and societies from heavy mortality losses incident to the work of careless, incompetent medical examiners. He has been president of the Medical Directors' Association of the National Fraternal Congress, and has made a special study of the benefits to be derived from fraternal insurance, and has helped others to see and appreciate the advantages they may obtain for their families in that way. In addition to membership in the Modern Woodmen, he is also affiliated with the Royal Arcanum, the Court of Honor, Knights and Ladies of Security, and the American Insurance Union. Dr. Smith is a High Mason, being a Knight Templar, a 32nd Degree member of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite and a member of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine. While a resident of Zanesville, Ohio, he served as a member of the Board of Education, and became known in many of the circles of that city. He is equally known in Rock Island for his activities along various lines. In politics he is a republican.

He was married in Wooster, Ohio, on January 30, 1884, to Flora Jeannette, daughter of Ohio F. and Anna D. Jones, all natives of that place. Her father was one of the able lawyers in Wayne county, Ohio, where her grandfather, Benjamin Jones, was a prominent pioneer. The latter served two terms in the Ohio State Senate, and also two terms in the Congress of the United States. No children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Smith. They are members of the Presbyterian church.

SMITH, Jacob Lincoln.—The healthy, hearty life of the farmer develops fine men whose view of public matters is generous and comprehensive. Coming in close touch with the realities of life, they know how to estimate affairs at their true value, and their opinions are worth consideration. From these hard-working, earnest men, owners of nine-tenths of the land of the country, come the deciding votes in every national election. One of the men whose ideas have long received respectful consideration by his associates is Jacob Lincoln Smith of Cordova township. He was born in Coe township, September 13, 1865, being a son of John Evan and Sarah (Marshall) Smith, born in New Jersey, but married in Rock Island county. Following their union, these parents lived in Coe and Cordova townships, until Mr. Smith was accidentally killed in Chicago by a railroad train, in 1881. His widow survived him until 1907. Nine children were born to them, Jacob Lincoln Smith being the eighth in order of birth.

The latter attended the district schools, remaining with his mother, until her death when he purchased the interest of the other heirs to 480 acres, 160 of which were in Coe township, and the rest in Cordova township, his home being in the latter. Mr. Smith carries on general farming and stock raising, and has been very successful in his operations. On September 1, 1892, Mr. Smith was married by Reverend Taylor of Rock Island, to Henrietta B. Bell, born in Port Byron, Ill., June 3, 1867, a daughter of James and Charlotte Bell, natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Smith became the parents of children as follows: Charlotte Bell, who married Lewis Armstrong; John Evans; Clyde; Maude; Sarah May and Julia. In politics, Mr. Smith is a republican and has served as a school director. He belongs to Camp No. 33, Modern Woodmen of America of Cordova. Energetic, understanding thoroughly every detail of his work, and carrying on his operations according to modern methods, Mr. Smith is one of the most substantial of the farmers of this part of the county.

SNELL, Charles (deceased).—One of the worthy German-Americans who during a long and useful life gave his best efforts to aid in the development of Buffalo Prairie township, and made his influence felt because of his sturdy uprightness and honesty of purpose, was Charles Snell. He was born in Württemberg, Germany, March 28, 1839, and died December 4, 1909, in Coal Valley, Ill. His parents died in Germany, where his father was a farmer. They had two children: Mary, who died in Iowa, the wife of Charles Huber; and Charles.

came to the United States, landing in New York with his sister Mary, and from there they came direct to Rock Island. There he learned the trade of blacksmith and worked in that city three years, but afterward engaged also in farming in Buffalo Prairie township. In 1861, at the outbreak of the Civil war, he enlisted and served for four years in a Colorado regiment, having been in that state prospecting when the war broke out. During his service, he participated in many hard-fought battles. When the Grand Army of the Republic was organized he joined the W. J. Wylie Post of Illinois City. A republican in politics, he heartily supported the candidates of his party. Fraternally he was an Odd Fellow.

On November 3, 1870, Mr. Snell was married in Rock Island to Augusta Seidler, daughter of William and Henrietta (Witt) Seidler. Mrs. Snell was born in Prensau, Germany, November 26, 1843, and attended school until fifteen years old. When twenty-four years of age, she came to the United States, landing in New York with her parents. They came direct to Rock Island, where her father became a farmer, although he had been a blacksmith in Germany. He died in Illinois City in 1890, and his wife two years later. Their children were: Bertha, Mrs. Peter Wittz of Illinois City; Mrs. Snell; William, of Illinois City, and another who is a resident of Fairport, Ia. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Snell were: Mary, Mrs. Eugene Sheppard of Muscatine, Ia., issue;—Bernice; Bertha, Mrs. Calvin Vernatta of Buffalo Prairie township, issue;—Hazel; Elizabeth, Mrs. William Mardes of Carbon Cliff, Ill., issue;—Gertrude, Emma, Floyd, Celia and George; Augusta, Mrs. John Tyler of Muscatine, issue;—Keith and Carson; Lulu, Mrs. Melvin Thomas of Illinois City, issue;—Fred and William; Forest Charles, born in Illinois City, March 2, 1888; Henry Clayton, partner of Forest Charles, born in the same place, January 7, 1890, and there educated and reared.

Forest Charles Snell was educated in the public schools of Illinois City and worked in his father's shop until he began farming in partnership with his brother, Henry C., on the farm they now own, which is a valuable property in Buffalo Prairie township. Politically, he is a republican, and fraternally belongs to the Odd Fellows. Both he and his brother are fine young men, worthy of their good father, and the family stands high in Rock Island county.

SNIVELY, William D., M. D.—Medicine and surgery have made such mighty strides forward during the past few years that a revolution has taken place in methods of treating disease. Operations are now undertaken that even half a dozen years ago would have been deemed impossible, and carried through to successful completion. The scientific men in the profession are bending every effort to eradicate disease and advise preventive methods whenever possible. One of the progressive men in his profession in Rock Island county is Dr. William D. Snively, of Rock Island, with office at No. 326½ Twentieth street. He was born at Crete, Neb., December 23, 1872, a son of John C. and Fanny (Eyster) Snively, the former born in New Albany, Ind., in 1844, and the latter born in 1851. The father was a soldier during the Civil war, and was engaged in various lines of endeavor. There were two children in the family, Dr. Snively being the elder. His sister, Julia F., is the wife of I. V. Reasoner of Lincoln, Neb., one of that city's attorneys.

After attending school at Crete, Neb., Dr. Snively spent five years at Doane College in that city, being graduated therefrom with the degree of B. S., in 1893. In that same year he came to Rock Island and entering the wallpaper house of W. L. Eyster, remained there for six years. In 1899 he went to Philadelphia, and entering the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, after four years was graduated with the degree of M. D. He then served as interne at several hospitals and was resident physician at Charity hospital, Philadelphia, from 1903 to 1904, thus gaining an experience the value of which cannot be overestimated. In the latter part of 1904 he came back to Rock Island, where he entered into active practice, and has thus continued, winning his way honorably and ably. He is a member of the Rock Island County Medical Society, and is vice-president of it. He also belongs to the District Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and is on the staff of St. Anthony's hospital, and is a medical examiner for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York, the Federal Life of Illinois, the North American Accident Insurance Company, the Modern Woodmen of America, Royal Neighbors, Court of Honor, and the Fraternal Reserve, belonging to all these fraternal societies as well.

Dr. Snively was married June 21, 1904, at Norristown, Pa., in the Episcopal church, by the Rev. S. E. Snively, his uncle, to Mary Wills, born at Philadelphia, daughter of William and Sarah (Roberts) Wills. Mrs. Snively was one of eight children, she being the fifth in order of birth. Dr. and Mrs. Snively have one child, William D. Snively, Jr., born February 9, 1911. Mrs. Snively is an Episcopalian and Dr. Snively is a Presbyterian. In politics he is a republican. An able physician and thoroughly representative citizen, Dr. Snively is identified with much of the progressive spirit of the city, and is a man of whom this locality has every reason to be proud.

SOMERSON, Benjamin Franklin, manager of the retail department of the Central Illinois Fuel Company, dealers in steam and domestic coal, with retail and wholesale offices at Rock Island, and mines at Coal Valley, this state, is one of the representative business men of this locality. He was born in Colfax, Iowa, January 2, 1885, being a son of Robert, born in England, who came to the United States in young manhood. Robert Somerson settled at Coal Valley and began mining, still residing in that town. He married Mary Buckley, who died in 1895. They had two children, Joseph of Coal Valley and Benjamin Franklin.

Benjamin Franklin Somerson was a child when his parents settled at Coal Valley, and there grew up, receiving his education in the public schools of that place. When he was sixteen years old he began mining and worked in the mines for three years. In the meanwhile he studied bookkeeping at Augustana college, so that when he was offered the position of manager of his present company, then the Volunteer Coal Company, he was able to accept it, and competent to discharge its duties. He was only nineteen years old at the time, but young as he was he showed that he was a good business man from the start, and has built up the concern to its present prosperous condition. In politics, he votes as his conscience dictates and is not bound by party ties.

The Somerson family have been connected with the coal industry of Coal Valley for so many years that all their interests are centered there. Mr. Somerson has a newspaper, issued half a century ago, that describes the coal mining in Coal Valley. This is a very interesting relic of olden days and is eagerly read not only on account of this description, but for the various items of news about many now long since dead, and the curious advertisements which are printed on its pages. Mr. Somerson is a very affable young man, very popular socially and much respected in business circles.

SOMERSON, George (deceased).—The coal interests of Rock Island county are very valuable and those owning coal land are fortunate indeed. The development of coal mining is an industry that requires knowledge of the business, considerable foresight and plenty of capital to back each undertaking. The late George Somerson, who opened the Volunteer mine, was an experienced miner so that his success is not to be wondered at, but that his widow was able to carry out his plans, puts her in the front rank of women who are able to accomplish things. Mr. Somerson was born in Rock Island county, August 5, 1858, and died at Coal Valley, December 14, 1910, his remains being interred in Coal Valley cemetery. In his boyhood he attended the district schools, alternating this with work in the mines. In 1903 he opened the Volunteer mine, which proved a successful venture from the first, and when death claimed him Mrs. Somerson took up the work, developing into a first-class business woman of unusual ability, and handling same until she sold her interests.

In 1881 Mr. Somerson was married to Sarah R. Schroeder, born October 9, 1863, a daughter of Peter and Marie (Krueger) Schroeder. Her parents came to this country from Germany, on a sailing vessel, being six weeks on the water. They first went to Toledo, Ohio, where the father worked at his trade of shoemaking.

Later he came to Rock Island, where he established a shoe business. Still later he located at Coal Valley, being the first shoemaker in the town. He and his wife had fourteen children as follows: Elizabeth and Anna, who died in infancy; Charles F. W., who died in 1898; Henry T., who resides at Bellinghame, Wash.; Minnie Elizabeth, who is the wife of Frank Rosenberg; Thomas T., who is living at Sherard, Ill.; John Albert, who is living at Rock Island; Sarah R.; two who died at birth; Ferdinand C., who died when twenty years old; Freddie C., who is a merchant, Paulina Oritina Dorathe, who died when three years old, and an infant, deceased.

Mr. Somerson was no politician, devoting himself to his business affairs. He traveled extensively and was a member of the Rock Island Gun Club. He was a hard-working man, a devoted husband; and his loss was keenly felt by his widow and his many friends. Since his death Mrs. Somerson has traveled to a large extent. Although she disposed of her interest in the Volunteer mine, she is the owner of a sixty-acre farm in Coal Valley township, a nice, comfortable home and a business block in Coal Valley.

SOMMER, Julius, a representative German-American citizen of Rock Island, Ill., was born in Solden, Germany, April 1, 1846, son of Ludwig and Wilhelmina (Schoen) Sommer, the father born in 1806 and the mother in 1807, both natives of the same country. The father was a shoemaker by trade and established a shoe manufactory in Germany, where he and his wife spent their entire lives and died three days apart, October 9th and 12th, respectively, 1866, of cholera. They had six children, namely: Gustaf; Frederick, deceased; Louis, deceased; Otto, of Berlin, Germany; Julius; and Augusta, a widow, also of Berlin, Germany.

Julius Sommer was educated in the public schools of his native country and there learned the trade of shoemaker with his father, working with him from the time he was fourteen until he was twenty years of age. He enlisted in the Germany army and served in the Franco-Prussian war from July 7, 1870, to June 21, 1871, holding the rank of corporal, spending three years in the army. In 1875 he came to America, sailing from Bremen on the ship "Oder" and landing at Castle Garden, N. Y. He came direct to Moline and worked two years for the Moline Corn Planter Company, then was employed at various work for several years. In 1900 he returned to his native country for a visit and spent about one year there, returning to Moline in 1901, since which time he has been employed by the Moline Corn Planter Company. He has been a resident of Rock Island since 1903 and owns a home at No. 1215 Seventh avenue. He was reared in the Lutheran faith and has supported various movements for the general welfare and progress.

Mr. Sommer's first marriage occurred in Moline, November 7, 1878, when he was united with Wilhelmina Ebeleng, who died December 3, 1898. He was married (second) January 9, 1903, to Mary Bohn, a native of Germany and a daughter of Jakob and Katherine Bohn, the father still living in Germany, the mother having died in 1884. They have one child, Martha, born February 5, 1905.

Souders, Isaiah B.—Veterinary surgery, the art which deals with the nature, causes and treatment of the disorders of domestic animals, has evidently been practiced from the earliest times, and there is every reason to suppose that the study of disease in the inferior animals was applied, on comparative principles, to the treatment of disease in the human subject. In the middle ages, when veterinary medicine was utterly neglected, desolating plagues swept away nearly the entire herds and flocks of the countries they visited, and cattle plagues were not infrequently the forerunners of great epidemics, and, although they may have had no connection as cause and effect, they may have had some co-relation, as affecting the food supplies of human beings and ushering in periods of famine which would give intensity to epidemic diseases. During the sixteenth century veterinary medicine again became a subject of study, and from that time to the present date the art has grown enormously. The first veterinary school was established at Lyons in 1762, and by 1913 these schools have spread to every civilized country in the world, the United States alone having nearly twenty connected with well-known colleges and universities. Isaiah B. Souders, located at No. 920 Fourteen-and-a-half street, Rock Island, has been a resident of this city since 1892, and has been engaged in a veterinary practice for nearly forty years. He was born near New Bloomfield, Perry county, Pa., January 4, 1848, a son of Martin and Elizabeth (Sidel) Souders, natives of Perry county, where the former was born August 15, 1810, and the latter in February, 1812. They were married near New Bloomfield, Pa., and were the parents of six children: Isaiah B., Susan, Jacob, Henry, David, and William A.

Isaiah B. Souders received a common school education, and after attending a seminary, entered the Philadelphia veterinary college, from which he was graduated in 1873. In 1880 he removed to Cedar county, Iowa, where he engaged in farming and in practicing his profession, and in May, 1892, came to Rock Island, where he has since been located. Dr. Souders is thoroughly versed in his knowledge of the ailments of animals and the cures therefor, and his success in the treatment of serious diseases of our four-footed friends has given him an enviable reputation in his line and a steady, assured practice.

In June, 1871, Dr. Souders was married at New Berlin, Pa., to Sarah A. Gebhart, who was born June 21, 1849, at New Berlin, Union county, Pa., the daughter of Leonard and Ella (Rankin) Gebhart. Of the six children born to this union, five are now living, namely: Charles M.,

John C., Wallace, Ralph H., and Mrs. Nellie B. Hackett, the latter a widow. The family attends the Methodist church.

SPENCER, William John, superintendent of the Sears water power plant, has developed it from the beginning and now has it in running order and developing electric power. His ability as an organizer qualified him for the responsible position, and what he has accomplished shows that he was the right man for the place. He was born at Rock Island in 1874, a son of John E. and Mary A. (Ayers) Spencer, natives of Pleasant Valley, Iowa, and Rock Island, Ill. The father came to Rock Island in 1865, after his discharge from the Union Army, and engaged in a transfer business, thus continuing until his death on December 22, 1904. The parents had four children: Jesse, William John, Millicent and Stephen R.

William John Spencer attended the public schools in Rock Island, from which he was graduated, and following this he took a two-years' course in business at Augustana college. Completing this he entered the drug business; and after making a success of this work entered the employ of T. B. and S. S. Davis, in 1900, and has been associated in their large contract work ever since.

On May 21, 1902, Mr. Spencer was married to Margaret Vogt, born at Davenport, Iowa. Two children have been born of this marriage: John D. and Margaret E. The Methodist church holds his membership. Fraternally he is a Mason. Although he has voted the democratic ticket, he has always been very liberal in state and county affairs. For four years he has served as trustee of Sears, where he now resides, owning a beautiful home, surrounded by extensive grounds embracing an entire block. Capable, energetic, a man who has always succeeded in every line he has undertaken, Mr. Spencer has proven his worth, and is rated accordingly, not only by his business associates, but his host of friends throughout this locality.

SPICKLER, Samuel William, owner of the Elm Grove Stock Farm comprising 184 acres of very desirable farming land in Drury township, is one of the substantial men of his locality. He was born in Edgington township November 27, 1866, a son of Charles Edward and Margaret (Beidleman) Spickler, natives of Pennsylvania. The former was a son of Samuel and Sabina (Selbert) Spickler, natives of Lancaster, Pa. The mother was a daughter of William and Hannah (Hong) Beidleman, also natives of Pennsylvania. Charles Edward Spicker and wife had children as follows: Bertha, Mrs. O. A. Felger of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Samuel William; Emma, Mrs. William J. Kranz; Charles T. of Drury township; Ella, Mrs. O. A. Warman on the old homestead in Drury township; Jennie, Mrs. S. T. Warman of Portland, Kans.; Mary Caroline, a trained nurse of Muscatine, Ia.; Nahum E. a farmer of Rock Island county; and Anna, born in 1873, died when about six months old. The father of this family was born May 30, 1838, and his wife, August 20, 1845.

When he was twenty years old, Charles Edward Spickler learned the carpenter trade, and came in 1856, with his parents to Taylor Ridge. When the Civil War broke out, he enlisted in the Twelfth Pennsylvania Reserves as a drummer boy, participating in the battle of White Oak, and in the Seven Days' fight in front of Richmond. During all of his service, he escaped being wounded, but after eighteen months, his health failed, and he was honorably discharged on account of disability. Returning to Pennsylvania, he married, and in 1863, came for a second time to Rock Island county, and for six years lived at Taylor Ridge. He then went to Nebraska, and remained for six years more, then he went to Harrisburg, Pa., for eighteen months. Once more he came back to Rock Island county, and bought the Essie farm in Drury township, comprising 196 acres, on which he lived until his death, March 7, 1901. He was laid to rest in the Reynolds cemetery. His wife died July 5, 1888, and she, too, is buried in the Reynolds cemetery.

Samuel William Spickler was born in Edgington township, as before stated, and has spent the greater part of his life in Rock Island county, being educated in its public schools. He remained with his father until he was twenty-three years old, when he rented a farm in Rock Island county. After a year, he went to Iowa, and spent three years in Cedar county, but returning, rented his father's homestead for three years. At the expiration of that period, he rented the farm he now owns, and bought it the next year, since which time he has developed it into a valuable property, raising principally thoroughbred stock including Pecheron horses, Poland-China hogs and short-horn cattle. His farm is now one of the best in the township, and he has earned all his possessions, for he started in a poor man. He makes his own electric light, and has other modern improvements. His handsome eight-room residence has a bath, basement, and is an ideal home. His barns and outbuildings are excellent, and all his work shows careful planning and successful execution.

On July 12, 1899, he was married at Muscatine, Ia., to Velta Van Dolah born December 19, 1876, daughter of Henry F. and Julia A. Van Dolah, natives of Indiana and Iowa respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Spickler have two children, Bernice, born September 28, 1905 and Julia M., born February 3, 1911.

SPIEGEL, Edward A.—The German stock is as good as any in the country, for those coming from it show those same desirable characteristics of industry, thrift and loyalty to Government which so mark those of the Fatherland. One of the men of Rock Island county, who is proud of his German descent is Edward A. Spiegel. He was born in Peoria, Ill., August 31, 1862, a son of August and Caroline (Kuester) Spiegel, natives of Germany. The father came to America in 1857, and made his way to Weathersfield, Ill. His wife was brought over here when twelve years old, probably about 1858, by her parents. The father of Mr. Spiegel was a miller by trade, and found employment in the Weathersfield and Peoria, Ill., mills until 1865, when he engaged in farming, which he followed during the rest of his active life. He and his wife had children as follows: Edward A.; Carl E., who is of Henry county, is living on the old homestead; Theodore, who lives at Kewanee, Ill., where he is clerk in a hardware store; Mary, who is the wife of Henry Kempin, lives at Kewanee, Ill.; and Clara, who lives at the same place. In December, 1893, Edward A. Spiegel bought and planted sixteen acres in fruit, and has since been engaged in fruit culture, with very gratifying results. He is a republican in politics, but has never entered public life. The family are all members of the German Lutheran church.

On March 8, 1888, Edward A. Spiegel was married to Emma Lehman, a daughter of Albert T. and Minnie Ouart, both natives of Germany, where he was born in 1832 and his wife in 1841. They were farming people. Mr. and Mrs. Spiegel became the parents of children as follows: Leander F., who is a United States mail carrier; Bernard R., who is farming at Fell, S. D., and George V., who is at home. Edward A. Spiegel has been a resident of Rock Island county since 1888, having come here in that year from Henry county, where he had been reared and educated and taught the carpenter trade. He worked at this trade until he bought his fruit farm, and since then he has done odd jobs about his place, though otherwise he has devoted himself to his farm. Faithful in his work, interested in it, a good citizen and family man, Edward A. Spiegel is one of the prosperous residents of his township.

STAFFORD, Morris Theodore, was one of the earliest business men of the comparatively new town of Silvis, where he has established himself in business with gratifying success. He was born at Rushville, Ontario county, N. Y., June 10, 1841, son of John B. and Harriet (Elmore) Stafford. The mother was born in New York and the father in Massachusetts, and, in boyhood he was taken to New York, was married in Ontario county and removed with his family to Albany when Morris T. was seven years of age, two years later to Clifton Springs and subsequently to Rochester, N. Y. Morris T. Stafford spent four years in Rochester with his parents and while living there, at the age of fourteen years he published a paper called the "Rochester Bulletin," in company with the son of Mr. Curtis, publisher of the "Rochester Union & Advertiser," at the time they were attending Satterley Dexter Collegiate Institute. They continued this about eighteen months and then the Stafford family moved to Canajoharie, where the father kept a hotel for about three years, then going to Sharon Springs.

Morris T. Stafford enlisted in New York city in September, 1861, as a sergeant in Company F, One Hundred Second New York Infantry for service in the Civil war, being assigned to the Army of the Potomac. He was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, July 3, 1863, and upon leaving the hospital was promoted to rank of second lieutenant, later being advanced to first lieutenant and adjutant. Subsequently he organized a colored corps and was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., March 22, 1866, having served four years and eight months, with credit and ability, having participated in thirteen decisive battles. Upon being mustered out of the service Mr. Stafford came to Rock Island, where he had served with his regiment guarding the Confederate prisoners from December, 1864, until March, 1865. In 1867 Mr. Stafford entered the employ of the Rock Island Railroad Company, became an engineer and worked on the road until 1884, when he was appointed superintendent of the water works of the city of Rock Island, holding this post until May, 1888. He became engineer for the Santa Fe Railroad Company, spent three years in their employ, then became engineer on the Lake Street Elevated Railroad in Chicago, being the second engineer in the employ of that company. He remained in that position seven years, then returned to Rock Island county. In 1905 he came to Silvis, there being then but five houses in the village, and established an insurance and real estate business, which he has since developed and extended. He lives in Rock Island but his business interests are chiefly in Silvis and he is identified with the interests of that village. In 1878 he was elected collector of the city and township of Rock Island, which office he held one year. He was a member of the Board of Education four years, during one of which he served as president of the board.

At Rock Island he was married October 4, 1865, to Julia Emma Hurst, born December 30, 1843, at Rock Island, daughter of William and Anna M. (Hurlock) Hurst, of Rock Island. Twelve children were born of this union: John T. and Elmore H., both of whom are attorneys of the firm of Jackson, Hurst & Stafford; Annabelle, who is Mrs. A. R. Kough, of Blue Island, Ill.; Grace Willard; Julia, who is Mrs. Frank L. North, of Rock Island; Harry C., who died at the age of eighteen, and Ralph, at the age of twenty-one years; and five who died in infancy. All are buried in Rock Island county.

Mr. Stafford was formerly an influential member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and has been a Mason since 1864. He belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church of Rock Island. At the State Encampment of the G. A. R. held at Joliet he was elected Junior Vice Department Commander, which office he now holds, and by virtue of which he is entitled to a seat in the National Encampment, and is third in command in the State.

STANGE, W. L.—The plumbing business carried on by Stange Brothers of Moline, was established in 1904 as a co-partnership, and is located at No. 1101 Fourth avenue. The proprietors are three brothers: Charles O. H. R., and W. L. Stange, and they are prepared to do everything in the line of plumbing, and general contracting in the line of steam and hot water heating apparatus and gas fitting. This is one of the solid, substantial business firms of the city, and has an enviable reputation for reliability and upright dealing.

The head of this family was Jasper Stange, a native of Rensburg, Holstein, Germany, who came to Moline in 1856, and there engaged in a shoe business under the name of Bock & Stange. He also conducted the Western House, where Deere & Company's foundry now stands, for six years, and bought an interest in a drug store which he operated for several years, afterward buying the interest of his partner. He finally retired from active life and died November 15, 1889, aged fifty-five years. He was married in Moline to Louise Dibbern, and they became parents of ten children: Emma, Henry F., William L., George H., Emil, Frank, Charles O., Hugo R., Amelia and Martha, all living except Henry F., who died October 28, 1912. The mother, who still lives in Moline, is a member of the old Dibbern family, who came from Germany in 1849, being nine weeks and two days on the trip. They came to New Orleans and up the Mississippi river, locating first where the Orphans' Home now stands, in Davenport. Later they moved to Rock Island and thence to Moline.

William L. Stange was born in Moline November 14, 1865, and received his education in the public schools and a business college. He worked for several years in various factories, and in 1885, upon leaving business college, entered the employ of the Moline Scale Company, remaining there six and one-half years, then going to work for the First National Bank as bookkeeper. He remained six years with the bank, then spent seven years in the hardware business with B. H. Quick, and at the end of this time engaged in business with his brothers in the line of general contracting and jobbing.

William L. Stange was married at McPherson, Kan., to Nettie Matthews, and they have one (adopted) son, Paul W. The family belongs to the Congregational church, Mr. Stange being one of its organizers and is now a deacon and Sunday school superintendent. He was an efficient member of the building committee at the time the new church edifice was erected. He is a member of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. of Moline.

Charles C. Stange was born June 2, 1875, and was educated in the public schools, after which he learned the trade of plumber, in Moline, under the supervision of Mr. D. Hartwell, with whom he remained fourteen years. He was married April 30, 1907, to Charlotte Raugh, a native of Iowa. They have no children.

Hugo R. Stange was born in Moline May 26, 1878, educated in the public school, and then began clerking in a grocery store. He continued this line of work until engaging in business with his brother, later selling out to enter his present business. On Thanksgiving Day, 1911, he was united in marriage with Florence A. Wellnitz, a native of Rock Island county and a graduate of Moline high school. Hugo Stange is a member of the board of directors of the Retail Merchants' Association of Moline.

The family is well known in Rock Island county and the three brothers given especial mention in this brief sketch have long been closely identified with the progress and growth of the county in many ways. They are ready to forward public movements for the upbuilding and welfare of the community and are connected with various benevolent organizations. They are men of business sagacity and energy, and have built up an extensive business from a small beginning; and have a good reputation for the quality of their goods and the excellence of their work.

STELK, Claus Asmuss, a well known and enterprising citizen of Rock Island, Ill., is a native of Holstein, Germany, born June 8, 1853, a son of Claus and Marguerite (Emke) Stelk. His parents were also born in Holstein, the father in January 4, 1779, and the mother in 1804. Both died in Germany, where the father was engaged in various occupations.

In boyhood Claus A. Stelk attended the public schools and worked on a farm. He sailed from Hamburg to New York, arriving in the latter city on May 2, 1873, and came direct to Rock Island, where he obtained employment in various lines of work. In 1875 he was living in Iowa, but soon afterward returned to Rock Island, where he has made a permanent residence. He now manufactures horseradish and prepared mustard, as relishes, in which line he has built up a good business, having a wide reputation for the purity and excellence of his goods. He was reared in the Lutheran faith and in politics is independent. He is affiliated with the M. W. A., to which he has belonged for the past twenty years, and is also a member of the Plaudentscher Brothers, of Rock Island, and of the Rock Island Turngemeinde Society.

Mr. Stelk was married in Rock Island, December 1, 1878, to Anna Margaret Gotsch, born in Holstein, Germany, March 25, 1855. Her mother came to America and died in Iowa in 1897. One son was born of this union, Edward Henry, born May 22, 1883, married Miss Elsie Tarr, born in Hartley, Iowa. They have no children. October 26, 1885, Mrs. Stelk's death occurred. On June 7, 1894, Mr. Stelk married Anna Dorothe Stalh, who was born in Holstein and came from Germany to Davenport, Iowa, in 1880, and Davenport was her home until marriage. Mr. Stelk owns a home at No. 2429 Thirtieth avenue and has many friends in the city.

STEPHENSON, Herbert O., is a native son of Rock Island county who has won success in the region where he has spent the larger part of his life is Herbert O. Stephenson, now extensively engaged as a contractor at Moline.

He was born at Joslin, Ill., November 7, 1879, a son of Ernest Cary and Ida (Oakey) Stephenson, the father a native of Lincolnshire, England, and the mother of Laporte, Ind. The paternal grandparents, Joseph and Sophia (Berkinshaw) Stephenson, were prominent in Lincolnshire, England, the grandfather being a successful tailor, employing some twelve men. The maternal grandparents, Isaac and Hannah (Hunt) Oakey, were from Birmingham, England, where he was a carpenter and cabinet-maker. They came to Laporte, Ind., in 1851, and later moved from there to Erie, Ill., but returned to Laporte. However, in 1869 they again moved to Erie, where they spent their remaining years. Isaac Oakey, who was born in 1818, died January 10, 1902, at a venerable age.

Ernest Cary Stephenson was brought by his parents to America and the family located at Center Grove, Ia., in 1857. His father decided to engage in farming and about 1866 began operating a farm but after five years sold it and purchased one in Zuma township, located on the Rock river, and there his death occurred September 2, 1875. His son, Ernest, was married to Miss Oakey at Erie, Whiteside county, Ill., by Rev. Charles Mason. Children, as follows were born to this couple: Ernest M., of 2412 Fourth street, Moline; Herbert O.; Elyde Elwin, of 4007 Seventh avenue, Rock Island; and Chester Arthur, of 502 Twenty-fifth avenue, Moline. After marriage they settled on a farm in Zuma township March 18, 1872. He and his family resided there until March 12, 1892, a period of some twenty years, when he rented the farm and came to Moline, where he bought a residence at 2403 Fifth street.

In boyhood Herbert O. Stephenson lived on a farm, and his early education was gained in the country schools. When his parents came to Moline he continued his studies in the common and high schools there, finishing with a course at Brown's Business College. After leaving school he turned his attention to business affairs and in 1900 bought the dairy of C. H. Darling. This he conducted about a year and a half, after which he became spoke inspector for the Mutual Wheel Company. In the spring of 1903 Mr. Stephenson began carpenter work, for which he had a natural gift and soon became an expert in this line. In order to see something of the country and gain new ideas regarding labor conditions, he went to Los Angeles, Cal., arriving January 22, 1904, and readily found employment as a journeyman carpenter in that vicinity. He helped erect a beach house at Ocean Park, Cal., and later another opposite the first, commencing this work March 10, 1904. He then returned to Los Angeles and soon afterwards became a lathing contractor, in which line he continued until the date of his return trip to Moline. He left Los Angeles, January 28, and arrived at Moline February 2, 1905. He had left a region of summer and returned to find the thermometer registering twenty-two degrees below zero. Mr. Stephenson has been engaged in a general contracting business for himself at Moline since March 20, 1905, with the exception of the summers of 1907 and 1908, during which time he had charge of a gang of men working for a Mr. Paulson at Rock Island. He is an experienced business manager and an excellent workman and he is able to select competent men to assist him. The handsome residence he now occupies at 2041 Fourteen and One-half street was erected by him in 1911. He has time outside of business hours to interest himself in public affairs, is well informed on the subjects and issues of the day, and is independent in politics. Fraternally he belongs to the Manufacturers' Lodge, I. O. O. F., and also to the Carpenters' Union No. 240. He is well acquainted at Moline and has a good standing in business and other circles. His wife is a member of the Christian church but he is not a member of any religious organization.

Herbert O. Stephenson was married September 5, 1906, to Miss Goldie McDonald, born at Silvis, Ill., March 30, 1888, a daughter of John A. and Agnes May (Cushman) McDonald, the former born in Morgan county, O., and the latter in Hampton township, Rock Island county. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Stephenson were William and Mary (Donaway) McDonald, of Ohio. The maternal grandparents were Joseph and Ann L. (Willis) Cushman, he born in Maine and she in Hampton township. Mr. Cushman is deceased and his widow is living in Nebraska. Mr. Stephenson and wife have had one child, Ina Evelyn, who was born May 12, 1907.

STEVENS, Millard Theodore, chief of the book-keeping department of the Modern Woodmen of America, at Rock Island, Ill., has been associated with that fraternal organization for the past eighteen years, and is well and favorably known to many of its members. Mr. Stevens is a native of the Dominion of Canada, having been born at Norwich, Oxford county, Province of Ontario, February 15, 1861, and is a son of Stephen and Abigail (Lossing) Stevens. Stephen Stevens was born in Sussexshire, England, and was a farmer and livestock dealer in Ontario, whence he had gone in young manhood. He was a member and ardent supporter of the English or Episcopal established church, while his wife, who was a native of Norwich, Canada, was brought up in the faith of the Quakers or Friends, but after their marriage they abandoned their early teachings and embraced the Baptist faith. Mrs. Stevens' parents were among the earliest settlers of Oxford county, coming in 1801 from New York state, and the Lossing farm and homestead, surveyed and built in 1812, also the Quaker meetinghouse are among the oldest historic points in the county.

Millard T. Stevens attended the graded and high schools of Oxford county and later took a commercial course in the Spencerian Business College, Detroit, Mich., following this by a commercial, English and normal course at the Northern Illinois College, Fulton, Ill., from which he graduated in June, 1886. He received private and public school instruction from the time he was thirteen until he reached the age of eighteen, his summer months during those years being spent in hard work on the home farm, including driving live stock over long country roads. In 1882 he left home, going to Detroit, where he took his course in the Spencerian College, and during 1883 and 1884 he worked in a cheese factory near the home farm. In 1885, after the death of his mother, he again left home to attend the Northern Illinois College at Fulton. After graduating, in 1886, he went to Omaha, Neb., later to Lincoln, and eventually to Denver, Colo., holding positions of accountant and bookkeeper in each city. He took out naturalization papers in the latter city in 1892. In 1893 he returned to Illinois, and engaged in business with his brother-in-law, Louis B. Peters, in Fulton, in the furniture and undertaking line. In the late fall of 1894 he sold his furniture interests and in January, 1895, accepted a position with the clerical department of the Modern Woodmen of America, which was at that time located in Fulton. The following May he was made chief of the department of bookkeeping, a position which he has held to the present time.

Mr. Stevens is a member of the A. F. & A. M., the I. O. O. F., the M. W. A., the M. B. A., the R. N. A., the M. W. W., and the K. M. M. He holds membership in the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Rock Island, and his political views are those of the republican party.

On April 16, 1890, Mr. Stevens was married at Lyons, Iowa, to Louisa Peters, daughter of Clement and Dorothy (Langenburg) Peters, the former born in Lyons, France, and the latter in Weimer, Germany. Mr. Peters, deceased, served in the Germany army in Algiers, and after his discharge he emigrated to the United States, settling in Lyons, Iowa, where he carried on his trade of cabinetmaker. His wife still living now aged eighty-seven years, was a bookkeeper in Germany prior to coming to America. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Stevens: Dorothy Abigail, born June 27, 1891, and Leo Edmund, March 25, 1893, both in Denver, Colo.; and Ethel Elizabeth, born October 23, 1901, and Harold Arthur, October 19, 1904, in Rock Island, Ill.

STEWART, Matthew S., owner of 160 acres of the rich Drury township land which is now so valuable a possession, and makes this section rank among the most prosperous in Rock Island county, specializes on general farming. He was born at Muscatine, Iowa, and is a self-made man, for he lost his parents in childhood and was taken charge of by his married brother, Thomas Stewart, with whom he remained until he was nine years old. A Mrs. Campbell of Hilton township then took him into her home and was a second mother to the little orphan and he gave her the love of a son. He remained in her family until he was fourteen years old and then began earning his own living as a farm hand in different places. Homeless, he longed for a home of his own, and in March, 1877, he married Miss Mary Dickman, and realized his hopes in this direction. He rented land and operated it until 1895, when he bought forty acres. Three years later he added another forty acres, and still later, another forty acres. His principal crop is corn, although he raises other grains, and milks four or five cows.

Mrs. Stewart is the daughter of Charlie and Mena (Rentz) Dickman, born in Germany, who left their native land on a sailing vessel for New York city, from whence they came direct to Drury township. Mr. Dickman worked for farmers at first, then rented a farm, and in 1872 bought sixty acres of land. He added to his possessions until he owned 160 acres at the time of his death in 1896. His widow survived him until 1902, when she passed away. Mr. and Mrs. Dickman had children as follows: William, deceased; Mary, wife of Mr. Stewart; August of Drury township; Christina, wife of Fred Mewes of Drury township; Malinda, wife of Pat McKillip; John, deceased; Caroline, wife of William Pietsch of Drury township; Gusta, deceased, and three unnamed infants. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart became the parents of eight children: Jessie, Charlie and Maggie, deceased; Galbraith B. of Drury township; Monroe; John, Agnes and Verna, at home. Mr. Stewart has devoted himself to his farming, and although he has voted the republican ticket since attaining his majority, has not taken any part in public affairs. Among those who know him, he is appreciated and he is held in high esteem for what he has accomplished, rising as he has done from such small beginnings.

STEWART, Jacob, M. D. (deceased).—In November, 1903, in the city of Moline, Ill., was dedicated an institution that promises to be of inestimable benefit to suffering humanity, the Tri-City Sanitarium. It is a gift to the city by a devoted wife and broad-minded Christian woman, and is a memorial to the late Jacob Stewart, who, for many years was a physician and surgeon here and one of the pioneers in the movement that has called the attention of the people to hygiene as the most valuable agent in restoring health.

Dr. Stewart was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., February 27, 1824, and died at Moline, Ill., November 17, 1900, at the age of seventy-six years. He was of Scotch ancestry and the traits of sincerity and reliability belonging to his forefathers, were not wanting in him. He was a son of John and Mary Stewart, the second born in a family of four children, all of whom are now deceased. Two half sisters and one half brother survive, the latter a Mr. Gardner and the former, Mrs. Paul of Iowa, and Mrs. Draher, of Pennsylvania. The father died when Jacob was quite young, leaving him to the care of his mother, who was an admirable woman. She was a sister to Hon. John Covode, often called "Honest John Covode" who was chairman of the Committee of Investigation along certain lines, during the Civil war, a national character.

As a school teacher, Dr. Stewart began his business career and undoubtedly directed many a young and inquiring mind into the proper paths of knowledge. He then learned dentistry under Dr. Fundenberg, at Legioner, Pa., and later entered the Eclectic School of Medicine at Cincinnati, O., from which he was graduated at the age of twenty-five years. In 1849 he entered into practice at Sharpsburg, Pa., but shortly afterward moved to Butler, where he was engaged in practice for fifteen years. He was a reader and enthusiastic student and thus became acquainted with and interested in the principles of Homeopathy and so close had been his study of that system that in 1866, at Pittsburgh, Pa., he passed an examination before the American Institute and received a diploma entitling him to practice as a member of that school of medicine. He returned to Sharpsburg and continued in practice there until 1871, when he came with his wife to Rock Island county and located at Moline, where he purchased the property on the corner of Sixteenth Street and Seventh Avenue, and additionally bought a farm of eighty-five acres south of the then city, which, during the past thirty years has been absorbed and is now known as South Moline and at one time called Stewartville. In 1873 Dr. Stewart was elected a member of the Board of Health, one of the first to receive a certificate. He was a man of professional skill, engaging personality and true manhood.

In 1850, Dr. Stewart was married to Miss Mary E. Herr, whom he had known since childhood, and who survives him. She ever proved sympathetic and helpful and became deeply interested in his studies along the lines of hygiene, with particular reference to better care of the body and reformation in habits of eating and drinking. When the Tri-City Sanitarium on Nineteenth street was struggling with uncertainty, unable to decide whether to remain at Moline or go to some other place where philanthropy was more sure, Mrs. Stewart came forward and purchased the property, being unwilling that it should leave a city where its need was so great and where her husband had labored so long. Mrs. Stewart has placed the operation of the sanitarium in the hands of the state conference of the Seventh Day Adventist church, and it is her hope that it will ever carry on the beneficial work to which her husband's life was devoted.

STOCKER, Alfred, M. D., formerly county physician of Rock Island county, but now engaged in a very profitable general practice here, was born at Rock Island July 24, 1869, being the third child and son born to George and Elizabeth W. (Langdell) Stocker. George Stocker was born at London, England, which he left when nine years old for New York City. Although a mere child, he obtained employment and worked along different lines while endeavoring to obtain an education. Finally he became an expert carpenter and in the early fifties came to Rock Island, where he was engaged in work at his trade until the outbreak of the Civil war. On September 23, 1861, he enlisted for service in Company H, Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was mustered out December 23, 1864, having been attached to the Army of the Tennessee. He participated in the engagements at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Vicksburg, Missionary Ridge and the Atlanta campaign. After serving through the war he returned to Rock Island and resumed his work as a carpenter and cabinetmaker, doing exceedingly fine work. When the Arsenal was established on Rock Island, George Stocker entered the wood working department and continued a member of it for thirty-five years. In 1866 he married Elizabeth W. Langdell, a granddaughter of Commander Perry of the American fleet during the justly famed battle of Lake Erie, through her mother, whose maiden name was Perry. Mrs. Stocker was brought to Rock Island by her parents before the advent of the railroad, the family making the trip via the great lakes to Chicago, and from there to Rock Island, traveling in a "prairie schooner." George Stocker and wife had the following children: William, who died in infancy; Alfred; Edward; George; Jessie and Eva. Of these Jessie died when six years old, and Edward died soon after his graduation from the Illinois State University. William and Eva live at Chicago. George Stocker died in 1902, his widow dying in 1905.

Alfred Stocker received his early educational training in the Rock Island public schools. During the greater part of his school course he carried papers for the Rock Island Daily Union, and continued this work during his vacations. Later he attended the Bryant and Stratton Business College at Davenport. Following his graduation from the latter, he entered the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, and for three years was in their local office. He was then at his own request transferred to the main office at Chicago, where he had the advantage of attending night school and thus continuing his education. In order to fit himself for the study of medicine, he attended the Athenaeum and Institute, but could not spare the time to continue. Discovering that seven of the family, which originated in Switzerland, had been physicians and that one of them bore the same name as he, he decided to take the risk, and left his excellent position in the office of the general manager of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad to enter the scientific department of the University of Illinois at Urbana, and later the medical department at Chicago, being graduated therefrom with the class of 1906. Immediately thereafter he located at Erie, Ill., where he and Mrs. Stocker became identified with the social life of the place and he gained high repute as a physician. After five years, he took a post-graduate course at Chicago, and another one at New York, and then returned to Rock Island, where he established himself in a good practice. In 1911 appreciation was shown of his ability and high standing by his appointment to the office of county physician. Dr. Stocker is a member of the Masons, Odd Fellows, Moose, Modern Woodmen of America and the W. O. W.

Dr. Stocker married Miss Nettie Stratton of Belleville, Ontario, Canada, a daughter of the Rev. F. B. and Sophia Elizabeth (Weaver) Stratton.

STODDARD, Henry P. (deceased), who for many years was engaged in farming and stock dealing in Edgington township, served as postmaster in the village of Edgington for ten years, where he also conducted a mercantile business, and in his death, which occurred February 4, 1891, Rock Island county lost one of its reliable and public-spirited citizens. Mr. Stoddard was born at Cairo, Greene county, N. Y., March 4, 1834, a son of Harvey Stoddard, a native of New York, of New England ancestry and a farmer by occupation. He was married to Emily Hunt, also a native of the Empire State, and they had a family of five children: James, and David, both of whom died in New York; Oliver, who lives near the old home in New York; Henry P.; and Emily, Mrs. Olmstead, living on the old farm.

Henry P. Stoddard was educated in the public schools, and in 1858, with a schoolmate, Martin Schoonmaker, he started for Illinois, arriving in Rock Island county in the spring of the following year. Mr. Stoddard worked for Daniel Edgington for a year and then rented land and farmed for himself for a number of years. On October 16, 1859 he was married to Miss Sarah Boultinghouse, Rev. Cline of the Baptist church at Edgington officiating, and in 1866 he purchased a farm of 100 acres, on which he settled. In 1869 he came to Edgington and the following year engaged in the mercantile business and in connection therewith was largely interested in dealing in cattle. He and his wife had one child, John, born August 18, 1872, who died the following day. Mrs. Stoddard was born June 13, 1842, and was the second youngest of a family of six children born to John and Mary Magdalen (Myers) Boultinghouse, the former of whom was born in 1806, in Ohio, and the latter in North Carolina, ten miles from Concord. They were married in Washington county, Ind., and later came to Knox county, Ill., where Mrs. Stoddard was born. In 1847 the family came to Edgington township, where Mr. Boultinghouse was engaged in farming until his retirement, when he moved to the village, and there his death occurred. His wife died at the home of Mrs. Stoddard, March 4, 1892, when she had attained the advanced age of eighty-nine years. They are interred in the Presbyterian cemetery at Edgington. Mr. Stoddard is buried in the Reynolds cemetery. He was a man of fine character and will long be remembered.

STOEHR, Edward, who has long been identified with the mining interests of Rock Island county, was born in Missouri, February 9, 1874, a son of Edward and Julia (Hammell) Stoehr, who were married at St. Louis. The parents later located in Hampton township, Rock Island county, where they purchased ten acres of land, which they set out to small fruit and later added fifteen acres to the original holdings, developing the property into a productive and profitable fruit farm. The father died March 27, 1894, and the mother still lives on the home farm. They had children as follows: Edward, whose name heads this sketch; Oliver, who is connected with the Moline Coal Company, of Moline; Morris, who is deceased; Iona, who is Mrs. Thomas Stone, of Hampton township; Edna, Mrs. Fred Engst, who is on the Stoehr home farm; and Roscoe, Norman and Rolla, all of whom are at home.

Edward Stoehr was educated in the district schools and at the age of thirteen and one-half years started to work in the coal mines, and continued as miner until 1905, when he and Conrad Schadt formed a partnership and became operators on their own account. They worked a mine on the Mary Gribbin farm for a time, and two years after beginning operations there discontinued and sunk a seventy foot shaft on the Mary Wilson farm in Hampton township, employing six or eight men all the year around. In 1911 they sunk a new shaft and each one has a vein three and one-half feet thick. They average a production of twenty-five tons per day and their coal is sold for local consumption. It is of fair quality and they have a large demand for their product. Their business is established on a good paying basis and both members of the firm are men of high standing in business circles.

