A Twentieth Century City

By Will F. Jordan.

PANA—It is one of the most beautiful and enterprising cities in Central Illinois. Its population numbers seventy-five hundred souls, and it is located upon one of the sweeping prairies of the Empire State of the Central West. It is accessible to the outside world by four of the greatest trunk railway lines of the States—the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis (Big Four); Chicago & Eastern Illinois (Frisco System); Illinois Central, and the Baltimore & Ohio (Southwestern)—making it one of the very best railroad centers in the State of Illinois, and consequently one of the choicest locations for industries, for the reason that its facilities from a shipping point, with its low rates for the transportation of its output of products from agriculture, mining and manufactures are unexcelled by any other city of like population in the United States.

EX-MAYOR H. N. SCHUYLER,
Mayor for Ten Years
And President of the H. N. Schuyler State Bank.

These railroads provide for the accommodation of the traveling public thirty-eight passenger trains each day. The trains are the best in the country, having every convenience for the traveler, and place one in the very quickest touch with the entire Middle West. The equipment of practically every one of these trains is perfect in each detail. No more modern passenger trains pass over the railroad tracks of the country than these thirty-eight trains that run in and out of Pana.

Historians tell us that Pana was settled in 1853 and incorporated under special charter in 1867. Its name is derived from a tribe of Indians who were inhabitants of this section before it became the home of the white man.

In consequence it is one of the older cities in the State of Illinois, most fittingly located, and the cynosure of all who admire a city of its population and unexcelled surroundings.

The City of Pana is located not only upon one of the broadest and prettiest prairies in the Central West, but it is the center of one of the farming communities that are unsurpassed for their fertility. Underlying the city and the surrounding community for a radius of many miles are everlasting beds of the richest bituminous coal to be found in the country. Coal and the agricultural products are the principal industries. The climatic conditions are of the best and conducive to longevity and health. In fact it is a gratification to refer to Pana as a city of distinctions that are all for the best and unexcelled by any other city in the domain of Uncle Sam. These general conditions, advantages and conveniences make Pana a premier industrial and residence city, a city in which it is a pleasure to reside, and where there is opportunity for one to not only live and have his being, but to accumulate that which provides well for all humanity.

The citizenship of Pana is not bested by that of any city of any country on the globe. The residents number elements of progression from Germany, Ireland and France and other countries of the old world, combined with whom are the enterprising Northerner, East-erner, Southerner and Westerner of the States. These create a citizenship of which any community should be proud.

Not only is Pana the central district of one of the greatest agricultural and mining sections of this vast country, furnishing, as it does, employment for hundreds of miners and farm laborers, but it has many industries that are rated among the best of the land. It is the center of population for a farming community which numbers more than seventy-five thousand people and from this the city has a patronizing populace of more than thirty thousand people. The City of Pana is the central point of no less than fifteen cities and towns whose combined population is not less than 30,000.

The city has two of the strongest financial institutions in the United States in the H. N. Schuyler State Bank and the Pana National Bank, the combined capital and resources of which are $325,000.00, with a combined deposit of nearly $2,000,000. An Experimental Agricultural Station is also proposed by the State of Illinois.

SOME INTERESTING PHASES OF LIFE.

By J. A. Reid.

CAPT. JOHN W. KITCHELL,

One of Pana's Most Distinguished Citizens.

His Beneficence and Public Spirit Has Endearred Him to Every Pana Resident and Suburbanite.

THE duties of intellectual mentors and progressive and perpetual business boosters in this city are performed by The Pana Palladium. These watchmen for new industries and desirable investors are on the alert every day in the year, and the men in general charge, the Messrs. Jordan Brothers, send forth every evening a lively messenger to carry to the world daily the advantages and attractions of the City of Pana.

