PREFACE.

In presenting this volume to the citizens of La Salle County we can only say in our own behalf that we have done all in our power to make it a complete, accurate, reliable and valuable work. No one unacquainted with the details attending the compilation of a work of this character can realize the difficulties to be met and overcome, or the labor necessary to collect and arrange the subject matter. The contents, relating mostly to local matters, are necessarily gathered very slowly; and often there are many conflicting accounts of the same occurrences, which require the utmost care, discernment and judgment on the part of the collector to arrive at the facts. In every instance this has been our purpose; and if in any case we have failed, the failure may be justly attributed to an unavoidable combination of circumstances. While we do not claim perfection for this volume, still, we think, without arrogance or vain boasting, that it approaches as near that standard as any other work of a similar character ever published. The type work is not like that of most publications, large, heavily leaded and spread out so as to cover as many pages as possible, but small and condensed, so as to harmonize with the rendering of the historical matter presented—it being our object to use the fewest words possible.

In procuring the information that goes to make up this volume, it was necessary to employ a number of agents. In selecting these agents, we invariably sought to find men of character and intelligence, to each of whom we gave careful instructions to be particularly cautious in taking down names and dates—to write them legibly, so that printers could not err, and to exercise care in gathering information—yet, among so many agents, gathering such a diversity of matter, writing such a multitude of names and noting down so many dates, it will be very strange if many errors are not discovered. In book-making this has been always so, and will continue to be so as long as time lasts or books, and more especially works of this nature, are made. To avoid as many errors and inaccuracies in names, dates and information as possible, has been a matter of jealous care on the part of the publishers, and they flatter themselves such care has not been without reward.

As it is, the PAST AND PRESENT OF LA SALLE COUNTY is herewith presented to the public, with the ardent hope and belief that it will meet the expectations of those friends and the press who gave us so many and such flattering assurances that our purpose to preserve the history of La Salle County in book form, as well as a biographical directory of the citizens of the county, its war record, etc., etc., that would prove invaluable as a book of reference in days to come, was an appreciated and approved undertaking. To all those friends, to the press, and to the people generally of La Salle County, who have in any way aided us in this undertaking, we return our sincere thanks, assuring them that whatever of merit this book possesses is due in some measure to them—to the interest they manifested in giving information, supplying dates, etc., and directing us to sources of information that to us has been invaluable, as well as for their hearty and liberal subscription patronage bestowed upon the work.

STARVED ROCK.

HISTORY OF ILLINOIS.

The name of this beautiful Prairie State is derived from Illini, a Delaware word signifying Superior Men. It has a French termination, and is a symbol of how the two races—the French and the Indians—were intermixed during the early history of the country.

The appellation was no doubt well applied to the primitive inhabitants of the soil, whose prowess in savage warfare long withstood the combined attacks of the fierce Iroquois on the one side, and the no less savage and relentless Sacs and Foxes on the other. The Illinois were once a powerful confederacy, occupying the most beautiful and fertile region in the great Valley of the Mississippi, which their enemies coveted and struggled long and hard to wrest from them. By the fortunes of war they were diminished in numbers, and finally destroyed. "Starved Rock," on the Illinois River, according to tradition, commemorates their last tragedy, where, it is said, the entire tribe starved rather than surrender.

EARLY DISCOVERIES.

The first European discoveries in Illinois date back over two hundred years. They are a part of that movement which, from the beginning to the middle of the seventeenth century, brought the French Canadian missionaries and fur traders into the Valley of the Mississippi, and which, at a later period, established the civil and ecclesiastical authority of France from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico, and from the foot-hills of the Alleghanies to the Rocky Mountains.

The great river of the West had been discovered by DeSoto, the Spanish conqueror of Florida, three quarters of a century before the French founded Quebec in 1608, but the Spanish left the country a wilderness, without further exploration or settlement within its borders, in which condition it remained until the Mississippi was discovered by the agents of the French Canadian government, Joliet and Marquette, in 1673. These renowned explorers were not the first white visitors to Illinois. In 1671—two years in advance of them—came Nicholas Perrot to Chicago. He had been sent by Talon as an agent of the Canadian government to call a great peace convention of Western Indians at Green Bay, preparatory to the movement for the discovery of the Mississippi. It was deemed a good stroke of policy to secure, as far as possible, the friendship and co-operation of the Indians, far and near, before venturing upon an enterprise which their hostility might render disastrous, and which their friendship and assistance would do so much to make successful; and to this end Perrot was sent to call together in council the tribes throughout the Northwest, and to promise them the commerce and protection of the French government. He accordingly arrived at Green Bay in 1671, and procuring an escort of Pottawattamies, proceeded in a bark canoe upon a visit to the Miamis, at Chicago. Perrot was therefore the first European to set foot upon the soil of Illinois.

Still there were others before Marquette. In 1672, the Jesuit missionaries, Fathers Claude Allouez and Claude Dablon, bore the standard of the Cross from their mission at Green Bay through western Wisconsin and northern Illinois, visiting the Foxes on Fox River, and the Masquoutines and Kickapoos at the mouth of the Milwaukee. These missionaries penetrated on the route afterwards followed by Marquette as far as the Kickapoo village at the head of Lake Winnebago, where Marquette, in his journey, secured guides across the portage to the Wisconsin.

The oft-repeated story of Marquette and Joliet is well known. They were the agents employed by the Canadian government to discover the Mississippi. Marquette was a native of France, born in 1637, a Jesuit priest by education, and a man of simple faith and of great zeal and devotion in extending the Roman Catholic religion among the Indians. Arriving in Canada in 1666, he was sent as a missionary to the far Northwest, and, in 1668, founded a mission at Sault Ste. Marie. The following year he moved to La Pointe, in Lake Superior, where he instructed a branch of the Hurons till 1670, when he removed south, and founded the mission at St. Ignace, on the Straits of Mackinaw. Here he remained, devoting a portion of his time to the study of the Illinois language under a native teacher who had accompanied him to the mission from La Pointe, till he was joined by Joliet in the Spring of 1673. By the way of Green Bay and the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers, they entered the Mississippi, which they explored to the mouth of the Arkansas, and returned by the way of the Illinois and Chicago Rivers to Lake Michigan.

On his way up the Illinois, Marquette visited the great village of the Kaskaskias, near what is now Utica, in the county of LaSalle. The following year he returned and established among them the mission of the Immaculate Virgin Mary, which was the first Jesuit mission founded in Illinois and in the Mississippi Valley. The intervening winter he had spent in a hut which his companions erected on the Chicago River, a few leagues from its mouth. The founding of this mission was the last act of Marquette's life. He died in Michigan, on his way back to Green Bay, May 18, 1675.

FIRST FRENCH OCCUPATION.

The first French occupation of the territory now embraced in Illinois was effected by LaSalle in 1680, seven years after the time of Marquette and Joliet. LaSalle, having constructed a vessel, the "Griffin," above the falls of Niagara, which he sailed to Green Bay, and having passed thence in canoes to the mouth of the St. Joseph River, by which and the Kankakee he reached the Illinois, in January, 1680, erected Fort Crevecœur, at the lower end of Peoria Lake, where the city of Peoria is now situated. The place where this ancient fort stood may still be seen just below the outlet of Peoria Lake. It was destined, however, to a temporary existence. From this point, LaSalle determined to descend the Mississippi to its mouth, but did not accomplish this purpose till two years later—in 1682. Returning to Fort Frontenac for the purpose of getting materials with which to rig his vessel, he left the fort in charge of Touti, his lieutenant, who during his absence was driven off by the Iroquois Indians. These savages had made a raid upon the settlement of the Illinois, and had left nothing in their track but ruin and desolation. Mr. Davidson, in his History of Illinois, gives the following graphic account of the picture that met the eyes of LaSalle and his companions on their return :

"At the great town of the Illinois they were appalled at the scene which opened to their view. No hunter appeared to break its death-like silence with a salutatory whoop of welcome. The plain on which the town had stood was now strewn with charred fragments of lodges, which had so recently swarmed with savage life and hilarity. To render more hideous the picture of desolation, large numbers of skulls had been placed on the upper extremities of lodge-poles which had escaped the devouring flames. In the midst of these horrors was the rude fort of the spoilers, rendered frightful by the same ghastly relics. A near approach showed that the graves had been robbed of their bodies, and swarms of buzzards were discovered glutting their loathsome stomachs on the reeking corruption. To complete the work of destruction, the growing corn of the village had been cut down and burned, while the pits containing the products of previous years, had been rifled and their contents scattered with wanton waste. It was evident the suspected blow of the Iroquois had fallen with relentless fury."

Touti had escaped LaSalle knew not whither. Passing down the lake in search of him and his men, LaSalle discovered that the fort had been destroyed, but the vessel which he had partly constructed was still on the stocks, and but slightly injured. After further fruitless search, failing to find Tonti, he fastened to a tree a painting representing himself and party sitting in a canoe and bearing a pipe of peace, and to the painting attached a letter addressed to Tonti.

Tonti had escaped, and, after untold privations, taken shelter among the Pottawattamies near Green Bay. These were friendly to the French. One of their old chiefs used to say, "There were but three great captains in the world, himself, Tonti and LaSalle."

GENIUS OF LASALLE.

We must now return to LaSalle, whose exploits stand out in such bold relief. He was born in Rouen, France, in 1643. His father was wealthy, but he renounced his patrimony on entering a college of the Jesuits, from which he separated and came to Canada a poor man in 1666. The priests of St. Sulpice, among whom he had a brother, were then the proprietors of Montreal, the nucleus of which was a seminary or convent founded by that order. The Superior granted to LaSalle a large tract of land at LaChine, where he established himself in the fur trade. He was a man of daring genius, and outstripped all his competitors in exploits of travel and commerce with the Indians. In 1669, he visited the headquarters of the great Iroquois Confederacy, at Onondaga, in the heart of New York, and, obtaining guides, explored the Ohio River to the falls at Louisville.

In order to understand the genius of LaSalle, it must be remembered that for many years prior to his time the missionaries and traders were obliged to make their way to the Northwest by the Ottawa River (of Canada) on account of the fierce hostility of the Iroquois along the lower lakes and Niagara River, which entirely closed this latter route to the Upper Lakes. They carried on their commerce chiefly by canoes, paddling them through the Ottawa to Lake Nipissing, carrying them across the portage to French River, and descending that to Lake Huron. This being the route by which they reached the Northwest, accounts for the fact that all the earliest Jesuit missions were established in the neighborhood of the Upper Lakes. LaSalle conceived the grand idea of opening the route by Niagara River and the Lower Lakes to Canadian commerce by sail vessels, connecting it with the navigation of the Mississippi, and thus opening a magnificent water communication from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico. This truly grand and comprehensive purpose seems to have animated him in all his wonderful achievements and the matchless difficulties and hardships he surmounted. As the first step in the accomplishment of this object he established himself on Lake Ontario, and built and garrisoned Fort Frontenac, the site of the present city of Kingston, Canada. Here he obtained a grant of land from the French crown and a body of troops by which he beat back the invading Iroquois and cleared the passage to Niagara Falls. Having by this masterly stroke made it safe to attempt a hitherto untried expedition, his next step, as we have seen, was to advance to the Falls with all his outfit for building a ship with which to sail the lakes. He was successful in this undertaking, though his ultimate purpose was defeated by a strange combination of untoward circumstances. The Jesuits evidently hated LaSalle and plotted against him, because he had abandoned them and co-operated with a rival order. The fur traders were also jealous of his superior success in opening new channels of commerce. At LaChine he had taken the trade of Lake Ontario, which but for his presence there would have gone to Quebec. While they were plodding with their bark canoes through the Ottawa he was constructing sailing vessels to command the trade of the lakes and the Mississippi. These great plans excited the jealousy and envy of the small traders, introduced treason and revolt into the ranks of his own companions, and finally led to the foul assassination by which his great achievements were prematurely ended.

In 1682, LaSalle, having completed his vessel at Peoria, descended the Mississippi to its confluence with the Gulf of Mexico. Erecting a standard on which he inscribed the arms of France, he took formal possession of the whole valley of the mighty river, in the name of Louis XIV., then reigning, in honor of whom he named the country LOUISIANA.

LaSalle then went to France, was appointed Governor, and returned with a fleet and immigrants, for the purpose of planting a colony in Illinois. They arrived in due time in the Gulf of Mexico, but failing to find the mouth of the Mississippi, up which LaSalle intended to sail, his supply ship, with the immigrants, was driven ashore and wrecked on Matagorda Bay. With the fragments of the vessel he constructed a stockade and rude huts on the shore for the protection of the immigrants, calling the post Fort St. Louis. He then made a trip into New Mexico, in search of silver mines, but, meeting with disappointment, returned to find his little colony reduced to forty souls. He then resolved to travel on foot to Illinois, and, starting with his companions, had reached the valley of the Colorado, near the mouth of Trinity river, when he was shot by one of his men. This occurred on the 19th of March, 1687.

Dr. J. W. Foster remarks of him: "Thus fell, not far from the banks of the Trinity, Robert Cavalier de la Salle, one of the grandest characters that ever figured in American history—a man capable of originating the vastest schemes, and endowed with a will and a judgment capable of carrying them to successful results. Had ample facilities been placed by the King of France at his disposal, the result of the colonization of this continent might have been far different from what we now behold."

EARLY SETTLEMENTS.

A temporary settlement was made at Fort St. Louis, or the old Kaskaskia village, on the Illinois River, in what is now LaSalle County, in 1682. In 1690, this was removed, with the mission connected with it, to Kaskaskia, on the river of that name, emptying into the lower Mississippi in St. Clair County. Cahokia was settled about the same time, or at least, both of these settlements began in the year 1690, though it is now pretty well settled that Cahokia is the older place, and ranks as the oldest permanent settlement in Illinois, as well as in the Mississippi Valley. The reason for the removal of the old Kaskaskia settlement and mission, was probably because the dangerous and difficult route by Lake Michigan and the Chicago portage had been almost abandoned, and travelers and traders passed down and up the Mississippi by the Fox and Wisconsin River route. They removed to the vicinity of the Mississippi in order to be in the line of travel from Canada to Louisiana, that is, the lower part of it, for it was all Louisiana then south of the lakes.

During the period of French rule in Louisiana, the population probably never exceeded ten thousand, including whites and blacks. Within that portion of it now included in Indiana, trading posts were established at the principal Miami villages which stood on the head waters of the Maumee, the Wea villages situated at Ouiatenon, on the Wabash, and the Piankeshaw villages at Post Vincennes; all of which were probably visited by French traders and missionaries before the close of the seventeenth century.

In the vast territory claimed by the French, many settlements of considerable importance had sprung up. Biloxi, on Mobile Bay, had been founded by D'Iberville, in 1699; Antoine de Lamotte Cadillac had founded Detroit in 1701; and New Orleans had been founded by Bien-ville, under the auspices of the Mississippi Company, in 1718. In Illinois also, considerable settlements had been made, so that in 1730 they embraced one hundred and forty French families, about six hundred "converted Indians," and many traders and voyageurs. In that portion of the country, on the east side of the Mississippi, there were five distinct settlements, with their respective villages, viz.: Cahokia, near the mouth of Cahokia Creek and about five miles below the present city of St. Louis; St. Philip, about forty-five miles below Cahokia, and four miles above Fort Chartres; Fort Chartres, twelve miles above Kaskaskia; Kaskaskia, situated on the Kaskaskia River, five miles above its confluence with the Mississippi; and Prairie du Rocher, near Fort Chartres. To these must be added St. Genevieve and St. Louis, on the west side of the Mississippi. These, with the exception of St. Louis, are among the oldest French towns in the Mississippi Valley. Kaskaskia, in its best days, was a town of some two or three thousand inhabitants. After it passed from the crown of France its population for many years did not exceed fifteen hundred. Under British rule, in 1773, the population had decreased to four hundred and fifty. As early as 1721, the Jesuits had established a college and a monastery in Kaskaskia.

Fort Chartres was first built under the direction of the Mississippi Company, in 1718, by M. de Boisbrait, a military officer, under command of Bienville. It stood on the east bank of the Mississippi, about eighteen miles below Kaskaskia, and was for some time the headquarters of the military commandants of the district of Illinois.

In the Centennial Oration of Dr. Fowler, delivered at Philadelphia, by appointment of Gov. Beveridge, we find some interesting facts with regard to the State of Illinois, which we appropriate in this history:

In 1682 Illinois became a possession of the French crown, a dependency of Canada, and a part of Louisiana. In 1765 the English flag was run up on old Fort Chartres, and Illinois was counted among the treasures of Great Britain.

In 1779 it was taken from the English by Col. George Rogers Clark. This man was resolute in nature, wise in council, prudent in policy, bold in action, and heroic in danger. Few men who have figured in the history of America are more deserving than this colonel. Nothing short of first-class ability could have rescued Vincennes and all Illinois from the English. And it is not possible to over-estimate the influence of this achievement upon the republic. In 1779 Illinois became a part of Virginia. It was soon known as Illinois County. In 1784 Virginia ceded all this territory to the general government, to be cut into States, to be republican in form, with "the same right of sovereignty, freedom, and independence as the other States."

In 1787 it was the object of the wisest and ablest legislation found in any merely human records. No man can study the secret history of

and not feel that Providence was guiding with sleepless eye these unborn States. The ordinance that on July 13, 1787, finally became the incorporating act, has a most marvelous history. Jefferson had vainly tried to secure a system of government for the northwestern territory. He was an emancipationist of that day, and favored the exclusion of slavery from the territory Virginia had ceded to the general government; but the South voted him down as often as it came up. In 1787, as late as July 10, an organizing act without the anti-slavery clause was pending. This concession to the South was expected to carry it. Congress was in session in New York City. On July 5, Rev. Dr. Manasseh Cutler, of Massachusetts, came into New York to lobby on the northwestern territory. Everything seemed to fall into his hands. Events were ripe.

The state of the public credit, the growing of Southern prejudice, the basis of his mission, his personal character, all combined to complete one of those sudden and marvelous revolutions of public sentiment that once in five or ten centuries are seen to sweep over a country like the breath of the Almighty. Cutler was a graduate of Yale—received his A.M. from Harvard, and his D.D. from Yale. He had studied and taken degrees in the three learned professions, medicine, law, and divinity. He had thus America's best indorsement. He had published a scientific examination of the plants of New England. His name stood second only to that of Franklin as a scientist in America. He was a courtly gentleman of the old style, a man of commanding presence, and of inviting face. The Southern members said they had never seen such a gentleman in the North. He came representing a company that desired to purchase a tract of land now included in Ohio, for the purpose of planting a colony. It was a speculation. Government money was worth eighteen cents on the dollar. This Massachusetts company had collected enough to purchase 1,500,000 acres of land. Other speculators in New York made Dr. Cutler their agent (lobbyist). On the 12th he represented a demand for 5,500,000 acres. This would reduce the national debt. Jefferson and Virginia were regarded as authority concerning the land Virginia had just ceded. Jefferson's policy wanted to provide for the public credit, and this was a good opportunity to do something.

Massachusetts then owned the territory of Maine, which she was crowding on the market. She was opposed to opening the northwestern region. This fired the zeal of Virginia. The South caught the inspiration, and all exalted Dr. Cutler. The English minister invited him to dine with some of the Southern gentlemen. He was the center of interest.

The entire South rallied round him. Massachusetts could not vote against him, because many of the constituents of her members were interested personally in the western speculation. Thus Cutler, making friends with the South, and, doubtless, using all the arts of the lobby, was enabled to command the situation. True to deeper convictions, he dictated one of the most compact and finished documents of wise statesmanship that has ever adorned any human law book. He borrowed from Jefferson the term "Articles of Compact," which, preceding the federal constitution, rose into the most sacred character. He then followed very closely the constitution of Massachusetts, adopted three years before. Its most marked points were:

1. The exclusion of slavery from the territory forever.
2. Provision for public schools, giving one township for a seminary, and every section numbered 16 in each township; that is, one-thirty-sixth of all the land, for public schools.

3. A provision prohibiting the adoption of any constitution or the enactment of any law that should nullify pre-existing contracts.

Be it forever remembered that this compact declared that "Religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall always be encouraged."

Dr. Cutler planted himself on this platform and would not yield. Giving his unqualified declaration that it was that or nothing—that unless they could make the land desirable they did not want it—he took his horse and buggy, and started for the constitutional convention in Philadelphia. On July 13, 1787, the bill was put upon its passage, and was unanimously adopted, every Southern member voting for it, and only one man, Mr. Yates, of New York, voting against it. But as the States voted as States, Yates lost his vote, and the compact was put beyond repeal.

Thus the great States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin—a vast empire, the heart of the great valley—were consecrated to freedom, intelligence, and honesty. Thus the great heart of the nation was prepared for a year and a day and an hour. In the light of these eighty-nine years I affirm that this act was the salvation of the republic and the destruction of slavery. Soon the South saw their great blunder, and tried to repeal the compact. In 1803 Congress referred it to a committee of which John Randolph was chairman. He reported that this ordinance was a compact, and opposed repeal. Thus it stood a rock, in the way of the on-rushing sea of slavery.

With all this timely aid it was, after all, a most desperate and protracted struggle to keep the soil of Illinois sacred to freedom. It was the natural battle-field for the irrepressible conflict. In the southern end of the State slavery preceded the compact. It existed among the old French settlers, and was hard to eradicate. The southern part of the State was settled from the slave States, and this population brought their laws, customs, and institutions with them. A stream of population from the North poured into the northern part of the State. These sections misunderstood and hated each other perfectly. The Southerners regarded the Yankees as a skinning, tricky, penurious race of peddlers, filling the country with tinware, brass clocks, and wooden nutmegs. The Northerner thought of the Southerner as a lean, lank, lazy creature, burrowing in a hut, and rioting in whisky, dirt and ignorance. These causes aided in making the struggle long and bitter. So strong was the sympathy with slavery that, in spite of the ordinance of 1787, and in spite of the deed of cession, it was determined to allow the old French settlers to retain their slaves. Planters from the slave States might bring their slaves, if they would give them a chance to choose freedom or years of service and bondage for their children till they should become thirty years of age. If they chose freedom they must leave the State in sixty days or be sold as fugitives. Servants were whipped for offenses for which white men are fined. Each lash paid forty cents of the fine. A negro ten miles from home without a pass was whipped. These famous laws were imported from the slave States just as they imported laws for the inspection of flax and wool when there was neither in the State.

These Black Laws are now wiped out. A vigorous effort was made to protect slavery in the State Constitution of 1817. It barely failed. It was renewed in 1825, when a convention was asked to make a new constitution. After a hard fight the convention was defeated. But slaves did not disappear from the census of the State until 1850. There were mobs and murders in the interest of slavery. Lovejoy was added to the list of martyrs—a sort of first-fruits of that long life of immortal heroes who saw freedom as the one supreme desire of their souls, and were so enamored of her that they preferred to die rather than survive her.

The population of 12,282 that occupied the territory in A.D. 1800, increased to 45,000 in A.D. 1818, when the State Constitution was adopted, and Illinois took her place in the Union, with a star on the flag and two votes in the Senate.

Shadrach Bond was the first Governor, and in his first message he recommended the construction of the Illinois and Michigan Canal.

The simple economy in those days is seen in the fact that the entire bill for stationery for the first Legislature was only $13.50. Yet this simple body actually enacted a very superior code.

There was no money in the territory before the war of 1812. Deer skins and coon skins were the circulating medium. In 1821, the Legislature ordained a State Bank on the credit of the State. It issued notes in the likeness of bank bills. These notes were made a legal tender for every thing, and the bank was ordered to loan to the people $100 on personal security, and more on mortgages. They actually passed a resolution requesting the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to receive these notes for land. The old French Lieutenant Governor, Col. Menard, put the resolution as follows: "Gentlemen of the Senate: It is moved and seconded dat de notes of dis bank be made land-office money. All in favor of dat motion say aye; all against it say no. It is decided in de affirmative. Now, gentlemen, I bet you one hundred dollar he never be land-office money!" Hard sense, like hard money, is always above par.

This old Frenchman presents a fine figure up against the dark background of most of his nation. They made no progress. They clung to their earliest and simplest implements. They never wore hats or caps

They pulled their blankets over their heads in the winter like the Indians, with whom they freely intermingled.

Demagogism had an early development. One John Grammar (only in name), elected to the Territorial and State Legislatures of 1816 and 1836, invented the policy of opposing every new thing, saying, "If it succeeds, no one will ask who voted against it. If it proves a failure, he could quote its record." In sharp contrast with Grammar was the character of D. P. Cook, after whom the county containing Chicago was named. Such was his transparent integrity and remarkable ability that his will was almost the law of the State. In Congress, a young man, and from a poor State, he was made Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. He was pre-eminent for standing by his committee, regardless of consequences. It was his integrity that elected John Quincy Adams to the Presidency. There were four candidates in 1824, Jackson, Clay, Crawford, and John Quincy Adams. There being no choice by the people, the election was thrown into the House. It was so balanced that it turned on his vote, and that he cast for Adams, electing him; then went home to face the wrath of the Jackson party in Illinois. It cost him all but character and greatness. It is a suggestive comment on the times, that there was no legal interest till 1830. It often reached 150 per cent., usually 50 per cent. Then it was reduced to 12, and now to 10 per cent.

PHYSICAL FEATURES OF THE PRAIRIE STATE.

In area the State has 55,410 square miles of territory. It is about 150 miles wide and 400 miles long, stretching in latitude from Maine to North Carolina. It embraces wide variety of climate. It is tempered on the north by the great inland, saltless, tideless sea, which keeps the thermometer from either extreme. Being a table land, from 600 to 1,600 feet above the level of the sea, one is prepared to find on the health maps, prepared by the general government, an almost clean and perfect record. In freedom from fever and malarial diseases and consumptions, the three deadly enemies of the American Saxon, Illinois, as a State, stands without a superior. She furnishes one of the essential conditions of a great people—sound bodies. I suspect that this fact lies back of that old Delaware word, Illini, superior men.

The great battles of history that have been determinative of dynasties and destinies have been strategical battles, chiefly the question of position. Thermopylæ has been the war-cry of freemen for twenty-four centuries. It only tells how much there may be in position. All this advantage belongs to Illinois. It is in the heart of the greatest valley in the world, the vast region between the mountains—a valley that could feed mankind for one thousand years. It is well on toward the center of the continent. It is in the great temperate belt, in which have been found nearly all the aggressive civilizations of history. It has sixty-five miles of frontage on the head of the lake. With the Mississippi forming the western and southern boundary, with the Ohio running along the southeastern line, with the Illinois River and Canal dividing the State diagonally from the lake to the Lower Mississippi, and with the Rock and Wabash Rivers furnishing altogether 2,000 miles of water-front, connecting with, and running through, in all about 12,000 miles of navigable water.

But this is not all. These waters are made most available by the fact that the lake and the State lie on the ridge running into the great valley from the east. Within cannon-shot of the lake the water runs away from the lake to the Gulf. The lake now empties at both ends, one into the Atlantic and one into the Gulf of Mexico. The lake thus seems to hang over the land. This makes the dockage most serviceable; there are no steep banks to damage it. Both lake and river are made for use.

The climate varies from Portland to Richmond; it favors every product of the continent, including the tropics, with less than half a dozen exceptions. It produces every great nutriment of the world except bananas and rice. It is hardly too much to say that it is the most productive spot known to civilization. With the soil full of bread and the earth full of minerals; with an upper surface of food and an under layer of fuel; with perfect natural drainage, and abundant springs and streams and navigable rivers; half way between the forests of the North and the fruits of the South; within a day's ride of the great deposits of iron, coal, copper, lead, and zinc; containing and controlling the great grain, cattle, pork, and lumber markets of the world, it is not strange that Illinois has the advantage of position.

This advantage has been supplemented by the character of the population. In the early days when Illinois was first admitted to the Union, her population were chiefly from Kentucky and Virginia. But, in the conflict of ideas concerning slavery, a strong tide of emigration came in from the East, and soon changed this composition. In 1870 her non-native population were from colder soils. New York furnished 133,290; Ohio gave 162,623; Pennsylvania sent on 98,352; the entire South gave us only 206,734. In all her cities, and in all her German and Scandinavian and other foreign colonies, Illinois has only about one-fifth of her people of foreign birth.

PROGRESS OF DEVELOPMENT.

One of the greatest elements in the early development of Illinois is the Illinois and Michigan Canal, connecting the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers with the lakes. It was of the utmost importance to the State. It was recommended by Gov. Bond, the first governor, in his first message. In 1821, the Legislature appropriated $10,000 for surveying the route. Two bright young engineers surveyed it, and estimated the cost at $600,000 or $700,000. It finally cost $8,000,000. In 1825, a law was passed to incorporate the Canal Company, but no stock was sold. In 1826, upon the solicitation of Cook, Congress gave 800,000 acres of land on the line of the work. In 1828, another law—commissioners appointed, and work commenced with new survey and new estimates. In 1834–35, George Farquhar made an able report on the whole matter. This was, doubtless, the ablest report ever made to a western legislature, and it became the model for subsequent reports and action. From this the work went on till it was finished in 1848. It cost the State a large amount of money; but it gave to the industries of the State an impetus that pushed it up into the first rank of greatness. It was not built as a speculation any more than a doctor is employed on a speculation. But it has paid into the Treasury of the State an average annual net sum of over $111,000.

Pending the construction of the canal, the land and town-lot fever broke out in the State, in 1834–35. It took on the malignant type in Chicago, lifting the town up into a city. The disease spread over the entire State and adjoining States. It was epidemic. It cut up men's farms without regard to locality, and cut up the purses of the purchasers without regard to consequences. It is estimated that building lots enough were sold in Indiana alone to accommodate every citizen then in the United States.

Towns and cities were exported to the Eastern market by the ship-load. There was no lack of buyers. Every up-ship came freighted with speculators and their money.

This distemper seized upon the Legislature in 1836–37, and left not one to tell the tale. They enacted a system of internal improvement without a parallel in the grandeur of its conception. They ordered the construction of 1,300 miles of railroad, crossing the State in all directions. This was surpassed by the river and canal improvements. There were a few counties not touched by either railroad or river or canal, and those were to be comforted and compensated by the free distribution of $200,000 among them. To inflate this balloon beyond credence it was ordered that work should be commenced on both ends of each of these railroads and rivers, and at each river-crossing, all at the same time. The appropriations for these vast improvements were over $12,000,000, and commissioners were appointed to borrow the money on the credit of the State. Remember that all this was in the early days of railroading, when railroads were luxuries; that the State had whole counties with scarcely a cabin; and that the population of the State was less than 400,000, and you can form some idea of the vigor with which these brave men undertook the work of making a great State. In the light of history I am compelled to say that this was only a premature throb of the power that actually slumbered in the soil of the State. It was Hercules in the cradle.

At this juncture the State Bank loaned its funds largely to Godfrey Gilman & Co., and to other leading houses, for the purpose of drawing trade from St. Louis to Alton. Soon they failed, and took down the bank with them.

In 1840, all hope seemed gone. A population of 480,000 were loaded with a debt of $14,000,000. It had only six small cities, really only towns, namely: Chicago, Alton, Springfield, Quincy, Galena, Nauvoo. This debt was to be cared for when there was not a dollar in the treasury, and when the State had borrowed itself out of all credit, and when there was not good money enough in the hands of all the people to pay the interest of the debt for a single year. Yet, in the presence of all these difficulties, the young State steadily refused to repudiate. Gov. Ford took hold of the problem and solved it, bringing the State through in triumph.

Having touched lightly upon some of the more distinctive points in the history of the development of Illinois, let us next briefly consider the MATERIAL RESOURCES OF THE STATE.

It is a garden four hundred miles long and one hundred and fifty miles wide. Its soil is chiefly a black sandy loam, from six inches to sixty feet thick. On the American bottoms it has been cultivated for one hundred and fifty years without renewal. About the old French towns it has yielded corn for a century and a half without rest or help. It produces nearly everything green in the temperate and tropical zones. She leads all other States in the number of acres actually under plow. Her products from 25,000,000 of acres are incalculable. Her mineral wealth is scarcely second to her agricultural power. She has coal, iron, lead, copper, zinc, many varieties of building stone, fire clay, cuma clay, common brick clay, sand of all kinds, gravel, mineral paint—every thing needed for a high civilization. Left to herself, she has the elements of all greatness. The single item of coal is too vast for an appreciative handling in figures. We can handle it in general terms like algebraical signs, but long before we get up into the millions and billions the human mind drops down from comprehension to mere symbolic apprehension.

When I tell you that nearly four-fifths of the entire State is underlaid with a deposit of coal more than forty feet thick on the average (now estimated, by recent surveys, at seventy feet thick), you can get some idea of its amount, as you do of the amount of the national debt. There it is! 41,000 square miles—one vast mine into which you could put any of the States; in which you could bury scores of European and ancient empires, and have room enough all round to work without knowing that they had been sepulchered there.

Put this vast coal-bed down by the other great coal deposits of the world, and its importance becomes manifest. Great Britain has 12,000 square miles of coal; Spain, 3,000; France, 1,719; Belgium, 578; Illinois about twice as many square miles as all combined. Virginia has 20,000 square miles; Pennsylvania, 16,000; Ohio, 12,000. Illinois has 41,000 square miles. One-seventh of all the known coal on this continent is in Illinois.

Could we sell the coal in this single State for one-seventh of one cent a ton it would pay the national debt. Converted into power, even with the wastage in our common engines, it would do more work than could be done by the entire race, beginning at Adam's wedding and working ten hours a day through all the centuries till the present time, and right on into the future at the same rate for the next 600,000 years.

Great Britain uses enough mechanical power to-day to give to each man, woman, and child in the kingdom the help and service of nineteen untiring servants. No wonder she has leisure and luxuries. No wonder the home of the common artisan has in it more luxuries than could be found in the palace of good old King Arthur. Think, if you can conceive of it, of the vast army of servants that slumber in the soil of Illinois, impatiently awaiting the call of Genius to come forth to minister to our comfort.

At the present rate of consumption England's coal supply will be exhausted in 250 years. When this is gone she must transfer her dominion either to the Indies, or to British America, which I would not resist; or to some other people, which I would regret as a loss to civilization.

COAL IS KING.

At the same rate of consumption (which far exceeds our own) the deposit of coal in Illinois will last 120,000 years. And her kingdom shall be an everlasting kingdom.

Let us turn now from this reserve power to the annual products of the State. We shall not be humiliated in this field. Here we strike the secret of our national credit. Nature provides a market in the constant appetite of the race. Men must eat, and if we can furnish the provisions we can command the treasure. All that a man hath will he give for his life.

According to the last census Illinois produced 30,000,000 of bushels of wheat. That is more wheat than was raised by any other State in the Union. She raised in 1875, 130,000,000 of bushels of corn—twice as much as any other State, and one-sixth of all the corn raised in the United States. She harvested 2,747,000 tons of hay, nearly one-tenth of all the hay in the Republic. It is not generally appreciated, but it is true, that the hay crop of the country is worth more than the cotton crop. The hay of Illinois equals the cotton of Louisiana. Go to Charleston, S. C., and see them peddling handfuls of hay or grass, almost as a curiosity, as we regard Chinese gods or the cryolite of Greenland; drink your coffee and condensed milk; and walk back from the coast for many a league through the sand and burs till you get up into the better atmosphere of the mountains, without seeing a waving meadow or a grazing herd; then you will begin to appreciate the meadows of the Prairie State, where the grass often grows sixteen feet high.

The value of her farm implements is $211,000,000, and the value of her live stock is only second to the great State of New York. in 1875 she had 25,000,000 hogs, and packed 2,113,845, about one-half of all that were packed in the United States. This is no insignificant item. Pork is a growing demand of the old world. Since the laborers of Europe have gotten a taste of our bacon, and we have learned how to pack it dry in boxes, like dry goods, the world has become the market.

The hog is on the march into the future. His nose is ordained to uncover the secrets of dominion, and his feet shall be guided by the star of empire.

Illinois marketed $57,000,000 worth of slaughtered animals—more than any other State, and a seventh of all the States.

Be patient with me, and pardon my pride, and I will give you a list of some of the things in which Illinois excels all other States.

Depth and richness of soil; per cent. of good ground; acres of improved land; large farms—some farms contain from 40,000 to 60,000 acres of cultivated land, 40,000 acres of corn on a single farm; number of farmers; amount of wheat, corn, oats and honey produced; value of animals for slaughter; number of hogs; amount of pork; number of horses—three times as many as Kentucky, the horse State.

Illinois excels all other States in miles of railroads and in miles of postal service, and in money orders sold per annum, and in the amount of lumber sold in her markets.

Illinois is only second in many important matters. This sample list comprises a few of the more important: Permanent school fund (good for a young state); total income for educational purposes; number of publishers of books, maps, papers, etc.; value of farm products and implements, and of live stock; in tons of coal mined.

The shipping of Illinois is only second to New York. Out of one port during the business hours of the season of navigation she sends forth a vessel every ten minutes. This does not include canal boats, which go one every five minutes. No wonder she is only second in number of bankers and brokers or in physicians and surgeons.

She is third in colleges, teachers and schools; cattle, lead, hay, flax, sorghum and beeswax.

She is fourth in population, in children enrolled in public schools, in law schools, in butter, potatoes and carriages.

She is fifth in value of real and personal property, in theological seminaries and colleges exclusively for women, in milk sold, and in boots and shoes manufactured, and in book-binding.

She is only seventh in the production of wood, while she is the twelfth in area. Surely that is well done for the Prairie State. She now has much more wood and growing timber than she had thirty years ago.

A few leading industries will justify emphasis. She manufactures \$205,000,000 worth of goods, which places her well up toward New York and Pennsylvania. The number of her manufacturing establishments increased from 1860 to 1870, 300 per cent.; capital employed increased 350 per cent., and the amount of product increased 400 per cent. She issued 5,500,000 copies of commercial and financial newspapers—only second to New York. She has 6,759 miles of railroad, thus leading all other States, worth \$636,458,000, using 3,245 engines, and 67,712 cars, making a train long enough to cover one-tenth of the entire roads of the State. Her stations are only five miles apart. She carried last year 15,795,000 passengers, an average of $36\frac{1}{2}$ miles, or equal to taking her entire population twice across the State. More than two-thirds of her land is within five miles of a railroad, and less than two per cent. is more than fifteen miles away.

The State has a large financial interest in the Illinois Central railroad. The road was incorporated in 1850, and the State gave each alternate section for six miles on each side, and doubled the price of the remaining land, so keeping herself good. The road received 2,595,000 acres of land, and pays to the State one-seventh of the gross receipts. The State receives this year $350,000, and has received in all about $7,000,000. It is practically the people's road, and it has a most able and gentlemanly management. Add to this the annual receipts from the canal, $111,000, and a large per cent. of the State tax is provided for.

THE RELIGION AND MORALS

of the State keep step with her productions and growth. She was born of the missionary spirit. It was a minister who secured for her the ordinance of 1787, by which she has been saved from slavery, ignorance, and dishonesty. Rev. Mr. Wiley, pastor of a Scotch congregation in Randolph County, petitioned the Constitutional Convention of 1818 to recognize Jesus Christ as king, and the Scriptures as the only necessary guide and book of law. The convention did not act in the case, and the old Covenanters refused to accept citizenship. They never voted until 1824, when the slavery question was submitted to the people; then they all voted against it and cast the determining votes. Conscience has predominated whenever a great moral question has been submitted to the people.

But little mob violence has ever been felt in the State. In 1817 regulators disposed of a band of horse-thieves that infested the territory. The Mormon indignities finally awoke the same spirit. Alton was also the scene of a pro-slavery mob, in which Lovejoy was added to the list of martyrs. The moral sense of the people makes the law supreme, and gives to the State unruffled peace.

With $22,300,000 in church property, and 4,298 church organizations, the State has that divine police, the sleepless patrol of moral ideas, that alone is able to secure perfect safety. Conscience takes the knife from the assassin's hand and the bludgeon from the grasp of the highwayman. We sleep in safety, not because we are behind bolts and bars—these only fence against the innocent; not because a lone officer drowzes on a distant corner of a street; not because a sheriff may call his posse from a remote part of the county; but because conscience guards the very portals of the air and stirs in the deepest recesses of the public mind. This spirit issues within the State 9,500,000 copies of religious papers annually, and receives still more from without. Thus the crime of the State is only one-fourth that of New York and one-half that of Pennsylvania.

Illinois never had but one duel between her own citizens. In Belleville, in 1820, Alphonso Stewart and William Bennett arranged to vindicate injured honor. The seconds agreed to make it a sham, and make them shoot blanks. Stewart was in the secret. Bennett mistrusted something, and, unobserved, slipped a bullet into his gun and killed Stewart. He then fled the State. After two years he was caught, tried, convicted, and, in spite of friends and political aid, was hung. This fixed the code of honor on a Christian basis, and terminated its use in Illinois.

The early preachers were ignorant men, who were accounted eloquent according to the strength of their voices. But they set the style for all public speakers. Lawyers and political speakers followed this rule. Gov.

Ford says: "Nevertheless, these first preachers were of incalculable benefit to the country. They inculcated justice and morality. To them are we indebted for the first Christian character of the Protestant portion of the people."

In education Illinois surpasses her material resources. The ordinance of 1787 consecrated one thirty-sixth of her soil to common schools, and the law of 1818, the first law that went upon her statutes, gave three per cent. of all the rest to EDUCATION INSTEAD OF HIGHWAYS.

The old compact secures this interest forever, and by its yoking morality and intelligence it precludes the legal interference with the Bible in the public schools. With such a start it is natural that we should have 11,050 schools, and that our illiteracy should be less than New York or Pennsylvania, and only about one-half of Massachusetts. We are not to blame for not having more than one-half as many idiots as the great States. These public schools soon made colleges inevitable. The first college, still flourishing, was started in Lebanon in 1828, by the M. E. church, and named after Bishop McKendree. Illinois College, at Jacksonville, supported by the Presbyterians, followed in 1830. In 1832 the Baptists built Shurtleff College, at Alton. Then the Presbyterians built Knox College, at Galesburg, in 1838, and the Episcopalians built Jubilee College, at Peoria, in 1847. After these early years colleges have rained down. A settler could hardly encamp on the prairie but a college would spring up by his wagon. The State now has one very well endowed and equipped university, namely, the Northwestern University, at Evanston, with six colleges, ninety instructors, over 1,000 students, and $1,500,000 endowment.

Rev. J. M. Peck was the first educated Protestant minister in the State. He settled at Rock Spring, in St. Clair County, 1820, and left his impress on the State. Before 1837 only party papers were published, but Mr. Peck published a Gazetteer of Illinois. Soon after John Russell, of Bluffdale, published essays and tales showing genius. Judge James Hall published The Illinois Monthly Magazine with great ability, and an annual called The Western Souvenir, which gave him an enviable fame all over the United States. From these beginnings Illinois has gone on till she has more volumes in public libraries even than Massachusetts, and of the 44,500,000 volumes in all the public libraries of the United States, she has one-thirteenth. In newspapers she stands fourth. Her increase is marvelous. In 1850 she issued 5,000,000 copies; in 1860, 27,590,000; in 1870, 113,140,000. In 1860 she had eighteen colleges and seminaries; in 1870 she had eighty. That is a grand advance for the war decade.

This brings us to a record unsurpassed in the history of any age,

THE WAR RECORD OF ILLINOIS.

I hardly know where to begin, or how to advance, or what to say. I can at best give you only a broken synopsis of her deeds, and you must put them in the order of glory for yourself. Her sons have always been foremost on fields of danger. In 1832-33, at the call of Gov. Reynolds, her sons drove Blackhawk over the Mississippi.

When the Mexican war came, in May, 1846, 8,370 men offered themselves when only 3,720 could be accepted. The fields of Buena Vista and Vera Cruz, and the storming of Cerro Gordo, will carry the glory of Illinois soldiers along after the infamy of the cause they served has been forgotten. But it was reserved till our day for her sons to find a field and cause and foemen that could fitly illustrate their spirit and heroism. Illinois put into her own regiments for the United States government 256,000 men, and into the army through other States enough to swell the number to 290,000. This far exceeds all the soldiers of the federal government in all the war of the revolution. Her total years of service were over 600,000. She enrolled men from eighteen to forty-five years of age when the law of Congress in 1864—the test time—only asked for those from twenty to forty-five. Her enrollment was otherwise excessive. Her people wanted to go, and did not take the pains to correct the enrollment. Thus the basis of fixing the quota was too great, and then the quota itself, at least in the trying time, was far above any other State.

Thus the demand on some counties, as Monroe, for example, took every able-bodied man in the county, and then did not have enough to fill the quota. Moreover, Illinois sent 20,844 men for ninety or one hundred days, for whom no credit was asked. When Mr. Lincoln's attention was called to the inequality of the quota compared with other States, he replied, "The country needs the sacrifice. We must put the whip on the free horse." In spite of all these disadvantages Illinois gave to the country 73,000 years of service above all calls. With one-thirteenth of the population of the loyal States, she sent regularly one-tenth of all the soldiers, and in the peril of the closing calls, when patriots were few and weary, she then sent one-eighth of all that were called for by her loved and honored son in the white house. Her mothers and daughters went into the fields to raise the grain and keep the children together, while the fathers and older sons went to the harvest fields of the world. I knew a father and four sons who agreed that one of them must stay at home; and they pulled straws from a stack to see who might go. The father was left. The next day he came into the camp, saying: "Mother says she can get the crops in, and I am going, too." I know large Methodist churches from which every male member went to the army. Do you want to know what these heroes from Illinois did in the field? Ask any soldier with a good record of his own, who is thus able to judge, and he will tell you that the Illinois men went in to win. It is common history that the greater victories were won in the West. When everything else looked dark Illinois was gaining victories all down the river, and dividing the confederacy. Sherman took with him on his great march forty-five regiments of Illinois infantry, three companies of artillery, and one company of cavalry. He could not avoid

GOING TO THE SEA.

If he had been killed, I doubt not the men would have gone right on. Lincoln answered all rumors of Sherman's defeat with, "It is impossible; there is a mighty sight of fight in 100,000 Western men." Illinois soldiers brought home 300 battle-flags. The first United States flag that floated over Richmond was an Illinois flag. She sent messengers and nurses to every field and hospital, to care for her sick and wounded sons. She said, "These suffering ones are my sons, and I will care for them."

When individuals had given all, then cities and towns came forward with their credit to the extent of many millions, to aid these men and their families.

Illinois gave the country the great general of the war—Ulysses S. Grant—since honored with two terms of the Presidency of the United States.

One other name from Illinois comes up in all minds, embalmed in all hearts, that must have the supreme place in this story of our glory and of our nation's honor; that name is Abraham Lincoln, of Illinois.

The analysis of Mr. Lincoln's character is difficult on account of its symmetry.

In this age we look with admiration at his uncompromising honesty. And well we may, for this saved us. Thousands throughout the length and breadth of our country who knew him only as "Honest Old Abe," voted for him on that account; and wisely did they choose, for no other man could have carried us through the fearful night of the war. When his plans were too vast for our comprehension, and his faith in the cause too sublime for our participation; when it was all night about us, and all dread before us, and all sad and desolate behind us; when not one ray shone upon our cause; when traitors were haughty and exultant at the South, and fierce and blasphemous at the North; when the loyal men here seemed almost in the minority; when the stoutest heart quailed, the bravest cheek paled; when generals were defeating each other for place, and contractors were leeching out the very heart's blood of the prostrate republic: when every thing else had failed us, we looked at this calm, patient man standing like a rock in the storm, and said: "Mr. Lincoln is honest, and we can trust him still." Holding to this single point with the energy of faith and despair we held together, and, under God, he brought us through to victory.

His practical wisdom made him the wonder of all lands. With such certainty did Mr. Lincoln follow causes to their ultimate effects, that his foresight of contingencies seemed almost prophetic.

He is radiant with all the great virtues, and his memory shall shed a glory upon this age that shall fill the eyes of men as they look into history. Other men have excelled him in some point, but, taken at all points, all in all, he stands head and shoulders above every other man of 6,000 years. An administrator, he saved the nation in the perils of unparalleled civil war. A statesman, he justified his measures by their success. A philanthropist, he gave liberty to one race and salvation to another. A moralist, he bowed from the summit of human power to the foot of the Cross, and became a Christian. A mediator, he exercised mercy under the most absolute abeyance to law. A leader, he was no partisan. A commander, he was untainted with blood. A ruler in desperate times, he was unsullied with crime. A man, he has left no word of passion, no thought of malice, no trick of craft, no act of jealousy, no purpose of selfish ambition. Thus perfected, without a model, and without a peer, he was dropped into these troubled years to adorn and embellish all that is good and all that is great in our humanity, and to present to all coming time the representative of the divine idea of free government.

It is not too much to say that away down in the future, when the republic has fallen from its niche in the wall of time; when the great war itself shall have faded out in the distance like a mist on the horizon; when the Anglo-Saxon language shall be spoken only by the tongue of the stranger; then the generations looking this way shall see the great president as the supreme figure in this vortex of history

CHICAGO.

It is impossible in our brief space to give more than a meager sketch of such a city as Chicago, which is in itself the greatest marvel of the Prairie State. This mysterious, majestic, mighty city, born first of water, and next of fire; sown in weakness, and raised in power; planted among the willows of the marsh, and crowned with the glory of the mountains; sleeping on the bosom of the prairie, and rocked on the bosom of the sea; the youngest city of the world, and still the eye of the prairie, as Damascus, the oldest city of the world, is the eye of the desert. With a commerce far exceeding that of Corinth on her isthmus, in the highway to the East; with the defenses of a continent piled around her by the thousand miles, making her far safer than Rome on the banks of the Tiber; with schools eclipsing Alexandria and Athens; with liberties more conspicuous than those of the old republics; with a heroism equal to the first Carthage, and with a sanctity scarcely second to that of Jerusalem—set your thoughts on all this, lifted into the eyes of all men by the miracle of its growth, illuminated by the flame of its fall, and transfigured by the divinity of its resurrection, and you will feel, as I do, the utter impossibility of compassing this subject as it deserves. Some impression of her importance is received from the shock her burning gave to the civilized world.

When the doubt of her calamity was removed, and the horrid fact was accepted, there went a shudder over all cities, and a quiver over all lands. There was scarcely a town in the civilized world that did not shake on the brink of this opening chasm. The flames of our homes reddened all skies. The city was set upon a hill, and could not be hid. All eyes were turned upon it. To have struggled and suffered amid the scenes of its fall is as distinguishing as to have fought at Thermopylæ, or Salamis, or Hastings, or Waterloo, or Bunker Hill.

Its calamity amazed the world, because it was felt to be the common property of mankind.

The early history of the city is full of interest, just as the early history of such a man as Washington or Lincoln becomes public property, and is cherished by every patriot.

Starting with 560 acres in 1833, it embraced and occupied 23,000 acres in 1869, and, having now a population of more than 500,000, it commands general attention.

The first settler—Jean Baptiste Pointe au Sable, a mulatto from the West Indies—came and began trade with the Indians in 1796. John Kinzie became his successor in 1804, in which year Fort Dearborn was erected.

A mere trading-post was kept here from that time till about the time of the Blackhawk war, in 1832. It was not the city. It was merely a cock crowing at midnight. The morning was not yet. In 1833 the settlement about the fort was incorporated as a town. The voters were divided on the propriety of such corporation, twelve voting for it and one against it. Four years later it was incorporated as a city, and embraced 560 acres.

The produce handled in this city is an indication of its power. Grain and flour were imported from the East till as late as 1837. The first exportation by way of experiment was in 1839. Exports exceeded imports first in 1842. The Board of Trade was organized in 1848, but it was so weak that it needed nursing till 1855. Grain was purchased by the wagon-load in the street.

I remember sitting with my father on a load of wheat, in the long line of wagons along Lake street, while the buyers came and untied the bags, and examined the grain, and made their bids. That manner of business had to cease with the day of small things. Now our elevators will hold 15,000,000 bushels of grain. The cash value of the produce handled in a year is $215,000,000, and the produce weighs 7,000,000 tons or 700,000 car loads. This handles thirteen and a half ton each minute, all the year round. One tenth of all the wheat in the United States is handled in Chicago. Even as long ago as 1853 the receipts of grain in Chicago exceeded those of the goodly city of St. Louis, and in 1854 the exports of grain from Chicago exceeded those of New York and doubled those of St. Petersburg, Archangel, or Odessa, the largest grain markets in Europe.

The manufacturing interests of the city are not contemptible. In 1873 manufactories employed 45,000 operatives; in 1876, 60,000. The manufactured product in 1875 was worth $177,000,000.

No estimate of the size and power of Chicago would be adequate that did not put large emphasis on the railroads. Before they came thundering along our streets canals were the hope of our country. But who ever thinks now of traveling by canal packets? In June, 1852, there were only forty miles of railroad connected with the city. The old Galena division of the Northwestern ran out to Elgin. But now, who can count the trains and measure the roads that seek a terminus or connection in this city? The lake stretches away to the north, gathering in to this center all the harvests that might otherwise pass to the north of us. If you will take a map and look at the adjustment of railroads, you will see, first, that Chicago is the great railroad center of the world, as New York is the commercial city of this continent; and, second, that the railroad lines form the iron spokes of a great wheel whose hub is this city. The lake furnishes the only break in the spokes, and this seems simply to have pushed a few spokes together on each shore. See the eighteen trunk lines, exclusive of eastern connections.

Pass round the circle, and view their numbers and extent. There is the great Northwestern, with all its branches, one branch creeping along the lake shore, and so reaching to the north, into the Lake Superior regions, away to the right, and on to the Northern Pacific on the left, swinging around Green Bay for iron and copper and silver, twelve months in the year, and reaching out for the wealth of the great agricultural belt and isothermal line traversed by the Northern Pacific. Another branch, not so far north, feeling for the heart of the Badger State. Another pushing lower down the Mississippi—all these make many connections, and tapping all the vast wheat regions of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and all the regions this side of sunset. There is that elegant road, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, running out a goodly number of branches, and reaping the great fields this side of the Missouri River. I can only mention the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis, our Illinois Central, described elsewhere, and the Chicago & Rock Island. Further around we come to the lines connecting us with all the eastern cities. The Chicago, Indianapolis & St. Louis, the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, and the Michigan Central and Great Western, give us many highways to the seaboard. Thus we reach the Mississippi at five points, from St. Paul to Cairo and the Gulf itself by two routes. We also reach Cincinnati and Baltimore, and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, and New York. North and south run the water courses of the lakes and the rivers, broken just enough at this point to make a pass. Through this, from east to west, run the long lines that stretch from ocean to ocean.

This is the neck of the glass, and the golden sands of commerce must pass into our hands. Altogether we have more than 10,000 miles of railroad, directly tributary to this city, seeking to unload their wealth in our coffers. All these roads have come themselves by the infallible instinct of capital. Not a dollar was ever given by the city to secure one of them, and only a small per cent. of stock taken originally by her citizens, and that taken simply as an investment. Coming in the natural order of events, they will not be easily diverted.

There is still another showing to all this. The connection between New York and San Francisco is by the middle route. This passes inevitably through Chicago. St. Louis wants the Southern Pacific or Kansas Pacific, and pushes it out through Denver, and so on up to Cheyenne. But before the road is fairly under way, the Chicago roads shove out to Kansas City, making even the Kansas Pacific a feeder, and actually leaving St. Louis out in the cold. It is not too much to expect that Dakota, Montana, and Washington Territory will find their great market in Chicago.

But these are not all. Perhaps I had better notice here the ten or fifteen new roads that have just entered, or are just entering, our city. Their names are all that is necessary to give. Chicago & St. Paul, looking up the Red River country to the British possessions; the Chicago, Atlantic & Pacific; the Chicago, Decatur & State Line; the Baltimore & Ohio; the Chicago, Danville & Vincennes; the Chicago & LaSalle Railroad; the Chicago, Pittsburgh & Cincinnati; the Chicago and Canada Southern; the Chicago and Illinois River Railroad. These, with their connections, and with the new connections of the old roads, already in process of erection, give to Chicago not less than 10,000 miles of new tributaries from the richest land on the continent. Thus there will be added to the reserve power, to the capital within reach of this city, not less than $1,000,000,000.

Add to all this transporting power the ships that sail one every nine minutes of the business hours of the season of navigation; add, also, the canal boats that leave one every five minutes during the same time—and you will see something of the business of the city.

THE COMMERCE OF THIS CITY has been leaping along to keep pace with the growth of the country around us. In 1852, our commerce reached the hopeful sum of $20,000,000. In 1870 it reached $400,000,000. In 1871 it was pushed up above $450,000,000. And in 1875 it touched nearly double that.

One-half of our imported goods come directly to Chicago. Grain enough is exported directly from our docks to the old world to employ a semi-weekly line of steamers of 3,000 tons capacity. This branch is not likely to be greatly developed. Even after the great Welland Canal is completed we shall have only fourteen feet of water. The great ocean vessels will continue to control the trade.

The banking capital of Chicago is $24,431,000. Total exchange in 1875, $659,000,000. Her wholesale business in 1875 was $294,000,000. The rate of taxes is less than in any other great city.

The schools of Chicago are unsurpassed in America. Out of a population of 300,000 there were only 186 persons between the ages of six and twenty-one unable to read. This is the best known record.

In 1831 the mail system was condensed into a half-breed, who went on foot to Niles, Mich., once in two weeks, and brought back what papers and news he could find. As late as 1846 there was often only one mail a week. A post-office was established in Chicago in 1833, and the post-master nailed up old boot-legs on one side of his shop to serve as boxes for the nabobs and literary men.

It is an interesting fact in the growth of the young city that in the active life of the business men of that day the mail matter has grown to a daily average of over 6,500 pounds. It speaks equally well for the intelligence of the people and the commercial importance of the place, that the mail matter distributed to the territory immediately tributary to Chicago is seven times greater than that distributed to the territory immediately tributary to St. Louis.

The improvements that have characterized the city are as startling as the city itself. In 1831, Mark Beaubien established a ferry over the river, and put himself under bonds to carry all the citizens free for the privilege of charging strangers. Now there are twenty-four large bridges and two tunnels.

In 1833 the government expended $30,000 on the harbor. Then commenced that series of manœuvres with the river that has made it one of the world's curiosities. It used to wind around in the lower end of the town, and make its way rippling over the sand into the lake at the foot of Madison street. They took it up and put it down where it now is. It was a narrow stream, so narrow that even moderately small crafts had to go up through the willows and cat's tails to the point near Lake street bridge, and back up one of the branches to get room enough in which to turn around.