On October 16, 1901, Edward Stoehr married Mary J. McCann, who was born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of William and Isabelle (Sweeny) McCann. Mr. and Mrs. Stoehr have had the following children: Isabelle, Leo and Roy. Mr. Stoehr is a member of St. Mary's Catholic church at East Moline and is an independent in politics.

STOTMEISTER, Andrew, of section 25, Hampton township, has been an agriculturist all his life and now occupies the farm which was acquired by his father. He is a native of Prussia, Germany, born December 24, 1843, a son of Andrew and Christine Stotmeister, who came from Bremen to the United States in 1857, making the journey in a sailing vessel and spending eight weeks on the water. Landing at New Orleans, they took a boat up the Mississippi river to Keokuk, Iowa, where, owing to the river being so full of ice, they left the boat and made the remainder of their journey with horses and by rail, driving across country to Bloomington, Ill., whence they took the train to Moline, and came into Hampton township. For the first two years the father worked at farming by the month, but then purchased a team of horses and rented a farm, which he operated on his own account from 1860 to 1865, when he bought the farm now occupied by his son Andrew. This property, which contained 140 acres of land, was mostly in timber, only thirty acres being cleared. The mother died in February, 1864, and the father died at the age of eighty-two years, in 1890. Besides Andrew Stotmeister, who was the second child, there was his younger sister, Dorothy, Mrs. Henry Rohren, of Seward county, Neb., and their older half-brother, Henry Miller, who died while serving in the Union army.

After coming to Hampton township Mr. Stotmeister attended school about two years, and he has always lived on the home place since his father located there, and previous to the latter's death purchased seventy acres of it. The old home place was left to him and he has added sixty-nine acres since, now owning 239 acres altogether, five pieces of his land being in Zuma township and two pieces in Hampton township.

In December, 1863, Mr. Stotmeister married Fredericka Wille, also a native of Prussia, born in 1846. She came to Hampton township when she was eleven years of age, being brought by her mother, uncle and her grandfather Alberts. Children have blessed this union as follows: Bertha, Mrs. Frank Schave, of Hampton township; Mary, Mrs. Fred Lewen, of Barstow; Edward, of Hampton township; Sophia, Emma, Andrew, Walter, Rachel, Herman, James, Alma, and William, all at home. Mr. Stotmeister is a member of the German Lutheran church and is a democrat in political views. He is considered one of the substantial and public-spirited citizens of Hampton township and has a good standing in his community.

STOWE, Orville M., treasurer of the D. M. Sechler Manufacturing Co., and one of the solid business men of Rock Island county, is pleasantly located at No. 1721 Twenty-eighth avenue, Moline. He was born in Elyria, O., February 22, 1862, a son of Emeline and Sarah (Cunningham) Stowe, born in LaPorte, O., and Lockport, N. Y., respectively. The father was a contractor and builder, who moved to Ohio, making his home at Cleveland, where he died on December 21, 1892. His wife also passed away in this state. Mr. Stowe was educated in the schools of Elyria, O., and brought up on a farm. Upon leaving school he began in the employ of the L. S. & M. S. railroad, and later went to Helena, Ark., as assistant general freight agent for the Arkansas Midland Railroad, holding that responsible position for four years. He then resigned, to come to Moline as secretary and treasurer of the Malleable Iron Co., and continued in these dual positions for ten years, at which time he was made treasurer of the D. M. Sechler Manufacturing Co., entering upon the discharge of his duties as such, March 1, 1905.

While residing in Cleveland, O., Mr. Stowe was married April 1, 1896, to Genon F. Stowe, who died September 29, 1900, having had two children: Albert J., born May 14, 1897, and Frank L., born January 30, 1899. On October 9, 1901, Mr. Stowe married Winnifred W. Worswick born in Cleveland, O., September 14, 1861, daughter of James R. and Jane (Kritchly) Worswick, who came from England and died in Cleveland, where he was successful as a manufacturer. There is no issue by the second marriage. Mr. Stowe belongs to the Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery, A. F. & A. M. and K. T., and also to the Knights of Maccabees. He and his family belong to the First Congregational church of Moline. All his life he has been a republican. The beautiful family residence, surrounded by three acres, called the "Stowaway," is owned by Mr. Stowe, and here he and his wife show a gracious hospitality upon many occasions. Keen, shrewd, resourceful, possessing the traits of character necessary for the successful management of affairs of moment, Mr. Stowe has always shown commendable interest in his work, and his fidelity has been amply rewarded not only with material prosperity, but by the confidence and respect of his associates.

STRAYER, John H.—Every branch of industrial and commercial endeavor is well represented in Rock Island county, and the men who are the exponents of business interests here compare very favorably with those elsewhere throughout the country. One of the progressive residents of Milan is John H. Strayer, a carpenter in the Government boat yards. He was born in Clark county, Ohio, March 17, 1858, a son of Abraham and Harriet A. (Howard) Strayer, natives of Pennsylvania, the latter being born in 1820. Mrs. Strayer is still living, although now eighty-two years old, but the father is deceased. These parents came to Illinois and in 1867 settled at Rock Island. During the Civil war the father gave a three years' service to his country, so that when he located in Rock Island he retired from active life. During his active years he had been a farmer and teamster.

John H. Strayer worked on the farm until he attained his majority, at the same time attending school when opportunity offered. He then began learning the carpenter trade and has followed it ever since. For twenty-two years he was bridge carpenter for the Rock Island and Peoria Railroad, and for eighteen years was foreman of the bridge gang, but for the past four years he has been employed by the Government. He bought his home in 1896 and owns other property in Milan, Ill.

On May 25, 1896, Mr. Strayer married Josie Keller, daughter of Edward Keller. Their children are as follows: Marie Alice, born November 7, 1898; Pauline Rose, born May 14, 1901; Edward, born December 9, 1902; George F., born July 27, 1904; John B., born December 23, 1906; Arthur P., born December 3, 1909; and Ida Margaret, November 15, 1912. Mr. Strayer is a member of Camp No. 67, M. W. A., having joined twenty-five years ago, and of Lodge No.

477, K. P. The family all belong to St. Joseph's Catholic church of Rock Island. Politically Mr. Strayer is a republican. He is a hard-working, industrious, thrifty man and his success has been gained through his own efforts, backed by no political influence.

STRAYER, Lewis B., whose association with agricultural matters is state-wide, and whose ideas upon questions pertaining to dairying are recognized as authoritative, has long been a resident of South Rock Island. He was born August 17, 1848, near Springfield, Ohio, being a son of Abraham and Harriet A. (Howard) Strayer. The father was born in York county, Pa., in 1823, being a son of Andrew Strayer, a farmer and carpenter, whose death occurred at York, Pa. Abraham Strayer remained with his father until he had attained his majority. His wife was born in Dayton, Ohio, and was a daughter of Samuel Howard, one of the first settlers of Dayton. Her brother, Volney Howard, was a war correspondent during the Mexican war. Mrs. Strayer was one of three children born to Mr. and Mrs. Howard, and is still living, residing with a married daughter, Mrs. Mattie Crippen of Davenport, Iowa.

Lewis B. Strayer was the eldest of the eleven children in the family of his parents, and attended school in Ohio, until eleven years old, when the family moved to Iowa, locating in Jefferson, but later moved to Washington county. With the outbreak of the Civil war the father enlisted and the care of the family was left to the thirteen year old lad. During his term of service the father was so crippled that upon his return he was practically incapacitated and Lewis still continued to be the chief supporter. He learned bricklaying as well as coopering, and in 1867 came to Rock Island county, locating at Moline, but twenty-six years ago, he bought his present property where he now raises vegetables and chickens for the market. He is a life member of the Farmers' National Congress, serving it for two years as second vice-president, and treasurer for two years of the life members, as well as treasurer of the County Farmers' Institute, and held the same office of the State Farmers' Institute. Mr. Strayer makes a specialty of raising Rhode Island Reds and has also operated an extensive dairy business. He is proud of the fact that he has been so prominent in the various institutions in which he has held office.

Mr. Strayer was married at La Porte, Ind., in 1875, to Miss Mary Hack. They became the parents of six children: Lawrence P., who married Agnes Luckman, lives in Rock Island; Fred, who married Margaret Bart, is a dairyman; Bert, who married Carrie Crockett, resides near Milan, Iowa; Walter, who married Nellie Joseph, lives in Rock Island; Alice; and Mabel, who married Fred Druekniller. Mr. Strayer is a liberal republican and was tax collector of Black Hawk township. Mr. Strayer's interests are centered in his work, and the affairs of the various institutes with which he is connected, believing firmly in the beneficial effect of them upon the condition of farmers. Through them he realizes the good work that is being done for the agriculturist, in opening up to him new methods, teaching him the best way to cultivate his land, and calling attention to markets and transportation.

STRECKFUS, John.—The Mississippi river has played a very important part in the development of Rock Island, and its importance is still a factor to be dealt with although of course the construction of the many railroads has changed the character of the business transacted through its medium. One of the men indissolubly connected with Mississippi river traffic is John (called Captain) Streckfus, president of the Streckfus Boat Line, of Rock Island, living at No. 725 Twenty-third street. He was born in Edgington township, in 1856, a son of B. and Mary Streckfus. These parents were born in Germany, and were adopted children, having lost their own parents at a tender age. They came to the United States in 1852, the voyage consuming nineteen weeks. Landing at New Orleans, they took passage up the river to St. Louis, where the father worked as a wagon-maker until he earned money enough to take them to Rock Island, where they arrived in 1853. The father was a pioneer of the county, and died in Rock Island in 1885, his remains being interred in South Rock Island cemetery. The good mother passed away in 1892, and is buried by the side of her husband.

John Streckfus attended the country school in Edgington township, and at the same time helped on the farm. In 1867 he came to Rock Island where his father was engaged in the wagon making business, and learned the trade of wagon making. In 1886 he went into a grocery business, continuing this for ten years, when he embarked in a steamboat business on the Mississippi river. His first vessel was the Veruc Swain, a packet boat, and later he bought the Wiona, and then built the J. S., which he ran as an excursion boat. It was burned in 1911 at Bad Axe, Mich. In 1911 he bought what is known as the Diamond Jo Line, which operated the following boats: the St. Paul, Quincy, Dubuque, Sidney and W. W. Captain Streckfus is president of the corporation that owns these boats, which is now known as the Streckfus Steamboat Line, and this company owns the largest fleet on the Mississippi river.

In 1880 Captain Streckfus was married to Theresa Bartnemier, born in Davenport, Iowa. Both of her parents are deceased. Nine children have been born to Captain and Mrs. Streckfus: Lillian, who is the wife of Fowler Manning of New York; Anna and May, both of whom live at home; Joseph L., who is in the office of the company at St. Louis; Roy, who is captain in charge of the Sidney; John, who is mate on the Sidney; Theresa, who died at the age of two weeks; Verne, who attends high school; and Nina, who died at the age of nine years and eight months.

Mr. Streckfus is a member of the Catholic church. Politically he is independent. A self-made man, his life shows what determined effort will accomplish, and his success sets an example for the rising generation to emulate.

STROEHLE, John.—The building interests of Rock Island county are of such magnitude that many of the leading men of this locality have devoted themselves towards the development of them. Some of the best work done in the county must be credited to Rock Island men, and among them one deserving of more than passing mention is John Stroehle, a contractor in brick and stone. He resides at No. 1429 Fourth avenue, Rock Island. Mr. Stroehle was born November 11, 1848, near New Orleans, La., a son of Francis Joseph Stroehle, born in Austria. The latter came to America in 1836, via New Orleans, and settling down in that city, began working at his trade of machinist. Here he married a Miss Katherine Zitter, born in Alsace-Lorraine, then a province of France. She came to the United States alone. After a time the parents moved to Rock Island county, and later they went to Chattanooga, Tenn., where the father died. His widow returned to Rock Island, where she died at the home of her son, John. The children in the family were as follows: Julius of Colorado; John; Leo of Chattanooga; George of Mobile, Ala.; and Mary, Mrs. Christ Schultz of Chattanooga.

John Stroehle was but an infant when brought by his parents to Rock Island county, and grew to manhood at Moline. Until he was sixteen years old, he attended the public schools of this city, then was apprenticed to the moulder's trade, but after three years he began learning to be a brick and stone mason, and for the past thirty-five years he has been a contractor in both brick and stone work. His business has grown as a result of his skill and fairness of dealing, and he ranks among the best men in his line in the county.

Mr. Stroehle bought the northwest corner of Fourth avenue and Fifteenth street, on which he built a comfortable residence which continues to be the family home. In addition to this, he owns other city realty.

The marriage of Mr. Stroehle occurred at Rock Island in 1874, when he was united with Adella Stempel of this city, daughter of Frederick W. and Marie Stempel. They have four children: Elmer F. and Fred W., who are both at home; Mrs. Cora Haines of Rock Island; and John E. of Davenport, who married Miss Julia Littig. Fraternally Mr. Stroehle belongs to the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, Owls, and Modern Woodmen of America. In politics he is independent, voting for the man rather than for the party. His keen, shrewd business sense and thorough understanding of his work have been valuable assets in his life career, and the success which has attended him has been won through hard endeavor.

STROM, Harry, business agent for the union organization of working carpenters of the Tri-cities, is a man of unusual business and executive ability. He was born in Geneseo, Ill., in 1875, a son of Jonas and Bretta (Goldenhook) Strom, natives of Sweden. The mother came to this country in 1870, and the father followed two years later, having been for thirty years a soldier in the Swedish army. After his arrival, he remained in America until 1876, then returned. The mother is still living, residing at Geneseo. Harry Strom is the youngest child in the family.

Growing up at Geneseo, Harry Strom attended school there and at Chariton, Ia., and at the age of fourteen years, began learning the trade of a mason, and later, learned the carpenter trade. In 1895 he enlisted in Company B, Sixth Infantry, Illinois National Guards, and served with his company as corporal through the Spanish-American war. After the war he was elected first sergeant of the company and served until his removal from Geneseo. He was voted the best first sergeant and drill master the company had ever had, because of his strict adherence to discipline and the impartiality shown toward all the boys. In 1905, he came to Moline, where he worked as a carpenter, until he received his present appointment. The duties pertaining to it engross his attention, and he is one of the best men his fellow workers have ever had to represent them. His residence is at No. 507 Sixth Avenue, East Moline, where he has built a comfortable home.

In 1902, Harry Strom married Anna Wahl, a native of Germany. They have two children: Evelyn and Bernard. Politically, he is a socialist. He represents ten unions of carpenters. As he is a practical carpenter himself, and has been foreman of the construction work on the largest buildings put up in the Tri-Cities, he is very competent to take care of the interests of his unions, and at the same time understands the needs of the employers so that he is not at all unreasonable in his demands. His office is now at the Industrial Home Building, Rock Island. Such men as Mr. Strom do much to advance the interests of the working men and to obtain justice for them, without impairing their standing with the community at large.

SUDERSTROM, Oliver Edward.—East Moline is a thriving community, the home of many large concerns, whose prosperity has been established through the efforts of its resourceful business men. As are the men of any locality, so is that community. If they do not appreciate the value of modern ideas and business vim, their city suffers accordingly. One of the men who has always recognized this fact, and striven to aid his section by individual effort is Oliver Edward Suderstrom, formerly proprietor of a first-class hardware, paint and wallpaper store, located at No. 824, First avenue, East Moline. He was born in Sweden in 1877, being a son of Peter and Anna (Westlund) Suderstrom, both natives of Sweden. The family came to this country in 1883, and locating at Moline became valuable additions to that section. The father worked as a carpenter until his death in 1900. His widow survives, making her home at Des Moines, Iowa. They had four children as follows: Oliver Edward and Beatrice born in Sweden; Ernest born in Moline, and Esther, born in Missouri.

Oliver Edward Suderstrom attended school at Moline and Springfield, Mo., and in 1889 he came to Davenport, Iowa, where he became a contractor in 1906. In that fall he came to East Moline, realizing better opportunities here, although the town was still in its infancy, and opened a small store, handling wall paper and paints. His confidence in the future of this place was justified, for he developed his business until he carried a large stock of hardware in addition to other commodities, and was the leading decorator of the place. So large was his business that he gave employment to ten men as paperhangers and painters.

In 1906 Mr. Suderstrom married Julia Breneman, born in Pennsylvania. Mr. Suderstrom belongs to the Masonic lodge of Silvis, and the Odd Fellows of East Moline. In political views he is very liberal. Energetic, enthusiastic and willing to lend his aid to any measure looking towards the advancement of East Moline, he is certainly one of its most desirable citizens, and is destined to become still more prosperous with its growth and material development.

SUMMERS, R. G. & SON, dealers in tin, sheet iron, furnace and cornice work, with offices and store at No. 1416 Sixth avenue, Rock Island, are among the progressive men of this county. Robert G. Summers, the senior member of the firm, was born May 27, 1856, at Big Rock, Kane county, Ill., being a son of Joseph and Abbie (Livingston) Summers. Joseph Summers was born in England in 1825, but came with his parents to America in 1832. They settled first in New York state, but later moved to Kane county, Ill. Joseph Summers grew to manhood in Kane county, where he began farming with his father. Later he married Miss Abbie Livingston. His children were: Alice, Fannie A., Federal, Robert G., Clinton, Ernest, Cora and Joseph.

When Robert G. Summers was nine years old the family moved to Mercer county, Ill., where he grew to manhood, attending the public schools, and helping his father, as his help was required. The father carried on a large farming and stock raising business, and needed the services of his boys. When he was twenty-two years old Robert G. Summers left home and spent several years farming in Kane county, after which he went to Chicago, where he worked at street construction for a short time. He then came to Rock Island, where he learned the tin-smithing trade with the Willard Baker Company, finally establishing himself in business on Twentieth street. He dealt in stoves and hardware, house furnishings and similar goods, thus continuing for six years. He then moved his business to a shop in the rear of his house at No. 1416 Sixth avenue, where it is still carried on.

Mr. Summers was married at Rock Island,

February 24, 1885, to Libbie Gunsaulus of Rock Island, daughter of John Gunsaulus of this city. Mr. Summers and his wife have two children: Raymond Eugene and Myrtle May. He is a member of the First Baptist church, in which he is a deacon and trustee, having held these offices for twelve years. He is a strict prohibitionist, and exerts a powerful influence in the temperance cause. For twenty-four years he has been a member of the Modern Woodmen, being a charter member of Camp No. 309, Rock Island. An industrious worker, a thrifty business man, Mr. Summers has met with gratifying success, and is numbered among the leading exponents of his calling in this city.

SUTLEY, Harry, foreman of the wood department of the Moline Plow Company of Rock Island, and one of the best men in his line in the business, has long been one of the responsible citizens of Rock Island. He was born in Alabama June 23, 1855, being a son of Alfred L. and Mary (Harris) Sutley, the former born in Maine and the latter in Georgia. The father was a millwright, and came to Illinois about 1849, spending several years in Springfield, although he spent much time in traveling, building mills at various places. He died in Alabama, when eighty-one years old, but his widow survives, and until 1909, made her home with her son, Harry, but is now residing at Wilmington, Ill.

Harry Sutley was educated in the public schools of Springfield, and was brought up in the city. After leaving school he entered a sash, door and blind factory, but within four years went to Fort Wayne, Ind., where he was employed by the N. G. Old Wheel Company. Mr. Sutley remained there for four years more, and then made a trip through the southern states that lasted nine months, then visited the Centennial exposition at Philadelphia in 1876. Following this he came to Moline, entering the employ of the Deere Manufacturing Company, and remained three years. Leaving Moline, he went to Toledo, Ohio, to work for the Malburn Wagon Company for two years, and on returning to Moline, was again with the Deere people for three years, leaving them to enter the Rock Island Sash, Door and Blind Company. Spending six years with this company he left in 1897, to engage with the Moline Plow Company as foreman of their wood department, and has held that responsible position ever since.

Mr. Sutley was married in Moline, June 14, 1882, to Maggie J. Heck, daughter of William and Rachel (Hendricks) Heck, farming people, who both died in Moline. William Heck came to Rock Island county with his parents John and Mary Heck from Pennsylvania in 1843, the Heck family being among the pioneers of Rock Island county. John Heck was nearly ninety-two years of age at time of death in 1879. William Heck died December 8, 1881 and his wife's death occurred February 3, 1892. Mrs. Sutley has one sister, Josephine, wife of Charles Chapman of Moline. Two children are the family of Mr. and Mrs. Sutley: Alice F., born in Moline, January 4, 1884, married in 1908 Robert A. Odell, an attorney of Los Angeles, Cal.; and William C., born in Moline, in September, 1886, married Ada Orr of Hillsdale, and they live at Sheridan, Wyo., where he is agent for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. Mr. Sutley is a republican. He served as president of the board of education in South Moline township for two years. Fraternally, he belongs to Blue Lodge No. 658, A. F. & A. M.; Chapter No. 18, R. A.; Moline Lodge No. 133, I. O. O. F., Stewart Camp No. 657, M. W. A., and to the Mystic Workers of Moline. He is liberal in religious belief, but his wife belongs to the Memorial Methodist church. Mr. Sutley owns his home at No. 614 Fortieth street, Rock Island, a house in Heeley's addition to Moline and one on Fifteenth street and Twenty-fifth avenue, Moline. He is one of the best known men in the county, and has hosts of friends here and in the various places where he lived, all of whom appreciate his many excellent traits of character and business acumen.

SUTTER, Martin A., a well known resident of Rock Island, Ill., has lived in the vicinity nearly all his life. He was born at Burlington, Ia., September 21, 1874, a son of Christ and Catherine (Uhr) Sutter, natives of Switzerland, the father born in 1837 and the mother in 1840. The parents came to America in 1869 and located at Burlington, Ia., where the father established a successful business as a contractor and builder. He has lived retired from active business for several years. His wife is an only child and her parents both died in Europe. Christ and Catherine Sutter had children as follows: Catherine, who is the wife of John Knapf, of Burlington, Ia.; Robert, who is of North Yakima, Wash.; Christ, who died in 1903; John, who is a carpenter of Burlington, Ia.; and Martin A. Martin A. Sutter was educated at Burlington and there worked with his father and learned the trade of a carpenter, which he has since followed and has been employed at times by Aaron Anderson, being a skillful and practical workman who has plenty of work in his line. He came to Rock Island in 1902 and located at 928 Eighth avenue, which was his home for a time, but the family now reside at 708 Thirtieth avenue, where they have a beautiful home, erected by Mr. Sutter about five years ago. He is regarded as an upright, useful citizen, and a representative of the best interests of his community. Mr. Sutter served a few months in the Spanish-American War, being mustered in July 8, 1898, and discharged September of the same year.

On June 19, 1901, at Burlington, Ia., Martin A. Sutter married Miss Elizabeth Richter, of that city, whose father lived in that city several years, and in 1908 moved from there to Cumberland, Wis., and bought a farm. The mother died at Burlington, Ia., in 1891. They had four children: Lena, who is the wife of Elmer Houston, a lather by trade, lives at Rock Island; Anna, who is the wife of Albert Consinau, a cigar-maker of Burlington; Fred, who is deceased; and Mrs. Sutter. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Sutter spent about one year at St. Louis, Mo., and then came to Rock Island.

SUTTON, Sylvester, a prosperous retired farmer of Milan, is one of the men who have rendered material assistance in the upbuilding of Rock Island county. He was born in Ripley county, Ind., April 10, 1840, a son of John and Susan (Dodge) Sutton, farming people. These parents came to Illinois in 1843, locating on a farm of eighty acres in Edgington township, which the father purchased. Later they moved to Bowling township, and for several years after 1850, made that township their home. From there they went to Rock Island, then to Black Hawk township, and finally in 1892, settled at Milan.

Sylvester Sutton was educated in the schools of Rock Island county, and assisted his father in the farm work until his enlistment for service during the Civil War, in 1861, in an independent company under Captain Smith and Colonel Moore. At the expiration of his three months' service, he reenlisted as a private, on August 9, 1862, in Company J. One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Capt. John Marvin of Rock Island. He was in the Siege of Vicksburg, the engagement at Brown's Mill and that at Little Rock, as well as others of equal importance, finally being mustered out on July 13, 1865.

Returning to Bowling township, Mr. Sutton resumed his agricultural operations, and until his retirement was engaged in farming and teaming. He divided his activities between Bowling and Black Hawk townships, and during his residence in the latter, served as a constable for eight years. Politically he is a republican. He is a member of the Presbyterian church. For some years he has been living retired at Milan, owning his comfortable residence in that town.

On March 24, 1866, Sylvester Sutton was married to Nebraska Ferris, born at Milan, Ill., December 7, 1850, a daughter of William and Margaret Ferris, the former born June 2, 1808, and the latter born November 6, 1811, both being natives of New Jersey. These parents moved from New Jersey to Rock Island county in 1843. They had four children, one son and three daughters, but Mrs. Sutton is the only survivor. By trade Mr. Ferris was a tailor. His death occurred March 14, 1900, at Milan. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton became the parents of three children: William, who was born January 6, 1870, is a farmer of Galesburg, Ill.; Mamie, who married Elmer Haines, a farmer of Milan; and Cora, who married John Roberts, employed at the boat yards. There is one grandchild in the family, named Sylvester J. Roberts.

SWANSON, Franz August, superintendent of the Riverside cemetery, and secretary and treasurer of the Cemetery Association, is a man to whom the present beautiful condition of this city of the dead is due in large measure. Mr. Swanson was born at Rock Island September 16, 1877, a son of Lund and Anna (Danielson) Swanson, both natives of Sweden. Lund Swanson came to America when sixteen years old, while his wife was brought here when three years old. In 1878, the father located at Moline, where he has since resided, being engaged in work in the factories of that city. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lund Swanson are as follows: Franz August, H. Mayme, Minnie M., F. Edward and Myrtle M., all of whom, as well as both parents, are living, and Attley, Hattie and Fred, who are deceased.

Franz August Swanson was reared at Moline where he attended the public schools. Upon finishing his education, he worked for the Moline Plow Company for seven years, for five he was a horseshoer. In 1907 Mr. Swanson was appointed to his present position, which he has filled very acceptably and capably. In 1907 Mr. Swanson was married to Mrs. Emma L. Kuschmann, widow of Albert Kuschmann, who had one child, Willis, by her first marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Swanson are the parents of a daughter, Dorothea. Fraternally, Mr. Swanson is a member of the Elks, of which he is past exalted ruler, and in 1906 was sent from Moline lodge as a delegate to the Elks grand lodge at Denver, Colo., convention. He is also an Odd Fellow, Red Man, Eagle, Knight of Pythias, and belongs to Doric Lodge No. 319, A. F. & A. M. His political affiliations are with the republican party, although in city matters he is very liberal. The pleasant family residence is at No. 2703 Sixth avenue. Very conscientious in his work, Mr. Swanson has developed the cemetery, and added to its natural beauties, until it is one of the finest in this part of the country.

SWANSON, John G.—Changes in existing conditions have developed new lines of endeavor, and the intelligent, reliable, responsible men of every community are taking advantage of opportunities thus offered. John G. Swanson of Rock Island, who was one of the most expert chauffeurs of Rock Island, and reflected credit on his work, and the training he has given himself, but is now conducting a buffet. Mr. Swanson was born in Opmana, Kristianstad county, state of Skane, Sweden, December 22, 1868, son of Olaf and Ida (Nelson) Swanson, the former born June, 1825, and the latter in 1828, both being natives of Opmana, Sweden. The father was a wealthy man, owning 200 acres of land, which he farmed, but owing to his confidence in one of his friends, he went on a note, and lost all his property. Leaving his native land, he came to the United States in 1869, and arriving at Rock Island, he entered the shops of the E. D. Buford Plow Works. Here he secured employment as a helper at a shears welding machine. Between 1869 and 1877, he visited his family, which he had left in Sweden, twice, and on his last trip remained three years, then returned to Rock Island, bringing his wife and two youngest children with him, and resumed work in the plow shops. In 1887 he went to McPherson county, Kas., and operated a rented farm, remaining there until 1901, when he came back to Rock Island, where he now lives with his son, John G. There were nine children in the family, three of whom died in infancy, the others being: Ida and Nels, who came to Rock Island in 1876, the former dying four years later, and the latter still making his home in this city; Swan and Annie who came here in 1877, both of whom are deceased; Olaf and John S., who came with their parents in 1880, live in Rock Island. Mrs. Swanson died in the fall of 1898, while on a visit to Rock Island. Mr. Swanson is a republican, and the entire family belong to the Lutheran church.

John G. Swanson was educated in the public schools of Sweden and Rock Island, and Augustana college, entering the latter institution prior to graduation from the grammar grade, and taking a two-year course. During his boyhood days he helped his father on the small farm he rented in Sweden, and in 1885 he and his brother Olaf went to McPherson county, Kas., renting a farm of 240 acres. On account of the hot winds which prevailed in 1887 these brothers failed, losing forty hogs that were all ready for shipment, and John G. Swanson traveled during the remainder of that year, and a portion of the next in New Mexico, Arizona and other southern states, working on railroads, ranches and engaging in similar lines, but in the fall of 1888 he went to Canton, Ill., entering the shops of Parlen & Orendorf as a steel welder. In 1896 he moved to Rock Island and engaged in teaming, and two years later went to work for Mr. R. R. Cable as coachman, later becoming chauffeur for the same family, and continued in Mr. Cable's employ for fifteen years. In September, 1912, Mr. Swanson purchased the buffet located at 1700 Fourth avenue, and since then has devoted his entire time to this business.

In November, 1902, Mr. Swanson was married in Moline to Agnes A. Bergendahl, born in Vesterjotland, Sweden, September 5, 1874, daughter of John and Christina (Anderson) Bergendahl. The family came to America in 1881, locating at Moline. One child, Madeline Marrior, was born of this marriage, on August 9, 1906. Mr. Swanson is a republican, and has been a member of the county central committee of his party since 1903, and was elected assistant supervisor in 1911. Fraternally he belongs to the Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen of America and Independent Order of Svithiod and the Moose. The Lutheran church holds his membership. He is an intelligent, hard working man, who holds the confidence of all who know him.

SWANSON, John Oscar, proprietor of the Union Express Company, conveniently located at No.

2023 Fourth avenue, Rock Island, is one of the substantial business men and native sons of the city. He was born on the corner of Third avenue and Twentieth street, February 4, 1872, a son of Swan and Tina (Peterson) Swanson, natives of Sweden, who came to America prior to marriage, settling in Rock Island. The father was a carpenter by trade, and followed this calling for some years, afterward was coachman for Benjamin Harper for several years, and following this, he owned and operated a first-class buffet on the corner of Third avenue and Twentieth street for many years. Moving to Goodhue, Minn., he located fourteen miles from Red Wing, where he still resides. His wife lives in Rock Island. They had two children, John Oscar, and Edward, deceased.

John Oscar Swanson was educated in the excellent schools of Rock Island. Then he learned the trade of blacksmithing, and followed it for five years, a portion of the time on Government Island, and during this period, he helped to build the bridge. In 1907, he embarked in his present business, which he has developed into an important enterprise. He is a reliable, sound business man, who knows how to take advantage of opportunities offered him, and to turn them to good account. On February 19, 1896, Mr. Swanson was married in Rock Island to Tina Rodeon of Berlin, Rock Island county. They have two children, Paul Lester and John Edwin. Mr. Swanson is not connected with any religious denomination. His political convictions are of such a nature that he prefers to vote for the man he deems best fitted for the office, and not to tie himself down to any particular party. Fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

SWEENEY, Edward Dennell (deceased), who, for a half century was a member of the Rock Island bar, was distinguished in his profession and prominent in other walks of life. He was born at Simsville, Dela., August 13, 1833, a son of Miles and Ann (Dennell) Sweeney. Miles Sweeney, the father, was born in the city of Philadelphia, Pa., November 29, 1803. When seven years old he lost his mother and when twelve years of age was apprenticed to the trade of cotton spinning, on the Brandywine, in Delaware, nevertheless managed to acquire sufficient book knowledge to become a school teacher. Later he moved to Mercer, Crawford county, Pa., where he engaged in farming until 1862, when he removed to Champaign county, Ill. In his later years he was a very active worker and faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal church. His pleasant, genial manner made him welcome in every circle. He died at the home of his son, Edward D. Sweeney, at Rock Island, when aged seventy-nine years. On October 3, 1825, he was married to Ann Dennell, who died in Champaign county, Ill., in August, 1862, at the age of fifty-six years. One son, A. B. Sweeney, served all through the Civil war as captain in an Illinois regiment, and, although severely wounded, was nursed back to health and returned to his family.

Edward Dennell Sweeney received his primary instruction from his father. He was an ambitious youth and taught school to aid in paying his expenses and thus secured academic advantages and passed through Allegheny college, at Meadville, Pa., then a famous institution of learning. On Washington's Birthday, 1857, he came to Alton, Ill., and soon went to Kane, Greene county, Ill., and taught school there for three months, in July of the same year coming to Rock Island and in the fall of that year was chosen principal of the second ward school, being the first incumbent under the new organization and was selected by competitive examination. While engaged in teaching he studied law under the late Hon. George W. Pleasants, for many years judge of the circuit and appellate courts. He was admitted to the bar in 1860 and soon afterward joined with William Jackson to form the law firm of Sweeney & Jackson. Later C. L. Walker was admitted to the firm, the style then becoming Sweeney, Jackson & Walker, which continued until Mr. Jackson withdrew, when the title became Sweeney & Walker. At the time of his death Mr. Sweeney was the senior member and was the oldest member in service of the Rock Island bar. A few weeks prior to his death, which occurred September 14, 1910, in his seventy-eighth year, Mr. Sweeney had celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his admission to the bar. He was appointed United States commissioner for the Second District, in 1861, an office he efficiently filled until it was abolished a short time before his death. For over thirty-five years he was division attorney for the St. Louis & Rock Island Division of the C. B. & Q. Railway and was regarded as one of the soundest corporation lawyers in the state. For over thirty years he was a director of the Rock Island National Bank; was president of the Davenport & Rock Island Ferry Company; was president and one of the founders of the Black Hawk Building & Loan and Savings Association; for many years was president and a director of the Banner Coal & Coal Oil Company, and was interested in other lines of business. He was a very active member of the republican party, always well posted and willingly took part in campaign speaking for others, while desiring no offices for himself.

Mr. Sweeney was twice married. His first wife, Harriet E. Allen, was born at Greenfield, Ill., July 13, 1834, and died March 20, 1889. She was a daughter of George W. and Caroline (Henderson) Allen. Mr. Allen was a pioneer at Greenfield, Ill., which he platted and named, and died there January 17, 1865. He was the first postmaster, holding the office for sixteen years; was the first merchant, in 1832; built the first mill in 1835, and for many years served in the office of justice of the peace. Five children were born to the above marriage, the survivors being: Mrs. F. S. Kenfield, of Long Beach Farm, Berry county, Mich., and Edward

A. and William J., both of Rock Island, the latter being a member of the law firm of Walker, Ingram & Sweeney. Mr. Sweeney's second marriage was to Miss Emma Tunnell, a niece of his first wife, and a resident of Rock Island. She is a daughter of William A. and Mary Jane (Allen) Tunnell. The father of Mrs. Sweeney, William Albertus Tunnell, was a prominent pioneer of Greene county, Ill. He was born in Tennessee, September 3, 1814, and died August 14, 1865, at Greenfield, Ill. He was a man of education, a student of history, a teacher, farmer and merchant, and during the Civil War was deputy internal revenue collector under President Lincoln. He married Mary Jane Allen, who was born at Whitehall, Greene county, Ill., October 5, 1828. During the war he wrote and published in newspaper articles, a history of Greene county, which was later published in book form.

Mrs. Sweeney completed her education by a course in Monticello seminary, Godfrey, Ill., and was a successful teacher in the public schools of Greenfield and Carrolton, Ill., and from 1883 until 1894, was assistant circuit clerk of Rock Island county. With Mr. Sweeney she enjoyed a trip to Europe in 1904 taking what is known as the Mediterranean Tour, and they also traveled extensively in their own country. At the time of his death, Mr. Sweeney had been a member of Rock Island Lodge No. 18, I. O. O. F., for over forty years and had filled all the offices in its gift. He was an earnest member of the First Methodist church of Rock Island and a regular attendant and for more than forty years taught the bible class in the Sunday school, of which he had been superintendent for many years. For over seventy years he had been a member of the church, having united with the same in Pennsylvania at the age of seven years and had belonged to the Rock Island church for over fifty years.

SWENSON, Anton S.—It has been only within comparatively recent years that the value of cement and the number of uses to which it may be put has been really appreciated by contractors and builders, but one who has been in the field for a long period and has done a great deal of work in the cement line is Anton S. Swenson, a general contractor in all kinds of cement, brick and tile work. He was born in Sweden, October 12, 1873, and is a son of Swen J. and Clara (Yarn) Peterson, who came to the United States in 1881 and settled at Red Wing, Minn. They resided there for one year and then moved to Aledo, Ill., where Swen J. Peterson died in 1882, his widow surviving him until 1891. Their children were as follows: John W., who is of Keithsburg, Ill.; Carl Otto, who is residing at Cloquet, Minn.; Anna L., who married Oscar Johnson, of Joy, Ill.; Clara, who married Fritz Carlson, of Cannon Falls, Minn.; Fritz, who is living at Joy, Ill.; August, who is of Aledo, Ill.; Helga, who is the widow of Theo Boquet, of Los Angeles, Cal.; and Anton S.

Anton S. Swenson received his education in the public schools of Aledo, Ill., and resided at home until the death of his mother, at which time he went to Vermilion, S. D., and for nine years was employed on a ranch. Returning to Aledo for three months, he then went to Moline, where for eight years he was employed as a mason, and learned the concrete business with Gusted & Sons, contractors. In 1906 Mr. Swenson started in the cement contracting business at Silvis, where the first building of the town was given its foundation by him, but during the following year he severed his connections with his firm and formed a partnership with Sharp Silvis, whose interests he purchased in 1908, since which time he has operated alone. He does all kinds of cement, brick and tile work, building cement houses, sidewalks, porch columns and flower urns, and has constructed seven cement houses, one cement business block, and the cement city hall at Stockton, Ia., and does practically all the cement work within a radius of fifty miles of Moline and his business has increased steadily each year, he now employing ten men. Mr. Swenson owns a fine residence at Fifth street and Third avenue, East Moline, and is known as one of that locality's most progressive business men.

On April 28, 1906, Anton S. Swenson was married to Lena Catherine Nitz, who was born at Moline, Ill., February 28, 1883, a daughter of Herman and Lena (Kroger) Nitz, the former a native of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Swenson are members of the Lutheran church. He is an independent republican in politics, and is socially connected with Tent No. 583 and Encampment No. 153 of the Odd Fellows, the Fraternal Reserve Union of Moline, and the Fraternal Order of Eagles of Silvis, Ill.

TAPPENDORF, Wolf Henry, a general contractor and builder, specializing in church construction, is a man whose fame has spread all over the country, so that he has contracts throughout the United States. He was born in Holstein, Germany, a son of John Tappendorf, who came to the United States in 1883, being a sailor by occupation. Wolf Henry Tappendorf attended the public schools, and learned the trade of cabinetmaking in his native land. After giving his country three years' military service, he came to America in 1885, and locating at Davenport, Ia., worked in a furniture factory for two years. He then engaged with a Mr. Schnell, with whom he continued until 1896, becoming foreman. In the latter year, Wolf Henry Tappendorf bought out his employer, and has since continued alone, with offices and factory at Nos. 1816-1820 Fourth avenue, Rock Island.

In 1890, Wolf Henry Tappendorf married Elfrada Smith, a daughter of W. M. Smith, manufacturer of vinegar, of Pennsylvania Dutch extraction. Mr. and Mrs. Tappendorf are the parents of four children: Harry M., Mathew, Walter and Helen. Politically, he is a democrat. Fraternally, he belongs to the Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen of America and Elks, while socially he is a Turner. The family residence is at No. 920 Twenty-first street, and Mr. Tappendorf owns it as well as his factory and offices. His work is high class in quality, and his name stands for honesty in carrying out the terms of his contracts, and perfect understanding of every detail. His success reflects credit not only upon himself, but the city which is the home of his efforts.

TAVENNER, Charles Baker.—Those fortunate enough to own Rock Island country farm land are slow in parting from it, no matter how high a price may be offered for it, for they realize the safety and wisdom of the investment. Even those who no longer care to operate the land themselves, do not desire to sell, and they show their foresight in holding to it. One of the men whose earlier years were spent upon his magnificent farm in Cordova township, is Charles Baker Tavenner, who is now conducting a flourishing livery and implement business in the village of Cordova. Mr. Tavenner was born in Morgan county, Ohio, March 1, 1850, a son of Samuel and Sarah (McRay) Tavenner, both of whom were born in Virginia. They are now deceased, both passing away in their native state, the mother when Charles B. was small. They were farming people all their lives. Seven children were born to them, five of whom survive: Mary Elizabeth, John Edward, Miranda Jane, Hiram Newton, a retired farmer, and Charles Baker.

The latter was reared on his father's farm in Ohio, whither the family had migrated, although a return was made to Virginia later on. While attending school, the lad learned farming, and was brought up carefully. In 1869 he came to Cordova township, where he obtained employment on a farm. In time he invested in farm property, now owning 240 acres of land on section 33, Cordova township. In 1904 he moved into the village of Cordova, where he embarked in a livery and implement business which he is still conducting with gratifying results.

In 1874 Mr. Tavenner was married to Catherine Marshall, whom he had the misfortune to lose in 1905. She was born in Cordova township and was universally beloved. One child was born to this marriage: Charity M., wife of Lester Benway. Mr. Tavenner is a democrat and served very acceptably as road commissioner for fifteen years. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and a man of sterling integrity of character. In all of his transactions he shows a true appreciation of what is due from him to others, and stands very high in his community.

TAYLOR, Carlton Gaius, chief of the correspondence department of the Modern Woodmen of America, at Rock Island, Ill., has been connected with this large fraternal organization for nearly fifteen years and is well and favorably known to a large number of its members. Mr. Taylor is a native of Illinois, having been born at Pontiac, September 9, 1874, a son of Carlton Eleazer and Victorine Anne (Colwell) Taylor. He is descended on his father's side from old English toby stock, and on the maternal side is a lineal descendant of Roger Williams of Rhode Island and of the poet Young, the author of "Night Thoughts" and other well-known works.

Carlton Eleazer Taylor, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born in Nova Scotia in 1840, and was left an orphan at the age of three years. He was bound out until reaching his majority, and about the close of the Civil war came to the United States, finally locating in Illinois. Here he worked his way through the old Chicago University and Theological Seminary, graduating in 1872, and later receiving the degree of Ph.D. from Shurtleff College, Upper Alton, Ill., and that of LL.D. from La Grange College, LaGrange, Mo. Dr. Taylor, still hale and hearty despite his advanced years, continues active in business affairs, and during his long years of earnest endeavor has filled successful pastorates of the Baptist faith in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri. For many years he was secretary of the Illinois Baptist General Association. Mrs. Taylor, who was born at Kenosha, Wis., in 1845, died in 1903.

Carlton Gaius Taylor was sixteen years of age when the family came to Rock Island, Ill. His boyhood was spent much the same as that of any normal youth, save that he was exceptionally fond of books and his taste ran to reading rather than to sports. He graduated from the Atlanta High school, Atlanta, Ill., and from Augustana College, Rock Island, from which he received the degree of A. B. in 1897. He then began teaching in the public and country schools of Rock Island county, but on October 1, 1897, entered the auditing department of the Modern Woodmen of America and on September 6, 1901, was given charge of the correspondence department, a position which he has held to the present time. Mr. Taylor is a member of Camp No. 309, M. W. A., Rock Island Chapter No. 269, O. E. S., was made a Master Mason in Trio Lodge No. 57, A. F. & A. M., in June, 1899, and was Worshipful Master of that lodge in 1911 and 1912. He takes a keen interest in Masonic affairs and is a commissioned Grand lecturer of the Illinois Grand Lodge. He also belongs to Rock Island Chapter No. 18, R. A. M., at present holding the office of Captain of the Host in that body. He is a communicant of the Rock Island Baptist church, and a progressive in his political belief.

Mr. Taylor was married June 5, 1905, at Davenport, Iowa, to Miss Helen Rosetta Powell, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Powell of that city, and to this union there has been born one son, Carlton Gartside Taylor, March 26, 1908.

TAYLOR, Nathan A.—Those who understand the obligation under which the nation stands to the men who, during the Civil war, risked life and limb in its defense, appreciate the veterans of that mighty struggle still left to the country.

Rock Island county is proud of those belonging to it and pays them distinguished honor whenever opportunity offers. One of these revered relics of the war, long a resident of the county, and for the past seventeen years living at Reynolds, is Nathan A. Taylor, now weighmaster at the stock yards. He was born August 3, 1848, in Woodstock, McHenry county, Ill., and has spent his life in this state. His maternal grandfather, David Duffield, settled in McHenry county in 1833, being among the first settlers of that locality, and there he died. His paternal grandfather, William Taylor, lived and died in Greenbrier county, W. Va. There he married a Miss Murphy of Virginia, a daughter of Patrick Murphy, an Irishman by birth, and an early settler in that part of the Old Dominion. By this marriage there were twelve children, among them being David M., the father of Nathan A. Taylor. David M. Taylor was born in Greenbrier county, W. Va., in 1826, but came to Illinois at an early day, settling in McHenry county. Buying a farm in Dorr township, he continued farming operations as he had done in Virginia. Indians were still roving about, and the land was entirely wild. The hard life of a pioneer told upon him, and he died when only thirty-one years old. He was married in his new locality to Jane Duffield, who died April 12, 1856. They had children as follows: E. E. Taylor of Elgin, Ill., who married Edith Marshall, and during the Civil war served in Elgin Battery, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry; Nathan A.; Christopher D., who is of Darian, Wis.; Alphens M., who is of Los Angeles, Cal., and Edgar B., who is deceased.

Nathan A. Taylor was left an orphan in boyhood, losing his parents when he was not much more than seven years old, and was forced to work to take care of himself. He lived with three different families, who sent him to school two months in the year, and the other ten exacted almost a man's work from him. When the war broke out no one was more enthusiastic than he, and he enlisted when only thirteen years old on September 20, 1862, in the Elgin Battery, which was immediately attached to the Army of the Tennessee. He participated in the battle of Salina, on the Cumberland river. On July 6, 1863, he was sent to the hospital at Lebanon, Tenn., suffering with typhoid fever, and later was removed to Louisville, Ky., receiving his discharge September 26, 1863. Following this he returned to McHenry county, Ill., where, entering school, he studied until January 22, 1864, when he re-enlisted as a private in Company G, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, Captain Lewis D. Kelly and Colonel John L. Beveridge commanding. This detachment was sent to join the Army of the West, and was put on special duty fighting bushwhackers. Mr. Taylor served on his second enlistment until June, 1866, when he was discharged. During the period of its service his regiment did more marching than any other in the Department of Missouri. In the Price raid alone, they marched over 1,000 miles. Returning again to McHenry county, Mr. Taylor worked among farmers until 1881, when he came to Rock Island county, and renting land, lived upon it until 1886, when he bought eighty acres in the center of Edgington township, continuing to operate it until 1895, when he accepted his present position, and selling his farm, in 1903, settled at Reynolds.