Education in Pana is no myth. Its facilities for teaching the boy or girl from the miner's family are unsurpassed, and the true democracy of the American spirit is nowhere better shown than here where the public schools set every pupil on the same level, giving each a chance at the best. Its beautiful high school building is open to every aspiring boy or girl. The Carnegie Library, with its wealth of literature and abundance of reserve resources can be consulted by every pupil, and the kindergarten, primary and grammar departments in Pana's modern school buildings make education as near the ideal as an American city of 7,500 people possibly can. It has six fine school buildings.

The religious life of a city is usually expressed in the church edifice, which indicates the practical zeal of the attendants. Here in Pana are a number of fine buildings to impress the stranger and centralize the interests of the home people. The First Presbyterian, the First Methodist, streets, doing the usual good work among the young folks. Recently there has been added a capacious swimming pool, available for both boys and girls.

The city has the advantage of both gas and electricity for illumination and power. Electricity is furnished by the Central Illinois Public Service Company, and gas by the People's Gas Company. The novelty of street lighting, the ornamental post light system, has been adopted and works to a charm.

It goes without saying that the supply of coal in this section is unlimited. There are four local mines, the Penwell Coal Mining Company, one of the largest in the State; The Pana, with two mines, and the Smith & Lohr Company, shipping coal to all points of the compass.

The sewerage system is good; and the business streets and many of the residence streets well paved. Three more central residence avenues are provided for in present specifications, keeping up the continuity of improvement.

The fire department is efficient, and the police force is up-to-date, full uniformed, and typical of all American cities.

The telephone system is an efficient servant of the public in Pana. It has over one thousand local telephones in use, and makes connections through its long distance with all the outlying world.

With a far-seeing prescience and a prideful concern in the advancement of every good thing in and about the City of Pana, Captain Kitchell and his wife found a broad avenue last winter for further generosity. Automobiles and trolleys have quickened certain agricultural impulses, and the financial interest which the well-to-do farmer has taken recently in the development of the country highways through familiarity with the auto par-town and country, and weld them together in broader commercial enterprise.

Woman's work in Pana partakes of the variety which the progressive elements of the last few years have developed. The Church associations connected with the leading denominations are zealously engaged in charitable work among the poor, and in a city, made up as Pana is, to a large extent of a foreign-born element, the opportunities for good works are numerous. The Sisters of Charity with unflagging devotion are always engaged in the duties which call them among the Catholic portion of the community more particularly, while the Protestant sisters of every denomination cheerfully and cordially respond to the calls of the poor and needy in all the other walks of the daily life of Pana.

The little homes among the miners of the city speak highly for the women folk among them. They all have their little garden patch for vegetables—their front yards for flowers, and the grass plat, the cottages themselves, and even the decorations outside show the daintiness of the woman's touch. It is owing largely to woman's influence that Pana has the fine Carnegie Library; it is through the same persuasive powers that the new hospital is so soon an assured success; it is through that same, but invisible, influence that its endowment is guaranteed. The woman's energy is at the base of every successful commemoration now of Decoration Day, July Fourth, Columbus Day, and Washington's, Lincoln's and McKinley's birthday observations. They are evident in every business avenue and profession in the city and ready for the exercise of the suffrage which has within the last year been graciously granted them by the great State of Illinois. The advantages of the various up-to-date departments of domestic science, typewriting, telegraphy, bookkeeping and even manual training in the High School are all open to the girls of the city, and Pana is as fully alive to the virtues of these desideratums as any Western or New England city. In music and the arts the girls are pre-eminent in the city as everywhere.

With its elegant schools, churches and homes and with plenty of good water to drink and coal to burn, gas and electricity and all kinds of good things edible about, Pana is a desirable habitation. Its delightfully shaded residence streets near the business portions of the city gives it another good point. And on these business streets good judgment is shown in keeping their buildings in order, creditably painted and desirable as up-to-date trading places. With its ambitions to make its location enticing for new industries and enterprising merchants and professional people is pleasantly

Pana, as the commercial center of so many smaller cities and villages, naturally has a call for the advantages afforded by a commodious hospital. For a number of years the Deaconess Hospital has attended to the requirements of the section with diligence, carefulness and zeal which has made it the object of affectionate pride to every good citizen. But with the increasing growth and expansion of this region has developed a desire for an institution which could take care of all cases of physical disability.