In 1844 the quagmires in the streets were first pontooned by plank roads, which acted in wet weather as public squirt-guns. Keeping you out of the mud, they compromised by squirting the mud over you. The wooden-block pavements came to Chicago in 1857. In 1840 water was delivered by peddlers in carts or by hand. Then a twenty-five horse-power engine pushed it through hollow or bored logs along the streets till 1854, when it was introduced into the houses by new works. The first fire-engine was used in 1835, and the first steam fire-engine in 1859. Gas was utilized for lighting the city in 1850. The Young Men's Christian Association was organized in 1858, and horse railroads carried them to their work in 1859. The museum was opened in 1863. The alarm telegraph adopted in 1864. The opera-house built in 1865. The city grew from 560 acres in 1833 to 23,000 in 1869. In 1834, the taxes amounted to $48.90, and the trustees of the town borrowed $60 more for opening and improving streets. In 1835, the legislature authorized a loan of $2,000, and the treasurer and street commissioners resigned rather than plunge the town into such a gulf.

Now the city embraces 36 square miles of territory, and has 30 miles of water front, besides the outside harbor of refuge, of 400 acres, inclosed by a crib sea-wall. One-third of the city has been raised up an average of eight feet, giving good pitch to the 263 miles of sewerage. The water of the city is above all competition. It is received through two tunnels extending to a crib in the lake two miles from shore. The closest analysis fails to detect any impurities, and, received 35 feet below the surface, it is always clear and cold. The first tunnel is five feet two inches in diameter and two miles long, and can deliver 50,000,000 of gallons per day. The second tunnel is seven feet in diameter and six miles long, running four miles under the city, and can deliver 100,000,000 of gallons per day. This water is distributed through 410 miles of water-mains.

The three grand engineering exploits of the city are: First, lifting the city up on jack-screws, whole squares at a time, without interrupting the business, thus giving us good drainage; second, running the tunnels under the lake, giving us the best water in the world; and third, the turning the current of the river in its own channel, delivering us from the old abominations, and making decency possible. They redound about equally to the credit of the engineering, to the energy of the people, and to the health of the city.

That which really constitutes the city, its indescribable spirit, its soul, the way it lights up in every feature in the hour of action, has not been touched. In meeting strangers, one is often surprised how some homely women marry so well. Their forms are bad, their gait uneven and awkward, their complexion is dull, their features are misshapen and mismatched, and when we see them there is no beauty that we should desire them. But when once they are aroused on some subject, they put on new proportions. They light up into great power. The real person comes out from its unseemly ambush, and captures us at will. They have power. They have ability to cause things to come to pass. We no longer wonder why they are in such high demand. So it is with our city.

There is no grand scenery except the two seas, one of water, the other of prairie. Nevertheless, there is a spirit about it, a push, a breadth, a power, that soon makes it a place never to be forsaken. One soon ceases to believe in impossibilities. Balaams are the only prophets that are disappointed. The bottom that has been on the point of falling out has been there so long that it has grown fast. It can not fall out. It has all the capital of the world itching to get inside the corporation.

The two great laws that govern the growth and size of cities are, first, the amount of territory for which they are the distributing and receiving points; second, the number of medium or moderate dealers that do this distributing. Monopolists build up themselves, not the cities. They neither eat, wear, nor live in proportion to their business. Both these laws help Chicago.

The tide of trade is eastward—not up or down the map, but across the map. The lake runs up a wingdam for 500 miles to gather in the business. Commerce can not ferry up there for seven months in the year, and the facilities for seven months can do the work for twelve. Then the great region west of us is nearly all good, productive land. Dropping south into the trail of St. Louis, you fall into vast deserts and rocky districts, useful in holding the world together. St. Louis and Cincinnati, instead of rivaling and hurting Chicago, are her greatest sureties of dominion. They are far enough away to give sea-room,—farther off than Paris is from London,—and yet they are near enough to prevent the springing up of any other great city between them.

St. Louis will be helped by the opening of the Mississippi, but also hurt. That will put New Orleans on her feet, and with a railroad running over into Texas and so West, she will tap the streams that now crawl up the Texas and Missouri road. The current is East, not North, and a seaport at New Orleans can not permanently help St. Louis.

Chicago is in the field almost alone, to handle the wealth of one-fourth of the territory of this great republic. This strip of seacoast divides its margins between Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Savannah, or some other great port to be created for the South in the next decade. But Chicago has a dozen empires casting their treasures into her lap. On a bed of coal that can run all the machinery of the world for 500 centuries; in a garden that can feed the race by the thousand years; at the head of the lakes that give her a temperature as a summer resort equaled by no great city in the land; with a climate that insures the health of her citizens; surrounded by all the great deposits of natural wealth in mines and forests and herds, Chicago is the wonder of to-day, and will be the city of the future.

MASSACRE AT FORT DEARBORN.

During the war of 1812, Fort Dearborn became the theater of stirring events. The garrison consisted of fifty-four men under command of Captain Nathan Heald, assisted by Lieutenant Helm (son-in-law of Mrs. Kinzie) and Ensign Ronan. Dr. Voorhees was surgeon. The only residents at the post at that time were the wives of Captain Heald and Lieutenant Helm, and a few of the soldiers, Mr. Kinzie and his family, and a few Canadian voyageurs, with their wives and children. The soldiers and Mr. Kinzie were on most friendly terms with the Pottawattamies and Winnebagos, the principal tribes around them, but they could not win them from their attachment to the British.

One evening in April, 1812, Mr. Kinzie sat playing on his violin and his children were dancing to the music, when Mrs. Kinzie came rushing into the house, pale with terror, and exclaiming: "The Indians! the Indians!" "What? Where?" eagerly inquired Mr. Kinzie. "Up at Lee's, killing and scalping," answered the frightened mother, who, when the alarm was given, was attending Mrs. Barnes (just confined) living not far off. Mr. Kinzie and his family crossed the river and took refuge in the fort, to which place Mrs. Barnes and her infant not a day old were safely conveyed. The rest of the inhabitants took shelter in the fort. This alarm was caused by a scalping party of Winnebagos, who hovered about the fort several days, when they disappeared, and for several weeks the inhabitants were undisturbed.

On the 7th of August, 1812, General Hull, at Detroit, sent orders to Captain Heald to evacuate Fort Dearborn, and to distribute all the United States property to the Indians in the neighborhood—a most insane order. The Pottawattamie chief, who brought the dispatch, had more wisdom than the commanding general. He advised Captain Heald not to make the distribution. Said he: "Leave the fort and stores as they are, and let the Indians make distribution for themselves; and while they are engaged in the business, the white people may escape to Fort Wayne."

Captain Heald held a council with the Indians on the afternoon of the 12th, in which his officers refused to join, for they had been informed that treachery was designed—that the Indians intended to murder the white people in the council, and then destroy those in the fort. Captain Heald, however, took the precaution to open a port-hole displaying a cannon pointing directly upon the council, and by that means saved his life.

Mr. Kinzie, who knew the Indians well, begged Captain Heald not to confide in their promises, nor distribute the arms and munitions among them, for it would only put power into their hands to destroy the whites. Acting upon this advice, Heald resolved to withhold the munitions of war; and on the night of the 13th, after the distribution of the other property had been made, the powder, ball and liquors were thrown into the river, the muskets broken up and destroyed.

Black Partridge, a friendly chief, came to Captain Heald, and said: "Linden birds have been singing in my ears to-day: be careful on the march you are going to take." On that dark night vigilant Indians had crept near the fort and discovered the destruction of their promised booty going on within. The next morning the powder was seen floating on the surface of the river. The savages were exasperated and made loud complaints and threats.

On the following day when preparations were making to leave the fort, and all the inmates were deeply impressed with a sense of impending danger, Capt. Wells, an uncle of Mrs. Heald, was discovered upon the Indian trail among the sand-hills on the borders of the lake, not far distant, with a band of mounted Miamis, of whose tribe he was chief, having been adopted by the famous Miami warrior, Little Turtle. When news of Hull's surrender reached Fort Wayne, he had started with this force to assist Heald in defending Fort Dearborn. He was too late. Every means for its defense had been destroyed the night before, and arrangements were made for leaving the fort on the morning of the 15th.

It was a warm bright morning in the middle of August. Indications were positive that the savages intended to murder the white people; and when they moved out of the southern gate of the fort, the march was like a funeral procession. The band, feeling the solemnity of the occasion, struck up the Dead March in Saul.

Capt. Wells, who had blackened his face with gun-powder in token of his fate, took the lead with his band of Miamis, followed by Capt. Heald, with his wife by his side on horseback. Mr. Kinzie hoped by his personal influence to avert the impending blow, and therefore accompanied them, leaving his family in a boat in charge of a friendly Indian, to be taken to his trading station at the site of Niles, Michigan, in the event of his death.

The procession moved slowly along the lake shore till they reached the sand-hills between the prairie and the beach, when the Pottawattamie escort, under the leadership of Blackbird, filed to the right, placing those hills between them and the white people. Wells, with his Miamis, had kept in the advance. They suddenly came rushing back, Wells exclaiming, "They are about to attack us; form instantly." These words were quickly followed by a storm of bullets, which came whistling over the little hills which the treacherous savages had made the covert for their murderous attack. The white troops charged upon the Indians, drove them back to the prairie, and then the battle was waged between fifty-four soldiers, twelve civilians and three or four women (the cowardly Miamis having fled at the outset) against five hundred Indian warriors. The white people, hopeless, resolved to sell their lives as dearly as possible. Ensign Ronan wielded his weapon vigorously, even after falling upon his knees weak from the loss of blood. Capt. Wells, who was by the side of his niece, Mrs. Heald, when the conflict began, behaved with the greatest coolness and courage. He said to her, "We have not the slightest chance for life. We must part to meet no more in this world. God bless you." And then he dashed forward. Seeing a young warrior, painted like a demon, climb into a wagon in which were twelve children, and tomahawk them all, he cried out, unmindful of his personal danger, "If that is your game, butchering women and children, I will kill too." He spurred his horse towards the Indian camp, where they had left their squaws and papooses, hotly pursued by swift-footed young warriors, who sent bullets whistling after him. One of these killed his horse and wounded him severely in the leg. With a yell the young braves rushed to make him their prisoner and reserve him for torture. He resolved not to be made a captive, and by the use of the most provoking epithets tried to induce them to kill him instantly. He called a fiery young chief a squaw, when the enraged warrior killed Wells instantly with his tomahawk, jumped upon his body, cut out his heart, and ate a portion of the warm morsel with savage delight!

In this fearful combat women bore a conspicuous part. Mrs. Heald was an excellent equestrian and an expert in the use of the rifle. She fought the savages bravely, receiving several severe wounds. Though faint from the loss of blood, she managed to keep her saddle. A savage raised his tomahawk to kill her, when she looked him full in the face, and with a sweet smile and in a gentle voice said, in his own language, "Surely you will not kill a squaw!" The arm of the savage fell, and the life of the heroic woman was saved.

Mrs. Helm, the step-daughter of Mr. Kinzie, had an encounter with a stout Indian, who attempted to tomahawk her. Springing to one side, she received the glancing blow on her shoulder, and at the same instant seized the savage round the neck with her arms and endeavored to get hold of his scalping knife, which hung in a sheath at his breast. While she was thus struggling she was dragged from her antagonist by another powerful Indian, who bore her, in spite of her struggles, to the margin of the lake and plunged her in. To her astonishment she was held by him so that she would not drown, and she soon perceived that she was in the hands of the friendly Black Partridge, who had saved her life.

The wife of Sergeant Holt, a large and powerful woman, behaved as bravely as an Amazon. She rode a fine, high-spirited horse, which the Indians coveted, and several of them attacked her with the butts of their guns, for the purpose of dismounting her; but she used the sword which she had snatched from her disabled husband so skillfully that she foiled them; and, suddenly wheeling her horse, she dashed over the prairie, followed by the savages shouting, "The brave woman! the brave woman! Don't hurt her!" They finally overtook her, and while she was fighting them in front, a powerful savage came up behind her, seized her by the neck and dragged her to the ground. Horse and woman were made captives. Mrs. Holt was a long time a captive among the Indians, but was afterwards ransomed.

In this sharp conflict two-thirds of the white people were slain and wounded, and all their horses, baggage and provision were lost. Only twenty-eight straggling men now remained to fight five hundred Indians rendered furious by the sight of blood. They succeeded in breaking through the ranks of the murderers and gaining a slight eminence on the prairie near the Oak Woods. The Indians did not pursue, but gathered on their flanks, while the chiefs held a consultation on the sand-hills, and showed signs of willingness to parley. It would have been madness on the part of the whites to renew the fight; and so Capt. Heald went forward and met Blackbird on the open prairie, where terms of surrender were soon agreed upon. It was arranged that the white people should give up their arms to Blackbird, and that the survivors should become prisoners of war, to be exchanged for ransoms as soon as practicable. With this understanding captives and captors started for the Indian camp near the fort, to which Mrs. Helm had been taken bleeding and suffering by Black Partridge, and had met her step-father and learned that her husband was safe.

A new scene of horror was now opened at the Indian camp. The wounded, not being included in the terms of surrender, as it was interpreted by the Indians, and the British general, Proctor, having offered a liberal bounty for American scalps, delivered at Malden, nearly all the wounded men were killed and scalped, and the price of the trophies was afterwards paid by the British government.

As the affidavit has to be made before the justice, and all other steps as to appraisement, etc., are before him, who is familiar therewith, they are therefore omitted here.

Any person taking up an estray at any other place than about or upon his farm or residence, or without complying with the law, shall forfeit and pay a fine of ten dollars with costs.

ADOPTION OF CHILDREN.

Children may be adopted by any resident of this state, by filing a petition in the Circuit or County Court of the county in which he resides, asking leave to do so, and if desired may ask that the name of the child be changed. Such petition, if made by a person having a husband or wife, will not be granted, unless the husband or wife joins therein, as the adoption must be by them jointly.

The petition shall state name, sex, and age of the child, and the new name, if it is desired to change the name. Also the name and residence of the parents of the child, if known, and of the guardian, if any, and whether the parents or guardians consent to the adoption.

If the child is of the age of fourteen years or upwards, the adoption can not be made without its consent.

SURVEYORS AND SURVEYS.

There is in every county elected a surveyor known as county surveyor, who has power to appoint deputies, for whose official acts he is responsible. It is the duty of the county surveyor, either by himself or his deputy, to make all surveys that he may be called upon to make within his county as soon as may be after application is made. The necessary chainmen and other assistance must be employed by the person requiring the same to be done, and to be by him paid, unless otherwise agreed; but the chainmen must be disinterested persons and approved by the surveyor and sworn by him to measure justly and impartially.

The County Board in each county is required by law to provide a copy of the United States field notes and plats of their surveys of the lands in the county to be kept in the recorder's office subject to examination by the public, and the county surveyor is required to make his surveys in conformity to said notes, plats and the laws of the United States governing such matters. The surveyor is also required to keep a record of all surveys made by him, which shall be subject to inspection by any one interested, and shall be delivered up to his successor in office. A certified copy of the said surveyor's record shall be prima facie evidence of its contents.

The fees of county surveyors are six dollars per day. The county surveyor is also ex officio inspector of mines, and as such, assisted by some practical miner selected by him, shall once each year inspect all the mines in the county, for which they shall each receive such compensation as may be fixed by the County Board, not exceeding $5 a day, to be paid out of the county treasury.

ROADS AND BRIDGES.

Where practicable from the nature of the ground, persons traveling in any kind of vehicle, must turn to the right of the center of the road, so as to permit each carriage to pass without interfering with each other. The penalty for a violation of this provision is $5 for every offense, to be recovered by the party injured; but to recover, there must have occurred some injury to person or property resulting from the violation. The owners of any carriage traveling upon any road in this State for the conveyance of passengers who shall employ or continue in his employment as driver any person who is addicted to drunkenness, or the excessive use of spiritous liquors, after he has had notice of the same, shall forfeit, at the rate of $5 per day, and if any driver while actually engaged in driving any such carriage, shall be guilty of intoxication to such a degree as to endanger the safety of passengers, it shall be the duty of the owner, on receiving written notice of the fact, signed by one of the passengers, and certified by him on oath, forthwith to discharge such driver. If such owner shall have such driver in his employ within three months after such notice, he is liable for $5 per day for the time he shall keep said driver in his employment after receiving such notice.

Persons driving any carriage on any public highway are prohibited from running their horses upon any occasion under a penalty of a fine not exceeding $10, or imprisonment not exceeding sixty days, at the discretion of the court. Horses attached to any carriage used to convey passengers for hire must be properly hitched or the lines placed in the hands of some other person before the driver leaves them for any purpose. For violation of this provision each driver shall forfeit twenty dollars, to be recovered by action, to be commenced within six months. It is understood by the term carriage herein to mean any carriage or vehicle used for the transportation of passengers or goods or either of them.

The commissioners of highways in the different towns have the care and superintendence of highways and bridges therein. They have all the powers necessary to lay out, vacate, regulate and repair all roads, build and repair bridges. In addition to the above, it is their duty to erect and keep in repair at the forks or crossing-place of the most important roads post and guide boards with plain inscriptions, giving directions and distances to the most noted places to which such road may lead; also to make provisions to prevent thistles, burdock, and cockle burrs, mustard, yellow dock, Indian mallow and jimson weed from seeding, and to extirpate the same as far as practicable, and to prevent all rank growth of vegetation on the public highways so far as the same may obstruct public travel, and it is in their discretion to erect watering places for public use for watering teams at such points as may be deemed advisable.

The Commissioners, on or before the 1st day of May of each year, shall make out and deliver to their treasurer a list of all able-bodied men in their town, excepting paupers, idiots, lunatics, and such others as are exempt by law, and assess against each the sum of two dollars as a poll tax for highway purposes. Within thirty days after such list is delivered they shall cause a written or printed notice to be given to each person so assessed, notifying him of the time when and place where such tax must be paid, or its equivalent in labor performed; they may contract with persons owing such poll tax to perform a certain amount of labor on any road or bridge in payment of the same, and if such tax is not paid nor labor performed by the first Monday of July of such year, or within ten days after notice is given after that time, they shall bring suit therefor against such person before a justice of the peace, who shall hear and determine the case according to law for the offense complained of, and shall forthwith issue an execution, directed to any constable of the county where the delinquent shall reside, who shall forthwith collect the moneys therein mentioned.

The Commissioners of Highways of each town shall annually ascertain, as near as practicable, how much money must be raised by tax on real and personal property for the making and repairing of roads, only, to any amount they may deem necessary, not exceeding forty cents on each one hundred dollars' worth, as valued on the assessment roll of the previous year. The tax so levied on property lying within an incorporated village, town or city, shall be paid over to the corporate authorities of such town, village or city. Commissioners shall receive $1.50 for each day necessarily employed in the discharge of their duty.

Overseers. At the first meeting the Commissioners shall choose one of their number to act General Overseer of Highways in their township, whose duty it shall be to take charge of and safely keep all tools, implements and machinery belonging to said town, and shall, by the direction of the Board, have general supervision of all roads and bridges in their town.

As all township and county officers are familiar with their duties, it is only intended to give the points of the law that the public should be familiar with. The manner of laying out, altering or vacating roads, etc., will not be here stated, as it would require more space than is contemplated in a work of this kind. It is sufficient to state that, the first step is by petition, addressed to the Commissioners, setting out what is prayed for, giving the names of the owners of lands if known, if not known so state, over which the road is to pass, giving the general course, its place of beginning, and where it terminates. It requires not less than twelve freeholders residing within three miles of the road who shall sign the petition. Public roads must not be less than fifty feet wide, nor more than sixty feet wide. Roads not exceeding two miles in length, if petitioned for, may be laid out, not less than forty feet. Private roads for private and public use, may be laid out of the width of three rods, on petition of the person directly interested; the damage occasioned thereby shall be paid by the premises benefited thereby, and before the road is opened. If not opened in two years, the order shall be considered rescinded. Commissioners in their discretion may permit persons who live on or have private roads, to work out their road tax thereon. Public roads must be opened in five days from date of filing order of location, or be deemed vacated.

DRAINAGE.

Whenever one or more owners or occupants of land desire to construct a drain or ditch across the land of others for agricultural, sanitary or mining purposes, the proceedings are as follows:

File a petition in the Circuit or County Court of the county in which the proposed ditch or drain is to be constructed, setting forth the necessity for the same, with a description of its proposed starting point, route and terminus, and if it shall be necessary for the drainage of the land or coal mines or for sanitary purposes, that a drain, ditch, levee or similar work be constructed, a description of the same. It shall also set forth the names of all persons owning the land over which such drain or ditch shall be constructed, or if unknown stating that fact.

No private property shall be taken or damaged for the purpose of constructing a ditch, drain or levee, without compensation, if claimed by the owner, the same to be ascertained by a jury; but if the construction of such ditch, drain or levee shall be a benefit to the owner, the same shall be a set off against such compensation.

If the proceedings seek to affect the property of a minor, lunatic or married woman, the guardian, conservator or husband of the same shall be made party defendant. The petition may be amended and parties made defendants at any time when it is necessary to a fair trial.

When the petition is presented to the judge, he shall note thereon when he will hear the same, and order the issuance of summonses and the publication of notice to each non-resident or unknown defendant.

The petition may be heard by such judge in vacation as well as in term time. Upon the trial, the jury shall ascertain the just compensation to each owner of the property sought to be damaged by the construction of such ditch, drain or levee, and truly report the same.

As it is only contemplated in a work of this kind to give an abstract of the laws, and as the parties who have in charge the execution of the further proceedings are likely to be familiar with the requirements of the statute, the necessary details are not here inserted.

WOLF SCALPS.

The County Board of any county in this State may hereafter allow such bounty on wolf scalps as the board may deem reasonable.

Any person claiming a bounty shall produce the scalp or scalps with the ears thereon, within sixty days after the wolf or wolves shall have been caught, to the Clerk of the County Board, who shall administer to said person the following oath or affirmation, to-wit: "You do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be), that the scalp or scalps here produced by you was taken from a wolf or wolves killed and first captured by yourself within the limits of this county, and within the sixty days last past."

CONVEYANCES.

When the reversion expectant on a lease of any tenements or hereditaments of any tenure shall be surrendered or merged, the estate which shall for the time being confer as against the tenant under the same lease the next vested right to the same tenements or hereditaments, shall, to the extent and for the purpose of preserving such incidents to and obligations on the same reversion, as but for the surrender or merger thereof, would have subsisted, be deemed the reversion expectant on the same lease.

PAUPERS.

Every poor person who shall be unable to earn a livelihood in consequence of any bodily infirmity, idiocy, lunacy or unavoidable cause, shall be supported by the father, grand-father, mother, grand-mother, children, grand-children, brothers or sisters of such poor person, if they or either of them be of sufficient ability; but if any of such dependent class shall have become so from intemperance or other bad conduct, they shall not be entitled to support from any relation except parent or child.

The children shall first be called on to support their parents, if they are able; but if not, the parents of such poor person shall then be called on, if of sufficient ability; and if there be no parents or children able, then the brothers and sisters of such dependent person shall be called upon; and if there be no brothers or sisters of sufficient ability, the grand-children of such person shall next be called on; and if they are not able, then the grand-parents. Married females, while their husbands live, shall not be liable to contribute for the support of their poor relations except out of their separate property. It is the duty of the state's (county) attorney, to make complaint to the County Court of his county against all the relatives of such paupers in this state liable to his support and prosecute the same. In case the state's attorney neglects, or refuses, to complain in such cases, then it is the duty of the overseer of the poor to do so. The person called upon to contribute shall have at least ten days' notice of such application by summons. The court has the power to determine the kind of support, depending upon the circumstances of the parties, and may also order two or more of the different degrees to maintain such poor person, and prescribe the proportion of each, according to their ability. The court may specify the time for which the relative shall contribute—in fact has control over the entire subject matter, with power to enforce its orders. Every county (except those in which the poor are supported by the towns, and in such cases the towns are liable) is required to relieve and support all poor and indigent persons lawfully resident therein. Residence means the actual residence of the party, or the place where he was employed; or in case he was in no employment, then it shall be the place where he made his home. When any person becomes chargeable as a pauper in any county or town who did not reside at the commencement of six months immediately preceding his becoming so, but did at that time reside in some other county or town in this state, then the county or town, as the case may be, becomes liable for the expense of taking care of such person until removed, and it is the duty of the overseer to notify the proper authorities of the fact. If any person shall bring and leave any pauper in any county in this state where such pauper had no legal residence, knowing him to be such, he is liable to a fine of $100. In counties under township organization, the supervisors in each town are ex-officio overseers of the poor. The overseers of the poor act under the directions of the County Board in taking care of the poor and granting of temporary relief; also, providing for non-resident persons not paupers who may be taken sick and not able to pay their way, and in case of death cause such person to be decently buried.

The residence of the inmates of poorhouses and other charitable institutions for voting purposes is their former place of abode.

FENCES.

In counties under township organization, the town assessor and commissioner of highways are the fence-viewers in their respective towns. In other counties the County Board appoints three in each precinct annually. A lawful fence is four and one-half feet high, in good repair, consisting of rails, timber, boards, stone, hedges, or whatever the fence-viewers of the town or precinct where the same shall lie, shall consider equivalent thereto, but in counties under township organization the annual town meeting may establish any other kind of fence as such, or the County Board in other counties may do the same. Division fences shall be made and maintained in just proportion by the adjoining owners, except when the owner shall choose to let his land lie open, but after a division fence is built by agreement or otherwise, neither party can remove his part of such fence so long as he may crop or use such land for farm purposes, or without giving the other party one year's notice in writing of his intention to remove his portion. When any person shall enclose his land upon the enclosure of another, he shall refund the owner of the adjoining lands a just proportion of the value at that time of such fence. The value of fence and the just proportion to be paid or built and maintained by each is to be ascertained by two fence-viewers in the town or precinct. Such fence-viewers have power to settle all disputes between different owners as to fences built or to be built, as well as to repairs to be made. Each party chooses one of the viewers, but if the other party neglects, after eight days' notice in writing, to make his choice, then the other party may select both. It is sufficient to notify the tenant or party in possession, when the owner is not a resident of the town or precinct. The two fence-viewers chosen, after viewing the premises, shall hear the statements of the parties, in case they can't agree, they shall select another fence-viewer to act with them, and the decision of any two of them is final. The decision must be reduced to writing, and should plainly set out description of fence and all matters settled by them, and must be filed in the office of the town clerk in counties under township organization, and in other counties with the county clerk.

Where any person is liable to contribute to the erection or the repairing of a division fence, neglects or refuses so to do, the party injured, after giving sixty days notice in writing when a fence is to be erected, or ten days when it is only repairs, may proceed to have the work done at the expense of the party whose duty it is to do it, to be recovered from him with costs of suit, and the party so neglecting shall also be liable to the party injured for all damages accruing from such neglect or refusal, to be determined by any two fence-viewers selected as before provided, the appraisement to be reduced to writing and signed.

Where a person shall conclude to remove his part of a division fence, and let his land lie open, and having given the year's notice required, the adjoining owner may cause the value of said fence to be ascertained by fence-viewers as before provided, and on payment or tender of the amount of such valuation to the owner, it shall prevent the removal. A party removing a division fence without notice is liable for the damages accruing thereby.

Where a fence has been built on the land of another through mistake, the owner may enter upon such premises and remove his fence and material within six months after the division line has been ascertained. Where the material to build such a fence has been taken from the land on which it was built, then before it can be removed, the person claiming must first pay for such material to the owner of the land from which it was taken, nor shall such a fence be removed at a time when the removal will throw open or expose the crops of the other party; a reasonable time must be given beyond the six months to remove crops.

The compensation of fence-viewers is one dollar and fifty cents a day each, to be paid in the first instance by the party calling them, but in the end all expenses, including amount charged by the fence-viewers, must be paid equally by the parties, except in cases where a party neglects or refuses to make or maintain a just proportion of a division fence, when the party in default shall pay them.

DAMAGES FROM TRESPASS.

Where stock of any kind breaks into any person's enclosure, the fence being good and sufficient, the owner is liable for the damage done; but where the damage is done by stock running at large, contrary to law, the owner is liable where there is not such a fence. Where stock is found trespassing on the enclosure of another as aforesaid, the owner or occupier of the premises may take possession of such stock and keep the same until damages, with reasonable charges for keeping and feeding and all costs of suit, are paid. Any person taking or rescuing such stock so held without his consent, shall be liable to a fine of not less than three nor more than five dollars for each animal rescued, to be recovered by suit before a justice of the peace for the use of the school fund. Within twenty-four hours after taking such animal into his possession, the person taking it up must give notice of the fact to the owner, if known, or if unknown, notices must be posted in some public place near the premises.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

The owner of lands, or his legal representatives, can sue for and recover rent therefor, in any of the following cases:

First. When rent is due and in arrears on a lease for life or lives.

Second. When lands are held and occupied by any person without any special agreement for rent.

Third. When possession is obtained under an agreement, written or verbal, for the purchase of the premises and before deed given, the right to possession is terminated by forfeiture on con-compliance with the agreement, and possession is wrongfully refused or neglected to be given upon demand made in writing by the party entitled thereto. Provided that all payments made by the vendee or his representatives or assigns, may be set off against the rent.

Fourth. When land has been sold upon a judgment or a decree of court, when the party to such judgment or decree, or person holding under him, wrongfully refuses, or neglects, to surrender possession of the same, after demand in writing by the person entitled to the possession.

Fifth. When the lands have been sold upon a mortgage or trust deed, and the mortgagor or grantor or person holding under him, wrongfully refuses or neglects to surrender possession of the same, after demand in writing by the person entitled to the possession.

If any tenant, or any person who shall come into possession from or under or by collusion with such tenant, shall willfully hold over any lands, etc., after the expiration the term of their lease, and after demand made in writing for the possession thereof, is liable to pay double rent. A tenancy from year to year requires sixty days notice in writing, to terminate the same at the end of the year; such notice can be given at any time within four months preceding the last sixty days of the year.

A tenancy by the month, or less than a year, where the tenant holds over without any special agreement, the landlord may terminate the tenancy, by thirty days notice in writing.

When rent is due, the landlord may serve a notice upon the tenant, stating that unless the rent is paid within not less than five days, his lease will be terminated; if the rent is not paid, the landlord may consider the lease ended. When default is made in any of the terms of a lease, it shall not be necessary to give more than ten days notice to quit or of the termination of such tenancy; and the same may be terminated on giving such notice to quit, at any time after such default in any of the terms of such lease; which notice may be substantially in the following form, viz:

To —, You are hereby notified that, in consequence of your default in (here insert the character of the default), of the premises now occupied by you, being etc. (here describe the premises), I have elected to determine your lease, and you are hereby notified to quit and deliver up possession of the same to me within ten days of this date (dated, etc.)

The above to be signed by the lessor or his agent, and no other notice or demand of possession or termination of such tenancy is necessary.

Demand may be made, or notice served, by delivering a written or printed, or partly either, copy thereof to the tenant, or leaving the same with some person above the age of twelve years residing on or in possession of the premises; and in case no one is in the actual possession of the said premises, then by posting the same on the premises. When the tenancy is for a certain time, and the term expires by the terms of the lease, the tenant is then bound to surrender possession, and no notice to quit or demand of possession is necessary.

Distress for rent.—In all cases of distress for rent, the landlord, by himself, his agent or attorney, may seize for rent any personal property of his tenant that may be found in the county where the tenant resides; the property of any other person, even if found on the premises, is not liable.

An inventory of the property levied upon, with a statement of the amount of rent claimed, should be at once filed with some justice of the peace, if not over $200; and if above that sum, with the clerk of a court of record of competent jurisdiction. Property may be released, by the party executing a satisfactory bond for double the amount.

The landlord may distrain for rent, any time within six months after the expiration of the term of the lease, or when terminated.

In all cases where the premises rented shall be sub-let, or the lease assigned, the landlord shall have the same right to enforce lien against such lessee or assignee, that he has against the tenant to whom the premises were rented.

When a tenant abandons or removes from the premises or any part thereof, the landlord, or his agent or attorney, may seize upon any grain or other crops grown or growing upon the premises, or part thereof so abandoned, whether the rent is due or not. If such grain, or other crops, or any part thereof, is not fully grown or matured, the landlord, or his agent or attorney, shall cause the same to be properly cultivated, harvested or gathered, and may sell the same, and from the proceeds pay all his labor, expenses and rent. The tenant may, before the sale of such property, redeem the same by tendering the rent and reasonable compensation for work done, or he may replevy the same.

Exemption.—The same articles of personal property which are by law exempt from execution, except the crops as above stated, is also exempt from distress for rent.

If any tenant is about to or shall permit or attempt to sell and remove from the premises, without the consent of his landlord, such portion of the crops raised thereon as will endanger the lien of the landlord upon such crops, for the rent, it shall be lawful for the landlord to distress before rent is due.

LIENS.

Any person who shall by contract, express or implied, or partly both, with the owner of any lot or tract of land, furnish labor or material, or services as an architect or superintendent, in building, altering, repairing or ornamenting any house or other building or appurtenance thereto on such lot, or upon any street or alley, and connected with such improvements, shall have a lien upon the whole of such lot or tract of land, and upon such house or building and appurtenances, for the amount due to him for such labor, material or services. If the contract is expressed, and the time for the completion of the work is beyond three years from the commencement thereof; or, if the time of payment is beyond one year from the time stipulated for the completion of the work, then no lien exists. If the contract is implied, then no lien exists, unless the work be done or material is furnished within one year from the commencement of the work or delivery of the materials. As between different creditors having liens, no preference is given to the one whose contract was first made; but each shares pro-rata. Incumbrances existing on the lot or tract of the land at the time the contract is made, do not operate on the improvements, and are only preferred to the extent of the value of the land at the time of making the contract. The above lien can not be enforced unless suit is commenced within six months after the last payment for labor or materials shall have become due and payable. Sub-contractors, mechanics, workmen and other persons furnishing any material, or performing any labor for a contractor as before specified, have a lien to the extent of the amount due the contractor at the time the following notice is served upon the owner of the land who made the contract:

To —, You are hereby notified, that I have been employed by— (here state whether to labor or furnish material, and substantially the nature of the demand) upon your (here state in general terms description and situation of building), and that I shall hold the (building, or as the case may be), and your interest in the ground, liable for the amount that may (is or may become) due me on account thereof. Signature, —

If there is a contract in writing between contractor and sub-contractor, a copy of it should be served with above notice, and said notice must be served within forty days from the completion of such sub-contract, if there is one; if not, then from the time payment should have been made to the person performing the labor or furnishing the material. If the owner is not a resident of the county, or can not be found therein, then the above notice must be filed with the clerk of the Circuit Court, with his fee, fifty cents, and a copy of said notice must be published in a newspaper published in the county, for four successive weeks.

When the owner or agent is notified as above, he can retain any money due the contractor sufficient to pay such claim; if more than one claim, and not enough to pay all, they are to be paid pro rata.

The owner has the right to demand in writing, a statement of the contractor, of what he owes for labor, etc., from time to time as the work progresses, and on his failure to comply, forfeits to the owner $50 for every offense.

The liens referred to cover any and all estates, whether in fee for life, for years, or any other interest which the owner may have.

To enforce the lien of sub-contractors, suit must be commenced within three months from the time of the performance of the sub-contract, or during the work or furnishing materials.

Hotel, inn and boarding-house keepers, have a lien upon the baggage and other valuables of their guests or boarders, brought into such hotel, inn or boarding-house, by their guests or boarders, for the proper charges due from such guests or boarders for their accommodation, board and lodgings, and such extras as are furnished at their request.

Stable-keepers and other persons have a lien upon the horses, carriages and harness kept by them, for the proper charges due for the keeping thereof and expenses bestowed thereon at the request of the owner or the person having the possession of the same.

Agisters (persons who take care of cattle belonging to others), and persons keeping, yarding, feeding or pasturing domestic animals, shall have a lien upon the animals agistered, kept, yarded or fed, for the proper charges due for such service.

All persons who may furnish any railroad corporation in this state with fuel, ties, material, supplies or any other article or thing necessary for the construction, maintenance, operation or repair of its road by contract, or may perform work or labor on the same, is entitled to be paid as part of the current expenses of the road, and have a lien upon all its property. Sub-contractors or laborers have also a lien. The conditions and limitations both as to contractors and sub-contractors, are about the same as herein stated as to general liens.

DEFINITION OF COMMERCIAL TERMS.

$— means dollars, being a contraction of U. S., which was formerly placed before any denomination of money, and meant, as it means now, United States Currency.

£— means pounds, English money.

@ stands for at or to. lb for pound, and bbl. for barrel; ¢ for per or by the. Thus, Butter sells at 20@30c ¢ lb, and Flour at $8@12 ¢ bbl.

% for per cent and # for number.

May 1.—Wheat sells at $1.20@1.25, "seller June." Seller June means that the person who sells the wheat has the privilege of delivering it at any time during the month of June.

Selling short, is contracting to deliver a certain amount of grain or stock, at a fixed price, within a certain length of time, when the seller has not the stock on hand. It is for the interest of the person selling "short," to depress the market as much as possible, in order that he may buy and fill his contract at a profit. Hence the "shorts" are termed "bears."

Buying long, is to contract to purchase a certain amount of grain or shares of stock at a fixed price, deliverable within a stipulated time, expecting to make a profit by the rise of prices. The "longs" are termed "bulls," as it is for their interest to "operate" so as to "toss" the prices upward as much as possible.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

An agreement is where one party promises to another to do a certain thing in a certain time for a stipulated sum. Good business men always reduce an agreement to writing, which nearly always saves misunderstandings and trouble. No particular form is necessary, but the facts must be clearly and explicitly stated, and there must, to make it valid, be a reasonable consideration.

GENERAL FORM OF AGREEMENT.

THIS AGREEMENT, made the Second day of October, 1876, between John Jones, of Aurora, County of Kane, State of Illinois, of the first part, and Thomas Whiteside, of the same place, of the second part —

WITNESSETH, that the said John Jones, in consideration of the agreement of the party of the second part, hereinafter contained, contracts and agrees to and with the said Thomas Whiteside, that he will deliver, in good and marketable condition, at the Village of Batavia, Ill., during the month of November, of this year, One Hundred Tons of Prairie Hay, in the following lots, and at the following specified times; namely, twenty-five tons by the seventh of November, twenty-five tons additional by the fourteenth of the month, twenty-five tons more by the twenty-first, and the entire one hundred tons to be all delivered by the thirtieth of November.

And the said Thomas Whiteside, in consideration of the prompt fulfillment of this contract, on the part of the party of the first part, contracts to and agrees with the said John Jones, to pay for said hay five dollars per ton, for each ton as soon as delivered.

In case of failure of agreement by either of the parties hereto, it is hereby stipulated and agreed that the party so failing shall pay to the other, One Hundred Dollars, as fixed and settled damages.

In witness whereof, we have hereunto set our hands the day and year first above written.

JOHN JONES,

THOMAS WHITESIDE.

AGREEMENT WITH CLERK FOR SERVICES.

THIS AGREEMENT, made the first day of May, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, between Reuben Stone, of Chicago, County of Cook, State of Illinois, party of the first part, and George Barclay, of Englewood, County of Cook, State of Illinois, party of the second part —

WITNESSETH, that said George Barclay agrees faithfully and diligently to work as clerk and salesman for the said Reuben Stone, for and during the space of one year from the date hereof, should both live such length of time, without absenting himself from his occupation;

during which time he, the said Barclay, in the store of said Stone, of Chicago, will carefully and honestly attend, doing and performing all duties as clerk and salesman aforesaid, in accordance and in all respects as directed and desired by the said Stone.

In consideration of which services, so to be rendered by the said Barclay, the said Stone agrees to pay to said Barclay the annual sum of one thousand dollars, payable in twelve equal monthly payments, each upon the last day of each month; provided that all dues for days of absence from business by said Barclay, shall be deducted from the sum otherwise by the agreement due and payable by the said Stone to the said Barclay.

BILLS OF SALE.

A bill of sale is a written agreement to another party, for a consideration to convey his right and interest in the personal property. The purchaser must take actual possession of the property. Juries have power to determine upon the fairness or unfairness of a bill of sale.

COMMON FORM OF BILL OF SALE.

KNOW ALL MEN by this instrument, that I, Louis Clay, of Princeton, Illinois, of the first part, for and in consideration of Five Hundred and Ten dollars, to me paid by John Floyd, of the same place, of the second part, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have sold, and by this instrument do convey unto the said Floyd, party of the second part, his executors, administrators, and assigns, my undivided half of ten acres of corn, now growing on the farm of Thomas Tyrrell, in the town above mentioned; one pair of horses, sixteen sheep, and five cows, belonging to me, and in my possession at the farm aforesaid; to have and to hold the same unto the party of the second part, his executors and assigns, forever. And I do, for myself and legal representatives, agree with the said party of the second part, and his legal representatives, to warrant and defend the sale of the afore-mentioned property and chattels unto the said party of the second part, and his legal representatives, against all and every person whatsoever.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto affixed my hand, this tenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

LOUIS CLAY.

The chairman or secretary of such meeting shall, as soon as possible, make and file in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county, an affidavit substantially in the following form:

STATE OF ILLINOIS, } ss.
 _____ County.

I, _____, do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be), that at a meeting of the members of the (here insert the name of the church, society or congregation as known before organization), held at (here insert place of meeting), in the County of _____, and State of Illinois, on the _____ day of _____, A.D. 18—, for that purpose, the following persons were elected (or appointed) [here insert their names] trustees, wardens, vestrymen, (or officers by whatever name they may choose to adopt, with powers similar to trustees) according to the rules and usages of such (church, society or congregation), and said _____

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this — day of —, A.D. 18—.

Name of Affiant — — —

which affidavit must be recorded by the recorder, and shall be, or a certified copy made by the recorder, received as evidence of such an incorporation.

No certificate of election after the first need be filed for record.

The term of office of the trustees and the general government of the society can be determined by the rules or by-laws adopted. Failure to elect trustees at the time provided does not work a dissolution, but the old trustees hold over. A trustee or trustees may be removed, in the same manner by the society as elections are held by a meeting called for that purpose. The property of the society vests in the corporation. The corporation may hold, or acquire by purchase or otherwise, land not exceeding ten acres, for the purpose of the society. The trustees have the care, custody and control of the property of the corporation, and can, when directed by the society, erect houses or improvements, and repair and alter the same, and may also when so directed by the society, mortgage, encumber, sell and convey any real or personal estate belonging to the corporation, and make all proper contracts in the name of such corporation. But they are prohibited by law from encumbering or interfering with any property so as to destroy the effect of any gift, grant, devise or bequest to the corporation; but such gifts, grants, devises or bequests, must in all cases be used so as to carry out the object intended by the persons making the same. Existing societies may organize in the manner herein set forth, and have all the advantages thereof.

SUGGESTIONS TO THOSE PURCHASING BOOKS BY SUBSCRIPTION.

The business of publishing books by subscription having so often been brought into disrepute by agents making representations and declarations not authorized by the publisher; in order to prevent that as much as possible, and that there may be more general knowledge of the relation such agents bear to their principal, and the law governing such cases, the following statement is made:

A subscription is in the nature of a contract of mutual promises, by which the subscriber agrees to pay a certain sum for the work described; the consideration is concurrent that the publisher shall publish the book named, and deliver the same, for which the subscriber is to pay the price named. The nature and character of the work is described in the prospectus and by the sample shown. These should be carefully examined before subscribing, as they are the basis and consideration of the promise to pay, and not the too often exaggerated statements of the agent, who is merely employed to solicit subscriptions, for which he is usually paid a commission for each subscriber, and has no authority to change or alter the conditions upon which the subscriptions are authorized to be made by the publisher. Should the agent assume to agree to make the subscription conditional or modify or change the agreement of the publisher, as set out by prospectus and sample, in order to bind the principal, the subscriber should see that such conditions or changes are stated over or in connection with his signature, so that the publisher may have notice of the same.

All persons making contracts in reference to matters of this kind, or any other business, should remember that the law as to written contracts is, that they can not be varied, altered or rescinded verbally, but if done at all, must be done in writing. It is therefore important that all persons contemplating subscribing should distinctly understand that all talk before or after the subscription is made, is not admissible as evidence, and is no part of the contract.

Persons employed to solicit subscriptions are known to the trade as canvassers. They are agents appointed to do a particular business in a prescribed mode, and have no authority to do it in any other way to the prejudice of their principal, nor can they bind their principal in any other matter. They can not collect money, or agree that payment may be made in anything else but money. They can not extend the time of payment beyond the time of delivery, nor bind their principal for the payment of expenses incurred in their business.

It would save a great deal of trouble, and often serious loss, if persons, before signing their names to any subscription book, or any written instrument, would examine carefully what it is; if they can not read themselves, should call on some one disinterested who can.

INTEREST TABLE.

A SIMPLE RULE FOR ACCURATELY COMPUTING INTEREST AT ANY GIVEN PER CENT. FOR ANY LENGTH OF TIME.

Multiply the principal (amount of money at interest) by the time reduced to days: then divide this product by the quotient obtained by dividing 360 (the number of days in the interest year) by the per cent. of interest, and the quotient thus obtained will be the required interest.

ILLUSTRATION.

Require the interest of $462.50 for one month and eighteen days at 6 per cent. An interest month is 30 days; one month and eighteen days equal 48 days. $462.50 multiplied by .48 gives 222,0000; 360 divided by 6 (the per cent. of interest) gives 60, and $222,0000 divided by 60 will give you the exact interest, which is $3.70. If the rate of interest in the above example were 12 per cent., we would divide the $222,0000 by 30 (because 360 divided by 12 gives 30); if 4 per cent., we would divide by 90; if 8 per cent., by 45; and in like manner for any other per cent.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, AND ITS AMENDMENTS.

We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

SEC. 2. The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states, and the electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature.

No person shall be a representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each state shall have at least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware one, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, and Georgia three.

When vacancies happen in the representation from any state, the Executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

The House of Representatives shall choose their Speaker and other officers, and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SEC. 3. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each state, chosen by the Legislature thereof for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any state, the Executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state for which he shall be chosen.

The Vice-President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided.

The Senate shall choose their other officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the absence of the Vice-President, or when he shall exercise the office of President of the United States.

The Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried the Chief Justice shall preside. And no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

Judgment, in cases of impeachment, shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment, and punishment according to law.

SEC. 4. The times, places and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

SEC. 5. Each house shall be the judge of the election, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may, in their judgment, require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house on any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Neither house, during the session of Congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

SEC. 6. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place.

No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States, shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

SEC. 7. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve he shall sign it; but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law: But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted), after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress, by their adjournment, prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment), shall be presented to the President of the United States, and before the same shall take effect shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be re-passed by two-thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

SEC. 8. The Congress shall have power—

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts, and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes;

To establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures;

To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States;

To establish post offices and post roads;

To promote the progress of sciences and useful arts, by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries ;

To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court ;

To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offenses against the law of nations ;

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water ;

To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years ;

To provide and maintain a navy ;

To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces ;

To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions ;

To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the states respectively the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress ;

To exercise legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular states, and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the Legislaturé of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock yards, and other needful buildings ; and

To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

SEC. 9. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the states now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person.

The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed.

No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state.

No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another ; nor shall vessels bound to or from one state be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

No money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law ; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expeditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States: and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state.

SEC. 10. No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

No state shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws, and the net produce of all duties and imposts laid by any state on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the Congress.

No state shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty on tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another state, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. The Executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the Vice-President chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

Each state shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of Electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the state may be entitled in the Congress; but no Senator or Representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an Elector.

[* The Electors shall meet in their respective states, and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each; which list they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such majority, and have an equal number of votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately choose by ballot one of them for President; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list the said House shall in like manner choose the President. But in choosing the President, the vote shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the President, the person having the greatest number of votes of the Electors shall be the Vice-President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the Senate shall choose from them by ballot the Vice-President.]

The Congress may determine the time of choosing the Electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes; which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice-President, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice-President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

Before he enters on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

SEC. 2. The President shall be commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several states, when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardon for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice of the Senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law; but the Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session.

SEC. 3. He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may on extraordinary occasions convene both houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

SEC. 4. The President, Vice-President, and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION I. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

SEC. 2. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states; between a state and citizens of another state; between citizens of different states; between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens, or subjects.

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a state shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction.

In all the other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

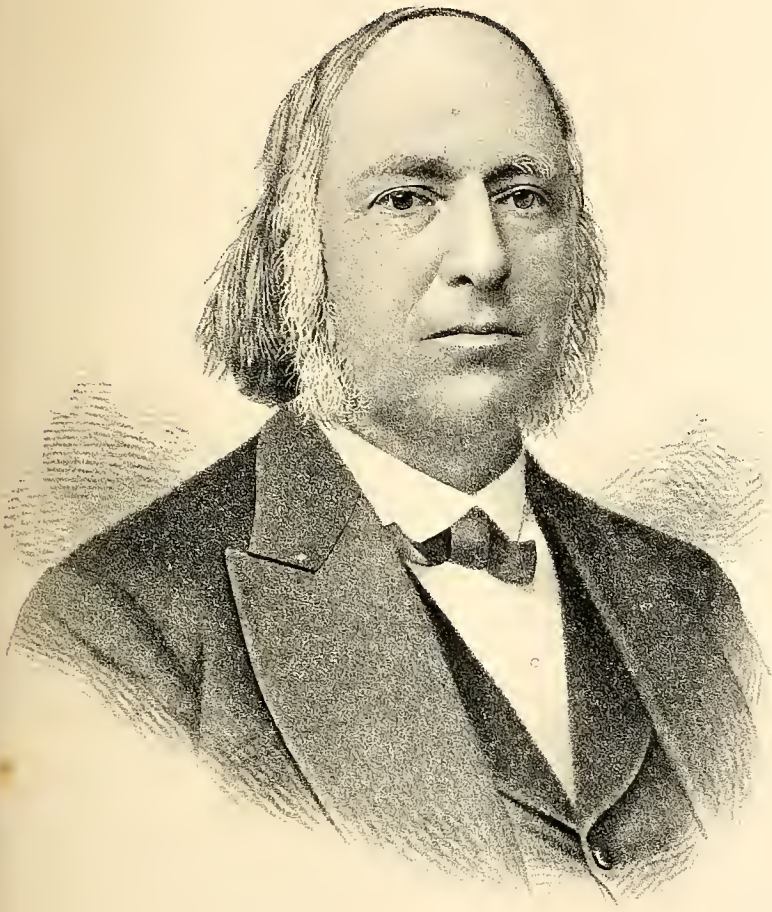

The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state, the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

SEC. 3. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the Congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

SEC. 2. The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states.

A person charged in any state with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime.

No person held to service or labor in one state, under the laws thereof escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on the claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

SEC. 3. New states may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state; nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states, or parts of states, without the consent of the Legislatures of the states concerned, as well as of the Congress.

The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States or of any particular state.

SEC. 4. The United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature can not be convened), against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several states, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress. Provided that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article; and that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

ARTICLE VI.

All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this Constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution as under the Confederation.

This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several state Legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

The ratification of the Conventions of nine states shall be sufficient for the establishment of this Constitution between the states so ratifying the same.

Done in convention by the unanimous consent of the states present, the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the independence of the United States of America the twelfth. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names.

The President of the Senate shall, in presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. History of 12th Infantry.

The Twelfth Infantry was called into the service under the proclamation of the President, April 6, 1861; was mustered into the service for three years, Aug. 1, 1861. It was stationed at Cairo, Ill., Bird's Point, Mo., Paducah and Smithland, Ky., until February, when it embarked for Fort Henry, being present at its bombardment and surrender. It fought nobly at the memorable battle of Fort Donelson. Loss—19 killed, 58 wounded, 10 missing. It then moved to Clarksville and Nashville, Tenn., on steamer Glendale, and thence on some boat down Cumberland River, and up Tennessee to Pittsburg Landing, participating in that battle. Loss—109 killed and wounded, 37 missing. It was in the siege of Corinth, where it performed a very brilliant part. Total engaged—225; loss—19 killed, 80 wounded, and 15 missing. The Twelfth was constantly doing active duty, but space forbids us to here follow in detail. It marched across the country to Pulaski, Tenn.; it was in Sherman's March from Chattanooga to Atlanta; took an active part in the battle of Allatoona Pass, and was there commanded by Capt. Robt. Kohler, of Rock Island, although his term of service had expired. In action—161; loss—57 killed and wounded. The Twelfth was in Sherman's March to the Sea, and up through the Carolinas to Washington and thence to Louisville, where it was mustered out, July 16, 1865.

Arrested by the accident which befell the Nineteenth Illinois Volunteers, the regiment remained at Camp Dennison, Ohio. September 29th, moved to Louisville, Ky. Next day to Colesburg. Guarded railroad till November 30, when it was assigned to Eighth Brigade, Col. Turchin commanding. Moved to Elizabethtown, December 5th. Remained until 22d, when marched to Bacon's Creek, where it remained until February 10, 1862. February 10, 1862, Division marched upon Bowling Green—8th Brigade in advance. Arrived 14th, and remained until 24th. Marched to Nashville arriving February 27th. Moved, March 18th, to Murfreesboro, and remained until 5th April, when the Division marched, via Shelbyville and Fayetteville, to Huntsville. The regiment left same evening, April 11, and marched to Decatur, from which the enemy fled, leaving in our hands C. R. and G. E. small arms and ammunition. From Decatur, the regiment proceeded to Tusculumbia. Left Tusculumbia, April 22, 1862, and crossed the Tennessee; en route repulsed a charge of the enemy's cavalry, losing some prisoners. April 30, returned to Huntsville. May 1st, marched to Athens; from which place made several excursions. May 26, marched to Fayetteville, Tenn. June 1st, marched across the Cumberland to a place opposite Chattanooga. June 7, returned over Jasper and went as far as Bellefonte. June 11, went back to Stephensou; from thence to Jasper, Tenn. Companies F, G and C had an engagement at Rankin's Ferry, in which Captain Kovats and Lieutenant Gerhart and one man were wounded, and three missing. From Jasper, regiment went to mouth of Battle Creek, and remained until July 11; then to Tullahoma and guarded railroad stations on the Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. until September 7, when it marched with Gen. Buell's army in pursuit of the enemy, and arrived in Louisville, September 26, 1862. October 1st, marched in pursuit of the enemy. Took part in the battle of Chaplin Hills, near Ferryville, October 8, losing 25 killed, 77 wounded, 8 prisoners, and 2 missing. October 12, after the battle of Perryville, returned, via Crab Orchard, Lebanon, Glasgow and Bowling Green, to Mitchellville, Ky., on the L. and N. R. R., where it was stationed the remainder of the year.

Veterans and recruits were consolidated into one company, known as Company A. Said company was mustered out, July 31, 1865, at Louisville, Ky., and arrived at Camp Butler, Aug. 1, 1865, for final payment and discharge.

33d Infantry.

The Thirty-third Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Camp Butler, Illinois, September, 1861, by Colonel Chas. E. Hovey, and mustered into the United States' service by Captain T. G. Pitcher, U. S. A. September 20th, moved to Ironton, Mo., via St. Louis. March, 1862, moved with the command of General Steele, southward, passing into Arkansas at Pitman's Ferry, and marching, via Pocahontas and Jacksonport, to Batesville, where it joined General Curtis' army; thence, via Jacksonport, Augusta and Clarendon, to Helena. Was engaged in the battle of Cache, and in many skirmishes. At the battle of Cotton Plant, Co. A, on skirmish line, met and checked a charge of 2,000 Texan Rangers. During July and August were camped 20 miles south of Helena, and engaged in eight expeditions up and down the river. September 1st was moved up the river to Sulphur Springs, and thence to Pilot Knob, where it arrived the middle of October, 1862. November 15th, moved to Van Buren, Ark., in Colonel Harris' Brigade, Brigadier General W. P. Benton's Division, of General Davidson's Corps. Made winter campaign in Southeast Missouri, and returned to Bellevue Valley, near Pilot Knob, about March 1, 1863. The Thirty-third was then ordered to St. Genevieve, Mo., where, with the command, it embarked for Milliken's Bend, La. Attached to the First Brigade, First Division, Thirtieth Army Corps, it was engaged in all its battles, participating in the battles of Port Gibson, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, assault and siege of Vicksburg, and the siege of Jackson. In August, moved to New Orleans, with the Thirtieth Corps. In October, with Brigade of Colonel Shunk, Eighth Indiana, Major General C. C. Washburn's Division, and Major General E. O. C. Ord's Corps, engaged in the campaign up the Bayou Teche. Returned to New Orleans, in November. Disembarked on St. Joseph Island, marched up St. Joseph Island and Matagorda Island to Saluria, participating in the capture of Fort Esperanza. Thence moved to Indianola and Port Lavaca. January 1, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, and March 14th reached Bloomington, Illinois, and received veteran furlough. April 18, 1864, regiment was reorganized at Camp Butler, Illinois, and proceeded to New Orleans, via Alton and St. Louis—arriving 20th, and camping at Carrollton. May 17th, ordered to Brashers City, Louisiana. Soon after its arrival, the regiment was scattered along the line of the road, as guard. September 17, 1864, the non-veterans of the regiment were started home, via New York City, in charge of rebel prisoners, and were mustered out at Camp Butler, about October 11, 1864. March 2, 1865, ordered to join the Sixteenth Army Corps. Near Boutte Station the train was thrown from the track, and 9 men killed and 70 wounded. 18th, regiment embarked on Lake Pontchartrain, for Mobile expedition. Moved, via Fort Gaines and Navy Cove, landed on Fish River, Ala., and marched with General Canby's army up east side of Mobile Bay. March 27th, arrived in front of Spanish Fort, the main defense of Mobile, and, until its capture, April 8th, was actively engaged. After the surrender of Mobile, marched, April 13, 1865, with the Sixteenth Corps, for Montgomery, Alabama, where it arrived on 25th, and encamped on the Alabama River. Here it received the news of Lee and Johnson's surrender, after which its operations were not of a hostile character. May 10th, marched to Selma, and May 17th, by rail, to Meridian, Mississippi. Here remained. Moved to Vicksburg, April 14, 1865, and remained at that place until mustered out of service, November 24, 1865, and ordered to Camp Butler, Illinois, for final payment and discharge.

39th Infantry.(YATES PHALANX.)