Nathan A. Taylor was married on February 27, 1881, to Olive Johnson of Edgington township, daughter of Storer and Rasha (Seaver) Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have one child: Ella M., who married (first) Guy W. Whaeton. He died in 1903, and she married (second) C. M. Bull and now lives at Buffalo Prairie. By her first marriage Ella M. had a daughter, Ada M., born May 9, 1903. Mr. Taylor belongs to Reynolds Post No. 557, G. A. R., having been its commander for eight years, and for years has been quartermaster. He also belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. The Methodist church holds his membership. In politics he is a staunch democrat, but has not sought public office. He is one of the most highly respected men of the county, and has friends all over it, who appreciate his many excellent qualities.

TAYLOR, Oren Edgar.—Rock Island county land is very valuable and responds readily to cultivation, so that the crops produced within its confines compare favorably with those of almost any other section of the state. One of the men engaged in an agricultural life is Oren Edgar Taylor, cultivating 178 acres in Buffalo Prairie township. He was born near the village of Elmwood, in Henderson county, Ill., a son of William and Harriet (Hester) Taylor, the latter being deceased, but the former survives. He was a soldier in the Civil war. Oren Edgar Taylor grew to manhood on a farm in Buffalo Prairie township, and attended the district schools and a school at Muscatine, Iowa, being three years at the latter. He began learning the carpenter trade, but never completed it, as he began working as traction engineer, following that calling three years. His inclinations, however, were for an agricultural life, and from 1894 to 1900 he farmed in Fruitland township, Muscatine county, Iowa, going in the latter year to Washington county, Kas., where he continued farming a portion of one season, and thrashed during the rest of it. Returning to Rock Island county in October, 1909, he located on the farm he is now conducting.

On December 24, 1894, he married Miss Effie Cunningham of Rock Island county, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Hogan) Cunningham. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor are the parents of six children: Mildred, Herbert, Edith, Orville, Everett and Albert. In politics he is a democrat. Although not affiliated with any religious denomination, Mr. Taylor tries to carry on his affairs according to the Golden Rule. He is a good farmer, excellent citizen and stands high in his community.

TAYLOR, Mrs. Rebecca, one of the esteemed residents of Rock Island, residing at No. 526 Fifteenth street, this city, was born at Lockport, N. Y., December 28, 1851. She was brought to Illinois by her parents, Barman and Mary Ann (Cannam) Cannam in 1853. They were natives of Huntingdon, England, who came to America in 1849 and traveled about considerably before being satisfied with a location. The father was a farmer, who tilled the soil in several places, moving to Buffalo Prairie, Ill., in 1876, where he also operated a farm. Mrs. Taylor was married at Milan, Ill., December 11, 1870, and had the following children: Minnie, who married William Andrew of Rock Island; Grace, who married E. A. Richards of Rock Island; and Nancy, who married Ernest Fuhr, a farmer of Buffalo Prairie. She has seven grandchildren. In the family of her parents there were children as follows: William C., who is a farmer of Black Hawk township; John S., who is a farmer of Buffalo Prairie; and Eliza, who is the wife of Willis Benn, in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad at Rock Island. The father died March 8, 1906, the mother having passed away July 26, 1889.

After residing at Viola eight years, Mrs. Taylor came to Rock Island, which has continued to be her home. Prior to 1896, Mrs. Taylor was a Methodist, but in that year she joined the United Presbyterian church, and has been one of its active workers ever since. She is very conspicuous in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Rock Island, now being its vice-president. Among other services instituted by her is the holding of meetings every six weeks at the county jail. She also was a member of the Helper's Association of the Y. M. C. A., and belongs to the Tri-City Social Club. A lady of her influence and standing is a strong moral force in any undertaking, and much of her time is devoted to charitable and temperance work. She thoroughly understands conditions, and knows how to give help sympathetically and effectively. Her name is intimately associated with the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union all over the state, and the good she accomplishes cannot be accurately estimated.

TAYLOR, Robert B.—The farmer after years of strenuous endeavor usually has something to show for his active labors, for if he has bought land, it stands as a source of income to him, in his old age. This feature of his work is one that appeals to many who recognize the advantages of thus providing for declining years as well as for present needs, and for this result they are willing to labor hard, both early and late, knowing that eventually they will reap their reward. One of the representative farmers of Rock Island county is Robert B. Taylor, owner of 120 acres in Buffalo Prairie township. He was born in Mercer county, Pa., December 1, 1846, a son of Benjamin and Nancy J. (Means) Taylor, the former born in Delaware, and the latter in Pennsylvania. The father came west in 1840, locating in Jackson county on a farm, taking up land from the government to the extent of 160 acres. He found plenty of Indians when he first came here. His death occurred in Mercer county, Ill., in 1900, but his wife died in 1858. They had four children: Robert B., Edward, Anna, and Benjamin.

Until he was seventeen years old, Robert B. Taylor remained at home, attending public school, and assisting his father. In 1863 he enlisted for service in the Civil war in Company D, Sixty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Warren, serving for one year, when he was mustered out at Springfield, about October 1, 1865. He was with General Thomas in the battles of Franklin, Murphysboro and Nashville, and was on several long marches. Returning home, Mr. Taylor commenced farming for himself, and now owns 120 acres on section 9, Buffalo Prairie township, which he bought in 1880. In 1895, he built his present modern residence.

In 1874 Mr. Taylor was married to Rebecca Kannam, daughter of Burnham Kannam. There were three children by this marriage: Minnie, wife of William Andrews; Grace, wife of Elma Richards, and Nancy, wife of Ernest Fuhr. There are six grandchildren. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Taylor married Maggie Rounds. In politics, he is a republican, while in religious faith he leans towards the Methodist church. He is a member of the G. A. R., and of the I. O. O. F. of Rock Island. A hard-working, thrifty man he has accumulated a sufficiency, and has a nice farm while the improvements he has put upon it are excellent.

TAZE, William Irving.—The credit of the nation and the very life of its people rest upon the solidity of its banking institutions. When they become unstable the nation will fall in ruins. It is, therefore, exceedingly necessary to guard against any financial calamity which might befall the country, by placing in charge of the banks only men of unblemished character, highest probity and extensive financial experience. One of the men who combines in his character all of these requisites, with a remarkable business success is William Irving Taze, cashier of the Bank of East Moline. He was born in Oxford township, Henry county, Ill., January 9, 1876, being a son of John M. and Elizabeth S. (Taze) Taze, both of Westmoreland county, Pa. The father was a farmer and banker, who was an early settler of Henry county, Ill. In the early sixties he went into the Rocky Mountains and spent five years there prospecting and exploring. His death occurred July 12, 1909, when he was aged seventy-seven years, but his widow survives, making her home at No. 1716 Twelfth avenue, Rock Island.

William Irving Taze received but meagre educational advantages and was brought up to very hard work and thrifty habits which resulted in grounding him in sterling qualities, and developing a keen business sense and sound judgment.

He was graduated from the Alpha high school in 1895, and Galesburg business college in 1897, and in December of that year he became connected with the banking business, rising through all the departments to his present one, and proving his worth in each. He has been president of the Commercial Club and clerk of the board of education; director and treasurer of the County Club and belongs to other clubs and societies. An enthusiastic Mason, he has passed through the various degrees and now is a Knight Templar. He also belongs to the Eastern Star. In religious faith he is a Baptist, and while reared a democrat, he is not radical in his views.

On January 25, 1899, Mr. Taze was married at Orion, Ill., to Mabel L. Long, only daughter of Dr. H. H. and Mary Long. Mrs. Taze was born at Orion in October of the same year as her husband. Dr. Long is the leading physician of Orion, and the family are prominent both socially and financially. Two children are in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Taze: Donovan Long, born May 13, 1901; and Edwin Harold, born July 4, 1904. Mr. Taze owns 545 acres in Henry county, Ill., five sections of land in Hansford and Sherman counties, Texas, four good lots at Chicago, and one at Kewanee. His bank and community are fortunate in the selection of Mr. Taze for his present responsible position, for he is a man in whom unbounded confidence is felt, and he can be safely trusted to guard the interests of the depositors, and at the same time make money for the stockholders.

THIESEN, Paul.—When a father can interest his sons and have them in business with him, the house is strengthened, and the product bettered. Such a house is the wagon factory of Paul Thiesen of Rock Island. Not only does Mr. Thiesen give all of his thought and business intelligence to the work, but he is ably assisted by his two sons, young men of more than ordinary ability. Mr. Thiesen was born at Davenport, Iowa, in 1854, a son of Paul and Mary (Schaffer) Thiesen. Mr. Thiesen attended the public schools of Davenport, Iowa, and Moline, to which latter city he came when twelve years old, and learned the trade of wagon making under James First of Rock Island county, Ill. In 1886 Mr. Thiesen established himself in business at his present location, corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street, Rock Island. Here he and his sons do all kinds of wagon making and repairing.

In 1882 Mr. Thiesen was married at Rock Island to Augusta Hennecke. They have three sons: Ernest L., Fred W. and Emil P. The eldest and youngest are in business with their father, but Fred W. is bookkeeper for the Rock Island Tool Company. Mr. Thiesen is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. In 1889, he was elected alderman from the Seventh Ward, and served in the city council for two years, giving his constituents an able and honorable representation that met with their approval, and gained him the respect of all who know him.

THIRTYACRE, Willis, a prosperous general farmer on 100 acres of rich land in Drury township, is one of the progressive men of Rock Island county, who recognizes the dignity of the position of the agriculturist, and who is doing all in his power to properly support it. He was born in Mercer county, Ill., July 17, 1881, a son of John L. and Amelia (Spoleder) (Schaefer) Thirtyacre, both natives of Hanover, Germany. The mother was born in 1840 and was baptized and confirmed in the German Lutheran church. Mrs. Thirtyacre was a daughter of Amelia Spoleder, born in Severshausen, Germany, January 19, 1812, and was married to August Spoleder in 1829. Mr. and Mrs. Spoleder had six children: Charlotte, of Germany; August J., deceased; Carrie, Mrs. Beard of Los Angeles, Cal.; Jane, Mrs. Fred Muhlenburg; Mary, Mrs. Jewett, deceased; and Amelia, Mrs. J. L. Thirtyacre. The entire family came to the United States in 1853, and Mrs. Spoleder died March 15, 1904, at the extreme old age of ninety-one years, long surviving her husband, who passed away October 25, 1878, aged sixty-six years. Mrs. Thirtyacre lived with her parents at New Boston, Eliza township, Mercer county, Ill., until her marriage to Charles Schaefer. They had one child, now Mrs. Carrie A. Smith. On June 18, 1863, Mr. Schaefer died. In November, 1863, his widow married John L. Thirtyacre, and they had three sons: John L., deceased; James Monroe; and Willis. John L. Thirtyacre died August 10, 1881, aged sixty-nine years, three months and twenty-nine days.

On May 27, 1886, Mrs. Thirtyacre married (third) James Drury, who still makes his home in Mercer county. Mrs. Drury died July 24, 1908, and is laid to rest in New Boston cemetery. Mr. Thirtyacre lies in Leach cemetery.

When he was seventeen years old Willis Thirtyacre left home and began working for himself on neighboring farms, continuing in this way for about seven years. His first bank account was started with the proceeds from the sale of a steer and a horse given him in compensation for labor at home. This money he placed in the bank, adding to it from time to time until in 1906, he came to Drury township and bought twenty acres of land. To this he added eighty acres more in 1909, and now has 100 acres in all, which he has brought into a fine state of cultivation.

In 1905 Mr. Thirtyacre was married to Miss Abbie Caroline Feldman, and they have one son, Paul Maynard, born May 29, 1905. Mrs. Thirtyacre is a daughter of Fred and Fredericka (Kleist) Feldman, natives of Germany. Mr. Thirtyacre belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Politically he is a republican. He is an excellent example of a self-made man and deserves unbounded credit for what he has been able to accomplish during his useful life.

THOMAS, Thomas Henshaw (deceased).—When a man possesses real ability and civic worth, his exertions in behalf of his associates are often rewarded by his selection for offices of responsibility in his community. This was the case with the late Thomas Henshaw Thomas, for many years one of the most thoroughly representative of the best class of public-spirited men of Rock Island. He not only built up a large business concern, but discharged the duties pertaining to more than one important office, and died holding the full confidence and esteem of those with whom he had been connected.

Mr. Thomas was born in England, in 1850. In 1870, he left his native land for the United States, and a year later, arrived in Rock Island, where from the first his worth was recognized. He established and built up the Thomas Drury Company, one of the reliable drug firms of the city. While giving it the strict attention such a concern required, Mr. Thomas rendered such valuable service to the republican party, that he was made a member of the school board, the Public Library board, in both of which bodies he made his influence felt, and received the appointment of postmaster from President McKinley, and for another four years from President Roosevelt.

On April 23, 1876, Mr. Thomas was married to Selene Swiler, born in Harrisburg, Pa., daughter of George W. and Agnes (Clendenin) Swiler. The family residence is located at No. 618 Eighteenth street, and here Mr. Thomas passed away, December 27, 1908.

After his demise, Mrs. Thomas took up his business cares, and is now acting as president of the Thomas Drug Company, and under her wise control, the concern founded by her husband, is growing, and maintaining the same standard he raised at its inception.

THOMAS, William H.—Rock Island county farmers are numbered among the most progressive in the country, for they long ago appreciated the value of modern methods and made practical application of them in their everyday work. As a result, the farms here are eagerly sought in all markets for their quality is generally recognized. One of the successful agriculturists of this section is William E. Thomas, owner of 240 acres of rich land in Buffalo Prairie township. He was born in this township, October 16, 1851, being a son of John C. and Elizabeth (Peppers) Thomas, and grandson of Isaac Thomas. The latter was born in an eastern state, but migrated to Illinois at an early date, and a wagonmaker by trade, he established a shop in Illinois City. John C. Thomas was the first white child born in Illinois City. He spent his life as a farmer, with the exception of three years when he served in an Illinois Volunteer regiment during the Civil war. His death occurred in Buffalo Prairie township, when he was fifty-seven years old. His widow survives, making her home in Illinois City. Their children were: Alice, William H., Isaac Leonidas, Benjamin F., Charles, Jane, Joseph O., and Fannie.

William H. Thomas was educated in the district schools and had Mary Moore, C. M. Rood and Jeff Davis as his teachers. When eighteen years old, he left school, and worked for his father until he attained his majority, when he rented various farms until he bought his present place. This property has been greatly enhanced in value by the work Mr. Thomas has put upon it, and its appearance reflects his good management.

Mr. Thomas married Jane Moore, daughter of Perry Moore, an old resident of the county. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are: Melvin of Illinois City, married Lula Snell, issue,—Fern and William; and Merle L., Catherine, John, and Oliver, all at home. Mr. Thomas belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. In political faith he is a republican, but his time has been so occupied with his private affairs, that he has not found opportunity to enter public life. Sound and reliable, a good worker and thrifty in his habits, Mr. Thomas belongs to the class that make up the backbone of the nation, and he has the confidence and respect of his associates.

THOMSON, Franklin C., general contractor and builder, specializing in concrete work, has had an experience in the latter of ten years' standing, and is recognized as a leader in those jobs which require particularly good work. He was born in Geneseo, Ill., in 1869, a son of John P. and Letitia (Cole) Thomson, natives of New York City. The father was a stationary engineer in New York City, but brought his family west in 1856, locating at Geneseo, Ill., where he spent sixteen years as an engineer. He then came to Moline, arriving in this city in 1873, and engaged with the Moline Wagon Company for nineteen years, after which he lived retired until his death in 1911. His wife died in 1904, having borne her husband six children: David, Ruth, and George, all deceased, and Thomas W., Franklin C. and Harry C., living.

Franklin C. Thomson was reared at Moline, where he received an educational training in the excellent public schools here. His first employment was working in the shops of Moline at seventy-five cents per day. Following this, he learned the carpenter trade, and worked for other contractors, until he embarked in business for himself. He has built over fifty houses in Moline, and has employment for eight assistants. His contracts are faithfully carried out, and he stands high with his business associates.

In 1893, Mr. Thomson married Harriet Trevor, born in Rock Island county, and they have three children: Wayne Acton, Alson Roy and Lyle Merritt. Fraternally, Mr. Thomson is an Odd Fellow, Modern Woodmen of America, and belongs to the Royal Arcanum. He has always voted for the man he deemed best fitted for the office in question, and is very conscientious about his civic duties. His residence is at No. 1322 Twenty-third avenue, Moline, while his shop is in the rear. A man of unusual ability, experienced and faithful to his promises, Mr. Thomson is not only an excellent contractor, but a good citizen, and loyal friend.

THOMPSON, Charles L.—For sixteen years, Charles L. Thompson has been a plastering contractor, making a specialty of stucco and ornamental plastering and has executed some very important contracts throughout the county, making Rock Island his base of operation. He was born in Rock Island, in 1859, a son of William and Ellen (Richards) Thompson. The father was born in Pennsylvania, but came to Rock Island when twelve years old. Here he learned the plastering trade, followed it until his death, January 9, 1906, his remains being interred in Rock Island. He was one of the leading contractors as well as one of the oldest in this section, and was highly respected by all who knew him. His wife died December 24, 1893, and is also buried in Rock Island.

Charles L. Thompson was reared in Rock Island, where he attended the public schools. After completing his education, he worked with his father, and has been in this line of business ever since, becoming one of the leaders in his line. He had the contract for the plaster work on all of the principal school houses, the public library and the Harms Hotel, and also contracts for the Rock Island Railroad on their stations in the southwest, in which section they have been extending their lines.

On November 30, 1892, Mr. Thompson was married to Sue Miller, born in Rock Island. Four children have been born to them: Chester C., in business with his father; and Ellen, Mary and Suzanne, all at home. Mr. Thompson owns the beautiful family residence at No. 920 Nineteenth street and other property in Rock Island. Politically, he is a democrat, and served as alderman from the fourth ward for two terms, during which time he gave his constituents a capable service. Fraternally, he belongs to the Elks and Modern Woodmen of America. The religious affiliations of himself and the family are with the Methodist church. His record as both a private citizen and public official is marked by honorable intention and upright fulfillment, and his reward has been well deserved.

THOMPSON, Floyd Eugene.—Not by gift or purchase or influence can one rise at the bar, but solely by merit must he gain his reputation, his ability winning him greatness and enabling him to pass on the highway of life many who, perhaps, had accomplished part of the journey ere he started out. Unless the modern lawyer is a man of sound judgment, possessed of liberal education and stern training, combined with a keen insight into human nature, there is little hope of his meeting with any marked degree of success. Modern jurisprudence has become more and more intricate, because of new conditions and laws; and to the attorney is left the interpretation of these laws. Determination to win, untiring effort, and a natural inclination are superinduced upon a careful and thorough training in the case of Floyd Eugene Thompson, the subject of this sketch. Before he had rounded out the twenty-fifth cycle of years, Mr.

Thompson was one of the eminent lawyers of western Illinois, was elected state's attorney of Rock Island county, and had won distinction by superior ability in his chosen profession.

Floyd Eugene Thompson was born at Roodhouse, Illinois, on December 25, 1887. He is the oldest of a family of five children, namely, Emory Arthur, born March 14, 1890; Mabel Ellen, born November 21, 1891; Hazel Jane, born February 5, 1893; and David Edwards, born April 21, 1895. The father, Albert Alonzo Thompson, was born near Roodhouse, Ill., December 8, 1864; and the mother, Sarah Josephine (Edwards) Thompson, was born at McLeansboro, Ill., January 3, 1864. They were united in marriage July 29, 1886. Albert Alonzo Thompson, the eighth of twelve children is a great reader, and possesses a mechanical turn of mind. He is jovial, generous to a fault, and always ready to lend a helping hand to those in need. A well educated man, he has sacrificed to an extreme that his children might receive a high school training. He ranks well among the leading farmers and stock breeders of Greene county, Ill. Sarah Josephine (Edwards) Thompson is one of five children, one a half sister, victims of the hard times following the Civil war. The loss of her father when she was three years old, compelled her to start earning her living at the early age of ten years. Being a woman of exceptional natural ability, she fitted herself well for the home training of her children, and has left nothing undone that a mother could do toward making home-loving, patriotic men and women. David Thompson, the paternal grandfather of Floyd E. Thompson, was born near Roodhouse, Ill., October 8, 1826, and still lives with his son, Albert Alonzo, on the old homestead. His ancestors came to Green County, Ill., in an early day, were always democrats, and maintained a well grounded reputation as honest, upright people in their neighborhood. He was married in 1846, to Jane Cole, to which union twelve children were born. Preston Edwards, the maternal grandfather, was married to Ellen Jeffries shortly before the Civil war, to which union four children were born. The wagonmaker's trade and farming occupied his early life. He enlisted in the Union army at the first call for volunteers, and though sent home twice wounded, he re-enlisted the third time. A year after the war he died from his injuries, leaving his widow to fight life's battle alone with her four babies. Fortunately and to her credit be it said, she won a signal victory. All of the ancestry of Floyd E. Thompson came in the early days from Kentucky and Virginia to Illinois.

Floyd Eugene Thompson entered the Roodhouse High school in the fall of 1903. He paid his tuition and made his living by working nights and mornings in a dairy. Undaunted by this necessity, he entered in both the Latin-English and the English-Scientific courses and carried both through the four years, graduating in 1907 with the honors of his class. While in high school he held an enviable position in the debating society and represented his school in the county and the state oratorical contests. He was president of his class in his junior and senior years. The following three years of Mr. Thompson's life were spent in the public schools as a teacher. He rose rapidly in his teaching profession, being elected principal of the Manchester (Illinois) High School in 1909, where he taught history and languages. In the summer of 1909, he acted as guide in Yellowstone National Park, and in the summer of 1910 was engaged in educational work in Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis.

At spare times from 1906 to 1911, Mr. Thompson studied law. He took some special work for four months in the fall of 1910 at the Chattanooga College of Law, and, in February, 1911, was admitted to the bar in Tennessee. In March, 1911, he was admitted to practice in Illinois and came to East Moline, Rock Island county, Ill., to try his fortune. He was associated with A. B. Johnson, city attorney of East Moline, for a time, also acting as assistant state's attorney of Rock Island county. In June, 1911, he purchased the East Moline Herald, a weekly newspaper, and, as its managing editor, soon made for himself a place among the foremost newspaper men of the county, which connection was severed December 1, 1912. It was through this acquaintance and this work that Mr. Thompson soon became prominent as an "East Moline Booster," and was the representative from East Moline in an amalgamation conference involving Rock Island, Moline, and surrounding municipalities. He is a "good roads" enthusiast, knowing from experience what bad roads are, and was assessment commissioner of East Moline during the year 1912. A member of the Commercial Clubs of Rock Island, Moline and East Moline, and a member of the Moline After Dinner Club, he is active in all. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Mystic Workers of the World, and has held the highest local office in each of the last two orders. He has been village attorney at Carbon Cliff since his first year in the county.

On November 5, 1912, after one of the hardest fought political battles ever staged in this county, Floyd Eugene Thompson was elected state's attorney of Rock Island county on the democratic ticket. He has the distinction of being the youngest state's attorney in the state of Illinois and the first democrat ever elected to that office in Rock Island county. This county having a normal republican plurality of 7,000, gave Thompson a plurality of 293 over the republican nominee. State's Attorney Thompson enjoys the support of all parties and of all the newspapers, regardless of political affiliations. He has a remarkable record for convictions. The following from the Rock Island Argus shows the attitude of the newspapers toward Mr. Thompson: "Thompson's Remarkable Work.—State's Attorney Floyd E. Thompson is receiving many, and indeed, well merited congratulations on his success in the trial and conviction in the Stratton murder case, the first case of so grave a nature to come under the administration of his office. The triumph of Mr. Thompson is the more remarkable in that he was obliged, practically unaided, to build up the prosecution. Handicapped as he has been since he went into office by the hostile attitude of the dominating spirit of some officials who have denied him aid or encouragement, because of his politics, many a state's attorney would not have had either the ambition or the courage to go into the Stratton case with all its complications. But Thompson did his duty. He yanked Stratton back here, indicted him and convicted him. He has shown not only that he possesses in an admirable degree the requisite qualities of a public prosecutor, but he has also demonstrated that he has the fighting courage to enter battle. He has proven that he will obtain justice for the people who elected him, despite the fact that some of the representatives of the people deny him both justice and fair play."

Inspired with unbounded enthusiasm, the optimism of youth, and steadied by the vigorous training he has received for his life work, Mr. Thompson is already a powerful figure in the politics of his county, and is destined to accomplish much before he finishes his life's work.

THOMPSON, James William (deceased).—It is a melancholy pleasure to the family of a man who has been called to his last reward, to learn of the esteem in which he was held, and the many who felt under obligations to him for deeds of kindness and charity. This was certainly the case when James William Thompson died in May, 1903. He was born at Montgomery, Ala., December 2, 1840, the son of William and Martha (Owens) Thompson, both of whom were born in Alabama. The paternal grandfather was also a native of Alabama, and a farmer. He married a lady born in the same state, and they had two sons, and lived out their lives in the South.

James William Thompson was educated in a country school in his native state, and worked on the farm until the outbreak of the Civil war. Being pressed into the Confederate service, he served one year, but finding an opportunity to join the Union forces he did so, as it was against his conscience to bear arms against his country's flag. After the war was over he came to Rock Island and was employed by the Government at the arsenal. Later he went to Mercer county where he worked in the mines. In 1874, he returned to Rock Island to engage in teaming, and in 1877 he bought the ground on which the family residence now stands. Here he lived until his demise, dying firm in the faith of the Methodist church, of which he and his family were members. In politics he was a strong republican.

On September 16, 1868, he was married to Mrs. Sarah A. Gunsalus, daughter of David and Elizabeth Shearard, and widow of John W. Gunsalus. Mrs. Thompson was born in Lawrence county, Pa., June 3, 1836. Her father and mother went to Pennsylvania at an early date, some years later moved to Mercer county, to continue farming, both dying there. There were twelve children in their family, six sons and six daughters, three of whom survive: Elizabeth Worrell of Pennsylvania; Rebecca O'Brien of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Thompson. The latter was married to John W. Gunsalus in Mercer county, in 1861. He died in Mercer county in 1864, and was a native of Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Gunsalus had two children: Mary, wife of Charles Huntley of Rock Island, and Elizabeth, wife of Robert Summers, also of Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson had three children: Fannie, widow of William Kohlus of Rock Island; James of Rock Island, and Rebecca, deceased. Mrs. Thompson has sixteen grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. She is a lady of lovely Christian character, beloved by her family and regarded as a kind and charitable neighbor.

THORNHILL, Charles H., who conducts a sale stable, one of the largest establishments of its kind in Rock Island county, dealing in all grades of horses and mules, has his barn at No. 318 Twenty-second street, where he has accommodations for twenty-five horses, he having established this business in 1890. In addition to this he has other interests. Six months after entering on the above enterprise he purchased the express business of John Payne and now operates the Independent Express, in this line using several teams and employing from eight to twelve men, as his business needs may dictate. He has established quite a reputation in both branches of business and stands well as a man of recognized probity and integrity. He is of English origin, born in Miami county, O., April 13, 1868, and is a son of Barney and Mary (Gibson) Thornhill. The father, a native of Westborough, O., born November 16, 1831, was a successful farmer in Mercer county, Ill., and his death occurred June 16, 1897. The mother was born and reared in Mercer county, where she still lives. They had six children born to them, five sons surviving.

Charles H. Thornhill was brought as a babe to Mercer county, Ill., grew to manhood on a farm, and received his education in the public schools. In early manhood he began buying and selling cattle, and in 1898, moved to Joy, Ill., starting the first livery barn in that place, buying and selling horses and mules in connection with it. His first barn was a frame building, which was destroyed by fire, and he replaced it with a modern brick structure, which he later disposed of, and in this place he sold thousands of animals. He was at Joy for eleven years, and during the last four years sold 553 horses at public sale and they brought $84,527.50. At private sale, he sold 400 horses for $53,250 and shipped 467 horses that sold for $44,785. The sales represented a total business of 1,420 horses or $182,562.50 in money. He decided, however, that there were still larger opportunities for his activities in Rock Island and came to this city.

Mr. Thornhill was married October 9, 1890, to Miss Emma Epperly, daughter of William and Mary (Brought) Epperly, and they have one son, Leo, a student in the public schools. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America.

THORNTON, Amasiah, owner of 160 acres of fertile acres of land on Section 8, Drury township, is the son of Err and Pauly (Hatten) Thornton, old settlers of this part of the country. Mr. Thornton is one of the leading agriculturists of the county, and a man highly respected by all who know him. The father moved to Iowa in 1833 from Tippecanoe county, Indiana, locating on government land, which he took up eight miles below the present site of Muscatine. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1807, his wife having been born in the same State. They had the following family: Maziah, who died and is buried in High Prairie graveyard, near Letsville, Ia.; William Wallace, who lives in Missouri; Edward Nelson, who is also of Missouri; James, who died and is buried in Letsville, Ia., and Amasiah. The mother died at the same time as her son James, and is buried beside him. The father passed away, January 11, 1897, and was laid to rest in the Reynolds cemetery, Drury township. The father came to Rock Island county in 1853, buying land in Drury township, on which he made his home until his death. He was a justice of the peace, and had the distinction of marrying the first white couple to be united in Muscatine county, Ia. He was also a member of the first legislative body that sat in Iowa City. After he came to Rock Island county he was also prominent, being supervisor for his township for a good many years, as well as road overseer several terms, being politically a republican.

Amasiah Thornton was born June 14, 1845, in Muscatine county, Ia., and was seven years old when the family came to Rock Island county. He attended the neighborhood school until eighteen years old, when he began working for himself as a hired man on farms. Later, he rented land, and in 1883 bought his present property, which he has developed into a fine farm. He put in all of the improvements, and has one of the best farms in the township. His large residence is very comfortable, and his barns and outbuildings are good. Mr. Thornton carries on general farming.

On January 1, 1880, Mr. Thornton married Miss Mary E. Marran. Her parents both died in Columbus, Ohio. She was adopted when fourteen years of age by S. Foster of Muscatine, Ia., and was with him until she was married. She taught school for five years in Muscatine and Rock Island county. They have had three children, two of whom died in infancy, the one surviving being Helen, now, Mrs. B. F. Zollner, married December 5, 1900, by Rev. Arthur T. Fowler of Muscatine, First Baptist church, who resides with her father on the farm. She has kept house for her father ever since she was ten years of age, going to school and additionally doing the housework. Mrs. Thornton died July 8, 1888, and is buried in the Reynolds cemetery. Politically, Mr. Thornton is a republican. As it is his intention to spend the remainder of his days in this country, he is naturally interested in its further improvement, and is a citizen of whom his neighbors may well feel proud, for he has not only made a success of his farming and acquired wealth in this locality but has invested it here.

TITTERINGTON, Amaziah (deceased).—For years Rock Island county has been noted for its men who have a thorough knowledge of agricultural conditions and the science of breeding stock. Probably the conditions in this part of the state are as nearly ideal as anywhere for the successful raising of huge crops, and the providing of fertile pasture land. These and other conditions, however, have been produced by the men who in earlier times knew how to develop natural advantages, and though many of these have passed away, what they accomplished remains as a lasting monument to their ability and industry. One of those thrifty and capable farmers was the late Amaziah Titterington, who for many years was associated with the agricultural interests of Rock Island county. He was born on a farm in Ohio, August 18, 1832, being a son of John and Isabella (Nicol) Titterington. The father was born in England, but came to the United States in early manhood, with his father and brothers, after the death of his mother. Settlement was made in Ohio, but removal was later made to Edgington township, Rock Island county. John Titterington had a family as follows: Jane, deceased; Mary, Mrs. Charles Dunlap, deceased; Amaziah; James, deceased; Rebecca, deceased; Phavoby, Mrs. Hizer, deceased; Ellen, Mrs. Donaldson, and John of Des Moines, now deceased. The father died on his farm in Edgington township August 15, 1888. In religious faith he was a Presbyterian.

Amaziah Titterington attended public school and was brought up as a farmer. On January 1, 1855, he was married in Edgington township, to Louisa Boultinghouse of that township, daughter of John and Mary Magdaline (Myers) Boultinghouse. Mrs. Titterington was born in Orange county, Ind., July 15, 1833, and was but a small child when brought to Knox county, Ill., where the family lived a short time, later coming to Edgington township, where she was educated. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Titterington were: John, of Washington, Iowa; James, deceased; Arthur, of this township; Mary, Mrs. Walter Lloyd of Rock Island; Libbie, Mrs. Ben Fountain of this township; Amy; Ivy, Mrs. John Foster of Mercer county, Ill.; George of Mercer county and Annie, Mrs. Thomas Vannatta of Edgington township. There are sixteen grandchildren and seven great grandchildren in the family.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Titterington rented land for five years, then buying 160 acres in Edginton township, which farm remained his home until his death in 1888. He was not connected with any religious denomination, but was an honorable, true-hearted man, who lived according to the Golden Rule. His widow continued to reside on the farm for seven or eight years after his demise, then moved to Reynolds. She is a consistent member of the Baptist church. Although he never cared for office, Mr. Titterington was a staunch republican and faithfully supported the candidates of his party. During his useful life he set an excellent example, and his many good deeds live after him.

TOBIN, Patrick.—Farming is the oldest kind of business, for since the beginning of the world men have been tillers of the soil, and from then on down, it is from the land that man has gained his substance. The importance of the farmer today, is being recognized by those highest in authority, and the agriculturists themselves are appreciating and understanding the wonderful possibilities of their work. One of the successful farmers of Rock Island county is Patrick Tobin of Coe township, born in County Cork, Ireland, on March 17, 1835, a son of Patrick and Margaret (Murphy) Tobin. Patrick Tobin came to America on a sailing vessel and steamer combined, which landed him in New York City, from whence he came direct to this county. He had an uncle at Carbon Cliff, and there he settled. Patrick Tobin, the younger, worked on farms by the month, receiving $25 per month, thus continuing for three years, when he engaged along other lines for several years more. Later, he went to Montana and prospected for gold, but returned to Rock Island county and engaged in farming. Here on April 1, 1875, he married Nora O'Connor, daughter of Thomas and Katherine (Powers) O'Connor. Mrs. Tobin was born in Waterford, Ireland, on October 2, 1846. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Tobin: Thomas, Maurice, Edward and James, all of whom are on the home farm except Edward, who is a conductor on the East Moline Interurban Railroad, which position he has held for ten years. On October 18, 1905, Edward married Katherine Fitzgibbon, and they have a son,—Donald Tobin.

In June, 1900, Patrick Tobin bought 160 acres of land from Mrs. Dr. Fleming of Port Byron. The farm is in Coe township and on it he has built one barn, improved the one he found on the property, and made a number of other improvements. He devotes his farm to general farming and stock raising.

TRAEGER, Frederick.—Years of dignified labor have culminated in a period of comfortable rest for Frederick Traeger of Rock Island township, one of the best known men of this locality. He was born in Germany, January 27, 1841, being a son of Albright and Barbara Traeger. Albright Traeger was a weaver of cloth, also a storekeeper, who died when Frederick was six years old. His wife also passed away in Germany. They had four children: Frederick, John, Conrad, and Sophia.

Frederick Traeger remained with his mother until he attained his majority, leaving school when only fourteen years old, to work on a farm. In 1869 he came to the United States, landing in New York city, from whence he made his way to Ohio, but after three months came to Rock Island county. Here he worked out among the farmers for four and one-half years. In 1874 he bought his present farm putting up all improvements, and building his first house in 1878, which was burned April 14, 1903, after which he replaced it with the present comfortable residence. The farm is a fine one of twenty-two acres, and until recently, Mr. Traeger operated it himself, but now feels that he has earned repose.

In 1874 Mr. Traeger was married to Mary Wolfrum, born in Germany, who came to the United States when twenty-four years old. She died March 19, 1899, having been a good, Christian woman, and a member of the German Lutheran church, to which Mr. Traeger also belongs. He is independent in politics, casting his vote for the man he deems best fitted for the office in question. While remembering pleasantly the home of his youth and young manhood, Mr. Traeger considers himself a true American, and is proud of American progress and believes that here more opportunities are offered a young man than anywhere else, provided he is willing to work hard and save his money.

TRENKENSCHUH, Peter Frederick.—Every branch of the building trade offers opportunities for advancement to those capable of taking advantage of them, for changes are constantly being made, and additions built, especially in a city of the size and importance of Rock Island. One of the prosperous business men of this city is Peter Frederick Trenkenschuh, general contractor, who specializes on the building of sewers. Mr. Trenkenschuh was born at Rock Island in 1874, son of Philip and Elizabeth (Scherer) Trenkenschuh, both natives of Germany, who came to America prior to the Civil war. The father had served in the Prussian army for the full quota of years. His death occurred in Rock Island, in 1885, but his widow survives, making her home at this city. Four children were born to these parents, three of whom survive: George, William, Edward and Peter Frederick.

Peter Frederick Trenkenschuh was brought up at Rock Island, and not only attended the public schools here, but spent two years at the Davenport business college. He then learned the carpenter trade, following it until 1899, when he began contracting on his own account. In 1906, he commenced building sewers, and has been very successful in this line. In 1909, he bought his present fine residence, No. 1431 Fourteen and One-half street.

In 1901, Mr. Trenkenschuh was married to Miss Louise Nald, born at Davenport, Ia. Two children have been born to this marriage: Paul Walter and Florence Louise. Mr. Trenkschuh is a Mason fraternally, and in political faith is a republican. An enterprising business man, thoroughly conversant with every detail of his work, he has been able to forge to the front, and is one of the leaders in the cement trade in Rock Island county.

TREVOR, James J.—There is no branch or department of civic service that is quite so important as that which guards life and property from fire, and there is no body of men who possess more real courage or endurance than those who, with hatchet and helmet, rush into almost certain danger, and frequent death, when duty calls. Courage alone, however, is not sufficient, and every city of any size has its trained firemen who obey commanders who have stood a thousand tests themselves. Moline is justly proud of its efficient fire department, and recognizes in James J. Trevor, assistant chief of the department, a thoroughly qualified, brave and capable officer.

James J. Trevor was born in the Dominion of Canada and accompanied the family to Rock Island county, Ill., in 1862. His father, who was born in the city of Dublin, Ireland, died in Rock Island county in 1902, in which he had been a veterinary surgeon for forty years. The mother still survives and lives at Moline. They had a family of nine children, all of whom except one, Joseph A., the fourth born, still live, namely: James J., Mary A., Sarah B., Richard H., Clarence S., Alexander W., Francis R. and Harriet M.

James J. Trevor attended school in Coal Valley until he was nine years old, after which he made himself useful to his father until old enough to engage in farming and coal mining. Later he began a butcher business, owning two shops at Port Byron and Rapid City. Following this he came to Moline and from 1885 to 1896 drove a hack and did teaming work until 1896, when he entered the fire department at Moline, having been interested in this line of work almost from childhood. Out of one hundred volunteers, he was the man selected to care for the first seven horses owned by the city fire department. He was very active when the organization was a volunteer body and became its chief. In 1896, when the department was reorganized and put on a financial basis, he was made a driver and for eleven years drove the fire engine to every conflagration and without a single accident. This efficiency led to his being appointed captain of a station, where he served five years, and then was made assistant chief.

On April 6, 1879, Mr. Trevor was married to Miss Fanny S. Morey, who was accidentally drowned in the Mississippi river, in 1881, survived by one son, James J., Jr. On January 26, 1885, Mr. Trevor was married (second) to Miss Salome Schadt, who died in 1898, leaving five children: Harriet, William, Theresa, Richard H. and Francis R. On August 10, 1904, Mr. Trevor was married (third) to Mrs. Aledo Parks. The family residence, a most comfortable one, is owned by Chief Trevor and is situated at No. 1339 Twenty-fourth avenue, Moline. In politics he is a democrat and takes considerable interest in public matters. He is identified with the Odd Fellows, the Eagles, the Royal Arcanum, the Mystic Workers and the Fraternal Reserves.

The following poem was written at the time of the "Davenport Fire":

"Help or we perish! Our city's on fire!"
Such is the cry that thrills over the wire.

"There is no hesitation, no shrinking with fear;
Each fireman springs to his place with a cheer.

"At the clang of the gong the team leap from their stall!
In a second they're ready—men, horses and all.

"The wide door swings open with rattle and crash,
And the men to the rescue are off in a flash.

"Jim, the driver, breathes deep, and a fresh grip
he takes On the lines, while his foot lightly presses the brakes.

"Clang! Clang! sounds the gong, and the crowd swings apart
Which had gathered to witness the fire-fighters' start.

"They crash round the corner, each man in his place,
With fire in his eye and a look on his face

"That recks not of danger, but seemeth to say:
'Our brothers need help; we will brook no delay!'

"They swing on Fifteenth street and dash to the north;
The guard at the bridge with his cane sallies forth;

"But he waves them godspeed as they leave him behind
And dash o'er the trembling bridge like the wind.

"And now they have struck the smooth Government road.
Where the horses scarce feel the effect of their load.

"Every muscle is strained like the string of a bow
Which a master hand draws in the face of the foe,

"Like the arrow so true and so swift is their flight—
For the fate of a city waits on them tonight!

"And galloping, galloping, galloping fast, They've swept the full length of the Island at last.

"Across the wide river the flames flash in view,
And the horses tho' panting leap forward anew.

"The long bridge they enter, with rumble and roar,
And the clang of the gong scarcely passes before,

"So swift is their flight. Now they're threading the street,
And the cheers of the multitude praises the feat.

"On up thru the tangle of cars, men and wire,
To the verge of the awful, mad whirlwind of fire—

"Then, 'Whoa!' Jim, the driver, commands, and his team
On the instant obeys; then a coupling—a stream!

"And the firemen are fighting with might and with main
The fiends of the flame to subdue and enchain.

"Then all hail to Chief Hawk! All hail to his men!
And all hail to the horses and thrice hail again!

"Let their praises be sounded afar and awide,
For the marvelous run and the wonderful ride."

TUBAH, Godfrey.—Those of our citizens who are fortunate enough to be German born, have as a heritage that thrift and industry which have made the German people so powerful as a nation. One of the men of German birth whose life has been a successful one, and who through his own efforts has risen to importance, is Godfrey Tubah, of No. 2409 Fifth avenue, Moline, Ill. He was born at Underravensstein, Germany, February 13, 1839, being a son of Godfrey and Tressie (Frey) Tubah, both natives of Germany. They were married in their native land, in 1837. Their children were: Godfrey, Charles, John, Christopher, Elizabeth, and Jacob, all deceased except Godfrey and Charles.

The parents emigrated to the United States in 1849, as the father, who was a millwright, erecting machinery and installing it, desired a wider field in which to operate. They settled in Buffalo, N. Y., where the children were reared. When Godfrey Tubah, the younger, had attained his majority, he came to Michigan, and there learned the sheet metal workers' trade. In 1860, he went to Madison, Wis., working at his trade there until his enlistment for service during the Civil war. His education was confined to the common schools, but he added to his knowledge by close observation. His brothers all served during the Civil war. Charles being in the Fourth Michigan Cavalry; Jacob in the One Hundred and Thirty-seventh New York Infantry; John in the Bedan Sharp Shooters, one of the best crack shot regiments in the whole service, and Christopher was in the navy.

Mr. Tubah enlisted at Madison, Wis., April, 1861, in Company E, First Wisconsin Infantry, and re-enlisted in Detroit, in April, 1863, in the First Berdan's United States Sharp Shooters. He participated in the first engagement of the war, in western Virginia, right above Harper's Ferry, June 22, 1861. He was also at Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, battle of the Wilderness, Fredericksburg, and other engagements of lesser importance, being always a brave and loyal soldier. After the war he came to Rock Island, and has made Moline his home for thirty years and for years was a sheet metal worker, but in 1912 retired.

Mr. Tubah was married at Moline September 10, 1879, to Annie Plunkett, born in Liverpool, England, May 3, 1851, she being one of three children; Elizabeth, Annie and Peter. Mr. Tubah was reared an Episcopalian. Although retired from active life, Mr. Tubah is interested in civic matters. He has never cared for public office, but tries to do his duty as a private citizen, just as he did when serving in the army.

TUBAH, William Edward.—In these days when sanitary inspection and national rulings control the quality of food supplies, the butcher who fails to comply with certain regulations cannot hope to succeed. Fortunately for the health of the people, the majority of them recognize the necessity of handling only first-class meats, and of furnishing proper quarters, and one of those who is very modern in his ideas along these lines in East Moline is William Edward Tubah of No. 446 Third avenue. He was born at Moline, in 1887, a son of Godfrey and Annie (Plunkett) Tubah, both born at Moline, where the father is a tinner. William Edward Tubah attended the public schools of Moline until twenty years old, when he began to learn the trade of butchering. For some years he worked for others, learning his trade thoroughly, so that when he opened his present establishment he brought to his new enterprise skill and experience. His shop is well equipped with every appliance of his business, including a splendid ice box of large proportions. From the start, his shop received a liberal patronage, and his customers once gained, are not lost, for his excellent meats, moderate prices and unsurpassed service are appreciated.

Mr. Tubah is a member of the Commercial Club, and without doubt is one of the best liked young men of the city. Proud of his business, his locality and his family, which comes of fine old German stock, Mr. Tubah gives a hearty support to all movements he believes will work out for the ultimate good of the majority.

TUCK, Fred L., an energetic and successful business man of Rock Island, Ill., has made his own way in the world and by his own exertions has won a good position in business life, being a contractor for painting and paper hanging. He was born in Hancock county, Ill., June 14, 1883, a son of Lyman and Hester (Starkey) Tuck. The father is a native of New Hampshire, and a farmer by occupation. As a young man Lyman Tuck came to Hancock county, where he was married and lived several years. In 1884 the family moved to a farm in Butler county, Ia., and thirteen years later to Scotland county, Mo., where the parents still reside. They had five children: Florence, Edward, Fred L., Grant and Nellie.

Fred L. Tuck was a babe in arms when the family moved to Butler county and they remained there until he was thirteen years of age. He started to school in that county and continued in Scotland county, Mo., until he was seventeen years old, and lived at home until he reached the age of twenty years. He was married in Scotland county, October 25, 1903, to Miss Emma Richmond, who died October 20, 1908, a daughter of Capt. Theodore and Elvina (Irish) Richmond. Her father served in the Civil war, and her mother came of a prominent family of Des Moines, Ia. One child was born of this union, Gladine Caroline. Mr. Tuck was married (second) in Rock Island, September 19, 1910, to Miss Esther Berger, of Moline. He purchased his present home at No. 4413 Fifth avenue in June, 1909. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and is a republican in politics, and in fraternal circles is affiliated with Lodge No. 133, I. O. O. F.; Plow City Encampment, of Moline, Canton No. 60, and Myrtle Lodge of the auxiliary order of Rebekah.

TUNNICLIFF, John C., superintendent of the implement department of the D. M. Sechler Implement Co., a man of unblemished character and steadfast industry, whose record serves as an example to the younger generation, is one of the most substantial citizens of Rock Island. He was born at Zanesville, O., July 28, 1851, a son of Edward and Sarah (Cooper) Tunnickliff. The former was born in Derbyshire, England, October 18, 1812, and the latter in the same place, March 22, 1818. They came to the United States in 1831, settling first at Liverpool, O., but later moved to Zanesville, O., where they lived until 1855, when removal was made to Kewanee, Ill. In 1859, they came to Carbon Cliff, where the father started a pottery, he being a potter by trade. After a year there, he went to Hampton, where he engaged in the same line of business, then moved back to Kewanee, where he died March 8, 1903, the mother dying eight days later, and both are interred in the cemetery there. They had thirteen children: George, who served in the One Hundred and Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Infantry; Prudence; William J., who served in the Forty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, died in the service; Joseph, who served in the One Hundred and Thirty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry; Mary; Annie; John C.; Edward; Sarah; Allie; Arthur and Archer.