Dr. J. H. Huber, one of the best known public-spirited citizens of Pana, at his death left $20,000 as the nucleus for a fund for a modern hospital which should be open to the people generally—without restriction as to race or religion. This fund has been augmented to such proportions that the Doctor's hopes and wishes are becoming matters of fact.

A Quiet Home

FOR THE SICK AND THE FRIENDLESS.

A Sketch—By J. A. Reid.

PANA, as a mining town and an important railroad center, is peculiarly liable to accidents in its mines and along the railroads. Out of the necessities of its location, and the fact that many of its workers are from the foreign element which is not overrich in this world's goods, grew an institution which has done a fine work in the alleviation of poverty, sickness and the stress of accidents. Established right among the mining element, extremely democratic in all outward expression, it has, under the guidance of Miss Katherine Dockery, the brave little woman who presides over its executive department as superintendent and trained nurse, made a spotless record as a faithful servant of that Lord and Master whose whole mission was to "do good at all times" to "all sorts and conditions of men." It was established in 1908 at the present location, and during the "strike" days was a refuge for women and children, its inception and general conduct being directed principally to relieve and help the unthinking element who fail of sympathy usually when they most need it. Here no creed is recognized, no politics, no nationalities, only the fact that a helping hand is needed. Like the work among the tenements of a great city the one fact paramount is there is a soul and body in distress and despair.

In providing a home of this character every church in the City of Pana, and many of its social clubs, furnished each a room, and its maintenance has come from individual and collective contributions at home and abroad. In emergency and accident cases they always make room, and during their fifteen years of gratuitous service to suffering humanity have cared for and taken in many cases of cancer, tuberculosis and kindred diseases which more pretentious hospitals would refuse. It is a branch of the American Congregational Deaconess Association, and while Pana is to have a new hospital it can never do better work,

Treasurer of the Chautauqua Association,
Pana, Illinois.

IO Capt. John W. Kittell and his estimable wife, Mrs. Mary F. Kittell, the people of Pana are deeply indebted for a number of good things which will give pleasure and profit to the present and future generations. Through their public spirit the city has a beautiful park of forty acres right at the threshold of their business and residential doors. The grounds have been finely laid out and are brilliantly lighted throughout in the evening with electricity. Pure water is furnished by the city in abundant quantities for all purposes—boating, culinary and all incidentals. The lagoon is equipped with a flotilla of row and motor boats, and the accommodations for croquet, tennis and other forms of lawn amusements are generous.

Here every season the Pana Chautauqua Association holds its annual and successful sessions. Organized in 1907 it has been a continual help to the City of Pana in providing a social center for its own people and those of the surrounding cities and counties, and a convenient place for a summer outing, wholesome recreation and enjoyment, physical, intellectual and spiritual. The Auditorium in which indoor entertainments are given is one of the best modern type, rain and wind proof—practically fire-proof—and has a seating capacity of 3,500, with acoustic properties unexcelled. The programmes offered range from grand opera and Shakesperian plays to music of a popular character. Secretary Bryan, Ex-Governor Hadley, Captain Hobson, Opie Reed, Senator Gore and many other distinguished public men and women have spoken from its platform. The high-class of entertainment offered has brought to the Chautauqua and Pana many thousands of visitors annually.

All funds remaining after paying actual expenses of each session go towards beautifying the Park, making it truly a democratic and people's gathering.

The officers of the Association are, J. W. Kitchell, President; Warren Penwell, Vice-President; Dr. John D. Reed, Secretary, and J. E. Reese, Treasurer.

Another important recreation and outing spot in Pana is the Base Ball Park. The "fiends" and "fans" of the national game are as enthusiastic and rabid here as in every other nook and corner of the Union. Its admirers and devotees are found among all classes—both sexes and all ages. The scores of the national games are watched with the same activity and intense interest which characterizes every city, town and hamlet in the country. The small boy even can tell you the fine points of the game, who's ahead, and who the leading pitchers, catchers and batters are in every club, National or American. The city itself has always had one of the strongest teams in the amateur class which has made the Central Illinois circuit.