Was mustered into U. S. service, Oct. 13, 1861, and moved to St. Louis, Mo. October 23th, received orders to move to Williamsport, Md., where it was fully armed and equipped. The following are the most important events in the history of this celebrated Regiment: Held a force of 10,000 rebels under command of Stonewall Jackson, for twenty-four hours. Participated in battle of Winchester. Four companies under Major S. W. Munn captured thirty prisoners at Columbia Bridge. Was in Gen. McClellan's seven days' fight. Was at Suffolk, Va., September, October and November, fortifying the place and making frequent raids, capturing on one occasion two cannon and forty prisoners. Jan. 5, 1863, broke camp and marched to Chowan River, where it took transports and reported to Gen. Foster at Newburn, N. C. Here its Colonel, T. O. Osborn, took command of the Brigade. Moved on expedition to Hilton Head. Was in Gen. Hunter's expedition against Charleston. At Morris Island, was assigned to Gen. Terry's expedition, and participated in capture of Fort Wagner. Was first in the Fort. Left Hilton Head on Veteran furlough, Jan. 1, 1864, via New York. Returned 750 strong, and was on Butler's expedition up James River, the entire loss being nearly 200. At Wier's Bottom Church, May 20th, the Thirty-ninth was ordered to dislodge the enemy, which it did most gallantly, losing 40, but capturing many prisoners, including Gen. Walker. On 16th of May, had an engagement with Longstreet's command, losing some 35. August 14th, crossed James River and operated with Army of the James. On Aug. 15th, the Regiment lost 104 men, among them several valuable officers. Oct. 13th, in a charge, the Thirty-ninth lost 60 out of 250 engaged. March 27th, about 100 recruits joined. Took part in movements that resulted in capture of Petersburg and Richmond. In engagement at Fort Gregg, which was mostly hand to hand, the loss was 65 out of 150 engaged. For this gallantry Gen. Gibbon, then commanding General, had a magnificent brazen eagle cast and presented to the regiment. After various manoeuvres and surrender of Lee, the Thirty-ninth was mustered out at Norfolk, Va., and received final pay and discharge at Springfield, Ill., Dec. 15th, 1865.

53d Infantry.

The Fifty-third Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Ottawa, Ill., in the winter of 1861-2, by Colonel W. H. W. Cushman. On the 27th February, 1862, moved to Camp Douglas, Chicago, Ill. Ordered to Savannah, Tenn., March 23d. Arrived at Shiloh on the night of July 6th, and was placed in the First Brigade, Fourth Division, Brigadier General J. G. Lauman commanding Brigade, and Brigadier General S. A. Hurlbut commanding Division. Engaged in the siege of Corinth. Marched to Grand Junction, and, June 26th, to Lagrange. Thence via Holly Springs, moved to Memphis, July 21st. On the 6th of September, moved toward Bolivar, arriving 13th. Then moved, Oct. 4th, from Bolivar, and, on the 5th, engaged four times their number of the enemy who were retreating from Corinth. While crossing Davis' bridge, on the Hatchie, a regiment from another state fled, breaking through our lines in disorder; but the Fifty-third moved promptly forward and formed line, and fought two and a half hours, losing 10 killed and 49 wounded. Returned to Bolivar, October 8th, and to Lagrange, November 4, 1862. On the 28th of November, moved southward, with General Grant's army, to Cold Water, Holly Springs, Waterford, Abbeville and Oxford, Miss., arriving at Yacona Creek, December 13th; and on the 22d, commenced the northward march toward Tallahatchie river. January 1, 1863, the regiment was brigaded with First Brigade, Fourth Division, Seventeenth Army Corps, Colonel I. C. Fugh commanding Brigade; Brigadier General J. G. Lauman commanding Division, and Major General J. B. McPherson commanding Corps. Moved from Tallahatchie river and arrived at Moscow, Tenn., January 18th. Was transferred, with the Division, to the Sixteenth Army Corps (Major General Hurlbut's), and remained during the winter. Moved to Memphis, March 18th, and, May 17th, embarked for Young's Point. On 20th, moved to Haines' Bluff. Went into position at Snyder's Bluff, and on the 25th, joined the main army. Was actively engaged in the siege of Vicksburg, being temporarily assigned to the Thirtieth Corps, Major General E. O. C. Ord commanding. On July 5th, moved with General Sherman's army against Jackson. On the 12th, was engaged with the Third Iowa and Twenty-eighth and Forty-first Illinois, in battle of Jackson. The Fifty-third participated in the gallant but disastrous charge of that day, going into the fight with 200 men and officers, and coming out with but 66. Colonel Earl fell, pierced with four bullets. Lieutenant Colonel McClanahan was severely wounded. Captain Michael Leabey and Lieutenant George W. Hemsreet were killed, and Captain J. E. Hudson mortally wounded. Captains Potter and Kieg wounded. Lieutenant Smith lost an arm and was taken prisoner, and Captain Lodge was taken prisoner. The entire loss being 88 killed and wounded, and 46 missing. A few days afterward returned to Vicksburg, and was transferred to Seventeenth Army Corps, Brigadier General M. M. Crocker commanding Division. Moved to Natchez, August 18th. Returned, November 30th, to Vicksburg, and camped at Milldale. On the 1st of February, 1864, the regiment having re-enlisted, was mustered as a Veteran organization, and, on the 3d, started on the Meridian campaign, and, returning, arrived at Hebron, Mississippi, February 29th. Left Vicksburg, March 13th, and arrived at Ottawa, 22d, where the men were furloughed for 30 days. Company I, having been consolidated with Company E, in 1863, a new company was organized and assigned to the regiment. Rejoined the Division at Cairo. General F. P. Blair having been assigned to the Corps, it moved up the Tennessee to Clifton, and marched, via Decatur and Huptsville, joining General Sherman's army at Allatoona, June 8th. The Second Brigade, Colonel George C. Rogers commanding, was ordered to garrison that place. July 13th, ordered to Marietta, and, on the 17th, joined the Division at the front. Was engaged in the siege of Atlanta, and in the engagements of July 20th, 21st and 22d lost 107 men, killed and wounded—Captain Samuel Haynie being among the killed. After a few days' rest at East Point, moved, October 4th, in pursuit of Hood, returning to Marietta, where the Second Brigade was doing garrison duty, on November 6th. November 13th, moved to Atlanta, and, on 15th, commenced the Savannah campaign, Brigadier General Giles A. Smith commanding Division, and Colonel B. F. Potts commanding First Brigade, in which the regiment was serving; arrived at the fortifications of Savannah, December 10th. Lost 4 killed and 6 wounded, in its advance on the works, and, on the 21st, marched into the city. January 4, 1865, the Forty-first Illinois Volunteers—222 men and officers, Major Robert H. McFadden commanding—was consolidated with the Fifty-third, and, on the 6th, the Division embarked for Beaufort, South Carolina, and soon after moved to Pocolatigo. On January 29th, commenced the Carolina campaign, Brigadier General B. F. Potts commanding Brigade. Moved, via Orangeburg, Columbia, Fayetteville and Cheraw, participating in the battle of Bentonville, March 20 and 21, 1865, and marched to Goldsboro, Raleigh and Jones' Station; and, after Johnson's surrender, marched with the army to Washington, and participated in the grand review of May 24th. June 6th, moved to Louisville, Kentucky, and, July 22d, was mustered out of service, by Lieutenant Robert M. Wood, U. S. C. M., and moved to Chicago, Illinois. July 28th, received final payment and discharge.

The Fifty-fifth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Camp Douglas, Chicago, Ill., and mustered into the United States' service Oct. 31, 1861. Nov. 9th left Camp Douglas for Alton, Ill.; the 10th, left for St. Louis, by steamer; Jan. 12, 1862, ordered to Paducah, Ky., by boat; March 8th, embarked, on steamer, for Tennessee river and moved down to Pittsburg Landing, and was soon in camp, east of Shiloh Church—the Fifty-fifth being on the left of the Union line. The opening of the battle, 'Sunday morning, found the regiment in position, with an effective force of 873 men. Col. Stuart was wounded, and nine of the line officers, three of whom died of wounds. 102 enlisted men were killed and mortally wounded, and 161 wounded and taken prisoners. The regiment was with the army in advance on Corinth, and at Russell's house. May 17th, lost in skirmish, 8 men, 2 killed and 6 wounded. Entered Corinth May 30th; thence westward, along Memphis and Charleston railroad. With Sherman's Division, marched into Memphis, July 21st, and remained, doing camp duty, until November 25th, when it marched with Sherman's Division for the Tallahatchie river. Was marched back to Memphis, to descend the Mississippi river to Vicksburg. Embarked with the expedition, and six companies were engaged in the battle of Chickasaw Bayou, December 29th, losing 1 Captain killed and 1 wounded, 1 enlisted man killed and 7 wounded. Was present and under fire at battle of Arkansas Post, Jan. 10 and 11, 1863. Moved from Arkansas Post to Young's Point, La. May 16, 1863, joined army in rear of Vicksburg, and on 17th, was under fire at Champion Hills. Participated in the assaults of 19th and 22d of May, losing Lieut. Levi Hill, of Company A, killed; Col. Malmberg and 2 line officers wounded, and 4 enlisted men killed and 33 wounded. During the siege, the regiment lost 1 man killed and 3 wounded. Was present at the surrender, July 4th. July 5th, marched with Sherman's expedition for Jackson, Miss. Participated in the siege, and lost 1 officer wounded, 1 enlisted man killed and 1 wounded. Embarked at Vicksburg for Memphis, and moved out with the army, past Corinth, to Iuka. On Oct. 30, 1863, marched from East Point, on the Tennessee river, for Chattanooga. November 25th, marched with Sherman to the relief of Knoxville, East Tenn. Returned and encamped at Bridgeport, during the winter, and at Larkin's Landing in the spring, at which place the regiment was reorganized, and returned to Illinois, on furlough of thirty days. June 27, 1864, participated in assault upon Kennesaw Mountain, Ga., led by Capt. Augustine, who was killed on the field. Loss of regiment was 2 officers killed and 3 wounded, 13 enlisted men killed and 30 wounded. July 22d, the regiment was again engaged, with an effective force of 239 men, commanded by Capt. F. H. Shaw, and came out of the engagement with 180 men—1 officer killed, 3 enlisted men killed, 12 wounded and 17 taken prisoners. In the siege of Atlanta, the regiment lost 1 officer and 6 enlisted men killed, and 18 wounded. Aug. 31, 1864, in battle of Jonesboro, Ga., lost 23 men. In a short campaign of but little over two months, the regiment lost about one-half its number. Joined in pursuit of Hood, through Northern Alabama, and returned to Atlanta, Ga., where 162 non-veterans were discharged. The regiment lost, near Bentonville, N. C., 1 man killed, 1 wounded and 6 taken prisoners. Marched with army, via Richmond, to Washington. Participated in the grand review at Washington. Then moved to Louisville, Ky. Remained in camp but a few weeks, when moved, by steamer, to Little Rock, Ark., where it remained until Aug. 14, 1865, when it was mustered out of service. Left for Chicago, Ill., August 19th, and arrived Aug. 22, 1865, where it received final payment and discharge. During its term of service, the regiment marched 3,374 miles.

88th Infantry.

The Eighty-eighth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Chicago, Ill., in Sept., 1862, by Col. Francis T. Sherman, and was known as the "Second Board of Trade Regiment." It was mustered in Sept. 4, 1862. Ordered to Louisville, Ky., Sept. 4th. Received arms on 11th. Moved to Covington, Ky., 12th. Oct. 1, 1862, marched in pursuit of Bragg. Engaged in the battle of Perryville, Oct. 8th—losing 4 killed, 5 mortally wounded and 36 wounded. Marched to Crab Orchard, and thence to Lebanon and Bowling Green, Ky., arriving Oct. 30, 1862. Moved toward Nashville, arriving at Edgefield, Nov. 7th. Moved Nov. 17th, six miles south of Nashville, on Nolensville pike. Dec. 26, 1862, marched in the advance upon Murfreesboro. Dec. 31, 1862, to Jan. 3, 1863, engaged in the battle of Stone River. January, 1863, to June, 1863, encamped at Murfreesboro. Engaged in the advance in movement against and pursuit of Bragg, from Middle Tennessee. September, 1863, joined in the Chickamauga campaign, and advanced to Alpine, Ga. Sept. 19 and 20, 1863, engaged in the battle of Chickamauga. Nov. 23 to 25, 1863, engaged in the battle of Mission Ridge. Formed part of the assaulting column upon the left center of the enemy's position, and was among the first to place its colors upon the enemy's works. December, 1863, to February, 1864, engaged in scouting through East Tennessee, when it encamped at Loudon, where it remained until April, 1864. May, 1864, joined in the advance upon the Atlanta campaign. It continued with the advance, as part of the Fourth Corps, commanded by Major General Howard, throughout the whole of that campaign, up to and including the capture of Atlanta—participating in the following principal battles and skirmishes: Rocky-Face Ridge, Resaca, Adairsville, New Hope Church, Pine Mountain, Mud Creek, Kenesaw Mountain, Smyrna Camp Ground, Atlanta, Jonesboro, and Lovejoy Station. Its services in the advance movements were continuous and constant from May to September, 1864. November, 1864, moved to Pnaski, Tennessee, and thence, upon the advance of Hood, to Columbia, Franklin and Nashville. It was engaged in skirmishes at Columbia and Spring Hill, and in the battle of Franklin, upon the right center, the main point of attack of the enemy. Dec. 15 and 16, 1864, engaged in the battle of Nashville. Dec. 16, 1864, to January, 1865, joined in the pursuit of Hood, from Tennessee. January, 1865, to March, 1865, encamped at Huntsville, Ala. March, 1865, moved to Bull's Gap, East Tennessee.

see. May, 1865, moved to Nashville, where it remained until its muster-out.

During the period of its service the Regiment was always in the front. It was never upon garrison duty. Its losses in the engagements in which it participated aggregate two-thirds of its number; and its conduct in every battle was such as to merit and receive the commendation of its Brigade, Division, and Corps commanders. For its conduct at Stone River, Mission Ridge, and Franklin, it was made the subject of special mention. The Regiment was mustered out June 9th, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn., and arrived at Chicago, June 13, 1865, where it received final pay and discharge, June 22, 1865.

First Asst. Surg. Thos. W. Forshee, com. June 9, '63, resigned Jan. 28, '65.

90th Infantry.

The Ninetieth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Chicago, Illinois, in August, September, and October, 1862, by Colonel Timothy O'Meara. Moved to Cairo, November 27th, and to Columbus, Ky., 30th. From thence proceeded to Lagrange, Tennessee, where the regiment arrived December 2d. On December 4th, ordered to Cold Water, Mississippi, where it defeated the Twenty-ninth Wisconsin Infantry. On the morning of 20th December, a detachment of Second Illinois Cavalry arrived at Cold Water, having cut their way through Van Dorn's forces, out of Holly Springs. Soon after, 4 companies of One Hundred and First Illinois came in, and were followed by the enemy. The demonstrations made by the Ninth deterred the enemy from making any severe attack, although he was 4,000 or 5,000 strong, and, after me skirmishing, he withdrew. The regiment was mustered out of service June 6th, 1865, at Washington, D. C., and arrived at Chicago, June 12, 1865, where it received final pay and discharge.

104th Infantry.

The One Hundred and Fourth Illinois Infantry formed a part of the First Brigade, First Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, in which it remained until muster-out. On the 24th of November, 1863, the Regiment was engaged on Lookout Mountain, near the White House, when the First Brigade, First Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, repulsed an attack made by the rebels, about 9 o'clock P. M., to regain possession of the ground. On the 25th of November, 1863, was engaged in the capture of Missionary Ridge, and captured a number of prisoners. On the 26th, followed the retreating rebels to Grayville, and on the 27th to Ringgold, returning from thence to Chattanooga, on the 29th. The men behaved well in all the engagements during this campaign. Remained in and around Chattanooga, until the 10th of February, 1864, when it was ordered to Nashville, by Gen. Johnson, to get transportation for the Fourteenth Corps. Returned to Chattanooga with the same, on March 15, 1865, joining the remainder of the Division at Grayville, on the 19th. Remained until the 3d of May, when the Regiment went to Ringgold, to prepare for the campaign about to commence against Atlanta. Commenced the march on the 7th of May, and on the 9th was in front of Buzzard's Roost Gap, where the Regiment remained, doing some skirmishing, until the 12th, when it marched to the right, passing Snake Creek Gap. On the 14th, was engaged in the battle of Resaca, losing 1 man killed and 9 wounded. Remained in front, skirmishing, until the 16th, when the Regiment marched to Resaca—the enemy having evacuated the night before. Followed the retreating rebels to Kingston, arriving there on the 18th. Remained there until the 23d, when the Regiment marched to Dallas, arriving there or in that vicinity on the 26th. Remained there, skirmishing, and losing some men, until the 5th of June, when the Regiment moved to the left, in front of Kenesaw Mountain, where it was engaged, skirmishing, nearly all the time, until the 3d of July, when the enemy left the mountain. The command followed them through Marietta, until they made a stand near the railroad bridge across the Chattahoochee river. The Regiment remained here, skirmishing, until July 10th, when the rebels fell back across the Chattahoochee. Did not move until the 17th, and on the 20th, crossed Peach Tree Creek. About four o'clock P. M., the enemy attacked the line (connecting with the Twentieth Corps on the left, and no troops on the right), and soon enveloped the right flank, planting their colors near the works. They were repulsed, however, and re-enforcements soon coming up, the Regiment was enabled to hold its ground. The men fought nobly, and the loss was heavy, it being 50—2 officers and 14 men killed, 1 officer and 28 enlisted men wounded, and 5 missing. On the 22d, the command again moved forward, the enemy having left their works in front, and went into Atlanta; but were met by Loring's Division, strongly entrenched, and the command halted and commenced throwing up works. Remained until August 3d, when the regiment moved to the right three miles, and, on the 6th, were formed on Utoy creek. On the 7th, was engaged at Utoy creek, losing 1 officer and 4 enlisted men killed, and 18 enlisted men wounded. On August 26th, marched to the right, towards Jonesboro, and on September 1st, fought the battle of Jonesboro, which gave possession of Atlanta; and on the 6th, started for Atlanta, arriving there on the 8th. The campaign from May 7th, when the regiment left Ringgold, to September 6th, when it left Jonesboro, was very severe. The Regiment skirmished nearly all the time with the enemy, and never halted for the night without throwing up works and preparing for an attack. The regiment was engaged in three battles: Resaca, Peach Tree Creek and Jonesboro. Losses in skirmishing were heavy in killed and wounded. The Regiment behaved nobly during the whole campaign, especially at Peach Tree Creek, where the right of the regiment was nearly annihilated, and, although the line grew shorter every day, the men were in the best of spirits. The regiment remained in Atlanta until October 3d, when the rebels, having crossed the Chattahoochee and removing towards Allatoona, the command commenced moving north, and crossing the Chattahoochee on the 3d, passed through Marietta, reaching Kenesaw Mountain on the 6th, and remaining in that vicinity until the 9th, when the Regiment marched along the railroad to Kingston, reaching there on the 11th. Marched to within three miles of Rome, on the 12th; to Calhoun on the 13th; to Resaca on the 14th; crossed the Chattagata Mountain, at Red Run Gap, on the 15th; passed through Villenow, Lafayette and Summerville, reaching Galesburg, Ala., on the 20th, where the Regiment remained until the 28th; then marched, through Rome, to Kingston, to get ready for the campaign to be commenced in a short time. The Regiment was not engaged with the enemy after it left Atlanta; but the marches were very hard, a great portion of the distance being traveled by night. The men were, also, short of rations, until they reached the Summerville Valley, when requisitions were made on the country for supplies. Remained in Kingston until November 12th, when the regiment marched to Atlanta, arriving there on the 15th, when rations and clothing were issued. On the 16th, commenced the March to the Sea, taking possession of Savannah on the 21st of December. As this was but a succession of marches, and but little opposition was met with, until the army reached Savannah, it is deemed unnecessary to detail the march. The Regiment had its share of the hardships, marches, etc., as also the fine foraging which the country passed through afforded. Remained in Savannah until Jan. 15th, when was commenced the march through the Carolinas. This, like the preceding campaign, was a succession of marches—the bad roads impeding more than the rebels. It required more troops with the trains, to build corduroy roads, than it did on the skirmish line. The Regiment was engaged in the battle of Bentonville, and had several skirmishes, with small loss. The command remained at Goldsboro, N. C., fitting up for another campaign, until April 10th; then marched to Raleigh, where the Regiment remained until the surrender of Johnston's army. The Regiment commenced the march from Raleigh to Washington, on April 30th, arriving there on May 10th, and participating in the grand review, on the 24th of May. Made muster-out rolls, and were mustered out on the 7th day of June. On the 8th, the Regiment left Washington for Chicago, arriving there on the 10th. Were paid off, and the men returned to their homes. The Regiment was engaged in the battles of Hartsville, Chickamanga, Lookout Mountain, Mission Ridge, Resaca, Peach Tree Creek, Utoy Creek, Jonesboro and Bentonville, besides a great many skirmishes, in which they lost men. In the first battle (Hartsville), the Regiment lost 44 men killed, and about 150 wounded—a greater loss than the Regiment sustained in any other battle. The men fought nobly, and whatever blame may rest on the commander of the post, the Regiment did its duty, successfully resisting the attack of two veteran infantry regiments, for nearly two hours, and until a part of the command had been driven from the field by Morgan's cavalry. After the Regiment was exchanged, in the spring of 1863, it was ordered to the Second Brigade, First Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, and was in all the engagements in which that corps was engaged after that time, marching with it from Morrisboro to Chattanooga, Atlanta, Savannah, Goldsboro, Raleigh and Washington.

GRAND RAPIDS TOWNSHIP

GENERAL HISTORY OF LA SALLE COUNTY.

The Mound Builders were the first inhabitants of this county. In the valley of the Illinois river and its tributaries there is hardly a square mile that does not contain evidences of their work. Within a circuit of three miles of Ottawa there are three thousand mounds. The major part of these are unquestionably of Indian origin, the remainder may probably be attributed to the Mound Builders. Broken pieces of earthen-ware, composed of shells and a grayish clay, are quite common, some of which indicate a considerable skill in ornamentation. A few perfect specimens have been discovered. A copper ax now in the possession of the Academy of Science at Ottawa was dug out of the drift a little west of that city.

The earth-works of the county are quite numerous, and impress the mind with the idea that here must have been a theatre of conflict in the centuries gone by. The remains of eight forts and fortifications exist at the present day, only two or three of which have been surveyed. The one on Fox river, opposite the mouth of Indian Creek, has three lines of circumvallation, and evinces more skill in construction than any of the others. Historically nothing is known of it. At and about Starved Rock there are two constructed by the French during their occupation. The one on Buffalo Rock was probably formed by Captain Richard Pilette. He had been sent by the governor of Canada to displace Tonti, and being unsuccessful, found sympathizers in the Indian town. He collected a force and fortified Buffalo Rock, calling it the Fort of the Miamis, from the majority of his retainers. At Marseilles there is another evidence of earth-works, and on the North Bluff opposite a redoubt has been thrown up. This fortification was constructed by the American Fur Company in 1816 or 1818. A fort was constructed in 1827 during the Winnebago war at South Ottawa. It is known as "Fort Winnebago." Fort Wilburn at La Salle and the Stockade at Ottawa were erected during the Black Hawk War.

Of the Indians the Illinois Confederation held the most conspicuous position. Their great town where they gathered for their annual feast was on the farm of James Clark, Esq., near Utica, a mile or two west of Starved Rock. It was called Kaskaskia. The allies of Pontiac during his conspiracy, after the assassination of that chieftain by the hand of an Illinois, nearly exterminated the confederation. According to tradition, a part of them took refuge on the sandstone bluff nearly opposite their town, and were there starved to death by their determined foes; hence the name, "Starved Rock." The Ottawas and Potawatamies succeeded them in the possession of their lands. When first visited by the whites, the confederation numbered nearly twelve thousand people, in five tribes; but when, under the leadership of DuQuoin, they were transferred to the southwest, there were but two weak tribes, and in 1850 only eighty-four persons remained.

The first white men who visited the county were Frenchmen—Jacques Marquette, a Jesuit missionary, and Louis Joliet, a fur trader. On their return from a voyage of exploration projected by the governor of Canada, during which they had discovered the upper Mississippi, they were induced by the Indians to pursue a different and nearer course to the Missions of the upper lakes than the one they had traversed. This new route lay up the Illinois and Kankakee rivers, across the Portage, down the Chicago river, and up the shore of Lake Michigan, at that time called the Lake of the Illinois. They arrived in the county the latter part of August, visited the Illinois town Kaskaskia, and reached Green Bay at the end of September, 1673. Joliet proceeded to Canada to report to the governor, and Marquette sought to recruit his failing health, for the purpose of returning to Kaskaskia to establish a mission among the Illinois. He set out in the fall of the succeeding year, but was detained during the winter at Chicago by a return of his malady. In the following March, deeming himself sufficiently recovered, and the cabin where he had wintered being threatened by the spring floods, his party launched their canoes and floated down the river to Kaskaskia. The mission was established about Easter Sunday, 1675, and was called by its zealous founder, "The Immaculate Conception." It was the first of its kind in the State. Having completed his work, his continued ill health made him anxious to return. He never saw his beloved Mackinaw again. This was his last journey. He died on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan, May 19th, 1675, a martyr to his religious enthusiasm. The succeeding year his remains were taken up and buried at Mackinaw by his Indian followers.

Marquette was actuated by a sincere desire to Christianize the wild humanity about him, but Robert Cavalier de la Salle, the intrepid discoverer—the man to whom obstacles were but incentives to greater exertions—sought the glory and renown that would redound to La Belle France. His first colony, of any importance, was established in this county in December, 1682.

La Salle and Henri deTonti, on their first recorded voyage down the Illinois river, passed the Indian town, Kaskaskia, in December, 1679, and continued on to the outlet of Peoria Lake, where they landed and formed a colony (the pioneer settlement in the State). La Salle returned to Canada the succeeding spring, for supplies to prosecute his intended explorations of the Mississippi, leaving Tonti in command at Fort Crevecoeur as the new settlement was called. In pursuance of orders by his chief, the latter proceeded to fortify the sandstone bluff, Starved Rock, near the Indian town, but his force was so much weakened by desertion that he was compelled to desist. He determined to remain and hold his position at Kaskaskia until La Salle should return. He was hardly settled before the Iroquois attacked the town and drove him up the river. Landing somewhere near Marseilles, "to repair their crazy vessel and dry their baggage," one of their party, Father Gabriel Ribourde, a Recollet friar, attracted by the beauty of the surrounding scenery, wandered away from camp and was killed by the Kickapoos. The remainder of the party made their way to Green Bay, where they passed the winter. La Salle returned to find a scene of terrible desecration at the Illinois town, and anxious about his lieutenant, went down to the mouth of the Illinois, and returning passed the winter of 1680 and 1681 at Fort Miami, on the St. Joseph river, Michigan. In the spring he learned of Tonti's safety. During the winter he formed the plan of a colony on the Illinois, on the sandstone bluff (Starved Rock), prospective of the explorations of the Mississippi. The design was to include French and Indians of various tribes as a protective coalition against the dreaded Iroquois. To this end he conciliated the Miamis and the parts of tribes recently under King Phillip of New England, by promising them protection against the encroachments of the Five Nations, and a supply of their peculiar commodities in exchange for furs. He then proceeded to Canada to appease his numerous creditors and prepare for the new enterprise, meeting with Tonti at Mackinaw. Again furnished with means he reached the Illinois in the winter of 1681 and 1682. He found the streams all frozen, but finally reached the open water at the lower end of Peoria Lake. Without waiting for more extended preparations, having been so often disappointed, he set out for the Gulf of Mexico, which he reached April 6th, 1682, and taking possession in the name of his Sovereign, Louis XIV. of France, of all the land drained by the Mississippi, he called the new acquisition "Louisiana." Ascending the river the daring voyager was seized with a dangerous illness. He sent Tonti forward to Mackinaw, with instructions to transmit the news of his discovery to Canada, and return to the Illinois. He recovered sufficiently to rejoin his lieutenant at the former place before the latter's departure. He purposed going to France in the interest of his colony, but, learning of the proximity of the dreaded Iroquois, he remained and followed Tonti to the Illinois, where he had sent him. On the sandstone bluff (Starved Rock), that had been La Salle's chosen locality for the erection of a fort ever since he first observed it, they began their work. It was December, and cold, but they cleared away the top of the rock, built store-houses and dwellings, and enclosed all with a stockade. On the neighboring bottoms were domiciled his swarthy allies, to the number of four thousand warriors, or twenty thousand souls.

The succeeding year Count Frontenac, the governor of Canada, who had from the beginning been La Salle's coadjutor in his explorations, was replaced by La Barre, who was adverse to his undertakings, detained his men when sent for supplies, and endeavored to belittle his discovery to the home government. He must go to France. His want of goods promised to the Indians, and their growing uneasiness because of rumors current among the neighboring tribes that he was keeping them there to be butchered by the Iroquois, were matters that urged immediate attention. There was no resource but the protection of the court. Accordingly, early in the autumn of 1683 he left Tonti in command of Fort St. Louis (Starved Rock), bade farewell to his savage retainers, and descended to Quebec, intending to sail for France. On the way he met Chevalier de Baugis, who had been sent by La Barre to take possession of the Fort. De Baugis was well received by Tonti, the two living amicably together during the winter. In March of the following year the Iroquois attacked the rocky citadel, but withdrew after an unsuccessful siege of six days, taking with them a few prisoners, who eventually escaped.

Meanwhile LaSalle had returned to France. By his influence four vessels were fitted out with a complement of men and tools. They sailed for the mouth of the Mississippi, La Salle's idea being to form a colony there to control the trade of the river. One of the vessels was lost, and eventually only a small colony was established, whose supplies were soon exhausted. La Salle set out for Fort St. Louis, on the Illinois, and was assassinated in the wilds of Texas by two disaffected members of his party.

Tonti, re-instated in command of Fort St. Louis by order of the king, learning of the destitution of the infant colony on the Mississippi, fitted out, at his own expense, an expedition for their relief, which he directed in person. He made a fruitless search for his chief and party, and returned, leaving two of his men at a village of the Arkansas Indians, to seek for traces of them. The desponding remnant of La Salle's band was rescued by these men, and they arrived at "The Rock" on the fourteenth day of September, 1687. Here, welcomed by Bellefontaine, Tonti's second in command—the latter being absent fighting the Iroquois*—they rested from their labors and privations, and finally made their way to France, having carefully concealed the death of La Salle. When he heard of the death of his chief he had served so faithfully, Tonti wasted no time in useless regrets, but set out with an expedition to save his suffering colonies on the Mississippi. He was not successful, and finally reached "The Rock" in September, 1689.

In 1700 France attempted a new colony at the mouth of the Mississippi, under the leadership of M. d'Iberville. Tonti, who had remained at the Fort since the death of La Salle, rendered him invaluable assistance by his intimate acquaintance with the Indian languages and tribes living along the river. With this expedition to assist M. d'Iberville, Tonti's name disappears from authentic history. One account states that he was forcibly displaced from the command of Fort St. Louis in 1702, for some alleged irregularity, after which he wandered into southern wilds until 1718, when, in shattered health, he returned to the scene of his former glory, and dying in the fort, was buried at the west side of the Rock. Another rumor speaks of him as remaining in Illinois a number of years, and finally returning to France.

Nothing authentic is known of Fort St. Louis after 1700. It has been stated that the Frenchmen in control of the fort after the disappearance of Tonti, treated the Indian maidens so scurvily, in the eyes of their fathers and brothers, that the latter decided to destroy the fort and drive away its inhabitants. Accordingly, the Indians having assembled early one morning, warned the soldiers away, and burned the stockade. St. Cosme speaks of the fort as abandoned in 1699. Charlevoix in 1721 saw palisades on "The Rock," and thought they were built by the Illinois.

The mission, "Immaculate Conception," founded by Marquette, was removed prior to 1690, by Father Gravier, to Kaskaskia, in the south part of the State.

The French thus introduced into the Illinois valley have continued to reside there ever since. They intermarried with the Indians, and though still retaining the name of French settlers, are really an intermediate race between the Caucasian and Aborigines. The only governmental authority exercised over them was that of the priests. This control was more spiritual than temporal. In this way they lived until after the treaty of Paris in 1763.

*A small cannon was found while excavating for a street in the city of Ottawa. It is about fourteen inches long and one and one-half inch calibre; one side of the muzzle being blown off. It is a simple iron tube, with rings shrunk upon it to increase its strength. Parkman, to whose work, "Discovery of the Great West," we are much indebted, thinks the gun antiquated even in the time of De Soto. It may have been constructed by a French blacksmith on the spot.

Patrick Kennedy, who made a voyage of discovery up the Illinois in 1773, speaks of the French as residing on an island near Joliet; of their getting a hard variety of stone from the rapids for their millstones, and of their making salt from the salt ponds on the south bank of the Illinois, opposite the west end of Buffalo Rock.

During the Black Hawk War many of the Indian actors of those tragic times were considered by the whites as of French and Indian ancestry.

On the American bottom at the present time there are families that trace their lineage back to the days of Tonti.

France held the possessions acquired by LaSalle's discoveries until 1760, when a large share of them were ceded to the British Crown. She desired to retain New France, or the country of the Illinois, on account of its fertile valleys, beautiful prairies, and the abundance of game, but three years later was obliged to surrender it also to England.

Col. Geo. Rogers Clark, a Kentucky patriot of 1776, wrested this new territory from the rule of George III. in 1778, by a bold move, and it became a county of Virginia. Subsequently it passed to the control of the United States, and finally, in 1818, a part of it became the State of Illinois. The territory now known as LaSalle County was mostly if not wholly occupied by Indians at that time.

Edward Sanders, a carpenter at Fort Dearborn, who had become disaffected, was sent out by the commandant of the post in 1815, to explore the country about the mouth of Fox River. He was pleased, and returned in 1830 and made a permanent settlement on Section 12, Town 34, Range 4, where he died.

Major S. H. Long, U. S. A., while making the preliminary survey of the Illinois and Michigan canal, in 1816 and 1817, notices the out-crop of coal, and advances the idea that in some past age there must have been a waterfall on the Illinois River, near the present La Salle.

In 1818, Hon. Guerdon S. Hubbard, who was sent out by the American Fur Company to found trading posts, passed through the county, along the river. He found no white persons—the country wholly occupied by Indians.

During the years 1819 and 1820, the county was divided into townships by the Rector brothers, Stephen, Stycia and Charles, and in the following year the townships were sectionized by George Thomas, J. F. McColium, and Nelson Piper. At that time all the north part of the State was called Sangamon county. In 1823 Peoria county was formed, with Peoria as the county seat. The commissioners of that county in 1826 fixed the boundaries of Fox River Precinct, from Senatchwine Creek to the river La Page, (Du Page,) or in other words, from Chillicothe, up the Illinois to near its head-waters. Gideon Hawley and — Beresford were Justices of the Peace. The place of voting was David Walker's house, at the mouth of Fox River.

Under the jurisdiction of Peoria county the first marriage occurred, which is here inserted :

{ STATE OF ILLINOIS, PEORIA COUNTY,
July 22d, 1829.

This is to certify, that Willard Scott and Caroline Hawley were this day united in marriage by me.

ISAAC SCARRET, Missionary.

Fox River Precinct.

It seems, for some cause, that the place of voting was changed from David Walker's, at the mouth of Fox River, as the first recorded election took place at the house of John Green, at Green's Mills, now Dayton, on the second day of August, 1830. Pierce Hawley, John Green and Samuel Grove, were judges of election, John Green certifying to the qualifications of his associates, and Pierce Hawley to the qualifications of Mr. Green. The following is the list of voters: John Green, Hugh Walker, Pierce Hawley, Wm. Parcell, Edmond Weed, Joseph Grove, John Silsaver, Alexander McKee, Reason Debold, Peter Lamsett, Jacob Grove, Samuel Grove, Robert Beresford, and Henry Brumbach.

Three of the fourteen voted for John Reynolds for Governor, the others for William Kinne. All the votes polled were cast for Rigdon B. Slocum for Lieutenant-Governor, Henry Stillman for Sheriff, and John Sharp, John Hamlin and Stephen French for County Commissioners.

About this time the Illinois and Michigan canal was attracting considerable attention, and the State laid out the village of Ottawa, now known as South Ottawa, the plat of which was recorded at Mackinaw, Sept. 5th, 1830, then the county seat of Peoria county, now a small town of Tazewell county.

On the fifteenth day of January, 1831, Gov. John Reynolds signed the bill that erected three new counties from the north part of Peoria, named respectively, from east to west, Cook, La Salle, and Putnam. The boundaries of La Salle were as follows: Beginning at the S. W. corner of township 29, range 1, east of the 3d P. M., thence east eight townships, (forty-eight miles,) thence north eighteen townships, (one hundred and eight miles,) to the north line of the State, thence west eight townships along that line, to the 3d P. M., and thence south along the 3d P. M. to the place of beginning. This territory contained one hundred and forty-four townships, and was believed to have from five to seven hundred inhabitants at the date of organization. Ottawa was designated as the county seat.

On the seventh day of March an election was held in the new county. George E. Walker was chosen Sheriff, Moses Borth, Coroner, John Green, James B. Campbell and Abraham Trumbo, County Commissioners. At the first meeting of the latter, March 21st, David Walker was appointed Clerk of the Board, and the county divided into three election precincts.

The first, which included ranges 1 and 2, east of 3d P. M., was called Vermillion, with the polls at the house of David Letts, who lived in township 32, range 1, Wm. Seeley, Martin Reynolds and David Letts being judges of election. The second, which included ranges 3 and 4, east of 3d P. M., was called Ottawa, with the polls at David Walker's, at Ottawa, John Brown, Edward Keys and Samuel Allen judges of election. The third, which included ranges 5, 6, 7, and 8, east of 3d P. M., was called Eastern. The polls were at the house of Vetal Vermett, Holderman's Grove, and the judges of election were John Daugherty, Edward Weed and Wm. Scamerhorn.

The commissioners assembled in special session April 2d, 1831, and selected a grand and petit jury, and levied a tax of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on all personal property. A boat forty-five feet long and nine feet wide, "with two side oars and one steering oar," was also ordered, agreeable to the State law of January 15th, 1831, creating the counties, which compelled the commissioners to maintain a ferry at the county seat. At the September term this boat was accepted, James Brown receiving \$65.00 for building, and Thomas True \$2.00 for a rope for it. The ferry was let to the former for one year, and the rates specified as follows:

" man and horse,	-	-	-	-	-	12½c.
" horse, jack, or mule,	-	-	-	-	-	6¼c.
" Dearborn chair, or sulky with springs,	-	-	-	-	-	50c.
" two-horse wagon, drawn by horses or oxen,	-	-	-	-	-	50c.
" two-horse wagon, drawn by four horses or oxen,	-	-	-	-	-	75c.
" head of cattle,	-	-	-	-	-	6¼c.
" bbl. of whisky, salt or pork,	-	-	-	-	-	12½c.
" bushel of wheat or other grain,	-	-	-	-	-	3c.

This tariff was doubled in time of high water. It pertained to all non-residents of the county, excepting county officers and the canal commissioners..

The first marriage, after the organization of the county, was that of Sheldon Bartholomew to Charlotte Hogaboom. It took place, according to the records, June 22d, 1831.

The fees of the commissioners and their clerk were $1.50 per day, the latter also receiving 6¼ cents for entering each order of court.

At the session of April 16th, 1831, Wm. Richey was appointed Assessor, and September 5th he was allowed $20.00 for his work. He received the appointment the succeeding year.

June 6th, 1831, the commissioners, for the sum of $20.00, granted license to Wilburn F. Walker to sell goods. This is the first record of any one engaged in merchandising, but during the next two years quite a number appear upon the records, the license being reduced from $20.00 to $7.00.

At the above meeting of the board, a road was authorized from Ottawa to the east line of the State. Vetal Vermett, Joseph Cloud and James Galloway were the viewers. This was the first road laid out in the county. Shortly afterwards there was one surveyed along the Vermillion River, leading to Vandalia. David Letts was the first road supervisor, and began work on the latter road. Wm. Seeley, at this meeting, was appointed school commissioner. The county had not as yet a place of records. Accordingly, we find at this session an allowance of $7.00 for carrying the poll books seventy miles to "Macacna," still the county seat of Peoria county. The official bond of David Walker, Clerk of the Board, for $1,000 was presented, signed by G. W. Walker and Vetal Vermett, and approved.

In the following July (12th), attention was called to the poor, some of whom were undoubtedly present, for David Shaffer and Edward Keys were appointed overseers.

In December, the board authorized the building of a court house, 16 feet by 24, two stories high, part of which was designed for a jail. For the sum of $5.00, they granted license to Joseph Cloud, to act as auctioneer, and recommended him to the Postmaster General, as a suitable person to be appointed postmaster at Ottawa. At this time the mails all came up the river, by way of Peoria. For some time Mr. Cloud distributed the portion intended for Ottawa, from his hat. In 1832, a mail route was opened from the center of the State, via Decatur and Fox river, to Chicago. It was not formally established, however, until 1837, Daniel E. Ebersol being the first mail carrier.

Just here it might be well to mention the first estate that was ever entered for probate in the county. Anthony Antonio, a man of color, (so mentioned in the records,) died about the end of February, 1831, and left some effects. It was thought best to take care of the goods for any heirs that might appear. The Judge, Joseph Cloud, accordingly appointed

Lewis Baily administrator, and John Slater, Jacob Potts and Stewart Ward appraisers. In the list appears coats, pants, handkerchiefs, powder, shot, one rifle, a razor, a bottle of turpentine and one pair of truss irons, in all, with $6.98 cash, $26.78. The property was sold in December, and brought $20.75.

In the March (5th), 1832, term of the Commissioners court, an estray pen was authorized, and horses and cattle over three years old were placed in the list of half per cent. taxable property. George E. Walker was allowed $30.00 for his services as Sheriff, which extended back beyond the date of organization.

The first tavern license was granted to Simon Crozier, on July 19th, 1832. He was allowed to sell spirits. On September 4th, George Hollenbeck received a like license for Ottawa. September 3d., L. S. Robbins, Circuit Clerk, received $5.00 for his services, from April 27th, 1831, to July 20th, 1832.

George E. Walker turned over to the County Treasurer, on the 26th day of October, 1832, the taxes collected, amounting in the aggregate to $141.42; $69.46 being for personal property, $58.25 on lands, and $11.31 on town lots.

SETTLEMENTS.

The first white settler in the county, since the French occupation, was Dr. Davidson. By birth, he was said to have been a Virginian, and by occupation, a physician, but while he lived here, he was known as an Indian trader. His cabin stood on the south bank of the Illinois, opposite the west end of Buffalo Rock, near the salt marsh. He came in 1823, and died in his cabin in 1826.

In 1823, Rev. Jesse Walker came into the county, and the following year formed a mission among the Indians on the Fox river, within the present town of Mission. This mission included Section 15, Town 35, Range 5. At an early day it came into the possession of the Bourbonnas, and the grove was known by that name for a long time. According to the fourth article of the treaty of Prairie Du Chien, perfected July 29th, 1829, the section on which the mission was located and the adjacent fields were reserved from the general transfer of lands, to Francois Bourbounna, Jr., by whom it was sold to Mern E. Bowen and Hon. J. S. Armstrong.

In 1824, Mr. Thomas R. Covil came and settled on the creek that now bears his name. Also the following settlers established themselves in the county: Joseph Brown, George Brown, Lewis Bailey, Enos Pembroke, Pierce Hawley, James Beresford, and Warner Ramsey. In the spring, 1825, Moses Borth, Christopher Long, Geo. Sprague, Horace Sprague, the Pembrokes—Jeremiah, David, and Calvin, Mr. Ransom, and Edmond Weed.

In the fall of that year Wibur F. Walker brought a keel-boat load of provisions up the Illinois. This was the first commercial enterprise in the county.

In the fall of 1826, Dr. David Walker, father of Geo. E., Wilbur F., and David Walker, established himself at Ottawa.

From this time until the Black Hawk war, settlements were not very rapid, among which may be mentioned, Wm. Richey, in 1828, on the land now owned by Wm. C. Moore, Section 17, Town 33, Range 3. Mr. Richey in the winter of 1831, made a permanent settlement within the present limits of Marseilles, and was the first settler in that place. The Greens, John the father, and David and Jesse the sons, established themselves on Fox river, in 1829 or '30. They came from Ohio, and traveled as far south as Vandalia, but appreciating the advantages to be derived from the water power on the rapids of Fox river, located themselves there. Having brought with them saw-mill machinery and competent workmen, they built a saw-mill, and afterwards a small grist-mill. At that time, however, the latter was considered quite an improvement on the hominy block, or even the horse mill. At first there was but one run of stone manufactured by the mill-wright, Wm. Stadden, from a granite boulder taken from the river. The first grist of wheat was ground July 4th, 1830. This was the pioneer mill, and for a number of years the place about it, was known as "Green's Mills." It was not uncommon to see a number of camp-fires about the mill at night. People came from fifty to a hundred miles to get grinding done, and were obliged to wait their turn, oftentimes for weeks. Josiah Fulton, one of the early inhabitants of Peoria, (1819,) states, that one year the Green settlement was destitute of provisions, but did not lack means to purchase if it was possible to obtain them. Word was brought from the Sangamon settlement at Springfield, that if they, (the Greens) would send a keel-boat by way of the Illinois and Sangamon rivers, the settlers along the banks of the latter would load it with provisions. Rev. Jesse Walker obtained a boat at Peru, and with Fulton as pilot, reached the vicinity of Springfield, and having loaded it, returned to Starved Rock, (as far as they could go up the river,) from whence they, (the provisions,) were conveyed by wagons to the settlement. They arrived in time to do the most good.

Perhaps it would not be out of place to give the narrative of the trials and difficulties incident to a journey of an early settler into the county. The cloth covered wagons, known as prairie schooners, are no rarity at the present day. Their methods of camping, also, are quite familiar. Essentially, the same experience occurred to those who emigrated to this county in an early day. Making the journey around the Lakes, however, is quite another affair.

Originally from Pennsylvania, but settled for a short time at Sandusky, Ohio, then a small village, Mr. James Galloway learned of the beautiful prairies of Illinois, and determined to see them. Accordingly, in the fall of 1824, he left Sandusky on horseback, and made the trip to Chicago without incident. Here he remained nearly a year, hunting and trapping. In some of his excursions he visited the Grand Rapids of the Illinois. Being pleased with the locality he purchased the claim of Edmond Weed, on Section 24, Town 33, Range 4, just across and south of the Illinois river from Marseilles. A cabin was here erected, the first in the east end of the county. During the following year, (1825,) he returned to Sandusky for his family.

At that time it was exceedingly rare for vessels to make the trip to Chicago. In fact, but few had ventured to do so, and pilots were hard to obtain. Mr. Galloway, who was well to do, considering the times, knew the wants of the country where he designed to settle, and purposely laid in a stock of goods, not only for his own use, but for the purposes of trade with the Indians. He purchased twenty barrels of salt, a handful being equal to a mink skin, while the latter sold for twenty cents. Bacon and flour, with two hundred traps, besides a variety of household goods, constituted the property he desired to carry to the new country. It would be next to an impossibility to transport this miscellaneous assortment across the country, consequently he waited the arrival of a vessel bound for Chicago. During the month of August, 1826, he learned of one about to sail, and made arrangements to go. He was disappointed in not making the trip in summer, on account of the tardiness of the Captain, who did not seem in any particular hurry. On the first day of October, however, the vessel left the port. The approach of winter had not the slightest effect to hurry the Captain. He laid over a week at Detroit, to indulge his imbibing habits, and another spree was in order at Mackinaw. Every person on the vessel was a stranger to the lake. While they lay at Mackinaw a storm of sleet and wind from the north-west arose. The Captain, just full enough of liquor to be obstinate, persisted in starting, refusing even to listen to the warnings of the inhabitants about the fort. They sailed. About fourteen miles from the fort, they were obliged to turn back to Mackinaw. While rounding the point of the island of St. Helena, the vessel suddenly struck a sand bar, and the pitiless waves dashed over her. With great difficulty the crew and passengers made their way to the island; they were utterly shelterless, with the thermometer below the freezing point. There were no means of communicating their distressful condition to the port,—a death by starvation and exposure was before them. They were saved by the merest accident.

It has been remarked, that vessels seldom passed that way, and especially now, at this inclement season, it would seem almost a special Providence, should one appear.

The American Fur Company's vessel which, spring and fall, made the trip of the lakes, to recruit the supplies of its posts, at Mackinaw and Chicago, left the former place, three or four days after the departure of the Galloways, came in sight, was hailed, and brought to. The salt in the stranded vessel was a total loss, the flour was badly damaged, but a part of it was saved, as well as the bacon, traps and other effects. The Captain of the Fur Company's vessel hesitated about taking such a miscellaneous assortment of goods, destined for a port where one of their posts was established, and opened communication with the agent at Mackinaw, who was disposed to make severe terms. The goods could be carried to Chicago in the Company's vessel, but they must be consigned to their agent there, and kept by him until after the tenth of the following May—the end of the trading season. Mr. Galloway felt indignant, and said they might as well throw the goods into the lake. The Captain of the vessel endeavored to appear friendly, and offered to withhold the letter of instructions to the agent at Chicago, until Mr. Galloway had an opportunity to dispose of his goods. Thus reassured, he embarked.

The vessel was crowded, every available place being occupied. Besides the two crews and the Galloway family, which, at that time, consisted of James Galloway and wife, Mary, aged thirteen, Jane, aged nine, Susana, aged two years, there were two carpenters on board, who were coming on to do some work at the fort, and a Mr. Arthur and wife, who expected to engage in farming. There were others that Mrs. Archy Clyburn (formerly Mary Galloway, to whom we are indebted for this narrative) could not remember. All felt kindly to Mr. Galloway, and agreed to stand by him in the event of trouble.

The vessel landed about opposite Madison street, near the headquarters of the Fur Company, at that time under the control of Jean Baptist Beaubien. The Captain told Mr. Galloway to find a place to store his goods, and he started out to do so. After Mr. Galloway was out of sight, he handed the letter of instructions to Mons. Beaubien, who hastened to secure help to unload the goods and put them in the Company's warehouse, an old tumble-down affair.

Mr. Galloway went to the fort, almost unoccupied, and endeavored to secure storage for his effects, but without success. He was even denied shelter for his family. It was afterward ascertained that the commandant was secretly in league with the Fur Company. Finding no place and protection for his goods, Mr. Galloway was apprized of the treachery of the Captain, and the general determination of the Company to usurp the trade of the post. Undecided as to his future course, he retraced his steps to the landing.

The arrival of the schooner at the place had drawn out a large, mixed crowd of Americans, French, half-breeds and Indians. Mr. Galloway, during his former visit, had formed many friends among them, especially of the denizens of a rival settlement, called by the euphonious title of Hard-Scrabble, a grove in the vicinity of where Bridgeport now stands. These people, with his fellow-passengers, were disposed to dispute the right of the company to control this matter. The forces of each side were counted, and Mr. Galloway's found to be in the majority. This compelled Mons. Beaubien to desist, although he uttered some terrible execrations, in mixed French and English, because he could not carry out the instructions of the agent at Mackinaw.

There was no storage to be obtained at the landing. Alexander Robinson, a half-breed chief of the Pottawatamies, said to him, "I have a cabin at Hard-Scrabble which my friend is welcome to if he wants." Mr. Galloway gladly accepted the kind offer. They loaded the flat boat of Mr. Wallace with the goods, and poled it up the Chicago River, four miles from the fort, and landed them near the cabin. It was on the west tributary of the South Branch. The winter of 1826 and 1827 was severe, and the family suffered much from cold and the crowded condition of their home. They were frequently visited by Indians, their cabin being farthest out from the settlement, and near the most frequented trail to the Fox and Desplaines rivers. When the red men were full of whisky they were very unpleasant visitors. The Galloways, recently from civilization, and no doubt remembering the horrors of Indian butchery in early times, as well as unaccustomed to Indian peculiarities, were in much trepidation all winter, Mr. Galloway being at work on his claim, at the Grand Rapids, most of the time.

The Chicago of 1826 presented a bleak aspect, made up of timber and prairie. Near the mouth of the river, then at the foot of Madison Street, was the cabin of Jean Baptist Beaubien, and a shanty warehouse, somewhat nearer the lake. Old Fort Dearborn was farther up the river, near the present site of Rush Street Bridge. Opposite the fort, a double log house, occupied jointly by John Kinzie and Alexander Walcott. Near this, the blacksmith shop of David McKey and Joseph Parthrick. At the forks of the river was a log house used as a store, owned and occupied by James Kinzie and David Hall, of Virginia.

Hard-Scrabble contained five or six cabins. Several were occupied by the Laframboises, of whom there were four, Francis, Sr., Francis, Jr., Joseph and Claude. One was occupied by Mr. Wallace, another by Barney Lawton, the Galloways were domiciled in one, and there was still another, but Mrs. Clyburn does not remember its occupant. The Clyburns lived in two cabins on the North Branch. These were occupied by Jonah, the father, Archibald and Henly, the sons, and a relative, James K. Clark. This settlement was on Clyburn Place, opposite the North Chicago Rolling Mills.

In the spring Mr. Galloway and Mr. Arthur, whose families had lived together during the winter, for the most of the time, constructed a double boat, or pirogue, from a walnut tree standing on the bank of the river, and, having placed their worldly effects into it, started for their new home. Mrs. Galloway was certainly glad to go, for she speaks of Chicago as "the jumping off place."

The craft was poled up the river into Mud Lake, and across this to the Desplaines, then a feat of no great difficulty, and floated down the river to their future home. Trials by flood with them were over, for the present at least. Settled in their new cabin on the bank of the river, they recounted their experiences, and exulted in their happy deliverance. Before them was the Illinois, abounding with fish, and the bark canoes of their swarthy neighbors could be seen upon its bosom almost any hour of the day. The buffalo had disappeared two years before their coming, but their whitening carcasses were to be observed on every hand. (The last of the buffaloes was killed by Samuel Aimes, at Troy Grove, in 1837.) Deer were plenty, and prairie wolves were exceedingly numerous, and impudent. Prairie chickens awakened the settlers in the spring mornings with boomings under their windows. Mr. Galloway, who was exceedingly fond of fishing and hunting, thought he had found the sportsman's paradise.

The year they settled here, (1827,) a notable incident occurred. The family had retired for the night, when a loud noise was heard outside, accompanied by a loud rapping on the door. The men jumped for their rifles and tomahawks, always near at hand, but were soon reassured by a voice addressing them in good English, saying, "My name is Cass, I want to speak to you." Opening the door, Lewis Cass, accompanied by Geo. Forsyth and some Frenchmen and Indians, stepped into the cabin. Mr. Cass informed them that the Winnebago and Sac were, it was feared, on the point of making trouble, as some depredations had already been committed on the Mississippi. He advised them to go to the fort at Ottawa. The advice was followed, but it proved to be a scare, and they returned to their home after a few days.

In the cabin erected by Mr. Galloway a son was born to him, George Galloway, believed to be the first white male child born in the county.

The sparse population of the precinct, and the difficulties attending the obtaining of a living, as well as subduing the wilderness, engrossed the attention of the pioneers of the county, and schools were not thought about. The growing children must be taught. The little education possessed by their parents was dearly prized, and they, (the latter,) were willing to make many sacrifices to bring about such a desirable end. Accordingly, in 1828, arrangements were perfected with a Mr. Horace Sprague to organize a select school. Mr. Henry Allen gave the use of a log cabin, erected by him in 1825, on the south side of the Illinois River, at the point overlooking the mouth of Fox River. Mr. Sprague was succeeded by a Mr. Kirkpatrick, and he, in turn, by a Mr. Allen, all occupying the same house. Some years after Mr. Alonzo Sawyer opened a select school, but moved to Chicago in a year or two. Mr. T. Hampton followed him, continuing in that occupation until he, in connection with Mr. H. E.

Gedney, established The Ottawa Republican. In 1855 graded schools were organized, and have successfully continued to the present time.

During 1830 and 1831 the great snow fell. It began on the night of December 29th, 1830, and reached the depth of two and one half feet. Just one week from that time, (Jan. 5th,) another storm occurred, the fall of which was as deep as the former. Both of these settled to a general depth of five feet on the prairie. By successive thawings and freezings, a crust of several inches in thickness was formed, over which the prairie wolves would run the famished deer. At first the French and Indians were compelled to use snow shoes, the construction of which was learned from an old squaw, who had been raised in Canada. In the spring the snow went off quite rapidly, producing one of the greatest floods ever known on the river.

In the spring of 1830, a number of young men of Northampton, Mass., desiring to try the realities of pioneer life, sent out a commission to select a site for a colony. This commission unanimously fixed upon La Salle, because, in their opinion, of its future commercial importance. Simon Crosiar, (spelled Crosiar and Crosier according to different members of the family) was already settled in that vicinity. During this and the following year, Aaron Gunn, and a number of others, settled in the same locality, but fearing the miasma from the overflowed bottoms, it having rained most of the season, left for Princeton. Mr. Gunn moved to Lamoille, and lived there four years, then returned to LaSalle, where he has since resided. Mr. Ayers determined to remain, and continue hammering out prairie plows for the settlers, his trade being that of a blacksmith. When he learned of the Blackhawk War, and the massacre at Indian Creek, he took up his anvil block and buried a quantity of silver under it, after which he left for Ohio. Upon his return, at the close of hostilities, he found nothing disturbed.

About this time, (1830 and 1831,) came to the county the following gentlemen, who have been more or less prominent since their settlement: Harvey, Cyrus, and J. R. Shaffer, J. A., W. L. and G. M. Donovan, Ambrose and Mathias Trumbo, Wm. Munson, D. F. Hitt, Reason Debolt, Hon. G. W. Armstrong, H. L. Brush, John Coleman, Wm. H. H. Holridge, Wm. Pitzer, and in 1832, Samuel Parr, W. H. Robertson, John Mitchell and others.

At the beginning of the year 1832, the settlements were nearly as follows: At Seneca, Abel Sprague; at Marseilles, north of the river, Wm. and Wm. W. Richey; south of the river, James Galloway; between the Illinois and Fox Rivers, Christopher Long and Edward Keys, and farther northeast, David Shaffer and Wm. Parr; at Dayton, the Greens and W. L. Donovan; at Indian Creek, the Halls, Davises, Pettigrews and Hendersons; at Ottawa, the Walkers, Pembrokes, Browns, and others; at Utica, Simon Crosiar; at Homer, three families near the present village of that name; at La Salle, Aaron Gunn and Burton Ayers. Along the south bank of the Illinois lived George Ish and Henry Delong; at Cedar Point, Nathaniel Richey; on the bluff, near the old fort, John Myers, and on Bailey's Point, Lewis Bailey, Wm. Seeley, Joel Alvord, Asa Holdridge, Wm. Haines, and a few others.

BLACK HAWK WAR.