John C. Tunnickliff was educated in the public schools of Kewanee, Ill., being brought up in a normal way as a child in a small town. After leaving school he went to work in a planing mill at Kewanee, later going to Galesburg, Ill., where he spent three years in the car shops of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. Following this he worked for twenty-four years for George W. Brown Co. of Galesburg, and then for two years was in an implement business in that city. He then came to Moline, arriving here September 13, 1897, to take his present position, which he has held for fourteen years. Mr. Tunnickliff is a stockholder of the D. M. Sechler Implement Co., and enthusiastic about its future.

On September 3, 1879, John C. Tunnickliff was married in West Virginia to Laura Caroline Hunter, born in that state September 29, 1851, a daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Smith) Hunter. All of her family originated in the east, and four of her brothers served in the Civil war. Mr. and Mrs. Tunnickliff have had six children: Nathaniel H., born July 27, 1880, lives at Davenport, Ia., married and has three children,—Gerald, Nathalie and Robert; Grace, born January 19, 1882, is a high school teacher of Moline; Sarah, born July 22, 1883, is at home; Virginia, born December 19, 1886; Horace, born March 22, 1890; and John C., born November 4, 1903. Mr. Tunnickliff is an Odd Fellow, having filled all the chairs of that order, and also belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is a member of the Methodist church and his family also belong to it. All his life he has been a republican, and he has done yeoman service for his party. The pleasant family residence on Rock River road, valued at $10,000, is owned by Mr. Tunnickliff, and he also owns several pieces of valuable property at Moline. The family stands high in the community, and Mr. and Mrs. Tunnickliff have every reason to be proud of their children. Socially and in the church, they are very popular, and their home is the scene of many delightful gatherings when they entertain their numerous friends.

TURNER, George W.—One of the many advantages of biography is to tell the story of self-made men for it is a great encouragement to read of those who, through personal effort have attained success along any line. George Washington Turner, who is secretary of the Tri-City and North Eastern Street Railway Company of Moline, Illinois, and a prominent agriculturist of Rock Island county, is an example at hand. He was born in Wayne county, Ill., January 13, 1859, and is a son of Israel J. and Lucy A. (Tibbs) Turner. The father was born in White county, Ill., and spent his life as a farmer and miller in his native state. He was a son of

George W. Turner was the ninth born in his parents' family of five daughters and six sons. Bereft of both parents in the same year he remained on the home farm a twelvemonth longer and then went to work on the farm of his uncle, William Cook, with whom he continued for eighteen months. He then secured the position of weigh boss at the Happy Hollow coal mines under the late Taylor Williams, and remained there for four years. About this time he married and then worked for seven years on his father-in-law's farm, after which he moved to Moline. With his available capital he bought a home here and for the next half year worked as a teamster for the government, afterward, for three years, for Dimmick, Gould & Co. Mr. Turner then bought the John Wells farm of 160 acres, situated on section 21, Hampton township, Rock Island county. In 1899 he rented out his farm and went to Sioux Falls, S. D., where he was in the real estate business for two years and then returned to Illinois and for two years more was a coal operator at Happy Hollow. He then resumed farming for two more years and then moved to Silvis, where he invested in real estate and built a residence but only remained there for eighteen months, returning then to Hampton, Ill., where he was occupied in looking after his coal interests until the spring of 1910, when, with his son-in-law, he returned to his farm in Hampton township. Here they carry on general farming and dairying and do a large stock business, raising Jersey-Red hogs and Norman horses. In January, 1909, he assisted in organizing the Tri-City and North Eastern Street Railway Company, which was to be operated between Watertown and Albany, and served as trustee, later as a director and still later was elected secretary of the same. The president of the company is J. W. Simonson of Port Byron; the vice-president is William H. Ashdown, and the treasurer is C. E. Peck of Albany.

On September 5, 1882, Mr. Turner was married to Miss Inez L. Devinney, a daughter of Samuel and Sarah Elizabeth (Wixel) Devinney, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania and the latter in Sweden. Mrs. Turner died March 16, 1909, survived by two daughters: Lucy Elizabeth, who is the wife of Frank Fleshman, of Silvis, Ill., has one son, Floyd; and Mildred A., who is the wife of Henry W. Harder, in partnership with Mr. Turner, all living on the Hampton township farm. He was married (second) August 24, 1912, to Miss Adelia Harder of Hampton township. Mr. Turner was reared in the Congregational church. He is superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school of Hampton. For two years he was president of the village board of Hampton and served three terms as school director. Externally he is identified with Abraham Lincoln Camp, No. 153, M. W. A., of Moline, and Silver Leaf Lodge, No. 60, Mystic Workers of the World.

He has never been unduly active in politics, but it has not been because he is lacking in every quality of good citizenship, but rather because his inclinations have led him in other directions. He is acknowledged to be a representative citizen of his section.

TYLER, Guy S.—Among the enterprising young farmers who are proving themselves worthy of all consideration, and rapidly forging their way to the front among the leading agriculturists of the county, Guy S. Tyler deserves more than passing mention. He owns forty acres of finely developed land on section 20, Buffalo Prairie township, and has made it into a desirable property. Guy S. Tyler was born at Illinois City, August 11, 1875, a son of William C. and Mary A. (Bruner) Tyler, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. The education of Guy S. Tyler was secured in the Illinois City public schools, where he had as teachers Maggie Brunner, Miss Linn, Anna Bendel and Pansie Powell. Until he was nineteen years old, he worked on the home farm, and then was employed as one of a construction gang on the Rock Island Railroad. For three years he continued along this line, then came home and with his brother, William K., rented the homestead. After a year, he engaged in a general merchandise line at Buck Grove, Ia., continuing it for several years, when he returned to Illinois City, and embarked in the same line of business. Later, selling his interest, he took charge of a gang of men on the construction work of the Interurban Railroad from Davenport to Clinton, Ia., and rode on the first car sent over the tracks. Following this he was with the Moline Plow Co. until he bought his present farm. On it he has built new barns, outbuildings and a nice modern house, put up substantial fences, and improved the place generally.

In March, 1906, he was married in Muscatine, Ia., to Rosa Furst of that place, a daughter of Jacob and Mary J. Furst, both now deceased. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Tyler are: Ivan and Lura. In politics he is a republican, but as yet has held no offices. Enterprising, energetic, with a wide experience back of him, Mr. Tyler is a successful farmer, and reliable citizen, and has many friends in the township.

TYLER, William Crawford, a prosperous farmer of Buffalo Prairie township, and an honored veteran of the Civil war, is one of the representative men of Rock Island county. He was born February 22, 1844, in Mobile, Ala., coming of good old English stock, and related to the same family from which sprung President Tyler. The founders of the family settled in North Carolina, and served during the Revolutionary war. Later, settlement was made in Virginia, where members of the family became large slaveholders, but others opposed slavery. The grandfather, Charles Tyler, died in North Carolina. One of his sons was the father of William Crawford, and was born in North Carolina. Prior to the war, he went to Mobile, Ala., to engage in a mercantile business, and was also interested in a large tannery at Starksville, Miss., where he was a merchant for years. In the later fifties he came north as far as Fairport, Ia., as he was not in sympathy with the slavery sentiment prevailing in the South, and taught school there and was elected assessor of his township. At the outbreak of the Civil war, he enlisted in the famous Iowa Graybeard regiment, but while in camp at Alton was taken sick and died and was buried there. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, and belonged to the Masonic order. A man of fine attainments, he was self-educated. While living in Mobile, he was united in marriage with Elizabeth M. Griffin of that city, daughter of Archibald and Nancy Griffin. She died at the home of her son, William C., in 1907, when nearly eighty years old. The children born to this couple were: William C.; Archibald G., who is a real estate dealer of Muscatine, Ia., married Leonora Moore; Missouri A., who married William Parde, died in Rock Island county; John K., who married Ida Miles, was a merchant and died in Muscatine, Ia.; Charles P., who lived in St. Paul, Minn., and died several years ago in Muscatine; Edward K., who is a physician of Muscatine, married Louise Hedges; Henry Lyons, who married Mary Robinson, lives at Boone, Ia.; and May Elizabeth, who married W. J. Le Quatte, died in Montana. After the death of Mr. Tyler, Mrs. Tyler married (second) Lieut. W. J. Wylie, and bore him two children: Mary, who is Mrs. M. J. Kannelley of St. Louis, and Leonard of Little Rock, Ark., who married Josie Pullen.

William Crawford Tyler was educated at home under the direction of his father, with the exception of short periods spent in school in Alabama, Mississippi and Iowa, being about thirteen years old when his father located in the latter state. In boyhood he commenced learning the potter's trade, and followed it both before and after the war. Having been brought up in a patriotic household, he naturally enlisted when there was need of him doing so, when only seventeen years old, in the Eleventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, but his father objected and took him back home, but finally relenting, allowed him to follow his inclinations. The captain of Company A was Captain Grant, and the colonel was Colonel Hare. Mr. Tyler was fortunate to be under the command of General Grant and participated in the battles of Shiloh, Iuka and Corinth, and while at the latter place he was within fifteen miles of his birthplace. He was later transferred to General Sherman's command, and took part in the Atlanta campaign. His discharge was given him at Atlanta, after a faithful service of three years and five months. He had the misfortune to lose his hearing at the Siege of Vicksburg, and has never fully recovered it.

After his discharge, he returned to Fairport, Ia., and in 1866, came to Illinois City, where he resumed working at his trade. In the spring of 1875, Mr. Tyler bought his present farm of 280 acres, now known as Walnut Grove Farm, and has since made it his home. He was married in Illinois City, by Rev. Hoagland of the Methodist church of Illinois City, on February 17, 1870, to Miss Mary A. Bruner, daughter of William and Nancy (Carr) Bruner. Mrs. Tyler was born in Illinois City on the old Bruner farm, February 12, 1849, and educated in the country schools and Aledo high school. When only seventeen years old, having secured her first certificate from William H. Guest, now Judge Guest, she began teaching, first at Edgington. She continued to teach for three years, when she married. Her father, William Bruner, was born in Germantown, Pa., but came to Illinois in 1844, with the McPhersons, and John M. Bruner, the latter being his brother. William Bruner married soon after coming to this state, and made his home in and about Illinois City the balance of his life, being an extensive farmer. His death occurred in the county, where he was so well known. When he died he was the oldest member of the order of Odd Fellows in Illinois. Mrs. Bruner was one of the oldest women in Rock Island county who was born in Illinois. The children in the Bruner family were: Mrs. Tyler; Rose A., who is now Mrs. J. G. Kent of Muscatine; John S., who was deputy sheriff, now lives in Oklahoma, and married Cora Bates; William H., who is of Medford, Okla., married Ella Vickers; and Margaret E., who is now Mrs. Robert Moffit of Woodstock, Minn. The grandfather, Jacob Bruner, spent his life in Germantown, Pa., and his brother Henry lived there also, and served under General Washington, being one of the brave soldiers who crossed the Delaware with their leader, and fought the battle of Trenton. Jacob Bruner married Margaret Miller, Mary (Scott) Carr, the maternal grandmother of Mrs. Tyler, was a native of Virginia, and was a relative of General Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Tyler became the parents of children as follows: William K., who was born April 4, 1871, married Stella Hney and lives near Illinois City; Edith P., who was born November 30, 1873, died in infancy; Guy S., who was born August 11, 1875, married Rose Furst, and they live on a farm at North Buffalo; Margaret, who was born January 17, 1878, married Sherman Powell and resides near Illinois City; Ethel, who was born March 23, 1880; Vernon M., who was born January 23, 1883, married Anna Kelly, and is in partnership with his father in farming and breeding fine stock; and Fred Bruner, who was born May 27, 1889, is at home. There are ten grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Tyler and wife belong to the Methodist church, the latter having united with the church when fifteen years old. She attended Sunday school when four years old, and never misses a service except when ill. For forty years she has been a teacher in the Sunday school, and is one of the best and most devout of Christian women. Mr. Tyler is a republican and has served as township treasurer for many years. Few people stand higher in Rock Island county than the Tylers, and they have friends wherever they are known.

UPSON, Porter K. (deceased).—During a long and useful life spent in carrying on business along legitimate lines, the late Porter K. Upson displayed characteristics that marked him as a man of public spirit and patriotism, a business man who would have succeeded in whatever line he had chosen, and a neighbor whose kindly and genial spirit made him beloved by his fellow townsmen. Mr. Upson was a native of Portage County, O., and was born in July, 1828, a son of Lorenzo and Amanda (Anthony) Upson.

Porter K. Upson left the home farm at the age of twenty years, and started to work as a blacksmith. At the age of twenty-five he removed to Erie County, Pa., locating near Edinboro, where he worked for some time at his trade. While there he was married, in January, 1855, to Permelia Stancliff, who was born in McKane township, Erie county, in October, 1832, a daughter of Alphius and Matilda (Whitney) Stancliff, the former of New York and the latter of Massachusetts, and a granddaughter of Martin and Olive (Stancliff) Stancliff. Mrs. Upson's grandparents came from New York with an ox-team to Pennsylvania in 1808, settling in Erie county, where they took up 400 acres of land in the midst of the heavy timber, built a log cabin with puncheon floors, and he spent the remainder of his life in cultivating the property. Mrs. Upson's great-grandfather, Comfort Stancliff, was a soldier in the Continental army, during the war of the Revolution. After his marriage, Mr. Upson resided at Pageville, Pa., for one and one-half years, and then went to Elkhart, Ind., where he was living at the time of his enlistment in the Union army, becoming a member of the Ninth Indiana Volunteers, April 22, 1861, and after three months' service re-enlisted with the same organization and was honorably discharged after a brave and faithful service. Mr. Upson was not wounded while in the army, although he served nearly four years, but when he had returned to the peaceful vocations of life he met with an accident, when a bale of hay fell on him, which so severely injured him that he was confined to his bed for three months. In September, 1865, he moved to Watertown, Ill., where he opened a blacksmith shop, and there continued to carry on business until his death, February 6, 1894. His widow survives him and lives in a fine residence in Watertown. Mr. Upson died in the faith of the Baptist church, of which Mrs. Upson is a devout member.

Mr. and Mrs. Upson had these children: Carson D., who makes his home in the State of Washington; Winfield, living in Cleveland, O.; Edmond D., a Methodist Episcopal minister of Brooklyn, Wis.; and Emma Dora, who married Dr. Rankin of Watertown, Ill.

VANDERBURG, Eder (deceased).—The farmers of Rock Island county are, as a class, prosperous and contended, living independently upon their fertile farms which their energy has developed to their present high state of cultivation. One who was more than usually successful was Eder Vanderburg, whose excellent farm of 163 acres is located in Zuma township, one mile north of Joslin. Mr. Vanderburg was born in Greene county, N. Y., February 2, 1841, and died June 7, 1913. He was a son of James D. and Marilla (Crosby) Vanderburg, natives of the Empire State.

Eder Vanderburg's parents came to Illinois in 1861 and until 1865 resided in LaSalle county, at that time moving to Cordova, Rock Island county, and James D. Vanderburg purchased a farm on which he and his family lived for some years, but later sold out and moved to Shelby county, Ia. He made his home in that county until sixteen years prior to his death, when he moved to the town of Harlan, Ia., and retired from active labor. Two years previous to his death he removed to Walnut, Pottawatomie county, Ia., and there his death occurred in 1903. His first wife died in 1851 in New York, leaving six children: Eder; Martin, of Winterset, Madison county, Ia.; Lucinda, who married Ed Tavenner, of Washington, D. C.; Sarah J., widow of Moses Sargent, who resided with her brother, Eder; Hannah, who married Samuel Williamson, of Carroll, Nebr.; and Elizabeth, who married Edward Cool of Cordova, Ill. James D. Vanderburg was married (second) to Sarah Crosby, a cousin of his first wife, and ten children were born to this union: James M., who is deceased; Hulda, who married Frank Hanna of Walnut, Ia.; Lydia, who married George Waugh, of Carroll, Mo.; David, living in Colorado; Adelbert, residing near Lincoln, Nebr.; Grace, who married Dowling Ramsey, of Omaha, Nebr.; Carrie, living in Shelby county, Ia.; Lulu, who married Burt Royce, of Pueblo, Colo.; Elmer, living in Walnut, Ia., with his mother; and Charles, who is deceased.

Eder Vanderburg resided with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age, at which time he started to work on a farm in LaSalle county, Ill., where he continued for four years. He then came to Cordova township, Rock Island county, and started rafting on the Rock and Mississippi rivers from St. Paul to St. Louis, but after one year returned to farming. He then purchased 160 acres of wild, unbroken land on the Mississippi river, which he cultivated and sold two years later, and in 1876 came to Zuma township. On this eighty-acre tract there had been built a small house and stable, made of logs, and these he soon removed, replacing them with buildings of a more substantial nature. As he became financially able, he purchased more land, adding forty acres in 1871, and forty acres more in 1872, and was the owner of 163 acres, all in one tract, the C. B. & Q. R. R. having its tracks through one forty-acre piece. He carried on general farming and stock raising and was very successful in his ventures before he felt able to retire. In addition to his Zuma township property he owned seventy-five acres of fine land in Hampton township, along the Mississippi river, which he rented to tenants, as well as four lots in Moline, Ill., and his own residence and the lot it stands on, at Cordova, Ill.

In 1861, Mr. Vanderburg was married to Elizabeth Rausford, who was born near Richmond, Ind., widow of Mathew Miller, and they had two children, twins, who died in infancy. Mrs. Vanderburg died February 9, 1908. Mr. Vanderburg was a republican in politics, but no office seeker, preferring the quiet of his home to the activities surrounding the politician. During the long period that he had made his home in Rock Island county he assisted materially in its progress and development, and he was recognized as one of Zuma township's most reliable and influential men.

VERMERE, E. August.—East Moline is a flourishing community, where various industrial concerns have been located, and there are few public-spirited citizens who are not interested in its further development, for they realize that as it grows, so will their enterprises prosper. One of the young business men here, who has exhibited more than an ordinary amount of activity is E. August Vermere of No. 928 Railroad avenue. He was born in Moline, in 1891, being a son of Charles and Leona (Doubler) Vermere. The father was also born in Moline, where he was fireman in the paper mill. He died in 1903, after a sickness that confined him to his bed for thirteen years. His widow survives him and makes her home in Moline. They had three children: Emma, wife of Charles Lager; Nettie, wife of F. P. Styveart, and E. August.

Attending school in Moline, E. August Vermere was a pupil in the old Sixteenth street school, and learned rapidly. Realizing that on account of his father's illness, he would have his own way to make in the world, he decided to learn a trade, and chose that of plumbing. For six years he worked at it in Moline, until he became a master plumber, and then he, with a Mr. Styveart formed the present firm of Styveart & Vermere and located their business in East Moline. The young men are both good workmen, and have a large trade in this city and vicinity. In politics, Mr. Vermere is very liberal. He belongs to the Red Men and Order of Moose at Moline. In religious faith he is a Catholic. Like many of the younger business men of East Moline, Mr. Vermere is thoroughly convinced of the future of this locality, and is enthusiastic regarding anything calculated to add to its present prosperity.

VENABLE, James, owner of 320 acres of rich farm land in Rock Island county, is one of the best examples of our Irish-American citizens, than whom no better exist. Ireland has given us some of our most distinguished statesmen, filled our learned professions with brilliant men, and provided us with sturdy, forceful workers in almost every line of industrial activity. Mr. Venable was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, May 15, 1836, a son of James and Ellen (Ewing) Venable, farming people, and natives of the same county as their son. There the father died in 1846, aged forty years, but the mother brought her family to the United States in 1856. They landed at New York City, from whence they came direct to Mercer county, Ill., where settlement was made on 160 acres of land. There they lived until 1868, when removal was made to Periton township, Mercer county, and to Edgington in the fall of 1869, where the mother, soon after arrival, died in 1869. In religious faith she was a Presbyterian. Four of the thirteen children of her family survive: James; Joseph of Keithsburg, Ill.; Ellen, now Mrs. Jeffrey of Rock Island, and Letitia, now Mrs. Jacob A. Carpenter of Rock Island.

Losing his father when he was only ten years old, James Venable was early cast on his own resources, and received but a limited education. He was twenty years old when the family migrated and he worked for his mother on the farm until his enlistment for service during the Civil war, on August 11, 1862, in Company B, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served three years, receiving his discharge at Pine Bluff, Ark., July 12, 1865, and final discharge at Springfield, Ill., August 6, 1865. He participated in many battles during his service, some of which were: Siege of Vicksburg, Helena, and Little Rock, and numerous skirmishes. During the greater part of his time he was connected with the regiment hospital.

Coming home after his war service he farmed until his marriage to Christina Titterington, March 25, 1869, the Rev. T. R. Johnson of Edgington officiating. She was born in Edgington township, April 23, 1844, daughter of Moses and Anna (Dunlap) Titterington. In 1870 Mr. Venable located on his present farm, having erected his residence prior to moving upon the property. He has remodeled it three or four times since so that it is now a thoroughly modern house. Several years ago Mr. Venable retired from the active life of the farm, although still enjoying its advantages. The children born to himself and wife are: George, who married Margaret Ward of Aledo, Ill., where they reside; Elsie, who is at home; Ira, who married Ida Johnson, lives in Idaho; Frederick Joseph, who lives in Texas; Frank, who married Eliza Guyer, lives on the home farm; Perry, who married Grace Jones, also lives on the home farm; and Robert, who married Lena Lipp, lives in Peoria. Mr. Venable is a Presbyterian, as is his wife. He is a staunch democrat and has served as supervisor for four years, having been elected in April, 1909, re-elected in 1911 and still continues to hold office. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Strong, reliable, steadfast, Mr. Venable is a man who holds his friends, and retains the confidence and respect of his associates.

VERSMAN, Louis.—Rock Island, among other business houses, has some of the most reliable bakeries to be found in this section of the state, where the best and most varied assortment of bakery goods can be obtained. One of these representative bakeries is the one conducted by its owner Louis Versman, of No. 628 Eighth street. Mr. Versman was born in Russia in 1875, a son of John and Sarah Versman. The father was a wholesale merchant in Russia, where he and his wife still reside. Of their five children, all but Louis Versman also reside in Russia, he being the only one in the United States.

In 1904 Mr. Versman came to Rock Island, and for a year, in order to learn the language and customs, was a peddler. In 1905 he bought his present property and opened the business he has developed into the largest of its kind in the county. His volume of business has so increased that he is erecting a new, modern building to house his plant. Two wagons are kept busy delivering orders. Mr. Versman makes a specialty of homemade bread, which is appreciated, as his rapidly increasing business shows.

In 1907 Mr. Versman married Belle Kalyka, also from Russia. They have two children: Sam and Ellen. Fraternally he belongs to the O. K. O. J., and in religious belief he is a Hebrew. The republican party has received his vote and support. He is a man of more than average ability, who has known exactly how to manage so as to invite and hold trade, and establish himself in the confidence of the public.

VETTER, Valentine, proprietor of the old Vetter homestead of 140 acres in Buffalo Prairie township is a man proud of his family, and standing high in the community where he and his have been important factors in agricultural life for so many years. He was born on this farm, July 12, 1867, being a son of Peter Vetter, who was born in Germany in 1832. The latter received a common school education, and was taught the butchering trade, his father following this same calling. Losing his parents, Peter Vetter came to the United States, landing in New York, from whence the young man came to Rock Island county. With a Mr. Attig, he located on what is now the Robert Taylor farm in Buffalo Prairie township, and worked out among the farmers. After coming to Rock Island county, he married Barbara Rettig, a daughter of Valentine Rettig. Following his marriage, Peter Vetter rented for some years, and in the winter of 1868, bought the farm now owned by his son. It was all in timber, and an old frame house stood on the place. This Valentine Vetter has remodeled and made additions to until it is a comfortable residence. In it Peter Vetter died, March 22, 1897, and his wife died May 1, 1900. Both were devout members of the German Lutheran church, and active in its good work. The father held church offices, and contributed liberally toward its support. In politics he was a democrat, and was school director for a number of years. The children born to himself and wife were: George, who is of Dixon county, Iowa; Louis, who is of Mercer county, Ill.; Barbara, Mrs. Valentine Ransch, who is of Arnolds Park, Iowa; Mary, Mrs. Otto Zigler, who is of Buffalo Prairie township; Peter, who died October 16, 1880; Valentine; Annie, who died October 15, 1880; and Maggie, who died October 30, 1880. The three children died of diphtheria.

Valentine Vetter attended school in the White Lily district, and was fortunate to have the following teachers: Jennie McDonald, Maggie Brunner, Frank Smith, Mr. Jones, Isabelle France and Joe Carlisle. When he was twenty years old, Mr. Vetter left school, and continued to work for his father until his marriage, as he had done during vacations while attending school. After his marriage, he bought the home farm, and has improved it very materially, now having one of the best properties in the township.

On January 13, 1897, he married Martha Parchert, daughter of William and Augusta (Fuhlman) Parchert. Mrs. Vetter was born in Buffalo Prairie township, August 12, 1873, and educated in the same school as her husband, and having about the same teachers, with the addition of William Mardis, Browner Cannam and Mattie Ball. Mr. and Mrs. Vetter became the parents of children as follows, Ernest, who was born July 17, 1898; William, who was born November 25, 1899; Lillie, who was born December 31, 1901; Garth, who was born March 3, 1903; Raymond, who was born December 24, 1906; Valva, who was born March 17, 1907; Lawrence, who was born September 17, 1909; and Carroll, who was born April 12, 1912. Both Mr. and Mrs. Vetter belong to the German Lutheran church, and in politics he is a republican. Understanding thoroughly his work, he has been enabled to carry it on intelligently and successfully and is numbered among the leading farmers of this locality.

VOGEL, Frank F.—With the comprehension of the various uses to which cement blocks can be put, there has been a remarkable increase in the demand for them, necessitating the enlargement of existing plants for their manufacture, and the establishment of others. One of the men who has made a success as a cement block manufacturer is Frank F. Vogel of Rock Island. He was born in Germany, a son of Domnie T. and Anna (Schneider) Vogel, both of whom died in Germany, the father in 1871, and his widow in 1910. They had fourteen children, five of whom survive.

After a boyhood passed in Germany, where he was educated in the public schools, Mr. Vogel came to the United States, arriving July 15, 1883. After traveling about for a time, he settled at Rock Island in 1885, and worked as a laborer, carefully saving his money. In 1906 he established himself in business and from then on has met with remarkable success. In addition he is in a real estate business and owns many pieces of desirable property, which he sells and trades. His residence at No. 704 Thirteenth avenue, Rock Island, is also owned by him, and is a beautiful home.

On April 26, 1889, Mr. Vogel was married to Elisa Roth, born in Switzerland. They have four children: Frank, Arthur, Clarence and Elizabeth. The family belong to the Christian Science church. Fraternally Mr. Vogel belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and the Court of Honor. In political faith, he is independent. Always hard-working, Mr. Vogel has known how to save and invest his money, and is now enjoying a well-merited prosperity.

VOSS, Maas.—Some men are born wealthy, others leap suddenly into success, but the greater majority attain prosperity by steady application, thrifty habits and conscientious methods. One of the men who has risen to prosperity through his own unaided efforts is Maas Voss, coal dealer of No. 1010 Twenty-second street, Rock Island. He was born at Uttersen, Germany, December 22, 1871, son of John and Ida (Stahl) Voss, both natives of Germany, where the father was born in 1846. The latter was a teamster who came to America in March, 1882, locating at Davenport, but in 1900 he moved to Rock Island, where he died in December, 1907, his widow surviving him, making her home in Rock Island. They had twelve children, ten of whom were sons, and Maas Voss was the second child in order of birth.

Maas Voss received his education in Germany, as he only went to school one day in Davenport, Iowa. At the age of twelve years he began working for the Rock Island Fuel Company as teamster, and because of his willingness to work, and thrifty habits, rose to be yard foreman. He invested his savings in the company, remaining with it until June, 1908, when he severed his connections, and in October of the same year, opened his present business at No. 2016 Third avenue, where he is controlling a large trade that shows a healthy annual increase.

On August 5, 1897, Mr. Voss was married at Davenport, Iowa, to Lena Wohnrade, born at Davenport, December 16, 1873, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Babr) Wohnrade, natives of Hamburg, Germany. They came to America after reaching maturity, locating at Davenport, Iowa. Mr. Wohnrade worked in the starch department of the Glucose Works, later becoming its foreman, but retired about 1898, and died December 14, 1909, aged seventy-three years. Mrs. Wohnrade is living in Davenport, aged seventy years. Mrs. Voss was the eldest of four children. Mr. and Mrs. Voss have one daughter: Hilda Catherine Voss, born May 20, 1899. Fraternally, Mr. Voss is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He was reared in the Lutheran church. In addition to his house and lot, he owns his coal yard and office and several other pieces of property in East Moline. His progress teaches a lesson to those who rebel against steady application, and shows what can be accomplished if one is willing to work and save.

WADMAN, David, senior member of the thoroughly reliable firm of Wadman & Bergstrand, proprietors of the East Moline Electric Laundry, at No. 623 Fifteenth avenue, East Moline, is one of those aggressive young business men who have helped to develop East Moline, and form so important a part of its industrial and commercial life. Mr. Wadman was born in Phelps county, Neb., in 1886, son of Otto and Mary Ann (Nelson) Wadman. In 1900, the family came to Moline, where for eleven years Otto Wadman has been employed in the John Deere works, now holding the position of foreman of one of the departments. His wife also survives. They have had seven children: Nina, wife of Arthur Edlund; David; Lorry, Fred and Albert, deceased; and Robert and Paul.

Growing up in Nebraska, David Wadman attended the district schools and was taught farming and habits of economy and industry on his father's farm, and on coming with the family to Moline in 1900, he secured employment in a brick yard. Later he went to Wood-hall, Ill., where he spent two years, returning to Moline at the expiration of that time to enter the John Deere shops, where he worked for eight years, six of which as assistant foreman. Politically, he is a republican.

Andrew Bergstrand, junior member of the firm of Wadman & Bergstrand, was born in Sweden, in 1886, a son of Peter and Stina (Koiser) Bergstrand, both natives of Sweden. The father died in 1907, but his widow survives, living in Sweden. There were seven children: Maude, Carolina, Matilda, Alfred, August, Andrew and Ellen.

Andrew Bergstrand attended the public schools in his native land and came to the United States in 1905. Arriving in this country, he came direct to Rock Island, and began working at cabinetmaking, which trade he had learned in Sweden. Still later, he engaged with the East Moline Sash and Door works, continuing with this concern until February 13, 1912, when he and Mr. Wadman established the East Moline Electric Laundry. The plant is equipped with the latest improved machinery, and the quality of the work turned out has already resulted in building up a rapidly growing patronage from the best class of people. Both young men are hard workers, good business men, and thoroughly determined to meet the requirements of the general public in their special line. Mr. Bergstrand was married to Hedvig Olson, October 19, 1912.

WADSWORTH, Paul W.—The substantial character of Rock Island county farmers is due to existing conditions which make agriculture a paying business. The farmers here do not work merely for a home and food, but like any other business men, to make money and improve their condition. One of the most successful of the men engaged in this line is Paul W. Wadsworth, proprietor of the Wadsworth farm of 800 acres, on sections 4 and 5, Rural township. He was born on this farm, August 7, 1859, a son of Sandy and Jane (McKnight) Wadsworth. The father was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, March 1, 1831, and died on the Wadsworth farm, February 13, 1901. He had limited educational advantages, but made the best of what he had. When twenty years old, he came to the United States, locating in Rock Island county. He secured employment in hotels in Rock Island, thus continuing for seven years. Having saved up sufficient money by this time, he invested in eighty acres in Rural township, and lived there until his demise. Sandy Wadsworth was married in Rock Island, April 6, 1856, his wife being a daughter of Andrew McKnight. She passed away December 19, 1872, firm in the faith of the Episcopal church, but her husband was for many years a Methodist. Their children were: George H., who died when twenty-six years old; Paul W.; and Joseph, who is now in the state of Washington. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Wadsworth married Elizabeth Rude, who survives him, and makes her home at Rock Island. By the second marriage there were children as follows: Lucy, Sadie, Florence, Mabel, Cyrus, deceased, and Clarence.

Paul W. Wadsworth attended the public schools of Rural township until he was nineteen years old. He worked on the homestead, and finally came into possession of it, adding to his holdings until he is one of the heavy landowners of the county. On March 5, 1882, Paul W. Wadsworth was married to Miss Isabelle Parker, born in Kentucky, March 4, 1868, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Haywood) Parker. The latter were born in England, and married in Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth have children as follows: Thomas L., William D. and Sandy R. They are members of the Methodist church. In politics, Mr. Wadsworth is a republican, and has served ably as supervisor for six years, being now the incumbent of that office from his township. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, and Court of Honor. An excellent farmer, reliable business man, and thrifty manager, Mr. Wadsworth has increased his material possessions remarkably, and has also won for himself the deep respect and full confidence of all with whom he has been associated. These appreciate his many good qualities and sound judgment, and know that the township has benefited by his public-spirit.

WAGNER, George (deceased).—In the developing of many of the important business interests of Rock Island, no man was more useful or more judicious than was the late George Wagner, who, through half a century, had his interests centered here. He came of that sturdy German stock that typifies industry, thrift and stability and during practically all of his business life he devoted his thoughts, gifts and energies to the upbuilding of the section in which he decided should be his permanent home. He was born in Württemberg, Germany, January 13, 1832, and died at Rock Island, January 10, 1907.

In George Wagner's late youth and early manhood, Germany, that great empire that partly rules the world, did not, however, offer industrial chances of advancement to her ambitious young men. The military claimed three years and every avenue seemed already crowded and it was a natural consequence that there would be those who would seek a wider field of opportunity across the Atlantic ocean. All German youths are equipped with a trade and when George Wagner reached the harbor and city of New York it was not as a dependent but as one who could be entirely self-supporting. After two years in New York, in company with a relative, he came to Rock Island and in this city they set up a bakery and continued together for two years, when Mr. Wagner sold his interest to his partner and embarked in the same line at Moline, where he was the first baker in the country to establish a steam cracker bakery. About 1865 Mr. Wagner bought a small brewery at Rock Island, took charge and soon had a prosperous business on his hands in this line, warranting numerous improvements and large extension of his plant, and here, for thirty years he was engaged, being one of the founders of what is now the Rock Island Brewing Company. He was interested in other ways, sometimes with capital invested and on other occasions using his influence, but at all times furthering and promoting only those enterprises and movements which assured the general welfare and promised to be beneficial to the city in some way. In recalling those who helped to make Rock Island, his name cannot be forgotten.

In Germany, in 1853, Mr. Wagner was married to Miss Frederica Epinger, who also was born in Württemberg, and she accompanied him to America, with high hopes also, perhaps, but with deeper faith in her young husband's capacity and ability. Six children were born to them, three surviving: Robert, Ernest and George. The eldest son, Robert Wagner, is president of the Rock Island Brewing Company, a director of the Peoples Bank and a representative business man of Rock Island. During the closing years of his long and busy life, Mr. Wagner lived somewhat retired but to the last enjoyed the companionship of congenial friends and never lost his interest in the welfare of Rock Island. For many years he was identified with the Odd Fellows and belonged also to the Druids. Early in his political connection he was a democrat but the public issues of 1896 made him a republican. In summing up the character of Mr. Wagner, memory centers on his sturdy integrity, his unflagging industry and his convictions of right and justice that he had the courage to live up to.

WAGNER, Philip J.—Perhaps it would be difficult to find any class of men who display more solid virtues or more business acumen than those who have been born in the confines of the German empire. Taught the habits of thrift and sturdy labor from youngest childhood, they find but little difficulty in succeeding in any line of endeavor, and in every community they are found among the wealthier and more substantial class. This is true in Rock Island county, as elsewhere, and one of the most representative German-Americans of Rock Island is Philip J. Wagner of No. 924 Fourth avenue. Philip J. Wagner was born on the Rhine in Germany, April 8, 1843. The father died in Germany before the birth of his son, and was a baker by trade. The mother, born in Germany, April 10, 1814, came to America in 1872, locating at Rock Island, where her death occurred December 29, 1891. Other members of the family came to America at the same time as the mother, but are now deceased.

Growing up in his native land, Philip Wagner gained a solid education, and began working as a gardener for his cousin. Hearing of the advantages offered in the United States, he came here, and soon thereafter decided that his adopted country had need of his services, so enlisted on August 7, 1862, under Captain John Tobin, in Company E, Forty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, from Rock Island. He was first sent to Springfield, where he was trained in Camp Yates. From there his regiment was ordered to Bolivar, Tenn.; thence to Jackson and from there to Vicksburg. They were next stationed at Black River bridge, Miss., and finally were sent to Mound City, where they remained until mustered out, June 16, 1865. He then returned to Rock Island, and from then on his material prosperity increased. Eventually he engaged in a grocery business which he built up to large proportions, conducting it until his retirement. He owns his pleasant home and a valuable store building as well as other property, and is one of the wealthy men of this locality.

Mr. Wagner was first married in Rock Island, January 1, 1869, to Mary Anna Brown, born April 18, 1851, in this city, a daughter of Jacob and Margaret Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Brown came here at an early day, and here both died, Mrs. Brown July 2, 1886, and her husband prior to that date. Two brothers of Mrs. Wagner were soldiers in the Civil war, and now reside in Texas. Three sons were born of this marriage: Judson E., born November 9, 1871, of Sheridan, Wyo.; Alfred W., born May 31, 1873, lives at San Francisco, but has been traveling in Europe for some time; and Arthur R., born January 28, 1873, lives in Chicago. On October 1, 1891, Mr. Wagner was married (second) to Katherine M. Jibbs, born October 10, 1869. Her parents were of German birth, who came to Rock Island, where the mother died, the father returning to his native land, where he too died. Mr. and Mrs. Wagner had two daughters: Nettie, born October 5, 1892, died June 7, 1893; and Thelma, born July 4, 1895, at home. Mrs. Wagner died July 6, 1900. There is one grandson, James H. Wagner, in the family, born May 26, 1904. Mr. Wagner belongs to G. A. R. Post, No. 243, and for forty-three years has been a Mason, belonging to Lodge No. 57. He belongs to the Presbyterian church, and in politics he is a republican. Genial, whole-souled, never shirking a duty, or avoiding a responsibility, he has, during the many years of his residence in Rock Island, proven himself a loyal citizen and valuable resident, and has friends throughout the whole county.

WAIT, Willitt B.—The visitor to Rock Island county viewing for the first time its fertile lands, well regulated farms and general air of prosperity, finds it difficult to believe that any of this has been attained without hard labor and untiring industry, and such is the case, and the present excellent condition of the county is mainly due to the efforts of its agriculturists. One of these is Willitt B. Wait, proprietor of Maple Shade Farm, a property comprising 240 acres on section 34, Edgington township. Mr. Wait was born in southern Indiana, December 21, 1867, a son of Jacob and Cordelia C. (Powell) Wait, farming people.

Willitt B. Wait spent the first six years of his life in Indiana, and then came to Maple Shade Farm, where he grew to manhood's estate. He was educated in the Prairie Union district school, and the Reynolds public school, and took a course of two terms at the Davenport business college. He then worked the homestead until the death of his father, in 1895, when he took charge of it. He is a modern farmer, and believes in scientific methods. His business training enables him to attend to his affairs without asking outside help, and he does not regret the time he spent in acquiring it. The Methodist church holds his membership, and receives his generous and enthusiastic support. He is treasurer of it, and is well fitted to discharge the duties of the office. Ever since he cast his first vote, he has been a staunch democrat. Fraternally, he is an Odd Fellow and Modern Woodman of America. While the soil of Rock Island county is fertile and transportation excellent, the high standard maintained by the farmers of this region reflects great credit upon their ability and industry, and among them Mr. Wait deserves his full share.

WAKE, James C.—Hard work, intelligently directed along legitimate lines, generally results in success. Perhaps, however, few employments pay so well for wisely expended efforts as does farming, as men of Rock Island county have long since discovered. James C. Wake, who has been for some years engaged in agricultural pursuits in Zuma township, was born on section 9, Zuma, township, October 6, 1870, a son of George C. and Frances (Armstrong) Wake, the former born in England and the latter in Cordova township, Rock Island county, Ill.

The grandparents of Mr. Wake, George and Mary (Craven) Wake, natives of England, came to the United States after their marriage, and settled in New York, where they remained until 1859, at which time they came to Rock Island county and purchased 35 acres of land in Zuma township, adding thereto from time to time until they owned 215 acres, most of which was prairie land. At that early day deer abounded in this section and the crudest of implements were used to cultivate the wild land, in striking contrast to the wonderful farm machinery of this day. On this farm the parents of Mr. Wake were married, and they eventually settled on the farm of his father, George C. Wake, who died on this land, December 2, 1908, having celebrated his golden wedding May 28, 1906, and his widow died June 14, 1912. They had the following children: Charles, who is residing at Hillsdale, Ill.; Mary, who married Fred Whiteside of Joslin, Ill.; Stella, who married Ambrose Searl, died in 1894; Frank L., who is residing in Zuma township; General, who died at the age of four years; and James C.

James C. Wake was educated in the district schools, and has always resided on the home farm, which he purchased in 1905. It was well improved and had its quota of buildings, but he erected a large corn crib and hay barn and made other improvements, and was engaged in raising stock and doing mixed farming until 1910, at which time he rented his land but still resides on the farm. Mr. Wake was married March 21, 1900, to Mamie E. Walker, who was born in Zuma township, daughter of Marion and Jane (Dunbar) Walker, natives of this township. Mr. Wake is a republican in his political views, and has served as assessor of Zuma township for one term. He has long been a member of the Zuma Methodist Episcopal church.

WALKER, Colonel Charles L.—Clearly alive to the possibilities and requirements of their profession, possessed of courage, knowledge and keen perceptions, carefully trained, the lawyers of Rock Island county are men of unusual class. Much important jurisprudence is in their capable hands, and members of the bar from this locality are being selected to fill high offices for mighty corporations. One of the distinguished legal lights of this city, with offices at No. 200-203 Peoples Bank building, is Charles L. Walker, attorney and counselor-at-law. He was born in McHenry county, Ill., in a village called Queen Anne, December 27, 1851. His father, Leander S. Walker, a Methodist clergyman, son of Solomon Walker of Claremont, N. H., was born April 24, 1809, and his mother, Miriam L. Palmer, daughter of Ethan Palmer of Columbus, Ohio, was born in Ohio, April 28, 1814. They were married January 16, 1836. These excellent people traveled about the country as directed by their conference, ministering to the people placed in their charge, finally arriving in McHenry county, Ill., prior to the birth of Mr. Walker. Rev. Walker was for forty years a member of Rock Island conference, and was a recognized leader therein.

Charles L. Walker attended Mount Morris seminary and collegiate institute, located at Mount Morris, Ill., finishing the classical course there in 1870. During the time he was attending college he worked in his vacations to enable him to earn money to finish his college course and for several years following, he engaged in teaching school, worked at railroad construction, learned telegraphy, became agent for the Burlington Railroad Company, at Hillsdale, Du Page county, Ill., and at several other points, and thus became familiar with all classes of railroad business. In 1873 he concluded that railroading should not be his occupation, and with the purpose in view removed to the city of Rock Island in May, 1873. Ambitious, the young man was not satisfied until he had mastered the study of the law sufficiently to be admitted to the practice of his chosen profession at the bar, and at the session of the supreme court of Illinois in January, 1878, he passed his examination with distinction and was granted his license January 4, 1878. His ability as a lawyer was so appreciated, that he immediately thereafter became a member of the firm of Sweeney & Jackson, the firm name being changed to that of Sweeney, Jackson & Walker, and was employed on one side or the other, in most of the important litigation in the courts. Mr. Walker's advancement in the community and in his profession was rapid. At an early date he was recognized by the people as one of the best posted men in the profession, and his acumen and forceful logic won him prompt recognition and success before the courts. His firm were selected by the general solicitor of the Burlington Railway Company, as its attorneys in charge of all its litigation upon the St. Louis division, extending from Sterling to St. Louis, and Colonel Walker's firm has ever since been, and still remains such division attorneys. After many years of practice, Mr. Jackson retired from the firm, owing to his poor health, and thereafter the name of the firm was Sweeney & Walker and it so remained until the death of Mr. Sweeney, when Colonel Walker re-organized by taking in Mr. Ingram and Mr. Sweeney's son, and adopted the firm name of Walker, Ingram & Sweeney. They are the general attorneys for the Davenport, Rock Island & Northwestern Railway Company, and local attorneys for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and of other corporate interests. Their practice, however, is general in all lines, which in fact constitutes the bulk of their business.

On April 13, 1881, Mr. Walker was united in marriage with Miss Anna G. Stoddard of Rock Island and they have one child, Miriam A. Walker. Mr. Walker early in life accepted Methodism as his faith, and in Rock Island became a member of the First Methodist Episcopal church, to which he has given liberal support and attention. Fraternally he is a Mason of high degree, being a member of Trio Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Barret Chapter and Rock Island Commandery, Colonel Walker was president of the Rock Island public library board from 1893 to 1907, and it was under his administration that the present beautiful library building property costing $101,500, was constructed, and it was his personal effort alone that secured from Mr. Frederick Weyerhaeuser his magnificent gift of $20,700, and from Mr. F. C. A. Denkmann a smaller amount, and which alone made it possible for the board to undertake its erection.

Always an ardent and active republican, Colonel Walker rose to a very influential position in the councils of the party, and has been entrusted with many positions of honor and responsibility in his county, district and state. So high were his services and ability appreciated, that he was frequently consulted by Governor Richard Yates, who appointed him aid-de-camp on his general staff, with rank of colonel of the Illinois National Guard, January 28, 1901. He was also selected by Governor Yates as attorney for the Illinois and Michigan Canal in April, 1901, and was continued in such position by Governor Charles S. Deneen, so long as he would serve in that capacity, and he remained such until he voluntarily resigned in 1911, after rounding out full ten years of service. Colonel Walker has given much of his time to local municipal affairs and history, and is the author of the article appearing in this History, upon the "Land-titles" of Rock Island county, beginning with the Indian-titles. This article, accurate in detail and substance, is a good illustration of the care always exercised by him, and the research he invariably makes in the investigation of any question submitted to him for determination.

WALKER, Lee Andrew, owner of 20 acres of land, known as Seven Oaks Farm, in Drury township, is combining farming with government service, as he has been lighting government lights along the river for fifteen years. He was born in the township which is still his home, May 9, 1869, a son of Andrew and Ellen (Axtell) Walker, the former of whom was born in Ohio, but came to Drury township prior to the Civil war. When his country had need of him he showed his patriotism by enlisting in the Thirty-fifth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, a Muscatine county regiment, and served three years, being mustered out at Rock Island. He returned to his farm, and operated it until he retired from active life. At present he is residing with his son, Murrell Walker, on Island B, Illinois side. His excellent wife passed away in 1899. They had four children: Lizzie, wife of Henry Priest of Muscatine; Lee Andrew; Earl, deceased, and Murrell.