The team was formerly a member of the Eastern Illinois League, and the games put up by this local club in its contests with the Decatur boys or any other opposing organization furnishes an afternoon's racy enjoyment.

The grounds are within convenient walking distance for the crowd, and the waiting automobiles bring them closer still for the luxurious.

This park affords the opportunity for football and the usual field day sports.

Illinois regiment and was the youngest captain in the army from his State.

Among the men of today Captain J. W. Kittell served in an Illinois regiment; Lawyer McQuigg in an Ohio, and Sergeant August Trumper, one of Pana's representatives at the Gettysburg Reunion recently, was a member of the Twenty-Sixth Wisconsin Cavalry. The present officers and comrades of the Pana Post represented quite a number of the States during their service from '61 to '65. T. W. Marling, the Commander, was a member of the Twenty-Second Indiana; Newton Porter, Senior Vice-Commander, was an Illinois Cavalryman; Daniel Lytle, Junior Vice-Commander, was in the One Hundred and Sixteenth Illinois; G. M. Ludworth, the Chaplain, served in an Illinois; and Comrades Wm. M. Baldwin was a cavalryman in the Second Illinois, Wm. M. Warren in the Fifth Illinois Cavalry, David Thomas was with the Sixteenth Illinois, and F. E. Griffith a Sergeant-Major in an Ohio regiment.

The Woman's Relief Corps embraces over one hundred members. Their work in relieving the sick and helping the poor, supplements efficiently and substantially their diffusion of patriotic ideas on all proper occasions. The President of the Corps is Mrs. Martha Tunison, and Mrs. Frances Webber is the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Susan (Grandma) Glasgow, "hale and hearty," has served as their Chaplain for twenty years continuously.

PANA'S patriotism finds expression in many ways. It has two fine monuments to the boys in blue who have gone on before. The Henry A. Pope G. A. R. Post, which was named for a Pana Major in the United States Volunteers who made a distinguished record in the Civil War and who was killed in Louisiana during Reconstruction Days, represents the men who are left. The active membership numbers fifty men, and those gone on before cover about one hundred and fifty more.

Among the many men of distinction whose records are a matter of pride to Pana, Major P. G. Galvin was one of the leaders; he served with a Missouri regiment. Dr. J. H. Huber, whose philanthropic ideas are finding the finest kind of expression in the new hospital just being built, was a surgeon in an Ohio regiment and served three terms as Post Commander of the Pana Post in his day. Captain Thomas P. Clark was a Wisconsin cavalryman who came to Pana after the strife was over and was for many years a leading citizen. Lieutenant Isaac H. Allison was an Ohioan who was captured at Antietam, exchanged, discharged, re-enlisted and served with credit to the end. Captain A. P. Stover was of an

Pana is finely located to attract trade and traffic as a railroad center, as here the Big Four, the Illinois Central, Chicago & Eastern Illinois and the Baltimore & Ohio give it special accommodations. They have provided fine passenger

The Baltimore & Ohio covers to the northwest, Millersville, Owaneco, with 500, Valma, and Taylorville, the county town, with its 6,000 people. To the southwest, Tower Hill, with its 1,200 people, Lakewood, 200, Cowden, 800, Beecher City, with 400, and Altamont with its 1,500.

The Chicago & Eastern Illinois between Pana and Hillsboro practically parallels the lines of the Big Four to the Southwest covering Ohlman, Nokomis, Witt and Irving. To the northwest it brings into close touch with Pana the town of Findlay, with 1,200 people, and puts it into wholesale commercial sympathy with Sullivan, Arthur, Tuscola and Villa Grove, covering a census estimate of nearly 10,000 more live Americans, and this line also puts the city into direct communication with Danville with its thirty-five thousand people.