Since the Winnebago troubles in 1827, there had not been a settled peace along the border, LaSalle county being just south of the old Indian boundary line. The red men seemed to be fretted and chafed under the encroachments of their white neighbors, and the latter also were unsettled, and fearful of impending trouble. News of a threatened outbreak would drive them out, in motley crowds, at break-neck speed, to the nearest fort or block-house, and, returning to their homes in a few hours, or days, to find it nothing but a "scare." In this manner the settlers lived, alternating between hope and fear; hope, that this would not last always, and fear, that in some of these "scares" reality might come, and some of their number succumb to their savage foes. News of the uneasy condition of the Indians along the Bureau reached the Hall settlement on Indian Creek, on the 17th of May, 1832, and, indeed, Old Shabbona had warned them, but, deceived so many times, they determined to remain, thinking their forces strong enough to resist successfully, should they be attacked, all the settlers having gathered at the house of Wm. Davis, at the mill dam, about two miles north of Harding. Spies were sent out in various directions to ascertain the proximity of the Indians, and returned without discovering any appearances of them. Accordingly, on the morning of the 20th all resumed their usual avocations.

About two o'clock of that day, H. R. Hall, eldest son of Wm. Hall, Mr. Davis and Mr. Robert Norris, were at work in a blacksmith shop, near Mr. Hall's house. Two other sons of Mr. Hall, Mr. Howard and son, two sons of Mr. Davis, and John R. Henderson, were breaking prairie half a mile from the house. Henry, George, and Wm. Davis, Jr., were at work on the mill dam near by; while Mr. Pettigrew, wife and three children, Mrs. Hall and three daughters, Silvia, aged seventeen, Rachel, aged fifteen, and Elizabeth, aged eight, were in the house, when suddenly a band of Indians emerged from the woods, and rushed for the door. Mr. Pettigrew, with a child in his arms, endeavored to close it, but failed, being shot, and falling inside. Mrs. Pettigrew, with her arms around Rachel Hall, was the next victim, the flash of the gun being so close as to burn the latter's cheek. An Indian seized one of Mr. Pettigrew's children by the feet and beat its brains out against a stump. A little son of Mr. Davis was held by two Indians while another shot him.

Mr. Hall, Mr. Norris, and Mr. George were killed, as well as Mr. Davis and wife. The others seeing there were about forty well armed Indians in the band, and that there was no hope in resistance, made their escape.* Silvia and Rachel Hall alone were spared. They were each seized by two stalwart savages and dragged across the creek, and hurried up the stream some distance, to a wigwam, where they were placed in charge of some squaws, and kept there all night, the warriors in the meantime pursuing their murderous work among the settlers. During the night they returned, and in the morning, after a hasty breakfast, cleared a space of ground about seventy-five feet in circumference, placing in the center a pole, and some twenty spears in a circle about it. On the top of the latter were arranged the bloody scalp of their victims, among which the girls recognized those of their parents and friends. Several hearts also adorned some of the spears. The two captives were placed near this center pole, one side of their faces painted red and the other black. Thus arranged, the warriors began a war-dance around the circle, making a hideous noise, and brandishing their spears so menacingly at the girls that they expected every moment to be impaled. This performance lasted about a half hour, after which the faces of the girls were washed, the encampment broken up, and the whole party started, Indian file, in a northerly direction, the captives being placed on ponies, each in charge of two squaws. For four or five days the journey continued in the same direction, without incident, the girls being separated while traveling, and allowed to be together while at rest, under the guardianship of the four squaws.

About the fifth day their dresses were changed for those of young Squaws, Rachel's being a red and white calico, ruffled around the bottom, and Silvia's, of the same material, but blue in color. They refused to exchange their shoes for moccasins, or to give up their combs.

On the seventh day, the Indians came to the tent of the captives and their guardians, and took Silvia away to a place where they seemed to have held a council, in which it was decided that Silvia should go with an old Indian, whom they afterward learned to be White Crow, a chief of the Winnebagoes, and that Rachel should remain where she was. Silvia refused to go unless her sister went with her. Then White Crow, seemingly under great excitement, made a speech, at the end of which, a young warrior, calling himself Rolling Thunder, went and brought Rachel. The chiefs shook hands, horses were brought, and the girls duly mounted. A Sac Indian stepped up, and with a large knife, cut two locks of hair from Rachel's head, one over the right ear, the other at the back part of her head, saying to White Crow, as he did so, "I'll have her back again." Another Indian took a similar lock from Silvia's head, uttering the same remark. White Crow started with the girls, guarded by his band, riding rapidly all night, and halting at day light, at a camp of the Winnebagoes, where on a bed of blankets and furs, the girls were allowed to rest. From here they traveled all day in canoes, camping at evening on the banks of a stream, the name of which they never knew, doubtless, either the Fox or Mississippi river. Here they remained during the day, White Crow being absent. In the evening he returned, and approaching the captives, for the first time, addressed them in English. He asked if their parents were dead, and if they had any brothers or sisters. They replied despondingly, that they supposed all were massacred. He shook his head, seemed very sorry, and informed them he was about to take them home. After a comfortable night, White Crow, with twenty-six of his followers, on the tenth morning of their captivity, embarked in canoes with his charges, and crossed the stream, then, all mounting ponies, they traveled all day, arriving at night at a place where several Indian families were encamped. Here, for the first time, they had potatoes, coffee and bread to eat. As they lay down to sleep at night, White Crow placed himself beside the captives, lit his pipe, and kept vigil all night. Next morning, after an early breakfast, the journey was resumed. About three o'clock, there was a halt for dinner, consisting of broiled venison and duck's eggs. The latter being added, the girls were unable to eat them, but the Indians appeared to relish them greatly. At evening, they arrived opposite the fort, at Blue Mounds, northwest of Galena. White Crow took Rachel's handkerchief, no longer white, and, making a flag of truce of it, approached the fort. He was met by an interpreter, who, learning what he wanted, returned to the fort. Mr. Henry Gratiot, the Indian agent, came out, and the captives were delivered to him, who conducted them inside. Here, with much joy, they met two of their uncles, Edward and Resin Hall, who had been instrumental in arranging with White Crow for their ransom. Accompanied by an escort of soldiers, the girls set out for Galena. At White Oak Springs, they met their brother John W. Hall, whom they had supposed murdered, at the time of the massacre. Reaching Galena, they were conducted to St. Louis, from whence they were taken to the house of an uncle, in Cass Co., Ill., having been in captivity over a month. Remaining here until the following September, they then returned to Bureau County, their only remaining brother, John W. Hall, having prepared a home for them in that county.

Congress voted them a donation in money, and the State gave them each a floating title to one hundred and sixty acres of land, Rachel's lying in part within the present limits of Marseilles, and the remainder on Section 19, Fall River township.

In March, 1833, Rachel was married to Wm. Munson, Esq., and in the following May, Silvia also married Rev. Wm. S. Horn.

Mr. Munson moved to his present home, about three miles north of Harding, with his young bride, and in time, was surrounded with the comforts of wealth, and an interesting family. Mrs. Munson died May 1st, 1870.

Mrs. Horn is still living with her husband, at Lincoln, Nebraska.

A fine monument has recently been erected over the graves of the slain, through the liberality of Mrs. Munson.

At the breaking out of the war, many of the settlers left the county for their respective homes, in other states, where they had resided. A few of the most resolute remained, and from these, with some of the troops, recently discharged at Ottawa, Colonel, (afterward General) Jacob Fry, organized a regiment for the second campaign of the war, to rendezvous at the fort, near La Salle, erected some time previous, by Lieutenant Wilburn, to protect the stores entrusted to him by Colonel March, and called from its founder "Fort Wilburn." The regiment participated in nearly all the principal engagements, until the close of the campaign. It is but justice to say, that Colonel Fry sustained General James D. Henry, in all his troubles with jealous officers in camp, as well as the enemy in front.

Mr. George E. Walker also organized a band of friendly Indians for the war. An incident is related of this gentleman, growing out of the Indian Creek massacre, that is well worthy of record. Two Indians were apprehended as members of the band concerned in that terrible slaughter, but were discharged on bail, Mr. Walker becoming their surety for appearance. They thought they were cleared, and departed for their reservation west of the Mississippi. At a subsequent meeting of the court, Mr. Walker, as Sheriff of the County, was called upon to produce them. He went to their reservation and told them what he wanted. Without apparent feeling, they bid good bye to their friends, and started on their journey back, expecting to suffer the penalty of the law, for their crime, upon their arrival. They then traveled more as friends than as offenders, in charge of an officer, sleeping side by side at night, assisting in procuring game for subsistence, and the Indians several times finding the way, when the party were lost. In due time they reached Ottawa, when, after their trial, they were acquitted.

Near Indian Creek, Mr. James Beresford was killed by Indians, in June, 1832, across Fox River, on Section 22, Rutland Township. William

FALL RIVER TOWNSHIP

Schermerhorn, and his son-in-law Jacob Hazelton were also murdered. The circumstances are briefly these:

The gentlemen named had bought an improvement on a part of the old mission farm, begun by Rev. Jessie Walker, of whom they purchased it. While at work they were informed that the Indians were upon them. Taking their team they set out at night for Indiana, but meeting the troops under General Atchkinson, returned to Ottawa. Some time in June they started to go up to their claim, about a half hour behind a body of troops. As the latter passed along the river, one of the soldiers thought he saw an Indian, but was laughed at by his companions. Soon after the report of a gun was heard, but was attributed to the snap of a horse's hoof.

Messrs. Schermerhorn and Hazelton were leisurely driving along, when a shot was fired at them. Turning about, they started for Ottawa, on a brisk trot. They met a soldier, who had been detained for some cause, to whom they related what had happened. He asked them why they did not cut off the harness from their horses, and run for it. They replied, that they were doing well as it was. While they were talking, three Indians crossed the road in front of them. The soldier was solicited to stay and fight it out with them, which he agreed to do. Directly as they concluded this bargain, three other Indians crossed the road in the same direction. The soldier, seeing this accession to the forces of the enemy, put spurs to his horse and galloped for Ottawa. The other men were shot. The soldier reported the facts to Captain Adam W. Linder, and a party was sent out to bring in the bodies. They were unsuccessful. The next day the Captain himself went out and found them in the tall grass, by the road side, horribly mutilated.

The collars were cut to pieces and the harness gone. Taking the inner bark off a linn or basswood tree, a harness was constructed of it, and the bodies taken to Ottawa by Reason Debolt, Wm. Armstrong, and one other settler, that Mr. Reason Debolt, to whom we are indebted for this narrative, does not remember. They were buried on block three, town of South Ottawa.

Rev. Adam Payne was also killed by Indians, about three miles north-east of Marseilles, on the farm now owned by Milton Brundage, Esq. He was a prominent minister on the frontier, and is described as a very exemplary man. Many of the settlers speak of the sermon he delivered in Chicago, just before his departure to the Fox River, where he was murdered, as one of his best efforts. Old Piper, an Indian who lived about the vicinity long after the war, pointed out the spot to Joseph Brumbach. It was also recognized by the troops, who saw the buzzards flying over the body.

At the close of the Black Hawk war Peru and LaSalle had no existence. Ottawa, or South Ottawa, as it is now called, consisted of a rough board court house, sixteen by twenty feet, a log jail, a log building called the fort, and two frames unenclosed; one small building occupied by David Walker as a dwelling, and a ten by twelve shanty, in which Henry Hicks dispensed whisky, shot, powder, blankets and baubles, to the natives, of which there were about forty or fifty who made this their summer head-quarters, as well as five or six white men who had claimed their residence here during and before the war. No towns had been laid out except Ottawa, the whole inhabitants of the county not numbering more than one hundred persons. When the Indian troubles were definitely settled, by the exterminative battle of Bad Ax, immigration began. The internal improvement system, that was strongly agitated about this time, would include the building of a canal that, it was thought, would pass through the county, and materially add to the commerce of wagon, as well as call in a class of settlers who would be desirable acquisitions. The present residents also began to improve the numerous advantages about them.

In the fall of 1832 Ephraim Sprague began a dam in the slough, just immediately north of the Illinois River, at Marseilles, as well as put a wing dam in the river. He erected a saw-mill, that was in successful operation during the following winter. This was the first improvement of the water power of the Grand Rapids of the Illinois.

In 1834 Lovel Kimball came to Marseilles. He obtained possession of the land contiguous to the water power, and especially that about Sprague's wing dam, which forced the latter to sell his interest at a nominal figure. Mr. Kimball organized a company, (chartered in 1836 to be known as the "Marseilles Manufacturing Co.,") with a cash capital of $200,000, for the purpose of manufacturing farming tools, flour, woolen goods, etc. Hon. Guerdon S. Hubbard, Hon. James A. Woodworth, a former mayor of Chicago, A. D. Butterfield, himself, and a few others, were the first directors. The company built a dam across the Illinois, which went out during high water. Replacing it again, they completed their saw-mill, containing two sash saws, as they were then called, one lath machine, and a shingle cutter. Soon after this they began the erection of a grist and flouring mill, employing for the purpose A. G. Cook, a mill-wright who had completed their last dam. When finished, in 1841, this mill had eight 52-run of stones, and nine water-wheels. It was five stories high, including basement, and forty-five by seventy feet in size. The machinery was of the most improved pattern, being mostly constructed of wood. It was finished inside with black walnut, no expense being spared to make the mill in every way superior to anything of the kind in the western country. Indeed, it was so considered by competent judges. One old settler, who came here in 1840 and visited the mills at Rochester, N. Y., said he saw nothing there equal to it. It was burned April 14th, 1842, after having been in successful operation about nine months. Kimball always thought it was the work of an incendiary, attributing it to Ephraim Sprague, with whom he had trouble in settling their accounts some years before. Owing to some technicality in the policy the company never received the insurance, and broke up.

Probably the largest immigration to the State, of most of the present old settlers, was in 1836. Frink and Walker's line of stages, that ran along the river, as well as a line put on by the Marseilles Company, each ramifying southwest, were the means of travel. The tide was so great that at a public house, kept by A. D. Butterfield, in Marseilles, it was not an uncommon thing to receive from twenty to twenty-five dollars for meals and lodging of travelers, who, in the crowded condition of the house, had slept in the barn, on the stoop, and about the premises. Perhaps the breaking ground of the canal, which occurred July 4th of this year, contributed largely to this result, as it was an earnest of the beginning of the work inaugurated by President Madison in his annual message of 1814.

The principal market in 1836 was Chicago. Settlers would start away from home with the expectation of being gone a week or more. If it was an ordinary load only one yoke of oxen would be required, if large two or even three were employed. The provision-box was an invariable accompaniment, and the old coffee pot held a favorable position. The coffee was prepared at home, tied up in a little sack, and retained in the utensil until the strength was exhausted. By force of circumstances, the young men of those early days became adepts in the simpler culinary arts. When arriving at a camping place at night, the oxen would be turned loose to graze, with a bell upon their necks, or picketed out with a stake and rope. Many a chase of ten or twelve miles, or even more, to find the oxen, will come to the mind of the early settler as he reads these lines. Then, having cooked and eaten their supper, they would roll themselves in their blankets and sleep, if the mosquitos would permit. When they first left home they perhaps would be alone for the first day's travel, but after that there would be quite a train, each wagon slowly plodding along through the grass, sometimes knee-high, sometimes above the top of the wagon, and followed by a cloud of mosquitos as large as a swarm of bees. These trains often numbered a hundred wagons before they reached Chicago. From the "Widow Berry's," (twelve miles out,) into the city it was always swampy, often the water was knee-deep. Whenever a slough was to be crossed it was an item of considerable interest who should get out safely. Should anyone be so unfortunate as to get his wagon fast in the mud, or get "sloughed," as it was called, the others would unhitch from their wagons and draw him out. Selling their wheat for what they could get, they would load up with lumber and return. Many a house in the early days was constructed from lumber obtained in this way. Speaking of building, calls to mind the remarks of one of the pioneers to the writer. Pointing to a little old house back of his residence, he said: "I sawed nearly all the lumber out of logs for that house with a whip-saw, drove every nail, made every joint at night, my wife holding the lantern to see to work by."

Prices were materially different at that time than at the present. Wheat brought from thirty to forty cents, and at extremely rare intervals, sixty cents. Eggs three cents per dozen, butter ten cents, cheese five cents, corn ten cents, occasionally fifteen, oats ten, sometimes fifteen cents, potatoes ten cents, pork $1.50 per hundred, sheep $1.00 each, work horses $50.00, milch cows $8, $9, and $12, according to quality, four-year-old steers $16.00, farm laborers 50 cents per day, and letter postage 25 cents. Many of the early settlers were compelled to allow their letters to remain in the office some time before they had money enough to take them out. One of them remarked to the writer, that, at one time, he had a letter in the post-office for over a month, and could not get sufficient money together to take it out. At last he succeeded in trading the postmaster four bushels of wheat for it, and thought he had made a good trade, so extremely anxious was he to hear from home.

Fancy horses were not indulged in by the pioneers of the county. A band of horse thieves, whose depredations were quite frequent, had its secret agents in every locality. A physician on Fox River who had a fine horse used to fasten it to a tree with a log chain and monstrous padlock. Societies of protection were organized against these desperadoes. These organizations usually consisted of a captain and one hundred men. Each one was obliged to pay an initiation fee of from $1.00 to $5.00; to ride one hundred miles in search of the horse or thief, and go at a moment's warning, if any of the members' horses were stolen. It was also a part of the plan to insure a member's horse against stealing, or in other words, if a member's horse was stolen and not found it was paid for out of company funds.

July 4th, of 1836, will be memorable as the day when ground was broken in Chicago for the present Illinois and Michigan Canal. It was begun simultaneously at both ends, as well as along the line. Scores of people, of many different nations, (principally Irishmen,) flocked here, called by the prospect of labor, and the good times that always exist during the disbursement of large sums of money on the public works. Towns were laid out along the line of the canal, and lots sold for incredible prices. These prospective towns along the river at the time were either swamps or greensward, but in the excited condition of the minds of the inhabitants were soon to be teeming cities, full of life and the energy of successful business. State scrip was the circulating medium, and abundant. Soon, however, State orders took the place of the scrip, the men being paid with them, which, however, as bad as they seemed, were received by the canal company in payment for land. Many of the laborers, in order to secure their dearly earned savings, exposed as they were to the malaria of the valley, purchased land and became permanent settlers, because forced by their own interests to stay. These lands have since become valuable, and the residents thus retained are some of the best inhabitants of the county.

Among such a large force of men difficulties would arise. One of these terminated in quite a war, known as the trouble between the "Corkonians" and "Fairdowns," in 1837. The sheriff of the county was obliged to call out the militia, who finally subdued the riot, not, however, until some lives had been lost.

About 1840 immigration began to decrease, falling off to almost nothing in 1842, caused no doubt by the talk of repudiating the enormous State debt incurred by the internal improvement system. After the turning point in 1845, the prospect of high taxes seemed to make no material difference, emigrants rather appreciating the vim that proposed to pay a portion of the interest and the principal of the debt as soon as the State was able. At the latter period, (1842,) the canal was completed as far as Marseilles from La Salle, and from Chicago west to about Morris. The holders of the "Improvement Bonds" became reassured, and, in order to save what they had already expended, subscribed liberally for the completion of the work. The prospect of avoiding the long and tedious trip to Chicago to market grain, and the cheapening of commodities needed by the people, had a wonderful effect to induce settlers to locate here. As an instance of how the canal was regarded, we may mention the following. The first loaded boat through the canal was the "Goldona," A. J. Hobart captain. It cleared Chicago with a load of lumber, and arrived at Ottawa on Sunday afternoon about three o'clock. The people saw it coming and ran to meet it at the aqueduct, cheering all the way into town. Lumber at that time sold for $60.00 per thousand. This load reduced the price to $30.00, and the second or third reduced it still further. The boat carried back a load of wheat, at 12½ cents per bushel. That fall freight fell to eight and finally to six cents, and the following season to four cents.

The canal proceeded to completion in the spring of 1848, and the Green and Red lines of packets were put on. As the horses drawing them trotted along through the country, it seemed a decided improvement to the settlers over the old ox team, beset by mosquitoes, and moving at snail's pace, without mentioning the inconveniences incident to camping in all kinds of places, as well as hunting stray oxen in the morning. Traveling was placed among the luxuries. It would, no doubt, seem a great change, could one of the passengers be taken from the boat, and, seated in our palace cars, or sit at the table of one of the restaurant cars, and realize that he was traveling through the country, at the rate of forty miles an hour. The change from the ox team to the packets was as great to the early settlers, as that of the boat to the palace cars has been to later generations.

We shall be obliged to go back a little to bring up the political history. A court house was authorized sometime in 1838, the contract being awarded to William F. Flagg, on July 12th, 1838, cost $20,000.00. It was finished in 1840, at a total outlay of $40,000, just double the original price.

In 1839, Marshall County was erected by the Legislature, and Towns 29 and 30, Range 1, now called "Bennington" and "Evans," were transferred from La Salle to that County. It was desired that Towns 29 and 30, Range 2, now "Groveland" and "Osage," should also be included, but Marshall did not want them, because so thinly settled. The Hodges and Dents were residents of those townships, and it was said that many of the settlers did not desire to build a new court house for Marshall, having just assisted in erecting one for La Salle. After a few years the former county having perfected her county building, "Groveland" and "Osage" made application for annexation, but the authorities refused to receive them.

February 12th, 1849, the township organization law was passed, and La Salle County proceeded to accede to its provisions. The County Court, which, at that time, consisted of the County Judge, Henry G. Cotton, Charles H. Gilman, associate, S. M. Raymond, County Clerk, and the County Treasurer, appointed a commission, consisting of C. R. Potter, Levi Kelsey, and Israel G. Cooper, to divide the county into election precincts, the naming of which being given to the oldest resident settlers.

The report of the commission was received, and this was substantially the towns where the first supervisors were elected. They have since been changed somewhat, as well as subdivided, but they are at the present time nearly the same as when first organized.

The first board of supervisors met on the 27th day of May, 1850, and organized, by electing Wells Waite, Esq., of Dayton, President. The list is as follows : Adams, E. S. Beardsley; Brookfield, Geo. S. Maxon; Bruce, Samuel Mackey; Dimmick, Wm. Mitchel; Dayton, Wells Wate; Deer Park, Wm. Clayton; Eagle, Elijah M. Galloway; Eden, M. M. Letts; Earl, James McBurney; Fremont, Mr. Warsley; Freedom, Wm. Barber; Farm Ridge, Elmer Baldwin; Grand Rapids, Abraham Trumbo; Hope, Mr. Lucas; Meriden, O. W. About this time coal began to attract attention. It was known to the French settlers, but never mined. It was not until 1854 that any actual work was began at La Salle. About the same time, also, it began to be worked at Marseilles, and also along the Vermillion. The miners at that time had no real conception of the extent of the fields. Farther on will be given the present status of the coal interests.

At one time in the history of the canal, a rail-road was talked about in its place. This idea took shape, and in 1852, the Chicago and Rock Island Rail-Road was built. The first train that ran over the road arrived at La Salle on the 6th day of March, 1853, amid general rejoicing. Captaid Fred. Reed, was the conductor. He had been a packet-boat Captain, on the canal, and when the rail-road bought up the boats and fixtures, most of the captains were given positions. During the year of 1853, also, the Illinois Central ran a train into La Salle, from the north, as well as the South. Freight was transferred across the valley by teams, and an inclined plain run by a stationary engine. The bridge at La Salle was then building, the first train running over it, August 23d or 24th, 1854, just two years, to a day, from the time the first work was began upon it at that place. Sometime in 1852 or 1853, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy ran a train into Mendota, through the northern tier of townships, of the county. In 1869, the Fox River Valley Rail-Road was organized, most of the towns along the line of the route subscribing stock. For some cause it was transferred to the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Rail-Road, in the spring of 1870, just as it was in partial running condition. About the same time the Pekin and South Western Rail-Road was projected, but it never came any farther into the county than Streator. During the past three years it has extended its line along through the townships of Otter creek and Allen. Before 1850, the population of the county was 18,000, in 1870, 60,792. So much for rail-roads.

The manufactories of the county are numerous.

Starch is successfully made at the present time, and the stock in the company, chartered before 1859, has become remunerative.

Among the largest zinc furnaces in the United States is that of Messrs. Matthieson & Hegeler, of La Salle, a large amount of capital, running into the millions, is invested. From this, others have since sprung, and the zinc interest is at the present time, with a growth of about fifteen years, of great importance.

Perhaps the greatest manufacturing interest of the county, is that of agricultural implements. Plows, Harrows, Corn Planters and Corn Plows, as well as Shellers, are made of various patterns. Reapers, Mowers, Harvesters and Threshers (the celebrated Pitts being among the number), are all made here of desirable construction. This is due to the excellency of land in the county, ranking, as it does, first in agricultural resources, of any in the State.

Of the coal industries, La Salle County stands second. Her fields and shafts are as follows: At Streator, there are seventeen shafts and drifts, and 4,320 acres of workable coal, in the basin.

At Kirkpatrick's basin, there is one shaft that raises annually, from 600 to 700 tons, from 1,600 acres of workable coal.

Lowell has six drifts, raising about sixty tons each, annually. This basin has 800 acres.

La Salle is probably the better coal field, as well as the most extensive, containing 13,120 acres, and, with eleven shafts, raising annually 217,900 tons. This is called the best coal in the county.

Dayton has one drift, and only seventy acres of workable coal.

Marseilles banks have 200 acres from which two drifts and one shaft raise annually 3,600 tons.

At Ottawa, the coal is near the surface, being from nine to ten feet deep, and is taken out by stripping. The workable area in acres, is 2,000, from which annually 43,800 tons are taken.

The capital invested in this branch of enterprise, in the county, is upwards of $2,676,500, and produces annually over 885,000 tons.

THE LAST OF THE ILLINOIS, AND A SKETCH OF THE POTTAWATTOMIES.

Address by John Dean Caton, LL. D. (Read before the Chicago Historical Society, Dec. 13, 1870.)

Of the ancient civilizations we know but little. The beginnings of the Egyptians, the Etrurians, the Grecians, the Romans, and even the Milesians, are either entirely shrouded in the dark shadows of the far distant past, or are only lit up by the feeble rays afforded by uncertain fables or mythical traditions. Even far beyond these, great peoples lived, whose existence and civilization are testified to, by broken monuments and ruined architecture, widely scattered, especially over Arabia and some parts of Africa, while in our own country, and particularly in Yucatan, we see by their works that nations have lived of whom we know absolutely nothing as to whence they came or whither they have gone.

Geologists tell us of older peoples who occupied many portions of our globe, whose times they have divided into different ages, as, the stone age, the bronze age, and the iron age, because of the materials which they used in their arts, but of their coming and their going they can tell us nothing, except that they existed one after another and ceased to be. Whence came the mound-builders of our own land, or those who worked the copper mines of Lake Superior, or those whose old inscriptions are found on the great stones of New Mexico, or when they disappeared, none can tell; they lived, made their record and are gone, all else is as silent and as dark as the tomb that covers them. Yet, in all these records history is written, dim and shadowy though it be, still it is history, and we seize upon each sentence of it as upon a precious treasure, and we ponder it and strain our eyes to find more than it really tells, but the misty veil of antiquity hangs over it, and finally we turn away unsatisfied.

When America was first visited by Europeans, at least those who recorded what they saw, it was occupied by barbarous tribes, some much more advanced than others, but still all were barbarians. Tradition, among the more advanced, pretended to tell how their ancestors had come from more northern climes, till finally they settled in the milder countries of Mexico or Peru, where they attained a sort of semi-civilization far in advance of the wilder nations, either to the north or south of them, but whether their ancestors were the mound-builders or copper-workers, who once lived where we live, and were driven away by fierce northern hordes, more athletic than they, or peacefully left the land in search of a climate less rigorous, we can never know, nor can we satisfy ourselves of the degree of credence which we should place in their own traditions as told by their old men to the first Europeans who saw them and by whom their stories have been handed down to us.

We do know, certainly, that when the Atlantic coast was first visited by white men who have transmitted to us accounts of what they saw, they found here tribes of Indians who subsisted principally by fishing and the chase, although they practiced agriculture to a limited extent, for they supplied the first immigrants to New England with corn from their hidden stores. The early explorers occasionally found the same grain cultivated in the valley of the Mississippi, and Lewis and Clarke procured supplies of it on the Upper Missouri. Still their agriculture was too limited to have had much influence on the density of population; and without the cultivated products of the soil no country can sustain a large population of men, if we except some tropical countries where spontaneous fruits are in perpetual season, and even there the aboriginal population was found to be very sparse as compared with countries where agriculture furnishes the principal sustenance to man.

From the changes which had recently taken place among the original inhabitants of this country, when they were first discovered, as told by their old men, and also from the changes which occurred after their discovery, but before the exterminating influence of civilization bore upon them, we may safely assume that national and even tribal formations had been quite recent, yet recent as they no doubt were, we know almost nothing of them. While we know that some nations become totally extinct by reason of aboriginal warfare alone, we cannot point to a single instance of the birth and growth of any native tribe unless the uniting of the remnants of several broken tribes into one, may be so considered.

At last we are forced back to the conclusion that it is only comparatively in modern times and of civilized communities that history, whether written in books or among the rocks, tells us of the origin of nations. To this we can mention one notable exception. By divine interposition, we are told of the beginning and of the progress, and by profane history of the final extinction of one of the great ancient nations of the earth. There we are told of its founder, Abraham, of its struggles, of its triumphs and its misfortunes, of its victories and its defeats, of its pure worship and its gross idolatry, and of its final extinction as a nation under the Roman Empire.

Necessarily, the history of the aborigines of this country is confined to the period since their first discovery by the educated man, and to the few uncertain traditions told by them of their comparatively very recent times, and most of these traditions as handed down to us are purely of a mythological character, and serve to teach us of the nature of the imagination or mental condition of the native rather than of actual facts that had gone before. Nor do those who have made a study of the native American a specialty seem to have given that study the form of connected history to any large degree, and he that would inform himself of such history must gather it from a thousand different sources, picking up a grain here and there as he can find it.

More than thirty-seven years ago, when I first became a citizen of Chicago, I found this whole country occupied as the hunting grounds of the Pottawatomie Indians. I soon formed the acquaintance of many of their chiefs, and this acquaintance ripened into a cordial friendship. I found them really intelligent and possessed of much information resulting from their careful observation of natural objects. I traveled with them over the prairies, I hunted and I fished with them, I camped with them in the groves, I drank with them at the native springs, of which they were never at a loss to find one, and I partook of their hospitality around their camp fires.

Wild scenes have always had a charm for me. I have ever been a lover of nature, and the enjoyment of those scenes when prairie and woodland, lake shore and river were almost everywhere as nature made them, have left behind a pleasing memory which sometimes makes me almost wish that I could live over again my younger days. Since nature's handiwork has been defaced all around us by the hand of civilized man, I love to hie away to distant shores and the far-off mountains, and with a few friends of tastes similar to my own, enjoy the wild scenery among the rock-bound islands of Puget's Sound, or the still solitude of the high Sierras. Who would have thought at the time of which I speak that he who then here enjoyed the charms which nature throws over all her works, would ever seek the far-off scenes of the Pacific slopes in which to indulge his favorite reveries? There are some who hear me now, who remember the lake beach with its conical sandhills covered over by the evergreen juniper whose fragrance loaded with a rich aroma the soft breeze as it quietly crept in from the rippling waters of the lake.

That old lake shore, fashioned as God had made it by His winds and waves for ten thousand years before, had more charms for me than since the defacing hand of man has builded there broad avenues and great marble palaces, which are as far beneath the works of nature's Architect, as man himself is beneath Him who made all things well.

I thought that then a romantic place fit for the mating of native lovers, in which to say soft words, and I felt assured that it was so thought by them when once I was called upon to unite in wedlock there a happy pair, whose ambition it was to conform to the white man's mode in that solemn rite, and, as the dusky bride explained, that it might last forever.

As might have been anticipated, neither history nor tradition pretends to go back to the origin of any of the native tribes who occupied this land when first explored by civilized man. At that time the country where we live was principally occupied by the Illinois Indians who were an important people, who ranged from the Wabash to the Mississippi, and from the Ohio even to Lake Superior, although there were a great many other tribes occupying the same territory. Their chief location was in Northern Illinois. Here was their home, and their great metropolis was where Utica now stands, in La Salle county. There then stood the largest city ever built by northern natives. It was a delightful place in the bosom of a beautiful valley, and the city occupied all the intervening space between the river and the bluff, nearly a mile in extent. Their great cemeteries there testify to the populousness of the place, even were the testimony of the first discoverers wanting. If we do not know of the beginning of any native nation, we are credibly told of the extinction of this great people, and that, too, within a century after they were found so populous and so prosperous by the enterprising explorers.

Soon after their discovery by La Salle, the great Iroquois confederation, whose battle fields were strewn with their victims almost from the Atlantic coast to the Wabash, and from the Great Lakes, and even north of them, to the Alleghanies and the Ohio, finally extended their enterprises to the Illinois. With a great slaughter they defeated this hitherto invincible people, laid waste their great city, and scattered them in broken bands over their wide domain. From this terrible blow they never recovered. For a century later they struggled with waning fortunes against northern encroachments, till finally they were exterminated by the Pottawatomies and the Ottawas, at Starved Rock, the Fort St. Louis of La Salle, which overlooks the site of their great city and the scene of their first great defeat and slaughter by the conquering Iroquois, as I shall presently relate. There still stands this high isolated rock as it has stood for thousands of years gone by, the swift current of the river bathing its feet on one side, its summit overlooking the broad valley and the many wood-clad islands for many miles above and below it, fit monument to the great departed who had, during many long years of peace and security, looked upon its impregnable heights as a secure refuge in case of disaster. Alas! if it was secure against the approach of human hands, gaunt famine could scale its ascents and do its deadly work. There is and ever will be a charm about the place, both from its own romantic surroundings and the melancholy story of the bloody scenes it has looked down upon. While the visitor stands upon its native battlements, silently pondering what has been told him, insensibly his imagination carries him back to ages long ago, and he thinks he hears the wail of woe, oft and oftentimes repeated, and then again the song of revelry and joy sung by those departed long before the white man saw it. The ancestors of my ancient friends were responsible for the last sad catastrophe.

The Pottawatomies were a tribe of the great Algonquin confederation, whose power was so severely felt by the British forces when at war with France, in the middle of the last century, though we do not know the story of their individual prowess in that sanguinary warfare.

When Fathers Allones and Doblin first visited Green Bay, and there established a mission, just two hundred years ago, they found the Pottawatomies established on those verdant shores, and this is the first mention I can find of them in history. That was then their settled home, though they roamed far away, for they were in the habit of extending their visits to the shores of Lake Superior. In 1671 they are mentioned as met with at La Point, on that Lake, by the missionary fathers, not as residents, but as visitors. At that time they were not known south of the lakes, for when Joliet and Marquette returned from their discovery of the Mississippi, by way of the Illinois river, in 1674, they met none of the Pottawatomies here.

In 1675, Marquette, no doubt by invitation of the Illinois Indians, whom he had met the year before on his return with La Salle from the Mississippi, came from Green Bay to establish a Mission here. In this journey he was attended by a party of Illinois Indians, and also by a band of the Pottawatomies. So far as we know, these were the first of the tribe who ever saw the country south of Lake Michigan. They coasted the west side of the lake in open boats or canoes, in the latter part of the season, when the lake is boisterous and forbidding. It was a perilous and fatiguing voyage of four months duration, and sorely tried the endurance of the zealous missionary. They at last reached Chicago, just as winter was closing in, and proceeded up the South Branch of the river to where Bridgeport now stands, and there built a hut, in which the missionary wintered. After the lonely and tedious winter was passed, he proceeded down the Illinois River to the great city of the Illinois, below Starved Rock, and there established the first Mission ever founded in the Illinois country, and named it Kaskaskia.

How soon after this the Pottawatomies left their old home on Green Bay, and sought more hospitable regions further south, we are not informed; nor can we tell whether the emigration was gradual, or if they broke up all together, but as we find them in their southern homes in different bands, the probabilities are they left in parties. A portion settled on the Saginaw Bay, in Michigan, who were subsequently known as the Pottawatomies of Saginaw, or of Huron. Others descended as far as Detroit, and settled in that neighborhood. Others found their way to the St. Joseph River, on the east side of Lake Michigan; and others, it may be resumed, came directly to Northern Illinois, though it is possible they spread from Michigan into Illinois. The precise date of these several migrations we cannot give, but Oragon and Bouquet found them, in the middle of the last century, occupying the country about Detroit and Fort St. Joseph; and we find no account of them within the last hundred years and more at Green Bay. From these explorers we get the first intimation of their numbers, and yet this is of the most unsatisfactory kind. They set them down at three hundred and fifty; and Dodge, a quarter of a century later, places them at four hundred and fifty, while Hutchins places them at a still lower number than the first. Upon these numbers we can place but little reliance; at best it could have been but imperfect estimates, including no doubt only those bands whom they met at Fort St. Joseph and Detroit, without taking into account those at Saginaw or in Illinois. We may safely assume, also, that these figures are designed only to express the number of their warriors, for Sir William Johnson, who assembled the Algonquin confederation at Niagara in 1763, informs us, that of the nineteen hundred and thirty warriors there assembled, four hundred and fifty were Pottawatomies, or, according to the old orthography, Pouteotamies. With them and their associate warriors, General Bradstreet there concluded a treaty which pacified all the Indian tribes bordering the upper lakes, who had hitherto been such inveterate enemies to the British Government and the English immigrant. A reasonably conciliatory course with them since, and a moderate share of good faith towards them, have enabled the Canadas to live with those who resided on the north shores, in amity in times of peace, and depend upon them as allies in time of war. The number of warriors representing the Pottawatomies at the Algonquin convocation at Niagara, shows that the whole tribe must have been largely in excess of the numbers given by Bouquet and others, and their report so nearly approximates to the number of warriors at Niagara, as to convince us at once that they spoke only of their able-bodied men. Nor is it very probable that all the warriors which the several bands of that tribe could furnish, made the long journey to Niagara to attend the council. The fact that the Pottawatomies furnished nearly one-fourth of the representatives in that council of the whole Algonquin confederation, should convince us of the commanding importance of this tribe in that powerful association of the Indians, and so were they the last, south of the lakes, as we shall see, to yield up their place to the irresistible advance of civilization.

The fraternal relations existing between the Pottawatomies and the Ottawas were of the most harmonious character. They lived together almost as one people, and were joint owners of their hunting grounds. Their relations were quite as intimate and friendly as among different bands of the same tribe. Nor were the Chippewas scarcely more strangers to the Pottawatomies and the Ottawas than the latter were to each other. They too claimed an interest in the lands occupied, to a certain extent, by all jointly, so that all three tribes joined in the first treaty for the sale of their lands ever made to the United States.

Chicago was ever an important point in the estimation of the Pottawatomies and their associates, and here was the council held which resulted in that first treaty in 1821, when the three tribes named ceded to the United States five millions of acres in Michigan.

Since their emigration from the north, a sort of distinction had grown up among the different bands of the Pottawatomies, arising from their several locations, which seem to have stamped upon their tenants distinct characteristics. Those occupying the forest lands of Michigan and Indiana; were called by themselves and by the traders the Indians of the Woods, while those who roamed these great grassy plains were called the Prairie Indians.

The former were much more susceptible to the influence of civilization than the latter. They devoted themselves, in a very appreciable degree, to agriculture, and so supplemented the fruits of the chase very largely in their support. They welcomed the missionary among them with a warm cordiality. They listened to his teachings, and meekly submitted to his admonitions. They learned by heart the story of our crucified Redeemer, and with trembling voices recounted to each other the sufferings of the cross. They bent the knee and bowed the head reverently in prayer, and raised their melodious voices in sacred songs taught them by the holy fathers. They received the sprinklings with holy waters, and partook of the consecrated elements, believing devoutly in their saving grace. They went to the confessional with downcast looks, and with deep contrition told the story of their sins, and with a radiant joy received the absolution, which in their estimation blotted them out forever. Here indeed was a bright field of promise to those devoted missionaries, who deeply felt that to save one heathen soul from the awful doom which they believed awaited all those who died without the bosom of the church, was a rich reward for a whole life of pinching privation and of severe suffering; and their great ambition was to gather as many redeemed souls as possible to their account, each of which should appear as a bright jewel in the crown which awaited them in that future state to which we are all so rapidly hastening.

It was very different, however, with the Prairie Indians. They despised the cultivation of the soil as too mean even for their women and children, and deemed the captures of the chase as the only fit food for a valorous people. The corn which grew like grass from the earth which they trod beneath their feet, was not proper meat to feed their greatness. Nor did they open their ears to the lessons of love and religion tendered them by those who came among them and sought to do them good. If they tolerated their presence they did not receive them with the cordiality evinced by their more eastern brethren. If they listened to their sermons in respectful silence they did not receive the truths they taught with eager gladness. Even if they believed for the moment what they were told, it made no permanent impression on their thoughts and actions. If they understood something of the principles of the Christian religion which were told them, they listened to it as a sort of theory which might be well adapted to the white man's condition, but was not fitted for them, nor they for it. They enjoyed the wild roving life of the prairie, and in common with almost all other native Americans, were vain of their prowess and manhood; both in war and in the chase. They did not settle down for a great length of time in a given place, but roamed across the broad prairies, from one grove or belt of timber to another; either in single families or in small bands, packing their few effects, their children and infirm on their little Indian ponies. They always traveled in Indian file upon well beaten trails, connecting, by the most direct routes, prominent points and trading posts. These native highways served as guides to our early settlers, who followed them with as much confidence as we now do the roads laid out and worked by civilized man.

Northern Illinois was more particularly the possession of the Pottawatomies, but, as before stated, I have sought in vain for some satisfactory data to fix the time when they first settled here. They undoubtedly came in by degrees, and by degrees established themselves, encroaching at first upon the Illinois tribe, advancing more and more, sometimes by good-natured tolerance, and sometimes by actual violence. I have the means of approximating the time when they came into exclusive possession here. That occurred upon the total extinction of the Illinois, which must have been sometime between 1766 and 1770. Meachelle, the oldest Pottawatomie chief, when I became acquainted with them, thirty-seven years ago, associated his earliest recollection with their occupancy of the country. His recollection extended back to that great event in Indian history, the siege of Starved Rock and final extinction of the Illinois tribe of Indians, which left his people the sole possessors of the land. He was present at the siege and the final catastrophe, and although a boy at the time, the terrible event made such an impression on his young mind, that it ever remained fresh and vivid. I am indebted to Mr. William Hickling for assisting my memory on a point so important.

The death of Pontiac, the great Ottawa chief, occurred in 1766. He was the idol of his own people, and was beloved and obeyed scarcely less by the Pottawatomies. They believed that the Illinois Indians were at least accessory to his murder, and so held them responsible, and consequently the Ottawas and Pottawatomies united all their forces in an attack upon those whose deadly enemies they had now become. I am not satisfied that their previous relations had been those of cordial friendship, but if the peace had not been broken by open war there was that bad blood existing between them which must have arisen between those who were making and those who were suffering encroachments.

The Illinois Indians never fully recovered from the great calamity, which they had suffered a century before at the hands of the Iroquois. By that their spirit and their courage seemed broken, and they submitted to encroachments, from the north by their more enterprising neighbors, with an ill grace, no doubt, but without protecting their rights by force of arms, as they would have done in former times, and sought to revenge themselves upon those upon whom they looked as their actual enemies in an underhand and treacherous way.

In the war thus waged by the allies against the Illinois, the latter suffered disaster after disaster till the sole remnants of that once proud nation, whose name had been mentioned with respect from Lake Superior to the mouth of the Ohio, and from the Mississippi to the Wabash, now found sufficient space upon the half acre of ground which crowns the summit of Starved Rock. As its sides are perpendicular, except on the south where it may be ascended with difficulty by a sort of natural stairway, where some of the steps are a yard high and but a few inches wide, and not more than two can ascend abreast, ten men could repel ten thousand with the means of warfare then at their command. The allies made no attempt to take the fort by storm, but closely besieged it on every side. On the north or river side, the upper rock overhangs the water somewhat, and tradition tells us how the confederates placed themselves in canoes under the shelving rock and cut the thongs of the besieged when they lowered their vessels to obtain water from the river, and so reduced them by thirst, but Meachelle, so far as I know, never mentioned this as one of the means resorted to by the confederates to reduce their enemies, nor from an examination of the ground do I think this probable, but they depended upon a lack of provisions, which we can readily appreciate must soon occur to a savage people, who rarely anticipate the future in storing up supplies. No improvident people could have subsisted long in such a place. How long they did hold out Meachelle did not and probably could not tell us; but at last the time came when the unfortunate remnant could hold out no longer. They awaited but a favorable opportunity to attempt their escape. This was at last afforded by a dark and stormy night, when led by their few remaining warriors, all stole in profound silence down the steep and narrow declivity to be met by a solid wall of their enemies surrounding the point where alone a sortie could be made, and which had been confidently expected. The horrid scene that ensued can be better imagined than described. No quarter was asked or given. For a time the howlings of the tempest were drowned by the yells of the combatants and the shrieks of the victims.

Desperation lends strength to even enfeebled arms, but no efforts of valor could resist the overwhelming numbers, actuated by the direst hate. The braves fell one by one, fighting like very fiends, and terribly did they revenge themselves upon their enemies. The few women and children whom famine had left but enfeebled skeletons, fell easy victims to the war-clubs of the terrible savages, who deemed it as much a duty and almost as great a glory to slaughter the emaciated women and the helpless children as to strike down the men who were able to make resistance with arms in their hands. They were bent upon the utter extermination of their hated enemies, and most successfully did they bend their savage energies to the bloody task.

Soon the victims were stretched upon the sloping ground south and west of the impregnable rock, their bodies lying stark upon the sand which had been thrown up by the prairie winds. The wails of the feeble and the strong had ceased to fret the night winds whose mournful sighs through the neighboring pines sounded like a requiem. Here was enacted the fitting finale to that work of death which had been commenced, scarcely a mile away, a century before by the still more savage and terrible Iroquois.

Still, all were not destroyed. Eleven of the most athletic warriors, in the darkness and confusion of the fight, broke through the besieging lines. They had marked well from their high perch on the isolated rock, the little nook below, where their enemies had moored at least a part of their canoes, and to these they rushed with headlong speed, unnoticed by their foes. Into these they threw themselves, and hurried down the rapids below. They had been trained to the use of the paddle and the canoe, and knew well every intricacy of the channel, so that they could safely thread it, even in the dark and boisterous night. They knew their deadly enemies would soon be in their wake, and that there was no safe refuge for them short of St. Louis. They had no provisions to sustain their waning strength, and yet it was certain death to stop by the way. Their only hope was in pressing forward by night and by day, without a moment's pause, scarcely looking back, yet ever fearing that their pursuers would make their appearance around the point they had last left behind. It was truly a race for life. If they could reach St. Louis, they were safe; if overtaken, there was no hope. We must leave to the imagination the details of a race where the stake was so momentous to the contestants. As life is sweeter even than revenge, we may safely assume that the pursued were impelled to even greater exertions than the pursuers. Those who ran for life won the race. They reached St. Louis before their enemies came in sight, and told their appalling tale to the commandant of the fort, from whom they received assurances of protection, and were generously supplied with food, which their famished condition so much required. This had barely been done when their enemies arrived, and fiercely demanded their victims, that no drop of blood of their hated enemies might longer circulate in human veins. This was refused, when they retired with impotent threats of future vengeance, which they never had the means of executing.

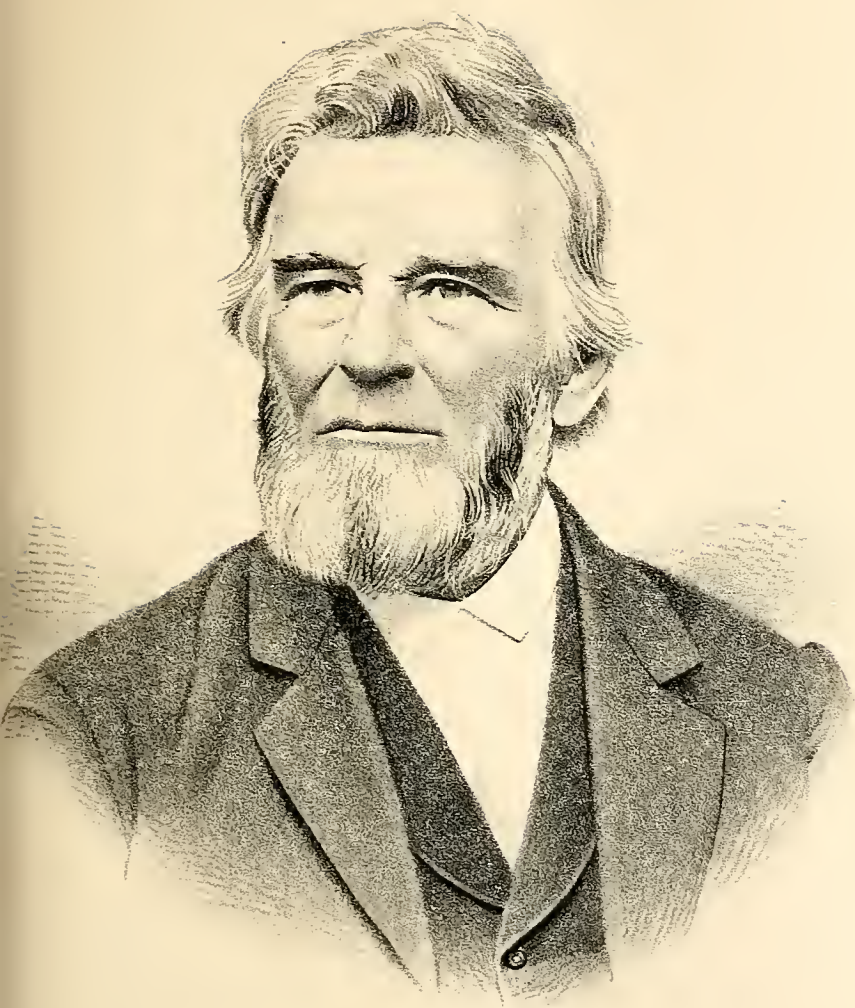

After their enemies had gone, the Illinois, who never after even claimed that name, thanked their entertainers, and, full of sorrow, which no words can express, they slowly paddled their way across the river, to seek new friends among the tribes who then occupied the southern part of this State, and who would listen with sympathy to the sad tale they had to relate. They alone remained—the broken remnant and last representatives of their once great nation. Their name, even, now must be blotted out from among the names of the aboriginal tribes. Henceforth they must cease to be of the present, and could only be remembered as a part of the past. This is the last we know of the last of the Illinois. They were once a great and a prosperous people, as advanced and as humane as any of the aborigines around them; we do not know that a drop of their blood now animates a human being, but their name is perpetuated in this great State, of whose record of the past all of us feel so proud, and of whose future the hopes of us all are so sanguine.

Till the morning light revealed that the canoes were gone, the confederates believed that their sanguinary work had been so thoroughly done that not a living soul remained. So soon as the escape was discovered, the pursuit was commenced, but as we have seen, without success. The pursuers returned disappointed and dejected that their enemies' scalps were not hanging from their belts. But surely blood enough had been spilled—vengeance should have been more than satisfied.

I have failed, no doubt, to properly render Meachelle's account of this sad drama, for I have been obliged to use my own language, without the inspiration awakened in him by the memory of the scene which served as his first baptism in blood. Who can wonder that it made a lasting impression on his youthful mind? Still, he was not fond of relating it, nor would he speak of it except to those who had acquired his confidence and intimacy. It is probably the only account to be had related by an eye-witness, and we may presume that it is the most authentic, and may well deserve preservation, and so may be worthy of a place in the archives of this Society, whose proper mission it is to gather up and bring to light whatever still remains to be gathered from the memories of those who are fast fading away, of scenes whose theatre was the land we live in, and of peoples who once occupied this territory. The few dim lights still remaining will soon be put out, and darkness and oblivion must shroud forever all that is then unrecorded.

This great event in Indian history secured to the Pottawatomies all the territory then belonging to the Illinois, and the exclusive right to which was undisputed by other tribes. It extended their possessions to the lands of the Peorias on Peoria lake. They occupied to the Wabash as far south as Danville and even beyond. On the other side they occupied to the Rock river, though their right to a strip of land on the east side of that river was disputed by the Sac and Fox Indians who ranged the prairies west of there and beyond the Mississippi. They extended north into Wisconsin as far as Milwaukee, though their northern boundary was never well defined, but their friendly relations with the Chippewas prevented this from ever becoming a source of disagreement between them. After the extermination of the Illinois, their general condition was that of peace, and I have learned of few incidents since worthy of record. As before intimated they had a perpetual difficulty with the Sacs and Foxes about the lands bordering on the east side of Rock river, and when the braves of the contestants met on the disputed territory they fought it out, but I have not learned that the war was often carried beyond the contested grounds, though the eastern boundary of these was quite undefined.

DEER PARK TOWNSHIP

As a tribe, the Pottawatomies may not have taken an active part against the United States in the war of 1812, yet it is certain that many of their young chiefs and braves did so. On this subject they were extremely reticent. At one time, when riding over the prairie south of Blue Island, in 1833, with Billy Caldwell, when the old chief, as usual, was answering my questions about the past and what portion of the country he had visited, as it seemed inadvertently, he commenced giving an account of an expedition of the British from Canada across to Ohio, of which he and a number of his warriors formed a part, but he had hardly got them landed on our shores, when he seemed to remember that I was an American and that it was better not to enlighten me further on the subject, and he broke off suddenly, nor could I by any means prevail upon him to return to the subject.

During the Black Hawk war, as it was called, in 1832, as a people they remained loyal to the United States, but it was with great difficulty that many of the young men kept from participating in the affray with the Sacs and Foxes. But the part they acted in that affair may be found in the written history of the times.

Chicago was ever a favorite resort of the Pottawatomies. Here they chose to hold their great councils, and here they concluded the last treaty with our Government as they had the first, as I have already stated, twelve years before. This last treaty was held in 1833, and I was a daily attendant upon the deliberations of the council. By this time the Ottawas and the Pottawatomies had become so blended and intermixed that they had become practically one people, and were generally designated by the latter name. I do not remember the number of Indians in town at the time of the treaty, but the assemblage was by no means confined to the chiefs who participated in the deliberations. There were certainly several thousand natives here, who were supplied with regular rations of beef and flour by the Government, and it was manifest that they were quite willing to protract the conference so long as these should last. At the close of each important deliberation, especially if much progress seemed to have been made, a keg of twisted plug tobacco was rolled into the council house, the staves cut in the middle with an ax, and the chiefs told to help themselves. This was accompanied with a box of white clay pipes. They helped themselves with great decorum, and even some ceremony.

By this last treaty, concluded at Chicago, in 1833, the Indians disposed of all their remaining lands to the United States, except some specific reservations to some of their chiefs, and agreed to remove to a limited location assigned them west of the Missouri river. When the treaty was finally concluded and the presents all distributed, and no more rations served out, they gradually dispersed till only those who resided in and about Chicago remained. For two years longer this people continued among us, subsisting as they had done before, nothing worthy of note, so far as I know, occurring in the meantime.

In 1835, and for the last time, the whole assembled at Chicago, to receive their annuity from the Government, and to make their final start for their new home. I was absent at the time of their assemblage, and have no means of stating at what date they began to make their appearance in the town, for now Chicago had really begun to present an appearance which would well justify the name. Here for the first time, many who had through their whole lives been in the habit of visiting this favorite location, when the rank grass grew waist high where the Tremont and the Sherman houses now stand, must have been deeply impressed with the marks of civilization vastly more extensive than any they had ever seen before or been able to comprehend. It assured them, and they comprehended it, that they were already strangers in their native land. That a mightier race had come, so far their superior that they must fade away before it. It is emphatically true of all our American Indians, that they cannot exist, multiply, and prosper in the light of civilization. Here their physical vigour fails, their reproductive powers diminish, their spirit and their very vitality dwindle out, and no philanthropy, no kindness, no fostering care, of government, of societies, or of individuals, can save them from an inevitable doom. They are plainly the sick man of America; with careful nursing and the kindest care, we may prolong his stay among us for a few years, but he is sick of a disease which can never be cured except by isolating him from civilization, and remanding him to nature's wildness, which in truth has more charms in many cases for even the white man, than the refinements and the restraints of the white man's mode of life. Our tastes for these are the results of artificial training, and our tendency is constantly to relapse to a wilder life in the woods and in the mountains. The bivouac of the soldier has a charm to which he often recurs with animated pleasure. The camp-fire of the hunter has a fascination which he who has enjoyed it can never forget. And in our earliest childhood we showed our natural tastes and inclinations by listening to stories of these, with more avidity than any other. Mayne Reid built his hopes on this juvenile taste, which he knew was stronger than any other, when he wrote his charming stories which have made his name so popular, yes, and so dear, too, to the rising generation. Accounts of huntings and fishings, of living in the woods and in the plains, or in some sweet little nook at the foot of the mountain, down which the babbling brook comes from the melted snows far above, and where nature in her unbroken beauty and her sublimity reigns around in her supreme silence, and there is no mark and no sound of civilization near,—these have fascinations for even the white race as well, which are entirely wanting in the most glowing accounts of cathedrals, and palaces, and pictures, descriptions of which fail to interest those whose tastes have not been cultivated up to their full appreciation. If a love of nature in her wildest moods and scenes be a relic of barbaric taste, which civilization has failed to eradicate, then to that extent, at least, I am a savage still.

This tendency in the white race to revert to what we may term the natural tastes, is strongly manifested, whenever we see one taken in infancy and brought up among savages. Almost always he is the greatest savage of them all, notwithstanding the hereditary influence through many generations of those cultivated tastes and habits which distinguish the civilized man from the savage. This observation may not be confined to the case cited, although that is perhaps the most convincing of this tendency to revert to the savage state. We often see cases where men have grown to maturity in the midst of civilized society, uniting themselves with the native tribes, and enjoying that life better than the former, and choosing to spend their days with their new found friends, although it involves a sacrifice of all those ties which so strongly bind us to friends and kindred and early associations. In such cases we rarely find them practicing those arts which they had early learned, or those habits of industry which is the distinguishing characteristic of civilized man. It is undoubtedly true, in these latter cases, that he who becomes a savage after puberty, has an exceptional inclination to revert to the wild state; still the number is so considerable as to show us that civilization has not been so long continued as to wholly change our natures, and that it is almost, if not entirely, artificial.