Lee Andrew Walker was brought up to farm life, attending the schools of his district, and naturally turned towards agriculture. After leaving home, he worked among neighboring farmers until 1896, when he bought his present property. It was practically unimproved at that time, but he has developed it until it is one of the most valuable farms of its size to be found in this part of the county, and on it he does general farming.

On December 30, 1891, he was married by the Reverend Davidson to Laura Howard, of Illinois City, born September 18, 1876, and they have five children: Arthur, born November 19, 1892; Clella, born June 29, 1894; Gertrude, born April 19, 1896; Grace, born February 18, 1898, died in infancy; and Ethel, born April 7, 1901. While he votes the republican ticket, he has not had the time or opportunity to enter largely into public life, but is satisfied to do his part of citizenship in a private capacity. Both as a farmer and faithful government employe, Mr. Walker has done his full duty, and is highly respected by all who know him.

WALKER, Rufus, one of the most extensive fuel dealers in Moline, was born in Williamstown, Orange county, Vt., December 10, 1839, his parents being Rufus and Susan Walker. Eleven children, seven boys and four girls, were born to this couple. The father, who was a shoemaker by trade, died December 22, 1839, when the subject of this sketch, the youngest of the large family, was only twelve days old. The seven sons all learned the same trade as the father, that of shoemaking.

Rufus Walker obtained a common school education in Williamstown, and in November, 1860, he left his native state and came west, settling in Rock Island county, where he obtained a clerkship in the general store of Ainsworth & Walker at Edgington. He was employed in this store until July, 1864, when he purchased the business and conducted it until February, 1873, when he removed to Rock Island, and in company with C. E. Dodge purchased the business of E. H. Smyth, which they conducted for three years under the firm name of Walker & Dodge. In the spring of 1876, together with Mr. Meigs Wait, he secured the right of way and about $22,000 in money for the Mercer County Railroad Company. Mr. Walker ran a general store furnishing supplies during that same year. They also purchased the land where the village of Reynolds now stands, and laid out that town, later going into the lumber business there and continuing in that business until the winter of 1887. In February, 1882, Mr. Walker moved from Rock Island to Reynolds. When the firm discontinued the lumber business in 1887, Mr. Walker moved from Reynolds to Moline, where for the past twenty-six years he has been engaged in the coal and fuel business. In 1901 Rufus Walker & Sons purchased a large block of stock in the Root & Vandervoort Engineering Company. In 1902 the Moline Automobile Company was organized, and the Walkers subscribed for a large block of stock, and are represented by Rufus Walker, Jr., who holds the offices of secretary and treasurer in both companies. At the present time both companies employ about one thousand men.

On August 19, 1862, Mr. Walker was married to Miss Jane Edgington, daughter of John and Susan Edgington of Buffalo Prairie township in this county. A biographical sketch of Mr. Edgington appears elsewhere in this volume. Four children have been born of this wedlock, they being: John, deceased; Frank B.; Rufus, Jr., who is now in partnership with his father; and Susan E.

Mr. Walker is a member of the Congregational church of Moline. He has never affiliated himself with any fraternal organizations. In politics he is a republican, but has never been an aspirant for party office. The life of Rufus Walker is the life of the average plain, unostentatious business man. He has been successful in the things that he has undertaken. He is a man highly honorable and with a scrupulous regard for his word. He enjoys a reputation of being a business man of great ability and of high integrity.

WALTERS, Henry T.—One of the successful farmers of Rock Island county is Henry T. Walters, who conducts the Walters farm of 300 acres in Rural township. He was born on this farm, in 1885, and was educated in the district schools of Rural township, and at the Davenport Business college. His father died when he was but a lad, but his mother survives, making her home in Milan. When he was twenty-one years old, Mr. Walters assumed charge of the homestead, and has since conducted it very profitably. In 1910 Mr. Walters married Bessie Van Dyke, of Chicago, daughter of John Van Dyke. Mr. Walters is a Mason, belonging to the lodge at Coal Valley. In politics, he is liberal, believing it is better to vote for the man, rather than to confine oneself to party, but has always favored measures looking towards the advancement of his community, and is regarded as a public-spirited young man. Although he has not yet accepted any public office, his conscientious regard for the rights of others would make him a good official. Both he and his wife stand very high socially, and their many friends are entertained hospitably at their pleasant home.

WALTHER, Charles G.—Since a chief executive of the United States publicly and upon many occasions stated his realization of the importance of agricultural operations and the necessity for more of the people to engage in them, the position of the farmer has been materially raised. There are many, however, who did not need any such encouragement, for they realized their own importance, and the profit to be gained from farming, among them being Charles G. Walther, of Coe township. He was born in Saxony, Germany, February 4, 1855, a son of John G. and Caroline (Kraft) Walther, both of whom died in Germany, the father in 1901, aged seventy-one years, and the mother in 1887, aged sixty-nine years. They are buried in Wechselburg cemetery. Charles G. Walther came to the United States when he was seventeen years old, in company with his brother, Ernest, now living in Henry county, Ill. They came to join another brother, Fred, who having come over several years before, had established himself in Henry county. Charles G. Walther secured employment at farm work until he married, when he bought forty acres in Coe township. In addition to operating this, he rented a farm for ten years, later buying 125 acres from Mrs. Charles Armstrong. Still later he bought forty acres from Rense Heeren. His beautiful ten-room house, was built in 1903, and he has added to his barns and put up other buildings. The farm is fenced with hedge posts, and is in a high state of cultivation. On it he carries on general farming and stock raising.

On April 12, 1880, Charles G. Walther married Catherine M. Hauberg, born at Moline, Ill., April 27, 1852. They had five children: Edgar; John E., married Goldie May Ashdown, and they have one son,—Lloyd A.; Clara Margaret Marie, married Albert Schafer, a hardware merchant of Port Byron, and they have a son,—Walther Matthew; Lillie Caroline Elizabeth, married Arthur Cook, of Moline, and died July 2, 1910, being buried in the cemetery in Zuma township; Clarence Carl John, married, August 17, 1911, Bessie Hale, of Anrova, Ill., have one child,—Carl John, and they reside at Sioux City, Ia., where C. J. Walther is principal of a school. Charles G. Walther is a member of the Farmers Camp of Joslin, Modern Woodmen of America, although he joined the order at Port Byron, in 1886. Both he and his wife belong to the court of Honor. He belongs to the German Lutheran church, but attends the Methodist church of Zuma, which his son Edgar is serving as superintendent of its Sunday School. They are all most excellent people, and the prosperity which surrounds them has been gained through the steadfast, untiring efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Walther.

WALTON, Patrick J., a well known citizen of Rock Island, Ill., was born at Nyack, Rockland county, N. Y., son of James and Bridget (Timmins) Walton, the father, a native of England, who came to the United States as a young man. The mother was born in Ireland. James Walton, an engineer and machinist by occupation, located in Chicago upon coming west; lived there until 1875, when he went to Hampton, Rock Island county, later moved to Fulton county, Ill., and he and his wife still live there.

Patrick J. Walton's birth occurred March 17, 1861, and he was educated in New York state and in the public schools of Chicago. Upon leaving school he was employed as clerk in a real estate office in Chicago and later as cash boy in the dry goods store of Field & Leiter. Afterwards he was errand boy with the James S. Kirk Soap Company. When his parents came to Hampton he was employed as pump tender in the mines and later became engineer. He has since been employed as stationary engineer and is now working for the Government. He owns a beautiful home at No. 501 Seventh avenue, and he has a wide circle of friends in Rock Island, where he has lived since 1887.

He is a democrat in political views, and he was reared in the Catholic church.

Mr. Walton was married in Rock Island in 1882, to Miss Barbara Hinsberger, who was born in Hampton, Ill., a daughter of the late John Hinsberger, and six children have been born of this union: Margaret, Elizabeth, May, Etta, Dorothy and John. These children live at home, except John, who is married.

WANKE, John, a representative German-American citizen of Rock Island, Ill., has been a resident of the city about twenty years and has many friends here. He was born in Prussia, June 22, 1858, son of David and Tina (Ernste) Wanke, both also natives of Prussia, the father born in 1820 and the mother in 1830. The parents spent their lives in their native land, where the father died at the age of twenty-seven years and the mother in 1906, at the age of seventy years. Of their five children four now survive: John, Gusta, Lena and Matilda; Anna died in 1882.

Until he was fourteen years of age John Wanke attended school in his native place, then took up farming and gardening. He started out in life for himself while still young and learned the trade of blacksmith, which he completed when he was nineteen years of age. He has since worked at this trade, being an expert and skillful mechanic. He was thus employed in his native country for ten years prior to 1892, when he came to America, sailing from Kreise Schivetz, and landing at Baltimore, Md., from there came to Waterloo, Wis., where he remained three months and then to Rock Island. He was first employed on the work being done in the streets of the city, but soon afterward begun work in a brickyard for Job Paulsen, and also worked on the Hennepin Canal and spent three years in the employ of the Government. After this he worked eight years at his trade in the employ of the Rock Island Plow Company. At present he is employed by the Corn Planter Company of Moline, but retains his residence at 606 Second street in Rock Island, which he purchased in 1905. He and his family belong to the Ninth street German Evangelical church and are active in its good work. Mr. Wanke is regarded as a public-spirited, desirable citizen, industrious and upright, and is interested in the welfare of his city and county.

Mr. Wanke was married in Germany, May 14, 1882, to Miss Fredericka Pomranke, daughter of Charles and Caroline Pomranke, born in that country, July 7, 1863. Both her parents died in Germany in 1907 and their four children were: Louisa, Paulina; Charles, deceased, passed away January 2, 1910; and Mrs. Wanke. Fourteen children were born to Mr. Wanke and wife, of whom the following now survive: Tillie, who lives at home; Adolph, who married Miss Ethel Umbenhauer, of Kansas City, Kan.; and Augusta, Fred, Martha and Alma, all at home.

WARD, John F.—Agricultural conditions in Rock Island county are very favorable and as a result those who are definitely devoting their lives to farming, are making a success of their work and increasing their amount of worldly possessions. One of the substantial farmers of this locality is John F. Ward, who rents and cultivates 320 acres of fine land on section 7, Edgington township. He was born in New York, January 31, 1852, being a son of John S., and Elizabeth Jane (Wheeler) Ward, natives of Orange and of Broome counties, N. Y. They went west to Nebraska in 1874, locating on a farm in that state, and there the father died in 1908, his wife passing away in 1906. Their children were: John F.; W. H., deceased; Emma J., wife of H. P. Striker of Dawson county, Neb.; Margaret A., deceased; Martha E., deceased; and F. A., of Dawson county, Neb.

When still a boy, John F. Ward went to work in woolen mills in Pennsylvania with his father, who had early located in that state, establishing himself as a woolen manufacturer. His valuable plant was burned in 1872 or 1873, hence the family migration to the West. At this time, John F. was nineteen years old and had secured a common school education. One year later, he began working on his own account, taking up railroad work, and remained with the D. S. & W. Railroad for eighteen months, then went with the Erie Railroad. Upon leaving it, he began farming and has since continued in that line. Upon coming to Rock Island county, he worked for others, until 1883, when he joined his family in Nebraska, where he remained until 1889, when he returned to Illinois, and resuming farming, secured his present farm in Edgington township. His sons own 120 acres in Iowa.

On March 26, 1877, Mr. Ward married Mary J. Myers, born March 25, 1855, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Powell) Myers, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania, and was a farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Ward became the parents of children as follows: J. C., who was married December 17, 1910, to Sarah Sellars, lives in Iowa, is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Masons; W. A., who also is in Iowa; and Vesta, who married Norman N. Sheldon and lives at home. Mr. Ward is a republican but has never sought office. All his life he has worked very hard, has invested his savings wisely, and is one of the extensive farmers of this county, and stands high in the confidence and esteem of all who know him.

WARMAN, James Lesley, who owns 160 acres of rich farm land in Drury township, is a general farmer, raising cattle, hogs and horses, and making a success of his work. He was born in this township, within two and one-half miles of his place, January 7, 1865, son of Enoch and Elmira (Reynolds) Warman, both born in Knox county, Ind. About fifty years ago they moved to Rock Island county and farmed here until a short time prior to the father's death, when removal was made to Muscatine, Iowa, where he died February 16, 1907. The mother survived him only a few days, passing away on February 20. They had ten children: Dora, who died in infancy; Emma, who is the wife of Albert A. Bowser of Drury township; Mary, who is the wife of Bert Brown of Kansas City, Mo.; Oten, who is a farmer of Iowa; Sarah, who is the deceased wife of Wilson Bowser; Sherman, who is a farmer of Kansas; Willard, who is of Chicago; Orsen, who is living near James Lesley; Grant, who is deceased; and James Lesley.

James Lesley Warman attended the schools of his neighborhood and assisted on the farm until he was twenty years old, when he worked on shares with his father in the summer and attended business college at Burlington, Iowa, in the winter, gaining a commercial training that he has found valuable, especially when he was tax collector of the township for three years. He has served for the same period as school director. In 1894 he began farming for himself, buying his present farm nine years ago, since which time he has made many improvements upon it, and developed it very materially.

In 1893 Mr. Warman married Florence Mitchell, born in Mercer county, daughter of George Mitchell, deceased, who was a farmer of that county. Mr. and Mrs. Warman became the parents of two children: Edward Monroe, born April 21, 1895, and Norbert Eugene, born September 10, 1909. A man of keen business sense, and experienced as a farmer, Mr. Warman operates his property scientifically and has every reason to be satisfied with the result of his labors.

WARNOCK, James D.—One of the old established business enterprises of Rock Island, Ill., and one that has passed down from father to son since 1853, is that of Warnock & Ralston at 201-211 Fifth avenue, whose president, James D. Warnock, is one of the city's representative business men. Mr. Warnock was born at Pittsburgh, Pa., September 20, 1850, a son of Hugh and Martha (Davidson) Warnock, the former a native of Balley Ferries, County Down, Ireland, and the latter of Newtownards, County Down, Ireland. Hugh Warnock was born March 3, 1825, and his wife August 24, 1824, and they were married at Newtownards, Ireland, July 12, 1849. Shortly after their marriage they came to the United States, settling in Pittsburgh, where their only son, James D., was born, and on March 20, 1853, they came to Rock Island, where they spent the remainder of their lives.

James D. Warnock received a common school education, and immediately after completing his studies entered the business which had been established by his father at the present site. Started in a small way, the business has steadily increased, year by year, and at the present time stands high among the solid, substantial firms of the city. Mr. Warnock has always been a republican, as was his father before him, but he has never found time to enter political contests for public office, preferring to give his time and attention to his business. Since 1868 he has been connected with the Presbyterian church. Mr. Warnock was married at Rock Island, Ill., June 3, 1875, to Agnes Ralston, who was born April 15, 1856, and to this union there have been born two children: Mrs. Nellie Soule, who resides at Tacoma, Wash.; and Mildred, who is living at home.

WASHBURN, Charles Alva.—It is remarkable how many young men are now holding positions of trust and responsibility. As a rule, the young man is ambitious and in striving to advance himself wins added business and prestige for his concern. Thus it is that preference is being shown for men not far beyond their quarter of a century milestone. One of these progressive, reliable young business men of East Moline is Charles Alva Washburn, manager of the Union Malleable Iron Company of this city. He was born in Muncie, Ill., October 24, 1884, being a son of Willard and Mary Alice (Cass) Washburn, natives of Waynetown, Ind., and Muncie, Ill., respectively. They were married at Danville, Ill., where the father was a farmer, and he and his wife have lived there and at Fairmont, Ill., ever since. Their children are: S. E., of Durbin, N. D.; Willard O., at home, and Charles Alva.

Charles Alva Washburn attended the public schools, and leaving high school at the age of seventeen years, entered the University of Illinois at Champaign, and was graduated therefrom when twenty-one years old. Following this, he began working in the office of Deere & Co.'s plow factory at Moline, remaining in this connection until 1909, when he was made assistant superintendent of the Union Malleable Iron Company of East Moline. In July, 1910, he was placed in charge of the works, and has since continued to be general manager of the company.

In September, 1910, Mr. Washburn was married to Zay Porter, born in Moline, a daughter of J. H. and Mary (Nourse) Porter. In politics he is independent. He belongs to Doric Lodge, A. F. & A. M., No. 390 of Moline, and also belongs to the B. P. O. E. of the same city. Live, energetic, keenly interested in his work. Mr. Washburn is invaluable to his concern and a desirable citizen of East Moline.

WASSELL, Bengt Carl.—Unless thought is given the subject, many fail to appreciate how many difficulties have to be overcome by those who come to this country from foreign soil, and for this reason all the more credit should be accorded to the ones that achieve success. One of the agriculturists of Rock Island county who has been more than ordinarily prosperous is Bengt Carl Wassell of Port Byron. He was born in Sweden, February 13, 1853, a son of John Anderson and Christina (Peterson) Wassell. Growing up in his native land, Bengt C. Wassell attended public school until seventeen years old, when the family came to the United States, locating in Port Byron township, where Mr. Wassell has since lived, with the exception of two years at Cordova. The father passed away at Port Byron, as did his wife, and they are interred in the cemetery there.

Bengt Carl Wassell took up farming and has made it his life work in conjunction with carpentering. In 1879 he bought eighteen acres, later adding forty acres, and is now retired and living at Port Byron. In 1880 Mr. Wassell married Anna Billow, born in Sweden, daughter of John and Sophia (Abrahamson) Billow. Mr. and Mrs. Wassell became the parents of four children, and he has a step-son: John Amandof, Almer, Edward, Jennie and Luther, the latter being a graduate of the high school of Port Byron. Mr. Wassell is a Lutheran. He is a hard-working, thrifty man, who stands well among his neighbors, and has many friends here and throughout the county. Coming here a mere boy, with no knowledge of the language, he has certainly accomplished much, and is in every sense of the word, self-made.

WATSON, Thomas, a substantial citizen of Rock Island county, who carries on large agricultural industries on his valuable farms containing 216 acres of fine land, was born at Alton, Ill., September 12, 1854, a son of Joseph and Anna (Malcomb) Watson. They were natives of Durham, England, and came to the United States in the early fifties. They had seven children, the two survivors being Thomas and Mrs. Dorothy Ann Wray, the last named being a resident of Muscatine, Iowa. After the death of his wife, in 1857, Joseph Watson continued to reside in Rock Island county with his children.

Thomas Watson attended the schools of Drury township in boyhood where his father first bought 120 acres, a tract now known as the Munsen farm. He lived on it, but later it was sold, and the father bought 120 acres of unimproved land on section 22, and on that place made his home until his death, February 14, 1865, and his burial was in the Rayville cemetery. Following the death of his father, Thomas Watson went to live with Thomas Redpath and wife, Mr. Redpath being appointed his guardian for his sister, and with these good people the children were happily placed. Mr. Redpath was a fruit grower and owned a fruit farm of 40 acres, situated on section 16. Mrs. Redpath died in August, 1875, and her burial was in the Drury cemetery, Mr. Redpath surviving until September, 1890. To these kind people Mr. Watson feels that he owes much and he always gave them a son's love and care. He remained with them until he was twenty-one years of age, at which time his father's estate was settled. On February 1, 1877, Mr. Watson was married to Miss Sophia Freyermuth, born October 14, 1854, in Drury township, and in the same year he bought 80 acres of land on section 16, which has continued to be his home place. The land had been slightly improved and Mr. Watson has continued its improvements until he now owns one of the finest homes in this section of the county. Later he purchased fifty-six acres situated in section 9, one-half of which was improved, and later bought eighty more

To Mr. and Mrs. Watson nine children have been born, as follows: Lucy Ann, Mrs. Ed. Reynolds, born November 12, 1877, residing in Drury township; Joseph Peter, born July 9, 1879, living at home; Katherine, Mrs. Raymond J. Pickett, born June 28, 1881; George Leonard, born February 7, 1883, living at home; Emma Pearl, Mrs. Leonard Dungan, born January 4, 1885; Thomas B., born March 26, 1889, living at home; Sophia Arizona, born June 9, 1891, living with her parents; Hazel, born April 7, 1893, died October 19, 1894; and Russell, born July 4, 1897, living at home. Mr. Watson and family are members of the Providence Baptist church, in which he has been a deacon for eight years. In politics he is a republican, with strong prohibition tendencies, and his prominence in the township has many times been recognized by election to responsible offices. He has served two terms as township collector, two terms as assessor and for six years has been township treasurer. He is an honest, upright man, an influence for good in his community, and is held in high regard by his fellow citizens.

WATTS, William J.—This is said to be the age of the young man, and he is proving that it is good policy to place him in positions of responsibility. The energy, enthusiasm and vim of the younger generation are working out some very desirable results, and the business men of every community are appreciating what is being accomplished. One of the men who has distinguished himself in commercial lines although he has not left his quarter of a century milestone far behind him, is William J. Watts, manager of the East Moline office of the Bell Telephone Co. Mr. Watts was born in Wales, February 23, 1886, son of Fred and Mary E. (Cocking) Watts. The parents came to the United States in 1888, locating in Colton, Cal., where the father still resides, but the mother died there in 1905, and her remains are interred at Riverside, that state.

William J. Watts grew to manhood in California, and was there educated in the public schools. His first business experience was obtained as an operator at Colton, and he worked as such for about four years. In 1908, he came to Rock Island, where he began working for the Bell Telephone Co., and so able did he prove himself, and so competent to handle affairs, that on February 10, 1910, he was put in charge of the East Moline exchange, and has continued to hold that responsible office ever since. Under his capable control a very efficient service has been given, and the business men and private parties using the telephones are well satisfied with his management.

Mr. Watts was married to Elenora McGinnis, daughter of James McGinnis, and they have one son, Wilbur William. A sound, reliable young man, possessed of more than an ordinary amount of executive ability, William J. Watts is certainly the right man for his place, and a citizen of whom East Moline may well be proud. He is a member of the I. B. of E. Workers.

WEAVER, Harry William, who carries on general farming and also conducts a dairy from which he daily supplies milk by wagon to many patrons living at Silvis and other near-by points, is a young man of energy and enterprise, one who is making the most of his opportunities. He was born in Rock Island county in 1881, and is a son of George and Mary (Knave) Weaver. It is probable that the grandparents of Mr. Weaver came to Illinois as pioneers from Pennsylvania as the family is one of the old established ones of the Keystone state. George Weaver, the father, was born in Rock Island county and for a number of years followed farming and then retired and resides at Moline. He married Mary Knave, who died in 1886, the mother of six children, the four survivors being: Margaret, Harry William, Frank and Velda. Harry William Weaver was reared on the home farm and first attended the country schools near his home and later the public schools in the city of Moline. His first self-supporting work after leaving home was teaming, being employed at Moline, and later was appointed shipping inspector for the Wright Carriage Works in this city and he continued industrious and so sensibly took care of his money that by 1909 he was able to make a permanent investment and bought the twenty acres on which he has lived ever since. A part of this land he devotes to crop raising and the other part to pasturage and profitably combines farming and dairying. He has other enterprises in view, it being his intention in the near future, to embark in the poultry business on a large scale. Mr. Weaver is a man of method, clear-headed and progressive and in all his undertakings has shown excellent judgment and, while he has always worked hard, he has been able to make headway and is on the road to independence.

Harry William Weaver was married in 1903 to Miss Bertha Donahoe, who was born at Moline, Ill. They have one son, Wilson. Externally Mr. Weaver is connected with that well known organization, the Modern Woodmen of America. In his views on public questions he is in sympathy with the socialist party.

WEBB, Alvy.—The United States Government is always anxious to secure the services of the best men in every line, and many who are skilled workmen are glad to engage with it because of the sure and steady employment. One who is giving the Government the best that is in him, is Alvy Webb of No. 525 Hennepin street, South Rock Island, who is employed as caulker at the Government boat yards. He was born in Ohio, October 10, 1851, a son of Joseph and Mary Ellen (Dilly) Webb, both of whom were born in eastern states. The father was a shoemaker and gunsmith, working at both trades before coming to Rock Island in 1855. He located in South Rock Island where he established himself in business as a gunsmith and repairer. Later he moved to a small town in Indiana where he started in business, remaining there until his death. Mr. Webb has a brother, James, living on the corner of Eighth street and Fourth avenue, Rock Island and a sister, Gusta, who resides with James.

Alvy Webb was educated in the public schools of Rock Island, continuing to attend them until he was eighteen years old. He was then employed in the printing office of Colonel W. A. Barnes, at one time editor of the Union, one of the leading newspapers of Rock Island. For about three years Mr. Webb remained here, then went into the sawmill factory owned by David Donaldson and stayed for three years more. Becoming dissatisfied, he left Rock Island and went to Indian Bay, Monroe county, Ark., and worked in a sawmill there for two years, but concluding that Rock Island county was best after all, he returned here to engage in the boat yards of Kahilke Bros., with whom he remained from 1872 to 1882, as boat caulker. He was employed later at Davenport as boat caulker for Jacob Eckert for five years, but left that position to go with Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann, as saw filer, continuing there from 1887 until the mill was closed in 1903. While employed with them Mr. Webb built his home at his present address. When he lost his position he began poultry raising and continued that business very successfully for three years. In 1907 he applied for a position in the government boat yards at Milan, and was engaged as caulker, still continuing to hold that position.

In 1898 Mr. Webb was married to Mrs. Marie Vertman, born in Sweden April 6, 1851, daughter of Nels Nelson and his wife Katherine (Aldrine) Nelson, both of whom lived and died in Sweden. One child, Austa Marie, was born of this marriage on January 13, 1899. Mr. Webb is independent in politics, but has never aspired to public office. He is an industrious man, who is thrifty in his habits, and one whose reliability is appreciated by the Government he serves so faithfully.

WEBER, Phil.—The solid, reliable qualities of the German-born are transmitted to their children, who are numbered among the most desirable citizens this country possesses. It is very seldom that anyone of German ancestry is found lacking the necessities of life, for early habits of industry and thrift bear fruits, and secure prosperity. One of the well known business men of Rock Island who is a blacksmith and horseshoer, is proud of the fact that his parents were natives of Germany. His name is Phil Weber, and he has resided in Rock Island since 1884. He was born in Lancaster, Pa., July 4, 1862, son of George and Mary (Puilman) Weber, who came to America from Germany, prior to their marriage. They married in Lancaster, Pa., where the father worked for years as a blacksmith, dying there aged sixty-two years. The mother lived to be eighty-one years. They had four children, the eldest dying in infancy, and Phil was the youngest. He has a brother, George, still residing at Lancaster.

Phil Weber was educated in English and German, and speaks and writes both languages well. He is a man of strong character, good business judgment and unusual ability. Proficient in his work, he does a large business among the better class of people. He started to learn the blacksmithing trade in his father's shop at Lancaster, when fourteen years old, and followed it as a journeyman in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, Altoona and Reading, Pa. He landed in Rock Island, March 25, 1884, and two days later went to work for the Rock Island Lumber Company, having charge of their shop for eleven years. Following this, he embarked in his present business at the location he now occupies.

On April 5, 1886, Mr. Weber was married in Rock Island, to Matilda Ligh, of Lancaster, Pa., daughter of Oloff Ligh. They have the following children: George, of Davenport; Mary; Elizabeth, a stenographer in Chicago; and Philip, Jr., at home. Mr. Weber has never voted outside the Sixth Ward, since settling in Rock Island, his comfortable home, which he owns, at No. 2722 Seventh avenue, being in that ward. In politics, he votes independently according to the dictates of his judgment. A hardworking, thrifty man, he has achieved a fair measure of success, and deserves a full measure of credit, for, all that he has or is, has been secured through his own efforts.

WEHREND, Mrs. Ella D.—In these days of woman's progressiveness, many of the sex are proving beyond question their right to be regarded as very important factors in the industrial, commercial and political life of the country. A number of the most successful business houses of any community are owned and managed by women, and one which is a credit to the city, and the proprietor, is the Crystal Steam Laundry of Moline, owned by Mrs. Ella D. Wehrend. Mrs. Wehrend is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Orr. Mr. Orr, a native of Ireland, was brought to the United States in childhood. After finishing school, he learned the blacksmithing trade, and followed it until his death. In 1858, he married Mary A. Cumiskey, and they had three children: Jennie, now Mrs. John Boyle of Alexandria, Ind.; George C., of Denver, Colo.; and Mrs. Wehrend. The latter was born in Rock Island, April 11, 1864, but was taken to Moline in childhood. She received her educational training in the grammar and high schools of this city. Following her leaving school, she entered the employ of the Moline Laundry, and for several years remained with this concern, laying a foundation of practical knowledge for her future success. Going to Chicago, she was governess to the children of a wealthy family, and remained with them until her marriage, June 13, 1895, to Henry F. Wehrend.

Returning to Moline, Mrs. Wehrend's active personality found expression in the establishment of the Crystal Steam Laundry. Mr. Wehrend continued his connection with the Moline Plow Works. The beginnings of this business were small, but from the first the quality of the work was such as to command instant appreciation, and Mrs. Wehrend soon was obliged to enlarge her equipment. This enlargement has been continued from time to time ever since, until she has now one of the largest and best establishments of its kind in Rock Island county. Mr. Wehrend died February 11, 1902, but Mrs. Wehrend, owing to her business capability and executive ability, has been able to continue her concern, and become one of the substantial property owners of the city. She is a woman of unusual mentality, and is universally respected both by her business associates and personal friends. Mrs. Wehrend is a member of the Eastern Star, Pythian Sisters, and other lodges, and is interested in their development and growth.

WEIDEMANN, Daniel Henry.—The modern farmer is not content to conduct his business in a hit or miss way, but strives to improve his property and adopts methods which he believes will aid him materially. The Rock Island county farmers are proud of their improvements and keep on making them, each endeavoring to make his farm the best in the township. One who has made a success of his undertakings and is the owner of one of the nice farms of Coe township, is Daniel Henry Weidemann. He was born in Zuma township, July 8, 1867, a son of Peter Henry and Mary (Mahistedt) Weidemann, both natives of Germany. The father came to America in 1865, and located in Zuma township. Both he and his wife were excellent people, whose useful lives were filled with many kind deeds.

Daniel Henry Weidemann was educated in the public schools of Zuma township. With the exception of two years, Mr. Weidemann has spent his life in farming. Those two years were spent as clerk for his brother, who was a grocer of Hillsdale. In 1897 Mr. Weidemann came to Coe township, and rented land for a year, when he bought seventy acres from Peter Dalson. After living on the place for seven years he sold to buy seventy-nine acres of John McRoberts, and this has been his home ever since. He repaired the old buildings, put up new ones, and a windmill, and now has a fine property, kept in excellent condition.

On March 19, 1896, Mr. Weidemann married Emma Haak, daughter of John and Dora Haak. Mrs. Weidemann was born in Coe township. Their children are: Mahel, Jesse, Cela and Verna. Mr. and Mrs. Weidemann are members of the German Lutheran church. These two have a beautiful home, four smart, promising children, and their present is very bright, while their future shows a prospect of being equally so. They have worked hard to bring about their present prosperity, and at the same time have made many friends, whom they entertain with generous hospitality upon numerous occasions.

WEINBERGER, Andrew.—The Germans know how to make their land produce abundant crops, and to keep each inch of it productive. Some of the most successful of the gardeners of Rock Island county are those of German birth, and an excellent example of this class is Andrew Weinberger. He was born in Germany, September 11, 1840, being a son of George and Elizabeth (Kurte) Weinberger. The father was a musician, and was brought to the United States to play at various gatherings. From 1847 to 1856 he was at New Orleans and died there in the latter year. As he succeeded with his work his family joined him. His widow survived him, dying many years afterward at New Orleans, aged eighty-four years. His children were: John, Henry, George, Andrew and Conrad, all of whom are deceased, with the exception of Andrew.

Andrew Weinberger was educated in Germany, coming to the United States in 1854, and learned the cooper trade at New Orleans. Living in the South, he naturally espoused the Confederate cause, in 1862, and enlisted under that government in an artillery company. He was made prisoner and taken to Rock Island, where he was kept four and one-half months. After his release he worked at his trade for a year. Having married in 1864 he moved to his father-in-law's farm in Black Hawk township, and operated the property for eighteen years. In 1883 he moved to his present property and began gardening, which he has followed ever since. He owns a nice house valued at $2,000, and one and one-half acres of land.

On November 23, 1864, he married Margaret Mary Meysar and their children are: Conrad John, who is of Rock Island; Carl A., who is of Trenton, Mo.; Andrew C., who is of South Rock Island; John H., who is of the state of Washington; Joseph, who is of South Rock Island; George E., who is of South Rock Island; Clara; Katy, who is in Black Hawk township; Lillie, who is of Rock Island township; and Jennie, who is of Mercer county. Mr. Weinberger is a democrat in political faith. There are twenty-nine grandchildren in the family and seven great-grandchildren.

Andrew J. Weinberger, the namesake of Mr. Weinberger, was born on the farm in Black Hawk township, January 1, 1875, and from the time he was fourteen years old he supported himself. He worked in a brick yard and is now a brick and iron moulder. On December 20, 1906, he married in Rock Island, Mary Pinkley, daughter of Oregon Pinkley. Two children, Charles and Helen, were born to them in 1908 and 1911. He is a democrat like his father, and belongs to no religious organization. All of this representative family are reliable, loyal and hard-working citizens who are a valued addition to any community in which they may locate.

WEINBERGER, Conrad J.—When an ever-busy man, from the harassing cares of business, is retired to a quiet, peaceful and happy life, such an individual naturally excites the friendly envy of his less-favored fellowmen. Without ostentation or apparent conscious superiority, he mingles in the society of his neighbors, and enjoys with them the affairs of the present, and a pleasant retrospect of a life well spent. Conrad J. Weinberger, one of the well-known retired citizens of South Rock Island, was born at Rock Island, September 13, 1865, and is a son of Andrew and Margaret (Meysar) Weinberger, the former born September 11, 1841, in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, and the latter, May 26, 1845, in Paris, France. Andrew Weinberger learned the trade of cooper as a young man at New Orleans, and followed that until his enlistment, in 1862, in the Civil war, in which he served two years. He was taken prisoner and detailed at Government Island for some time, and on his release again took up his trade. He was one of the leading musicians of New Orleans, playing many different instruments, and was leader of one of the most famous bands of that city. He now makes his home at Seventeenth and Brasher streets, Rock Island.

Conrad J. Weinberger was educated in the public schools of Black Hawk township, and was reared to manhood in that section, coming to South Rock Island with his parents in 1883. After remaining for a few years with them he went to what is known as the Moore farm for three years, and then went to Scott county, Ia., where he purchased twenty acres of land, and cultivated it for nine years as a gardner and fruit grower. He next spent three years in the city of Davenport, Ia., from whence he returned to Illinois, buying a farm of forty acres in Mercer county, where he resided for ten years. On December 1, 1910, Mr. Weinberger bought a beautiful home in South Rock Island, where he has since lived retired, although he still owns a residence property and forty acres of land at Milan.

On March 30, 1891, he was married to Miss Jennie Linn, who was born August 30, 1852, in Ireland, where her father died, her mother passing away in the United States when Mrs. Weinberger was ten years old, and she later became a teacher in the public schools of Rock Island county. She has two sisters living in this county: Mrs. John Ash, a widow, and Mrs. Henry Zienier, whose husband is a farmer of Rock Island county. Mr. Weinberger's brothers and sisters are: Carlos, living at Trenton, Mo., in the hotel business; Andrew J., a molder of Rock Island; John A., a painter of Spokane, Wash.; Joseph, engineer on the C. R. I. & P. R. R.; George, a moulder of South Rock Island; Clara, the wife of William Rettig, a farmer of Milan; Katherine, the wife of Robert Hall, in the mining business; Lillian, the wife of Samuel Burgess, proprietor of a furnace business; and Jennie, the wife of Arthur Flack, a farmer in Mercer county. The family is connected with the First Methodist Episcopal church of Rock Island, and

Mrs. Weinberger is a member of the Home Missions Society. For four years Mr. Weinberger has been a member of the Farmers' National Congress, of which he is a delegate, and in the interests of which he has traveled extensively, and after the first of this year (1913) he will be a life member.

WEINBERGER, Martin, the proprietor of the Rock Island Ice Company of Rock Island, has built up a large enterprise from small beginning, by his energy and good business judgment, and stands well in business circles. He is a native of Tyrol, Austria, born February 18, 1841, son of Sebastian and Katrina (Mutter) Weinberger. The father, a mason by trade, came to America in 1858, and settled in Madison, Wis., where four years later he was joined by his wife and children. He and his wife had children as follows: William, deceased; Martin, Louis, Joseph and Mary.

Martin Weinberger received the greater part of his education in his native country, and even in boyhood worked for hotels. After coming to Madison with his parents, he attended school for a time, and when leaving engaged in teaming. In 1868 Mr. Weinberger moved to Rock Island, where he spent eight or nine years acting as foreman of a gang of men at the arsenal, after which he engaged in an ice business in the same city, building it up to its present proportion. He has established himself in the confidence of his patrons and is recognized as one of the enterprising and useful citizens who have helped in the development and upbuilding of Rock Island during the past half century. A democrat in politics, he has served on the board of elections, but is too much occupied by his business affairs to care for public office. He is a member of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church and fraternally is affiliated with Camp No. 515, Modern Woodmen of America.

WEISHAR, John A.—In this age when electrical appliances and machinery are superseding those operated by other motive power, the work of electrical contractors is very important, necessitating long experience and thorough comprehension of all details. One of the representative firms in this line is that of Leithner & Weishar. John A. Weishar was born in Freeport, Ill., in 1876, son of Henry and Margaret (Fritzel) Weishar, both natives of Germany, now deceased. They had seven children: Josephine, Cecelia, William H., a merchant of Nevada; Ignatius; Henry J., chief timekeeper of the Illinois Central Railroad at Freeport; John A., and Joseph. Josephine, Cecelia, Ignatius and Joseph are deceased. Mr. Weishar belongs to the Knights of Columbus, the Elks, the Rock Island Club; the Roman Catholic church holds his membership.

William H. Leithner was born in Rock Island, January 25, 1889, a son of Frank and Cecelia (Weishar) Leithner. The father survives, making his home in Rock Island, where he is a merchant tailor. He is a native of Germany, but has lived here many years. His wife was a native of Illinois, and they were married in this state. This most excellent woman died August 28, 1907. There were five children in the Leithner family: Henrietta, wife of Henry Gaetge; Frank B.; Cecelia; Rosina and William H. William H. Leithner attended public school in Rock Island, after which he spent eight years learning electrical contracting. He holds membership in the Knights of Columbus and the Roman Catholic church.

These two young men formed their present partnership on April 10, 1911, and have developed a good business since that date, doing all kinds of interior wiring and fixture work. Their methods and the quality of their work insure a continuance of patronage once a customer is gained.

WEISS, Lawrence M.—To be the owner and successful operator of a large farm in Illinois, in these modern days, means a great deal, and in this rich and prosperous state commanding a high figure and a great amount of efficiency being demanded in order to stand among the foremost in agricultural accomplishment here. Rock Island county can boast of many well cultivated estates and no tract of 160 acres which makes up Cedar Lawn Farm in Edgington township, more clearly deserves commendation of this kind. The owner of Cedar Lawn Farm is Lawrence M. Weiss, who was born in Rural township, Rock Island county, Ill., March 30, 1867. His parents were James M. and Dorothea J. (Heim) Weiss. They were born in Germany, the father in 1822, the mother being somewhat younger. He died December 16, 1887, her death having occurred on April 1, 1875.

James M. Weiss came to America in 1851, his father having come to the United States in 1848, landing at St. Louis, where he died of cholera immediately after his arrival, his burial being at St. Louis, Mo. The Heim family came to America in 1848, and to Rock Island county by way of New Orleans and the Mississippi river, and settled on the eighty acres in Rural township which later became the property of James M. Weiss, and on that place, to which Mr. Weiss later added 200 acres, both he and wife died. They had a large family born to them, the names on the record appearing as follows: George, Gottlieb, Barbara M. (Mrs. John Volk), John, Mary (Mrs. Charles Schwartz), Christina, Elizabeth (Mrs. John S. Martin), Sophia (Fitzpatrick), now (Mrs. Volk), Margaret (Mrs. George Lepper), Emma (Mrs. Frank Sherrard), Jacob and Philip (twins), Gustavus A., Lawrence M., and Peter. The father of the above family was a shrewd and careful business man, a hard worker and a good provider. In his own land he had driven a stage coach as an occupation but after coming to America, he followed farming. For fifteen years he was a school director in Rural township. Both he and his wife were members of the Lutheran church.

Lawrence M. Weiss grew up on his father's farm and has always devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. Some sixteen years since he came to Cedar Lawn Farm, which is situated one and one-fourth miles west of Edgington, Ill., and has considerably improved the place since it came into his possession. On February 26, 1896, he was united in marriage with Miss Mary I. Long, the Rev. Brown performing the ceremony. She is a daughter of John L. and Carrie (Sayer) Long, the former of whom was born in Armstrong county, Pa., and the latter in Rural township, Rock Island county. The mother was born April 23, 1847, and died May 24, 1900. The father still survives and is now in his seventy-eighth year, living retired at Orion, Illinois. From the age of nine years, Mr. Long has made his own way in the world and was one of the gold seekers who went to California in 1849. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Long, as follows: Orris S. Long, born February 13, 1865; Mary I., born May 12, 1867; Wilson W., born November 4, 1868; Eva M. Hutchinson, deceased, born February 22, 1870; Emma C., born July 6, 1872; Minnie, born September 20, 1874; Wallace E., born March 22, 1877; Lester L., born April 24, 1880; Effie Beck, born April 19, 1883; Roy, born November 26, 1885; Bessie V. Beck, born February 25, 1889. To Mr. and Mrs. Weiss, two sons have been born: Harold Long, born Sunday, October 23, 1898; and John Maurice, born Tuesday, August 6, 1901. They remain with their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Weiss are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. In his political views he is independent but has always been numbered with the good, sensible, practical men of his community and for the past three years has been serving satisfactorily in the office of road commissioner.

WELCH, Capt. Thomas, who is one of Moline's best-known and respected citizens, a useful public official and the owner of valuable city property, belongs to that honorable body of citizens termed self-made men. He was born in the great city of London, England, in 1860, and as he was eleven years old when his parents brought him to America, he can recall many of the surroundings of his boyhood, some of these having a world-wide interest. In 1871 his parents, Thomas and Ellen (Green) Welch, with their six children, crossed the Atlantic ocean and finally reached Moline, Ill. The father was a brick mason by trade and found profitable employment through his active years, his death occurring in 1902 and that of his wife in the following year. Of the six children, Thomas was the third and all survive except one, Ellen, the others being Bridget, Josie, Margaret and George.

In his native city Thomas Welch attended school and also had school advantages after the family became established at Moline, but as soon as he was old enough he started to work in the Rock Island Sash and Door factory. He was an industrious and faithful employe and remained with that company for five years, afterward going with the firm of Dimmock & Gould, lumbermen. Mr. Welch then showed enterprise by purchasing a team and embarking in business for himself and for twelve years followed teaming as a business, working hard and never sparing himself. For a number of years he had been interested in the volunteer fire department and in 1896 became a member of the Moline fire department, and in 1898 was appointed captain of fire house No. 2, a position he has creditably and courageously filled ever since, and also, for six years, has served as assistant chief of the fire department. The efficiency of any organization of this kind depends largely upon the officers.

Captain Welch was married in 1883 to Miss Sarah Gibson of Iowa and they have four children, all of whom have been given educational advantages and are well equipped for life, their success in the paths they have chosen bringing satisfaction to their devoted father who had no such protecting care in his own youth. The eldest son, Thomas J., who is a leading member of the bar at Kewanee, Ill., attended the public schools of Moline and took the highest course at St. Mary's parochial school, from which he graduated. He then attended Notre Dame College, from which he graduated with the degree of L. B., after which he spent two years at Yale College. Following his course at Yale he visited Europe as private secretary to Professor Steel, who was investigating social conditions for the Government. He then studied law for one and a half years at Rock Island with the law firm of Kenworthy & Kenworthy, of which J. T. Kenworthy is senior member. In 1908 he formed a partnership with James Andrews of Kewanee, Ill., and after a year and a half was elected city attorney and when the commission form of government was adopted he was reappointed and is now filling that position and is practicing independently, his partnership having been discontinued. George, the second son, is a student in the University of Wisconsin, where he is giving attention to law and journalism. Clara, the eldest daughter, is a graduate of the Rock Island high school, and Frances, the youngest of the family, is a student in the Moline high school. Captain Welch and family belong to the Catholic church. The comfortable and attractive family home is situated at No. 1311 Seventeenth avenue, Moline. In politics he is broad-minded and when it comes to voting, he usually exercises his own judgment. He is identified with several fraternal organizations, including the Royal Arcanum, the Eagles and the Moose.

WELLER, Frank G., superintendent of the carriage department of the Sechler Manufacturing Company, was placed in his present position of responsibility because of his fitness for it. He was born in Hamburg, N. Y., May 19, 1861, a son of John G. and Laura E. (Taylor) Weller, the former born at Berlin, Germany, March 19, 1822, and the latter at Hamburg, N. Y., June 15, 1827. The father was a miller who came to the United States in 1857, going first to Black Rock, later to Buffalo, and still later to Portville, all in New York state. He died at the latter place, but his widow passed away at Sparta, Mich., having married as her second husband, Alexander Rosegrant. She had five children by her first marriage, three of whom died in infancy, those surviving being Frank G., and a sister, Grace, who was born August 11, 1870, in Springville, Erie county, N. Y., and married Frank Cooper.

Frank G. Weller attended the public schools of Buffalo, N. Y., and was reared in both city and country. His business career began when he carried water for a section gang while the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia Railroad was in process of construction. He was then apprenticed for a period of four years to the trade of carriage making, in Johnsonsburg, N. Y., and he followed this trade for one year at Grand Rapids, Mich., from whence he went to Kalamazoo, Mich. There he was foreman in a factory for six years. Following this he went on the road for a Chicago varnish house for two years, and the next two years were spent with the Fostoria Carriage Company of Fostoria, Ohio. He then went with the Howard Company at Gallion, Ohio, but after two years left to go with Thorpe Carriage Company at Jackson, Mich. Three years later he went to South Bend, Ind., to enter the employ of the Studebaker Bros.' works and remained with this concern for five years. He then returned to Chicago, and for four years was with H. C. Staver Carriage Company, at the expiration of that period coming to Moline, where, on September 1, 1907, he was made superintendent of the carriage department, and it is admitted that it would have been difficult to secure a man whose experience was wider or whose ability was as marked as his. Frank G. Weller was married to Zulah M. Albright in Fostoria, Ohio, December 31, 1891, and has four children: Pearl M., Scott E., F. Russell, and Hazel Z. They have a beautiful home on Forty-third street, Rock Island.

WELLS, Edwin W., senior member of the well-known concrete contracting firm of Wells & Larson, which has executed so many important contracts at Moline and in adjacent territory, is one of the live, progressive men of Rock Island county. He was born on the farm of his parents in Atalissa, Iowa, July 26, 1872, a son of William and Eva (Woodruff) Wells, the former of whom was born in Ohio, and the latter at Muscatine, Iowa. They were married in the latter city in 1871 and there resided until 1873. The father engaged in farming, following this he established a fish market in the city, but in 1878 came to Moline, making that city his home until 1894, when removal was made to Michigan, which continues to be his home, he now being extensively engaged in fruit farming. There were eleven children in his family, six of whom survive, Edwin W. being the eldest.