AN ELKS CLUB BANQUET, PANA.

The Headquarters of the Club are Cozy and Elegant and the Member.. are All Boosters for the City as Well as the Club.

Clubs

The Elks have a very strong organization in Pana, with a sumptuous lodge room, and a membership of two hundred. The Masons have about four hundred active members, and have recently secured a site for a fine building; the Odd Fellows have their own; the Loyal Order of Moose have a flourishing society, the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen, the Redmen, Daughters of Rebecca, Eastern Star, and the Royal P.O. STAFF. Neighbors are all well represented. The city has two houses devoted to moving picture shows and vaudeville, and Pana is one of the central points of attraction for Barnum & Bailey, Ringling Brothers and the big outside shows in the season. Its fine railroad connections give it additional advantages in many lines.

The Federal Building

Is one of the most important of the many new edifices with which PANA has been blessed recently. It is located on the main thoroughfare, Locust Street, with plenty of open space about it to set it off artistically as a public building should be placed to give it both utility and picturesque effect.

It is commodious inside with all the modern improvements and facilities convenient for expedition and efficiency. It has city and rural free delivery, parcels post, savings bank, and all the little incidentals necessary to meet the exacting requirements of a twentieth century constituency.

JACOB C. METZGER, P.O. STAFF. Buildings like this center the interest and give an impetus to civic pride.

"Always on the Job, Rain or Shine, for City and Country."

Residence of T. J. Vidler, Sherman Street, Pana, Illinois.

Some Elegant Homes

HE beauties of Pana's residential sections are not conspicuous from the windows of a railway car, since its industrial phases are the most noticeable. But taking it on foot, by auto or team, one finds that here are innumerable modern homes with the air of taste and refinement which are only attainable in prosperous and healthy cities. Radiating from Locust street, the fine avenues in all sections are graced with comfortable and elegant homes, and even the moderate dwellings show an appreciation of the virtues of green lawns, good sidewalks, delightful gardens and generous shade trees. The comfortable homes are not confined to any one section, selections for building sites being governed as in all prosperous towns, by taste, convenience of location and resources. The country homes about the suburbs carry the same general air of prosperity as in the city itself. The homesteads, farm yards, orchards, fields and meadows give evidence they are owned and cultivated by a thrifty people.

The Drives

THE DRIVES all about the City of Pana are delightful in the season. By automobile or carriage an outing takes one through a rich farming country where the scenery in itself is charming. The homes show the trend of the section, and whether you go to Oconee, Owaneco, Ohlman, or Tower Hill, Assumption or Shelbyville the good cheer and pleasure derived from a trip is all the same. There are many good short drives about the city, notably to the Reservoir, the Cemetery and to Kitchell Park. Summing up one comes to the conclusion that Central Illinois is certainly a portion of "the promised land."

husbandman in aiding him to intensify his production by proper drainage.

A large agricultural implement and automobile house covers a big section of the country here with a diversified line catering to all kinds of buyers of wagons, tools and autos.

An Ohlman inventor has produced a washing machine which beats Darius Green's flying machine for practical purposes and is a complete success. Another of her most enterprising merchants has a concrete post which is revolutionizing ideas as to utility, durability and looks in farm fences.

OHLMAN, one of the thriving neighbors of Pana, is on the Big Four and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad eight miles away.

It is the center of a rich agricultural and stock raising section, with a healthy constituency made up largely from that sturdy self-reliant German element which has so largely entered into the composition of the modern Illinois and Missouri farmer.

The business centering in the village indicates that the spirit of progression is active here. There is a fine modern bank around which clusters an enterprising group of business men engaged in the grain and feed, lumber and mercantile pursuits. One of the St. Louis dairies has a branch establishment located near. There are three enterprising dealers in live stock, a manufacturer of drainage tile with a business covering a section of the Illinois country not indicated by the limits of Ohlman. The ditching machine used in this connection is almost human in its working and it certainly is a boon to the modern

The town takes its name from Captain Michael Ohlman, who was formerly a commander of one of the Mississippi steamers. During Uncle Sam's troublous times in his service on the big river he made a distinguished record in those days of hot conflict. The Captain still lives at 90 years of age. The country about Ohlman is certainly rich in resources. The combination of sincerity and enterprise which has constituted the working main springs in the development of the section which Captain Ohlman pre-empted shows what can be accomplished when the right men and methods are brought together.