I think the facts will warrant the conclusion that this tendency to reversion is much stronger in the male than the female. In the few instances where the white female has been reared in savage life, and has then been reclaimed, she has more readily conformed to civilized habits, and has shown less longing for the wild scenes among which she was reared; and when she has been introduced to savage life after maturity, she seems always happy to escape it. In observing this fact, however, we ought not to forget that the harder lot of the female among savage peoples may tend to make her more willing to escape from what is really a state of bondage and servitude, than with the man, who is in every sense an equal, or, from his higher intellectual endowments, may most likely occupy a superior position.

Reverse the state of things, and how rarely do we find the savage ever civilized. In the numerous instances where the savage infant has been removed from the influences and allurements of his ancestors, and reared entirely among us, and taught all that civilization and Christianity could teach him, but very few have been wholly weaned from the tastes and inclinations which they have inherited from their savage ancestors. Some notable and brilliant exceptions are no doubt to be met with, but they are so rare as to inspire rather our remark and admiration than a well grounded hope that we can ever succeed in reclaiming them as a people.

The native American is in some respects a proud and a sensitive being, and is not wanting in reflective powers. When brought in contact with civilization, he recognizes his inferiority, and appreciates his inability ever to overcome it. He feels that he cannot live with the stranger, except as an inferior, and, inspired by his native pride, he would rather cease to be than to do this. He appreciates his inevitable doom. He ceases to hope, and then comes despair, which contributes more than all else to hasten the result which he foresees. While all have seen from the beginning that the aborigines melt away and die out before the advance of civilization, in spite of the most humane efforts to produce a different result, we may not have appreciated all the causes which have contributed to this end. Those which have been the most readily understood, because the most patent, are the vices and diseases and poisonous drinks which the white race has introduced among them from the very first. If these were the only causes we might deem it possible, by municipal regulations, to remove them. While this would be a great boon which civilization undoubtedly owes to the original owners of the soil where we are so rapidly expanding into a great nation, I am satisfied it would not secure the great end which philanthropy must most ardently desire. Still they would not amalgamate with civilization, nor become civilized as a separate people. They can only live and prosper and multiply by continuing as their ancestors have lived, in a wild state, roaming over large areas sparsely populated, depending upon what they can secure of nature's raising, and when their numbers become too great for subsistence upon such supplies, they must become reduced by wars, disease or famine.

The views I have suggested, of the effect upon the mind and the sensibilities of the Indian, which is produced by his observations of advancing civilization as it intrudes upon him, and its reflected influence upon his physical organization, I think well illustrated and confirmed by the observations of Mr. Sproat in his "Scenes and Studies of Savage Life." He employed a large number of natives about his saw-mills at Barclay Sound, on Vancouver's Island. Here the natives were settled around him in comfortable dwellings with their families, and worked promiscuously with the white laborers. The strictest temperance was enforced throughout the settlement, and no violence was permitted toward the natives, but they were treated with the utmost kindness and fairness. They were well fed, well clothed, and carefully taught. Here they were surrounded with all the best influences of civilization, and as few of the vices as we may expect to find, when the red man is brought in contact with the white.

For a time all seemed to go on well, and the experiment promised a success. At length, however, a change became observable, especially among the Indians who lived nearest the white settlements. A few of the sharpest of the young natives had become offensively European, as he calls it, but the mass of the Indians had ceased to visit the settlement in their free, easy and independent way, but lived listlessly in their villages, brooding seemingly over heavy thoughts. They seemed to have acquired a distrust, nay, almost a disgust for themselves. At first they had looked upon mills and machinery, upon steamships and upon great houses, indeed upon all the wonderful works of the new comer, with curiosity and interest, but now, with distrust, with disgust, and even with despair; the effect of this despair was now manifest. They even began to abandon their old tribal habits, practices and ceremonies. Presently, without any apparent cause, an unusual amount of sickness was observed among them, and the death-rate was largely increased, and so continued during the five years that our author remained among them. Nobody molested them. Notwithstanding all their comforts and all the care bestowed upon them they sunk into a gradual but sure decay.

The light of civilization instead of warning them into new life seemed to bring a blight upon them; they felt that they were an inferior race. They lacked the energy, and therefore the ability, to become and live as civilized men, and their proud hearts were crushed at the thoughts of living with the white race as inferiors and therefore a degraded race, and then necessarily followed disgust and despair, and then came disease and death.

Had they lacked that lofty pride and that love of independence which are so marked a characteristic of our Indians, they might have enjoyed the comforts which civilization brought them, without mortification at the consciousness of living as inferiors among a superior race. But no kindness, no assistance, no proffered recognition of equality, could hide from their view that they were and must be inferiors, while they could in contentment brook no superiors in fact.

In several cases advanced aboriginal Indian tribes, have by act of Congress been declared citizens and endowed with all the rights and privileges of citizenship. Still they were conscious of their inability to properly exercise and enjoy those rights and privileges. They knew they could not exercise the franchise side by side with the white man, with the same degree of intelligence and judgment, and so they scorned to use it. Perhaps it would have been better for them could they have ignored the real distinction which existed between them and the white race, and persuaded themselves, or been persuaded by others, that they were the equals of any. They had too much shrewdness to be thus blinded, and so they recognized a truth which another disposition would have concealed from them, and submitted to what seemed to be a fate, in a sort of reckless, sullen silence, at least till a possible opportunity should occur for striking a blow, though it might be an expiring one, for what they believed existence; and if not for existence then for revenge—if not for the future then for the past.

Laying aside what all must recognize as palpable evils introduced among them, as fraud, whisky, and demoralization, there is, upon a deeper look beneath the surface, a fatal difficulty which all the kindness and service which civilization, philanthropy and Christianity can render them cannot overcome.

The proud and haughty chieftain clearly sees in the coming of the stranger, and in his proffered kindness, the unavoidable degradation of his people from that lofty estate of proud independence which his forefathers maintained, and that at last, after being driven from their envied inheritance, and finding no place of rest but in the grave itself, their final extinction from the face of the earth. It is a sad picture, and yet it stands out before us in the light of the past as if painted on the wall before us by the Divine finger. We may not deny that the sacrifice is necessary to promote the greatest good to the greatest number, but surely we may heave a sigh of sympathy for the victim whose immolation is necessary to carry out even a Divine plan. And so may we have some compassion for him if, in his death-throes, he manifests his savage and untamable nature. If it was his misfortune to be born a savage, with no rights which the white man is bound to respect, then it was his misfortune also to be born with a nature which renders him incapable of civilization, a lofty desire for independence, a profound detestation for everything like servitude, a deep-seated sentiment of revenge, and, above all, a total inability to appreciate how it is that he has no rights which he may call his own, and which even a superior race should regard.

We must admit that even our boasted civilization has its strange phases, and sometimes its manifest inconsistencies. We repeat the maxim that might makes right always with reproach, and yet act upon it whenever the public weal is supposed to require it. Perhaps the truest and the best justification we can plead for insisting upon taking the lands of the aborigines whenever we wish them, using no more force than is necessary to accomplish what we deem necessary—whether the owner is willing to sell them or not—is that a few useless savages, who can do no good for the world at large, and little good even for themselves, must not stand in the way of the march of civilization; that God made the earth and all that is upon it for His own honor and glory, and that both they and we are but tenants at His will; and that it is His undoubted right, whenever in His good pleasure He sees fit, to eject those who in His estimation do Him no honor, and replace them by those who may contribute more to His glory and that thus He is working out His great scheme conceived from the beginning of all time. I say, if we can but thus console ourselves that in what, to the superficial observer seems to be spoiliations of the weak by the strong, we are but instruments in the hands of the Almighty to work out His great purposes and to execute His solemn decrees, then, indeed, we may feel that we have washed our hands in innocency. For myself, I have never been a very ardent believer in what is sometimes called special missions, and merely suggest this as the most plausible justification which I have ever been able to contrive. Still, I do believe that my old friends did not see it exactly in that light when they turned their backs upon Chicago, the scene of so many of their grave councils and of their happy gatherings—when they looked for the last time upon the ever bright waters of the lake, and bent their slow and reluctant steps to a land of which they knew not, and in which they would be strangers; and yet there were old men among them who could have told them that their fathers had with bloodier hands expelled another nation who had occupied the land before them, and that no doubt the title had been thus transferred many times, the conveyance always sealed by the blood of the last owner.

At this last gathering of the tribe at Chicago the total number of souls was about five thousand. While here they were well fed by the Government; and when they went they were removed by the Government under the charge of the late Captain Russell. By him they were transported to their new home on a reservation assigned them by the Government in Clay county, Missouri, opposite Fort Leavenworth. Almost from the beginning a feeling of hostility was manifested towards them by the citizens of Missouri, which finally resulted, at the end of two years, in another removal by the Government, when they were located in Iowa, near Council Bluffs. Here, again, their home was of short duration, and they were removed a third time by the Government to their present location in Kansas, where they have remained for over thirty years. This reservation, however, they have now sold, and they are about to remove for a fourth time within little more than a third of a century. Their new location is in the Indian country south and west of Kansas. How long it will be before the pressure of advancing civilization will again push them on in search of a new home, we cannot certainly predict. We may safely say, however, that it cannot be very long. We may scarcely hope that they will ever find a quiet resting place above the earth.

In their Kansas home, the Indians of the woods have continued to manifest their greater adaptability to conform to the habits of civilized life. They have there subsisted to a large extent by agriculture. Some progress has been made in teaching them in schools, and the influence of religion still exerts its sway over them, or at least their religious teachers still command their attention and respect. Out of seventeen hundred and fifty of which this band still consisted, according to the last report which I have seen, sixteen hundred are represented as subsisting by agriculture.

The prairie Indians yet remain as wild and untamable as ever. They are still averse to the labors of the field, and enjoy the life of indolence, or else the excitement of the chase, by which and their annuities from the Government they eke out a scanty subsistence. The finger of fate seems to be pointed alike at the most civilized and the most savage. Final extinction is the end of the way down which all are swiftly rushing, and it would seem almost practicable to calculate with mathematical certainty the day when they will live only in memory and in history.

They left Illinois thirty-five years ago with five thousand souls. At the date of the last report they had dwindled down to three thousand five hundred, and at this moment their numbers can scarcely exceed three thousand. From this each one may calculate for himself when the last day shall have passed—when there will be no living representative of that powerful people who but a century ago exterminated a nation at a single blow at Starved Rock. The last of the Pottawatamies will then have ceased to be.

I shall close this paper with an account of the great war-dance which was performed by all the braves which could be mustered among the five thousand Indians here assembled. The number who joined in the dance was probably about eight hundred. Although I cannot give the precise day, it must have occurred about the last of August, 1835. It was the last war-dance ever performed by the natives on the ground where now stands this great city, though how many thousand had preceded it no one can tell. They appreciated that it was the last on their native soil—that it was a sort of funeral ceremony of old associations and memories, and nothing was omitted to lend to it all the grandeur and solemnity possible. Truly, I thought it an impressive scene of which it is quite impossible to give an adequate idea by words alone.

They assembled at the council-house, near where the Lake House now stands, on the north side of the river. All were entirely naked, except a strip of cloth around the loins. Their bodies were covered all over with a great variety of brilliant paints. On their faces, particularly, they seem to have exhausted their art of hideous decoration. Foreheads, cheeks, and noses, were covered with curved stripes of red or vermilion, which were edged with black points, and gave the appearance of a horrid grin over the entire countenance. The long, coarse, black hair was gathered into scalp-locks on the top of their heads, and decorated with a profusion of hawks' and eagles' feathers, some strung together so as to extend down the back nearly to the ground. They were principally armed with tomahawks and war clubs. They were led by what answered for a band of music, which created what may be termed a discordant din of hideous noises, produced by beating on hollow vessels and striking sticks and clubs together. They advanced, not with a regular march, but a continued dance. Their actual progress was quite slow. They proceeded up and along the bank of the river, on the north side, stopping in front of every house they passed, where they performed some extra exploits. They crossed the North Branch on the old bridge, which stood near where the railroad bridge now stands, and thence proceeded south along the west side to the bridge across the South Branch, which stood south of where Lake street bridge is now located, which was nearly in front and in full view from the parlor windows of Sanganash Hotel. At that time this was the rival hotel to the Tremont, and stood upon the same ground lately occupied by the great Republican wigwam where Mr. Lincoln was nominated for the presidency—on the corner of Lake and Market streets. It was then a fashionable boarding house, and quite a number of young married people had rooms there. The parlor was in the second story fronting west, from the windows of which the best view of the dance was to be obtained, and these were filled with ladies so soon as the dance commenced. From this point of view my own observations were principally made. Although the din and clatter had been heard for a considerable time, they did not come into view from this point of observation till they had proceeded so far west as to come on a line with the house, which was before they had reached the North Branch bridge. From that time on they were in full view all the way to the South Branch bridge, which was nearly before us, the wild band, which was in front as they came upon the bridge, redoubling their blows to increase the noise, closely followed by the warriors, who had now wrought themselves into a perfect frenzy.

The morning was very warm, and the perspiration was pouring from them almost in streams. Their eyes were wild and bloodshot. Their countenances had assumed an expression of all the worst passions which can find a place in the breast of a savage—fierce anger, terrible hate, dire revenge, remorseless cruelty—all were expressed in their terrible features. Their muscles stood out in great hard knots, as if wrought to a tension which must burst them. Their tomahawks and clubs were thrown and brandished about in every direction, with the most terrible ferocity, and with a force and energy which could only result from the highest excitement, and with every step and every gesture, they uttered the most frightful yells, in every imaginable key and note, though generally the highest and shrillest possible. The dance, which was ever continued, consisted of leaps and spasmodic steps, now forward and now back or sideways, with the whole body distorted into every imaginable unnatural position, most generally stooping forward, with the head and face thrown up, the back arched down, first one foot thrown far forward and then withdrawn, and the other similarly thrust out, frequently squatting quite to the ground, and all with a movement almost as quick as lightning. Their weapons were brandished as if they would slay a thousand enemies at every blow, while the yells and screams they uttered were broken up and multiplied and rendered all the more hideous by a rapid clapping of the mouth with the palm of the hand.

To see such an exhibition by a single individual would have been sufficient to excite a sense of fear in a person not over nervous. Eight hundred such, all under the influence of the strongest and wildest excitement, constituting a raging sea of dusky, painted, naked fiends, presented a spectacle absolutely appalling.

When the head of the column had reached the front of the hotel, leaping, dancing, gesticulating and screaming, while they looked up at the windows with hell itself depicted on their faces at the "chemokoman squaws" with which they were filled, and brandishing their weapons as if they were about to make a real attack in deadly earnest, the rear was still on the other side of the river, two hundred yards off; and all the intervening space, including the bridge and its approaches, was covered with this raging savagery glistening in the sun, reeking with steamy sweat, fairly frothing at their mouths as with unaffected rage, it seemed as if we had a picture of hell itself before us, and a carnival of the damned spirits there confined, whose pastimes we may suppose should present some such scenes as this.

At this stage of the spectacle, I was interested to observe the effect it had upon the different ladies who occupied the windows almost within reach of the war clubs in the hands of the excited savages just below them. Most of them had become accustomed to the sight of the naked savages during the several weeks they had occupied the town, and had even seen them in the dance before, for several minor dances had been previously performed, but this far excelled in the horrid anything which they had previously witnessed. Others, however, had but just arrived in town, and had never seen an Indian before the last few days, and knew nothing of our wild western Indians but what they had learned of their savage butcheries and tortures in legends and in histories. To those most familiar with them, the scenes seemed actually appalling, and but few stood it through and met the fierce glare of the savage eyes below them without shrinking. It was a place to try the human nerves of even the stoutest, and all felt that one such sight was enough for a lifetime. The question forced itself on even those who had seen them most, what if they should, in their maddened frenzy, turn this sham warfare into a real attack? how easy it would be for them to massacre us all, and leave not a living soul to tell the story. Some such remark as this was often heard, and it was not strange if the cheeks of all paled at the thought of such a possibility. However, most of them stood it bravely, and saw the sight to the very end; but I think all felt relieved when the last had disappeared around the corner as they passed down Lake street, and only those horrid sounds which reached them told that the war dance was still progressing. They paused in their progress, for extra exploits, in front of Dr. Temple's house, on the corner of Lake and Franklin streets, then in front of the Exchange Coffee House, a little further east on Lake street; and then again in front of the Tremont, then situate on the north-west corner of Lake and Dearborn streets, where the appearance of the ladies in the windows again inspired them with new life and energy. From thence they passed down to Fort Dearborn, where they concluded their performance in the presence of the officers and soldiers of the garrison, where we will take a final leave of my old friends, with more good wishes for their future welfare than I really dare hope will be realized.

MEMORIES OF SHABBONA.

This celebrated Indian chief, whose portrait appears in this work, deserves more than a passing notice. Although Shabbona was not so conspicuous as Tecumseh or Black Hawk, yet in point of merit he was superior to either of them.

Shabbona was born at an Indian village on the Kankakee River, now in Will county, about the year 1775. While young he was made chief of the band, and went to Shabbona Grove, now De Kalb County, where they were found in the early settlement of the county.

In the war of 1812 Shabbona with his warriors joined Tecumseh, was aid to that great chief, and stood by his side when he fell at the battle of the Thames. At the time of the Winnebago war, in 1827, he visited almost every village among the Pottawatomies, and by his persuasive arguments prevented them from taking part in the war. By request of the citizens of Chicago, Shabbona, accompanied by Billy Caldwell (Saganash), visited Big Foot's village at Geneva Lake, in order to pacify the warriors, as fears were entertained that they were about to raise the tomahawk against the whites. Here Shabbona was taken prisoner by Big Foot, and his life threatened, but on the following day was set at liberty. From that time the Indians (through reproach) styled him "the white man's friend," and many times his life was endangered.

Before the Black Hawk War, Shabbona met in council at two different times, and by his influence prevented his people from taking part with the Sacs and Foxes. After the death of Black Partridge and Senachwine, no chief among the Pottawatomies exerted so much influence as Shabbona. Black Hawk, aware of this influence, visited him at two different times, in order to enlist him in his cause, but was unsuccessful. While Black Hawk was a prisoner at Jefferson Barracks, he said, had it not been for Shabbona the whole Pottawatomie nation would have joined his standard, and he could have continued the war for years.

To Shabbona many of the early settlers of this county owe the preservation of their lives, for it is a well-known fact, had he not notified the people of their danger, a large portion of them, like those on Indian Creek, would have fallen victims to the tomahawk of savages. By saving the lives of whites he endangered his own, for the Sacs and Foxes threatened to kill him, and made two attempts to execute their threats. They killed Py-peogee, his son, and Pyps, his nephew, and hunted him down as though he was a wild beast.

Shabbona had a reservation of two sections of land at his Grove, but by leaving it and going west for a short time, the Government declared the reservation forfeited, and sold it the same as other vacant land. On Shabbona's return, and finding his possessions gone, he was very sad and broken down in spirit, and left the Grove forever. The citizens of Ottawa raised money and bought him a tract of land on the Illinois River, above Seneca, in Grundy County, on which they built a house, and supplied him with means to live on. He lived here until his death, which occurred on the 17th of July, 1859, in the eighty-fourth year of his age, and was buried with great pomp in the cemetery at Morris. His squaw, Pokanoka, was drowned in Mazon Creek, Grundy County, on the 30th of November, 1864, and was buried by his side.

In 1861 subscriptions were taken up in many of the river towns, to erect a monument over the remains of Shabbona, but, the war breaking out, the enterprise was abandoned. Only a plain marble slab marks the resting-place of this friend of the white man.

THE GEOLOGY OF LA SALLE COUNTY.

BY JOHN W. HUETT.

(In this article n stands for north; e east, &c.)

Geology has for its object a description of the structure of our earth and of the character and arrangement of the materials of which it is composed. This embraces a description of the rocks forming its outside or surface, of the fossils—remains of animals and plants—shells, teeth, bones, stems, leaves, etc., which they contain, and of the ores and minerals found in them.

In the language of Geology all the material of our globe is termed rock, whether hard like limestone and granite, or soft and tenacious like clay, or loose and not cohering, like sand.

All rocks are divided into two great classes, unstratified or lying in vast irregular masses; stratified,—arranged in layers or strata. The stratified rocks are divided into fossiliferous,—containing fossils; unfossiliferous, containing no fossils. Most of the rocks of the Central Plain are of the stratified class. It must not be understood, however, that these strata are of different origin. The unstratified rocks can frequently be traced to points where they are found to be stratified. Hence we are justified in assuming that their present condition is not their original state, but has been produced by causes acting upon them at some time since their formation.

The different strata of rocks differ much from one another. Some are very hard and tough, others soft, and some hard and brittle. They are also of very different colors, and vary greatly in mineral character. They belong generally to one of three classes. Calcareous or limerocks—limestones; arenaceous or sandy rocks—sandstones, and argillaceous or clay rocks—slates and clay shales. Slates are rocks splitting into thin slabs, having a smooth surface; shales are those splitting up into very thin irregular pieces. Some shales are arenaceous and sometimes limestones are found in this form.

The rocks are divided into formations or groups, according to the fossils which they contain, and these formations, also called "ages," are subdivided into periods. The following table will give a better idea of these groups and their relations than any description can. It is taken from Dana's Manual of Geology, 2d Ed., p. 142, and is the system of the N. Y. State Survey, with some slight changes.

		Primor- dial, or Cambrian	Calceiferous. Potsdam. Acadian.	Contains some fossils.	Utica Cement Rock, usually called calciferous, probably Quebec.
		Archean.	Archean.

It will be seen from the above that by far the larger part of these groups are not known in our county. This is equally true of the State, and we may say that in no one place are all these strata found laying in their natural order. Some of the groups are always wanting. Thus in New York, where the Silurian and Devonian are well represented, the carboniferous, and all above it, are wanting. In the Southern States, where the tertiary and cretaceous occupy wide areas, all below is concealed or not present. The total thickness of all the strata at any one point is probably not less than 75,000 feet, or a little more than fourteen miles.

The rocks do not lie horizontally, but are generally inclined at a greater or lesser angle to the horizon, and this brings them to the surface at some points, however deeply they may be buried at others. It is from these exposed edges, and from what we see in ravines and learn from excavations for railways and mines, and from the borings for artesian wells, that we obtain our knowledge of the structure of our globe.

The rocks of La Salle county embrace some of the oldest formations of our earth, and none of the later, and between the strata represented there are great breaks, vast intervals in time, during which no strata were formed, no progress made in building up this part of the continent.

All stratified rocks were undoubtedly deposited from water in the form of mud or sandbanks. The arrangement of the layers, the thickening and thinning in one direction or another, the assorting of the material, the lamination of the rocks—that is, the appearance of being made up of thin sheets of different colors—all these attest the action of water, and strongly testify that it was the agent in transporting the material and laying down these rocks; and if the stratified strata were thus formed, so also were the unstratified, for, as we have seen, the latter are but an altered condition of the former.

The strata of La Salle county consist of first, the Primordial or calciferous; second, the Chazy or St. Peter's sandstone; third, the Trenton limestone; fourth, the carboniferous or coal-bearing rocks.

The calciferous strata occupy a small area in the valley of the Illinois, near Utica, extending from east to west about $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles, and from north to south about $1\frac{3}{4}$ miles, covering about 8 square miles, its total thickness being at Utica about 170 feet. Its most eastern outcrop is about a mile and a half east of Utica, and its most western about two and a half miles west of that place in the eastern edge of La Salle township, nearly a half mile west of the works of the Utica Cement Co. Its most northern exposure is in the bed of the Pequemsoggie creek, three-fourths of a mile north of these works, and it is bounded on the south by the bluff south of the river. It nowhere extends back at the top of the north bluff more than a half mile, and seldom so far as that.

These strata for a thickness of from four to six feet on a part of the bottom or flat are very arenaceous, and in some places flinty. They are thin bedded, quite hard, and a band about a foot in thickness over most of this area is oolitic in structure—that is, appears to be made up of small round grains, nearly white. This band is of a light color, hard and tough. In the bluff these arenaceous beds do not appear. Below these lies a thin-bedded, grayish-blue, hard limestone breaking with a ringing sound. This is the waterlime rock. Below it are many feet of limestone, some of the strata 8 to 10 inches thick, but most of them thinner. Among these are beds of waterlime, and some strata of sandstone, one of them white, less than an inch thick, and hard, lying just over the first waterlime, and one about four inches thick lying in the thick waterlime bed near the bottom. It is coarse-grained, very hard, and dark colored. The total thickness of these beds at Utica is about 170 feet. The following is a section taken from the Ill. Geological Survey, vol. III., page 281, taken at a point about three-fourths of a mile west of Jas. Clark & Sons' cement mill. The full thickness is not shown here.

1. St. Peter's sandstone, 3 feet.
2. Silicious and cherty beds, 12 feet.
3. Silicious and oolite, 0 feet 9 inches.
4. Limestone, 1 foot 3 inches.

10. Sandstone, 1 foot 0 inches.
11. Shaley limestone and clay, 0 feet 3 inches.
12. Cement rock, impure, 1 foot 10 inches; not a good waterlime rock.
13. Sandstone, 3 feet 0 inches; used for lining kilns.
14. Cement rock, 2 feet 0 inches; impure; breaks into small, irregular fragments; worthless.
15. Chert, 0 feet 4 inches; called "flint" in "Report."

25. Limestone, 1 foot 6 inches.
26. Cement rock, 0 feet 10 inches; good.
27. Sandstone, 1 foot 0 inches; calciferous.
28. Limestone, 1 foot 2 inches.
29. Cement rock, 1 foot 6 inches; fair quality.
30. Limestone, 6 feet 0 inches; upper part silicious.
31. Cement rock, 5 feet 0 inches; good; full thickness not ascertained as it extends below the level of the railroad. It contains two beds of 4 to 6 inches of impure stone.

This should be 9 feet 0 inches instead of 5, and there are three bands of impure stone instead of two, the lowest thickest; 8 to 9 inches below this limestone again.

The quarries of James Clark & Son are in No. 22 of this section, on the flat, from three-eighths of a mile to a mile s. w. of the railroad station. In the Illinois Report it is stated that no fossils are found in the overlying rock. Such is not the case, as at least ten species of fossils are found in the surface rock at the s. w. quarry, and some of them, Murchisonia especially, are very abundant. A small trilobite, one-half inch across, two brachiopods, and a coral, are not uncommon. In the waterlime only a single fossil is found, excepting algae. This resembles a Pleurotomaria. Algae are very frequent, but usually broken and imperfect. Some vertical holes indicate the presence of worms, and besides these there are many anomalous markings which have been too slightly studied to allow one to form an intelligent opinion as to what they are.

The strata of the waterlime on the upper surface often present a network of raised lines, different in color from the body of the rock, and on the under surface the same net-like system of lines is seen, but depressed instead of raised. These are very different from the impressions of algae or seaweeds, both in color and form. the lines seldom, if ever, presenting a smooth, rounded surface, and forming a coarse network, while the algae are always smooth rounded and never form a series of reticulations on the surface of the stone. These marks were evidently formed in these strata, while in a plastic or soft state, being exposed to the sun and partially dried and cracked, and then being again covered with water and another layer of mud deposited. We believe that these rocks were formed at the bottom of a shallow estuary or bay into which much sediment was swept by a stream or streams, and that the seaweeds, whose remains are found here, were transported hither by currents, which accounts for their broken and abraded condition, as well as for the state in which most of the shells are found, they having a worn appearance as if having been rolled about by the water. Besides, in the upper beds on the flat, No. 21 of the above section, there are many worn fragments of stone, apparently taken from some older rock and transported to some considerable distance by currents or waves.

2. The St. Peter's sandstone. Next in ascending order is the St. Peter's sandstone, a deposit of almost pure silica, but in some places containing a considerable amount of oxide of iron, and in others of a fine, nearly white, tenacious clay. Its thickness at Utica is about 130 feet, and it consists of a series of thick strata, varying in color from a clear white to a bluish white. Farther east it is yellow, yellowish red, brown, and variously mottled. Along the Fox River it is generally white, but sometimes a rusty yellow. It is a fine-grained, soft pulverulent rock, easily crumbling down under the influence of frost and water. The redder beds are the hardest, but even these are soft. At the base of the formation is a bed of hard, coarser-grained rock, resisting the action of frost and water, and breaking with straight edges. Below this is a singular bed, almost entirely composed of large concretions, the outer portion of which is made of a cherty limestone, the inside of chert or flint running into chalcedony at the centre, often nearly transparent and sometimes highly colored. This is the No. 2 of the section given above, and there is some difference of opinion as to whether this stratum belongs to the St. Peter's or to the calciferous. We are of the opinion that it belongs to the St. Peter's, as we find some masses of chert of the same character in the lower three feet of what is unquestionably the St. Peter's. Many of these masses are 3 to 4 feet in diameter. They are very hard, the outer shells being very free from cracks and quite hard. The inner part is very hard, but splinters under the hammer, and breaks into irregular, angular fragments, having a sharp, cutting edge.

The St. Peter's is the surface rock of the Illinois River valley from a point about a mile and a half east of Utica to Ottawa, with an exception to be noticed in our next section, and on the south side of the river all the bluff rock from two miles west of Utica for about eight miles east, and to the bank of the river for nearly two miles east of Ottawa; while in the north bluff it extends from a half mile west of Utica to about a mile west of Ottawa. The valley of the Fox River is excavated in this rock, and it forms the bluffs of this stream almost through the county. South of the Illinois it covers but a narrow surface, only a limited area along the south bluff, and a small tract in the northwest part of Deer Park township. North of the Illinois it is, except in the Illinois and Fox River valleys, a narrow strip along the top of the bluffs, covered with clays, gravels, etc., to a depth of from 20 to 80 feet. There is also a small development of it in the east part of La Salle township, and it covers the surface from this point east for a small distance—40 to 200 rods back from the bluff, and the tunnel of the C., R. I. & P. R. R. is cut in it. The streams flowing into the Illinois between Ottawa and Utica, as well as the tributaries of the Fox River, have cut for themselves profound gorges in this rock, from a half mile to a mile in length, terminating at the upper end in a series of cascades. These canons, for such they really are, are bounded by perpendicular walls from 80 to 100 feet high, often not more than a hundred feet apart, and at the bottom flows, except in a wet season, only an insignificant stream, but during heavy rains a raging torrent rushes through these ravines, and at the head a series of splendid waterfalls will be found. In this section some grand and picturesque scenery may be found, as well as some of the wonders of Nature's handiwork.

The lower strata of this formation in some places seems to be full of water, while the upper beds are wholly destitute of it. About Utica and up the ravine known as Clark's Run, springs are numerous, and the water generally of excellent quality for drinking. Some of these springs are strongly charged with calcareous matter, which is deposited in moss and in crevices of the rock, forming beautiful incrustations. Frequently the process may be traced from the green moss growing vigorously to a hard, compact limestone. This is well seen at a point about 80 rods northwest of Jas. Clark & Son's Cement Mill, under the bluff, also near the lower falls on Clark's Run. Occasionally a spring contains oxide of iron, as well as lime, and then the tufa becomes reddish-brown, or a deep, dull red. Some of the springs of Clark's Run, as well as many of those in Deer Park, are so highly charged with carbonate of lime that it is deposited in the form of agarie mineral. (Dana's Manual Mineralogy, No. 715-2,) or mountain milk, a light, puffy substance, milk white, and imparting a milky color to the water. A gelatinous silicate is also thrown down by some of the springs in Deer Park.

Deer Park, so well known for its fine scenery, and Starved Rock, so closely connected with the early history of the Central Plain, are both cut in the St. Peter's sandstone. To the east of Starved Rock are some magnificent gorges, quite equal to Deer Park in beauty and extent.

Buffalo Rock is a vast mass of the St. Peter's, around which at one time the Illinois may have flowed. Its perpendicular cliffs make it a conspicuous object from whatever point it is viewed. It has a slope to the west, but even that extremity descends quite abruptly to the valley.

The St. Peter's, as will be seen from our general section, represents the Chazy Epoch of the Potsdam. It is generally believed to be entirely destitute of fossils, but a slab of sandstone found on the bluff near the tunnel on the C., R. I. & P. R. R., near the east line of La Salle township, evidently contains fucoids or seaweeds, and appears to belong to the lower strata of the St. Peters.

3. The Trenton Limestone. This rock, the lower member of the Trenton group, is represented over a narrow area, covering a space in the valley of Covell Creek, and extending thence in a narrow strip northeast across the Illinois valley, almost to the north bluff, at a point about a mile and a half west of the C., R. I. & P. station at Ottawa. It occurs at several points on Fox River, especially near the mouth of Mission Creek. At Homer, in the S.E. corner of Troy Grove, it is quarried, and at a point farther south on the same stream—the Little Vermillion. It is also found in the southwest part of this township, and also in the northwest part of Dimmick. It occurs at the west end of the tunnel, La Salle township, at the entrance to Deer Park, and Lowell on the Big Vermillion. From this it will be seen that the exposures of this rock are widely scattered. They are nowhere of great extent, that near Lowell being the most important—a mile and a half long, and of variable width, but generally narrow. There is also a small exposure of this rock on the land of Geo. Caldwell, Deer Park, and another, we are informed by Mr. M. Fitzpatrick, of Lowell, on the land of Col. D. F. Hitt, just in the rear of Starved Rock. Any limestone found lying directly on the St. Peter's sandstone is probably the Trenton, and this serves as a tolerably fair guide to its identification, the St. Peter's not being liable to be mistaken for any other rock, nor any other rock for the St. Peter's.

The Trenton is a dense, hard, bluish, highly fossiliferous limestone, sometimes almost flinty, and splintering when struck into irregular fragments. Some of its beds are, however, fine working, breaking with a straight, smooth face, and coming out in blocks of fair size. The beds at Homer are somewhat yellow, thin, and softer than much of this rock. The strip in the Illinois valley just east of Ottawa—it crosses west of the fair grounds—is in its upper part shaley, breaking up into thin, irregular pieces, to the depth of 12 to 18 inches. The lower beds are a solid rock in strata of from 6 to 12 inches thick. At the tunnel it is a brownish rock, breaking irregularly, and containing pyrite (No. 75, Dana's Manual of Mineralogy).

Charles Blanchard

OTTAWA

At Covell Creek, near the bridge on the river road, it is very light colored, especially when exposed for some time to the weather.

The Trenton is at least 50 ft. thick at Covell Creek, and about the same at Lowell and at the tunnel. At Homer it is about 20 feet thick. It is sometimes, as at Homer and on Covell Creek, nearly horizontal, while at the tunnel and at the mill at Lowell it lies inclined at an angle of 40 degrees. At the tunnel to the southwest; at Lowell to the northeast. Just east of Ottawa it has been much disturbed, and the strata are frequently cracked, and flexed as if by pressure from the sides. This strip, moreover, is sometimes broken through, and is nowhere over 8 feet thick, sometimes not over 4. In the Illinois valley both the St. Peter's and the Trenton lie 80 feet below the top of the bluff, also composed of St. Peter's. That the beds in the valley have not been simply worn away to this depth the existence of the Trenton strata lying upon them clearly proves. Some great convulsion has either raised a portion of these strata or sunk a part of them below their natural level. Of this matter we shall speak more fully under the head of Disturbance of Strata.

The Trenton is eminently a fossil-bearing rock almost throughout its whole extent. It is not to be expected, however, that in all parts it is equally rich in organic remains, or that they are equally well preserved. Mollusks or shell fish, at least many of the species, are gregarious, or live in groups like the oysters, clams and scallop of to-day, and of course, where these "banks" were, there vast quantities of these shells were entombed, thus photographing their features indelibly on Nature's tablets, and handing down to ages to come these mummies of perished races. Among the species thus preserved in the Trenton strata are Orthoceros of several species, some very large from Homer, and among others, the form called Ormoceros, having instead of a straight a beaded form of siphuncle, or tube connecting the chambers. The specimens are very generally imperfect, and nice points cannot be easily settled, except from a large collection, such as does not exist as far as we know. The best suite of specimens we have seen is in the possession of the Ottawa Academy of Sciences at Ottawa, of which D. S. Ebersol is president. A large spiral shell, Trochilites undatum, occurs at Homer, also Maclurea magnum, Cyrtoceros, Phragmoceros, Gonioceros, and Vanuxemia. In other places a maclurea, strophomena, Chaetetes, a fine incrusting coral, and algae of more than one species are found. Some of the straight chambered shells from Homer appear to be Endoceros, but we have seen them nowhere else. Of the orthoceras certainly three, probably five species are represented; of Phragmoceros two species certainly, and of cyrtoceros we think at least three species exist, it may be more.

4. The Carboniferous Formation. Nearly all the surface of the county south of the Illinois River is covered by the Carboniferous strata, and north of the river most of La Salle and Peru; the south part of Dimmick; the south central part of Utica; the north and east part of Ottawa, South Dayton, and the south part of Rutland and Manlius. We have indicated only the area where the Carboniferous strata actually outcrop, and that the coal strata do not extend as far north as is indicated on Mr. Freeman's map is now certain, as borings do not reveal coal or carboniferous strata over some of that region. In a part of the territory indicated above, the coal may be wanting, but carboniferous rocks will probably be found to cover it, and may extend beyond the limits assigned. We shall, for reasons hereafter mentioned, consider these strata in two divisions. 1. The La Salle Basin; 2. The Streator Basin.

The La Salle Basin. The strata of the La Salle basin consists essentially of shales and limestones, included in which are three beds of coal. The strata first appears at the west end of the tunnel, resting unconformably on the St. Peter's sandstone and Trenton limestone, dipping at an angle of about one foot in twelve to the west. At the tunnel the lowest coal—No. 2 of the general section is found. It is, however, somewhat doubtful whether, except where the identity of the strata can be conclusively shown, the coals of one locality can be shown to be connected with those of another field in time. Neither chemical composition, mechanical structure, nor the character of enclosing strata, can be relied on to establish the synchronism. Nothing less than tracing the connection of the strata, or the close correspondence of accompanying organic remains can be accepted as proof of their being the same.

The lower coal can be traced from La Salle to the tunnel. Here on the bluff it is gone, the St. Peter's being the surface rock, but the coal runs around to the north, but is not continuous over the tract bordering the Pequamsoggie creek. East of Utica about one and a half miles it occurs on the bluff, lying conformably on the St. Peter's. (Strata are said to be conformable when they are parallel to each other, unconformable when they are not parallel.) It runs back to the north at least one and a half miles. It is covered by from 5 to 20 feet of clay, sand and gravel, and is from 18 to 30 inches thick. It probably runs back into Waltham some distance, but there are no outcrops. It extends eastward through Utica, but is nowhere explored more than three-fourths of a mile from the bluff, except at on a point about two and a half miles north-east of Utica village, on the land of A. O. Crosiar. Along the bluff in Ottawa to a point about two and a half miles east of the C., R. I. & P. R. R. station at Ottawa, it is mined—or, rather, quarried, as also on Buffalo Rock. Then it disappears from the bluff for about two miles, and does not really appear in it again until the bluff bends round to the north. It then comes down into the bottom, covering a part of it for a mile on the north of the river. It has not been discovered at any point beyond until we reach Marseilles, where it has been found at a depth of 60 feet. South of the Illinois, on the Vermillion, this coal is found lying on the Trenton limestone conformably, near the north end of the Lowell bridge, and may be seen in the bank of the Big Vermillion above that place for a short distance, when it sinks beneath the water. In South Ottawa and Deer Park townships it can be traced along the bluff and in ravines across the country, to a little east of Ottawa. The middle La Salle bed—No. 5 of the general section—occurs over the La Salle field, but does not appear in any part of Utica or Ottawa, but in Manlius township, at Marseilles, it occurs in the bluff. The upper bed is not known out of the territory west of the Big Vermillion and a line running north from the tunnel.

No. 65 of this section is the lower LaSalle coal, No. 2 of the so-called general section; No. 46 is the middle LaSalle coal, No. 5 of the general section; and No. 42 is the upper La Salle coal, No. 6 of the general section.

It will be seen that there is not a very close correspondence in the strata at these points. No. 11 of the Peru section seems to be absent up to No. 28. Beginning at the bottom and ascending the column, there is a pretty close agreement. The upper part of the LaSalle section seems to be wanting.

In the Illinois Geological Report it is stated that the middle LaSalle coal is wanting. How the middle coal can be cut out and the upper left we cannot conceive. No. 7 of the Peru shaft cannot, we think, be No. 7 of Section 2.

In the northwestern part of Bruce township, on the bank of the Big Vermillion, a bed of coal exists. It extends along the river nearly two miles, and is found on the opposite side, in Bruce township, as well. It does not appear to be of great extent north and south. It is known as the Kirkpatrick bed, and is covered by about 8 feet of shale and 9 feet of gravel and clay. Beyond this no coal is seen in the banks of the Vermillion until we reach Eagle creek, where it appears in the bluff on the west bank and is found in the bluffs of the east bank. Here it spreads out eastward but a little; farther south it underlies the basin of Prairie creek, extending (it it would seem) not over five miles to the east and being nowhere more than three miles wide and probably always under that width. It follows the Vermillion, being nowhere found more than a mile and a half west of it and (except in the basins of streams) not more than two and a half miles east of it. Along Otter creek it is not found. We give below several sections of this field, kindly furnished by our friend, Dr. Edwin Evans, of Streator, to whom we are indebted for much valuable information:

The coal No. 7 of section No. 1, or the Upper Streator coal, it will be seen, is at shaft No. 1, 6 feet thick ; in section No. 3 it is only 1 foot 5 inches, and No. 4, it is 2 feet 6 inches. From this we see that in this direction the coal is thinning out, yet between these points there is about 6 feet of coal, but as we go farther east, even on the center line of the Prairie Creek Valley, the coal thins out and becomes too thin to work, and probably does not extend over $2\frac{1}{4}$ or 3 miles east of No. 3. South of No. 3 it soon fails, and north of No. 2 it disappears in less than three-fourths of a mile.

The coal, No. 18, of section No. 1, appears to have been reached only at this point and is, counting from the top downward, coal No. 2 at Streator. At Johnson's shaft about 6 miles s. e. of Streator, just on the edge of Livingston County, we get the following section. It is made up from material obtained at three different points.

1. Soil 2 feet 0 inches ; 2. Coal 2 feet 0 inches ; 3. Fire-clay 5 feet 0 inches ; 4. Shale 20 feet ; 5. Limestone 4 feet 0 inches ; (hard, somewhat grayish blue to blue, fossiliferous, making a fair lime.) 6. Shaly sandstone 32 feet 0 inches ; 7. Coal 2 feet 6 inches ; 8. Shale 1 foot 6 inches ; 9. Coal 1 foot 8 inches. (This shale is just perceptible in the coal at shaft No. 1.) 10. Sandstone 20 feet 0 inches ; 11. Coal 0 feet 1 inch ; 12. Shale 100 feet 0 inches ; 13. Coal 2 feet 0 inches ; 14. Clay-slate, unknown.

The limestone, No. 5, extends to the west, and at one point we saw it in the bluff, here, back 30 rods from the river, (Big Vermillion), 5 feet thick and looking like a roughly built stone wall. It can be traced almost if not quite to the bridge of the Chicago and Paduca Rail-Road, but we have heard nothing of it in any boring or cutting near Streator. It seems to lie at about the same level everywhere, but No. 4 becomes a sandstone, in some places thin bedded and crumbling easily, in others thick bedded but soft. No. 6 at the time of our visit, April, 1877, was full of water as far as we examined it.

As the Streator and La Salle basins seem to run together, it would seem and is highly probable that the great bed at Streator, section 1, No. 7, is the representative of one of the La Salle beds. It is generally believed to be the middle La Salle, although the identification is not complete, and that No. 13 of Johnson's shaft is the Lower La Salle, or lowest Illinois coal.

The Upper Streator, at shaft No. 1, has in it near the middle a slight indication of a layer of shale. At shaft No. 2 it is well defined and about an inch thick; at the Streator shaft this shale, in mining language parting, is about 6 inches thick; at Johnson's it is 18 inches, and we are told increases in width farther south to 2 feet 6 inches. We are assured by Mr. M. Kirkpatrick, that it attains at one point a thickness of 12 feet. It is the opinion of some who are quite familiar with these matters that the bed thins out and disappears. Others think that the land parts reunite and become a single bed. This seems, in view of the sections given above, very doubtful, but is neither improbable nor impossible, as such things do occur in coal beds, and here where there is no exposures of the strata in the banks of streams or ravines, the tracing of a bed is a difficult task, especially where the rocks have been disturbed, as is the case in this region.

The strata near Streator exhibit, in the vicinity of the Vermillion many flexures. Just s. w. of the town, on the west side of the river the coal lies at a height of 15 feet to 20 feet above the water, covered with shale and clay, and underlaid by shale resting on an anomalous sandstone. A part of this rock is of good quality, works easily, and makes a very good stone for foundations, but in it occur great nodular masses from a few inches to many feet through, exceedingly hard and very heavy, yet when exposed to the air, slacking down to an arenaceous loam. This rock coming north soon sinks beneath the river and then the shale and coal follow, then this sandstone reappears and forms the bed of the stream, while the bluff on the east side shows coal. The sandstone rises a little and forms the banks of the stream, then lies nearly horizontally for a short distance until, as we approach Eagle Creek, it suddenly dips, the coal appears, and in a short distance sinks below the water. To be intelligible, an article on this subject should be illustrated, but our publishers have made no arrangement for having drawings prepared, hence we must attempt to convey our ideas in words.

Coal, as mined, is a black, stony looking substance, breaking irregularly and burning with more or less readiness. It is usually lustrous where broken, but varies much in lustre, color, and hardness. In color it ranges from a light gray to a glistening black, and in hardness from soft, easily breaking, to hard and splintery. It usually has the laminated appearance, and generally parts in the direction of the lamination into plates of little thickness. Some parts of it burn rapidly with much smoke and flame, and leave but little ashes or cinder, while others leave nearly their original bulk. Some coals partially melt and the pieces cohere forming large masses in the fire. These are called coking coals and are much used for making coke, or coal from which the more volatile elements have been driven off by heat; others do not coke or stick together when heated, and are called non-coking coals.

Coals are divided into three classes. 1. Anthracite, hard or stone coal proper, of a bright metallic lustre, and requiring a smart blow to break it.

It is not found west of the Appalachian Mountains. 2. Bituminous coal, breaking easily when broken across the laminae, lustrous, but the faces of the laminae dull, and blacks the hands when handled. 3. Lignite or brown coal, having a woody appearance and little lustre. Anthracite requires a strong draught and with but little smoke or flame; bituminous coal with a moderate draught and with much smoke and flame; lignite is inferior to either of the others for heating purposes. The composition of coal is as given below; Dana's Manual of Geology.

Lime and coal contains besides the elements essential to it, some iron in the form of bisulphide or pyrite, generally termed sulphur. It is frequently disseminated through the mass of the coal in thin laminae, not thicker than paper and of a golden yellow color. In other cases it forms large masses, often of many pounds weight, which on being burned, yields an abundance of sulphurous acid fumes and a heavy compact cinder. It is very abundant in all of the Illinois coal beds, and renders them unfit for some purposes. The less of this material a coal contains, the more valuable it is for the manufacture of iron, and indeed for almost any use. The pyrite may be utilized in the manufacture of sulphuric acid and of copperas. The white crusts often in coal on breaking it is some salt of lime, usually the carbonate, calcite—a very pure limestone.

The coal seams are not of uniform thickness, but vary much sometimes in short distances. At the Plumb—Peanut shaft, Streator—a remarkable phenomenon presents itself, and is said to be observable throughout the Coal Run mines. The coal appears to lie in rolls like windrows of hay in a field, except that the coal is never broken through, but varies from $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet to 2 feet in thickness. These rolls are, by the miners, called horsebacks, and are from centre to centre 50 feet to 60 feet apart. The coal on the sides of these rolls has a glazed, half polished appearance, called by the miners slicken sides, which strongly suggest pressure from above as the cause of this phenomenon, but other considerations render this highly improbable. West of the Vermillion, at Streator, the coal strata a short distance back from the river are very much broken, so that the coal lies in large, detached masses surrounded by shale or gravel and cannot be taken out without much difficulty.

Sometimes the strata are not continuous, a part of the beds having been in some way raised or lowered, so that the seam appears to suddenly come to an end. This is called a fault. We have no proof any such exists in our coal, although they certainly do in some of our other rocks, as will be shown farther on. The strata seldom lie horizontally, but almost always incline to the horizon, at a greater or less angle. On the Vermillion the beds form great curves and lie at very high angles, 30 and 40 degrees, sometimes to the east, sometimes to the west. Strata sloping away from a central point like the roof of a house, are said to form an artificial. Those sloping toward a common point a synclinal. The angle the beds form with the surface of the earth is called their dip. The inclination of the surface at right angles to the dip is called the strike.

Of the extent of the coal beds the lower La Salle is undoubtedly the most extensive, underlying most of the county south of the Illinois, and the part indicated above north of the river. The Upper La Salle is restricted to the territory about La Salle and Peru, and west of the Big Vermillion south of the Illinois, while the middle La Salle is represented east of the Vermillion, north of the Illinois at Marseilles, and south of the river at Streator, but in neither locality covering a great extent of territory, probably not over 60 square miles.

The amount of coal in a 5 foot seam is enormous, when expressed in figures, 6 square feet of surface making a ton. The coal underlying one acre equals about 8,000 tons, and one square mile will produce 5,120,000 tons, or $3\frac{1}{2}$ times as much as was estimated to have been mined in Illinois in 1867. Of the 1,152 square miles contained in the county, not over 100 square miles is underlaid by the 5 foot bed, or the middle LaSalle, and perhaps 400 square miles by the Lower La Salle, or 4 foot bed. But this bed will not average over 3 feet. The Upper La Salle does not probably extend over an area of more than 40 square miles. Most of this coal could, if necessary, be mined, but the thick beds will be first taken out, as they can be worked more cheaply than the thin ones. Again, the roof of some of these beds is very poor, requiring great care in working to prevent serious accidents. These deposits will furnish fuel for the county for many years at the present rate of consumption, the total quantity used in the county for all purposes, being probably inside of 400,000 tons. The production is probably for La Salle, Peru and neighborhood, 390,000 tons; for Streator, 400,000 tons; Utica, 5,000 tons; Marseilles, 7,500 tons; Seneca, 10,000 tons; Ottawa, 7,000 tons; total, 900,000 tons per year. If necessary, nearly double this quantity could be raised. It is to be remembered that in Ottawa and Utica the coal is quarried, not mined, the earth being entirely removed before the coal is taken out.

A list of the principal mines is appended: La Salle and Peru, Peru shaft; Streator, Kentucky shaft; Chicago and Vermillion Coal Co., Matthiessen & Hegler's shaft; Shaft No. 1, Streator, carbon shaft; Shaft No. 2, south of Streator 2 miles; Shaft No. 3, Kenosha shaft, 1 mile south of La Salle; Shaft No. 4, south east of Streator $\frac{1}{2}$ mile; Shaft Streator, 3 miles south of Streator; Sharp Shaft, 2 miles north east of La Salle; Shaft Plumb, (Peanut) $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south of Streator; Drift, Patterson & Co., $\frac{3}{4}$ mile south west of Streator; Drift, s. w. side of river, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile to a mile; Shaft Chicago; Pekin & Southwestern, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north east of Streator; Shaft Marseilles, Shaft Seneca.

The fossils found in the coal are of two kinds, vegetable and animal. In some of the strata remains of plants predominate, and scarcely any traces of animal life are found; while in others scarcely a trace of a plant appears, and the mass of the rock is made up of shells or crinoid stems. At La Salle the limestones afford a great variety of shells, and some of them in great abundance. Among the most common is Athyris subtilita Sperifes, Camaratus, S. La Sallensis, Productus longispinos, Chonetes mesoloba, Orthis carbonaria, Rhyrchonella Osagensis, Solenomga Soleniformis, Aviculopecter Coxanus, Hemipronites crenistria, Myalira recurvirostris, Penna peracuta, Solenomya radiata, Athyris Royissii, bivalves, or having two pieces to the shell; and Orthoceus Rushensis Pleurotomaria grayvillensis, Bellorophon Carbonaria, Nautillus Illinoiensis, Goniatites; univalves, or shell consisting of one piece; crinoid stems. Near Lowell some crinoid heads have been found in the limestone between the lower and middle coal. In the sandstone along the Vermillion, west of Lowell, Lepidodendra of several species are found, some very fine specimens. In the west part of South Ottawa a remarkable bed of Lepidodendra has been discovered by Col. D. F. Hitt. Some of the specimens are very fine, and many of them large. They are imbedded in a soft, tenacious clay. At Marseilles Lepidodendra occurs in some of the strata in the quarries, and in the bed of a creek east of the village. Also some fossiliferous limestone containing shells of several species named above. At Utica some fragments of ferns and some traces of Lepidodendra occur. At Streator fragments of ferns, some Lepidodendra, and in a limestone, as occurring just in the limits of Livingston county, Naticopsis Wheelin, Pleurotomaria of one or more species are abundant. The ferns are plenty in shale below the coal on the west bank of the river. On Covell creek, just east of bridge of C. B. & Q. R. R., and again a half mile west of it several species of ferns are found. Of these fossils a good representation may be found in the collection of the Ottawa Academy of Sciences at Ottawa.

5th. The Drift. Overlying the other strata of the county are beds of clay, sand and gravel, and fragments of rocks of which no beds are found. In these sands and clays are found pieces of limestone differing much from the limestone forming the beds of this region, as well as fragments of copper and some specimens of golenite, as sulphuret of lead, the ore so abundant at Galena. In some places huge masses of hard rock, the corners and edges rounded and the faces smoothed and grooved, are found lying in trains or lines upon the surface, and also in sinking wells and in railroad cuttings, buried in the clay. These rocks are of many colors, very hard and heavy, and all bear marks of having been subjected to some wearing action. The clays and sands are often without any traces of stratification, the material being very different grades of fineness, and generally present evidence of having been rapidly deposited. Sometimes fragments of coal and pieces of wood are found in these deposits. We saw at Streator a piece of wood found at 40 feet below the surface. In Whiteside county we were shown, by Dr. L. S. Pennington, of Jordan township, in the bank of Elkhorn creek, a great many trees buried 20 feet below the surface, evidently lying near where they grew. We have been assured by an acquaintance—a man in whose truthfulness we have confidence, that some years ago he saw some chip-pings of wood, taken from the depth of 20 feet in the north east part of Utica, which he believed to have been cut with an adze or other sharp tool. They were probably the work of beavers, of which specimens may be seen in the collection of the Ottawa Academy of Sciences, Ottawa.

These beds of clay, sand, gravel, and rock are called the Drift. It is of variable thickness, from 5 feet to 60 feet, embracing No. 1 and 2 of the Peru section; No. 1 of section 2; Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 of section No. 1, Streator; and Nos. 1 to 10 inclusive of No. 3, Streator. It seems to have been formed in a period of alternations of still waters and of rushing torrents, the clays being of stillwater origin, deposited in lakes or pools, or over flooded marshes, in which probably the buried trees were entombed; the sands by swiftly moving waters near the points where the force of the current began to weaken. The trains of rocks may have been in part borne along by torrents, and the manner in which they are disposed would favor this idea, but they as often lie on high land as on low, and their ranks extend across hollows on to the bounding heights. In the drift clays and gravels very few traces of life appear, but in some localities shells are found, always of such species as inhabit cold waters at the present time.

In some places the face of rocks, which are covered by a few feet of earth, are found, when the earth is cleared away, to be smoothed and grooved or furrowed, the furrows varying in size from a mere scratch to channels 6 inches deep, and 6 inches to 8 inches wide, and being perfectly parallel and straight. Running water could not have cut these channels, nor could it have planed down thousands of acres of hard rock and polished this vast surface as if preparing it for a gigantic monument. Some agent more mighty than even the all-conquering wave or the unbridled river, less easily turned aside than they, must have been concerned in this work, and in part through the operation of that agent much of the material now forming these sands, clays, and gravels, was prepared and transported to where we find it now.

There is but one agency with which we are acquainted that is capable of producing these effects—ice in the form of glaciers. Running water could not have polished and grooved the rocks as we find it done, for it could not have cut perfectly straight channels of uniform size, with sharply defined edges. Ice borne by currents or tossed about by waves is not able to produce such results, for in that case the grooves would vary in depth, and there would be curves and angles in the grooves and variations in width. The glacier alone is capable of planing great surfaces of hard rock and cutting continuous furrows perfectly straight and parallel to each other for long distances.

A glacier is a vast mass of ice usually formed from the accumulation of snow in those parts of mountain chains above the line of eternal frost. During the summer the upper surface partially thaws, but in the lower part frost reigns, and the water descending through the mass converts the whole into ice. Year after year the accumulation goes on and finally the deposit becomes hundreds of feet deep, pressing with enormous weight on the rocks below, every hundred feet of depth being equivalent to a pressure of about two tons per square foot, or $27\frac{1}{2}$ pounds per square inch, and under the influence of this pressure the ice is forced down slopes, and in all directions when the accumulation is very great, so that the movement may be actually up hill, as is sometimes the case. Pieces of stone are frozen into the base of the ice mass and act as chisels to cut out grooves in the rocks beneath as it slides over them.

Stones and earth accumulate on its surface and are carried along to the lower end of the glacier where they are dropped and form a pile called a moraine. Many of the ridges of clay and coarse gravel mixed with boulders mark the former termination of a glacier. The lines of glacial action vary between 40 deg. E. and S. 40 deg. W. If these lines are run back northward, meet in the country between Lake Winnipeg and James Bay, and in this locality we presume the centre of pressure was located, and from it the ice king's armies went forth on their mission. Of the amount of work done we shall speak hereafter.

There were also in the mountains of the New England States local glaciers, whose effects are traceable over limited areas, and are well described in Hitchcock's Geology, which those desirous of information on the subject will do well to consult.

Some fine examples of glacial work exist in La Salle county. In the western part of Ottawa a train of boulders—light-colored, porphyritic granites; dark, hard, tough, dolerites and diavites and some gneis—extend from E. of N. to W. of S. for about two miles, lying on a low, narrow ridge. Some of these are of large size—200 cubic feet in volume, and weigh not less than 20 tons. At Streator, a mile north east of the town, on the banks of the Big Vermillion, is a bed of sand beautifully stratified. It is worked, and the character of the deposit can be seen to the depth of 20 feet. In the northern part of the county a vast bed of sand and gravel is found just below the soil, and is seen in ravines and rail-road cuttings. It is cut into at the south west end of the side-track at Sheridan, and in the cutting on the C., B. & Q. R. R., just south west of the bridge over Fox River. A similar deposit exists on the line of this road in South Ottawa, and also is seen at Utica resting on the St. Peter's just back of J. Clark & Sons' Cement Mill.