Edwin W. Wells was reared to manhood in Moline, where he attended school, leaving it to engage in work in a sawmill. So efficient did he prove himself that when only twenty years old he was made head sawyer. Recognizing the necessity of a knowledge of machinery, he learned the machinist trade, and followed it at Moline until he embarked in his present business, although he finds opportunity for exercising his expert knowledge along this line every day of his life.

In January, 1911, Mr. Wells formed his fortunate association with Erick J. Larson, under the firm title of Wells & Larson, and the two have developed a fine business, doing all the fancy concrete work that is executed in this city, in addition to manufacturing cement blocks of all kinds and colors, and building concrete houses. Their equipment, while excellent, is already too small for the demands of their trade, and they are installing additional appliances.

In 1895 Mr. Wells married Miss Anna G. Lundeen of Moline. Their one child, Vernon W., was born in 1901. Mr. Wells is proud of the fact that he is a descendant of John V. Wells of Virginia, a Revolutionary soldier, and is the staunchest kind of an American. Fraternally he is a Red Man and Modern Woodman of America, having gone through all the offices of the latter connected with Abe Lincoln Camp, No. 153. Very progressive in his political ideas, he has always supported the man he deemed best fitted for the office. The family residence is at No. 346 Forty-eighth street, and is owned by Mr. Wells. He is amply able to carry out whatever he undertakes, and stands high in the esteem of his community.

WELLS, Rinnah (deceased), was the founder of one of the prominent families of Rock Island county, the history of which is interesting. Rinnah Wells (1) was born on a farm in Vermont and while young accompanied his parents to Ohio and in that state was married to Nancy Beal. They became pioneers in Illinois settling first in Wayne county and in 1835 moving to Rock Island county. They located a claim near the present town of Sears, where they passed the rest of their lives, Mr. Wells dying in 1851, surviving his wife for some years. They were parents of eleven children, their son Rinnah being the ninth in order of birth. Rinnah Wells (2), son of Rinnah and Nancy (Beal) Wells, received but a limited education. He was born May 14, 1821, while the family tarried in Wayne county, where civilization had not yet taken deep root. Farming was the natural occupation to which he turned and for some years he worked for neighboring farmers and thus was well trained. In 1846 he bought a farm of 160 acres, Government land, situated in Zuma township, Rock Island county, and in the following year was married to Miss Hannah Buffum. She was born in 1827, near Canton, Ill., a daughter of Jonathan and Sarah (Rockwell) Buffum. The Buffums were natives of Ohio and they located near Canton, Ill., about 1824-5 and came to Rock Island during the thirties. During the Black Hawk war they were at Fort Armstrong on Arsenal island. After the close of the war Mr. Buffum erected the American House, on the corner of Third avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, which was the first hotel at Rock Island. For a number of years he conducted this hotel and after he sold it moved to a farm in Andalusia township, where he and wife made their home until the close of life. To Mr. and Mrs. Buffum nine children were born, six sons and then Hannah, the seventh child. Mr. and Mrs. Wells lived one year at Rock Island, but in 1848 moved to Mr. Wells' farm, where they resided until 1865, when he sold that property and bought a farm of 240 acres in Andalusia township, where they continued to live until the death of Mr. Wells April 14, 1877. He was survived by a widow and five daughters, three sons having died, and at present there are three survivors: Mrs. Mary Robertson, of Rock Island, and Mrs. Amanda Smith and Mrs. Lucy Allen, twins, both of whom reside at Nevada, Iowa. In 1878 Mrs. Wells moved to Rock Island, where she lived until 1888, when she removed to Nevada, Iowa, and that is her present home. In politics Rinnah Wells was a republican and in 1847 he was elected deputy sheriff of Rock Island county but resigned at the end of one year on account of poor health. For a number of terms he had served in the office of supervisor both in Zuma and Andalusia townships and was serving in the above office in the latter township at the time of death. Mrs. Wells is a member of the Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Mary (Wells) Robertson, the eldest daughter and second child of Rinnah and Hannah (Buffum) Wells, was born on the farm in Zuma township, June 5, 1849, was educated in the district schools and taught school when only sixteen years of age, for one year. On December 25, 1866, she was married to Edwin Atwood, who was born in Vermont July 16, 1840, came to Illinois in 1855 and after marriage located on a farm near Grinnell, Iowa, and remained until 1870, his death occurring on September 10 of that year. He was survived by two children: John Wells Atwood, who lives at Dallas, Texas; and Alberta, who is the wife of Arthur Spinney of St. Louis, Mo. After the death of Mr. Atwood, Mrs. Atwood returned to her father's home. On January 1, 1879, she was married to James S. Robertson, who was born at Tarentum, Pa., July 1, 1851, where he grew up a farmer. In 1878 he came to Rock Island county and in 1878-9 taught school in Andalusia township. In the spring of the latter year he rented Mrs. Wells' farm and made his home there until 1883, when he was appointed superintendent of the Rock Island county infirmary. After the termination of his official duties he moved to Wichita, Kan., in 1887, and there engaged in the real estate business until 1889, when he went to Council Bluffs, Iowa, accepting a position as commercial traveler for an implement house. Mr. Robertson removed to Davenport, Iowa, in 1901, where his death occurred May 21, 1903. He was a republican in politics but never took any very active part in public matters. His widow and three children survive: Maude J., who is a teacher in the public schools of Rock Island; Mary F., who is a trained nurse; and Samuel R., who is learning the railroad business. After the death of Mr. Robertson, Mrs. Robertson and family moved to Rock Island and now occupy their pleasant home at No. 905 Fifteenth street. Mrs. Robertson and the young ladies have a very agreeable social circle and they are members of the Congregational church.

WENDT, John H., of Rock Island, Ill., now living retired from active life, has been identified with various interests here and is justly regarded as an upright, public-spirited citizen. He was born in Kiel, Germany, November 17, 1851, a son of George and Hannah (Meddos) Wendt, natives of that country, the father born in 1816. Both parents died in Germany, the father in 1870 and the mother when John H. was but six years of age. The father was a farmer by occupation and he and his wife were parents of seven children, namely: Christ, Fred, Hannah, August, John H., Margaret and Katrina.

John H. Wendt was educated in his native country and there learned the trade of millwright, which he followed until coming to America in 1887. He sailed from Hamburg and landed in New York, whence he came to Davenport, Iowa, and soon afterward to Rock Island, his home since. He purchased his present residence at No. 1219 Second street in 1890 and also owns other lots in the city. He worked first in the sawmill of Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann for ten years, then entered the employ of the Rock Island Plow Company, with which he remained until retiring from active life in 1909. He has made many friends in the city and the family stands well in the community. As a young man Mr. Wendt served three years (1872-75) in the Germany army. He and his family lend their influence and support to various worthy movements and are active members of the Evangelical church.

Mr. Wendt was married in Kiel, Germany, April 3, 1877, to Miss Fredericka Bearand, daughter of Christian and Maria M. (Moss) Bearand, born in Germany February 28, 1854. Her parents died in their native country, the father about 1885 or 1886 and the mother in 1888. Their children were: Mrs. Wendt, Hannah, Sophia, Mina, August, Marie and Caroline. Mr. and Mrs. Wendt became parents of fourteen children, of whom the following now survive: George, Emma, William, Charles, Mary, John and Henry. There are eight grandchildren in the family.

WHARTON, John.—No history of Rock Island county would be complete without an account of the lives of those men when their country was in dire need, sprung to its defense, and enlisting went to the front full of enthusiasm and loyalty. One of the men who thus distinguished himself, and in after life was an industrious, hard-working man, is John Wharton, living at Milan, Ill. He was born in Pike county, Ill., June 6, 1844, a son of Robert and Mary (Wilbite) Wharton, natives of Ireland and Illinois. The father was a shoemaker, who at an early day came to America, settling in Pike county, Ill., where he followed his trade. Later he moved to Viola, in Mercer county, Ill., where he embarked in a shoe business, and kept on at his trade. Later in life, he returned to Ireland, where he died. His widow survived until 1903, when she, too, passed away, at Viola, Ill. There were four children in the family, one child dying in infancy. Mrs. Tillie Morey, of Moline; Mrs. Emma Beard, of Cambridge, Ill., and John Wharton are the survivors.

While still a boy, John Wharton learned stone quarrying, and later operated a stone quarry in Rock Island county, near Milan for many years, and also one for the late Colonel Davenport, but for the past few years has lived retired. His business career has been a successful one, and he is now a man of means. When the Civil War broke out, his loyalty compelled him to enlist, and he entered Company D, Seventh Division Missouri Cavalry, for a three-year service. He served for three years, nine months and fourteen days, being mustered out at Little Rock, June 19, 1865. He took part in numerous battles, including those of Independence, Mo., and Pine Bluff, and was present at Camp Ford, and while the battle at Independence was in progress, he had the misfortune to be captured, but was finally released. At St. Louis, the Seventh and Eighth Missouri Cavalry were consolidated, and Mr. Wharton was placed in Company K, Eighth Missouri Cavalry. After the close of the war, Mr. Wharton returned to Milan, and resumed his work in the stone quarry. He owns his pleasant home and four town lots in Milan, in addition to other property.

Mr. Wharton was married near Milan, January 14, 1866, to Mary E. Griffin, born in Rock Island county, April 17, 1850, daughter of George W. and Susan V. Griffin, natives of Ireland, who were early settlers of this county, coming when the Black Hawk troops engaged in the war were still stationed here. Mrs. Wharton is the only surviving member of her family. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wharton, but Mrs. Emma Wright, wife of Fred Wright, is the only survivor. They have a son, Earl. For four years Mr. Wharton was pound master, and is now street commissioner of Milan, being an efficient and conscientious official. In politics he is an independent republican. In religious faith he is a Roman Catholic. Naturally he is interested in John Buford Post No. 243, G. A. R., of which he is a valued member. In both war and peace, Mr. Wharton has proven himself a true American, willing to fight when necessary, but enjoying better the peaceful ways of every day life.

WHEELOCK, Everett E. (deceased), formerly secretary and treasurer of the Moline Paper Company, and a veteran of the Civil war, came of a long line of honored ancestry. He was born at Holland, Erie county, N. Y., April 13, 1838, a son of William and Catherine C. (Morey) Wheelock, the former born at Charlton, Mass., July 19, 1808, and the latter born at Holland, N. Y., March 11, 1814, died December 30, 1885. Ralph Wheelock, the immigrant ancestor of the family, was born in Shropshire, England, in 1600, and came to this country in 1637, with his wife, Rebecca, and children, Gershom and Rebecca. He settled at Watertown, Mass., but removed to Dedham, that colony, and was a prominent man in that town, and in church affairs, until his removal to Medfield, Mass., which town he founded in 1650. His son, Benjamin (II) from whom Everett E. Wheelock descends, was born at Dedham in 1640, and married at Medfield, having several children. He removed to Mendon, Mass., in 1689. Ralph Wheelock had the following children: Benjamin, Mary, Samuel, Peregrine, Record and Experience, born at Dedham, and Eleazar, born at Medfield. Eleazar (II) had a son, Ralph (III), who had a son, Eleazar (IV), born in 1711, who founded and was first president of Dartmouth College, at Hanover, N. H., in 1770. Eleazar (IV) had a son, John (V), born at Lebanon, Conn., in 1754, whose daughter Maria married William Allen, president of Bowdoin College. Benjamin (III), son of Benjamin (II), married Hulda Thayer of Mendon, Mass., and had seven sons: Benjamin, Daniel, Jonathan, Paul, Silas, David and Peter. Paul (IV) married Abigail Chapin of Charlton, Mass. His son, Adams (V), married Lucy Lamb of Charlton, Mass., and their son, Chapin, born at Charlton, June 19, 1785, married Lucy Wheelock, daughter of Abner (V), and Elizabeth Blanchard Wheelock of Charlton, born July 17, 1784. Abner was a son of David (IV), brother of Paul (IV). The latter, Abner (V), and Adams (V) all served in the American Revolution. Chapin and Lucy Wheelock were married at Charlton, Mass., February 10, 1806, and had eleven children: Esther, William, Erecta, Elvira, Chapin, Stillman, Adams, Elizabeth, Daniel, Jonah and Darius. William married Catherine C. Morey, and had six children, five sons and one daughter, Everett E. being the oldest. William Wheelock and his wife were among the first settlers of Holland, N. Y., and the country districts of Erie county, N. Y. He died May 11, 1869, at Holland, aged sixty years. He was a whig and later a republican. His life was devoted to agricultural pursuits.

Everett E. Wheelock was reared at home on a farm until eighteen years old, when he went to Moline, Ill., to begin work as a teamster for his uncle Stillman W. Wheelock, the pioneer paper manufacturer of Moline. He was educated in his native town, and in a course at Pratt's Commercial College of Davenport, Iowa. Everett E. Wheelock rose to be bookkeeper in the offices of the Moline Paper Company, and was its secretary and treasurer at his death. On June 10, 1861, he enlisted in Company H, Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served in the Union army for three years as sergeant; his brother Theodore being a corporal in the same company. They participated in all of the engagements of their company, an account of which is given in the Military History in this work. Mr. Wheelock belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and R. H. Graham Post, G. A. R., which he served as adjutant (secretary) for many years. He was also a member of the Nineteenth Illinois Veteran Association until it was disbanded, and attended all of its reunions and other meetings when he could get to them. While not an affiliated member of any church, he was a member of the working and business committee of the First Congregational church, and also a member of the Congregation of the Unitarian Society of Moline. He was a republican from the foundation of the party, and belonged to many marching companies, and was an ardent worker in its ranks.

Mr. Wheelock was married at Mount Sterling, Brown county, Ill., October 15, 1866, to Mary O. Nye, daughter of Stephen Nye, born in Muscatine, Iowa. She died May 12, 1901. Mr. Wheelock died January 12, 1910, aged seventy-two years. He was a faithful friend to those with whom he was associated, and his hand was ever open to the calls of charity or to relieve suffering on any and every occasion. He was always on the outlook for his suffering comrades, helping them continually, and was looked upon by them as lovingly as a father. Mr. Wheelock was one of the most sympathetic of men, and gave liberally to church work. He was a true man in every respect, and his demise was a great loss to his community.

WHEELOCK, Lucius Page.—There are many interesting events in the life of every capable and successful business man that are worth the telling, and when they show that enterprise, energy and industry have contributed to prosperity, the story carries a valuable message to the younger generation. Lucius Page Wheelock is a highly esteemed retired resident of Moline and is a descendant of old New England stock. He was born at Holland, Erie county, N. Y., June 10, 1844, and is a son of William and Catherine C. (Morey) Wheelock. William Wheelock was born at Charlton, Mass., July 19, 1808, a son of Chapin and Lucy (Wheelock) Wheelock, also natives of Charlton, Mass., and both descendants of Ralph Wheelock, who came to America from Shropshire, England, in 1637, and located at Watertown, later Medfield, Mass. In 1816 William Wheelock moved to Holland, N. Y., with his parents and they located on a farm on which they lived until their children reached maturity. Chapin Wheelock returned to Massachusetts on a visit and died while there, in January, 1835. His children were eleven in number, two of whom died in infancy. Esther, the eldest daughter, born in Massachusetts, in 1806, married James Kimball and died September 11, 1840. William, born July 9, 1808, Erecta, born at Windsor, Mass., March 23, 1810, married Lewis B. Blanchard, and died at Charlton, Iowa, February 25, 1889. Chapin A., born at Windsor November 24, 1814, came to Moline, Ill., where he died March 24, 1891. Stillman W., born at Holland, N. Y., June 18, 1816, died January 8, 1892, of whom later mention will be made. Adams, born at Holland, August 8, 1818, died October 1, 1868. Daniel L., born August 29, 1822, was a farmer for some years and lived in various places. Early in Moline's history he settled here and engaged in the bakery business, having the first steam bakery in the village. When Moline city was organized he was elected the first mayor. Later he moved on a farm in Iowa, but when ready to retire returned to Moline, where he died April 18, 1893. Elizabeth, the next younger sister of Daniel Wheelock, was born at Holland, N. Y., June 28, 1820, and died there, being the wife of Amos Parmenter. Darius T. Wheelock, the ninth member of the family, was born at Holland September 6, 1827. The greater part of his life was spent in California, to which state he went when gold was first discovered there, and died at Watsonville February 21, 1882.

Stillman W. Wheelock was the first of the family who settled in Illinois. In the spring of 1839, with $60 in his pocket, he left Buffalo, N. Y., on the steamer Anthony Wayne, and landed in the marshy village of Chicago May 10, 1839. He remained over night but the next day he walked on as far as St. Charles, where he accepted a job, in a hardwood sawmill, at one dollar a day of twelve hours. Afterward he rented the mill in partnership with a man by the name of Flint; later engaged there in the hotel business, afterward followed farming. In the spring of 1851 he came to Moline and bought an old foundry and in partnership with a Mr. Smedley began the manufacture of paper and later the firm became Wheelock & Fergus. In 1872 he bought a large interest in the firm of Candee, Swan & Co., plow manufacturers, and became president of the company, and at that time the firm name became The Moline Plow Company, and he continued at its head until his death. He was also one of the organizers and a stockholder of the Moline Malleable Iron Works, organized in June, 1884, accepted the office of president and controlled the stock. In the same year was organized the Moline Central Street Railway, of which he also became president, this transportation line being opened to the public in June, 1885. The three-story building which was occupied for twelve years by the Moline post office, was built by Mr. and Mrs. Wheelock and the second and third stories were presented to the Free Library Association, the first of its kind in this city. Mr. Wheelock was also president of the Moline National Bank and was mayor of the city in 1877, 1879 and 1881. He was married at St. Charles, Ill., to Lydia Flint, born in 1842, who died at Moline, December 27, 1890, without issue. Mrs. Lucy Wheelock, the grandmother of Lucius P., came to Moline with her son, Stillman, when he came back from a visit and died here four years later, in 1864.

William Wheelock, father of Lucius P., spent his days on the home farm in Erie county, where he died May 11, 1869. He was married in 1837 to Catherine C. Morey, born at Holland, N. Y., March 11, 1814. After the death of her husband Mrs. Wheelock and son and youngest daughter concluded to sell the farm and they then came to Moline. Later, Mrs. Wheelock bought a farm near Madison, Wis., on which she lived for some years and then returned to Moline, where she died December 30, 1885. There were six children in the family: Everett E., Theodore D., William E., Lucius P., Jerome B. and Kate M. Everett E. Wheelock was born April 13, 1838, and in 1856 came to Moline and became a teamster for his uncle Stillman. In the early days of the paper industry here paper was delivered through the country by teamsters and loads of rags were collected and returned to the mill and Mr. Wheelock continued to be thus employed until June 10, 1861, when he enlisted for service in the Civil war, becoming a private in Company H, Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served in the Western Army for three years. He was promoted to the rank of orderly sergeant and with the exception of three weeks in the recruiting service, was on the field the whole time. After he came back to Moline he continued with his uncle until the close of his life. He married Mary O. Nye, who died without issue May 12, 1901. Theodore D. Wheelock was born April 3, 1840, and he came to Moline in 1858 and, during the winters of 1859 and 1860, went to school and worked during the other seasons as a teamster for his uncle. On April 3, 1860, he became an apprentice with Williams, Heald & Co., foundrymen and machinists, and continued until the summer of 1861, when he enlisted as a private in Company H in the same regiment as his older brother and served until July 9, 1864, when he was mustered out with the rank of corporal. For four years afterward he followed the machinist trade and then entered the employ of the Moline Plow Company as engineer and continued for two years. For the three following years he was in the boot and shoe business under the firm name of Thomas & Wheelock, when he became superintendent for the Moline Scale Company and remained six years. Mr. Wheelock was then employed as foreman of the iron department for the Moline Plow Company and continued to 1892. Later he became engineer at the city waterworks and filled that position up to the time of death, May 21, 1906.

William E. Wheelock was born July 20, 1842, and was a graduate physician of the Eclectic School of Medicine. The later part of his life was spent on his son's ranch near Lubbock, Texas, where he died February 21, 1902. Jerome B. Wheelock was born November 15, 1847. From the home farm he went to Madison, Wis., where he made his home with an uncle and while there took a course in the Northwestern Business College. Later he came to Moline and first became an assistant bookkeeper in the Moline National Bank but later was graduated with a medical degree from a homeopathic school at Ann Arbor, Mich. He practiced medicine for some years at Moline and then moved to Minneapolis, Minn., and later to Good Thunder, where he continued in practice until his death, May 17, 1899. Kate M. Wheelock, the only daughter of the family, was born September 13, 1853, and was married at Moline, October 13, 1880, to Horace M. Anderson. She resides in her comfortable residence at No. 629 Eighteenth street, Moline. She has three children: Raymond G., who lives at Stoughton, Wis.; Nellie L., who is the wife of J. Frank Ervin; and Helen E., the latter being an accomplished young lady and the society editor of the Moline Dispatch.

Lucius P. Wheelock was educated in the district schools and had one term in the Aurora Academy. He then taught three terms in his home district and two terms farther away, devoting his time in the intervals to work on the home farm, and remained at Holland until the death of his father in 1869. He was appointed administrator of the estate and after settling all claims sold the farm, and as stated above, accompanied his mother and sister to Moline, Ill. After a month or two he started for Madison, Wis., to visit his uncle, Daniel Larkin, and in February, 1870, with his brother, Jerome B., went on to Springfield, Mo. There they rented a farm of 400 acres and conducted it for two years. In the meanwhile his mother had settled on her farm in Wisconsin and he returned there for a visit and then went back to Holland, N. Y. After clerking in a store there for one year he worked as a hand in a blacksmith shop, in which he later became a partner but after two years gave up his prospects there and returned to Wisconsin and while managing his mother's farm devoted his spare moments to study and in December, 1876, was graduated from the Northwestern Business College. On May 1, 1877, he came to Moline and entered the employ of the Victor Scale Company as traveling builder and also worked occasionally in the shops, and in July, 1881, he became superintendent of the shops of this company and continued for four years. In 1885 he entered the shops of the Moline Plow Company, as superintendent of one of their specialty departments, the Flying Dutchman Sulkey Plow, where he remained until he resigned the office, June 3, 1893. Mr. Wheelock spent five years in Wisconsin and three years in California. For the past three years he has made his home with his sister, Mrs. Anderson, never having married. He is widely known. Like other male members of the family, he is a republican. Mr. Wheelock is a spiritualist in religious faith.

WHELOCK, Stillman W. (deceased), formerly president of the Moline Paper Company, the Moline Plow Company, the Moline National Bank, and ex-mayor of the city, came of a long line of honored ancestry. He was born in Holland, Erie county, New York, June 18, 1816. He was the first of the family who settled in Illinois. In the spring of 1839, with $60 in his pocket he left Buffalo, N. Y., on the steamer "Anthony Wayne," and landed in the marshy village of Chicago on the tenth day of May. He remained over night and walked the next day to St. Charles, where he accepted a job in a hard-wood saw mill at $1 a day of twelve hours. The next year he, with S. B. Flint, rented the mill and ran it on their own account. Abandoning the mill, Mr. Wheelock engaged in the hotel business which he continued for two years. He exchanged the hotel for a farm seven miles from St. Charles, and built a brick dwelling in town which he occupied, giving his attention to the farm. Mr. Wheelock married Lydia Flint in March, 1842, who died without issue, December 27, 1890.

In the spring of 1851, Mr. Wheelock came to Moline and bought an old foundry, converted it into a paper mill, and in partnership with Mr. Smedley, began the manufacture of paper, which became a prosperous business. In 1872, Mr. Wheelock bought a controlling interest in the firm of Candee, Swan & Company, plow manufacturers, re-organized the concern, converted it into a stock company, and became first president of the Moline Plow Company, holding this position at the time of his death, January 8, 1892. He was one of the organizers of, and a stockholder in the Moline Malleable Iron Works, and he also organized the Moline Central Street Railway Company, of which he became president. He was a large stockholder in the Moline National Bank of which he was president at time of his death. The three-story building on Fifteenth street which was occupied for twelve years by the Moline postoffice, was built by Mr. and Mrs. Wheelock, and the second and third stories were presented to the Free Library Association, the first of its kind in the city. Mr. Wheelock was mayor of the city three terms, from 1877 to 1883. He was a republican in politics, and a member of the Unitarian church.

Ralph Wheelock, the immigrant ancestor of the family was born in Shropshire, England, in 1600, and came to this country in 1637 with his wife, Rebecca, and children, Gershom and Rebecca. He settled at Watertown, Mass., but removed to Dedham, and was a prominent man in that town and in church affairs, until his removal to Medfield, which town he founded in 1650. His son Benjamin (2) from whom this branch of the family descends, was born in Dedham in 1639 and married in Medfield, having several children. Ralph Wheelock also had the following children: Mary, Samuel, Peregrin, Record and Experience born in Dedham, and Eleazor, born in Medfield. Eleazor (2) had a son Ralph (3) who had a son Eleazor (4) born in 1711, who founded, and was the first president of Dartmouth College in Hanover, N. H., in 1770. Mr. Wheelock was educated in the district school and came to Moline in 1858 and was employed by his uncle, Stillman W. Wheelock, as teamster, going to school the following winter. He decided to learn the machinist's trade, and April 2, 1860, began work in the shop of Williams, Heald and Company, machinists, and continued with them until June, 1861 when he enlisted as a private in Company H, Nineteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He saw three years of active service, report of which is given in the military history of his company, in this work, and was mustered out as corporal in July, 1864. Returning to Moline he followed the occupation of machinist four years, and then entered the employ of the Moline Plow Company as engineer for two years, when he engaged in the boot and shoe business under the firm name of Thomas and Wheelock, continuing in this business three years. Having a preference for mechanical work, he then took charge of the Victor Scale Company shops as superintendent for six years, when he returned to the Moline Plow Company and accepted the position of superintendent of the Iron Department, continuing in this capacity until he resigned in 1892. He was then appointed superintendent of the City Water Works, holding this position eleven years, and until relieved by a change of administration. Mr. Wheelock was a member of R. H. Graham Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, Modern Woodmen of America and the Order of Stationary Engineers. He was a republican in politics and a member of the Unitarian church. He died May 21, 1906. Mrs. Wheelock resides at 713, 18th street, Moline.

William Efner Wheelock (8) born in Holland, N. Y., July 20, 1842, married Louisa Diana Farrington, August 24, 1862, and had two children: Frank and William. Mrs. Wheelock died August 11, 1869 at Holland. Mr. Wheelock was educated in the common school and spent his boyhood days on his father's farm. He came west in 1871 and located on a farm near Madison, Wis., where he remained several years. After leaving the farm he was employed by the American Express Company at Madison, Wis., as delivery man, continuing in this capacity four years. He then located in Walsh county, N. D., where he was engaged in farming six years. In 1892 he went to Lubbock, Tex., and became interested with his son on a cattle ranch, where he died February 21, 1902. Mr. Wheelock was politically a democrat in later years, and in religious sentiment, a spiritualist.

Lucius Page Wheelock, (S), was born June 10, 1844 at Holland, N. Y. He was educated in the district school, with one term at a select school in his native town, and one term at the academy in East Aurora, N. Y. He taught school five winter terms, assisting his father on the farm in the meantime. He was administrator of his father's estate, and after settling up the affairs, sold the farm, and with his mother and sister came to Moline, in December 1869. Remaining here but a short time, he, with his brother Jerome went to Springfield, Mo., where they engaged in farming one year. Returning to his native town, Holland, N. Y. he engaged as clerk in a general store one year, and was then employed in a blacksmith shop in which he became partner, continuing in the business two years. He then went to Madison, Wis., to manage the farm for his mother who had located there, and during the time attended the Northwestern Business College in the city, graduating in December 1876. Returning to Moline about May 1, 1877, he engaged with the Victor Scale Company as traveling builder, following this occupation until July 1, 1881 when he took charge of the shop as superintendent, holding this position until January 1, 1885. He then entered the shops of the Moline Plow Company, where he was superintendent for eight years of the department for turning out the famous sulky plow, Flying Dutchman. Resigning this position June 1, 1893 he later lived with relatives several years on a farm near Madison, Wis., returning to Moline in May, 1909.

In political principles Mr. Wheelock has always been a republican, and in religious sentiment is a staunch spiritualist. He is a life member of the Mississippi Valley Spiritualists' Association, established in 1883 with headquarters at Clinton, Ia., where a four weeks session is held annually. He was actively identified with the business management of the Association for several years. Mr. Wheelock resides with his sister at No. 629 Eighteenth street, Moline.

Jerome Bonaparte Wheelock (S) was born at Holland, N. Y. November 15, 1847. He was educated in the common school and in the spring of 1867 came to Madison, Wis., to work for his uncle on a farm near the city, and taught the district school the following winter. He married Annette Florence Haseltine, November 13, 1869, at Madison, and in February 1870 went with his brother Lucius to Springfield, Mo., and engaged in farming, one year. Returning to Madison, he was employed by the American Express Company, as deliveryman, and during the time took the commercial course and graduated at the Northwestern Business College in the city. He removed to Moline, and January 1, 1876 accepted a position in the Moline National Bank as book-keeper, continuing in this capacity four years, when he engaged with the Moline Plow Company in the same capacity for two years, and was then transferred to their branch house in Minneapolis, Minn. In September, 1886, Mr. and Mrs. Wheelock began the study of medicine in the Homeopathic Department of the State University at Ann Arbor, Michigan, both graduating in June, 1889. He located in Minneapolis, Minn., and practiced one year, and then came to Moline where he continued four years. Returning to Minneapolis he followed his profession there, removing to Good Thunder, Minn., later, where he died May 17, 1899. He was a republican in politics, and in religious sentiment a Spiritualist. Mr. and Mrs. Wheelock had one child, Minette Alma, born October 23, 1872, who married Wallace Gilman Skidmore. She died May 29, 1897. Mrs. Wheelock resides at Kenyon, Minn.

Kate Morey Wheelock, the only daughter of William and Catherine Morey-Wheelock, was born at Holland, N. Y., September 13, 1853, and was married at Moline, October 13, 1880, to Horace Mann Anderson. She has three children: Raymond, Nellie and Helen. She resides in her comfortable residence at No. 629 Eighteenth street, Moline.

Henry Freeman Thomas, father of Mrs. Theodore D. Wheelock, was born January 8, 1811, at South Weymouth, Mass., son of John and Mary (Stetson) Thomas. Mr. Thomas learned shoemaking in his younger days, and worked at his trade for several years. After marriage, in September 1835, Mr. Thomas came west with his wife's family in 1837, and settled in Tremont, Ill., a small town near Peoria. They came overland by canal and with horse and wagon, and a month was consumed in the trip. While in Tremont, Mr. Thomas was in a boot and shoe business. In 1848 he moved to Hampton, and later embarked in a dry goods business with L. F. Baker, another pioneer, and they continued their association for many years. In 1869 Mr. Thomas opened a shoe store in Moline with his son-in-law Mr. Wheelock, and continued to operate it for ten years. Returning to Hampton, he continued this business there. In 1865 he was elected county treasurer, and served two terms. He and his wife had the following children: Alice Augusta, who died at the age of eleven years; Mary Louise, who is now Mrs. George Vincent; Joseph Henry, who was lost on the steamer Jennie Gilchrist, in 1881; Camilla Conant (Mrs. Wheelock); Sylvia Jane, who is now Mrs. Frederick C. Hemenway; Alice Hayward, who is now Mrs. Samuel Crompton; Clara Lillian, now deceased, who married James T. Francis; Herbert Ellsworth who married Ruth A. Sadler. There were twenty-three grandchildren born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas. Mr. Thomas died in 1881, and his wife in 1906.

WHELOCK, Theodore M.—The bar of Rock Island county is ably represented by scholarly men, learned in their profession, whose practice in all the courts show their ability and capacity to deal with large and involved questions. The litigation of this county alone taxes them, but many are called upon to serve clients not only throughout this, but other states, and they are found capable of meeting any demands made upon them. One of the brilliant and able young attorneys of the county is Theodore M. Wheelock, with offices at No. 14 Skinner Annex Building, and residence No. 713 Eighteenth street, Moline, Ill. He was born in this city October 28, 1876, being a son of Theodore D. and Camilla C. (Thomas) Wheelock, the former born in Holland, Erie county, N. Y., died May 21, 1906, and the latter, born in Pekin, Ill., still survives. The parents of Mr. Wheelock were married at Hampton, Ill., where the father was a mechanical engineer. They had three sons and two daughters: Luce G. Herbst, Stillman W., Alice H., Theodore and Henry T. Theodore D. Wheelock served in Company H, Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Moline for service during the Civil war, and was mustered in at Chicago, June 10, 1861.

Theodore M. Wheelock attended the Moline High School and the State University of Iowa, from whence he was graduated in law in 1900. Following this he went to McAllister, Okla., where he practiced law for five years, then came to Moline, where from 1907 he has been in active practice. His work is principally of a commercial character, he having made a specialty of commercial law. At present he is a justice of the peace and is a good official. In politics he is a republican. Mr. Wheelock has two daughters, Margaret and Alice. A close student, a brilliant attorney, Mr. Wheelock is numbered among the leading lawyers of Rock Island county.

WHELOCK, Theodore Darins (deceased), a mechanical engineer whose connections with city institutions reflected credit upon his skill, and whose services during the Civil war proved his patriotism, was born April 3, 1840, at Holland, N. Y. He was a son of William and Catherine C. (Morey) Wheelock, the former born at Charlton, Mass., on July 19, 1808, and the latter on March 11, 1814. The father was a farmer of Erie county, N. Y., and passed away at Holland, that state, May 11, 1869, aged sixty years. His widow, after his death, joined her children in Rock Island county, being the last of the family to come here, and died at Moline, December 30, 1885. A full sketch of the Wheelock family is given elsewhere in this work. Theodore D. Wheelock had attended school at Holland, prior to coming west in 1859, and while living with his uncle, Stillman Wheelock, and working for him in his paper mill, attended school at Moline. He then began learning the machinist trade with Williams, Heald & Company, and as he had always had a mechanical turn of mind, displayed considerable ability. In June, 1861, Mr. Wheelock enlisted for service during the Civil war, in Company H, Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and participated in every engagement of his regiment as given in the Military History in this book. He was mustered out as corporal, having served bravely and well. Upon his return from the army Mr. Wheelock resumed work at his trade and was engaged in that line the rest of his life. On May 8, 1894, Mr. Wheelock was appointed under a republican administration, superintendent of the city waterworks, and gave an efficient service until April, 1901. For years, he was captain of Minnehaha Hose Company; superintendent of the Moline Scale Company, and for some years superintendent of the Moline Plow Company. Mr. Wheelock belonged to R. H. Graham Post, G. A. R., of which he was commander for several years; the Modern Woodmen of America and the order of Stationary Engineers. A Unitarian, he was very liberal in his religious views, according to all equal freedom. Always supporting republican principles, he was very active in the campaigns of his party.

Mr. Wheelock was married at Hampton, Rock Island county, November 29, 1866, to Camilla C. Thomas, born at Tremont, Ill., March 20, 1845, a daughter of Henry Freeman and Alice (Hayward) Thomas. Henry F. Thomas was born January 8, 1811, at South Weymouth, Mass., a son of John and Mary (Stetson) Thomas. He learned shoemaking in his younger days and worked at his trade for several years. After marriage in September, 1835, Mr. Thomas came with his wife's family, and settled at Tremont, Ill., a small town near Peoria. They came overland by canal and with horse and wagon and a month was consumed in the trip. While at Tremont, Mr. Thomas was in a boot and shoe business. In 1848 he moved to Hampton, Ill., and embarked in a drygoods business with L. F. Baker, another pioneer, and they continued their association for many years. In 1869 Mr. Thomas opened a shoe store at Moline with Mr. Wheelock, and continued to operate it for ten years. Returning to Hampton, he continued this business there. In 1865 he was elected county treasurer and served two terms. He and his wife had the following children: Alice, who died at the age of eleven years; Mary Louise, who is now Mrs. George Vincent; Joseph Henry, who was lost on the steamer Jennie Gilchristin in 1881; Camilla Conant, who is Mrs. Wheelock; Sylvia Jane, who is now Mrs. Frederick C. Hemenway; Alice Hayward, who is now Mrs. Samuel Crompton; Clara Lillian, who is deceased, was Mrs. James T. Francis; and Herbert Ellsworth, who married Ruth A. Sadler. There were twenty-three grandchildren born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas prior to 1912. Mr. Thomas died in 1881, and his wife in 1906. Mr. and Mrs. Wheelock were the parents of the following children: Lucy; Genevieve, who is now Mrs. Frank Herbst of Moline; Stillman W.; Alice Hayward; Theodore Morris and Henry Thomas, who are all living. Mrs. Wheelock owns her residence at No. 713 Eighteenth street, Moline. Mr. Wheelock died May 21, 1906, at Madison, Wis., and left a wide circle to mourn his loss, outside his immediate family, for he had many warm, personal friends.

WHITE, Howard Malcolm, owns 107 acres of as good farm land as can be found in Drury township, and is one of the pre-eminently successful agriculturists of Rock Island county. He was born at Rock Island October 15, 1856, son of Joseph H. and Abigail (Hankinson) White, the former born at Shrewsbury, N. J., September 16, 1816, and the latter, at Philadelphia, Pa., June 18, 1818. Born on a farm, the father was reared in New York City, where he learned the brick-laying trade, and worked at it until 1855. In that year he came to Rock Island county and went on wild land, near the Watch Tower, but in 1870 went to Bowling township, where he rented a farm. Two years later he purchased this farm, where Howard M. White now resides, and developed it from a wild state until it is now one of the best in the township. He died November 9, 1882, in Champaign county, but his wife died September 12, 1859. These parents had seven children: Thomas H.; Louise, who died at the age of forty-three years; Joseph Edgar, who was born in 1850, was killed on the railroad in 1879; Matilda H., who is the wife of C. A. Nebeker of Milwaukee, Wis.; Wellington, who was born in 1855, died in 1897; Howard Malcolm; and one who died in infancy.

Howard Malcolm White was reared on the farm with his father, and attended the school of his neighborhood. At that time the land now comprised in beautiful Watch Tower park was in a wild state and he used to play on the trails that had been made by Black Hawk and his warriors. He well remembers old man Barnes, the first toll taker on the original bridge over Rock river, near Watch Tower park, as well as many other pioneers of the county.

On December 18, 1878, Mr. White married Rhoda E. Terry, born and reared in Drury township, grand-daughter of Isaiah Drury, for whom the township was named. One child was born of this marriage, Adelia, wife of Henry F. Krantz, and they have a daughter, Rhoda. Mr. White is a republican, and was road commissioner of the township for six years, and school director for nine years. Mr. White has named his farm Sunny Spot, as the sun shines on it even when invisible from other places, because of its peculiar location. For some time he has been specializing on raising corn and hogs and is very successful. A man of action, he has taken active part in public matters, and is popular throughout his township.

WHITE, Stephen, town clerk of Coe township and one of the representative men of this locality, has been a farmer all his life. He was born in England April 3, 1862, and was brought to the United States by his parents. They came direct to Rock Island county, and bought improved land to the extent of 120 acres in Coe township, from McCall and Nicholson. This property continued to be the home of the parents for years, the father dying upon it, November 9, 1910, aged seventy-six years. The mother passed away March 6, 1906. They are buried in Fairfield cemetery. They had eight children, four of whom survive: Stephen; William of Morrison, Ill.; and Anna and Mark at home.

Stephen White was educated in the district schools of his neighborhood, and brought up as a farmer's boy, learning how to manage a farm, and raise stock. His whole life has been devoted to work along these lines, and he and his brother Mark are operating the homestead, their sister living with them. Mr. White has been quite active politically, having held the office of town clerk one term prior to his election in 1909, being the present incumbent of that office. He has also served as assessor. The family belong to the Methodist church, and take a great interest in its good work. Mr. White has never married. He is a sound, reliable, responsible man, whose opinions are respected, for those who know him appreciate the fact that he investigates carefully every matter that comes up for his consideration. As a public official, he has been conscientious and capable, and the affairs of the offices he has filled, have been admirably administered when he was in them.

WHITESIDE, William Elmer.—The legal profession offers many opportunities to those of its followers who are possessed of more than ordinary ability and judgment. The profession brings them into contact with every class and condition of men, and affords a study of human nature and public affairs not to be gained in any other way. Lawyers naturally drift into political fields and often prove their peculiar fitness to serve in public offices. One of the prominent attorneys among the younger generation in Moline is William Elmer Whiteside, who has already won a wide reputation and served in responsible public positions. He was born at the little village of Joslin, Rock Island county, January 15, 1885, son of William H. and Mary Jane (Allen) Whiteside, natives of Illinois. The father was a merchant and was county treasurer of Rock Island county from 1910 to 1914.

William Elmer Whiteside was educated in the district school at Joslin, the Moline High School and the University of Illinois, at Urbana, after which he was admitted to the bar. He has since been engaged in the practice of his profession at Rock Island, save for the time he lived in Springfield, being assistant attorney-general of Illinois in 1909. He served, during 1911-12, as assistant state's attorney at Moline. He was elected on the republican ticket to the office of justice of the peace, for the term 1909-13, and has filled these various offices with ability and credit and has enjoyed a good patronage in his profession. Mr. Whiteside is prominent in the B. P. O. E. at Moline and served in 1911-12 as exalted ruler, having previously held various minor offices.

On April 6, 1910, Mr. Whiteside was united in marriage with Cora A. Eckhardt, daughter of Julius and Helen Eckhardt. Mr. and Mrs. Eckhardt have spent their entire lives in Davenport, Iowa, where he is engaged in business. Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside are popular in social circles in Moline. They own their residence at No. 910 Sixteenth street and there dispense a pleasing hospitality to their many friends.

WHITESIDE, William H.—There is no one man connected with the official life of Rock Island county, to whom the community is more indebted for practical and permanent improvements than to William H. Whiteside, the present incumbent of the county treasurer's office. His earnestness, honesty and unassuming ability have gained him the confidence of his fellow-citizens in a high degree, and in the discharge of his important duties he has shown himself as careful and conscientious as he was in the handling of his personal affairs, which made him such a successful merchant. He was born February 7, 1856, at Moline, Rock Island county, Ill., and is a son of William and Elizabeth (Robinson) Whiteside. The father was born in Lytham, England, in 1823, and the mother in Preston, England, in 1830, and the family emigrated to the United States in 1852 and settled at Moline, Ill. William Whiteside was a baker by trade, and established the first cracker bakery west of Chicago, but in later years commenced farming in Zuma township, where he accumulated a large tract of valuable land and retired with a competence. He then took up his residence in Moline, where his death occurred in 1898, while the mother still survives at the age of eighty-three years, and is living at Moline.

William H. Whiteside received his education in the country district schools, which he attended during the winter terms, while the remainder of the year was devoted to the work of the homestead farm in Zuma township. After reaching manhood, he left the home place and became a traveling salesman in the harvester trade, but subsequently opened a general store at Joslin, Ill., which he conducted until elected county treasurer. He served as postmaster at Joslin, was superintendent of the Joslin Agricultural Fair for twelve years, and for a like period was president of the Crescent Telephone Company, at Joslin. He joined the Masonic fraternity and the Modern Woodmen in 1892, the Court of Honor in 1897, and the Mystic Workers in 1900, and retains his membership in all of these fraternities, in which he numbers many warm friends. His religious affiliation is with the Methodist church. A republican in his political views, he believes in the largest measure of protective tariff for home industries. Mr. Whiteside was successful as a merchant, and at all times showed himself willing to extend a hand to those who had been less fortunate than he. His charities have been many. The methods and ideas that made him a prominent merchant, he has applied to the business of the county treasurer's office with gratifying results. At this time he is the owner of considerable property in Moline, Rock Island, South Moline and East Moline, and is regarded as one of his city's substantial men.

William H. Whiteside was married at Rapid City, Ill., April 3, 1884, to Miss Mary J. Allen, a schoolteacher, who was born July 11, 1862, at Coal Valley, Ill., whose parents came from Wales in 1860. To this union there have been born children as follows: William E., on January 15, 1885; Roy A., on October 9, 1890; Florence K., on May 24, 1894; Gladys, on September 29, 1897; and Ruth, on August 20, 1901.

WHITLOCK, Charles Stewart.—Some of the most prosperous farmers of the country are those who are the sons of farmers, for being born on a farm and growing up amid rural conditions, help in an agricultural life. One of the prosperous farmers of Rock Island county having this advantage is Charles Stewart Whitlock, owner of 100 acres of section 20, Buffalo Prairie township. He was born in the vicinity of Bloomington, Davis county, Ia., September 13, 1856, a son of Benjamin and Isabel (Cambridge) Whitlock. The grandfather on the paternal side, Steven Whitlock lived and died in Virginia, where he was a carpenter. His son, Benjamin Whitlock was born March 10, 1810, in Virginia, and was a farmer all his life. Coming west in young manhood, he married in New Boston, Mercer county, Ill., later settling in David county, Ia., where he lived for eight years. He then returned to Illinois, settling on 120 acres in Mercer county, where he lived until 1865. In that year he moved to Rock Island county, dying at the home of his son, Charles, December 1, 1899, and is buried in Drury cemetery. In politics, he was a democrat. The mother died in Mercer county, Ill., in 1864. Their children were: Robert, who is living in the west; Charles; Thomas; and Clorine, who died at the age of four years.

Charles Stewart Whitlock grew to manhood in Buffalo Prairie township, receiving a common school education. He lived with his father until he attained his majority, and then worked by the month for various farmers until his marriage. He then rented land for eight years, when he bought his present farm. Since then he has put in some very desirable improvements, and is proud of his property. Mr. Whitlock was married April 14, 1886, to Miranda Bovey, born July 6, 1857, daughter of Joseph (born July 19, 1830; died April 6, 1904, in Armstrong county, Pa.), and Livina (Ives) Bovey; she was born in Connecticut, July 4, 1831. He came to New Barton, Rock Island county, Ill., at an early date and there met his wife. He was a carpenter and later a farmer and went to Mercer county, Ill., in 1862. Mr. and Mrs. Whitlock became the parents of three children: Orrin Benjamin, born September 12, 1886, married Mabel Ball and they live in Rock Island county; Earl, born April 22, 1896; and one who died in infancy. Mr. Whitlock is a democrat, but has never held any offices, not desiring public life. His time and attention have been devoted to his work, and the success which has attended him is certainly the result of intelligence and capability, legitimately applied.

WHITNEY, Captain Andrew Jackson (deceased), who at death was the oldest living Mississippi steamboat captain, resided at No. 217 Fifteenth street, Rock Island. He belonged to the days when the mighty "Father of Waters" bore on its ample bosom crafts of every description, carrying freight and passengers from St. Paul to New Orleans, and to the intermediate stations. Its traffic was immense, its importance unrivaled, and to be captain of one of the celebrated steamers on it, was an honor indeed. Captain Whitney was born in Middlesex county, Mass., January 25, 1828, and traced his ancestry back to 1100 A. D. He was a son of Jonathan Whitney, born in Maine, a carpenter by trade, who settled in Massachusetts after his marriage with Catherine Brooks. She died when Captain Whitney was four years old, leaving a family of five children. Jonathan Whitney placed his children among relatives, and came west to Wisconsin, and there married a second time, finally dying in that state. The children born of his first marriage were: Mary, who is deceased; Moses, who served in the Mexican War, was wounded in service, and died in a hospital in the City of Mexico; Jonathan, who is of Escanaba, Mich.; David, who also served in the Mexican War; Captain Whitney; and Edward, who is deceased.