OWANECO, on the B. & O. R.R., nine miles from Pana, is one of the brightest and spiciest of her neighbors. It has a good bank under progressive management, a telephone exchange, the modern electric lighting system, and a goodly array of fine stores catering to 2,500 well-to-do people who make this their nearby trading point. They have good shipping facilities for the produce of the section; a fine agricultural, stock-raising, poultry and dairy country. With its big grain elevators and extensive lumber and coal yard, and the general air of confidence pervading all avenues of trade in the place Owaneco has an inspiring atmosphere for the investigator.

The school building is a handsome modern structure, and the new residence streets have the air of success thoroughly indicated in the homes being put up in the recent years. The Methodist Church is the center of the religious life of the village, and it has an inviting and hospitable appearance. The original stock of Owaneco was largely of Ohio lineage, with

Oconee - Illinois

CONEE, on the Illinois Central, and with three fine highways covering the ordinary requirements of vehicles and automobiles, is seven miles from Pana.

It is a cheerful, inviting little center with a good depot, fine public school building, three churches of which two are right up-to-date in style, and a bank which puts the capping on the place both for commercial convenience and the twentieth-century ambition to have things right at home. Its resources are in the fine country all about it, and the stores and elevators, and the whole aspect is one of prosperity and energy. It has a decided advantage in the matter of location in some ways. Lying in close proximity to Pana as the larger of two neighboring cities it furnishes a good basis for a generous rivalry to be considered its next friend. Its natural position in one corner of Shelby County, with Shelbyville as its court house center for all legal business, this city would apparently be first in its affections. But with the superior facilities for transportation of freight and passengers in its favor Pana is really nearer the heart of Oconee than the county seat. There are three well-traveled highways leading from Oconee to Pana, and these, with the fine service afforded by the Illinois Central, bring these two places into close community of interest. The little town is building up a fine residential section and these three roads which lead to Pana are only a portion of the roads which lead in and out of Oconee. The automobile has not only invaded the town and punctured all the country about, but the local agency which has been established there is furnishing machines for a radius covering something like thirty miles outlying. The new churches and schools and modern homes make it an object of interest to its ambitious neighbors, striving for its business, trade and traffic. The rivalry inspires confidence in their own development, and the progressive element in town are encouraging suitable light industries to look their advantages over when they are considering location. As well as being a fine agricultural center it is the headquarters for a thriving live stock trade, a number of large dealers making this their entrepot for horses, mules, cattle and hogs purchased throughout this section.

homes and residence streets. There are many beautiful residences. Its coal reserves are its main capital, but it has brick and tile works, a large contracting firm whose buildings speak for both their city and themselves; it has two liberally conducted banks, some elegant churches and school buildings, an uncommonly good hotel. They are just erecting a big new high school, the Orphans' Home is a matter of pride, the streets are all well looked after, and the main street has just had a new dress of brick laid upon it, giving the whole town a cordial and welcoming appearance to every well-wisher—inside and out of Assumption. The census gives the town a population of two thousand, but this only indicates as in all such cases merely the people in the corporate limits. is a good looking city with fine location, and some progressive spirits at the helm.

combination of effort among its best men, the town is bound to grow. The spaces available for new industries are many. The equipment of this Telephone Company is right up-to-date, with the latest approved apparatus in every department. The outside construction in the City of Pana is composed of underground and aerial cable, with insulated circuits throughout the entire system. It is the only local system in the city, with about a thousand stations, and is connected directly with the lines of the Central Union, Kinloch, American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and the Interstate Telephone Company.