In the cutting south west of the C., B. & Q. R. R. bridge over Fox River, near Sheridan, is found a peculiar, somewhat arenaceous, limestone, sometimes having a conglomerate character from the great quantity of pebbles contained in it. It outcrops in some of the ravines near by, but is probably of limited extent. It is solid, hard, rather brittle, light buff on exposed surfaces, grayish-blue where freshly broken. It lies at the outcrop generally in sheets interstratified with gravel, but several of these sheets often unite and form a thick bed. It seems to have been formed by the flowing of water highly charged with calcareous matter, through the gravel.

The surface soil has been formed since the age of the Glacial Period, and a part, at least, of the valleys through which our streams flow have been hollowed out since that time, draining lakes and somewhat changing the features of the country. At that time, and probably long after, the volume of the streams was no doubt much greater than at present, and the work of cutting out gorges went on more rapidly than at this time.

Minerals. Copper is found in pieces of varying size, weighing from less than an ounce to over a pound, scattered through the drift.

Lead. Galenite—Galena—44. Sulphate of lead is occasionally found in the drift, and also in small quantities in the Trenton limestone, a locality being near the mill at Lowell.

Iron. Pyrite—bisulphide of iron. Sulphur of the miners—in all the coal rocks and in the coal, also in Trenton limestone, often crystallized, forming beautiful specimens. Some very fine at Streator Coal Company's shaft, also fine ones in shale over coal at Utica.

Calcite 715—carbonate of lime—in all the limestones, crystallized, and of various colors, forming the dog-tooth spar of the grades, and the spar of quarrymen.

Gypsum—sulphate of lime—654. Found in coal measures on Big Vermillion, east of Lowell, as Latin spar, and near tunnel, La Salle, in crystals, —selevite—sometimes colored and beautifully transparent; sometimes colored rose-red, rust-red and brown. Not in quantity to be of any economic value.

Iron—Limonite—206. Brown oxide of iron, as brown ironstone, ferruginous, conglomerate, etc., in many places, notably on Covell Creek, one-half mile west of C., B. & Q. bridge, north bank, and Streator, in nodules.

Hematite—180—red oxide of iron, red ochre—one mile s.w. of Streator, east bank Big Vermillion. Carbonate of iron—clay ironstone—in concretions Covell Creek, Big Vermillion, and coal measures generally. None of these ores of iron in sufficient quantity to be valuable. Sulphate of iron—melanterite—copperas in incrustations on the coal strata, especially the sandstones. This salt is formed by the decomposition of pyrite.

Other minerals are found in the drift, but have no special interest in connection with this county, being only wanderers from other regions.

Economic Geology. Building stone: The Trenton limestone furnishes from its lower beds a very good article of building stone, breaking with square faces, and standing the action of the weather excellently. It is also of a pleasing color, and of various shades, and does not become dark and grimy with time. On Covell Creek an excellent article is obtained, one-half mile south of the bridge, on the Illinois valley road; also near mill at Lowell; at Homer, north of fair ground; Ottawa and southeast of Sheridan. Near Ottawa it is burned for lime, producing a very good article. It may be obtained in blocks up to 18 inches thick, and in length and breadth as required. Some of the beds are thin, and make a tolerable flagging.

The sandstones and limestones of the coal measures furnish good building material at many points. At La Salle the limestone is quarried both for building stone and for the manufacture of lime. The sandstone is quarried at Streator, and when carefully selected, so as to be free from pyrite, wears very well. Vast quantities of good stone can be obtained from this formation for all time.

The St. Peter's sandstone furnishes an inexhaustible supply of sand for the manufacture of glass; for all purposes where a pure sand is required. It is largely used in the manufacture of glass, and by iron works. It furnishes but little rock hard enough to be used for building purposes, only one stratum, less than 18 inches thick, being capable of resisting the action of the weather. It is a very superior stone.

The calciferous group furnishes some stone hard enough for building purposes, but it is of very uneven quality, breaks irregularly, and is fit to be used only for foundations and stoning up of wells.

The hydraulic limestones of this group are especially valuable for the manufacture of water-lime, or hydraulic cement. It is a dalemite or magnesian limestone, composed, according to the analysis given in Illinois Geological Report, Vol. I., page 151, as follows: Carbonate of lime, 43.50; carbonate of magnesia, 30.07; alumina, (clay,) 20.00; silica, 1.00; carbonate of iron, 2.00; potash, 00.18; water, 2.00.

A specimen for southwest Ohio, as given in the Ohio Geological Report, Vol. II., page 672, yielded as follows: Carbonate of lime, 51.10; carbonate of magnesia, 41.12; silica, 5.40; alumina with trace of iron, 1.40.

We add for comparison an analysis of the hydraulic limestone of northern Ohio, from which a superior water-lime was formerly manufactured at Ottawa City, Ottawa county, Ohio, and also of a magnesia limestone, or dolomite, from the same locality, and another from Sing Sing, N. Y., from which the highest priced lime in the N. Y. market is manufactured:

By referring to the section of the calciferous strata given above, it will be seen that there are a number of beds of water-lime, or cement rock, in the series, and from two of these cement is now manufactured. James Clark & Son, whose mills are near the C., R. I. & P. R. R. station, at Utica, work the upper bed. They have been in the business since 1845, and can now send into the market about 500 barrels per day, or 150,000 barrels per year, when running their works to their full capacity. This cement has a high character among engineers, and is very extensively used. The stone used by them is quarried in the flat southwest of the village.

The Utica Cement Company's works, located about two and one-half miles west of Utica station, at the mouth of Pequamsoggie Creek, is one of the most complete establishments of its kind in the country. The stone used is mined from the lower bed of the section, here 9 feet thick, and is a very superior article. 600 barrels per day, or 180,000 barrels per year, can be made. As the supply of rock is unlimited this manufacture must, as long as there is a demand for cement, be an important industry in this county, fuel being cheap and the facilities for transportation unrivalled.

It may seem paradoxical to speak of clays as possessing any commercial value, but it may be well to remind the reader that without these many important industries must come to a standstill. Brick and pottery are almost as necessary to civilized society as iron and steel. But all clays are not fit for the manufacture of these articles, and those that are are worthy of more than a passing notice.

In most places the coal rests on a clay of greater or less purity. That below the lower coal is considered best for fire brick and sewer pipe, although that lying above does well for these purposes, but shrinks more in drying than the first. Pottery is also manufactured from it near Lowell. Fire brick are made by M. Kirkpatrick, at Lowell; sewer pipe and fire brick by James Clark & Son, at Utica, from clay procured in Deer Park township, and this clay is also used for retorts by the zinc smelting establishments at LaSalle, and for the manufacture of melting-pots by the glass manufacturers of La Salle and Ottawa.

Clay for the manufacture of common brick is found in all parts of the county, of very varying quality, some of it excellent, some very inferior, producing a poor brick. In general, however, clay of fair quality may be found in every neighborhood, and brick is made at many points, Marseilles and Streator especially. At Streator a fine pressed brick is made.

An analysis of a good fire-clay, that of Summit county, Ohio, Ohio State Geological Report of Geology, Vol. I., page 222, is given as it is found at Magadore and at East Liberty:

	Magadore.	East Liberty.
Water (combined)	5.45	7.00
Silicic Acid	76.70	62.00
Alumina	27.70	24.80
Iron	----	Traces.
Lime	00.40	1.75
Magnesia	0.37	0.42
Potash and Soda	----	3.22

It will be observed that the iron, lime, magnesia, and potash and soda are in very small proportion. It is the iron contained in the clay which gives brick their red color, and the less iron the lighter the tint. Silicic acid, a peculiar compound of oxygen and silica, and alumina, form the great body of the clay. Both silica and alumina are very infusible, but the admixture of potash, soda, or lime, renders the mass fusible at a lower temperature, and renders the clay unfit for the manufacture of fire-clay pottery, etc., as the articles formed of it will melt before they are properly burned. Ordinary red brick are often seen presenting a glazed appearance, a sure indication that the clay contains lime, potash, or soda, in some form in considerable quantity. Soda may also exist in sufficient quantity to form an efflorescence or crust of a white color on the surface of the brick, defacing buildings, sometimes causing the brick to scale.

Sands and gravels are very abundant. The gravels are generally well calculated for building roads and ballasting railroads. A fine bed exists at Sheridan, and another on the line of the C., B. & Q. R. R., in South Ottawa.

Sand for the manufacture of glass is obtained from the St. Peter's Sandstone, and is already an important article of commerce. It is also used in rolling mills and iron works. Sand for mortar is to be had in all parts of the county at no great distance. Sand fit for manufacturing artificial stone is easily obtained, and this industry must with time become of great importance, as caps, sills and mouldings, in any desired style, can be much more cheaply made by this process than they can be cut, and they seem to be equally durable. We were shown specimens of such a stone by Dr. Edward Evans, manufactured at Streator, which had been exposed to the weather for three years, and were originally rejected as imperfect. They had worn as well as the best cut stone we have ever seen.

Coal is abundant, being known actually to exist over an area of 11,200 acres. In quality it compares favorably with that of the rest of the state, but generally contains more pyrite than that of Pennsylvania and Ohio, as well as being softer and making more soot in its combustion. But some of the beds are much superior to others, and when carefully selected they will be found well suited to almost any purpose. That of Streator has a great reputation as a gas coal, and is considerably used for the manufacture of that article. Some of these coals coke well, and thus the sulphur, a most injurious ingredient can be eliminated to a great degree and the coal fitted for uses it would not otherwise be suited to.

The zinc ores smelted at La Salle, are obtained from the Galena Illinois Lead Region, and from the neighborhood of Mineral Point, Wisconsin, and from Missouri. About 40,000 lbs. are produced per day; about 500 hands are employed. The La Salle Zinc Company, Matthiessen Hegler & R. Lanyon, are the owners of the establishments. As fuel is so easily obtained it is found cheaper to bring the ore to the fuel than to take the fuel to the ore, and this business must become more and more important for many years. Both Ottawa and Streator might compete in this manufacture.

Mineral waters. La Salle County has many springs whose waters possess mineral properties, some of them having been proved to be valuable as remedial agents. Most of the waters flowing from the coal measures are strongly charged with sulphate of iron, and with salts of the alum series—the type of which is KO , 3O_3 , $3\text{AL}_2\text{O}_3$, 3SO_3 24 aq. Some of these springs are very strong. One at Streator, on the west side of the river, south of the bridge, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile is clear, cold, sparkling, but unpleasant to the taste. Another quite as strong is found about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile northwest of Lowell on the north bank of the river. Some but slightly tainted with salt are found in almost every ravine that penetrates the coal measures, while a few, pleasantly chalybeated, flows from the St. Peter's, and also one at least, from the calciferous, about $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mile west of Utica station, close to the C., R. I. & P. track.

Springs strongly impregnated with carbonate of lime are found in many of the ravines which penetrate the St. Peter's sandstone. In Clark's Run and Deer Park especially, these springs abound, and immense deposits of tofa have been found about 80 rods north-west of Clark's Cement Mills, at Utica, and at other points in this ravine. Also mountain milk or agaire mineral, a white, very porous foam like carbonate of lime.

About three miles east of Utica, on the land of O. H. Buell, are three strong sulphur springs rising from the St. Peter's, that had at one time some reputation as medicinal agents. It undoubtedly possesses valuable properties, and only requires capital and energy to make it a valuable property. On the south side of the Illinois, in the north-west corner of South Ottawa, is another spring, a preliminary analysis of whose waters gives sulphur, soda, lime and iron as ingredients. Debolt's Spring, about nine miles north-east of Ottawa, noted as a pic-nic ground, is a sulphur spring, but we have seen no analysis of its waters. It appears to contain considerable sulphuretted hydrogen gas. The most noted spring in the county, is the Ottawa mineral spring, situated in South Ottawa, just east of the Illinois River bridge. It has been pretty thoroughly tried in many diseases and has gained a high reputation for curative properties. It has been unfortunately managed and has failed to become as widely known as it deserves. An analysis by Prof. Benj. Silliman, Jr., gives as its constituents the following substances :

The salts of iodine renders the Ottawa waters particularly valuable in all diseases of the glands, while the other ingredients are happily combined to render it effective in a great variety of chronic complaints. This water deserves a more determined effort to bring it before the public. The efforts thus far have been ill-advised and spasmodic, and so far unsuccessful.

In the valley of Covell Creek, about a mile southeast of the river road bridge, is a spring equal to the Ottawa in quality, but at present of moderate volume. It is on the east bank of the creek, about a half mile from the bridge, also near the east side of the creek is another, sometimes covered by the waters of the creek. On the west side of the creek, near the bridge, is a chalybeate spring of considerable volume. The water of Peddicord's artesian well is said to closely resemble the Ottawa mineral spring.

Salt springs are found about five miles southwest of Ottawa, from which a large volume of salt water flows, forming, when the county was first visited, a salt marsh of considerable extent. From this spring in early times salt was manufactured, but the water is not strong enough to render it valuable for the production of salt at present prices. Some years since a boring was begun here for the purpose of testing the question of whether the quantity and strength of the water could be increased. Unfortunately a tool was lost, and the boring stopped before a sufficient depth had been reached to settle the question decisively.

Artesian wells. An artesian well is a boring or artificial opening in the earth through which water flows to the surface. As water cannot rise above the source from which it flows there must be a head of water for it to flow from, just as if we put an elastic tube into the side of a pail filled with water, as long as we keep the end of the tube above the level of the water no water will flow through it, but if the end of the tube is dropped below the level of the water then the contents of the pail will flow out through it.

Everywhere in the valley of the Illinois artesian wells have been successful at a depth of from 230 to 450 feet. At Utica the well of John Clark is 232 feet deep; that of James Clark 258 feet deep. At Ottawa the court house square well is 400 feet deep. In and about Ottawa are a large number of these wells, the water from which rises about 25 feet above the surface. James Clark's well was tried to a height of 42 feet, and flowed strongly at that elevation. This well flows about 200 gallons per minute. At the County Farm is a fine well; also at Marseilles. The Marseilles wells are about 250 feet deep. The most remarkable well in the county is that of J. E. Peddicord, about three miles north of Marseilles. It is 2180 feet deep, tubed to a depth of 1799 feet, and flows about 36 barrels per hour. It stands 128 feet above Lake Michigan, and consequently the water supplying it must be at least 135 feet above the lake, and cannot be derived from it in accordance with any law with which we are acquainted. Water bearing strata were pierced at several points. In the wells of Utica water bearing strata, water rising to the surface, was struck at about 30 feet, 70 feet, and 200 feet. The source of the water everywhere in the Illinois valley is believed to be the Potsdam sandstone, which lies below the calciferous, and nowhere comes to the surface in the State. On the prairie deep borings only can be expected to be successful, but occasionally shallow wells may pierce strata furnishing a supply that will flow to the surface. Dr. S. S. Pennington, of Jordan, Whiteside county, informs us that about three miles north of his place there is a flowing well only 140 feet deep, while he has himself bored 2,200 feet, and the water stands 30 feet below the surface. At Sterling, four miles southeast of Dr. Pennington's, Harvey's well, 1655 feet deep, flows a strong stream. The theory that water bearing strata are spread over an extensive region at a certain depth cannot be sustained. Before we can form a satisfactory theory we must have more facts. At Mendota 2,160 feet has failed to obtain water. At St. Louis, Mo., is a well 2,200 feet deep, which flows; on the St. Louis county asylum grounds is a well 3,843½ feet deep, in which the water does not rise to the surface; at Morrison, Ill., 1,200 feet failed to bring water to the surface. Difference of level will not account for the difference of these results. We incline to the opinion that the water bearing strata are distributed in belts of irregular width, but preserving a nearly uniform slope, except where disturbed by upheavals. The whole subject is one that merits careful consideration.

It is said that the flow of these wells is not regular but somewhat intermittent. We are also told that the same phenomena are observed in the water of wells rising from the St. Peter's sandstone, and it is claimed that their level is affected by certain winds. An article by Hon. J. D. Caton, in this volume, (see page 255), gives the facts concerning artesian wells. Concerning the wells we have had no opportunity to investigate, and can only say that we have the statement on good authority.

The water of the artesian wells is generally excellent, but some of them are slightly chalybeate or irony, and a few contain some sulphurated hydrogen gas and are hence called sulphur wells. There are some wells in the county which discharge large quantities of inflammable gas—a carburetted hydrogen. One of these in Allen township, not far from Ransom Station, on the Chicago, Pekin & South Western Rail-Road, has been utilized for lighting and heating a dwelling. The gas is furnished in ample quantity and of good quality.

Phenomena. The Utica Anticlinal, at the tunnel, in the eastern part of La Salle township, the strata do not lie horizontally, but are highly inclined, dipping south-west 40 degrees. On a line running south 40 degrees east, the strata dip both ways—on one side to the west, on the other to the east. This line passes near Homer, about one and one-half miles west of Utica Station, and just west of the mill at Lowell. It may be traced farther north and well down into Livingston county. It seems to have determined the course of the Big Vermillion, a part of the Little Vermillion, and to some extent of the Illinois River itself. It occurred before the deposition of the coal measures, because they lie unconformably on the inclined strata of the St. Peter's and Trenton groups. Nor was the disturbance confined to a single fold, slighter ones occur on each side of the main axis, forming a series of anticlinals and synclinals on either side of it, the most important to the west. That this folding was not the result of an instantaneous application of force, is clear, from the fact that the strata are generally not broken, but bent, as if the work was done gradually. The lower members of the coal series seem to have been deposited while it was yet in progress, but after the main part of the folding had been done. The subject cannot be well illustrated without drawings.

At Lowell, the Trenton is so thrown up and so flexed, that unable to bear the tension, it has cracked, forming a large fissure. Here we have a proof that strata may be formed lying at a high angle, for the broken edge of the Trenton is here covered by an arenaceous limestone about a foot thick, lying at an angle of 75 degrees, and evidently undisturbed. It occurs at several points in the Vermillion valley, and we think on Covell creek, but not at Homer.

St. Peter's sandstone. On the north bluff, opposite Buffalo Rock, where the road descends from the bluff to the bottom, the St. Peter's has the appearance of being veined with dark yellow, irregular veins of something harder than the rock itself. These veins are from two to five inches thick and project from 2 inches to 6 inches above the surface. They have a general north-west, south-east, north-east, south-west course, there being two sets of them, the two covering the face of the rock with a coarse net work. They have the appearance of being stratified perpendicularly or of standing on end. We consider them to be the filling of crack caused by exposure of the rock when soft to the sun, and a proof that it was deposited in shallow water. A similar structure is seen in a green shale on Covell Creek, and a somewhat similar one in shaley on Brewery Hill, about nine and a half miles north-west of Ottawa. In this case, however, the veins are bands of hard blue limestone, externally coated with a yellow ochre and form continuous chains extending as far as the surface of the shale can be seen.

An anomalous rock, a fragmental limestone, covering a small area, occurs about three miles northwest of Ottawa, on the prairie, about thirty rods north of the bluff road to La Salle, on the bank of the first ravine crossed after leaving Brewery Hill, fifty rods west of the crossing. It is made up of a great variety of pieces somewhat worn, but generally not rounded, and forms a bed of hard rock, from eight inches to eighteen inches thick. A few rods in the ravine is a singular bed of blue shaley clay, veined with red ochre clay. In these clays are imbedded many hard, blue limestone nodular masses, from four inches to sixteen inches in diameter.

An anomalous bed of clay iron stone exists in the east part of Ottawa township, near the bluff, which can be traced a half mile. The form of the concretions and the size of some of the masses render it worthy of notice.

In the east part of Utica township, on the land of C. W. Esmond, on ridge 50 or 60 rods south of his residence, we saw a bed of limestone gravel very remarkable in its character. The pebbles are generally oblong, very rough, looking as if worm eaten. There was when we saw it neither sand nor earth mixed with it. We also saw a similar gravel deposit between Ottawa and Marseilles, in the ditch on the north side of the railroad. One of the springs at Buell's, and the Debolt spring, are of the variety known as white sulphur.

Such is a general sketch of the geology of La Salle county, Illinois. It reveals vast resources; treasures more valuable than California's auriferous quartz, or Nevada's silver bearing rocks, and speaks volumes for her future greatness. No county in the State surpasses La Salle in mineral wealth; none exhibits greater or more remarkable geological phenomena. To fully present the matter would require twice the space taken up by this article, and many illustrations, and special maps, and much more time than has been allotted to us in the preparation of this monograph. In no part of our State is nature's story album more fully opened for our perusal; nowhere has the Eternal more clearly revealed His power, wisdom and goodness.

IRREGULARITY OF THE FLOW OF ARTESIAN WELLS. ;

So far as I am advised, the subject of the regularity and continuity of the flow of artesian wells has scarcely received the attention which its importance deserves. The geologist has been interested and instructed by a study of the strata pierced by them. The chemist has analyzed their waters, and has been interested to observe the changes which take place as different strata are passed through, and as found in different though contiguous locations; but at last the great practical question is, water—quantity—its constant and permanent supply, as well as quality, for till this is assured investments cannot safely be made depending upon it.

At Ottawa during the last summer I sunk an artesian well in the valley of the Illinois River, at the foot of the bluff on which my residence stands, first through twelve feet of earth, then about one hundred and forty feet of St. Peter's sandstone, then six feet of shale, then one hundred and twenty feet of lime rock, and then about ninety-five feet of Potsdam sandstone—in all three hundred and seventy-three feet. During the passage through the lime rock the water commenced flowing over the surface, and every day the quantity was observed to increase, and when finished, by a very rude and unsatisfactory mode of measuring, the flow was found to be 64 gallons per minute, and when the head was raised 15 inches higher, the flow was 55 gallons per minute. The well is tubed for 153 feet with four-inch iron pipe. After various unsatisfactory experiments with small hydraulic rams, I finally turned the water into a tank, six feet in diameter, and holding 600 gallons; from this through a four-inch discharge or drive pipe the water is conducted to a hydraulic ram of the largest size, located ten feet below the upper end of the drive pipe, and over fifty feet distant. The center of the drive pipe is eleven inches above the floor of the tank. I soon observed that sometimes the water would only rise to the center of the drive pipe, and at other times it would be three feet or more above it. At first I attributed this to the ram, supposing that it sometimes discharged the water more freely than at others; but upon observing that it always beat more rapidly with the high head than with the low, I became satisfied that there was actually an irregularity in the flow of the well—that it discharged more water at some times than at others.

In order to make a commencement, in the investigation suggested by the phenomenon already observed, I directed my gardener to measure the height of the water in the tank three times a day, note the measurements, and report to me at the end of the month. Here is the result of his observations made in the month of October. The measurements were of the depth of the water in inches.

Here you will observe that the maximum height of the water was 34 inches, which occurred on the morning of the 8th, and the minimum was 11 inches, when the upper end of the drive pipe was but half filled, which occurred at noon of the 31st. The next highest was at noon on the 25th, when it was 33 inches, and the next lowest was 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches, which occurred on the morning of the 30th. Adding slight fractions to each for even figures, the average of the morning measurements is 17, noon 20, and evening 18 inches; and yet the highest water observed was in the morning, when we have the lowest average, and the lowest water at noon when we have the highest average.

While these figures, I think, satisfactorily show that the flow of this well is not uniform—that it discharges more water to a given height at one time than at another—I look in vain for facts to establish a periodicity in the flow. While the conditions under which these observations were made do not enable us to say what is the exact difference in the amount of water discharged at different times, because we do not know how much water the ram is capable of passing in a given time, or possibly that it may pass more water at some times than at others under the same head, it is hardly possible that it passes more water when the water but half fills the mouth of the drive pipe than when it is three feet above it. The changes which take place in the subterranean pressure are not only very considerable, but take place very rapidly, as will be noticed by the observations made on the morning of the 15th. On that morning, and on that alone, two observations were made. At 7 o'clock the water was found to be 15 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches in the tank, and two hours later it was found to be 28 inches. What may have occurred in the meantime we do not know. It may have been the two hours raising the twelve and a quarter inches, or it may have been higher or lower than either figure, or both, in the meantime. Enough is shown at least to stimulate the desire for more accurate observations, and more elements for accurate calculations. With a view to this, I directed that the number of pulsations made by the ram should be counted and noted at the times of the observations to be made in November. Here is the result:

This last observation was made by myself, when I happened accidentally at the well.

Here we have an average of about 22 for the morning, 23½ for noon, and 17½ for evening. Still we have the highest average for the noon observations, while the lowest is for the evening instead of the morning, as was the case in October. But this excess for noon is more than made up by the observation made by myself on the 5th day of December, so that if we confine ourselves to the November observations we find the morning the highest, whereas it was the lowest in October. When all the observations are carefully considered and compared, they seem to indicate an absolute want of periodicity. In the October observations we find the highest water—33 inches—occurred at noon, while on the morning of November the 8th we find 44 inches, 11 inches more than was observed in October; yet it is by no means improbable that even higher water than this occurred many times during both months.

We observe in the report for noon of the 5th of November but eleven inches of water—the same as the report for noon of the 31st of October. We must remember, however, that at this stage of water that but one-half of the mouth of the discharge pipe is submerged, so that we could hardly expect it to come much lower than that, even at a very great diminution of supply. Had the discharge pipe been inserted at the bottom of the tank, we might at times have observed a much lower stage of water in the tank.

As the hydraulic ram is one of the instruments used in determining the relative flow of the water at different times, it is proper to observe its operation under different circumstances. By referring to the last report we see that the strokes it gave varied from 47 with 11 inches to 59 with 44 inches. At 13½ inches it gave 48 strokes, and the same at 19 inches, and all the intermediate heights. With 20 inches it gave 50 pulsations, and the same at 26, and all the intermediate heights, except on the evening of the 5th, when with 20½ inches it gave but 49 strokes, and at noon of the 11th with 24½ inches it gave 51 strokes. We may suspect these to have been errors in the count, for on two other occasions with 20 and 20½ inches we have reported 50 strokes. With 29½ inches we have 51 strokes, and the same with 30 and 31½ inches. With 35½ inches we find 52 strokes, and the same with 37 inches, nearly a month later; and with 44 inches we have 59 pulsations. None of these countings can be relied upon as absolutely accurate, for they were made with an ordinary second-hand watch, and hence slight errors at least were inevitable; but they lead to the general conclusion that the greater the head of water the faster the ram works, and although the overflow is shorter, with the rapid action of the ram, yet it must be more rapid in proportion to the greater momentum of the descending column of water, and the greater impact when that column is arrested in its descent, as it must be at each pulsation. We may not be far wrong, then, if we assume that at least as much water is passed at each pulsation when the ram is working rapidly under a heavy pressure, as when working slowly in low water.

We have, then, for 11 inches of water in the tank, 47 strokes of the ram, and for 44 inches we have 59 strokes. Assuming that each pulsation passes the same quantity of water, then $25\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. more water is passed with the latter than with the former head, and this is the difference in the flow of the well at the different times. But this does not determine the subterranean pressure by which this water is supposed to be forced to the surface. Experiment showed that an increase of the head of 15 inches decreased the flow from 64 gallons to 55 gallons, or say 14 per cent. Now if we assume that a still greater increase of the head decreases the flow in the same ratio, then an increase of 33 inches would decrease the flow by more than 30 per cent., which was the condition when the water in the tank was found to be 44 inches. Add this to the percentage of the increased flow at the same time, and we have an increased subterranean pressure above the lowest observed point sufficient to increase the flow at the surface 55 per cent. This, of course, should be considered but the rudest approximation, and careful and accurate experiments may show it to be wide of the truth. Such experiments may be cheaply and easily made, and I purpose to make them so soon as the weather in the spring shall permit me to do so. By attaching a vertical pipe to the tubing of the well, of a height sufficient to arrest the flow altogether, and into the top of this pipe introduce a float with a light graduated rod, projecting above the pipe sufficiently to allow the rise and fall to be accurately read, and at the same time apply a pressure gauge to the pipe near the surface of the ground, and it seems to me I shall have two modes of determining accurately the subterranean pressure and its variations. Constant observation of these, day and night, would no doubt be necessary for a considerable time to give satisfactory results, but unless there be some law governing this subterranean pressure which is supposed to force up the water, of which we now have no conception, by which that variability would be destroyed or modified when the flow is forcibly stopped, I think we may thus obtain results at least reasonably satisfactory. For the present I will not claim to have even approximated the truth in my estimate of the proportional quantity of water discharged at the different times observed, because of the imperfect means used; I think, however, that I may safely say that I have shown that there is an inequality in the flow of this well, and that the changes are irregular and sometimes rapid. If this be so, it should excite our interest and stimulate to further inquiry.

That there may be some occult laws affecting the flow of subterranean water we may not be prepared to deny. Indeed, the common law has always assumed that such is the case, for it absolutely refuses to take cognizance of such flow unless a clear and distinct channel can be traced through which the water flows. My neighbor may dig a drain on his own land close to my spring of water which immediately ceases to flow, and yet for this I have no remedy unless I can show that he intercepted an actual channel where it could be seen that the water flowed to my spring. If the water percolated through the soil or sand, the law refuses to recognize the fact that he has taken away my water, no matter how strong the circumstantial evidence may be that he has done so; and the reason assigned for this rule is that we do not know by what natural laws the flow of subterranean water may be governed. It is damnum absque injuria.

It is even possible that we may yet discover facts which may have been known to our ancestors, but since forgotten, which may lead to the conclusion that the flow of subterranean water is subject to some mysterious influence, to explain which the philosopher may find himself embarrassed. Indeed, if the observations which I have given you, do, as I think they do, lead to the conclusion that the quantity of water discharged from this well, from a depth of 373 feet, is very considerably larger at one time than at another, and that these times are separated by very short and irregular intervals, we have already discovered facts not easy to explain; at least I am not prepared to suggest even a theory for their explanation. There was no rapid increase of the flow during the sinking of this well, as if an open channel of water had been struck leading from some great fountain at a higher elevation, but the increase was gradual, as the work progressed foot by foot, indicating that the supply is only by percolation through the porous rock. If this be so, then no matter how great or how rapid the changes of pressure may be on a distant fountain, the flow would equalize itself in passing through the pores of the rock, even for a short distance. No appreciable quantity of gas has ever been observed to escape from this well, which might suggest a cause for this variable pressure. The water is remarkably pure and soft, neither in appearance or taste being distinguishable from filtered rain water, and it is used in my laundry exclusively, while there is an abundance of rain water in the cistern beneath the floor. Although it is softer than the water of Lake Michigan, it still contains an appreciable amount of lime and a slight trace of iron.

Within one and a half miles of this well twelve other wells have been sunk, all passing through the same geological formation, and several of them a considerable distance into a thick stratum of lime rock underlying the Potsdam sandstone near the bottom of which I stopped sinking. With the exception of two others, none of these discharge water fit for domestic uses. Their impurities are principally iron and sulphur, in varying degrees in different wells. As a general rule, those furthest south have the most impurities. There are two springs within the city discharging considerable quantities of mineral water similar to that of the wells in the same region, and may be presumed to come from the same source.

Whoever shall seek to explain these phenomena, must not start with the supposition that the ordinary laws which govern matter are ever suspended, but must look for a cause in harmony with these laws. The true cause will be found in the relative conditions of matter, perhaps not hitherto fully appreciated.

My object in laying before you this paper is to stimulate inquiry, and induce others who have the means to observe whether other flowing wells are subject to similar irregularities, and if so we may soon accumulate an abundance of well authenticated facts, much more precise in their character than these I now lay before you, in which the philosopher may well become interested.

But then the inquiry possesses a practical as well as a scientific value, in which the economist as well as the scientist will feel an interest. Indeed, it is the great mission of science to point the way to the practical economist, which shall lead to results beneficial to the great public. The diffusion of useful knowledge among men, which all may appropriate for the good of all, is the ambition of all who are animated by the true spirit of science, and under its influence they rarely think of the pecuniary influence upon themselves as individuals, but contemplate with supreme satisfaction the influence their labors may have upon the general welfare.

If our great arid plains in the West are to be irrigated and become verdant fields, perhaps the most hopeful means to be suggested is artesian wells. They present a subject for careful and systematic study, comparatively new. If pursued with the same exhaustive energy and intelligence which is observed in the pursuit of knowledge on other subjects of scarcely more importance, something useful will certainly be added to what we now know. If what I have now said will tend in any degree to awaken interest in the study of artesian wells, which shall tell us more certainly what reliance can be placed upon them, my present purpose will have been accomplished.

OLD SETTLERS' ASSOCIATION.

Some years since there was an Old Settlers' Society established in the city of Ottawa, but for some cause it went down. It seemed to be desirable to a large number of people who had participated in the hearty friendship of earlier years to meet again and renew those old associations. Prominent among the originators of this movement were A. M. Ebersol and John S. Armstrong. A call was published in the Ottawa city papers for a meeting of the old settlers, and on the 29th day of May, 1869, about twenty-five persons assembled at the Court House in Ottawa at 3 p. m., and were called to order by the election of Josiah E. Shaw, Chairman, and A. M. Ebersol, Secretary and Treasurer.

After fraternal greetings had been exchanged it was decided to take steps to make the society a permanent organization. Several gentlemen present, among others Wm. Hickling and J. H. Fredenburg, had sought diligently for the records of the old society, but without avail. After some discussion it was resolved that thirty years' residence in the county should make a person eligible for membership in the society, and all the gentlemen present signed the roll, paying into the treasury 50 cents as a fee for membership.

A picnic was proposed, to take place some time during the coming summer or fall, and a committee, consisting of Messrs. J. Green, S. R. Lewis, D. F. Hitt, Wm. Hickling, J. T. Mitchell, and Wm. Palmer to select a place and arrange for speakers and refreshments. This idea was conceived by the Secretary, who assisted very materially in the maturation of the plan. The following is the list of those who first signed the roll, together with the date of their settlement and the State from which they emigrated. J. E. Shaw, 1827, New York; A. M. Ebersol, 1834, Pennsylvania; J. G. Mitchell, 1814, New York; D. Pembroke, 1825, New York; J. Pembroke, 1825, New York; J. Green, 1829, Ohio; W. N. Dunnavan, 1830, Ohio; G. H. Rugg, 1838, Massachusetts; J. W. Ball, 1835, New York; Wm. Hickling, 1834, England; C. H. Green, 1833, New Hampshire; C. Olmstead, 1835, New York; Wm. Palmer, 1836, —; D. F. Hitt, 1830, Kentucky; D. Beers, 1834, England; J. Huston, 1836, Pennsylvania; F. C. Eichellburger, 1837, Pennsylvania; D. S. Ebersol, 1834, Pennsylvania.

GRAND RAPIDS TOWNSHIP

The first picnic was held in Judge J. D. Caton's park, the speakers being Judge John C. Champlain and Judge Alfred Caverly, with music by the band, and a grand dinner, after which short speeches were in order and responded to by J. H. Fredenburg and Lucian B. Delauo.

Annually, during August or September, a picnic has been held at various places about Ottawa, which has been largely attended by the old settlers and their friends. Relics of early days, spinning-wheels, ox-yokes, mortars, and other implements used by them are exhibited, speeches are made, interspersed with music, and a general good time with a picnic dinner is the usual programme of the day. These gatherings are anticipated with a great deal of pleasure by the members, and much that is important in the early history of the county has been gathered from them.

The following is a list of the old settlers as taken from their records in the possession of the Secretary, A. M. Ebersol:

THE COMMON SCHOOLS.

The first district for Common School purposes in La Salle County was set off in the year 1835, by the County Commissioners, and designated Number One. From that date forward as the population demanded, other districts were defined and provision made for the erection of School Buildings in each. At first these buildings were generally of logs with a stick fire-place and chimney for means of warmth in the winter, and greased paper or cracks in the logs provided light. Before the Common Schools were established, a few Private Schools were maintained, the first of which were Missions among the resident Indians. A review of the present condition of the Common Schools in the County will be interesting, and will fully illustrate their growth and prosperity. It is subjoined from the report of the County Superintendent, Mr. R. Williams, and is for the year ending September, 1876.

THE COUNTY INFIRMARY.

The first public attempt to provide for the poor of the county was made in 1838, when Joseph Cloud was appointed by the County Commissioners, agent to purchase or rent land on which to secure a home for the indigent. In June of that year Asher Lane was hired to board the poor, and in September, 1839, a poorhouse was established, and Mr. Lane continued as overseer or keeper of the poor. This arrangement was continued until 1850, when the farm which had been purchased in 1839, was sold, and the proceeds applied to board the poor by those considered proper to take care of them. This arrangement did not prove satisfactory, and in October, 1851, Wells Wait, Giles W. Jackson, and Sylvanus Cook were appointed a committee to have charge of the county poor, and were authorized to provide for their keeping. They hired the old Buchanan house in South Ottawa, and kept the poor there until September, 1853, when they purchased eighty acres of Mr. J. O. Glover for $800, and erected thereon the necessary buildings. Here the county poor were kept until the completion of the present infirmary. The present county farm comprises one hundred and ten acres of excellent land. It was purchased in November, 1874, and contains one hundred and ten acres of excellent land. The present infirmary, one of the best in the State, cost, including its heating apparatus and gas fixtures, $51,275. The farm cost $6,600. The superintendent is Mr. G. W. Jackson; the warden, Mr. B. B. Arnold.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

On December 2, 1852, a meeting of various citizens interested in agriculture and horticulture, met at Ottawa to consider the feasibility of organizing a county society. At a subsequent meeting a committee appointed to devise a plan of action, reported their action, and a constitution and by-laws were adopted. At this meeting the first board of officers, consisting of the following gentlemen, were elected: John H. Hosford, president; Matson V. Cox, first vice-president; Wells Wait, second vice-president; S. W. Raymond, recording secretary; Maurice Murphy, corresponding secretary, and George H. Norris, treasurer.

At the first meeting held by these officers, a resolution was adopted asking the Legislature to pass an act creating a State Agricultural College, and to provide for the advancement of this industry throughout the State. The first fair was held during the last week of September, 1853, continuing in session but one or two days. It was held in the city of Ottawa, and we believe in the court house and court house yard. At this fair no premium higher than three dollars was offered. After a year or two, the society was reorganized on a better basis, and a perpetual lease obtained from J. V. A. Hoes and M. H. Swift for ten acres of ground, where the present residence of M. H. Swift and others in that locality is situated. Before holding the fair here, however, it was conducted a year or two in Shabbona square. The exhibitions were held on the grounds donated by Messrs. Hoes and Swift until 1860, when the society purchased the present fair grounds of Mr. George H. Norris, and erecting the necessary buildings, and making needed improvements thereon, have conducted annually one of the best fairs in Illinois. The State fair has been held here three seasons,—in 1872-'75 and '76. The list of premiums for 1877 is unusually large, and promises an exceedingly interesting and profitable exhibition.

OTTAWA.

The city of Ottawa is located on a broad plateau of sandstone, on the Illinois River at its confluence with the Fox. These rivers, whose banks are abrupt ledges of sandstone from twenty to one hundred feet high, divide the city into three portions. South Ottawa, which was first laid out, is south of the Illinois, on the bluff; North Ottawa, the principal business center, is north of the Illinois and west of the Fox; and East Ottawa, or the residence portion, is east of the latter river. The site of the city is remarkably well adapted for a business center. The two rivers whose waters join in the journey to the Gulf of Mexico at this point, have been the highway for centuries. It was at this place in an early day that Northern industry met Southern luxuriance and fire, and the coalition thus established has made as fair a land as the sun shines upon.

Within the memories of many of the early settlers now living the principal means of communication with the outside world was the rivers spoken of. Parties of exploration or trade embarked their pirogues and dug-outs on their bosoms, and in truth it may be said, that had it not been for them this goodly land would not have been so well and favorably known at an early day.

With the present added facilities of canal and railroad, Ottawa must inevitably become important as a manufacturing and commercial center, and should the anticipated ship canal go through as surveyed by Gen. J. H. Wilson in 1867, Ottawa will become an unrivalled inland town for shipping, having as it does tributary to it a large scope of rich, arable land.

The first permanent settler of Ottawa was Dr. David Walker, who established himself here in the fall of 1826. The Pembrokes and a few others were settled about a mile below him, where they made claims one or two years before him, but not within the corporate limits of the first town. His house was the departing place for travelers, as well as a trading house for the Indians, a number of whom made this head-quarters during the summer. Mr. Walker encouraged trade with the Indians, and his son, Geo. W., first sheriff of the county, continued it, and in after years, when associated with Wm. Hickling, the firm of Walker & Hickling was extensively known throughout the west, and southwest, making large purchases of sugar and molasses on the southern plantations, and bringing them up the river to Ottawa by steamboat.

The State authorities thinking the site an eligible one for a town, along the proposed line of the Illinois and Michigan canal, surveyed and platted the town, by James Thompson, surveyor, and it was recorded at the county seat of Peoria county, on the 5th day of December, 1830. This plat included a strip of land on the north side of the river, the north line of which was the south line of the present court house square.

When the county was organized, January 15th, 1831, Ottawa became the seat of justice. There was no court house, and the first court was held in a double log house, one side being occupied by the court, while the other was used by Mr. Walker's family to prepare dinner for the judge of the circuit, Richard M. Young; the clerk, Lenhard A. Shrader; the prosecuting attorney, Strode, (Thos. Ford held this position, but was absent at the time,) and other transient attorneys, while the juries were obliged to provide their own entertainment. At this time it may be mentioned the only buildings in town were the house occupied by the court, and a plank trading house, owned and occupied by Geo. E. Walker, the sheriff, both of which stood on the bluff south of the river. Mr. Alex K. Owens was foreman of the first grand jury. He was passing through the county, and stopped over night at Christopher Long's, who then lived on Covell Creek. In the morning the sheriff rode up to the house, and urged him to stay and act as juror. Mr. Owens objected, being a stranger. The sheriff still urged him, saying that the county commissioners were not eligible, and he had summoned every man in the county, and yet lacked one of filling the two panels. Furthermore, unless he complied with the request they would be deprived of the honor of a circuit court in the county for that year. Induced by these considerations, Mr. Owens consented to stay, and mounting his horse rode into Ottawa with the sheriff, and was appointed foreman.

The jurors held their deliberations in the shade of two large sugar trees, which stood down on the river bank but about two rods apart. At the call for dinner a hat was passed for funds, which were sent up to Geo. Walker's store. All that could be obtained to satisfy their inner man was crackers. Moses Booth, the constable, borrowed a tin cup, and passed the water, each one taking a drink as occasion required. David Walker had a large drove of hogs which annoyed the jurors exceedingly while eating, and inasmuch as they were not legally summoned, the constable was called upon for legal protection against them. While he was driving them away from one jury the other would be attacked, and they would also call loudly for legal protection. What, with passing the water to moisten the dry meal, and protecting the juries from the self constituted hoards of marauding swine, the officer of the law was exceedingly glad when the dinner hour closed.

The court took action on the clerk's bond of $2,000, and received the two juries, grand and petit, the former of whom had only one case.

A man by the name of Dougherty, of Dougherty's Grove, since Holderman had a daughter who had made a marriage contract with a man, and the lady had waited so long that she was tired, and sought to recover damages for her blighted affections. After listening to the evidence, a vote was taken by the jury, and no bill found. In making out the report to the judge it was discovered that only four of the jurymen could write, consequently the foreman was delegated to write the names for all. If the one whose name he was writing looked intelligent he wrote a good hand, if otherwise, the lines were scrawled along and the spelling bad. The report when handed to the judge was complimented by him, who congratulated them on living in such an orderly and law abiding community.

At the September term of the court the grand jury found bills against Charles Jack, Geo. W. McFadden, Simon Crosair, Geo. W. and Wilbur F. Walker, and James B. Campbell, for selling liquor without license. At a subsequent term they were discharged, having taken out license in the meantime.

After the Black Hawk War the population had increased, Henry Hicks, a dispenser of whisky, blankets, and baubles to the natives, and one or two other white men becoming citizens, besides the thirty or forty Indians. The buildings were the fort, jail, court house, two unenclosed frames, the dwelling of David Walker, and the trading house of Henry Hicks.

present court house square. The latter and the present park, as well as the blocks where the opera house and new postoffice are, were a part of the grant, but the last were sold in 1839 or 1840 to assist in the building of the court house.

In 1835, the only houses in North Ottawa, were the tavern of David Walker, and the store of Robert P. and James H. Woodworth, the latter of which made some pretensions for the times. Major D. F. Hitt started a stage from Ottawa, Woodworth's store being headquarters, to Boyd's Grove, by way of Hennepin, joining the two stage lines that ran one from Chicago to Springfield, crossing the Illinois at the ferry at Ottawa, and the other from Galena to Springfield, with which he connected at Boyd's Grove. For this purpose Major Hitt completed a ferry at Utica.

About 1838 or '39, Ottawa became an incorporated village, having taken some bold strides in the forward march of improvement. The names of the first trustees cannot be definitely ascertained, as the records were burned in a fire while temporarily in the office of Julius Avery, Esq.

The contract for building the present Court House was let July 12th, 1838, to Wm. F. Flagg, for $20,000, but when completed in 1840, it cost $40,000.

In February, 1839, a public library association was formed, with a list of seven trustees, as follows: Geo. B. Macy, Chester B. Hall, Lorenzo Leland, Joseph Hall, Madison E. Hollister, Michael Ryan and Jesse J. Epperson. This is the first recorded library association in the county.

An association was formed in the year 1851, to develop the immense waterpower at Ottawa, with a limited capital of $50,000. A company called the Ottawa Manufacturing Company, was incorporated, to build a dam across the Fox river, but from want of energy and capital, failed of their purposes. In 1857, another organization of the same name, whose capital was $100,000, was chartered, the design being to erect a dam across the Illinois river, above the mouth of the Fox. The terms of the charter granted two years for the completion of the work, but this association did not prove successful, the charter expiring by limitation.

In 1865, the subject was again agitated, and another company was commissioned by the state, to build a dam across the Fox river, between the aqueduct and the Illinois river. This, also, did not succeed, but in 1867, the legislature constituted Wm. Reddick, M. H. Swift, Jeremiah Wood, George Avery and Richard Thorn, a board of Commissioners, in behalf of the city of Ottawa, to subscribe to the capital stock of the Ottawa Manufacturing Company, the sum of $100,000, and issue bonds to that amount, due in ten years. By a popular vote this action was indorsed, but the matter rested in this condition until the spring of 1869, when a large and enthusiastic meeting of the people was held, which compelled action. A dam was put across the Fox river just below the aqueduct, sufficiently high to raise the water to the level of the proposed dam in the Illinois, to which a connecting canal was to be dug and a dam built.

In the spring of 1876, the Fox river dam went out, leaving the paper mill that had been erected at its side, without power. A coffer dam was put in, which also went out. Some years before the other dam also went out. The paper mill was moved to Dayton.

Perhaps some estimates in regard to this water power, made when the rivers are at their lowest stages, would not be devoid of interest. In the four miles between Dayton and Ottawa, on the Fox river, there is a fall of thirty-four feet, with a volume of 40,000 cubic feet of water per minute.

Between Marseilles and this city, a distance of eight miles, there is a fall in the Illinois river of eighteen feet, with a volume of more than 40,000 cubic feet per minute, sufficient for any of the larger enterprises in the country.

During this session of the legislature of 1852 and 3, a charter was obtained for the city of Ottawa, approved by the Governor, February 10th, 1853. An election of city officers was held on the succeeding 3d of May, when the following officers were elected. Wm. Hickling had a majority of six over Arthur Lockwood, for Mayor :

Aldermen of 1st ward—John Lynch and Oranzo Leavens ; Aldermen of 2d ward—S. B. Gridley and Marshall Miller ; Aldermen of 3d ward—Hopley Drew and John Armour ; Aldermen of 4th ward—John B. Champlains and Patrick Fanning ; Aldermen of 5th ward—Chester B. Hall and Wm. Haskell.

On the evening of election, the City Council met for the first time and appointed Thos. R. Courtney, Clerk.

In 1854, the Illinois Telegraph Company was organized, the article of incorporation, bearing date December 27th, a prominent member of which was Hon. J. Dean Caton, ex-State Supreme Judge, who has been widely known in telegraph circles, and at one time president of the Mississippi Telegraph Company, and one of the directors of the Western Union. A telegraph instrument manufactory was put in operation by Judge Caton, at Ottawa, which employed at one time over thirty operatives, all the different styles of registers, sounders, relays, keys, switches, in fact, all the office implements used in telegraphing for the supply depots at New York, Cleveland and Chicago, used by the great companies. The amount of business transacted may be appreciated when we state that the factory turned out annually, 600 relays, 600 sounders and keys, and 100 registers. This factory has since fallen into disuse.

During the winter of 1854 and '55, a special law was passed, authorizing the city of Ottawa to elect a Board of Education—one member from each ward, to organize and regulate the public schools of the city. A special vote of the people, in the spring of 1855, empowered the board to levy a tax of one per cent. on the whole value of the property within the city, for the purpose of building school houses, and defraying the other necessary expenses of the schools. Many plans were advanced in regard to the how and where the several buildings should be placed in the different wards, but the one that finally prevailed was the erection of two large three story buildings, one in the third, the other in the fifth ward, that season, (1855,) and as soon thereafter as practicable, to put up three others, to be located, one north of the canal feeder, one east of Fox River, and one in South Ottawa, and then when the scholars were sufficiently advanced to require it, the High School. Accordingly the board erected the two buildings and furnished them, at a cost of $25,000, only two stories being completed however, on account of the imputed extravagance of the board, by the people. It was said that there were not scholars enough in the city to fill the four rooms in each building, but energetic teachers having been selected by the board, and specifying among other printed regulations, that the same grade should use the same text books, and that scholars must attend punctually or lose their seats in one month, more rooms were needed, and the board completed the unfinished stories of the school building, which were immediately filled with waiting children, many of whom could not be accommodated, and temporary side schools were opened, five of which sprang into existence, two or three of them in 1859, having two departments.

The schools were organized upon the Graded Free School System, that affords education to every child, rich or poor. When they began in 1855, the whole number of scholars attending school in the city, was 125, but in 1857, 1,469 pupils were instructed, at a cost, per capita, of $5.76-1000 per annum. In 1870, there were in attendance at the schools of the city, 1,200 regular pupils, and about 1,500 on the rolls, with 28 teachers who received salaries, ranging from $30 to $100 per month.

In August, 1855, the Gas-Light and Coke Company began operations and have been the light of the city ever since.

The abundance of starch-producing material in the county called attention to the fact that that needed article could be made as cheaply here as at any other point in the United States. Agreeable to this idea a company was incorporated on the 21st day of January, 1856, who began the erection of the large building known as the Starch Factory, completing it in about two years, and it has been much enlarged since its first erection. It has over three acres of floors and employs 120 men and boys, making daily 1,000 pounds of starch, and annually using 250,000 bushels of corn.

About two years after the organization of the Starch Factory, Judge Caton conceived the idea of a system of water supply for the growing city. South of the river on the bluff, the sandstone which underlies all this region, is covered with a thick layer of gravel, which is underneath the soil, and furnishes abundance of pure water. Tapping this bed at several places, a supply was obtained which was carried across the river and distributed in the city. Aside from this, there are about thirty artesian wells in and about the city, which furnish abundantly good wholesome water. The first one of these was bored by a number of gentlemen who were seeking oil.

The glass factory was established in 1868, J. Dean Caton, president, and S. B. Gridly, secretary. The company turned out the first year, $1,800,000 worth of glass. Since 1870 another furnace has been added, and the first one rebuilt after its destruction by fire. The sand of which the glass is made is obtained near by, the plateau of sandstone on which the city rests being composed of it. Practically, the supply is inexhaustable.

Politically, the county was Democratic before 1860, after that Republican until 1870, and varying since then to the domination of both parties. The city of Ottawa has almost always been Democratic. The present county officers are, with the exception of the Treasurer, Republican: Circuit Judge, Edward Leland; County Judge, Charles S. Miller; County Clerk, H. A. McCaleb; Circuit Clerk, R. W. Holmes; Recorder, C. W. Denhard; Treasurer, S. W. Raymond; Sheriff, R. C. Stevens; Surveyor, G. W. Brumbach.

The facilities for storing and forwarding grain at Ottawa are as good, if not better, than any of the inland towns of the State. With the C., R. I. & P., and the Fox River Valley R. R., and the canal, which takes the major part of the grain, the location for an inland market cannot be surpassed, the latter means of communication affording, through the great lakes and the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, connection easily with the great centers of trade of our country. The average shipments of grain from this place are about 2,500,000 bushels. Add to this the 350,000 bushels annually consumed by the starch factory, and we have a grand total of 2,850,000 bushels, which, in the more productive years, reaches the large amount of 3,000,000 bushels that finds its first market here. In 1866 the shipments reached 2,944,544 bushels, probably the largest shipments of grain ever made from this point in one year, which, with the starch factory's consumption, would give a total of 3,294,544 bushels, the aggregated canal tolls being in that year, for grain shipped from here, $64,846. Corn is the staple, the amount of wheat being very small, while that of oats averages only about 360,000 bushels annually. Emphatically, Ottawa is one of the best inland markets.

MANUFACTURING INTERESTS.

In a corn-growing region it is natural to suppose that the principal manufacturies would pertain to the preparing, gathering, and fitting for market the growing crop. Agricultural implement manufacturies prevail in the city; indeed, it has become a settled fact among farmers that the mechanical appliances they use must be made on the spot by competent mechanics who are conversant with their wants and the demands of the soil, climate, grain, etc., with which they have to deal. It was in this city that Brown's corn-planter was brought out, which has worked such a revolution in its department.

Prominent among the manufacturers of the city may be mentioned J. Maierhofer, whose establishment turns out breaking plows, single and double shovel plows, stubble plows, gopher plows, as well as four or five different kinds of cultivators. All the several parts of the implements are built in this shop, which ordinarily employs over thirty operatives. All the work has a deserving reputation.

Gilman, King & Hamilton are, probably, the most extensive manufacturers of agricultural implements the city. Their factory, erected in 1868, is between the canal and C., R. I. & P. R. R., near La Salle street. It is a two-story building, 140x40 feet, with an L 85x40, and furnishes employment for nearly one hundred men. They turn out reapers, corn-shellers and corn-planters, as well as the "Champion" walking corn-plow, that enjoys a favorable reputation, their principal implement being the "Gilman" corn-sheller.

The Wm. Stormont wind-mill is also made in Ottawa, besides a large number of other factories, planing-mills, etc., making sickles, files, sash, doors, blinds, table-cutlery, and general machine work, which are as deserving of mention as those already given, and just as important to the well-being of the city, but we desist before we weary the reader.

Some years since a side cut was opened from the canal into the city, and forming a basin and reservoir with a canal just south one block from the court house square, and running along the edge of the river bluff, which is here quite high. This furnishes a fine water-power, which is improved by the starch factory, cutlery, and various flouring mills, among which may be mentioned the Eagle Mills, J. Wood, proprietor. This mill turns out annually 15,000 barrels of flour, as well as grinding a large amount of other grain. The City Mill, established twenty-three years ago; the Cus-tom Mill, the most venerable of the kind in the city.

The furniture manufactory of G. A. Rugg should not escape attention. Mr. Rugg came to this county in 1838, from the land of steady habits, and has been engaged in the making of furniture nearly ever since.

He has been very unfortunate in losses by fires and uncollected claims at the South before the war, but his energy has triumphed over all.

The coffin manufactory of Patch, Watson & Co., which was recently burned, was doing a good business at the time.

Of the business houses of this city, we may mention, Forbes & Gehring, druggists, successors to Dr. Dimmick & Bro. They have a large and well-selected stock.

E. Y. Griggs, drugs and books. Mr. Griggs has been a resident of Ottawa many years, and enjoys the friendship of a large number of its citizens.

Messrs. Osman & Hapeman, news dealers and book sellers, and publishers of the Ottawa Free Trader, the first paper published in the city. Their book and stationary stock embraces everything desirable.

Messrs. Simon Bros., music dealers and publishers, embracing everything in their branch of trade.

Peter Russell & Son, furniture. Mr. Russell has been in this trade in Ottawa since 1848. He has a large stock.

Scott Bros. are, probably, the most extensive dealers in ladies' furnishing and dry goods of any firm in the city. Buying direct, they are enabled to make prices as low as consistent with a good article.

Smith & Rising, and A. Hess & Co. are the leading dealers in tobacco and cigars, the latter of which they manufacture extensively.

Child Brothers, and B. B. Griffith & Son are engaged in the shoe trade.

Jackson & Lockwood are engaged in the sale of hardware quite extensively. Mr. Jackson being among the early settlers.

Bowman's Art Gallery is among the notable institutions of the city, and one of the finest in the State; his photograph of "Starved Rock" being among his best efforts.

To sum up, then, Ottawa has six agricultural implement dealers, twenty-six attorneys at law, seven bakers, three banks, six barber shops, nine blacksmith shops, one book-binder, five book and stationary stores, twenty-six places where boots and shoes are made and sold, one brick-yard, one broom factory, one business college, seven butchers, five carriage-makers, seven cigar and tobacco dealers, eight clothiers, two cooper shops, five crockery dealers, three dentists, seven dressmakers, five drug stores, sixteen dry goods stores, seven grain elevators, one file manufactory, seven flour and feed stores, three flouring mills, five furniture dealers and makers, one glass factory with two furnaces, ten grain dealers, thirty-four grocery stores, two gunsmiths, three hardware stores, eleven hotels, six insurance agents, five jewelers, four leather dealers, three wholesale liquor dealers, five livery stables, five or six lumber yards, three marble yards, eight merchant tailors, seven millinery shops, three newspaper and job offices, seven house and sign painters, three photographers, eighteen physicians, two pump factories, three real estate agents, six restaurants, eight saddle and harness shops, a number of saloons, six stove and tinware dealers, and nine wagon-makers.

White's Hotel and the Clifton House are the leading hotels, both well kept and well appointed.

In the fall of 1872, the city council made arrangements for a steam fire engine. One was sent them for use during the winter, and in the spring the "City of Ottawa" came. After the burning of the opera house, the council decided to purchase another, and the "M. H. Swift" was bought.

The hook and ladder company organized June 1st, 1877, and the truck, costing $1,050.00, purchased by the city, came last July. There is one horse hose cart. Following are the fire organizations of the city :

City of Ottawa, cost $4,500, No. 1 ; M. H. Swift, cost $4,500, No. 2. The steamers are both drawn by horses kept in a stable opposite the engine house. Chief Engineer, Henry Walf ; Assistant Chief Engineer, L. A. Rising. Engineer of steamer, T. C. Logan ; Assistant Engineer of steamer, F. B. Logan. Foreman of Hose Company, John Shaffer ; 1st Assistant, Wm. Raymond ; 2nd Assistant, John Elmond. It has thirty-two members. Dauntless Hook and Ladder Company, W. H. Hull, Captain ; Geo. Tozer, Foreman ; Charles Pettit, Assistant Foreman. It has sixty-five members.