Captain Whitney attended school in Massachusetts, but when fifteen years old, joined his father in Wisconsin. For two years he worked on the farm there, then went back east, and at New London, Conn., learned to be a machinist. Later he went to Waltham, Mass., and thence to Detroit, Mich. He obtained employment in the railroad machine shops there, and later in the same line at Chicago. In 1871, he located at Rock Island and became a river contractor, building dams for the United States Government. Becoming a man of means, he invested in boats on the Mississippi river. He had been in Alabama, Tennessee and other states, engaged in river construction. The first marriage of Captain Whitney occurred at Cleveland, O., in 1852., to Lucretia Blodgett, who died in Keokuk, Ia., where they were then living. The second marriage of Captain Whitney took place at Burlington, Ia., in 1866, to Kate Kelley, who passed away April 30, 1912, at Rock Island. By the first marriage, there were four children: Frank, who is of Denver, Colo.; Charles; Henry; and Mary A., who died at Denver. There were four children born of the second marriage: Wilbur and Arthur, who live at Rock Island; and two died in infancy. Mrs. Whitney was an Episcopalian, but Captain Whitney was not connected with any religious organization. In politics, he was a democrat. During his long and useful life, Captain Whitney witnessed many changes, and none greater than those made in the means of transportation. In the days when he led his most active life, the various streams which bisect the country, leading both east and west towards the Mississippi, with the latter mighty one, served as highroads of commerce; but he lived to see an immense traffic carried on over the land, and hear promises of future practical locomotion through the air. His death occurred in June, 1913.

WHITTON, William (deceased).—Among the able business men of Rock Island there are many who were born in other lands but probably none are more successful than those who can claim Scotland as a birthplace. Thrift is instilled in the Scottish youth from childhood and frugality is encouraged, the result being that natives of that country are welcome in any land and form a class of the most substantial type of business men. In Scotland the late William Whitton was born November 20, 1823, a son of James and Isabel (McKenzie) Whitton. They have long since passed away, dying on their own farm which the father had cultivated during all his active years. All of their six children have passed away. William Whitton attended school as does every Scottish lad, and then learned the stonecutter's trade, and equipped with this self-supporting business he came, at the age of twenty-one years, to America. This was in 1852, and he landed at Quebec, Canada, from the sailing vessel which had consumed many weeks in making the voyage. From Quebec he came to New York and for some time worked at his trade in that city, but subsequently returned to Canada. He visited a number of places before he found one that satisfied his desires as a home, living for a short time each at Lockport, N. Y., St. Louis, Mo., reaching Rock Island late in 1853. Here he found remunerative employment at his trade and assisted to build the first bridge across the Mississippi river between Rock Island and Davenport. For many years he continued work at his trade, but later went into the grocery business and continued in that line until he felt ready to retire, his many years of industry having yielded him a sufficient competency. He owned valuable property, including his residence and store building at No. 331 South Tenth street, Rock Island, which he bequeathed to his two daughters, Margaret and Mary.

In 1857 William Whitton was married at Rock Island, to Miss Bridget Dawney, who was born in Ireland, and died at Rock Island, April 7, 1911. Four children survived the good mother, namely: Isabel, who is the widow of William J. Brown, who died September 4, 1911, at Minneapolis, Minn.; and Margaret, Mary and David, all of whom live at Rock Island. Mr. Whitton and family early joined the Presbyterian church. He was a republican in politics. Three months after the demise of his beloved wife, William Whitten passed to his last reward, never having recovered from the shock of his wife's death.

WIDEMAN, John H.—The country recognizes the important relationship of the farmer to modern civilization, for from him the great living currents of life project into the congested districts, and he is the focus point of civic progress. Rock Island county agriculturists have borne their part in this mighty awakening, and one of them whose success is well merited is John H. Wideman. He was born August 16, 1861, a son of Henry and Mary (Mahlstdt) Wideman, who located at Moline in January, 1868. Ten years later, they bought 120 acres of farm land in Zuma township, on which he died February 8, 1886, and she died at Moline, in January, 1893. Their children were as follows: Adolph of Coe township; Catherine, Mrs. John Sachan of Zuma township; Henry of Zuma township; Peter of Port Byron township; Daniel of Coe township, and John H.

John H. Wideman was educated in the district schools of Zuma township, and learned to farm, beginning work when a boy. He resided on his mother's farm for five years after his marriage, and then bought property on the bluff in Zuma township, which continued to be his home until 1901. He then sold and rented land for two years, but March 1, 1903, purchased seventy-two acres on Rock river bottom, South Moline township, his farm being known as Rock River Valley Farm. All of the improvements on the place have been made by him, and it is one of the best managed farms in this section.

On November 23, 1887, John H. Wideman was married to Minnie Stahlberg, born in Hampton township, January 12, 1868, a daughter of Gotfried and Dorothea (Matrice) Stahlberg, natives of Prussia, Germany. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wideman were as follows: Ella Mary, Mrs. William Christianson of South Moline township; Linda Rilla; and John Vernon. In politics, Mr. Wideman is a republican and served as road commissioner, and since 1904 has been president of the Drainage Canal Commission of this district. Fraternally, he belongs to the Court of Honor of Port Byron, and his religious affiliations are with the German Lutheran church. An experienced farmer, and an excellent business man, Mr. Wideman has always worked hard and his success is the result of industry and thrift.

WIGGINS, James.—Today the agriculturist occupies a very important position among the workers of the world, for upon the success or failure of his crops, depends the welfare of all nations. One of the men who has accomplished much as an agriculturist in Rock Island county, is James Wiggins, whose life has been spent on the farm. He was born July 31, 1857, a son of William and Anna (Kirni) Wiggins, born in Ireland, who died there, the father about fourteen years ago, but the mother passed away some forty years ago. The father was a farmer, and brought up his family to the same kind of work.

In 1882, James Wiggins left his native land, sailing from Ireland to New York, from whence he came direct to Preemption, Mercer county, Ill. He hired out to David Little and for five years he worked for him, following this rented a farm in Mercer county for four years, when he left to come to Rock Island county, where he rented the Thomas Bowes farm for three years. By this time he had saved up sufficient money to buy his present property, in 1894, comprising 160 acres. He has made many improvements and has a fine farm.

In 1888, Mr. Wiggins was married to Sarah E. McVitty, daughter of James and Elner (Howe) McVitty, natives of Ireland. Mrs. Wiggins came to the United States in 1888. Their children are: Ella, wife of Edward Farrell, and they have one child, Beulah Maria, and reside in Mercer county; William and Margaret, twins, live at home; Frances, who, like her sister Margaret is a school teacher, lives at home; and Ida and Blanche. Having been educated in the public schools of Ireland, Mr. Wiggins believes in free education, and has cheerfully given his time and attention as school director in Bowling township for twelve years. He is a member of the Episcopal church, and belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and is an Orangeman. His wife belongs to the Royal Neighbors. The family are all well educated. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wiggins are highly regarded in this community, where their many excellent qualities are recognized, and they are justly numbered among the representative people of Bowling township, who deserve all the success that has come to them.

WILCHER, Morris H., proprietor of a garage on Fourth avenue, Rock Island, is one of the younger business men of the city, but has met with gratifying success. Although he has been in business on his own account for but a few years, he has had long experience in his line of work. He is a native of Rock Island county, born in the village of Hampton September 17, 1877, son of Ezra and Mary Ann (Skinner) Wilcher. His parents were born in Rock Island county, the former in 1844 and the latter in 1843. Mr. Wilcher's paternal grandfather was John Henry Wilcher and his maternal grandfather was Orin Skinner, both of whom were remembered among the early settlers of the county. They came to live in the city of Rock Island when Morris was seven years of age, and there he was educated.

After completing a course in the high school Morris H. Wilcher embarked in business on his own account, having a bicycle shop in the city, and this he sold out to Robert Smyth, having decided to learn the trade of machinist. He served an apprenticeship with the Root & Van-klevort Engineering Company of East Moline, where he remained three and one-half years, and in this connection learned toolmaking and became an expert machinist. He subsequently, at different periods, engaged with the Rock Island Plow Works, the Rock Island Manufacturing Company, and the Rock Island Steel Company, spending about four years with the three concerns. In 1909 Mr. Wilcher leased the building he now occupies and opened a garage, which he has since conducted. He does his own repair work, but during the summer months has to employ two or three machinists to help him, and has a young man apprentice the entire year. He is now housing some twenty machines and has the agency in Rock Island for the Buick motor cars and trucks, which have gained a wide reputation during the last few years. He is an enterprising and thorough-going business man and has won commercial standing, and having spent his entire life in the county, and most of it in the city of Rock Island, he has many personal friends. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, having joined it in Rock Island in 1900, and has attained to the Chapter, Commandery, and Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

On November 28, 1908, Mr. Wilcher was united in marriage with Grazella Wilkinson, daughter of John and Harriet (Comstock) Wilkinson who lived near Morrison, Ill. This is a representative family of Rock Island and Mr. Wilcher is recognized as a useful and upright citizen, interested in the progress and welfare of the community and of high character and principles.

WILCHER, Phil S., proprietor of the sheet metal and furnace works at No. 2404 Fourth avenue, Rock Island, is one of the substantial business men of this city, in whom implicit trust can be placed. Mr. Wilcher was born at Hampton, Ill., in 1867, a son of Ezra and Mary (Skinner) Wilcher. The father was born in Warren county and is now living retired at No. 820 Second avenue, Rock Island. During his active years he was a stationary engineer, working as such in Rock Island for twenty years, and for two years he was superintendent of the waterworks. At present he is serving as supervisor of Rock Island township. His wife was born on the present site of Silvis, and neither has ever resided outside of Rock Island county. They had three children: Allie, now deceased; Phil S. and Morris H.

Phil S. Wilcher was reared in Hampton, where he attended school until fourteen years of age, when his parents moved to Carbon Cliff, and there he alternated attending school and working in the factory. He also went to school in Geneseo and Colona, and the Iowa commercial college at Davenport. Previous to this, he had worked in the brick yards at Geneseo, but upon finishing his business course he entered the employ of the Rock Island and Milan Street Railroad Company, as conductor and later as engineer. After four years he left to enter the employ of John T. Knofsker, dealer in hardware and stoves, and there he learned his present business. In 1898 he embarked in business for himself, as a hardware merchant, but in 1905 he sold his interests to devote his time to the furnace and sheet metal industry, and has developed a large business, being one of the leaders in his line in Rock Island county.

In 1888 Mr. Wilcher married Alice Hill, born in Rock Island. They have one child, Frank Ezra, twenty years old, a graduate of the Rock Island high school, now learning to be a mechanical engineer. Mr. Wilcher is a Mason, Odd Fellow and Modern Woodman of America, belonging to Rock Island lodges. While a republican, he is very liberal. The family reside in a comfortable home at No. 1131 Nineteenth street. Mr. Wilcher has prospered in all he has undertaken for he has always known what he wanted to accomplish, and worked steadily towards that end.

WILKINS, Daniel (deceased), was a highly respected citizen of Rock Island, Ill., and was a veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Scotland, July 12, 1831, a son of John and Mary (Mortimer) Wilkins, natives of the same country, where they spent their entire lives. The parents lived at Dundee and the father's occupation was teaching. There were four children in the family, nine of whom are living.

Daniel Wilkins was reared in his native land and there learned the habits of industry and thrift which made him successful in life. As a young man he worked for some time in the flax mills in Dundee, and served three years in the British army, before coming to America in 1850, landing at Quebec. After leaving the army he worked for a time as a laborer on a railroad and later became fireman on the great lakes boats, which work he continued seven years.

In 1861 Mr. Wilkins went to Rhode Island, from there he enlisted in Company K, Twenty-second Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Turner and Colonel Slocum for service in the Civil war. Four months later he was discharged, having been wounded at the first battle of Bull Run, being on the skirmish line when hurt. Mr. Wilkins remained in Rhode Island until 1870, then came to Rock Island and for twenty-eight years worked on the Island in the employ of the Government. In 1900 he retired from active life and his death occurred December 24, 1911. He was affiliated with the Union Veterans' League. In religion he was a Roman Catholic. He was known as a man of upright character and had a wide circle of friends in this city.

Mr. Wilkins was married first in Rhode Island, to Miss Elizabeth Brown, who died in that state, having borne three children, all of whom are now deceased. He was married (second) to Mrs. Mary (Maloney) Kinney, a native of County Clare, Ireland, who came to the United States from Liverpool, landing in New Orleans in August, 1852. One child was born of this union, who died when two years old. The family home is situated at No. 1309 Seventh avenue.

WILKINSON, Hon. Ira O. (deceased).—Prominent on the roster of Rock Island county's legists and jurists who have gained distinction at the bar and on the bench appears the name of the late Judge Ira O. Wilkinson, who after a long and eventful career passed to his final rest in the city of Jacksonville, where he had entered upon life's battle in this state. Judge Wilkinson was born in Kentucky about the year 1820, and came to Jacksonville when a young man, for some time being engaged in clerking in a general store. During this time he studied law, was admitted to the bar, and became the partner of his preceptor, later, Governor Yates.

Judge Wilkinson came to Rock Island in 1845, and after practicing here for a time was elected judge of the Circuit Court of this district, where he presided over an extensive territory. He was ever painstaking and judicious in his decisions, and his record on the bench was in every way creditable. After an interval of several years he was again elected to the bench, but at the expiration of his second term declined re-election. Following the custom of his day, he went to Chicago in an attempt to better himself financially, but this move proved unfortunate, for in the great Chicago fire he lost his large law library, which he had been accumulating from the time of his service on the bench, as well as everything else of value that he possessed. At that time he was engaged to be married to a Peoria lady, but broke the engagement on account of his financial reverses, and although the lady offered to share with him her fortune as well as her heart he refused to accept the tender. He remained true to his first affection throughout his life, and died a bachelor.

Judge Wilkinson always prepared his cases with great care and tried them closely. He was not a man of brilliant or showy attainments, but was always well armed for his legal battles, and did he become interested in a case could deal his opponents sledge-hammer blows. He was a master of irony, and in sarcasm had no equal at the Rock Island county bar. He rarely used more than one sentence at a time, but his brief thrusts cut to the quick. However, in his genial moments, he was a lovable man, and in his prime was the prince of the Rock Island bar. To those who had gained his affection he was ever generous to a fault. He was constantly surrounded by those who imposed upon his generosity. In this connection an incident is related of one of these "sponges," who, expecting a Lieutenant's commission in the Union army during the Civil war, induced the judge to outfit him with a uniform, various articles of wearing apparel and a fine equipment. One day, having been made lieutenant of the guard placed around the camp, this would-be soldier was missed from among his comrades, and the colonel, going into the barracks, discovered him sound asleep on the floor, fully dressed in his uniform, including his sabre and sash, and full of "corn juice." It was impossible to awaken him, and it is sufficient to add that he never received his commission, but returned to private life to live off of the bounty of Judge Wilkinson.

At one time a Rock Island newspaper editor made Judge Wilkinson the object of a vicious attack in his journal, and the thoroughly enraged judge locked him up and sought a retraction, which was refused, whereupon he promptly broke a cane over the other's head. The editor then drew a sheathed dagger from his pocket and stabbed Judge Wilkinson in the left breast, but the wound did not prove serious. During his declining years, Judge Wilkinson felt keenly the loss of his old clients, although he admitted he had grown too old for first-class service and realized that he could not always retain them. About this time, however, he received a generous fee from a client, which enabled him to live in comfort at the home of his sister in Jacksonville. It was probably the last fee he received, after a long and eventful career at the bar and unsullied record for integrity and upright dealing. A large delegation from the Rock Island county bar went to Jacksonville to attend his interment. He had often splintered a lance with many of them and had driven home vicious thrusts, but disagreeable incidents of former years were forgotten, and love, affection and a most tender feeling only were shown. As he was peacefully and quietly laid to rest all knew they had lost a representative man from their midst, and one whose wise counsel and really generous nature had often benefited his fellow-beings.

WILLIAMS, John.—One of the prominent retired citizens of Searstown, Ill., who was for many years engaged in carpentering throughout this section of the country, and who was also engaged in an official capacity for an extended period, is John Williams, a native of the North of Wales, born July 22, 1833, a son of James and Elizabeth Williams. The parents never came to the United States, the father dying at the age of sixty-six years and the mother when forty-six or forty-seven years old, both in Wales. John Williams learned the trade of a carpenter in his native country, and in 1854 came to the United States, on August 8 of that year landing at New York, from which city he came further west to Chicago, arriving there six days later. For some time he was engaged as a carpenter in the Chicago shipyards, and he then took up work in the same line for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, in their car shops, being foreman of car repairers for nine years, and acting in a like capacity for other companies, his services in this line covering a period of forty-five years. For some time thereafter, he was engaged in farming in Illinois, from whence he went to Minnesota in 1869, but after three and one-half years spent at his trade he returned to Illinois, and for thirteen years was employed as foreman by the Peoria Railroad. At the expiration of this period Mr. Williams took charge of the toll-gate at Vanduff's Island, and held that position until the toll-gate was discontinued, on November 8, 1910, since which time he has been living retired at Searstown.

John Williams was married December 3, 1859, to Miss Mary A. Chandler, who was born April 23, 1840, at Nova Scotia, Prince Edwards Island, and came to the United States with her parents, George and Mary A. Chandler, farming people, the family settling in 1857 at Peru, Ill., where Mr. Chandler died aged fifty-four years. Mrs. Williams has one brother, Joseph H. Chandler, who served in the Civil war and was confined in the Andersonville prison for seven months. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Williams, only one of whom survives: Alice E., who was born March 22, 1881. They have six grandchildren, and three of them make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Williams. The family is connected with the Baptist church. In political matters Mr. Williams is a republican, and his first vote was cast for President Abraham Lincoln.

WILLIE, Charles Henry.—One of the show places of Rock Island county is the famous Long View stock farm of Hampton township, owned and operated by Charles Henry Willie, one of the leading agriculturists of this locality. He was born on this farm, August 18, 1867, being a son of Godfred and Anna (Gruber) Willie, the former born in Prussia, Germany, and the latter in Oldenburg, Germany. The maternal grandfather was a minister of the Lutheran church. When still young, the parents came to America. The father had given his military service to his country before leaving it. Mrs. Willie had been married twice before she became the wife of Mr. Willie. By her first marriage she had two children: John and Gothold, and by the second a daughter, now Mrs. Denis Collins of Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Willie had two children: Charles Henry, and Anna, who died in infancy. Godfred Willie owned forty acres of his son's present farm, and died on it in 1899, his wife passing away in 1870. As his second wife, Mr. Willie married Caroline Waltz, who died without issue, in 1891.

Charles Henry Willie has always lived on his present property, which he inherited from his father, at the latter's death. He added to the original farm until he now owns sixty-two acres, on which he carries on general farming and stock raising. He has improved his place until it is a fine property, and takes pride in it and his surroundings. The view from the house has given the name to the farm, as on clear days far distant points can be distinctly seen.

On November 19, 1891, Mr. Willie was married to Ernestine Meinesdorf, born in Germany—a daughter of Ernest and Lena (Lunga) Meinesdorff. Mr. and Mrs. Willie have children as follows: Ernest, John, Walter, Vernon, and Eleanor. Mr. Willie belongs to the Lutheran church. Politically, he is a republican. Earnest, steadfast and faithful, a hard worker and thrifty in his habits, Mr. Willie has become one of the prosperous farmers of his township, and he holds the full confidence and esteem of his neighbors.

WILLIS, Kirk Irving.—Some individuals are not only good business men but are also fitted naturally for other lines of endeavor. While they have steadily forged ahead in the work they have chosen, they have not been content to rest upon the laurels thus gained, but have given generously of time and money towards the betterment of humanity and the advancement of religious influence. Such a man is Kirk Irving Willis, proprietor of a flourishing sheet metal manufacturing business in Rock Island county, with residence at No. 2129, Seventh avenue, Moline, whose efforts in behalf of the First Congregational church of this city have been felt.

Mr. Willis was born in Lowell, Dodge county, Wis., March 4, 1847, a son of Oscar Fitzland and Mary (Backus) Willis, the former born in New York, January 9, 1818, and the latter in Westfield, Conn., July 24, 1818. These parents were married January 1, 1839, at Awasco, N. Y., and they had a family as follows: Sarah, who died when three years old; Calista Ellen, who died when fifty years old; Kirk Irving, and Hubert Francis. In 1845 the family went to Wisconsin, and from there the father enlisted in the Civil war in Company K, First Wisconsin Cavalry, but was killed by bushwhackers, near Little Rock, Ark., July 3, 1863, when in command of his company. From Wisconsin the mother went to New York and from there to Nebraska; thence to California and then returned to Nebraska, and from that state went to Texas, finally arriving in Illinois in 1898. She died at Du Quoin, Perry county, Ill., May 24, 1900. A descendant of old Puritan stock, she remembered many of the curious blue laws of the New England states which were in force in her childhood.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Willis was Colonel John Sanford Willis, who participated in the War of 1812, and was of Scotch-English descent. He was a man of strong religious sentiments and a firm believer in the doctrines of the Scotch Presbyterian church to which he belonged for many years. He left as a legacy to his descendants a firm belief in God and respect for his church. His death occurred from sunstroke when he was about sixty years old. His wife bore the name of Sallie Fitch, and she came of Pennsylvania-Dutch stock.

Having been deprived of his father's care and protection at the age of fourteen years, Kirk Irving Willis was thrown on his own resources, and gained his excellent education in the night schools and by extensive reading which he still continues. While a lad in Wisconsin he organized his companions into the home guards, being captain, and from 1862 to 1865 held himself ready to defend the helpless women and children from the threatened attacks of the Indians. Learning the tinner's trade he eventually embarked in the hardware business, which he developed into his present plant, at Nos. 204 and 206 Eighteenth street. Since January 7, 1900, he has been a resident of Moline and has made his influence felt. Having been an earnest member of the Congregational church since he was seventeen years old, he soon became a worker in the First Congregational church here. He belongs to Lodge No. 319, A. F. & A. M., in which he has held all the offices up to that of master of Masonry, and is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, serving as financial secretary in it. He is proud of being a charter member in two churches, both of which he was instrumental in building into large congregations. Since 1910 Mr. Willis has been actively identified with the National Association of Sheet Metal Contractors which is becoming a powerful organization in the interests of those engaged in that line of work. In 1910 he was elected a member of the board of trustees, which office he still holds, and has held various appointments on important committees. He is also secretary and treasurer of the Secretaries' Club, an organization consisting of the local secretaries of the Sheet Metal Contractors' Associations throughout the United States.

Mr. Willis was married in Winfield, Herkimer county, N. Y., October 11, 1875, to Mary Elizabeth Stephens, who was born at Springfield, Mass. The children of this marriage are: Mrs. Bertha E. Klattenhoff, and Roland Earl, the latter being associated with his father in business, and is a very affable and genial young man. He is captain of Company F of the Sixth Infantry, Illinois National Guards, inheriting the love of military life from his forefathers of five generations.

WILLMS, Henry, another of the substantial, reliable German-Americans of which Rock Island county is so justly proud, has proved what can be accomplished by growing small fruits. He now resides in South Rock Island, but was born in Germany, April 21, 1849, being a son of Jacob and Margaret (Koehler) Willms, the former born in 1818, and the latter in 1820. Neither left their native land, the father dying in Germany in 1900, and his wife passing away there in 1858. He was a sailor, but retired about 1880.

Henry Willms came to America in 1870, landing in New York city, from whence he came direct to Rock Island. He had been taught in the excellent public schools of Germany, and learned the trade of weaving woolen goods. After coming here, for five years he followed his trade, but in 1875 he went into a saloon business, thus continuing until 1895, when he bought his present place, consisting of four acres, where he raises berries and apples, specializing in several varieties. His yield is immense, and he finds a ready market for his produce.

On April 20, 1872, Mr. Willms was married to Miss Anna Reckmann, of Rock Island, daughter of Henry and Mary Reckmann, natives of Germany, who came to Cincinnati in 1838. They lived there for about ten years, then came on to Rock Island. Mr. Reckmann was a blacksmith by trade, and obtained employment at Buford's Plow Works for a few years, after which he went into business for himself. Upon the outbreak of the Civil war, he enlisted and served for three years. Mrs. Willms was born May 25, 1852. Mr. and Mrs. Willms have had ten children: Margaret who is the wife of James Cahill of Davenport, Ia.; Augusta who is the wife of Henry Redecker, a brick manufacturer of Rock Island; Mary who is the wife of Daniel McCarthy of Milwaukee, Wis.; Dorothy who is the wife of Burt Crissmann of Davenport, Ia.; Anna who is the wife of William Gottsch of Rock Island; Edith who is the wife of Fred Kennitz; George, who is at home, married Geraldine Fernandes; and three who died in infancy. There are four living grandchildren in the family. All of the Willms family are members of the German Lutheran church. In political faith, Mr. Willms is a democrat, but he has had no desire for public office. He is one of the most reliable of the men of his community, and while conservative, can be counted upon to support anything that he believes will advance the material welfare of the part of the county he loves so dearly.

WILSON, Frank Albert.—Within the past few years the business interests of East Moline have been considerably augmented by the establishment here of some of the largest and most solid retail business houses of the county, owned and conducted by men of experience and ability, who are taking a pride in gaining for their establishments a name that stands for reliability and standard excellence. One of the men who is associated with East Moline as proprietor of the Wilson Furniture Company, the leading retail furniture business outside the Tri-Cities, is Frank Albert Wilson, one of the energetic young men of this city. He was born at Clinton, Ia., January 29, 1871, a son of William S. and Bessie (Harvey) Wilson of New York, who moved to Chicago prior to the Civil war, later going to Clinton, Ia., where they located in 1865. The father died in that city in 1910, aged eighty-three years, his wife having passed away in 1907, aged seventy-one years. During the Civil war the father served for three years as corporal of his company, and was always held in high respect. The Wilson family is of Scotch-Irish descent, while the Harvey family came of English stock.

Frank Albert Wilson not only attended the public schools of Clinton, Ia., but its business college as well, and grew up with the idea of making himself useful first to his family and later on to his community. His first employment after completing his education, was in a spring bed factory where he worked making spring beds, and he later learned the upholstering trade. In 1896, he became a clerk in a retail furniture business at Davenport, Ia., but after a year went to Moline, Ill., where he remained until 1901, in which year he moved to East Moline, where he established his present business, developing it from small beginnings into the largest one of its kind outside of Rock Island, Davenport and Moline.

On December 4, 1895, Mr. Wilson was married to Mary L. Weed, born November 20, 1875, a daughter of William and Louisa (Rounds) Weed, natives of New York state, where both were reared. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson became the parents of the following children: Alice, who was born February 1, 1902; Frank A., who was born March 8, 1904; Amy F., who was born March 19, 1907; William C., who was born May 28, 1910; and Wayne D., who was born April 17, 1913, who are living, and three who are deceased: Stanley H., who was born October 9, 1896; Leonard G. who was born February 20, 1898; and Esther F. who was born October 26, 1900. While the family belong to the Congregational church of Clinton, Ia., they attend the church of that denomination at East Moline. Mr. Wilson has always cast his vote for the man he deemed best fitted for the office in question, preferring not to confine himself by party ties. The family residence is at No. 714 First avenue, East Moline. Mr. Wilson owns property on Third avenue and Second street, East Moline, and on Eleventh avenue and Twenty-sixth street, Moline. The career of this man, who is yet in the prime of life, sets forth what can be accomplished by those who are willing to exert themselves and aim high. He has not only developed a large business, but he has won and retained the warm friendship of his associates, and placed himself in a position where he holds the respect and confidence of his community.

WILSON, John.—There is no longer any reason why the agriculturalist should not rank among the leading business men of the country. His position has long been an important one, but it is not until within the past decade that its real significance has been properly appreciated. One of the men who has been engaged in farming in Illinois for many years is John Wilson. He was born in Mercer county, Ill., March 2, 1862, being a son of John Wilson, also a farmer of that county. The elder John Wilson married Mary Blakely, born in Ireland, and their children were: George, who lives with his brother John; Henry, who married Mrs. Belle Lawson and lives in Rock Island county; Mary, wife of John Hills, deceased, and John.

John Wilson the younger was educated in the public schools of his native township, attending until he was twenty years old, in the meanwhile assisting in farm work. In 1888, he married Katie Doeherty, born January 8, 1869, in Scotland, daughter of Thomas and Katherine (Brown) Doeherty, both natives of Scotland who came to America in 1881. They had children as follows: Peter, James and Robert, all of Mercer county, Ill.; Eugenia, also of Mercer county; Margaret, wife of William Penman; and Mrs. Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson have children as follows: Katie, born February 18, 1889; Clarence, born February 22, 1891;

Mary, born August 10, 1895; and Sarah, born July 9, 1906.

Mr. Wilson is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, of Preemption, and belongs to the Methodist church of the same place. He held the office of school director for six years. In 1900 he came to Rock Island county, which has since continued to be his home. He left many friends in Mercer county, and since coming here has made new ones, for he is a man who inspires confidence and respect.

WILSON, Richard L.—The importance of Coal Valley as a mining center, has brought here many whose incomes depend upon the mines, and their needs must be met intelligently. One of the men who is engaged in supplying these workers, as well as those of the surrounding district, with the necessities of life, is Richard L. Wilson, proprietor of the largest department stores in Coal Valley, if not in the county. He was born here August 13, 1867, and thus understands thoroughly all the needs of the people of his native place. He is a son of George and Margaret (Knox) Wilson, the former born in Durham, England, in 1830. He was married (first) in Pennsylvania and had five children, who, with his first wife, died with fever that swept the country at that time. The second wife was born in New Castle, England, and married (first) John Moore of England and had three daughters, two surviving: Margaret and Lizzie, both of Coal Valley. George Wilson came to the United States in 1856, locating in Pottsville, Pa., where he was a miner. In 1857 he came to Coal Valley and here prospected for the Coal Valley Mining Company. In 1862 he enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for service in the Civil war, and was discharged in 1865, having been a brave and loyal soldier. His death occurred in 1909 in Coal Valley. His widow survived him a year, then passed away in this town. They had three sons: George; William, who died at the age of eight years; and Richard L.

Richard L. Wilson was reared in Coal Valley, attended school here, worked on the farm in summer and mined in winter. In 1896 he went to work for Krapp & Sease until 1899, then bought out S. L. Stafford at present location. He commenced in a small way, but enlarged his business as his means permitted, and now has a splendid establishment, and controls an immense trade, for his goods are excellent, his prices as low as is consistent with quality, and his methods thoroughly honest.

On June 9, 1897, Mr. Wilson married Matilda J. Martin, born in Coal Valley in October, 1869. Both her parents died in Coal Valley. Mr. Wilson belongs to the Masonic order, the Odd Fellows, passing all the chairs in that fraternity, and the order of the Eastern Star, all of Coal Valley. He was treasurer of the Masonic lodge here for five years. In politics he is a republican, and served for the past eight years as republican county central committeeman.

For four years he was trustee of the village of Coal Valley. He is a man widely known throughout the county, and exerts a strong influence among the people that he has grown up with.

WILSON, William J.—It is due to the energetic, progressive and intelligent farmers that agricultural conditions in Rock Island county are now in such a healthy condition. Scientific working of the soil, recognition of the value of crop rotation, and the use of modern machinery, have improved conditions wonderfully during the past several decades, and one of those who is farming according to modern ideas is William J. Wilson, owner of Center View farm, a property of ninety acres on section 24, Edginton township. He was born on what is now the John W. Ball farm, three-quarters of a mile from his present home, October 4, 1865, a son of William M. and Anna Jane Wilson. William M. Wilson was a son of George and Ellen Wilson, natives of Ireland, where they died. They were Methodists in religious faith. Their children were: Andrew, Richard, Thomas, John, William and Margaret. William M. was born in Ireland March 25, 1825, and received the kind of an education given the lads of his generation and country, and was reared on a farm. In 1854 he came to the United States via New Orleans, and went to work on farms in Rock Island county. His marriage occurred in Bowling township, following which he went to work for himself, first renting land. After his retirement he came to live with his son, William J., and was here for fifteen years. He died June 16, 1912. His wife died in Bowling township November 2, 1892, when she was nearly sixty-three years old. These parents had children as follows: William J.; Robert, who is of Edginton township; and Eva J., who married (first) John J. Higgs of Harvey, Ill., and after his death she married (second) J. G. Welsh of the same place.

William J. Wilson spent his boyhood in Bowling and Edginton townships and was educated in the district schools of both. He began working with the corn planter when only eight years old and has operated one every year since, with the exception of 1909, when he was sick. Mr. Wilson worked for his father and neighboring farmers until he began for himself on rented land belonging to A. L. Johnston, one mile north of Reynolds. He continued there until 1903, when he bought his present farm, which he has improved greatly. William J. Wilson succeeded his father in farming the Johnston farm, as the latter had it before Mr. Wilson took charge, the two operating it for eighteen years. On March 10, 1896, William J. Wilson was married at Rock Island by the Rev. S. P. Archer of the Methodist church of Reynolds, to Jennie McVitty, daughter of James and Ellen (Howe) McVitty. She was born in Ireland November 17, 1865, and came to the United States with her sister Sarah in 1886. They landed in Philadelphia and came direct to Rock Island county. Her father died in Ireland, having been a farmer. Her mother, a brother and two sisters still live in Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are members of the Methodist church of Reynolds. He is a republican, and has served as tax collector for two years, while living in Bowling township. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 199, of Reynolds, and has been an official of his camp continuously since joining, now serving his second term as venerable counselor. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are: Elmer McVitty, born January 31, 1900, died February 20, 1905; Florence Edith, born August 6, 1902; Clara Della, born February 2, 1906; Marion McKinney, born January 16, 1909, died June 2, 1909; and Glenn Lee, born August 24, 1910. They are delightful people, whose pleasant home is the scene of many pleasant gatherings. Mr. Wilson is an experienced farmer, excellent business man and kindly neighbor, and his success is well deserved.

WINKLER, Charles.—Modern progress has revolutionized domestic science, and resulted in the putting out of many tasks hitherto done at home. In nothing is there more saving of strength and energy than in the employment of reliable laundries for doing the family washing. The demand for first-class laundry work has resulted in the investment of immense sums for building and maintaining plants, and one of the establishments devoted to laundry purposes that is well known in Moline, is that owned and operated by Charles Winkler as The Clear Laundry.

Mr. Winkler was born in Sweden, in January, 1867. His father survives, although seventy-five years old, and lives in Sweden. The mother died in the fall of 1911. When twenty years old, Charles Winkler came to the United States, and locating at Moline, worked as a laborer for three years. For the next fifteen years, he was employed as a blacksmith by Deere & Company, and then, in 1906, he bought an interest in the business of Adolph Hulman, in The Clear Laundry at Moline. Three years later, Mr. Hulman sold his interest to Carl Jackson, and still later, Mr. Winkler bought out Mr. Jackson, since then continuing alone. The laundry is conveniently located at No. 621 Fifteenth street, Moline.

In November, 1890, Mr. Winkler was married to Alma Johnson, born in Sweden. One son, Rudolph, has been born of this marriage. Mr. Winkler belongs to the Swedish Methodist church, and since 1911, has been one of its trustees. The record of the life and endeavors of Mr. Winkler show what an earnest, hard-working man can accomplish, provided he has an aim in view and is willing to make sacrifices for it. The Clear Laundry has a reputation for excellent work and first-class service, and enjoys a large share of patronage from the people in its part of the city.

WIRTZ, Peter.—The farmer after years of strenuous endeavor, during which he rises early and labors through the long days until after sunset, earns the rest he takes when he feels that he has accomplished enough to entitle him to such relaxation. Some of the most representative men of Rock Island county belong to the retired class. Having accumulated plenty of this world's goods the successful retired farmer with an abundance of time on his hands, is able to probe deeply into civic matters, and look into affairs generally so that during these years of seeming inactivity, he is really most useful, for he is rendering his community a service that cannot be over-estimated. One of the men whose agricultural operations once assumed proportions of considerable magnitude although he is now retired, is Peter Wirtz of Illinois City. He was born in Prussia, Germany, August 3, 1832, being a son of Muse and Barbara (Grife) Wirtz, both of whom died in Germany. Peter Wirtz is the only surviving member of his father's family.

The coming of Peter Wirtz to America was coincident with the election of General Grant to the presidency of the United States, in 1868. Locating in Rock Island county Mr. Wirtz bought forty acres two miles east of Illinois City, in Buffalo Prairie township, and lived on his property for thirty-five years, adding to his holdings from time to time. About 1906, Mr. Wirtz retired to Illinois City, which continues to be his home. He taught himself English, but otherwise was well grounded in the German schools, and learned his methods of farming on his father's homestead.

On September 28, 1877, Mr. Wirtz was united in marriage with Bertha Sidler, daughter of William and Henrietta (Wilhite) Sidler. Mrs. Wirtz was born in Germany, June 17, 1842. Her parents came to America about 1870, and her father bought land two miles east of Illinois City, where the father died twenty-four years ago, and his widow twenty years ago. The children in the Sidler family were: William, Frank, Gista (Mrs. Charles Snell), and Mrs. Wirtz. Mr. and Mrs. Wirtz have had children as follows: Frank R., Anton R., and Mary, the latter is the wife of William Kedel, their issue being three children. There are seven grandchildren in the family. The family belong to the Catholic church of Muscatine, Ia. In politics, Mr. Wirtz is a republican, but has never sought office. Sound, reliable, steadfast, always willing to work and save. Mr. Wirtz has reached the time when he is willing to rest upon what he has accomplished, and is enjoying what he has gained.

WITTE, Carl August, a substantial farmer and good citizen of Drury township, is one of the prominent agriculturalists of Rock Island county. He is a son of Charles Frederick Witte of Germany, who married a German lady in his native land. They came to America in 1858, settling in Muscatine, Ia., but after three years came to Drury township, where they bought five acres of land. On this, the father erected a shop and carried on his trade of wagonmaking, which he had learned in Germany. After a couple of years, he had accumulated sufficient money to buy eighty acres of land, taking possession of it in 1870. From then on, he divided his time between working in his shop and clearing off his land. In 1872, he bought an adjoining eighty acres, and from then on devoted himself exclusively to cultivating his land. Five children were born to him and his wife: August, Mary and Charles, who all died of diphtheria; William, who resides in Lawrence, Neb., and Carl August.

The latter was born September 4, 1865, within a stone's throw of his present home, where his aged father still resides, being now the second oldest man in Drury township. Carl August Witte received his educational training in the neighborhood schools, although he had none of the advantages given the pupils today. He was brought up amid rural surroundings, and taught to work from earliest childhood. He remained with his father until 1892, when he began working on a railroad, thus continuing for four years. In 1896, he had the misfortune to lose a portion of his right hand while making a coupling and this necessitated his coming home. After his recovery, he resumed his work for the railroad for a few months, when he married, and went to Minneapolis where he spent a year. Coming back to Drury township, he rented his father's farm, and operated it a year, and then bought the place from his father, and built his present residence just across from the homestead. Mr. Witte carries on general farming and has been eminently successful in his work. Mr. Witte belongs to the Odd Fellows and the A. O. U. W. of Muscatine. He is a democrat, and served as road commissioner one term.

On July 9, 1897, Mr. Witte married Tidy Hayes, daughter of James, born June 8, 1830, and Bridget (Garvin) Hayes, both natives of Belfast, Ireland. They came to America, the father when a lad. Upon coming to this country, Mr. Hayes first settled at Montreal, Canada, whence he came in 1852, to Utica, N. Y., where in 1852, he was married. In 1858, he came to Drury township, which remained his home until his death, February 4, 1910, when he was laid to rest in Reynolds cemetery. He was a representative man of Rock Island county, and a worthy, good citizen. Mr. Hayes had three wives, and by his marriage with the mother of Mrs. Witte, he had five children, three sons and two daughters. His third wife, who was a Mrs. Sabine, survives him. Mrs. Witte's living brother and sisters are: Letitia, Mrs. George Platt of Iowa; Winifred, Mrs. F. P. Gillet of Drury township; Isabelle G. Britton of Rock Island; and James of Drury township. Both the Witte and Hayes families are well known ones in Rock Island county, and Mr. and Mrs. Witte are excellent examples of the descendants of these pioneers.

WOCHNER, Frank.—Successful tilling of the soil means the expenditure of much time and money, and a thorough knowledge of many things. The prosperous farmer of today must understand the needs of his land, practice rotation of crops, be able to decide which breed of stock is best suited to his requirements, and most of all how to market his produce. One of the men who has solved these problems satisfactorily is Frank Wochner, of section 12, Bowling township. He was born in Mercer county, July 22, 1863, a son of Wane Boltas and Katherine (Schmidt) Wochner, the former born in 1819, and the latter in 1834, both in Germany. They came to the United States in 1860, landing at New York, from whence they came to Ohio, but after a short time left for Alledo, Ill. Wane Boltas Wochner was overseer for Judge Thompson for five years, and then took up farming, buying land in Mercer county, and later in Rural township, this county, where he died in 1898, his widow surviving him until 1906. Their children were: John, who is deceased; Frank; William, who is a carpenter of Rock Island; Otto; Mrs. Anna Beatty, who married Henry Beatty, a blacksmith; Joseph, who is a farmer; and Henry, who is a machinist, of Rock Island.

Frank Wochner was educated in the Rock Island county schools, and learned farming from early boyhood. He bought his present farm in 1899, it being then known as the McCaw farm. In 1901, he built his present comfortable residence, and made nearly all of the improvements on the place. It is one of the best farming properties in the county, and reflects credit on him as a man and an agriculturalist.

Frank Wochner was married November 7, 1884, to Minnie Tuttle, born November 10, 1865. She is a daughter of Moses and Ellen E. (Graves) Tuttle, the former born in 1825, and the latter in 1828, both being natives of Maine. They came to Rock Island county in the early fifties, and the father was soon busy as a contracting builder. Both he and the mother died at Rock Island, she in 1903, and he in 1909. Their children were: Emma, deceased; Frank, deceased; Elsie, wife of Victor Hinstrum; Nettie, wife of Alec Coulter, of Minnesota, and Mrs. Wochner. Mr. and Mrs. Wochner are the parents of children as follows: Lillian, who is the wife of George McConnell, a farmer; Bert, who is deceased; and Elmer, who is a machinist in the employ of Borge & Beck of Moline, married Mabel Persell of Rock Island. The grandchildren in the family are: Mabel, Margaret, Agnes and Ruth McConnell. The family all belong to the Presbyterian church. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wochner belong to the order of Mystic Workers of Milan, Ill. They are most excellent people, who have won and retain the warm friendship of all with whom they are brought in contact. Their home stands hospitably open to their friends who are welcomed by the genial host and hostess.

WOCHNER, Joseph F.—Many of the most representative men of Rock Island county are those who have started in life with few advantages, either of an educational or financial nature, and have gained success through the force of their own industry and enterprise, backed by an inherent ability. One of these self-made men is Joseph F. Wochner, who is now the owner of an excellent farm of 120 acres, situated on section 16, Bowling township, which property he has accumulated through hard work and strict attention to business. He was born in Bowling township, December 14, 1876, and is a son of Boltas and Katherine (Smith) Wochner, natives of Germany, where the father was born in 1819 and the mother in 1838. On coming to the United States, in 1851, they settled at Alledo, Mercer county, Ill., where Mr. Wochner was engaged in a mercantile business with a Mr. Volk until the close of the war, and then purchased a farm in Bowling township, on which he carried on agricultural pursuits until his death, January 20, 1899, his widow surviving him until 1908. They had the following children: John, who died in 1895; Frank, who is a farmer of Bowling township; William, who is a carpenter of Rock Island; Otto; Anna, who married Henry Beatty, of Rock Island; Joseph F.; and Henry, who is a machinist of Rock Island.

Joseph F. Wochner received his education in the public schools of Rock Island county, which he attended until he was sixteen years of age, and then started to work on the farm of his father, continuing with the latter until he was twenty-four years of age. He then started out for himself, renting a farm for ten years, when, in 1910, he purchased forty acres of land, on section 16, known as the Curtis farm, and this property he has since increased to 120 acres. Mrs. Wochner was given eighty acres by her father April 23, 1909. He follows farming along scientific lines, thus getting the best returns for his labor; has his land in a high state of cultivation, and is rated among the successful agriculturists of his township.

On September 19, 1900, Mr. Wochner was married to Miss Katherine Curry, daughter of James and Katherine (Lucas) Curry, natives of Ireland, where the father was born in 1826, and the mother in 1833. They came to America in 1854, landing at New Orleans, whence she came by boat to Rock Island county, he by the northern route, and Mr. Curry was engaged in farming until his retirement, since which time he has resided with Mr. and Mrs. Wochner. He and his wife had these children: John; Mary, the wife of John Norton, who is residing in Rock Island county; Essie, who married Claus Mongerson, a farmer of Bowling township; Maggie, who married William Carothers, a farmer of Bowling township; James, Frank and Thomas, who are farmers of Bowling township; Mrs. Wochner; Francis, who is deceased; and one child who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Wochner have had three children, born as follows: Elva, January 23, 1903; James, August 30, 1906; and Katherine, May 23, 1909. Mr. and Mrs.

Wochner are members of the Catholic church. She is connected with the Royal Neighbors, while her husband is affiliated with Court of Honor No. 587, of Taylor Ridge, Ill., in which he has held several offices. In political matters he is a democrat.

WOOD, Charles Wesley, chief engineer at the County Infirmary of Rock Island county, has held this responsible position for ten years. He was born in Chicopee, Mass., in 1847, a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Virgin) Wood. The father was a hotel man in Massachusetts, but in 1863, he left his native state and with his wife, Charles W., Ora, and little Jennie, who died on the way, came west to Minnesota, where he bought a farm. There the father died in 1901, the mother surviving him until 1907.

Charles Wesley Wood attended the district schools in Massachusetts, and was sixteen years old when the family went to Minnesota, and was of great service to his father in helping on the farm. When he was twenty-two years old, anxious for railroad life, he accepted a position as a wiper on a railroad, being promoted to be fireman, and later engineer. He became so interested in engineering that he studied stationary engineering, and for twenty years was in the largest mills in Minnesota as engineer, and was also connected with the city water works in several cities. Twenty-two years ago, he came to Coal Valley, buying a small place, to which he added until he owned sixty-four acres and this is still his property. Ten years ago he was appointed to his present position, and ever since then has devoted himself to his duties. He is very enthusiastic about his work, believing that an engineer holds many lives in the hollow of his hand, whether guiding a locomotive engine, or safeguarding heating and lighting plants. He understands his work thoroughly, and is a very efficient man.

In 1874, Mr. Wood married Lizzie Hardin, born in Uniontown, Pa., who came to Moline with her relatives in a covered wagon. Mr. Wood is liberal in politics. He has seen many changes since coming to the county, among other things the installation of electric lines for the old-time horse cars, on which he was at one time a driver. Kind of heart, efficient in his profession, a good man who has always done his full duty, Mr. Wood is one of the best liked officials of the county, and has friends all over it.

WOOD, Horatio N. (deceased), who was a faithful and valued employe of the Rock Island Stove Company, had been a resident of Rock Island, Ill., since 1876, and had been working for the same firm excepting six years with the glass factory during all of this time. Mr. Wood was a native of Ontario, Canada, born March 2, 1843, a son of William and Annah (Valleau) Wood. The father was a native of New Jersey and when about four years of age was taken by his parents to Canada. The grandfather, William Wood, was born in Holland and came to America as a young man, settling in New Jersey, where he married Jennie Smith. Later he moved to Canada, where his death occurred. William Wood, Jr., was born June 4, 1806, followed agricultural pursuits all his life and was active in the support of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died in Canada in 1890 and his first wife died in 1850. Their four children were: Horatio N.; Anna M., who died in infancy; Gilbert Miller, who is deceased; and Hortense, wife of John Armstrong, of Manitoba, Canada.

Until he reached the age of eleven years, Horatio N. Wood attended the public school in Ontario, then assisted on his father's farm until he was old enough to work for others. Upon coming to the United States, in 1876, he located in Rock Island and found employment in a glass factory, where he remained six years, and after it burned, became connected with the Rock Island Stove Company, four years later being promoted to be shipping clerk. He was an intelligent and energetic workman and through ability and fidelity had earned the confidence of his employers. In politics he was a republican, and fraternally was affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Wood died October 11, 1911, at Rock Island, where he had many friends. He made his own way in the world from early youth and for himself learned self-reliance and good business judgment.

Mr. Wood was married in Rock Island in 1876 to Elizabeth McGonnell, daughter of Edward and Katherine (Fay) McGonnell, natives of Ireland. Six children were born of this union: Edna Hortense, wife of Bert Fairman, of Rock Island; Jessie Evelyn, George A., Anna Laura and Nellie Catherine, at home; and Harry Frank, who died when two years old.

WOODBURN, John.—The agricultural activities of Rock Island county are many and valuable, and the results accruing from them are shown in the magnificent farms which stretch out on every side. The owners of these farms are men of substance, reaping banner crops from the fields they know how to till, and their incomes aggregate much of the wealth of this section. One of the men thus prosperous is John Woodburn, owner of the Sunny Side Farm, comprising 170 acres of rich land in Canoe Creek township, and Fairview Farm of 120 acres in the same township, having bought the latter in 1911. Mr. Woodburn raises corn, wheat and potatoes, and feeds and raises two or three cars of cattle annually. He was born in Coe township, October 16, 1863, a son of Stephen and Isabel (Wreath) Woodburn, natives of Ireland. Stephen Woodburn came to the United States when twenty years old, and about 1850 settled in Coe township, where, after working for others for a time, he began farming for himself. Later he went to Mercer county, Ill., and died there.

John Woodburn was reared on the farm in Mercer county, and attended the schools of his district. His boyhood was spent much as any healthy, country lad, and when he was nineteen years old, he came to Canoe Creek township with the family. He had the advantage of a year's schooling in Port Byron before he commenced earning his own living, although he remained with his parents until twenty-seven years old.

On March 11, 1891, Mr. Woodburn married Emma Johnson, and they became the parents of six children, five of whom survive: John S., Hugh E., Laura F., an unnamed infant, Grace and Mabel I. In politics, he is a democrat, and served very ably as road commissioner for nine years, and as assessor for one year. He was also on the school board for eight years, and collector for two years. Fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and Knights of Pythias. Energetic, a good citizen and industrious farmer. Mr. Woodburn has continuously advanced in public esteem, and is one of the best-known men in this part of the county.

WOODIN, Sheldon Jerome.—The Woodin family has been well known in Rock Island, Ill., for many years and has been one of the prominent families of Connecticut for many generations. Sheldon J. Woodin was born in Millersburg, Mercer county, Ill., March 5, 1852, a son of Sheldon G. and Lucy (Bostwick) Woodin, both natives of Connecticut and members of old families there. Both were born in Litchfield, the father in 1795 and the mother in 1805, he being a lineal descendant of Governor Winfield, of Connecticut. The father enlisted in the Connecticut troops at the age of seventeen years and served through the War of 1812. He came to Illinois in 1838, and with a soldier's land warrant secured land in Mercer county. He and his wife had four children: Sheldon J., Josephine, Mary and Marie, all deceased except the son.

Sheldon Jerome Woodin was educated in the Rock Island public schools, after which he went to work in a sawmill for Weyerhaeuser & Denkmann. Later he worked for a time in the Rock Island paper mill and the Rock Island boat yard, and for three years followed the trade of carpenter. For the past thirty years he has held a position in the Rock Island Plow Company's factory, being now a foreman, an expert workman and possesses good executive ability. He owns a nice home at No. 922 First avenue, where the family have resided for the past thirty years. He is well known in various circles, being a member of the First Baptist church, and for the past twenty-five years he has belonged to Ucal Lodge, No. 608 I. O. O. F., of Rock Island. He is an independent voter in political matters.

Mr. Woodin was married in Rock Island October 25, 1876, to Rosa C. Kahlke, daughter of J. J. and Louisa Kahlke, her father born June 29, 1829, and her mother in 1836. Four children have been born of this union: Norman C., married Rose Ganns, of Milwaukee, Wis., and they live in Antiago, Wis.; Josie May, married Howard J. Hardin, and they live in Peoria, Ill.;

Charles K., lives at Galva, Ill.; and William J., resides at home. The family has many friends and acquaintances in Rock Island, it being one of the old established families.

WOODWARD, William D., one of the progressive farmers of Port Byron township, traces his ancestry back through several generations of American-born citizens to England. He was born on the farm he now owns, in 1860, being a son of George McCann and Hester (Pease) Woodward, and grandson of William Woodward. His great-grandfather Woodward was born in England, but came to this country at an early day. The grandfather, William Woodward walked from New Jersey to Ohio, locating in Warren county. There his son, George, was born, and brought up, but in 1845 he left there to come to Port Byron township, Rock Island county, making the trip in a covered wagon. During the long trip the game was so plentiful and unafraid that animals had to be driven from the path. Mrs. George Woodward was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, but died in Port Byron township February 27, 1883, when fifty-seven years old. George Woodward died in the same year, on July 17, aged sixty-six years. They had seven children: George Washington, who died when two years old; Albert Lincoln; Edward Clinton, drowned in July, 1890, at Cordova, and buried in the cemetery there; William D.; Henry C.; Thomas Corwin; Albert D.; Ida Bell. After locating in Port Byron township, George Woodward bought 283 acres of land and put in all the improvements, except the park which is the work of William D. Woodward. This latter contains 160 acres and is beautifully located on the river. The father was very prominent in the township, serving as road commissioner and supervisor. He was a most excellent man, of thrifty habits and good principles, and bore his part in the development of his locality.

William D. Woodward was brought up on this property, and with the exception of a few years spent working on the Mississippi river, he has farmed all his life. In 1887 Mr. Woodward was made a Mason, belonging to the Port Byron lodge, and he belongs to the Cordova lodge of Knights of Pythias. He has never married. A thoroughgoing man, interested in the progress of his township, Mr. Woodward is a fine citizen and a man who is a credit to any community.

WOODYATT, Lee Albert, proprietor of the Lyric theatre at No. 1510 Sixth avenue, Moline, is one of the men of Rock Island county interested in giving the people clean, healthy amusement, and providing for their safety as well as entertainment, by complying generously with all the requirements of the fire department. The Lyric was built by Mr. Woodyatt, and opened by him in 1911, on ground which he leases. As his life has been spent as a musician, Mr. Woodyatt is particularly well suited for his line of endeavor. The house has a magnificent pipe organ which was installed at a cost of $2,300, the only one of its kind in the three cities, used in conjunction with moving picture shows. Since its initial opening, the Lyric has catered to the very best class of people.

Mr. Woodyatt was born in Geneseo, Ill., in 1884, a son of Albert C. and Agnes (Harwood) Woodyatt. The parents came to Moline in 1880, and the father embarked in a musical business, now owning the leading establishment of its kind in the city. He and his wife had six children, all of whom are living. Mr. Woodyatt attended the public schools of Moline. After completing his educational training he worked on the Island during the Spanish-American war, but later went to Chicago to perfect himself as a piano tuner. Returning home, he worked for his father in the music store until he became a member of the Ogden Orchestra, thus continuing for seven years, when he embarked in his present calling.

On June 31, 1903, Mr. Woodyatt was united in marriage with Clara Looft, born at Davenport, Iowa, but brought to Moline by her parents. One child, Lucille, has been born of this union. Mr. Woodyatt is a man of unusual musical ability, as well as business capacity, and under his management the Lyric has grown in popularity and is numbered among the favorite houses of its kind in the three cities.

WREATH, James Hamilton.—Some of the best farmers and stock raisers of Rock Island county are those engaged in operating large estates for others, their experience and skill being such as to command large salaries. One of the men thus engaged, who is recognized as one of the best authorities regarding agricultural matters, although he is still in the very prime of life, is James Hamilton Wreath, born in Coe township, April 3, 1875, a son of Hamilton and Sarah C. (McConnell) Wreath, natives of Ireland and Pennsylvania, respectively. Mrs. Wreath was brought by her parents to Coe township when a small child, and they settled on the farm where James Hamilton Wreath was born. Later, in 1882, this was sold, and the father bought 160 acres in Canoe Creek township, where he died in January, 1891, while she died August 8, 1909. Their children were: William W. of Brunswick, Neb.; Clara B., Mrs. Ferdinand Taggart of the state of Washington; Jennie E., Mrs. William B. Feaster of Canoe Creek township; James Hamilton; Letitia, on the old home farm; Samuel R. of Chicago; Joseph I. of Coe township; William F., on the old home farm.

James Hamilton Wreath was educated in the district schools, and from an early age helped on the farm. He remained at home until his marriage, in 1905, when he rented the Robert S. Woodburn farm of 291 acres, and carries on general farming, raising registered Duroc-Jersey hogs, cattle and draft horses. He is a strong republican, and has served for six years as school director. Fraternally, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 43 of Hillsdale, Ill.

On January 25, 1905, Mr. Wreath was united in marriage with Myrtle Wynes, born in Coal Valley township, a daughter of Samuel Wynes. Mr. and Mrs. Wreath became the parents of one child: Ford Hamilton, born November 30, 1908. Mr. and Mrs. Wreath are very popular in their neighborhood, where their many excellent qualities are well known, and he is recognized as a capable business man, possessing sterling traits of character.

WRIGHT, Richard, one of the prosperous farmers and dairymen of Coe township, and a man of sound judgment and sterling integrity, was born in Southport, England, twenty miles north of Liverpool, September 22, 1856, a son of William and Elizabeth (Rimmer) Wright. The mother died when Richard was five weeks old. Some years thereafter, the father came to America, settling in Coe township, where he died in March, 1891, being buried in Port Byron cemetery.

Richard Wright was reared by his grandmother, attended the public schools of his native place, and was brought up on a farm. When nineteen years old he began working as station agent and telegraph operator on a railroad, thus continuing for seven years. As his father had come to America, he also came here, in May, 1883, and for two weeks visited with his sister in Rock Island, and then bought eighty acres in Coe township. Later he sold this to R. C. Heeren, now of Port Byron, and on December 25, 1888, he rented the eighty acres which four years later he bought, making it his home ever since. There were some old buildings on it, which he tore down and replaced with modern ones, including an eight-room house, commodious barn and necessary outbuildings. He devotes his farm to general farming and dairying, milking from six to nine cows. He has made a record of 140 pounds of butter in two weeks, selling to private customers.

Mr. Wright was married in England November 16, 1878, to Nancy Leatherbarrow, daughter of James and Jane (Tinsley) Leatherbarrow. Mrs. Wright was also born in England. Mr. and Mrs. Wright have two children: William James, owner of sixty acres in Coe township, and who lives at home; and Margaret E. J., formerly a teacher and now wife of Samuel D. Wainwright of Hampton township. In 1904 Mr. Wright was elected township clerk, and held that office four years, when he was made justice of the peace, and is now serving in that capacity. He and his family belong to the Methodist church of Port Byron, and give it a generous support.

Since coming to the county Mr. Wright has taken an interest in local affairs, feeling that as the community advances, so do the people. His judgment and progressive ideas have always been at the service of his neighbors, and he is called into all the conferences of the township to advise and assist in carrying out measures calculated to prove beneficial to all concerned.

WYLLIE, Foster W.—The farmers of the present day are not only tillers of the soil, but enterprising business men as well, who conduct their various operations just as systematically. One of these modern farmers of Rock Island county is Foster W. Wylie, owner of Edgewood Farm, comprising 160 acres, in Rural township. He was born on the home place, November 2, 1859, son of John and Mary Jane (Ramsey) Wylie. Mrs. Wylie was born in Clonis, Ireland, October 10, 1828, and is now deceased. She accompanied her people in 1848 to the United States, and they located in Rural township, and here she was married, in 1851. Mr. Wylie died December 3, 1907. They had six children: George, of Winfield, Kas.; James, and Mrs. Maria Johnson, both of Omaha; Foster W. and Rachel, both being on the homestead; Mrs. George Simmon of Rural, and two who are deceased. There are eighteen grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren in the family.

Foster W. Wylie attended the district schools, and has always been a farmer. He took a commercial course in the Davenport Business College, and then spent some time in the West, after which he returned home and took charge of the farm. His residence is a fine brick structure, and his barns are commodious and substantial. There is much fruit on the place, and the premises are kept in excellent condition.

In March, 1893, he was married at Shenandoah, Ia., to Mary Nidy, daughter of William Nidy, of that place. They have three children: Nita Eva, John Earl and Roland Ellsworth, all at home. In politics, Mr. Wylie is a republican, and he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. He is very liberal in his religious views, and believes in allowing each one to think for himself on such matters.

WYLLIE, Francis B., the efficient head of the Rock Island County Infirmary, is a man whose suitability for his position has been amply demonstrated through years of capable administration. He was born in Hampton, Rock Island county, November 18, 1866, a son of Charles and Sophrina (Knights) Wylie. Charles Wylie was born in New York and grew up there a farmer, but in 1859 he came to Rock Island county and continued his agricultural pursuits. Here he died at the age of seventy-three years, his wife surviving him until 1910, when she passed away in East Moline, and both are buried in the Hampton cemetery. From the time of the formation of the republican party, Charles Wylie was one of its staunchest supporters.

Until he was thirteen years old, Francis G. Wylie attended the common school at Hampton, but at that age left to enter the Happy Hollow coal mine. After several years spent there, he secured employment on a farm, and although he received but a small salary, he managed to save enough to begin farming for himself. He continued to farm in Hampton township for fifteen years, during which time he was called upon to act as road commissioner for three years in Hampton township, and was alderman from the Third ward in East Moline, when he resigned to accept his present position. There were eleven applicants for this office, but Mr. Wylie's superiority to them was recognized and the trustees have had no cause to regret their decision.

In 1892 Mr. Wylie married Eliza E. Guldenpfennig, born in Hampton township, Rock Island county, March 3, 1873, the Rev. Schue of Rock Island officiating. She is a daughter of Christian and Dorothy (Klebe) Guldenpfennig, the former an extensive farmer of Zuma township. Mr. and Mrs. Wylie have had four children: Edith May, born January 30, 1894; Alvin Francis, born December 14, 1899, who died in infancy; Frances Q. born February 10, 1901, and Gladys M., born December 7, 1903, who died April 3, 1906. Their deceased children are buried in Hampton township cemetery.

Mr. Wylie is a member of the Eagles, and was treasurer of his lodge; he belongs to Coal Valley Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and East Moline Lodge of I. O. O. F. For years he has been an important factor in republican politics and has rendered yeoman service to his party. An efficient superintendent, a big-hearted man and good citizen, Mr. Wylie is intensely popular and has friends all over the county. Mrs. Wylie is a member of the King's Daughters.

WYNN, Jacob.—The Illinois farmer, be he enterprising and energetic, is usually loath to transfer the control of his operations to other hands, even when he has reached an age that men in other lines of industry would consider advanced years, but when he finally does relinquish his hold on active labor and retire to his residence in the city, he makes one of the substantial, solid citizens of his new community, and as such is a welcome addition. Among the well-known retired citizens of Rock Island, Ill., is Jacob Wynn, living at No. 1302 Third avenue. He was born August 15, 1841, in Fayette county, Pa., a son of James and Catherine (Artist) Wynn, the former a native of North Carolina, and the latter of Fayette county, Pa. James Wynn was a blacksmith by trade and followed that occupation for years in Fayette county, Pa., whence he had gone from his native state, and died in 1870, his wife having passed away in 1853. He was a soldier during the War of 1812, and his father, James Wynn, had served in the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars. One of Jacob Wynn's half-brothers, Joseph, took part in the Mexican war, and another half-brother, James, was a member of the Eighty-fifth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil war.

Jacob Wynn received his education in the schools of Fayette county, Pa., where his first work was learning the blacksmith trade with his father. At the age of twenty-one years, August 15, 1862, he enlisted in Company G, Sixteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, which company, after two years, was consolidated with Company B of the same regiment with which Mr. Wynn served until the close of the war, being mustered out as corporal August 11, 1865. He took part in many battles including Hartwood Church, Weldon Railroad, Spottsylvania Court House, the battles of the Wilderness, Appomattox and Gettysburg, in addition to many skirmishes. He always proved himself a brave and faithful soldier and had an excellent war record. After completing his service in the army, Mr. Wynn located in Greene county, Pa., where he worked on a farm until 1869, and then came to Rock Island county, Ill., where he was engaged in farming for one year. He then lived for a time at Moline, but then went to Big Island and was engaged in farming for eight years, at the end of which time he purchased a farm in Rock Island county, but after four years located in Rock Island, where he has since lived retired. Mr. Wynn is a member of John Buford Post, No. 243, of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Wynn was married in Greene county, Pa., in February, 1866, to Susan Hardin, who was born at Smithfield, Pa., daughter of Bonaparte Hardin, who died in Fayette county. Mrs. Wynn died March 31, 1890, having been the mother of three children, of whom two are now living: William, a carpenter and contractor of Rock Island; and Zedoc, living on the Wynn family homestead. There are four grandchildren in the family.

YATES, John Thomas (deceased).—One who for many years was actively associated with business affairs in both Rock Island and Moline, giving of himself to his enterprises, and public matters, the best of his energies and powers, was the late John Thomas Yates. His large steam fitting and plumbing establishments in both cities were built up through his executive ability, and what fortune he accumulated was honestly earned. He was born in Evansville, Ind., August 15, 1844, being a son of Matthew Yates. The latter was president of the Cleveland Gas Works, and prior to assuming this office, was head of the Lexington Gas Co. His death occurred in Cleveland, but his wife died in Evansville, when John Thomas Yates was only three years old. The father was married four times. A sister of John Thomas Yates, Elizabeth, married Edward Saville.

John Thomas Yates was reared in Lexington, Cleveland and Rock Island, being brought to the latter city when ten years old. He attended the public school. At the last call for troops for service in the Civil war, Mr. Yates enlisted in Company G, Forty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the struggle. Returning to Rock Island, he followed his trade of steam fitting and plumbing until 1867, when he embarked in business for himself, establishing a shop in Moline six months after he did one in Rock Island. In time he built up a fine business, holding contracts for work in many of the most important buildings in both cities. His faithfulness in executing contracts, the high grade of his work, and his sterling honesty of character gained for him a reputation among his associates and in his community, that is a precious heritage for those who come after him.

On February 22, 1866, Mr. Yates was married to Mary Elizabeth Caulclesure, born in St. Louis, April 20, 1848, daughter of Alfred and Elizabeth (Graham) Caulclesure. Mr. and Mrs. Yates became the parents of children as follows: Mary L., who is now Mrs. John G. Powell of Rock Island county; Alfred H., who lives in St. Louis; Ellen Maud, who is deceased; John, who lives at home; and Sylvia M., who married William Bennett, of Rock Island.

In addition to his own establishments, Mr. Yates owned stock in several concerns. His children grew up to be an honor to him and his wife, and he lived to be proud of them, passing away February 1, 1881. While his place is vacant, the good he accomplished and the standard he set of high morality in business affairs are not forgotten but live after him and are prized by his family.

YOLTON, John Douglass.—The pioneers of Rock Island county have done their work, and the result of their efforts is shown today in the magnificently developed farms, flourishing towns and cities, splendidly kept roads and perfectly equipped schools. All this was not brought about in a day, but is the result of years of unceasing endeavor, coupled with constant faith in the locality and appreciation of its possibilities. One of the representative farmers of this locality, who belongs to one of the first families, is John Douglass Yolton, of section 31, Coe township. He is a son of the pioneer Cary Yolton, born in Westmoreland county, Pa., who came to the county about 1846, passing down the Ohio river and up the Mississippi. He bought land to the extent of 120 acres, from John Swank, and after putting some work upon it, sold the property, and invested in a smaller farm. Later he moved to Minnesota, and died there in 1872. He married Margaret Daugal, born in Westmoreland county, Pa., who died in Minnesota, having been the mother of ten children, of whom John Douglass Yolton was the third in order of birth.

John Douglass Yolton was born in Zuma township, August 5, 1852, and for four or five weeks during the winter, attended the district schools during his boyhood. Being brought up on a farm, he early learned to operate it, and has always followed farming. In 1877, he bought eighty acres in Coe and forty acres in Zuma township, and began at once to make improvements, putting up the house, barns and other buildings, and setting out an orchard. He carries on general farming, and has been very successful in his operations.

On January 3, 1875, he married Melcina R. Searl, born in Zuma township, December 10, 1850, daughter of James and Rachel (McCullough) Searl. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Yolton: Myron J., who is proprietor of the Port Byron Academy of Port Byron; and Melcina, who is Mrs. Sheldon Walker of Zuma township. Mr. Yolton is a member of the Methodist church of Zuma and has served it as trustee. He belongs to the Masons of Port Byron. Occupied with his business affairs, Mr. Yolton has never dabbled in politics, but is interested in securing good government and sensible improvements.

YOST, John Charles, whose many years of industrious and useful labor as an agriculturist in Hampton township place him in the front rank of farmer-citizens of Rock Island county, belongs to that class of men whose endeavors are always spent along lines that make for advancement and progress in whatever community they may find themselves. Although now retired from active participation in business and farming life, he is one of the prominent men of his township, and is held in high esteem by all who know him. He was born in Hampton township, September 16, 1856, a son of Solomon and Margaret (Wigant) Yost, the former a native of Warren county, Pa., and the latter of Saxony, Germany. The paternal grandfather, Francis Yost, was born in France, and for thirteen years served under Napoleon, coming to the United States at an early day and settling in Pennsylvania, where he lived until 1840, in that year coming by team to Hampton township. He took up timber land from the government, and spent the rest of his life here, dying at the age of eighty-seven years. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Yost were Christian and Caroline Wigant. Solomon Yost and Margaret Wigant were married in Hampton township about 1854 and settled down to agricultural lives, and he met his death in 1875, when but forty-five years old, by the fall of the limb of a tree, his widow still surviving at the age of seventy-four years, her birth having occurred December 7, 1837. Their children were as follows: John Charles; Julia, who married a Mr. Cunningham, of Kansas; Mary, who married Peter Vogler, resides on her father's farm; Rebecca, who lives with her mother; Elizabeth, who married Christ Wildermuth, of Watertown, Ill.; and Rose and Francis, who are deceased.

John Charles Yost received his education in the district schools, and remained at home with his parents until his marriage, August 27, 1879, to Mary Vogler, who was born in Hampton township, December 24, 1861, a daughter of George and Agnes (Sors) Vogler, natives of Berne, Oldenburg, Germany. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Yost: Roy, Jerome and Iva Margaret. After his marriage, Mr. Yost purchased a farm on section 11, on which he farmed for seven years, and then purchased forty acres of the old homestead and thirty acres opposite to it across the road, and continued there until March, 1908, when he moved to Port Byron, at which point he conducted a dry goods establishment for five months. Selling out his interests at the end of this time, he bought the farm of Charles Vogler, one-half mile south of Rapids City, but he is now living retired, a son farming the property of sixty-four acres, while another son is cultivating the 120 acres on his first farm. He is a democrat in politics and has served as school director and road commissioner. His wife is a member of the Catholic church.

Roy Yost, a son of John Charles and Mary (Vogler) Yost, was born in Hampton township, June 26, 1881, and lived with his parents until October 10, 1900, when he was married to Julia Beckman, born at Rock Island, a daughter of John and Minnie (Gumber) Beckman, the former a native of Rock Island and the latter of Zuma township. Roy and Mrs. Yost have had four children: Raymond, Leo, Irene and Melvin. After his marriage, Roy Yost spent one year on a rented farm in Hampton township, and two years on rented land in Coe township. Returning to Hampton township he rented a farm for four years, and then located on his father's tract of 120 acres, where he is now successfully engaged in farming and in raising horses, cattle and hogs. He conducts his operations along scientific lines, getting the best results from the property, and is recognized as one of the successful and up-to-date young agriculturists of Hampton township. Like his father, he is a democrat in his political views, but he has not aspired to public office. Fraternally, he is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America, at Rapids City.

YOST, Solomon (deceased).—In every new community there must be certain men who are able and willing to go ahead with improvements, to back public enterprises and take a deep and abiding interest in local conditions. The late Solomon Yost of Zuma township was one of the leading men of his day and locality, and when he passed away, he left a void not easily filled. He was born in Pennsylvania, in February, 1830, being a son of Francis and Catherine Yost, the former born in France. In the year 1838, the family came to Rock Island county, and soon thereafter the mother passed away. She had borne her husband eight children, of whom Solomon was the youngest.

Solomon Yost was married in Hampton township to a Miss Goebel, and rented land and moved there. His wife died within a couple of years, leaving him with one daughter, Kate. In November, 1856, Mr. Yost again married, the maiden name of his wife being Margaret Weigant, born in Saxony, Germany, December 7, 1838, a daughter of Christopher and Caroline (Leinbolz) Weigant. These parents came to Rock Island county about 1846, after a short stay in Davenport, Ia., and Mr. Weigant worked by the day until he bought land in Zuma township. Later he went to Hampton township, where he died, September 16, 1868. After his second marriage, Solomon Yost lived for two years on a rented farm, then bought 120 acres from his father, after which until his demise, he farmed on this land, dying upon it, January 20, 1875. He and his wife became the parents of children as follows: John, of Hampton township; Julia, Mrs. Demitras Cunningham of Nebraska; Mary, Mrs. Peter Vogler of Geneseo, Ill.; Rebecca, living with her mother; Louisa, Mrs. Christopher Wildemeth, of Watertown, Ill.; Rosa, who died when twenty-three years old; and Frank, who died in infancy. Mr. Yost was a democrat in politics, and served as school director. He always was interested in securing excellent educational advantages for the children of his district, and believed in building substantial schoolhouses and engaging good teachers. His religious faith connected him with the Lutheran church, and for years he was one of its most consistent members. Although many years have passed since Mr. Yost was called away from the scene of his earthly activities, his memory is cherished, and the good he did lives after him.

YOUNG, John C., who has now retired from active life and occupies and owns a very pleasant home at No. 2232 Twelfth street, Rock Island, Ill., is honored and respected as a veteran of the Civil war and as a useful, public-spirited citizen. He is a native of Dubuque, Iowa, born February 6, 1844, son of George and Sarah Young, the parents both born in England. The father was a carpenter and contractor, came to America as a young man and lived for a time in Pennsylvania. He afterward removed to New Orleans, but lived in that city only a short time and then returned to Pennsylvania, where he worked in lead mines. He entered land from the Government near Dubuque in 1836, and while living there secured the contract for erecting a shot tower in that city. During its construction he was accidentally killed. There were four sons and one daughter in the family, and the children who now survive are: George, of Washington; William, of Dubuque; John C., of Rock Island, and Mrs. Lucinda Parker, of Dubuque. The mother of these children came to Rock Island with John C. and another son, in 1846, and the former was adopted by the family of the late Jonah Case, the mother then returning to Dubuque, where she spent the remainder of her life, dying at the age of seventy-seven years.

In boyhood John C. Young attended school in South Rock Island and in the city of Rock Island, and until he was sixteen years of age worked for his foster-father on the farm. During the Civil war he enlisted in Company H, Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Capt. Wm. B. Seymour and Col. John E. Smith, of Galena. Mr. Young served three years, three months and twenty-one days, being mustered out December 24, 1864, at Savannah, Ga. He had participated in many important battles, among them being Fort Donelson, Shiloh, and many others, besides numerous skirmishes. Mr. Young spent six months at Memphis, Tenn., then rejoined his regiment in time to take part in many minor engagements. After the close of his service he returned home by way of Washington and New York, and after his arrival resumed farming, which occupation he continued until retiring a few years since. He has been a successful agriculturist and has been active in promoting the interests of his community and county. He has for the past ten years been a justice of the peace in Rock Island and has also served as town clerk. He is a member of the Baptist church, is a republican in politics, and is a prominent member of John Buford Post No. 243, G. A. R. He has about one acre of ground in his home place in Rock Island and this is well cared for.

Mr. Young was united in marriage in June, 1870, to Mary E. McAllen, at Clinton, Ia. Mrs. Young was born in Indiana in 1847. Her father was a contractor and in an early day came from Ohio to Davenport, Ia. There were several children in the family but the only two who now survive are Mrs. Young and her brother John, of Lawrence, Kan. Two served during the war in the Fourteenth Iowa Cavalry. To Mr. and Mrs. Young five children were born, of whom the following three survive: Harry, the oldest, lives at Cheyenne, Wyo.; Ruth, wife of Charles Farthing, of Bristol, Tenn., and Paul, at home.

ZIEGENHORN, Samuel, one of the heaviest landowners of Drury township, has a magnificent farm of 843 acres, which he devotes to the raising of corn, wheat, oats, cattle and hogs. His operations are along lines that make him one of the leading agriculturalists of Rock Island county, and his name is known all over this part of the state in conjunction with all matters pertaining to farming and stock raising. He was born in Prussia, Germany, January 12, 1856, a son of Henry and Dorothea (Schmidt) Ziegenhorn, both natives of Germany. The father was a machinist of Germany, and in 1865, brought his family to the new world, locating in Peoria, where he found ready employment in the machine shops of the railroad at that point. For two and one-half years, he was thus engaged, then moved on a farm, where six years were spent. He then went to Iroquois county, Ill., where he farmed until 1885, when disposing of his property, he went to Claytonville, Ill., there living in retirement until his death, which occurred December 11, 1906, his wife having passed away May 6, 1906. Both are buried in the cemetery at Claytonville. They had a family of seven children: Lena, wife of J. Hinegar; Samuel; Henry of Mercer county; Dorothea Bumpgardener; Hannah Harty; Theodore of Arkansas; and August.

Samuel Ziegenhorn attended school in his native land until the family migration to Peoria, and after reaching that city, he went to a German school, and at the same time worked in the country during the summer months. Until he was over twenty-years of age, he remained with his father, but then rented land in Livingston county. In 1883, he bought eighty acres in that same county, living on it until 1901, when he purchased 549 acres in Drury township, to which he later added until he now has 843 acres, comprising one of the finest farms in this part of the state. He has appropriately named it Pleasant View Farm. Not only is his residence a thoroughly modern one, his barns built upon scientific lines, and his premises kept in perfect order, but his equipment consists of the latest ideas in machinery and appliances, and all in all, his place is the most beautiful in the entire township.

On December 9, 1879, Mr. Ziegenhorn married Elizabeth Zimmerman, born in Illinois on a farm. They have had twelve children: Walter, Aaron, Sarah (deceased), Amos, Sam, Martha Berry, Arthur, Ben, Ira, Anna, Gertrude and Joseph. He belongs to the Apostolic church, and is a man who lives according to the dictates of his conscience. High principles and upright living characterize this excellent German-American, who is one of the most representative men of his county.

ZIEGLER, David R. (deceased).—Fifty years ago men were called upon to show their patriotism, and support the Union with their lives. Some marched away never to return, others came back hopelessly disabled, and none escaped without severe suffering. With all this in view, it is easy to comprehend why the veterans are held in special veneration by all right thinking people, for to them is due the credit for the present united nation. One of the men who was esteemed both as a citizen of Moline and veteran soldier, was the late David R. Ziegler, for five years serving as railroad guard at the Rock Island Arsenal-Moline bridge.

He was born in Plainfield, Cumberland county, Pa., December 23, 1839, son of Adam and Lydia (Reed) Ziegler, the former born April 12, 1813, and the latter September 24, 1813, both at Plainfield, Pa. The father was a farmer, who moved to Coe township in 1850, where the family lived until they died, the father passing away November 10, 1879, aged sixty-six years, and the mother on September 21, 1894, aged eighty-one years. The paternal grandfather was a soldier in the American Revolution. Seven sons of the Ziegler family served in the Civil war: John, who was born January 28, 1837; William H.; David R.; Joseph S., who was born August 13, 1841, died October 29, 1855; Charles F., who was born June 22, 1843, died August 2, 1913; Solomon B., who was born October 26, 1844, died September 24, 1909; Benjamin F., who was born March 6, 1846, died August 23, 1893; Sarah E., who was born July 4, 1847, died July 26, 1847; Mary Ann, who was born July 4, 1847 (twin of Sarah), died August 6, 1847; Nehemiah R., who was born June 27, 1848; Mary E., who was born July 1, 1850, died in October, 1891; and Millard F., who was born September 27, 1853.

The late David R. Ziegler attended the public schools of Coe township, and was brought up a farmer. He enlisted for service during the Civil war, August 17, 1861, in Company I, Second Iowa Cavalry, and served until February 29, 1864, when he re-enlisted, under date of March 1, 1864, and was made corporal of this same company, thus continuing until he was mustered out September 19, 1865. He never missed a battle or skirmish of his command during his whole service, and was credited with twenty-five battles, in addition to many smaller engagements, that at times were nearly as decisive as those better known. In the last campaign of the Army of the Cumberland at Nashville, Tenn., his command covered itself with glory and honor. Some of the battles in which he participated were those of Jackson, Collierville, Saulbury, Moscow, West Point, Okolona, Nashville, Little Harpeth, Anthony Hills, New Madrid, Island No. 10, Corinth, Holly Springs, Waterford, Tallahatchie, Oxford, Coffeeville, Wall-Hill and others.

Mr. Ziegler was married in Coe township, December 16, 1866, to Margaret Hasson, born in Philadelphia, Pa., December 8, 1847, daughter of Alexander and Elizabeth (Cartwright) Hasson. Mr. Hasson was born in 1820 at Londonderry, Ireland, and died in 1892, aged seventy-two years; while his wife was born in Lincolnshire, England, in 1822, and died in 1911, aged eighty-nine years. The father came to the United States in 1838, and the mother in 1828. Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler became the parents of children as follows: Evalena M., who married David Gamble, was born September 1, 1867, and died February 22, 1898, leaving two children: D. Edwin and Margaret I.; and Lydia, who was born September 25, 1870, died December 15, 1876. Mr. Ziegler owned his home at No. 1429 Twenty-fourth avenue, Moline. He belonged to R. H. Graham Post No. 312, G. A. R., of Moline, and also to the Modern Woodmen of America. All his life he was a republican. This most excellent man, faithful in all things, passed to his last reward January 15, 1910. His memory is tenderly cherished by his widow and his many warm friends. Mrs. Ziegler belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church at Moline, and is active in its service.

ZIEGLER, Emil E., belongs to an old family of Rock Island, Ill., where he has won business success and is now proprietor of the E. E. Ziegler Printing Company, at No. 1028 Fourth avenue. He is a native of the city, born at the old family home at Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue, May 12, 1861, son of Joseph and Caroline (Hemzel) Ziegler, both natives of Germany. The father was a cooper by trade and followed same after coming to America, in early manhood. He was married in Rock Island county and of the five children born to him and his wife but two now survive, Emil E. and Caroline. The parents were members of the Lutheran church.

Emil E. Ziegler attended the public schools of Rock Island, finishing the common school course and spending two years in high school.

At the age of fourteen years he began learning the trade of printer and when fifteen years old was working as printer's "devil" in the office of the Volks Zeitung, where he received $1.10 for his first week's work. He finished learning the trade in the office of the Rock Island Union, and worked for others at this occupation until establishing a business of his own. For a short time he conducted a feed store in Rock Island, and in 1893 he started his present business in the line of commercial printing, having purchased this property some twenty-two years ago. His success is the result of his own efforts, as he started business life in a modest way, with but small capital, and added to his outfit and capacity from time to time as his business warranted. He is an enterprising and progressive citizen, actively interested in the general welfare, and is well known and popular in various circles. As was his father, he is an independent voter. He belongs to the Odd Fellows.

Mr. Ziegler was married in Rock Island January 17, 1881, to Miss Ada M. Ellis, daughter of the late James B. Ellis, of Rock Island. Mrs. Ziegler died in 1899, leaving one child, Ray, now a resident of Los Angeles, Cal. Mrs. Ziegler was a member of the Episcopal church, as also is Mr. Ziegler. He married Mrs. Priscilla Condon of Rock Island on June 5, 1909.

ZIEGLER, Frank X.—Some of the leading farmers of Rock Island county are carrying on operations on property that has been brought to a state of cultivation by members of their own family, and take a justifiable pride in the fact that before their family moved on the land it was merely prairie, wild swamp or timberland, unprofitable to a degree, instead of the paying, prosperous farms of today. One of these farmers and stock raisers whose family was one of the pioneer ones of his section, is Frank X. Ziegler, of Zuma township, who was born on the farm he now operates, December 3, 1865, a son of George and Catherine (Scheible) Ziegler, natives of Wertemburg, Germany.

Mr. Ziegler's mother came from the Fatherland to Westmoreland county, Pa., with her parents, and was there married to Mr. Ziegler, who had come to the United States when about twenty-two years of age and first worked for a Kentucky slaveholder, making trips down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers on a flat boat, taking crops down to the New Orleans markets. In 1854 with his wife, Mr. Ziegler came to Illinois, by steamer, and on April 1, of that year, located at Port Byron. He first rented a farm in Coe township for five years and then rented in Zuma township for a like period, purchasing forty acres of the present homestead in 1865, to which he has added ninety-six acres. The land was mostly in timber and stumps and there were several old log buildings on the place, probably erected by those who had homesteaded the land, but these were soon replaced by Mr. Ziegler with good, substantial structures and the land was all put in a high state of cultivation except thirty acres, which are still used for pasture land. On this farm Mr. Ziegler died November 23, 1890, while his wife passed away March 10, 1904. They were the parents of these children: William H., who is of Port Byron; Alexander M., who is of Gregory, S. D.; David K., who is living in Lakeland, Fla.; Mary E., of Port Byron; Jacob W., who is of Wayne, Nebr.; Elvora, who married Henry Schafer; Frank X., and four, John, Fred, Sarah and Samuel, who are dead.

Frank X. Ziegler secured his education in the district schools, and was reared to the life of an agriculturist, always remaining on the home farm, which he purchased in 1901 from his mother and the other heirs to the land, and he has continued to operate it to the present time with success that ranks him among the leading farmers of his township. He has made a study of soil conditions, rotation of crops and other subjects necessary to scientific farming and the result is that he raises as large crops as any farmer in his community.

On March 16, 1893, Mr. Ziegler was married by Rev. Drafton to Elizabeth E. Snyder, born in Rock Island, a daughter of James and Barbara (Solenberger) Snyder, natives of Pennsylvania, who both died at Rock Island, when Mrs. Ziegler was only five years of age. She had one brother, Daniel C., who is now deceased. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler: Roy A., who is residing at home; Daniel D., William S. and Frank M. Mr. Ziegler is a democrat in his political inclinations, and has served as collector of Zuma township for two terms. Fraternally, he is affiliated with Albright Camp No. 307, of Port Byron, Knights of Pythias; and the Court of Honor No. 9, in the same village.

ZIEGLER, Kris (deceased).—Rock Island county has been the Mecca for many stout-hearted, earnest men and women who were seeking better conditions and an opportunity to earn an honest living, unrestricted by some of the exacting requirements of older countries. Those who have come here have had their confidence justified, and have developed into substantial men and women. One of these was the late Kris Ziegler, born in Wittenburg, Germany, in 1850, who died in Zuma township in 1903. In 1879, he married Catherine Bauer, also born in Germany, and later came to the United States, arriving here in 1881. They settled in Zuma township, where Mr. Ziegler first rented land, but in 1893, they managed to buy twenty-nine acres. Under their careful management, this land was made to yield splendid crops, and since Mr. Ziegler's death, his widow is continuing to operate with gratifying results. Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler became the parents of seven children: Fred, John, Henry, Ernest, Charley, Rosa and Clara.

Mr. Ziegler was a consistent member of the German Lutheran church, giving it his hearty and earnest support. He was not a man who ever cared for public life, all his interests being centered on his home and family, but he made friends, and was deeply mourned when death claimed him, and his funeral was largely attended by those who sought to do honor to their neighbor.

ZIMMERMAN, Frank.—No man is placed in charge of a postoffice by the United States Government unless he stands well in his community, and has already proven himself to be of unblemished character. In a recent incumbent of the postoffice at Cordova, Ill., Frank Zimmerman, the people of that locality had every reason to congratulate themselves, for he was eminently well fitted for the office. When his term expired, April, 1912, he was succeeded by W. J. Forsythe. He was born in Cordova township, April 2, 1860, and all his interests are centered here. Mr. Zimmerman is a son of John Zimmerman, a native of Pennsylvania. Both parents came to Rock Island county in their youth, and were here married in March, 1859. They settled on a farm in Coe township, and the father died there in 1900, aged seventy-one years. His widow moved to Cordova, where she passed away, in 1905. They had two children, Frank, and his sister Flora, who died in 1880, aged ten years.

Frank Zimmerman remained with his parents until he was thirty years old, in the meanwhile acquiring a common school education and a thorough knowledge of farming. He rented a farm in Coe township, later the old homestead, operating it until 1903, when he came to Cordova, and worked at the carpenter trade until December 20, 1907. That day marked his appointment to the office of postmaster of Cordova, and he entered at once upon the discharge of his duties. He had one rural free delivery route going out from his office. When his successor took charge he returned to his farm.

On December 14, 1882, Mr. Zimmerman married Mahala Smith, born in Bureau county, Ill., daughter of Andrew S. and Sarah (Sells) Smith, natives of New Jersey and Bureau county, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman became the parents of two children: Lorena, married Ed Sidlinger of Port Byron; and Wesley S., at home. Mr. Zimmerman is a Baptist, and lives out in his life the creed he professes. Since 1901, he has been a trustee of the church, succeeding his father in that office. His services to the republican party have been recognized upon more than one occasion, he having served as assessor for two terms, as well as being appointed to his recent office, as postmaster. Since 1905, he has been one of the public library trustees. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, Cordova Lodge No. 33; to the Blue Lodge No. 543 of Cordova, and Chapter No. 18 of Rock Island. ZIMMERMANN, Joseph A., a highly respected citizen of Rock Island, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil war, has lived retired from active life for the past twenty-two years. He was born in Altkirk, France, July 31, 1832, the only son of his parents, who died in France, the father at the age of fifty-five years and the mother five years earlier. Mr. Zimmermann was educated in his native country and came to America in 1854, sailing from Havre-de-Grace and landing in New Orleans, then came up the river to St. Louis and thence to Keokuk, Ia., where he remained seven years, being employed at various kinds of work.

In the spring of 1861 Mr. Zimmermann enlisted in Company H, Fifteenth Missouri Volunteer Infantry, U. S., and part of the time served as a teamster in Sherman's division. He was taken prisoner September 31, 1862, and held at Nashville, Tenn., for one month. He went from there to Louisville, Ky., and was employed at various kinds of labor by the Government, and from there went to New Albany, Ind., and engaged in wood chopping in various places in the vicinity, afterward going to Canada, where he remained for a time. Coming from Canada to Davenport, Ia., he found employment on Government Island, after which he located in Rock Island and held a position as foreman on excavating work for a time and also worked at various other things.

Mr. Zimmermann was married in Rock Island, July 4, 1868, to Mary E. Ruegg, who was born in Switzerland, January 5, 1849. Her parents came to America in 1866, landing in New York and coming direct to Rock Island county, where they engaged in farming. Thirteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Zimmermann, as follows: Joseph R.; William, of Portland, Ore.; John, of Peoria; Fred, of Portland, and Louis Napoleon, Grant, Arthur, Walter, Mary, Mamie, Lillie, Jeanette, at home. They have ten grandchildren. Mr. Zimmermann and family have lived for the past twenty years in their present home at No. 1220 Second street, and have many friends and acquaintances in the neighborhood. Mr. Zimmermann also owns other property in the city and is deeply interested in the progress and welfare of his county and state. In political views he is a progressive.

ZOECKLER, Peter William (deceased), who was for many years a resident of Rock Island, Ill., was highly respected as a public-spirited citizen and honored as a veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Wheeling, W. Va., June 29, 1841, a son of John L. and Mary Zoekler, natives of Germany. The parents came to America in early life and settled at Wheeling, where the father engaged in business as a pork packer, which industry he followed many years. Both he and his wife died in that city. There were many children in the family, but only five now survive: Mrs. Amelia Lerchin, of Denver, Col.; Mrs. Etta Kermen, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. Mary Folks, of St. Louis; Bruno, who conducts a stationery store in Davenport; and Otto, a resident of Nome, Alaska.

Peter William Zoekler was educated in Wheeling and as a young man assisted his father in the packing business. When he was sixteen years of age he went west as far as Pike's Peak, and during his absence from his home his mother died. He returned to Wheeling, but remained only a short time, then came to Davenport and clerked in a hardware store for his brother-in-law. He traveled many years in the interests of the sash and door factory at Davenport, then located in Rock Island, where he was again employed as clerk several years, but returned to Davenport and remained there nine years in the same occupation. Coming back to Rock Island he engaged in the meat business for several years and later traveled for Weyerhaeuser, Denkmann & Company. He was assisting in the factory one day when he was hurt in an accident and died from his injuries sixteen days later. During the Civil war Mr. Zoeckler enlisted from Denver, Colo., in Company I, Third Regiment Volunteer Cavalry, taking part in many engagements.

Mr. Zoeckler was married in Davenport, July 6, 1868, to Matilda Kitchen, a native of Logan, Hocking county, Ohio, and daughter of Isaac and Charlotte M. (Wolfer) Kitchen. Her father was a native of Massachusetts and her mother of Germany. The father was a farmer and in an early day went to Ohio and engaged in farming. He died in Ohio and later the mother came to Rock Island, where she spent the remainder of her life. There were six children in the family, of whom but two now survive: Mrs. Zoeckler and her sister, Mrs. Sarah Newton, a resident also of Rock Island. An uncle of Mrs. Zoeckler, Captain Herman Wolfer, served in the Civil war, and her grandfather was a soldier in the German army and after coming to America served in the Mexican war. Her mother was born on a German battlefield and lived in America during the Mexican and Civil wars. Mrs. Zoeckler's father was employed by the Government as wagonmaster and Mrs. Plunk, who was Mrs. Zoeckler's mother and married the second time, cooked for the officers.

Eight sons and three daughters were born to Mr. Zoeckler and wife, and of these six sons and two daughters now survive: M. Irene, wife of Frank Houseman, of Cheyenne, Wyo., is the oldest; Louis H., at home with his mother; William P., a farmer living near Edgemont, S. Dak.; Benjamin, a resident of Sears, Ill.; Thomas G., living with his mother; George F., of Davenport; Fleming E., of Rock Island; Charlotte, wife of W. E. Tallman, of New York. There are three grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Zoeckler had many personal friends in Rock Island and was a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and of August Wentz Post, G. A. R., of Davenport, Iowa. His wife is a member of the Presbyterian church and interested in various movements for the welfare and improvement of the city. Mr. Zoeckler passed away at his home in Rock Island, November 2, 1888, and his death was a great shock to his family and friends. He was missed from many circles in which he had been active during his life in Rock Island. He left his family in comfortable circumstances and his widow has a pleasant home at 210 Eleventh street and owns desirable city property. Several of her children live near enough so that she is able to see them often and she is surrounded by friends and acquaintances.