The first opera house was built in 1874, and burned December 29th, 1875. In the fall of that year, it was rebuilt in much better shape than before. The means of egress are especially to be commended, being both commodious and accessible.

The supreme court house for the supreme court, of the northern district of the state, is located at Ottawa. It was built in 1848 or 50, and has a very fine law library connected with it.

The new post office in use this year, for the first, is nicely arranged, the reception and distribution of the mails, as well as the easy access of its patrons.

The park, originally the gift of the state, has a fine iron fence around it, and is plentifully supplied with trees. In its center is a fountain, from which a shower of water pours, taken from an artesian well, near by. A monument to the soldiers and sailors has been erected in the park, the work of Mr. McInhill, of this city. It is a fine piece of work.

Among the more prominent residences, may be mentioned those of Judge Caton, and Hon. W. Bushnell, Judge Caton's has a fine park connected with it, in which the judge has a few specimens of the deer, the natural history of which he has made a specialty. It is on the north Bluff.

Hon. W. Bushnell's residence is in East Ottawa, and is tastefully arranged.

Ottawa Mineral Spring Company's Officers—Henry Mayo, President ; Dr. J. O. Harris, Secretary.

The curative qualities of the waters of this spring, brought to notice, some three years ago, have been thoroughly tested by a large number of patrons who speak warmly in its praise. The analysis of Professor Benjamin Silliman, of Yale College, place it in the front rank, as curative agent, in a certain class of cases.

THE PRESS.

For a short period, a newspaper of considerable importance and historical note, was published in the southern portion of La Salle county. This was known as "The Genius of Universal Emancipation," by Benjamin Lundy, the anti-slavery pioneer, so-called, which was printed at Lowell. In 1835-36, Elijah P. Lovejoy, published in St. Louis a religious (Presbyterian) newspaper, in which he claimed and exercised the right to discuss the subject of slavery. It was a very mild paper, and not even an abolition paper of the times, but his press was destroyed, and he was driven out of Missouri. In the summer of 1836, he resumed the paper at Alton, in this state, continuing the same name, "The Observer ;" but he was treated none the better, but rather the worse, in a free state, as the result proved. His press was destroyed a number of times, and thrown into the Mississippi river. Making a final stand for his rights, and under the sanction of the Mayor, he resisted by force, and on the 7th of November, 1837, he was killed by the mob. Not many weeks after this event, when there was a general inquiry, "who will succeed Lovejoy, the martyr, in publishing an abolition newspaper in Illinois." Geo. D. Prentiss, of the "Louisville Journal," announced that Benj. Lundy, the abolition pioneer, would be the man to offer himself as a sacrifice. He had published his "Genius of Universal Emancipation," in 1821, in Ohio, Tennessee, Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia. His effects consisting of his printing material, library and clothing, had recently been burnt in the Pennsylvania hall, Philadelphia, destroyed by a pro-slavery mob. Having friends in Putnam county, this state, and almost destitute of means, he came to Illinois, to be the successor of Lovejoy. In 1838, his paper was issued, dated at Hennepin, but really printed in Lowell. The sanguinary proprietors of that town (Lowell,) had commenced the improvement of the water power of the Vermillion, and hoped, as the name indicated, to make a large town there. They wanted a printing press to aid them in that great work, and so encouraged Lundy to cast in his lot with them, by the gift of sundry village lots, and signing notes with him for the purchase of worn out printing presses and type, at Ottawa. In the fall of 1838, the paper was issued from Lowell, a small printing office having been erected, by standing plank up endwise for a frame. The next spring he was joined by a young printer and journalist, from Massachusetts, Mr. Z. Eastman. Mr. Lundy died very suddenly on the 22d of August, 1839, leaving his paper in the hands of Mr. Eastman, whom he had requested to succeed him. In 1840, the paper was resumed by Mr. Eastman, under the title of "Genius of Liberty."

This paper, by request of a committee in Chicago, was removed to that city in 1842, and was continued by Mr. Eastman, till 1855, as the "Western Citizen," when it was purchased by Mr. Medill, and became the weekly circulation of the "Chicago Tribune."

The first paper published in Ottawa, was the "Ottawa Free Trader." Hise and Osman, proprietors. Mr. Osman is still connected with the paper, and seems sufficiently active for another decade or two.

December 12th, 1844, the "Constitutionalist" was started by Lowry and Gedney. Mr. Lowry soon went out, and Mr. Gedney ran the paper until June 12th, 1852, when T. Hampton bought his interest and changed the name to the "Ottawa Republican," which it still retains. It has changed hands a number of times. Hon. Frank Corwin held an interest at one period of its history, but it was never any better managed, or a better paper than at the present time, under the administration of Cullen & Sapp.

OTTAWA ACADEMY OF NATURAL SCIENCES.

In February, 1866, W. W. Calkins and Drs. Paul and Gibbs, met in the latter's office, and talked over the feasibility of organizing a geological society. They concluded that the field was a good one, and that the lovers of the sciences would rally to its support if it was broached to them. Dr. L. N. Dimmick and J. W. Calkins were taken into their counsel, and they all went to work canvassing the city for persons who would unite with them for the above purpose.

In their deliberations they decided upon the plan of organization adopted by the Chicago Academy of Natural Sciences.

They called a meeting of the persons named, and made a temporary organization, March 2d, 1866, by calling Dr. J. Paul to preside, and on motion the society was named the Ottawa Academy of Natural Sciences.

Col. Hitt, Dr. Dimmick, and J. W. Calkins, were appointed a committee to draft constitution and by-laws.

Dr. Gibbs, Rev. C. H. Force, David Walker, Dr. McArthur, J. B. Rice, and W. W. Calkins, were appointed a committee to solicit money for the purpose of incorporation. The Academy then adjourned until the 6th of March, 1866, when they perfected a permanent organization by electing the following officers and trustees:

David Walker, Pres.; L. E. Gibbs, First Vice Pres.; Dr. C. Hard, Second Vice Pres.; W. W. Calkins, Sec. Trustees: Col. D. F. Hitt, Dr. John Paul, Rev. C. H. Force, (Pres. of the Board of Trustees,) Dr. A. E. Gibbs, (Treas. of the Board of Trustees,) J. B. Rice, W. W. Calkins, Dr. R. M. McArthur, W. Bushnell, W. H. Cushman, and Dr. L. N. Dimmick..

Vice President L. E. Gibbs presided until June 6th, 1866, on account of the removal of President Walker south, and on his resignation Dr. J. Paul was elected to fill the vacancy.

Hon. J. D. Caton joined the Academy February 7th, 1867, and was elected March 7th, 1867, to a trusteeship, caused by the removal of W. H. Cushman from the city.

The following officers were also duly elected: Dr. J. Paul, Pres.; Col. D. F. Hitt, Vice Pres.; Dr. C. Hard, Vice Pres.; W. W. Calkins, Sec. As the Treasurer belongs to the Board of Trustees none was elected. March 5th, 1868, the same officers were re-elected.

The trustees engaged a taxidermist, and appointed Drs. Paul and Gibbs curators of the museum, with power to act as they thought best, and to their energy and perseverance the Academy is indebted for what success it has enjoyed in gathering together specimens, etc., as they sacrificed their time and money to push the Academy.

Hon. J. D. Caton delivered an elaborate essay on the American deer and elk before the Academy, which was published and sent abroad, Darwin even making use of information derived therefrom.

March 6th, 1869, W. W. Calkins was elected Pres.; W. E. Bowman, Vice Pres.; L. E. Gibbs, Vice Pres.; Dr. J. Paul, Sec. March 3d, 1870, the same officers were re-elected. March 2d, 1871, D. S. Ebersol elected Pres.; Dr. Hard, Vice Pres.; Dr. L. N. Dimmick, Vice Pres.; Dr. J. Paul, Sec. March 6th, 1872, D. S. Ebersol elected Pres.; Dr. Hard, Vice Pres.; Dr. Gibbs, Vice Pres.; Dr. J. Paul, Sec.

The Academy suffered a severe loss in the death of Dr. John Paul, who died September, 1872, aged sixty-seven. The Doctor was a native of Vermont. He had been from the first one of the principal founders of the Ottawa Academy of Natural Sciences, and had given his earnest labor for its success. The Doctor was a man of unusual energy in whatever he undertook. At home or abroad he was engaged as opportunity presented in collecting, preserving and arranging specimens or books for the Academy. He also took an interest in all public measures calculated to promote the welfare of the community in which he lived, and as a physician he enjoyed the confidence of all his professional brothers.

March 6th, 1873, D. S. Ebersol was elected Pres.; Dr. Hard, Vice Pres.; Dr. Gibbs, Sec. Dr. Hard and D. S. Ebersol were elected to fill vacancies in the Board of Trustees.

Previous to the death of Dr. Paul the Academy collection was stored in different offices in the city, most of the best specimens in the office of Drs. Paul & Gibbs. Soon after his demise the large room in the third story of Cheever's Block, (southwest corner court house square,) was secured, and all the specimens and property removed and placed in secure cases, where they are always ready for exhibition, free of charge.

On January, 1874, a new organization was deemed necessary, in consequence of some informality in the original letters of incorporation, when D. S. Ebersol was elected Pres.; Hon. C. H. Gilman, Vice Pres.; David Walker, Sec.; W. William West, Treas. Trustees: D. F. Hitt, Chester Herd, H. L. Mead, Geo. W. N. Cushman, and Geo. W. Brumbach.

Present acting officers: D. S. Ebersol, Pres.; C. H. Gilman, Vice Pres.; G. W. Brumbach, Treas.; D. Walker, Sec. Trustees: D. F. Hitt, C. Hard, D. P. Jones, W. E. Bowman, W. Bushnell. Exchanges and donations solicited.

From which time to this writing (1877,) much valuable material has been collected, and which has from time to time been acknowledged in the city papers. Among the many contributors of the Academy we cheerfully acknowledge the following:

Geo. A. W. Price, of Cincinnati, O., Birds of America, 36 Nos., one-fourth size, colored to life. J. G. Armstrong, shark teeth and vertebra of extinct mammoth from South Carolina. Prof. W. J. Stevens, Lebanon, O., a fine lot of terra silurian fossils, mostly from the bed of the Little Miami, Lebanon, Ohio. Hitt, fossil log of petrified wood, with many other fine and valuable specimens, from near Pike's Peake, Col. From W. W. Calkins, a collection of the shells of La Salle county, properly named and labeled—a very valuable donation. D. S. Ebersol, Hon. J. D. Caton, David Walker, Dr. Gibbs, Dr. Snyder, of Virginia City, Cass county, Ill., Prof. J. W. Hewitt, Prof. Gunning; J. C. Shroyer, of Cincinnati, O., A. M. Ebersol, Hon. W. Bushnell, Dr. Dimmick, Santa Barbara, Col., have all donated valuable specimens.

Lectures have been had from Prof. Jno. W. Cooke, of England; from Prof. W. Gunning, of Cambridge; from Hon. Judge Gilman, of the Ottawa Bar.

A full and complete catalogue has been prepared by Prof. J. W. Huett.

THE CHURCHES.

The first Congregational Church in Ottawa was organized August 23, 1839. It was served by the following ministers: From August, 1843, to May, 1835, by Rev. Rollin Mears ; from June, 1845, to June, 1848, by Rev. G. W. Bassett ; and from June, 1848, to March, 1870, by Rev. M. K. Whittlesey.

The Plymouth Church was organized on Oct. 27, 1858, and the following have been its pastors : Rev. J. Blanchard, from October, 1858, to April, 1859 ; Rev. Wm. C. Scofield, from June, 1859, to June, 1864 ; and Rev. Edwin N. Lewis, from October, 1864, to March, 1870.

On the 6th of March, 1870, these two churches were united under the name of the First Congregationalist Church of Ottawa. On the 23d of May, they called the Rev. J. M. Sturtevant, Jr., to become their pastor, who remained until December, 1873. After an interval of nearly a year, the present pastor, Rev. T. J. Valentine, was called. At the date of the union of the churches, there were two hundred and fifty-six members in the church. The number remains about the same, with a Sunday-school of nearly two hundred scholars. Their present house of worship was commenced in 1870, and dedicated March 26, 1871. It cost about $35,000.

The Baptist Church was organized in 1838 or 1839, by Rev. Thomas Powell, with six members. In the early part of their organization, they erected a frame church on the site of the present postoffice block, which house they occupied until 1860, when they erected their present brick church. It was not ready for occupancy, save the basement, until 1865 ; and during the war, the upper floor was known as " Union Hall," and in it many entertainments were given for the benefit of various patriotic objects. In 1865, the Lecture room was completed and occupied. The congregation now numbers nearly two hundred and seventy members, and have a Sunday-school of nearly that number of pupils. The pastor is Rev. D. L. Colwell.

The Protestant Episcopal parish was organized in 1838, by Samuel Chase, D. D. They occupied for a season the old Court House ; then a warehouse, and a room over a store, or private house, until 1839, when, Dr. Chase leaving, no regular services were maintained until 1845. In March of that year, Bishop Philander Chase re-organized the parish, and in July, Rev. Chas. I. Kelley was called as rector. In 1849, a brick church was built, at a cost of $2,550, and consecrated by Bishop Chase, June 23, 1850. This building is now the carriage-shop of Gay & Porter. Mr. Kelley remained until July, 1858. In April, 1852, Rev. Chas. P. Clark was called and remained until October, 1858. In May, 1857, Rev. Thos. N. Benedict came. The wardens chosen then were Joseph Dow and Wm. Osman, the latter of whom yet remains.

The old building becoming decayed, in May, 1866, a lot was purchased and steps taken to secure a new house of worship. Mr. Benedict remained until May, 1866. During his ministry, the church received large accessions to its membership. Rev. Edwin Coan was called in December, 1866, and remained until July, 1869. He was succeeded by Rev. W. W. Estabrook. During his ministry, work commenced on the present church. It was completed in January, 1872, at a cost of $14,150. It is built entirely of stone, is of the Gothic style of architecture, and very finely finished. Mr. Estabrook was succeeded by Rev. J. L. Steele, who resigned in July, 1874. He was followed by Rev. W. Speirs, who remained until June, 1876. The present pastor, Rev. F. B. Nash, was called in February, 1877. The membership is one hundred and ten, and the attendance at Sunday-school about one hundred.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in April, 1869, by Rev. L. Y. Hayes, with thirty-two members. They immediately erected a small brick chapel, in which they held divine service until the completion of their present house of worship. It was erected in 1871, at an expense of $22,000, including the lot. Mr. Hayes remained pastor until 1873, when he resigned, and was followed by Rev J. E. Moffatt, whose ministry extended until Jan. 1, 1877. The present pastor is Rev. Thos. Parry. The congregation comprises at present one hundred members, and sustains a Sunday-school of about ninety scholars.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized as a class as early as 1838, in Old South Ottawa. In after years, the congregation built a frame church in the present city, which in time gave place to the present comfortable brick structure, finished about 1865. There are at present two hundred and ten members, and one hundred and fifty Sunday-school scholars.

The German Evangelical Association was organized about twelve years ago, with six members. They were Earnest Claus and wife, Wm. Farmhals and wife, and Natalie Rochel. The membership has increased to about sixty, and the Sunday-school to one hundred and ten scholars. Earnest Claus is Superintendent. The pastors of this church have been as follows: Revs. Jacob Hummel, John Kurtz, Martin Ellis, A. Knobel, John Dingle, and John Miller. Rev. Kurtz returned in 1876, and is still pastor.

The St. Columba or Irish Catholic Church is one of the oldest religious societies in Ottawa. It was made a mission in 1838, and attended by priests from the mission at LaSalle. Regular pastors were appointed first in 1844, Rev. A. Donnell being the first, and remaining until 1851. The next was Rev. Thos. O'Gara, who was in turn followed by Rev. Bernard O'Garris, and he by Rev. Patrick A. Terry, who is assisted by Rev. Francis O'Conner. The original congregation numbered thirty families; now there are over five hundred. The Sunday-school numbers six hundred and fifty pupils.

The St Francis German Catholic Church was built in 1859, at a cost of $2,415. Father Tusch was the first pastor, remaining until his death in 1860. Since his time, eight pastors have occupied the pulpit. The present incumbent is Rev. Henry Wagner. The total membership is about seven hundred and fifty. Connected with the church is a parochial school and various benevolent societies.

The German Lutheran Society held their earliest meetings in 1855, and five years after erected a house of worship. Their first pastor was Rev. H. F. Fruechtenicht, who remained until 1875, when he was succeeded by the Rev. H. Sieving, the present pastor. In 1860, there were thirty families; the increase to this original membership has been slight. The Sunday-school numbers about one hundred and thirty-five pupils. A parochial school is supported, and a mission church in Brookfield township.

The Presbyterian Church in South Ottawa was organized in a school-house, April 19, 1849, by a committee from presbytery, consisting of the following persons: Revs. C. A. Williams, J. M. Clark, M. K. Whittlesey, C. Cook, and Geo. W. Baptist. The constituent members were principally from the Congregationalist Church of Ottawa; they were, John Rockwood, Thos. M. Mason, Jane Mason, Wm. H. Rockwood, A. M. Ebersol, Martha Farnsworth, Emeline E. Drake, Rose Ann Hunter, Margaret Fleming, and G. H. Rugg.

The church edifice was completed and dedicated in 1849, and the following year the parsonage was erected on a lot adjoining the church, donated by A. M. Bowen, of New York. The first minister was Rev. C. A. Williams, whose successor was Rev. R. C. Clark. The first pastor was Rev. C. H. Force. Mr. A. M. Ebersol was superintendent of the Sunday-school for many years succeeding the organization. Owing to various causes the congregation is now in a decline, and does not support a pastor. Rev. Mr. Parry, pastor in Ottawa, occasionally filling the pulpit.

The society has given to destitute families, eighty-seven bibles and to destitute persons one hundred and ten. The annual meetings are generally held at Ottawa.

. LA SALLE.

A city of about eight thousand inhabitants, is situated on the right bank of the Illinois River, at the crossing of the Illinois Central Railroad. It was named in honor of Robert De La Salle, the intrepid explorer of the Mississippi Valley, and the founder of the first settlement in the West.

On March 22d, 1827, a land grant was made to the State of Illinois for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, whose western terminus was made in 1836. At this point, early residents saw a city arise, and Peru and La Salle each struggled for the mastery. As the natural Steamboat and Canal Boat Basin was afterwards near La Salle, and the crossing of the railroads was made here, it has outgrown the former place in wealth and population. This is also due to the establishment of large manufactures, and the consequent employment of a great number of hands, who, with their families, constitute a large part of the inhabitants.

The grant given to the State comprised each alternate section for five miles on each side of the canal—the selection to be made by the Canal Commissioners, who chose the odd sections, the Government retaining the even sections. In 1829, the State created a Board of Canal Commissioners, and the following year the line was surveyed.

The terminus of the canal, the natural beauty of the scenery, and the prolific soil of this part of Illinois, soon began to attract the attention of pioneers. Simon Crozier, an old Indian trader, who had doubtless been on this part of the Illinois River when none but the native red man dwelt here, is supposed to be the first settler in this locality. He, however, built his cabin on the south bank of the river, near Shippingport. His descendants still live about Utica.

In 1830, Samuel Lapsley came to the site of La Salle and erected a cabin, which still stands, between Fourth and Fifth streets, directly north of the Christian Brothers' Academy. This was the first white man's habitation on the site of the city. It may yet be seen by the curious, as it does duty as a stable. Mr. Lapsley cultivated a piece of ground extending south to the river bluff, to the ravine on the west, to Fifth street on the north, and to Joliet street on the east. Here he raised corn, wheat, and other cereals, and when the State took possession of the land, lost his improvements. His death occurred in 1839.

In the spring of 1830, commissioners sent out by some young men in the East to select a site for a colony, which they wished to establish in Illinois, fixed upon this point. Their choice was determined by the fertility of the soil, the reported existence of immense coal beds, and the superior land and water communications promised by the early completion of the canal and railroads. About the same time, Burton Ayers arrived from Ohio, and built a cabin on the side of the bluff near the north end of the railroad bridge. He also built a blacksmith shop, where, in after years, he made plows for the early settlers. The next spring some of the colonists came, among whom was Aaron Gunn, still a resident. The season of 1831 proving a rainy one, several of the settlers became discouraged and removed to La Moille and to Princeton. The next year the Black Hawk War broke out, and many settlers were driven from their homes, or massacred in their cabins. Mr. Gunn went to Hennepin, where he remained until 1835, when he returned to the site of La Salle, and at a Government sale of land, that year, purchased four hundred acres of land north of the canal section, where he still lives. This same year, Mr. D. Lathrop was sent by the Rockwell Land Company, of Norwich, Connecticut, of which he was a member, to purchase land for speculative purposes. He selected the half section now known as Rockwell, supposing that the city which should arise at the crossing of the river by the proposed Illinois Central Railroad and at the terminus of the canal, would probably be located there. He soon after returned home, and in the winter of 1837-8, started out with a colony of over one hundred persons, many of whom stopped at different points after crossing the mountains. Among those reaching Rockwell and remaining there were: Mrs. Geo. Neu, of Homer; D. Carr, of Batchelor's Ridge; and Miss Serls, now Mrs. Elisha Merritt.

This settlement grew rapidly a short time. In the autumn of 1838, the fever epidemic struck the town, and nearly depopulated it. It had then nearly two hundred inhabitants, contained two good pioneer stores, a blacksmith shop, and a large frame building, nearly completed, intended for a tavern. As soon as the people saw the location of the canal terminus was below them, they perceived their error, and the fall of their hopes for a town.

The terminus of the canal was determined in 1836, and the succeeding spring the town plot was laid out, leaving those in Rockwell and on Government lands entirely out of its limits. The State had deeded the canal lands to a Board of Trustees, in trust as an indemnity for the money borrowed to prosecute the work. These Trustees made the first sale of lots in La Salle in 1838, when lots on the summit of the bluff fronting on Main street brought from $400 to $600, while others brought from $50 to $100, or more. The town then was filled with the transient population working on the canal, and these had their "shanties" along the bluff and on the bottom skirting the river. The site of the city was in many places covered with a good growth of native forest trees, many of which were cut into logs, and being sawn into boards, at the saw-mill on the Little Vermillion, were used in the construction of the canal and in the erection of the first houses on the town plat. Near the present crossing of the Chicago & Rock Island Railroad over the Little Vermillion, and close to Burton Ayres' blacksmith shop, Philo Lindley erected a store, the first in the limits of La Salle. He was a contractor on the canal, and kept this store mainly to supply the necessities of his men, and such of his fellow settlers, then few, as chose to patronize him. He was shortly followed by Wm. Byrne & Co., in a similar enterprise, and these by Isaac Hardy, who built a store on the bluff, just east of the present Caledonia House. It was a log structure, and overlooked where the now prosperous city stands, then a staked-out town, overgrown with grass, weeds, and a growth of small timber. A few of the canal-men built houses on these lots, and pre-empted them. When the sale of lots would occur, a committee of appraisers would be appointed to value these improvements, and should the lot be bid to more than its value and the value of the improvements, the pre-emptor would be obliged to pay the difference to secure his lots. Generally, the owner of the improvements would bid a sum equal to the appraisement, and, owing to a free spirit then prevailing, would not be bid against. During 1839-40, the Illinois Central Railroad was graded through La Salle. On this cut thousands of dollars were expended, from which no beneficial results followed. The obtaining of the charter for this road is fully discussed in the History of Peru, in this book, and to that, as well as to other works then common to both cities, the reader is referred.

From the laying out of La Salle, in 1837, to the stopping of work on the railroad and canal, in 1841, a continuous season of activity prevailed. Work was plenty; men were plenty; money was plenty. More stores, shops, dwellings, were added to the growing, energetic town, and the future of a large city was to the inhabitants then a fact to be soon realized.

The grand financial collapse came in 1840. Work did not cease, however, on the canal until the next year. Capitalists now refused the State more money, and the great system of "Internal Improvements" stood ready to fall. This Internal Improvement Act, which puts all Legislative acts in the shade, provided for a system of railroads to be commenced simultaneously in all parts of the State, running to all points of the compass, through regions scarcely explored. Counties not on the direct line of any of these roads, were bribed into the support of the bill by the liberal use of money, all borrowed on the faith of the State. Acts were passed authorizing loans for the erection of prisons, hospitals, asylums, and other State institutions. Counties, following the example of the State, borrowed money for the erection of jails, court houses, and other county institutions, and even to individuals did this spirit of fictitious values go, all seeming to suppose that the State could, in some way, find a method to make these expanded values good. When work on the canal ceased, and the shrinkage on State securities began to be felt, the effect went on down, through the smaller corporations to the individual. Good money was not to be had. Public and private credit were alike gone. Northern Illinois produced nothing yet for exportation, and every kind of business was dependent upon the disbursements from the public works.

La Salle being at the head of navigation, like the neighboring city of Peru, suffered even more than her rival in the general depression that followed. The population, save a few trades-people, was entirely composed of laborers on the canal and railroad, and upon these the welfare and growth of the city depended. Those who had saved their earnings left, emigration ceased, and the town remained almost at a stand-still. There is never a financial panic that is not followed by a financial blessing in some solid form.

The soil of the prairies adjacent to La Salle was exceedingly rich, and yielded abundantly to a rude cultivation. There was no danger of starving, and, there being no employment in town, those of the laborers who were obliged to remain, scattered throughout the country, pre-empted lands, or purchased canal land with canal script, and, in time, became prosperous farmers. A period of production then began, and many of the finest farms in the vicinity of La Salle owe their existence to this forced move of their owners, who, could they have returned to the East, might have still been day laborers. Traffic was now mainly carried on by means of exchange. The farmer could exchange his products with the merchant, who took them to Chicago, the farmer nearly always performing this duty with his team, or the merchant could ship directly to St. Louis, on the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers. This latter was the more common method adopted, owing to its cheapness. Notwithstanding the depression in trade, men of sagacity knew the junction of the canal and river, whenever accomplished, would form a city. Strenuous efforts were being made by prominent men to devise some plan to redeem the credit of the State, and complete the unfinished works. Sales of lots were made every year or two, from 1838, all of which were well attended. Richard Cody, G. A. Lindley, and T. B. Elliott, opened stores in 1844-5, on Main street, which did, for the times, a good business. Steamboats came from down the river almost regularly, and were always the signal for a gathering at Peru, or La Salle. At the latter place there was as yet no good landing, and the steamers generally stopped nearly opposite the present round house. After the completion of the canal, the natural Steamboat Basin was at La Salle, and this fact, coupled with that of the crossing of the railroad over the river here, aided greatly in the growth of the town.

Shortly after the stopping of work on the railroad, the Legislature passed an act chartering the La Salle & Dixon Railroad, giving to the corporation the materials and right of way belonging to the old Central Road between these two points. During the year 1841, operations were begun on this road, and a bank of issue, pretending to be authorized by charter, was started in town. The project galvanized into life the dormant energies of the town, and a season of the old prosperity seemed at hand. Suddenly the whole project collapsed, by the breaking of the bank. The leading spirit in the whole movement was a worthless adventurer, named A. H. Bangs, without money, influence, or credit. He had succeeded in deceiving some of the best citizens of the two towns, who, after the collapse, did not find a hundred dollars in good money or reliable paper. Bangs came near losing his life at the hands of the enraged contractors and laborers, whom he had so shamelessly swindled.

The act to complete the canal and to provide for the payment of its debt passed the Legislature on the 21st of February, 1843. This was a signal for renewed prosperity in town. The passage of the act, with its wise provisions, was largely due to the efforts of Governor Ford, Senator Ryan, and Colonel Oakley.

The early completion of the canal was now looked upon as a certainty, and a rapid increase in population followed. New stores and shops were built, and everything again assumed the appearance of its old-time thrift and progress. Main street in LaSalle was beginning to be graced with some commodious stores for the times, and down on the river bank, where a small warehouse was erected, might be seen the farmers, now prosperous, who a few years before were day laborers on the canal and railroad. Work was begun in 1845, and was in active operation on almost the entire line, and pushed energetically forward until the spring of 1848, when it was completed, and not long after the "Gen. Thornton," built by Isaac Hardy, passed through the locks at this place. The population had grown from hardly a hundred in 1843, to double the number now, while at Peru it was still greater.

Shortly after the completion of the canal, a grist-mill and warehouse were erected on the canal, at the steamboat basin, by a New York man. Mr. Hardy built one soon after, and a third was constructed by Wm. Whaley. These brought the bulk of the grain trade here, to the detriment of Peru, and was one of the causes of the increased growth of La Salle over her rival.

A small hotel, erected by Archibald Phedran, had been in use some time, but was becoming inadequate to the increased travel, and in 1848, Isaac Hardy built the Hardy House, the first substantial hotel in La Salle. In 1852 or 1853, Francis Harrison erected a block of buildings, among them the present Harrison House. Mr. Hardy's house was destroyed by fire a few years ago. In April, 1853, the Chicago & Rock Island Railroad was completed, and rapid transportation east and west began to pass through La Salle. The next year the Illinois Central completed the railroad bridge crossing the river at LaSalle, instead of at the mouth of the canal. This drew trade and travel to that city instead of Peru, though the latter city remonstrated, and vigorously endeavored to secure the junction within her own limits. These gave LaSalle means of transportation excelled by few cities in the west, and have been the cause of much of her prosperity.

The existence of coal in this region was reported to the early explorers of this country, but the great extent of the coal fields was, until recently, unknown. In the winter of 1853-4, D. Lathrop employed a man named Curtis to bore for coal on the bottoms south of the canal, about opposite the present glass works. A vein of excellent coal was struck in due time, and the feasibility of successful mining was fully demonstrated. In 1855, the Kentucky shaft was sunk, by H. C. Freeman, and the next year the LaSalle shaft, by Robert Loomis. Two other shafts have since been dug. The coal is found in three seams, the first from one hundred to one hundred and fifty feet below the surface; the second from fifty to eighty feet farther down, and the third, containing the best quality of coal, is from four to five hundred feet below the upper surface. Two additional shafts, the Rockwell and the one at Matthiessen and Hegeler's Zinc Works, have since been sunk. The great abundance of coal, its excellent quality, and the convenient and speedy means of transportation have led to the establishment of large manufactories. From their start, dates the substantial growth of the city.

It had attained considerable growth in 1852, and was then incorporated as a city. In 1854, a brewery was started by J. Eliel. It is still in operation, making over one hundred barrels per day, and employing thirty hands. Brick-making began as early as 1838. It was discontinued for a while, but in later years has been resumed, and is now a prosperous trade. Several houses in La Salle and Peru are built entirely of stone, this material being easily accessible in the bluff on which the city is built.

In 1858, Matthiessen and Hegeler started the manufacture of zinc in a small way, being attracted here by the quality and cheapness of the coal. They obtain their ore from southwestern Wisconsin, and from the mines in western Missouri. They gradually extended their works and business, and in 1866 erected their own rolling-mill. Now theirs is the largest manufactory of zinc in the United States. Constant employment is given to three hundred men, and upwards of one hundred tons of coal consumed daily. They are now manufacturing eight million pounds of metallic zinc every year. Their pay roll amounts to $15,000 per month. Two other large zinc works have since been started. The LaSalle Company's Works employ over one hundred hands, and manufacture about 13,000 pounds of zinc per day. Lanyon's Zinc Works gives employment to thirty men, and makes daily about 6,000 pounds.

The manufacture of window glass was begun by a co-operative company in 1867, when the present factory was built. A bottle factory had been in operation prior to this time, but, being unsuccessful, had abandoned the enterprise. Three years after the factory was erected, the works passed into the hands of a stock company, with James Lanning as Superintendent. The capacity of the works is now 34,000 fifty-foot boxes per year. The town, also, is well supplied with shops of all kinds, all of which do a good business. For several years the city has been lighted by gas.

In 1853 or 1854, Mr. H. Baldwin started an exchange and loan bank, which he conducted until 1857, when he failed. In 1855, Mr. Cruckshank's bank was started, and in 1859 passed into the hands of Rockwell & Co., who in 1861 erected the building for the Bank of LaSalle. In 1863, they sold to Butler & Nixon, who in 1864 changed it into a National bank. In 1865, the stock was purchased by Adams & Hatch, who changed it into a private bank again, and operated it until 1872, when it passed into the hands of the present owners, J. P. Brown & Co.

The natural advantages of the city are unequalled. Possessed of an unlimited supply of coal, articles of commerce can be manufactured here at a moderate cost. Transportation is convenient to every point of the compass, and these facts kept well in mind by the city, cannot fail to impress its citizens that the prosperity and growth of LaSalle are beyond a doubt.

SOCIAL CULTURE.

The tone of society in the city is excellent. Good schools are maintained, and the churches are well attended. Owing to the existence of the Brothers' Academy, the Sisters' School, and one or two other private educational institutions, the public schools of LaSalle do not show so good an attendance as other towns of her size. From the earliest existence of a town, schools of some kind were maintained, generally private and of short duration in the year. The first school house in town was built in 1848. When it became too small to accommodate the school population other buildings were rented, until 1851 or 1852, when the old brick school house was erected. It is yet occupied. In 1869-70 the new brick school house was built to accommodate the increased school population. In 1855 the old seminary building in the north part of town, was built by a stock company, to afford a higher course of education than that obtained in the city schools. The adventure did not prove to be a success, and the school was soon abandoned. The owners then rented the building to the school board, who in after years purchased it, and still continue to use it for a public school. The Brothers' Academy was erected about twenty years ago, for the purpose of educating boys. It has proven a success, and the school, under the care of the tutors appointed by the church, is in a flourishing condition, having many pupils from abroad. The Sisters' School has been maintained some twenty-five years. Their building contains five or six rooms, and during the school months all are full. A free school is also maintained by the church, in which two of the teachers from the Brothers' School labor gratuitously a certain portion of each day. In the public schools from fourteen to sixteen teachers are employed. The superintendent is Professor Shreebe.

THE CHURCHES.

Fathers Rowe and Parodi, in the year 1838, erected a small log church on the site of the present Brothers' Academy. This was the first church in LaSalle, and in it was gathered the nucleus of what is now the largest church in the city. The congregation of St. Patrick's Church continued to worship in this log structure until the erection of the present cathedral, the largest church in LaSalle, begun in 1846 and completed in 1852. Now the congregation has nearly three thousand members. Rev. Mark Anthony, the present priest, has had charge of the church about twenty-five years. In 1848 a building was erected at the corner of Fifth and Marquette streets, and was used as a Baptist Church and school house. The first public school was taught in this. It was subsequently removed, and is now used as a dwelling. The Polish Catholic Church has been organized about three years. They conduct a day school, the building in which it is taught being near the church. The German Catholic Church has been organized about six years. They erected a very comfortable church, costing about five thousand dollars. They have about fifty members, and are under the ministry of Father Wenker. A German Lutheran Church has been organized since 1871. They purchased the old Methodist Church, which they have since refitted and repaired. The Methodist Episcopal Church is one of the oldest in LaSalle. Owing to a lack of records, and the fact that few if any of the original members are now here, the early history of this congregation is not easily obtained. They sold their old church, which had served them many years, to the German Lutherans four years ago, and by 1874 completed their present comfortable structure. It cost a little over $12,000. There are at present over two hundred members, and nearly that number enrolled as Sunday school scholars.

The Congregational Church was organized on the 13th of June, 1852, with fourteen members. They had already erected a church, as an organization had been practically formed ten years before. Of the original fourteen the following are still members: Mr. and Mrs. D. Lathrop, Mr. and Mrs. Haven, and Mrs. Brown. The first pastor was Rev. W. H. Collins, who remained from 1852 to 1858. The next was Rev. L. F. Waldo, who remained one year. Rev. Wm. Lyman was pastor from January, 1862, to January, 1863, and Rev. Henry Durham from April of that year until 1865. Rev. Wm. Payson remained from 1866 to 1868, and Rev. N. A. Prentiss from 1869 to 1873. Rev. F. Bascom was then in charge one year, and in July, 1874, the present pastor, Rev. J. C. Myers, was called. The congregation still occupy the church erected at their early organization, and now number over eighty members. The Baptist congregation occupied the building erected in 1848 for their use and that of the public schools until the erection of their present church. The congregation is small, and does not now sustain a regular pastor.

THE PRESS.

The oldest paper in the city, the LaSalle Press, is now in its twenty-first year. The first paper in town was the Standard, which gave place to the Herald, which in turn gave place to the Watchman, which was merged into the Press. The latter has an excellent reputation, and until the advent of the Independent in 1874, was the only paper published here. The editor is R. E. Stephens, the proprietor E. C. Webster. The Independent is conducted by Mr. W. M. Smith, and is now in its third year.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

Until the year 1851 the inhabitants did not feel the need of a municipal government, owing to the scarcity of the resident population, and no efforts were made in this direction until that time.

That year an election was held and the following trustees chosen: Edward D. Davis, Nicholas Duncan, John Allen, Francis La Beau, and Wm. Whaley. These met and elected Edward D. Davis President. It was soon discovered that a more perfect form of government was desired than what could be obtained under the State law then in force, and the next year a charter for a city was obtained, which went into effect August 4th, 1852. This charter defined the limits of the city to be as follows: "All that country embraced within the following limits, to-wit: All of Section 15, and so much of Section 14 as lies on the west side of Little Vermillion River, in Township 33 north, and Range 1, east of the third principal meridian; also the south half of Section 10, in the same town and range."

At the first city election Alexander Campbell was elected mayor, George H. Buck and John H. McFadden aldermen for the first ward, and Norman McFarran and Nicholas Duncan aldermen for the second ward. The city was then divided into two wards, but subsequent additions have enlarged it until now there are eight aldermen elected. The present mayor is Mr. J. W. Duncan.

PERU.

Is located on the northern bank of the Illinois river, in the western part of the county, and is one hundred miles from Chicago. The original plat was surveyed and platted by the School Commissioners, in 1834. The next year the only residents in this locality were, Lyman D. Brewster, T. D. Brewster, John Hays and family, Peltiah and Calvin Brewster, James Hays and Samuel Lathrop. Burton Ayres lived at the mouth of the Little Vermillion. John Hays kept a ferry across the river, at its present confluence with the canal, and had a cabin where the upper brewery now stands. His son James lived in a cabin on the site of the lower brewery, his claim costing him $60.00. In the spring of 1835, Mr. T. D. Brewster came to the place, and returning to the east, came again in the fall of 1836, by way of Pittsburg and St. Louis, coming up the river on the steamboat, the Friendship, the first to ascend the Illinois to this point. Disembarking at an old cabin, which he found deserted, he followed a trail to the summit of the hill, where he found his cousins, Peltiah and Calvin, at work. They were living alone here, their father, Lyman D. Brewster, having returned to Tennessee on business.

The town plat was surveyed and sold under a law then in force, which required the School Commissioners, whenever a certain number of residents desired, to lay off the school section and place it upon the market. They laid off the section along the river into town lots, and ten and twenty acre lots, and the north half into eighty acre farms, which, in many cases brought only the government price for land. The western boundary of this section was about where the present Chamber's house now stands. The lots, at the public sales, were sold from one to two and a half dollars per lot, being 80 feet by 132 feet, with an alley east and west, and one north and south. A. W. Brooks, of Pennsylvania, was "around" at the sale, and bought a dozen, or more. Returning home, he made a fraternal swap for these lots, receiving a gold-watch for them. T. D. Brewster sold for Brooks the last one—the Episcopal church lot, for $800. The main part of town stands on the north half of section 20, and on the south part of section 17. This land on which the business part of town is located was entered by Lyman D. Brewster, who died at Hennepin, in the autumn of 1835. It was platted and recorded in the fall of 1836, by T. D. Brewster, and is generally known as the Ninawa addition. The site of the city covers some interesting Indian localities, two of their burying grounds being within its limits. The main point of attraction to this locality was the proposed terminus of the Illinois and Michigan canal, and the crossing of the Illinois Central Railroad, over the river here. These two projects were part of the grand system of the "Internal Improvement" scheme, introduced by the state legislature of 1836, which did so much evil for the state, in plunging it so overwhelmingly into debt, and at the same time did so much to develop its resources. Although the exact locality was not determined until 1836, the persons mentioned came in 1835, and in the spring of that year, Ulyses Spaulding and H. L. Kinney brought on a stock of goods, and erected the pioneer store of town. A small building was built on the ground now occupied by the store of W. F. and A. J. Cronise. These two men remained on their farm about four miles below town, and placed T. D. Brewster in charge of the store. Having no lock with which to secure it against thieves, then few, he used a pitchfork as a substitute. Customers came from a large circuit of country. The steamers coming up the river, made the outlet of the canal their stopping place, attempting to go no farther. This fact made Peru a good trading point. While on their way to their western reservation, the Pottawattomies then under Shabbona, made this a halting place, and traded some at this store. The following spring, the canal terminus was known, and the sale of lots in Peru went rapidly forward. A post office was established, the mail being carried from Peoria by the river. Col. Kinney built a small hotel opposite the present mill, and dwellings began to be erected in different parts of the new town.

On the fourth of July, the first shovel-full of earth was dug on the canal, and from that time for a while work progressed rapidly. The population began its rapid increase in 1837. The legislature of 1836 incorporated the central railroad, which was subsequently located upon the same general route, as followed by the present Illinois Central Railroad. The route crossed the river at Peru, followed up the bank some distance, and then, ascending to the plain by an inclined plane, went on towards the north. This drew large numbers of contractors and laborers here. Among the more permanent residents were, Wm. Richardson, J. P. Judson, S. L. Smith and his brother, the doctor, Fletcher Webster, Daniel Townsend, P. Hall, James Mulford, James Meyers, Wm. and Chas. Dresser, Harney Wood, N. B. Bullock, Jesse Pugsley, Ezra McKinzie, Nathaniel and Isaac Abraham, J. P. Thompson, John Hoffman, C. H. Charles, Asa Mann, Lucius Rumrill, Cornelius Cahill, Cornelius Cokely, David Dana, Zimri Lewis, Daniel McGin, S. W. Raymond, Geo. B. Martin, Wm. H. Davis, Geo. W. Holley, Geo. Low, M. Mott, F. Lebeau, A. Hyatt, Ward B. Burnett, O. C. Motley, Wm. Paul, H. P. Woodworth, Harvey Leonard and Henry S. Beebe, who afterwards published an account of the settlement of this locality, from which many of these items are taken.

These were the main permanent settlers, and formed the nucleus around which the rest gathered to form the town.

The letting of the canal contracts in 1837 did much for Peru. It was during the summer that the first industry of the town was started—a saw-mill being built near the lower coal banks. The great social event of that year was the visit of Daniel Webster, the famous statesman, who, accompanied by his daughter, came out to see his son, Fletcher Webster, who occupied a farm near by, given him by his father. Mr. Webster and his daughter came by way of St. Louis, and word of their coming having preceded them, a great crowd was gathered to welcome the statesman, and in honor of his visit a public dinner was provided.

Operations began on the railroad in 1838, on both sides of the river. Some grading and filling was done on the south side of the river opposite the town, the remains of the work being yet visible. This was the signal for extensive improvements in town, and for large accessions to the population. On December 6th, the inhabitants assembled at the tavern of Zimri Lewis and voted to take the initiatory steps for organizing the town as a borough under the general incorporation law then in force. At the census taken the same month the proposed limits of the borough contained 175 males over age, and 251 females and minors—426 inhabitants. The limits were to include the south half of section 16, the southeast quarter of section 17, and all that part of section 20 lying north of the river—in all, about one square mile. On the 15th an election was held to determine upon the organization, which resulted in forty votes in favor and one against it. The same day the election for town trustees was held, which resulted in the choice of M. Mott, F. Lebeau, C. H. Charles, Z. Lewis, and O. C. Motley. These met and elected Z. Lewis President of the Board, T. D. Brewster, Clerk, Z. Lewis, Jr., Constable, and James Meyers, Assessor. The town was now a corporate body, and began to take measures to secure its own government, and to provide for its own revenues.

Before the close of the year the Methodists had erected a church—now the German Methodist's house of worship—and regular religious services were held. The work on the public improvements continued steadily through this and the next year, both of which were years of great prosperity here. A newspaper was established in 1839, which advertised the town, and by judicious use of his pen, the editor, Mr. Ford, attracted considerable attention to Peru. The autumns of 1838 and 1839 are yet remembered by the old residents of this and adjacent settlements as seasons of fever epidemics, which carried off many good citizens, and for a time cast a shade of gloom over the community.

By the year 1840, the State had borrowed itself out of all credit, and capitalists refused to advance any more money. It had not yet become a great producing center, and depended on the "Internal Improvements" to a great measure, for all subsistence. When this source was cut off, a panic resulted, the equal of which has never yet been seen. Unknown sums of money had been spent and not one public undertaking completed. Public and private credit were gone. The State, counties, towns, banks, corporations and individuals were alike bankrupt. The few who had hoarded money left the State, and emigration avoided it as if struck by a pestilence. No place experienced the general depression more sensibly than Peru. Dependent for support largely on the gangs of workmen upon the canal and railroad, when their trade was cut off, almost the whole source of income was stopped. In 1841, few men in town could raise five dollars in good money, and were compelled to transact all business by exchanging one product for another. Letters lay in the post office for months, from the inability of the persons to whom they were addressed to pay the postage. This embarrassment was not confined to individuals. Governor Ford has stated that he was often compelled to allow letters addressed to him on official business to remain in the office, his own means or credit, or that of the now prosperous State of Illinois not being sufficient to raise the postage. The town gradually lost most of its inhabitants, until, in 1842, not more than two hundred remained. One store, a drug store, the post office and two taverns were all that remained open to the public. All were reduced to a common level; all were poor. Thanks to a rich, productive soil, no danger from hunger was to be feared, and as hope was a prominent feature in the dispositions of the people, all looked for a time soon to come when prosperity would crown their efforts and be among them again.

Mr. T. D. Brewster's present dwelling was built in 1841, and also the store now occupied by A. L. Shepherd. As the trade in grain increased the need of a warehouse became evident, and in 1843 Mr. Brewster built one which stood below the present grist mill. The closing of work on the canal had the effect to increase the cultivation of the land, and before long signs of returning prosperity were evident. In February, 1841, the Legislature passed an act chartering the La Salle and Dixon railroad, giving to that corporation the right of way and materials belonging to the Central railroad between these two points. The leading spirit in this movement was a man named A. H. Bangs, who proved to be a worthless adventurer, without character or credit. After considerable work was done this was found out, and the enraged contractors, unable to pay their laborers or those who had furnished them victuals and other necessities of life, siezed Bangs and dragged him through the muddy streets of town, and, but for the timely interference of some citizens, would have taken his life.

This year, mainly through the liberality of Mr. Brewster, the second church was erected. It was constructed of stone, and presented to the Congregationalist society. The bell was donated by John C. Coffing, of Salisbury, Conn., father of Hon. Churchill Coffing, of this place. This same summer Peru was honored by a visit from Mr. Van Buren, then lately retired from the Presidency, accompanied by James K. Paulding, then late Secretary of the Navy. These distinguished men were making a tour of the Western States, and were everywhere received with ovations and public meetings.

On February 21st, 1843, "An Act to provide for the completion of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, and the payment of the canal debt," passed the State Legislature. Energetic measures were at once devised and put in motion for the completion of the great work. Much of the credit of this enterprise is due to Governor Ford, Senator Ryan, and Col. Oakley.

An improvement of Peru was at once manifest. Accessions to the population took place, additional buildings were soon in course of construction, and something of the old prosperity appeared. During the days of stagnation, the arrival of a down-river steamer was the important event. Crowds soon gathered on hearing its puff, and were rewarded by receiving the news and some accessions to their then depressed trade. The passengers on debarkation here, if bound for other Western posts, went generally to Chicago, by Frink, Walker & Co.'s stages, this route being the favorite one home to any Eastern State, as at Chicago they could go by the lakes to Buffalo, New York, and thence on.

Peru, in her earliest times, had aspired to be a county seat. The erection of a new county from La Salle, Bureau and Putnam Counties, was agitated, but strenuously resisted by the eastern part of La Salle County. All elections for county officers or to the State Legislature hinged upon this point, and for some time much feeling was engendered by this question. The completion of the canal and railroad, affording facilities for travel between the two places, mainly put a stop to further agitation.

up and concentrated here, and it was not an unusual sight in the autumn of the latter year to see teams, loaded with the year's produce, from a distance of eighty to a hundred miles, seeking a market, and returning loaded with merchandise purchased of the merchants. Stores and dwellings continued to be built, and the population to increase.

In 1847, the beautiful cemetery one mile north of town was laid out, by the Town Board, and improvements commenced thereon. The completion of the canal, the following spring, marks an era in the history of the town, and, indeed, of the State. Its effect upon Peru was not so marked and immediate as upon La Salle. Its favorable effects were more apparent here during the next two or three years, when the increased prosperity of the country reacted upon it. The travel, which had always centered at Peru, was now mainly drawn to La Salle. Although the waters of the canal and the Illinois River met at Peru, it was soon found that in consequence of the Steamboat and Canal Boat Basin being at La Salle, the practical junction was there, and the forwarding business, after a long and ineffectual struggle on the part of Peru to retain it, finally settled there. This year a substantial stone warehouse was erected on the river bank, near the present pivot bridge, by Mr. T. D. Brewster. The spring of 1849 was remarkable for one of the largest freshets ever known in the annals of the Illinois River. Heavy rains in January raised the waters to a great height, and a sudden freeze left a huge lake of ice over the bottoms. On this a heavy snow fell, and in March, the weather suddenly turning warm, and rains setting in, the waters on the 9th of that month were twenty-five feet above high-water mark. Large masses of ice, becoming suddenly loosened and borne down by the swollen and rushing river, crushed trees and houses in their course, destroying the warehouse before mentioned. This rise of the river is said to be the greatest within the memory of those now living along its borders.

In the spring of this year, this locality was visited by the cholera, and in April and May several citizens fell victims to the disease. On June 20th, it assumed a virulent character, and some hundreds were swept off in a few weeks. Many fled their homes. It suddenly ceased, and thenceforward the season was healthy. During the summer, Churchill Coffing erected the second warehouse in town, the grain trade having assumed vast proportions. In August the National Hotel burned. This was the largest and best building in town, and was the first serious loss by fire here.

By the year 1851, the population of the town was about three thousand, and steps were taken to secure a city government. On the 15th of March, Peru was incorporated as a city, embracing in its territory the south half of section 16, the southeast quarter of section 17, the northeast fractional quarter of section 20, and all of section 21 north of the river. The territory was somewhat less than that embraced in the borough, and was divided into two wards. The leading motive in petitioning for a charter undoubtedly was to enable the city to issue bonds on account of railroad subscriptions. At the election held in April, T. D. Brewster was chosen Mayor, Geo. W. Gilson and Jacob S. Miller, Councilmen for the First ward, and Erasmus Winslow and John Morris, for the Second ward. The whole number of votes cast was one hundred and ninety-six.

The question of issuing bonds on account of subscription to the stock of the Rock Island & La Salle railroad—the charter being amended to continue the road to Chicago—was submitted to a vote of the people of the town on May 17th and unanimously endorsed. On the 22d of February, 1852, the charter having been again amended, and the road denominated the Chicago & Rock Island Railroad Company, the question of issuing $40,000 worth of ten per cent. bonds was again voted, that sum to include the $25,000 previously given. Work was commenced on the line that winter and vigorously prosecuted. During the winter, the charter of the Illinois Railroad Company was granted. The lands formerly ceded by Congress were donated to this company, upon condition that they would construct a road from the mouth of the Ohio river to the junction of the canal with the Illinois river at Peru.

The people of the town supposed that it would terminate at the pier head, where the waters of the canal and river unite. The company, however, proceeded to construct a bridge across the river at the mouth of the Little Vermillion, a mile and a half above. This drew forth a vigorous protest from the citizens, which was sent to the company's offices and to the authorities at Washington. It produced no results, and the company proceeded with their work. This gave to LaSalle an additional advantage over Peru by way of the north and south trade.

On Feb. 5, 1850, the Peru and Grandetour Plank Road Company was organized. By September, 1851, so much of the road was completed as to justify the taking of tolls. It was afterwards completed to Arlington, Bureau county, and partially graded to La Moille. This road brought a great amount of trade to Peru, and while it was maintained in a good condition was a constant gain to the town. It was intended to complete it to Grandetour, on Rock river, but a lack of funds and the commencement of the railroads superceded its value, and it was afterwards abandoned.

During the summer of 1852 the cholera made its appearance again, and with increased violence. While it was raging in other localities, Peru remained healthy; but, suddenly making its appearance here, the order was reversed and the town was devastated to an extent not surpassed by any locality in the United States. It is estimated that between five and six hundred persons lost their lives from this scourge at this time, or nearly one-sixth of the population of the town. But few cases occurred in after years, and the town has since been noted for its healthfulness.

Throughout the years 1852 and 1853, work was pushed rapidly forward on the railroad, so that by April of the latter year it was completed as far as Rock Island—then the end of the route—and cars began running. This brought additional impulse to the growth of the town, which by this time had a population, despite the ravages of the cholera, of over three thousand.

In January, 1855, the new Market-house and City Hall were completed, at a cost of about $12,000. A democratic paper was established by J. L. McCormick and Guy Hulett in the building owned by Mr. McCormick. It was the oldest brick structure in town, having been erected in 1839, and was burned in August, 18—. On Jan. 7, 1855, the Hoffman House was destroyed by burning, and on the 26th of the following September the extensive chair factory of Geo. B. Willis suffered the same fate. Mr. Willis was a blind man, but by unbounded energy and labor, had established this shop and was then employing fifty hands. The loss completely broke him down. The chimney of his factory may yet be seen standing near the depot buildings. About the beginning of this year, one of the most serious fires in the history of the town occurred—the burning of two large, three-story stone stores on Water street. They, with most of their contents, were wholly destroyed.

In order to facilitate exchange business, the Bank of Peru was established this summer. It remained in business until 1864, when it was merged into the present national Bank, now one of the soundest institutions in Illinois.

In 1854, the Chambers House was built by a stock company, at an expense of $24,000. It is yet the leading hotel of the town. The plow works were established in 1851, by Tuller, Dodge & Pitts. In 1855 they went into the hands of Augustus Guibor, who three years after sold to Mr. T. D. Brewster. In 1868 Job Dodge became a partner, and the following June the entire manufactory was destroyed by fire, involving a loss of $80,000 on which an insurance of $15,000 was realized. They were at once rebuilt. There are now employed about one hundred hands, and about 20,000 plows are made annually.

The railroad company erected a round-house at this place, which in May of 1856 was burned. It has since been rebuilt. In February, 1857, by an act of the Legislature, the limits of the city were extended to include all of sections 16 and 17, giving an area to the city of 1,462 acres.

On the 11th of October, the foundry and machine shops of Fitzsimmons & Beebe were destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $16,500, and throwing thirty or forty men out of employment. This has since been replaced by the shops of Brunner & Snow. Since these disasters enumerated, and the recovery therefrom, the growth of Peru has been rapid and continuous, the city now containing about four thousand, five hundred inhabitants.

MANUFACTURING AND BUSINESS INTERESTS.

The plow works, the largest manufactory in the city, have already been noticed. The manufacture of zinc is carried on quite extensively, here and at LaSalle. The Illinois Zinc Company of Peru, whose works occupy about five acres of ground in the eastern part of town, employ one hundred and twenty-five hands, and make two thousand tons of spelter annually. A foundry has been in successful operation several years. Some twenty years ago the manufacture of pottery, in a small way, was begun. About two years ago the shops were enlarged and repaired, and are now quite prosperous. The city is supplied with gas, the making of which is one of her most profitable industries.

The manufacture of beer is carried on quite extensively by two large breweries. The oldest of these, the Union Beer Company, began operations about twenty-five years ago, by a man named Kaiser. After many changes, it passed into the hands of the present owners, who enlarged it, and brought the quality of beer made to its present standard. They make about one hundred barrels per day. Hebel & Brunner's brewery has been in successful operation four or five years, and is now doing a good business. The grist-mill of M. Young & Co. is in continual operation. The proprietors handle thousands of bushels of grain, they and other buyers shipping largely to St. Louis by way of the river.

The earliest settlers discovered coal in this locality. It was not, however, until about 1855 that active preparations began for the purpose of mining it. That year a thorough examination was made by J. G. Norwood, State Geologist, of the great central coal fields of Illinois, which demonstrated the existence of three veins or strata underlying an area of five hundred square miles. Immediately after operations began in the immediate vicinity of LaSalle, and soon after the great zinc works were built. These were started as an outcome of the cheap fuel obtained there. One shaft, just west of Peru, now within the city limits, was sunk, and is still operated in an extensive manner. Two other shafts have been added within a few years, and are now in successful operation.

For over fifteen years a large trade in ice has been carried on in Peru. A most excellent quality of this crystal luxury is obtained in the river and bayous. There are upwards of twenty ice houses situated along the river and bayous south of the city. What ice is not needed for home consumption is shipped south, much of it to New Orleans. The different companies have in use about forty barges, which carry from 300 to 3,000 tons each. The total amount of ice stored annually averages 125,000 tons. This gives employment to five or six hundred men during the packing season.

SOCIAL INTERESTS.

The city sustains six churches, good graded schools, several musical and literary societies, a number of lodges, a branch of the Y. M. C. A., and an excellent local newspaper. The oldest church in town is the Methodist, which organized in 1838, and in the fall of that year erected a church, which they used until 1854, when it was sold to the German Methodists, who had a few years before organized a religious society. The Methodists then erected a commodious edifice, for which they contracted a debt of $2,000, and becoming unable to pay it, sold their building to the school board, who remodeled it and opened the high school therein. The congregation becoming reduced in numbers disbanded, and did not attempt to sustain services, until in December, 1870, when they reorganized with twenty-four members. They met for worship in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, which they afterwards purchased and now occupy. The Catholics have two good churches here. They have been organized some time, and are well attended. The Lutherans support one organization. The pastor is Rev. Wm. Luer. The Congregationalists were established in November, 1837, a few years after a class of the Methodist Church had been formed. The Congregationalists are the oldest continuous congregation in Peru. The Methodists had a station here and on the Little Vermillion as early as 1834 or 1835. Some of their ministers were here as early as 1832. The Congregationalists were organized at Rockwell on December 27th, 1837, with five members, whose names were Dixwell and Esther Lathrop, Dr. Townsend Seeley, Frances T. Seeley and Ira Kiddle. The settlement there being broken up by sickness, they came to Peru, and worshipped in Dr. Seeley's house and other places, until 1841, when they entered the old stone church already described. Here they remained until 1853, when they occupied the basement of their present house of worship, which was completed three years later. They now sustain a large church and Sunday school, and are under the ministry of Rev. G. S. Bascom. The Y. M. C. A. was organized in October, 1875, with seven members. Through the liberality of Mr. Wm. L. Huse, they occupy a free room in his building. They have a library of five hundred volumes, donated them by the citizens of the town. Mr. Wm. Ware is president, and Mr. S. S. Booth secretary of the association.

SCHOOLS.

The first schools of Peru were private. This was the custom in all new towns before an organization. Some one would gather together the few children in the village and instruct them a few months in the year. The first effort for a public school was the erection of a small brick building, built near the present high school, about the year 1840. When this became too small, others were rented in different parts of town, to accommodate the increasing juvenile population. A Mr. Baldwin erected a building for an academy, but the adventure not proving successful, he sold the building to the school trustees. The Catholics have also established schools here, but they, as well as any other private institution, were unable to cope with the growing public school. The large brick structure used as the high school, and primary school for that ward, was built by the Methodists for a church, in 1855. Finding themselves unable to pay the debt upon it, they sold it to the school board, who converted it into a school building. The fourth ward school house was burned in the fall of 1871, and the next summer the present four-roomed brick erected. There are now five schools in town, all under one Superintendent. Mr. G. B. Stockdale, who came here about seven years ago from Philadelphia, and organized the schools on the plan adopted and in use there. Sixteen teachers are employed whose wages range from $300 to $1,600 per annum. The high school has a good library and philosophical apparatus, and a piano costing $700, contributed by the citizens.

THE PRESS.

In 1839, Geo. W. Holley started the Ninewa Gazette. It was discontinued two years later. In 1846, the Beacon Light was established by Nash and Elliott. The name was afterwards changed to the Junction Beacon. Holbrook and Underhill began in 1850 the publication of the Democrat, and in 1853, J. and N. Linton began to issue the Chronicle. It was continued till 1856, a daily paper being published during part of the time. The Sentinel was started in 1855, by McCormick and Hulett, in the oldest brick building in town, afterwards destroyed by fire. In 1858, the Commercial and Volks Freund, a German paper, was established. Since that time many changes have occurred in journalism in Peru. The Herald is the only one printed now. It is an excellent local sheet, under the direct management of Mr. W. B. Tapley.

MENDOTA.

The thriving city of Mendota is the result of the crossing of the Illinois Central and C., B. & Q. railroads. About the close of the summer of 1853, the Central road was completed this far, and by October or November the C., B. & Q. The site of Mendota was then an unbroken prairie. The settlement had all been made about the groves surrounding it, and the prairie, now rich and productive, was then considered worthless and unfit for occupancy. Several settlers, among whom were D. D. Giles and others, were watching the course of the survey to see where the crossing would be made, and determined to immediately occupy that ground and commence a town. This was known in the spring of 1853, and Mr. Giles, then a merchant at Homer, erected a building for a general store on what is now the west side of the street, opposite the depot. This was the first building erected on the site of Mendota. During the summer, the brick warehouse was erected by the railroad companies. This was the first brick structure in town. The present passenger house and hotel was commenced that summer and completed some time the following spring. Mr. Pelton was appointed agent. While the workmen were constructing this and the warehouse, they purchased the greater part of their food and clothing of Mr. Stiles, crossing from the buildings to the store, what is now Main street, then grown high with grass, and affording excellent pasture. Mr. T. B. Blackstone, engineer for the Central railroad, laid out the town on section thirty-three, in township thirty-six, north of range one, east of the third principal meridian. He had purchased the south half of the section, another part was owned by the Central Railroad company, and the remainder by John West. The present express office is on the exact center of the section, and from its location the surveys were made. Mr. Blackstone, now prominently connected with the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis railroad, did much to aid in the growth of the town. During the summer, while the railroad was being constructed, John Kelley erected a small frame house, and in it opened the primitive hotel of town. A man named Cheek opened a saloon, a shop or two was added and the town was becoming a reality. Mr. Giles, through the aid of John Wentworth, obtained a post office here, and was appointed postmaster. The railroad company claimed the right of naming all stations on their line, hence the number of Indian names. This place was known as the "Junction," and the company gave to it the Indian name "MENDOTA," meaning "connection" or "joined to." It was applied by the aborigines to the junction of rivers, and was the name given by them, more especially to the junction of the St. Peters river with the Mississippi, just below the falls of St. Anthony.

The two railway corporations had gangs of men working on all points from Mendota. These obtained their goods here, and the settlers in the groves about the junction came here with their produce, and getting goods in exchange soon made a brisk trade. The enterprising spirits then in business quickly saw the town that must arise, and though many of them had vague ideas of the practical use of a railroad, thinking passenger traffic would be the main business and that it would aid them in their efforts to erect a town, they exerted all means in their power to create a large place.

Hence, during the winter of 1853-'4 and the summer following, an unprecedented growth was seen. Nothing was heard but the sound of carpenter's tools, and by the autumn of 1854 the population was nearly one thousand. That summer the brewery was started by Dietrich Volk; as the location of town was low and wet, he fitted up a cellar at Homer, where he stored his beer.

A drug store was opened by Haass and Erb, on the corner of Main and Jefferson streets. It is now occupied by Max A. F. Haass. This same time Dr. Gorham opened another drug store in a building north of Wilson's scales. A meat market was established in the autumn of 1853 by Longdon & Douglass, and in 1854 a second was opened by Tompkins & Peart.

The first hotel of town has been noticed. It was built by John Kelley in 1853, and was sold to Mrs. Shedd the next summer. The depot hotel was erected during the winter of 1853-'4, and was opened by Mr. Pelton in May of the latter year. The German House was built by G. Pohl in 1854, and was moved in 1867 to make room for his block. John Hess erected the Humboldt House during the summer of 1854, and kept it until a few years ago. A hotel was built immediately after the completion of the Mendota House, by a Mr. Conklin, on the lot now used for Kuney's lumber yard.

Finding the town was not coming that way, Mr. Conklin soon moved his building to the spot now occupied by Kellenberger's office. It was afterwards known as Reed's Hotel, and was burned in 1862. Mr. Fuhrman came to the village in the summer of 1853, and opened a harness shop. As business then was not good, owing to the custom of using oxen, he soon sold and removed to Minnesota, where he remained till 1857, when he returned and has been in business since.

In the summer of 1854, a trade in lumber was started, and for some years was the most important branch of business in town.

The rapid increase of settlers during the winter of 1853 and the summer following led the residents to see the need of a town government. In the spring of 1855, meetings were held agitating the question, and before June an election for Town Trustees was held, which resulted in the choice of the following gentlemen: J. H. Adams, Sampson Lamb, U. B. Gollday, C. H. Johnson, and D. G. Bly. The first mentioned of these was chosen President of the Board at their preliminary meeting on June 28th, and the last named was elected Clerk. The first meeting of this board for business was held on July 6th, when the boundaries of the town were defined, ordinances were passed for the granting of licenses, grading of streets, and their limits, for the collection of taxes, making of sidewalks, etc. The limits of the village, then containing some three or four hundred inhabitants, were declared to be the sectional lines of section 33, which would accord with the survey of Mr. Blackstone, when he platted the town. This original plat has since received several additions. During the summer of 1855, building went on with great rapidity. The practical benefits of the railroads were being felt; it was discovered they could carry freight as well as passengers, and if not as cheaply as the canal, much quicker. The active minds of the early settlers were ready for any move in their interest, and Mendota was fast growing in population, business and wealth.

Stores of every kind were being erected and occupied, while mechanics' shops arose on almost every street corner.

During the war, the town was an exceptionably good shipping point. By the Illinois Central Railroad large quantities of army supplies were sent South, and from the commencement of the war until 1866 the population more than doubled.

In 1865, Tewksbury & Carpenter established the present organ manufactory. They then occupied but one room, and employed but few hands. In 1875, a stock company, with a capital of $100,000, was formed, and the present works occupied. They now employ over one hundred hands, and sell several thousand instruments annually.

The Union Mills were erected at Troy Grove in 1859, by Mr. John Gregg. In 1864, he removed them to Mendota, and has now an extensive business.

The Eagle Mills were built several years ago, by Frank Kortick, who used the building for a carpenter shop. In 1870, it was purchased by Mr. Linsott, who converted it into a mill.

The Mendota Bank was organized as early as 1856 but the resident partner moving to Chicago two years after, the business of the bank was gradually wound up, by Mr. G. M. Price. In 1860, Kelsey & Price reorganized the bank, and continued until 1871, when Mr. Kelsey retired and Mr. Erlenborn took his place, and remained until 1874, when Mr. Price assumed control, and conducted its affairs until the present summer, when he closed up the business to enter another branch of trade. The First National Bank was organized in 1865, with a capital of $65,000. Col. E. A. Bowen was chosen President, and E. W. Fassett, Cashier. The first year Mr. Fassett resigned, and Mr. Gifford was elected to the vacancy. Mr. Bowen and Mr. Gifford are still connected with the institution. In 1873, the stock was increased to $125,000, and the bank is now one of the strongest in the State. The Germania Bank was established in 1874, by A. & J. M. Erlenborn, with John Goedtner as Cashier. The bank is now doing a good business.

The oil works of H. S. Clark & Co. were established in 1869, by Mr. Wells. They are now enjoying an extensive trade.

An excellent planing mill was started here in 1866, and another added a few years ago. Two cigar manufactories are in operation, and two wholesale liquor stores, while a large number of saloons are supported.

One year ago, a button factory was established, by a company representing a capital of $8,000. Mr. Herrick is Superintendent and General Manager. The company have established a good trade.

In addition to these industries mentioned the city supports a large number of stores and shops of all kinds, and the trade of Mendota in all its branches must aggregate an immense yearly sum of money.

The population by the winter of 1866 was fully two thousand, and steps were taken to secure a city government under the general State law. The election to decide this step was held on March 4th, 1867, at which time 238 votes were cast in favor of the city corporation and 64 against. On the 11th the board of trustees met for the last time, divided the city into four wards and defined their boundaries, and provided for an election to choose city officers to be held on April 9th. On this date Boyd Lowe was elected Mayor; George Guy, City Clerk; Thomas Forester, City Marshal; E. A. Bowen, Treasurer; D. Y. Lowd, Assessor and Collector; D. A. Cook, Attorney, and Jacob Nisley Supervisor. The aldermen for the first ward were Wm. Wyrick, Geo. M. Price, and Frank Meisenbach; for the second ward they were E. A. Bowen, Wm. Van Vleit, and Frank R. Jewell; for the third, J. W. Edwards, Perley Stone, and Patrick Dunn; and for the fourth, John Gilman, G. W. Jones, and J. M. Hall.

The city government was now complete and is yet maintained. This form of rule was an additional source of gain to Mendota, as by it enterprising citizens were in a measure assured of aid in the management of large business interests.

SCHOOLS.

The schools have, like the town, sprung rapidly into existence. The earliest school in town was held in a small frame structure, erected in 1854 on the site of the present City Hall. The rapid growth of the town necessitated the erection of an additional house, and a similar edifice was erected in the eastern part of town. In 1858 more room was demanded, and the present City Hall was built. This, with the aid of a few small houses rented for temporary use, supplied the necessary room until 1867, when the present commodious school house on the east side was completed. The next year that on the west side was finished. These cost about $55,000, and are an ornament to the city. Several small one-room buildings have been erected in parts of town convenient to the residents to accommodate the small pupils, who are instructed a year or two in these when too small to go the distance required to attend the large buildings. Thirteen teachers are employed. Several private academies and schools have been opened from time to time in town, but the increased growth of the public schools superceded these, and they finally abandoned the attempts to establish their schools.

CHURCHES.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in the old school house, already described, on August 26th, 1855, with five members. They were William and Anna Smith, Hannah B. Fisk, Mr. Scullen, and James McDowell. The two latter are the only ones yet communicants here. The organization was made by Rev. John Fleming and Rev. C. R. Fisk. In June, 1856, the first pastor, Rev. James S. Henderson, was settled here, and remained until 1861, when his death occurred. He was succeeded by Rev. Robert C. Colmery, and he by Rev. S. H. Weller. At present Rev.

N. S. Dickey is supplying the pulpit. They worshipped in the school house a short time, and then in the present Library Hall. In 1856 they completed their present house of worship, which they have since used. The membership is now one hundred and sixty, and the attendance at Sunday school very good. Since the organization until the present time four hundred and ten persons have been admitted to membership in this church. In 1866 nineteen were received from the Second Presbyterian Church, which that year united with this congregation.

In 1855 the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized with about twelve members, two of whom, James Kenworthy and Nancy Bates, are still communicants. They were organized in the old school house, where all the denominations met, and where they had one Sunday school in common. Here the Methodist society worshipped a few months, and then went to Hasting's Hall, where they organized their Sunday school, and elected Rev. Wm. Edwards, now an old man, and an early resident of Mendota, its superintendent. In 1857 or 1858 they erected their church edifice which they yet occupy. Their first pastor was Rev. U. P. Golliday, who presided at the organization. The present pastor is Rev. F. A. Reed. There are now one hundred and sixty members, and an attendance of two hundred scholars at the Sunday school.

The Church of the Holy Cross, German Catholic, was organized in the school house, about 1858, with seventeen families. The priest was Father Murphy, who had also organized the Irish Catholics in 1854. They met in various places until 1869, when they completed a house of worship, a very commodious brick structure, costing about $8,000, which they now occupy. Their membership includes about ninety families, and a Sunday school of over fifty scholars. The priest is Father Cronaur. The Irish Catholic congregation is one of the oldest in Mendota. As soon the labor on the railroads made this a central point, Father Murphy came and organized a church. This was early in 1854. They had then about fifty members, and met for service wherever they could find a room. In 1858 or 1859 they erected their present house of worship, and now have a good Sunday school, and a membership of over one hundred.

The Baptist church is the largest in Mendota, numbering at present two hundred and eighty-seven members, and a Sunday-school of nearly three hundred pupils. This congregation was organized October 28, 1854, at the house of Rev. N. Denison, with six members. These were Rev. Denison, Moses Dix, Richard and Orson Waste, Reuben Spencer and George A. Richmond. In a few days eleven others united, making seventeen persons in all. They met for divine service in the public school house, then in a ware house, and next in a hall, until the completion of their house of worship. This was erected in 1856, and used until 1869, when the growth of the congregation necessitated a larger one, and the present structure was erected. The old one was added to its rear, and is used as a lecture room. The Rev. Denison lived only one month after the organization. His successors here have been Rev. S. B. Gilbert, fourteen years; Rev. W. M. Haigh, four and one-half years; Rev. T. T. Potter, two years, and the present pastor, Rev. T. M. Colwell, who is now serving his second year.

The German Evangelical church was organized in 1867, with about twenty members. Their earliest meetings were held in the school house and in private houses. In 1868, they erected the house of worship they now occupy. The membership has increased to over eighty, and the Sunday school attendance to something over that number, the Rev. Charles Lindemann is the present pastor.

The German Lutheran Church was organized in the spring of 1858, in a public hall, with thirty-five members, by the Rev. Hilldenbrend. They met here about one year, when they completed a church edifice, which they occupied until 1867, when they built their present structure. The old church is used for a German school building. The membership is now about the same as when organized. The Sunday school contains about seventy pupils. The Rev. Mr. Hampelmann is the present pastor.

The United Brethren church is the youngest religious organization in town. It was organized in July, 1875, with nine members. These were Daniel Faler and wife, A. Shouk and wife, J. and Mrs. Billings, Archey Williams and Rev. U. D. Wood and wife. The first pastor was Rev. J. G. Designer, who remained until the autumn of 1876, when he was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. C. Wendle. There are now about fifty members and a Sunday school of over one hundred scholars. This congregation purchased the church built by the New School Presbyterians, and soon after purchased by the Congregationalists, when the Presbyterian churches were united, who, not being able to sustain an organization here, sold their church and disbanded the congregation.

THE GERMAN LUTHERAN SEMINARY.

This institution is about one mile east of the Mendota depot, and was opened about three years ago by the German Lutherans, who started at that time a Theological Seminary. The building was erected in 1856, for a Female Seminary, and for some time a good school was maintained. The Lutheran church, under whose care it was fostered, removed the endowment, and the institution went down. It remained closed until the German Lutherans purchased the building at the time mentioned, and opened their present school. A good attendance is now maintained, and the seminary is in a flourishing condition. In 1857, the Lutherans opened a church here and erected the present house of worship. When the College passed into the control of the German Lutherans, they gained also the church which is now conducted in connection with the Seminary, divine services generally being conducted by the College professors. Both College and church is a credit to Mendota.

MENDOTA PUBLIC LIBRARY.

This is one of the most prominent and potent educators of the town. The project of establishing a library was discussed by the more prominent citizens for some time before the year 1870, but not till this time did it receive an active form. On April 27th, 1870, Mrs. Maria Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Smith, Miss A. L. John, Miss Mary Crocker, Dr. Woodbridge, Wm. Edwards, E. A. Bowen, Joseph Hunter and Dr. J. A. Hoffman, met to consider the question and to decide upon some line of action. On May 7th, they met again, and the Mendota Library Association was formed, with a capital of one hundred dollars, and a charter obtained. Seven trustees were appointed, of whom Dr. J. A. Hoffman was made President, James Hunter, Secretary, and E. A. Bowen, Treasurer. By means of festivals, a course of lectures and other means, money was raised to obtain the first installment of books. In the winter of 1873, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Graves, who had been warm friends of the Library cause, came forward, and very generously presented, the Association with the proceeds of the sale of a farm, two thousand dollars cash, and a mortgage, bearing interest, of seven hundred dollars. In addition to this, they gave a deed to the Library building and lot, the entire donation being valued at about $6,000. This munificent gift met with a response from the Lecture Association, who gave all their funds, $150, and from the Mendota Lyceum, who gave theirs, $100. A committee was at once appointed and sent to Chicago, who purchased seventeen hundred books, and on their return the Library building was put in order and formerly opened on September 8th, 1874. They were then free of debt, and had about $700 bearing interest, and the membership had grown to about forty. The memberships were placed at five dollars each, and entitles the person to life privileges and the free use of the books. There are now over two thousand volumes on the shelves, and nearly two hundred members enjoying the privilege of reading them. The librarian is Mr. L. D. Moody. The building is open every Tuesday and Saturday.

THE PRESS.

The pioneer paper of Mendota was the Mendota Press, the first number of which was issued June 26, 1855, by C. R. Fisk, editor and proprietor. He afterwards sold to the Andrews Brothers, who ran it a short time and sold it to a Princeton firm. They soon sold it to a Mr. Bond, who changed the name to the Observer. Mr. Bond sold to Crooker & Beck, who, after running it one year, closed the office. After it had remained closed a year and a half, Mr. Crooker sold the office to Mr. Ruggles in 1863, who changed the name to the Bulletin, which paper he still publishes.

A paper called the Chronicle was started in 1869, by Snell & Merrill. F. D. Ford soon afterwards purchased Merrill's interest, and a little later Snell's. In 1870, he consolidated with the Bulletin, where he remained until 1874, when he started the News, which on Dec. 26, 1876, was purchased by the present editor, Wm. Parker.

In 1858 a German paper, called the Mendota Democrat, was started by Frank Meisenbach and G. Pool; the next year they sold to an Ottawa firm, who took it to that city.

Some time before the war a paper was started by Mr. Fisk, called the Times. Mr. Fisk, being a warm sympathizer with the south, was compelled one night in 1861, by a company drumming for recruits, to make a speech and to run up the stars and stripes. In June his paper collapsed.

The city of Mendota, being at the junction and being the terminus of a branch of the C., B. & Q., enjoys excellent privileges as a shipping point. The trade of the city extends over much territory, and absorbs the choice trade of the small towns adjacent to it, to many of which it sells goods by the wholesale.

STREATOR.

Perhaps no city, town or village in the State of Illinois, outside of the great city of Chicago, presents an instance of such rapid and substantial growth as the city of Streator. From a single small grocery house, established in 1861 by John O'Neil, for the convenience and accommodation of the miners of the vicinity, and which was the only trading place for a period of several years, the name "Scrabble," by which the locality was then known, has grown to be a city of 6,000 prosperous and intelligent people. Churches, school-houses, large, substantial business houses and handsome residences, with elegant grounds and surroundings, now beautify the waste of ten years ago, while the hum of machinery and thronged streets are unmistakable evidences of business importance and prosperity. The genii, if the term may be employed, that has caused this city to spring up in a night, is the rich beds of coal that underlie all this section, touched by the magic hand of Colonel Ralph Plumb, who came here about the year 1866, as the representative of a company of eastern capitalists whose attention had been attracted hitherward by the rich coal deposits. Large tracts of land were purchased, and measures inaugurated for the development of this coal field, that, up to that time, had been but imperfectly worked. Backed by a large capital, and managed by sagacious minds like Dr. Streator, President of the company, and Col. Plumb, Business Manager, "Scrabble" soon had to scrabble away and give place to Streator, named in honor of the President of the company.

In 1866, the line of the Fox River Division of the C. B. & Q. railroad was surveyed, and work at once commenced. In the year following, the building of the road was completed and put in operation. In 1867 the town site was laid off, and from the fall of that year to the coming of the financial panic that has so oppressed the country for the last three years, its growth was almost marvelous.

In 1870 the building of the Dwight Division of the Chicago and Alton railroad was commenced and completed in a few months. The Chicago, Pekin and Southwestern came next, and was soon followed by the undertaking of the Chicago and Paducah road, thus giving Streator railroad advantages possessed by probably no other town in the State.

The building of these several roads served to enhance the value of the mining interests, as they increased the demand, as well as to offer facilities for transportation that brought the Streator coal-fields within easy reach of the manufacturing and coal-consuming centers of the entire country; and to-day the coal of these mines is known and approved throughout the country. Eight different coal-shafts are in operation. Of these, six are operated by farmers in the vicinity of Streator, and two by regularly organized companies. It is estimated that the mines hereabouts give employment to 1,200 miners, while the Vermillion Coal and Mining Company has frequently paid to miners and other operatives as much as $33,500 per month for labor. It is further estimated that the amounts paid out by the other mines would swell the amount to $40,000 per month, or a grand total of $480,000 per annum. The coal deposits are inexhaustible, and the yield pronounced of superior quality wherever it has been used. The large amount of money employed in operating these mines served to attract the attention of capitalists and business men of various classes, and this, in turn, to accelerate the growth of the city, until now it ranks in business importance among the best towns and cities of the country. The country around has kept pace with the growth of the city until in all that goes to make a people prosperous and happy this community are peculiarly favored.

Streator, under its present municipal organization, was incorporated in 1874. Soon after its charter issued a city election was held, resulting in the choice of the following officers: Trustees—Samuel W. Plumb, Dennis Fogarty, C. W. Schoonover, F. Eades, James Jones and John Cotton. Clerk—D. B. Little. At the first meeting of the Board of Trustees, Samuel Plumb was elected President.

O. H. Head was the first Police Justice; James Foster the Village Constable; J. Clayton, Night Police; Frank Ames, Street Commissioner; O. Chubbick, Village Attorney, and W. H. Pilche, Village Treasurer.

The present trustees are—D. B. Little, President; F. McGrath, D. McVean, E. Cope, W. H. H. Mulford and B. St. Clair. M. A. Braison Clerk. Warren Rockwood, Village Constable; Patrick Finney and E. G. Ball, Night Police; W. S. Gates, Treasurer; Dennis Fogarty, Street Commissioner; C. W. Keller, Attorney; Z. S. Craecroft, Police Justice.

At the last election for village officers, 900 votes were polled.

CHURCHES.

There are ten regularly organized churches in Streator, all of whom worship in respectable church edifices. The first church building was erected by Rev. Mr. — High, who was an early pioneer of Presbyterianism in this part of Illinois. He was a bachelor, and a man of wealth, as well as of piety and worth. In 1869, he purchased a square of ground and erected a small building which he used as a house of worship. In 1872, Mr. High built an addition to his primitive church building and commenced holding regular services, the services previously held being irregular, or at stated intervals. Rev. J. A. Ewalt is the present pastor of the church thus founded.

In 1869, Elder Leroy Woods, C. P., came to Streator, and without a dollar to his name, (having lost all in Missouri, during the rebellion,) commenced to labor among the people of his faith, and in 1870, laid the plans and commenced the erection of a house of worship, which was completed and dedicated in 1871. This was the first house of worship dedicated by any branch of the Church of God, in the city of Streator. Elder Wood was succeeded in his ministerial duties by Rev. J. Ewalt, who still remains as pastor.

The next church building erected was by the M. E. people in 1872, which was undertaken by Rev. Mr. Bently, then stationed at Streator, through appointment of the annual conference of his church. Rev. G. W. Gue is the present pastor.

Hardly had the Methodist people completed their building, when the Christians erected a very handsome church edifice, in which regular services have since been held. Elder N. S. Bastian is the present pastor.

The United Brethren, under the management of Rev. Mr. Hay, erected a church edifice in 1873, in which the pulpit is now supplied by Rev. Joel Corley.

The Catholic people commenced building in 1871, but did not complete their building until 1875. Rev. J. B. McDonough is in charge of this people.

The Protestant Episcopalians occupy a house commenced under missionary enterprise in 1874, but not yet fully completed. A handsome parsonage is built adjoining, Rev. J. R. Holst, pastor.

The German Evangelical Church of North Streator is represented by a good congregation, that worships in a good house. Rev. Wm. Schnslee, pastor.

The Baptist people worship in a handsome brick edifice, and are in a prosperous condition, erected within the last few years. Rev. E. F. Carnahan, pastor.

The Primitive Methodist are also represented, and have regular Sunday services.

The aggregate membership of the protestant churches is estimated at from 800 to 1,000, and the value of their church property at $50,000.

The schools are in a flourishing condition. There are three good school houses, the first of which was erected in 1869, since when, the growth of the city and increase of the population demanded the erection of others, and even these three buildings are inadequate to the demand, and rooms are rented to temporarily supply the deficiency. Prof. Lakin is superintendent.

THE PRESS.

A people of enterprise, from the earliest days of the beginning of Streator, they did not lose sight of the importance and power of the newspaper press, in guiding and directing all questions affecting their best interests, and with commendable liberality give living support to three good weekly newspapers. The oldest of these newspapers is the Monitor, which was established in October, 1869, by Fred. D. Dalton and J. D. Dalton. It is Republican in politics, and has ably seconded every legitimate undertaking for the promotion of the public good of its locality. In March, 1873, it passed into the hands of W. W. Bean, its present manager.

The Free Press was established in July, 1873, by Irving Carner and W. W. Bean, under the firm name of Carner & Bean. They were succeeded by J. H. Clark, who, in a short time after his purchase of the office, associated with him in the publication of the paper, Mr. Walter Hoge, to whom he subsequently sold his entire interest. Early in the present year, Mr. Hoge sold an interest in the establishment to Mr. John Fornof, and the firm now is Hoge & Fornof. The Free Press is Democratic.

The Pioneer was established in June, 1875, by J. D. Rutan, with F. D. Dalton, as editor. Its present manager is W. H. Gale.

MARSEILLES.

The first settlers within the present limits of Marseilles were Wm. and Wm. W. Richey, father and son, who in the winter of 1831 began an improvement in the ravine where coal was first successfully mined in 1854. For a number of years the creek bore Mr. Richey's name, but the locality is now known as "Grim's" ravine.

There were no other settlers until 1832, when Ephraim Sprague erected a dwelling and saw-mill, as well as built a dam across the slough, now the head and tail-race of the Land and Water Power Co. The dwelling stood near the present office of Mr. Newton Ward, the saw-mill where the wheel-house of the Marseilles Manufacturing Company now stands, and the dam in the slough, a few feet west of the present bridge, across the head race at Richard's mill, the water being turned into the slough by a wing dam extending diagonally across the river from the west end of the island to about the vicinity of the Morgan estate, on the north bank.

Mr. Sprague was succeeded by Lovel Kimbal, who settled here in 1834. He perceived the ultimate importance of the locality as a manufacturing point, and determined to get control of the water power as well as the land about it. He bought out Sprague, whom he had forced to sell, and who left this part of the country vowing vengeance on the purchaser for, as he claims, some irregularity in the transaction. He succeeded in buying the other claims; indeed, the records at Ottawa show that he has, at some time, owned nearly every piece of land in this part of the country. Under the stimulus of his energy Marseilles, in 1836, became an objective point for emigration. A company was chartered in 1836, called the Marseilles Manufacturing Co., whose first directors were, Hon. Guerdon S. Hubbard, one of the first canal commissioners, Dr. Robert P. Woodworth, Hon. James H. Woodworth, Lovel Kimbal and Augustus (A. D.) Butterfield. The capital stock was $200,000, and duration twenty-five years. A line of stages was put upon the road, and a town started, the plat of which had been recorded June 1st, 1835. It was called Marseilles from the fancies of the proprietor, Mr. Kimbal, who also gave some curious names to its streets, a few of which may be mentioned, as follows: Heckley, Valdivia, Mohican, etc.

A dam was erected across the river, just west of the one of Mr. Sprague, and a saw-mill put in operation. It contained two sash saws, and a lath and shingle mill. This dam went out and was replaced by another, at the north end of which a very large gristmill was also built, that at the time was said to be far ahead of any thing in the west. It was burned April 14th, 1842 by an incendiary, believed by Mr. Kimbal to have been Ephraim Sprague. The Illinois Mutual Insurance Co., who held a policy on the property, refused to pay the loss, because one of their by-laws specified that no director of the company was permitted to take risks. Mr. Woodworth, who was a director in both companies, had taken the risk, and consequently this vitiated the policy. At least, the company never received anything from it, and broke up, Mr. Hubbard becoming interested in other occupations, Dr. Woodworth going to La-Salle, where he died of an accidental gunshot wound a few years later, Hon. James H. Woodworth moving to Chicago, where he was afterwards elected mayor, and subsequently a member of Congress, finally dying at Evanston some years since, Mr. Augustus Butterfield bought a farm and has since resided about here, and Mr. Kimbal never afterwards engaged in any important work, dying in the fall of 1848 of cholera.

At the close of his administration, president Martin Van Buren, while making a trip through the State, made Mr. Kimbal's house his headquarters during his stay here. A fishing frolic was instituted in honor of the president, the settlers coming to it on horseback, in wagons, carts, barefooted—indeed, in any way—so great a rarity was it to see a live ex-president.

A certain portion of the foremen and laborers who were at work upon the canal, remained as residents. Alexander Bruce, Esq., who superintended the building of the locks here, and who has been largely identified with the public works of this and neighboring States, has resided here many years. Messrs. Scott & Harrington, also, who have bought the largest proportion of the grain shipped from this place, began business here in 1849, in a general store. Mr. Thomas Scott arrived in the State in 1845, and two years afterward settled at this place, where he has since resided. Mr. John Harrington arrived here in 1836, and succeeded Mr. A. D. Butterfield in the hotel located on the acre of ground, the title of which has recently been in dispute.

The railroad, called at first the "Chicago and Rock Island," also gave a new impetus to settlement. The first agent was Albert Butterfield, the total receipts of the office at this place for the first year being $200.00. John F. Clark, the present agent, informs the writer that the receipts for the year ending April 1st, 1876, were $40,000.

The list of postmasters, and date of their appointments, as taken from official sources at Washington, is as follows. At one time the office was more trouble than profit, and it passed into a number of hands whose names are not recorded.

Lovel Kimbal, appointed Nov. 9th, 1835; John Richey, July 28th, 1849; Albert Butterfield, Jan. 7th, 1854; David H. Slagle, March 6th, 1866; David H. Slagle, Dec. 10th, 1872.

The office also became presidential at the latter date. Mr. Slagle was re-appointed in March, 1877.

From the burning of the Kimbal mill, until 1866 or 1867, the water power at this place was not extensively used. The Jennings saw-mill was put in operation on the south side, the water being taken from the river by a wing dam, the remains of which can be seen at the present time in the bed of the river just under the south end of the bridge. This mill contained one run of stone.

In 1857 Rodric Clark settled in Marseilles. He bought the land at the west end of town, the present business center, including parts of the original plat. He thought he saw in the location the site of a manufacturing town which he designed building. For the accomplishment of this purpose, he associated with himself Messrs. O. W. Young and Isaac Underhill, capitalists of Peoria. This firm put up a bridge across the river as their first work, costing $40,000. It was commenced in the early part of 1865, and went out by an ice gorge in February, of the following year. It was again built, much better than before, and the Land and Water Power Co. chartered (1866), who began the foundations of the present dam, employing Mr. O. Hurd for the purpose. The dam, which is eight feet high and nearly one thousand long, was completed in 1867, under the supervision of James M. Bratton, of Indiana, whose plans of construction had been adopted by the company, the first water being used in November of that year, by either the Brown & Norton Paper Co., or by Messrs. Wm. Richard & Co., millers, whose leases bear the same date.

About this time also the first paper was published by A. St. Clair. It was called the "Marseilles Gazette."

The Marseilles Manufacturing Co., whose lease is dated June 11th, 1867, began work at their buildings and soon were in successful operation. The President, Mr. A. Adams, of whose sons the company is principally composed, has been identified with manufacturing interests in the west from an early day, having used the first ton of hard coal for smelting purposes ever brought to Chicago, and invented the hinge or folding joint for the sickle bars of reapers, as well as perfected the corn-shellers, which the company now manufacture. They also make a wind-mill, invented by one of the sons, Mr. John Adams.

The water power and other advantages, after the Chicago fire, Oct. 8th, 1871, induced the H. A. Pitt's Sons' Manufacturing Co. to locate here, their works covering over three acres of ground, and employ, when in full force, from one hundred and fifty to two hundred operatives. Their patrons are to be found in nearly every state in the Union, and their threshing machines and horse powers have a world wide reputation. The founder of the firm and father of nearly all the members, was a resident of Livermore, Mo., where he invented the combined thresher and separator, moving to Chicago in an early day to supply a growing want of the then infant West. From this source have sprung all the combined threshers in the market.

Messrs. Wm. Richard & Co. occupy a large four story grist and oat meal mill. They also own another smaller mill west of the larger one, but not running at the present time. The other is under the efficient charge of David Samuels, Esq.

There are three paper mills at this place, one only being in operation, run by Messrs. Young & Rebling.

Across the race north of Rickards' mill, is the repair shop of Mr. D. Hurd, which is fitted up with all the most approved appliances—lathes, drills, etc., necessary for successful work.

The stores of the place are as follows: Three hardware and agricultural, three dry goods and grocery, two exclusively groceries, two drugs and books, besides about twenty-three shops of various descriptions.

The first National Bank of Marseilles was organized June 27, 1871, with a capital of $50,000, increased in the fall of 1873 to $75,000. Its present officers are Alexander Bruce, President; J. N. Chappel, Cashier, and A. F. Jackson, assistant.

There are two papers published here at the present time: "The Marseilles Herald," a weekly, published by Messrs. Baldwin and Douglas, and "The Plaindealer," a monthly, Perry Simmons, editor and proprietor.

CHURCHES.

The preliminary services for the organization of the St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, were held by Rev. Edwin Coan, May 14, 1867. On June 30th, the parish was established. The house of worship was finished in November, 1868, during the ministry of Rev. E. DeWolf. Since that date the pastors have been Revs. Jonas Green and Matthew McGill. The parsonage was built in 1869.

The first Congregationalist Church was organized September 23, 1860. Rev. C. C. Breed was called soon after, and after one year's labor, resigned, and was succeeded by Rev. P. Blakeman. The next minister was Rev. E. H. Baker, during whose pastorate the present house of worship was completed. He was succeeded by Rev. J. T. Hanning; he, by Rev. O. Y. May, and he, by Rev. Mr. Rowley. The present pastor, Rev. Albert Ethridge, was called in 1874. The membership is now two hundred and ten.

The Universalist Church was organized in 1859, in East Marseilles, where during the following year the church building was erected. It was removed to its present location in 1873. The present membership is about forty, with a still larger attendance at the Sunday school. The following have been the pastors of this congregation: Revs. J. M. Day, T. H. Tabor, W. C. Chaplin, A. Abbott, A. H. Lanning and A. Tibbetts.

SENECA

Is pleasantly situated in the valley of the Illinois river, which is here spanned by a fine iron bridge. The valley here is wider than in the central part of the county, the bluffs seeming neither as high nor abrupt as farther west.

The town is on the C., R. I. & P. R. R., and Illinois and Michigan canal, and within a mile or two of the eastern boundary of the county.

It contains some fine residences, and has about 1000 inhabitants. It was laid out by Jeremiah Crotty, about 1848, and for a long time bore his name; the post office, however, is called Seneca. In 1859 it became incorporated as a village.

The present trustees are as follows: R. F. Jackson, president; Daniel Schaia, Wm. Watson, Hugh Henry, John Pricket, M. J. Hoag; Thomas Morrissey, clerk.

There are about twenty stores and shops here of various descriptions, consisting of drugs, hardware, dry goods and groceries, prominent among which may be mentioned Alex. Vaughey, D. H. Underhill, H. Bilharz, and Hugh Henry.

Messrs. A. F. Jackson & Co., bankers, afford ample banking privileges to the citizens of the town.

Messrs. Watson, Walbridge & Co. manufacture The Lowry Wind Mill, and do contracting and building.

Messrs. McNeal & Son carry on the carriage business quite extensively, and turn out some fine work.

The warehouses of Messrs. Garden & Bruce, and G. A. Griswold, shipped last year from this point 900,000 bushels of grain, Mr. Griswold's house sending as much if not more grain into the larger markets than any other single house along the canal, its contributions being something over 550,000 bushels.

There are two artesian wells that furnish an abundance of water, and ample provision has been made for thirsty horses and cattle.

In March, 1875, a coal shaft was sunk one hundred and ten feet to a three foot vein of coal. When at work it employs from fifty to sixty men.

There are two hotels "The National" and the "Beckwith House," the later of which is probably the best in town.

UTICA.

At one period in the existence of this town, it promised to be the metropolis of La Salle county. Situated at the head of navigation, on the Illinois river, it was made the shipping point for St. Louis and Chicago. Steamers would come up to this place, discharge their cargoes, reload with other products and return down the river. This discharged cargo would be loaded into wagons and hauled to Chicago, then considered a town of very little importance. The town of Utica was then situated on the right bank of the river, directly south of the present town. It was laid out by Geo. H. Norris, deputy county surveyor, for Geo. E. Walker, owner of a store in Ottawa, and a speculator in western town sites. Simon Crozier, an Indian trader, built a large frame warehouse soon after navigation commenced. Here he stored goods for further shipment, and dealt in commodities needed by his neighbors, then very few. He was also postmaster, serving in that capacity some time. Two years after the town was laid out, Thomas Brown opened a grocery, and dealt in what was then considered a necessary luxury—whiskey.

These two stores, few shops and a primitive tavern, built by Geo. W. Armstrong, were all the old town contained. In order to secure the passage of the Canal act, it became necessary to secure one more vote in favor of the measure. The man willing to give that vote was found, who came to the legislature from Peru. He would not, however, vote for the canal unless the terminus was made at Peru. This necessitated a new survey, which took the canal north of Utica, and changed the steamboat landing. This changed the whole character of the town, and all its future prospects were annihilated. The steamers would only come to Peru, and Utica could only hope to be an ordinary town on the canal route. Hence improvements stopped, and before long, where the new town called North Utica is now situated, the laborers began to erect cabins from the extensive growth of timber found here, and the more sagacious citizens began preparations to remove to the canal.

The canal was completed in 1848, and the next year Mr. James Clark erected the stone warehouse on the bank of the canal. Four years before this he had purchased a cement mill, in operation at the foot of the bluff, which for some time had not been in a prosperous condition. From time to time he has enlarged and improved this industry, until he now manufactures seventy-five thousand barrels of hydraulic cement annually, and could make double that amount did the market warrant it. This industry was started to aid in the construction of the canal, where all the material was used for some time. The quarry where the cement is obtained is south of the canal, on the flats, where the stone can be had from one to six feet beneath the surface.

North Utica was laid out October 16th, 1852, by J. H. Wagner, County Surveyor for Hiram Higby, who platted that portion north of the canal and west of the sectional line. On May 5th, 1859, James Clark made the first addition to the town, including that portion directly east of the original town, separated by Clark street. He has since made several additions to the town.

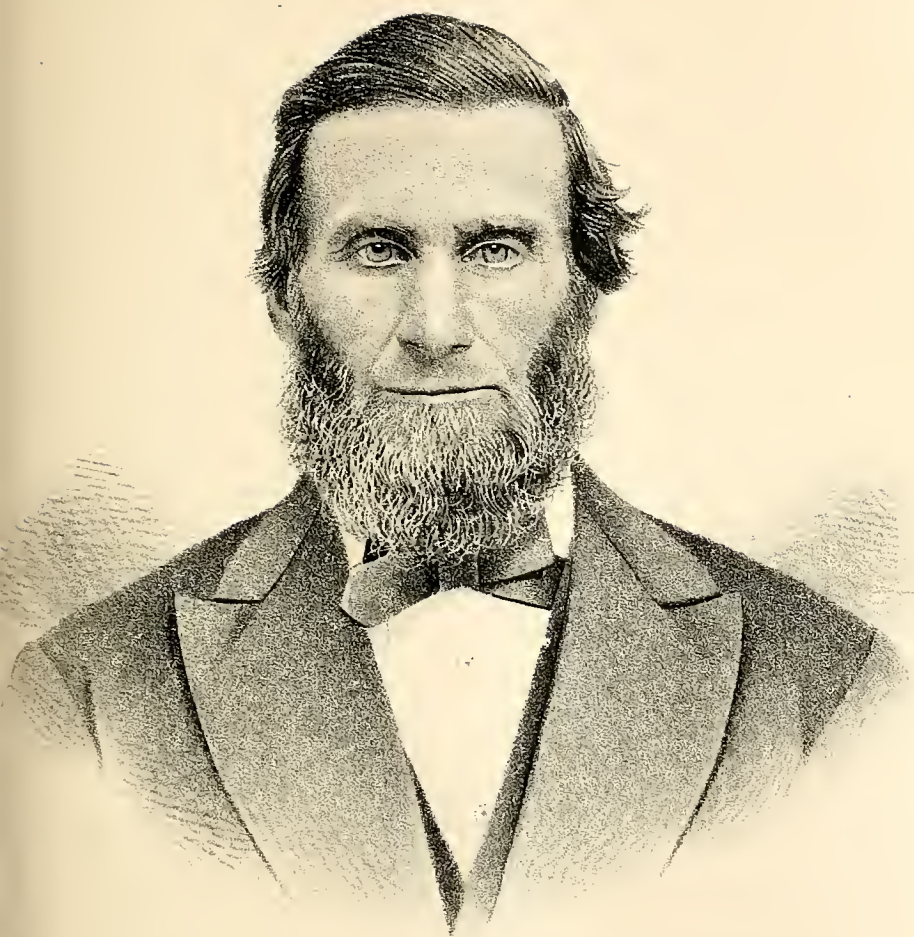

Mr. Clark opened a small store in his stone warehouse, and soon after the canal was opened was appointed postmaster, which office he held for some time. The first store building was erected by a man named Pearce. It is now occupied by Thad. O'Sullivan. Wm. Simmons erected a tavern about the same time. It is now the residence of Mr. Geo. Cook. A good hotel was not built until Mr. Clark erected one near the depot, which burned down a year ago. Mr. Clark's first house occupied the site of his present residence on the bluff, overlooking the town. When he opened the Cement works, in 1845, and later built his warehouse, the site of town was almost in its primitive state, only a few cabins being erected, and these generally by the laborers employed upon the canal. Soon after the town was laid out, Edward Golden built a residence just south of the canal, and Mr. Geo. Cook, still a resident, moved into a double log cabin near the foot of the bluff, where he for a time kept boarders.

The railroad traffic began in April, 1853, and from that time the growth of Utica has been constant. A frame depot building was erected soon after, which remained until destroyed by fire, when it was superseded by the present stone structure. The fire from the former depot communicated with and destroyed Mr. Clark's hotel.

The increase in the grain trade continued from the opening of the canal. In 1863, Mr. D. G. Weld erected a second warehouse and began the business. A good idea of the amount of corn shipped from this point may be obtained by examining the books of the elevator companies, which show for the years from 1867 to 1874, inclusive, one million one hundred and sixty-four thousand bushels shipped. In addition to this large amount, great quantities of oats, rye and barley were shipped on the railroad. Owing to the lack of suitable stock yards, shipments of cattle and hogs have averaged only from seventy-five to one hundred cars per annum. These are just now completed, and that branch of trade will materially increase. About 1863, a pottery was established, which for a few years confined itself to the manufacture of crockery ware. In 1869 it was changed into a tile factory, and as such is building up a good trade.

One of the chief attractions of the town is the abundant supply of excellent water from artesian wells, two of which have been sunk in the village limits. These were put down in 1874, one to a depth of one hundred and thirty-five feet, and one to a depth of two hundred and fifty feet. Three veins of pure water were struck, all of which yield copiously. Mr. Clark, by means of a force pump, conveys the water to his residence, much higher than the surface at the mouth of the well. It also supplies the railroad tank, and by means of pipes is conveyed over the town.

Utica contains about five hundred inhabitants, is well supplied with good stores, several shops, in addition to the large industries, and controls a large trade with the surrounding country. It was incorporated as a town in 1867. The election for the first board of trustees was held on November 9th of that year, and resulted as follows: John L. Clark, James M. Higby, T. E. Culver, E. F. Dimmick, and Patrick Ryan. This board chose for its President, Mr. Higby, and for clerk Mr. Dimmick. The town still continues under the village corporation.

SOCIAL INTERESTS.

A school district was established before the town of North Utica was laid off. A small, comfortable log house was built near the site of the stone warehouse, and school taught therein some time. A school house was afterwards built near the canal, which was used until 1850, when the present stone school house was erected. As the growth of the town has increased, two other buildings have been erected, one of which contains two rooms. Three teachers are employed in the summer, and four in the winter. Mr. J. M. Day is the present superintendent.

The Catholic society is the only one in town occupying a church. They have been organized about fifteen years, and, prior to the erection of their present church, occupied a frame building, which, on a Sunday morning some years ago, suffered destruction by fire from a defective flue. The present commodious brick and stone church soon occupied the place of the former one. The congregation has enjoyed a good increase from the original membership, and are under the pastorate of Father Terry, of Ottawa.

The Baptists have for many years maintained a society about a mile north of town. As this has become rather inconvenient to the members in town, about six months ago an organization was perfected here, which now numbers about forty members. They worship in a hall. The Congregationalists did for some time maintain a church, but owing to a decrease in membership, the organization has been disbanded.

Utica is in sight of the famous Starved Rock, to which so many curiosity seekers go every year. The site of the old town was the site of one of the largest Indian villages in the Mississippi valley; and it was here that the famous Robert De La Salle, on his downward voyage of discovery about the last of December, 1680, landed, and found the village then deserted, the inhabitants being absent on the chase, and after helping himself to some maize, proceeded on down the river.

EARLVILLE.

Between the years 1835 and 1840, several settlers located about Indian Creek timber, among whom were O. P. Johnson, C. H. Sutphen, S. T. Stilson, O. J. Wilson, Samuel Carter, Major D. Wallace, James Phillips, Frank Ransted, A. Foster, J. T. Cook, Russell Bliss, James Morse, Albert Dow, Warren Dow, Joseph Bliss, John Thornton, and Allen and Andrew Brown. These early settlers were compelled to market in Chicago, and for milling went to Dayton, the only mill within a radius of one hundred and fifty miles. The nearest store, post-office or physician, was at Princeton, Bureau county, or at Ottawa. C. H. Sutphen owned the only grindstone in the settlement, which sharpened his neighbor's tools and those of the Indians, then plenty in this part of the county.

In 1844, Joseph Bliss opened the pioneer store of Earl township, in a small log cabin on what is now the Dow Place. Here he continued till the commencement of business in the village, by Wm. Wade. This same year, 1844, the precinct school house was erected, and in it were held semi-monthly religious services, by Rev. Batchelor, now a resident of Harding. The Rev. George Bags had preached in this locality a few times before this, occupying a settler's cabin. He solemnized the first marriage in the township, being the nuptials of O. P. Johnson and his present wife, who are now residents of Malugian's Grove.

Three years after the opening of the pioneer store, a road from Earl to Ottawa, known as the "plank road," by way of Harding, was constructed. This gave a direct route to the county seat, and was a great aid to the farmers and those desiring to trade in that city. Some trouble was experienced by the early residents regarding claims. The process, often known as "jumping a claim," was practiced here, and in one instance led to tragic results—the shooting of a Mr. Morse. This put a stop to such proceedings, and lawful methods afterwards governed.

The country was overrun with desperadoes, engaged in horse stealing. After Earlville was laid out and the hotel erected, these marauders would stop with the proprietor, S. T. Stilson, and present themselves with the greatest impunity about the streets. The citizens were afraid of them, knowing them to be a desperate set; and not until they were fully aroused and had organized a Vigilance Committee, and lynched several of the more desperate characters, and shot the Driscolls, did the depredations cease.

The land comprising the village site was entered by a Mr. Taylor, at Galena, for C. H. Sutphen, who in the fall of 1839 sold to S. T. Stilson, who in turn, sold the northern portion to M. H. Signor. In what is now the lower part of town, Mr. Sutphen, in 1847, erected a cabin, and being appointed postmaster, kept the office in his dwelling. His nephew, who generally performed the duties of the office, was named Earl, and to please Mrs. Sutphen, the name Earlville was given the embryo town. Soon after Mr. Sutphen's settlement, Wm. B. Wade, already referred to, commenced business as a storekeeper, Harrison Bennett, blacksmithing, and S. T. Stilson opened a hotel. Mr. Wade subsequently sold to Wm.

Robinson, and built again on the opposite side of the street. About 1850, a Mr. Lamport erected a two story building, the lower story of which he occupied as a store.

These three stores continued business, with various changes, until the autumn of 1853, when they were all removed nearer the railroad, which was then completed and the cars running.

As soon as the station was established, building went rapidly forward, and by the time of the breaking out of the war, Earlville was quite a business centre, and enjoying an excellent trade. In 1858, a good deal of excitement arose over the manufacture and sale of liquor by Jonathan Reed. It was alleged that the whiskey made by him was poisonous, as several persons using it, met with mysterious deaths, and others were peculiarly affected by its moderate use. Various attempts were made by the citizens to induce him to cease its manufacture, but without avail; when, becoming exasperated at his boldness, the people, en masse, entered his saloon and poured his vile compounds into the street. Reed arrested several of the principal ones, which led to his own indictment, and a fine of over $1,000. Those he arrested were acquitted, and in revenge, Reed, John King and T. C. Cook, forming a conspiracy, hired Ben. Letz, who had gained an unenviable notoriety by blowing up Brock's Monument, and running the steamer Caroline over Niagara Falls, to destroy the school house, just completed, and a source of pride to the citizens. This he did on the night of September 13th. He was shot the same day that he was known to have performed the deed. The conspiracy was discovered, and the perpetrators brought to punishment. To the crime of destroying the school house, they had added that of arson, and had not precautionary measures been taken by the authorities in their capture, the citizens would have taken the law into their own hands.

During these years the growth of the town was healthy, and by 1863, steps were taken to secure a town corporation. On May 16th, an election for town trustees was held, which resulted in the choice of the following gentlemen: W. R. Haight, M. H. Signor, D. M. Vosburg, J. H. Breece and S. T. Stilson. The first named gentleman was chosen president of the body, and H. S. Wattles was elected clerk.

This form of government continued until the spring of 1877, when a petition for city government being presented by the residents, it was granted, and the following gentleman chosen councilmen: J. S. Miller and J. A. Dupee, 1st Ward; J. S. Radley and D. A. Brown, 2d Ward; S. C. Wiley and N. H. Powers, 3d Ward; H. A. Chase, City Clerk, and J. W. Brown, City Attorney. The Mayor is Hon. J. J. Pool.

BUINESSS INTERESTS.

Earlville has always been a good grain point. The honor of raising the first crop of wheat in the township, belongs to Mr. George Wallace. He was employed by S. T. Stilson, and with an ox team, three years before the commencement of the village, broke the prairie, on which was produced an excellent crop of wheat.

After the completion of the railroad, Messrs. Chase and Signor built a small grain office on the north side of the track, and commenced the purchase of grain. Timothy Goble, of Paw Paw Grove, brought the first load of wheat to Earlville market. The railroad company erected the first warehouse on the south side of the track. It is yet used. Mr. H. Signor continued in the business some years. Messrs. Haight and Stilson erected the second warehouse soon after the completion of the one by the railroad company. In 1865, C. S. Munson built a third grain house, where he continued business several years. C. C. Warren finally purchased and rented all these warehouses, and carried on the trade quite extensively until failure, when it was taken up by other firms and still carried on.

The manufacturing interests are very well sustained. A cheese factory, established a few years ago is now making about 63,000 pounds annually.

A good grist mill was started in 1866, but burned down on the 15th of May, 1870. The plow factory was established in July, 1873. A company representing a capital of $30,000 was formed, the right to manufacture the Curtis plow was purchased, and operations at once begun. They also make other farm implements, and are commanding a good trade. Mr. S. C. Wiley is president of the company.

Earlville has suffered with one or two depressing fires. The first occurred on March 22, 1867, when a fire originating in the cellar of A. B. Conkling's grocery, swept away many fine buildings. Another, equally disastrous, occurred the following April. Again, on March 2d, 1875, a fire almost destroyed the entire business portion, completely consuming all frame business houses not burned in the former fires.

These have, however, been nearly all rebuilt in brick, and the town now presents solid, substantial business houses.

The first bank was opened by Stilson and Hallack, in 1857. After remaining in partnership a few months, Mr. Stilson sold to Mr. Hallack, who, a year or so after, absconded, to the great loss of many creditors, and all efforts to find him have been unavailing. In 1876, C. S. Munson opened the second bank, which is still in operation, being under the control of Mr. Wm. Wilson.

EDUCATION AND RELIGION.

On June 16, 1840, a meeting of citizens was called, at which Allen Brown, Levi Carter, Major D. Wallace, Volney Beckwith and Russell Bliss, were elected trustees of township number 35, for the purpose of dividing it into districts or precincts for school purposes.

This board met on June 27th, and divided the township into five school districts. This division did not prove satisfactory. As the township became settled, in 1854 another petition was presented to Russell Bliss, A. C. Burlingame and R. Richardson, trustees, to form a new district that would include Earlville. This was done, and numbered 10. In 1856, the entire township was redivided and the present number of districts made. The first schoolhouse in the township was erected on the east side of the creek, near Samuel Carter's, and in this pioneer building, just in the edge of the timber, Mr. D. Smith taught for two winters. This was the first public school, but as early as 1840, Miss Lucy Ballard had taught a private school, continuing it several years.

Until 1857, school was taught in Earlville in a small building occupying the site of the present Presbyterian church. That year a tax was levied in the thinly settled district, and by the next year a neat two-story brick edifice (the first brick building in town,) was ready for occupancy. It cost about $1,000, and, as has been noticed, was blown to pieces on the night of Sept. 13th, 1858. A frame building of two rooms soon took its place, and to this two more rooms have been added, and the building so enlarged is still used.

The oldest church organization in town is the Presbyterian. This congregation was organized by the Rev. John Fleming, Feb. 22, 1852, with ten members. They worshipped in the school house until February, 1855, when they completed a house of worship, which in 1863 was torn down, to give place to the present comfortable edifice. The Rev. John Ustick is the present pastor, his ministry extending over twenty-two years. There are now about sixty members. The Methodist Episcopal church was organized as a class as early as 1840. After various vicissitudes they were organized in the village (they had previously worshipped in a school house out of town) in 1853, by Elijah Ransom, a lay minister. In 1856, a church building was begun and completed so it could be occupied the following year. The church was fully finished and is now used. The society is quite prosperous and owns a good parsonage in addition to the church. The present pastor is Rev. E. Brown.

The Congregational church was organized in Dupee's Hall, Oct. 28, 1867, with ten members, three of whom are still connected here. The organization was not consummated until the 19th of Nov., when the officers were chosen, and the first pastor, Rev. C. Harrison, commenced his labors. This house of worship was completed and dedicated Jan. 2d, 1870. At present there is no regular pastor; those succeeding Rev. Harrison were Rev. S. P. Goodenow, from 1872 to 1874, and Rev. J. R. Barnes, from 1874 to 1876.

The Baptist church was organized April 19, 1856, by Rev. J. Higby. They worshipped in the school house and in other churches until the fall of 1871, when, under the ministry of Rev. F. B. Ives, a comfortable house of worship was completed, so it could be used. They have now a good congregation under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. L. Libby.

The Universalist society held their earliest meeting here in Robinson's Hall, in the winter of 1866-7. The first pastor was Rev. W. S. Ralph, who remained from Jan. 1867 to Jan. 1870. During the year 1869, they built their house of worship, a commodious brick structure, costing nearly $1,500. During the summer of 1870, the pulpit was filled by Miss Mary H. Graves. In October, Rev. Alfred Rains was called, who remained four years, and was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. A. H. Laing, who came in Nov., 1875. There are now about two hundred attendants at this church.

LELAND.

The earliest settlements within the immediate vicinity of the village of Leland, were made as early as 1837 or '38. There were, however, few persons located here prior to the opening of the railroad. This was due, in a great measure, to the flat, swampy condition of the country, which at that time, owing to the absence of drainage, was often under water. The town, like almost all others throughout this part of the state, was originated with the survey of the railroad. Its location is rather above the surrounding country, and this fact coupled with the fact of the railroad, induced the owners of the land comprising the town site, to survey and lay out a town. These persons were Christopher Fuerborn, who owned south of the railroad, east of Main street; his brother Henry, who owned that quarter section immediately north of the railroad tracks; while west of both was the land of Lorenzo and Alonzo Whitmore. All these persons had entered their land, but only one, Christopher Fuerborn, was living on the land. He was the main one to move in the location of the town, and the original site only comprises his and his brother's quarter section.

They had come here some time during the year 1852, and Lorenzo was occupying a house—the only one on the town site when the plat was made. The survey was made by J. H. Wagner, and is recorded June 24, 1853. The town was then called Whitfield, and to it the Whitmore brothers made their addition soon after its survey. When the railroad company erected their freight and passenger houses, they named the station Waverly Station, and under that name a post office was established. There was, however, another office by that name in Morgan county, and mail matter for these offices would often get mixed, and go to the wrong office. This led to a petition from the residents about Waverly Station, asking the authorities for a change of name. The postmaster at Waverly Station was John Leland Adams. It was proposed to call the town and office "Adams," in compliment to Mr. Adams. There was another office by this name in Illinois, and the name was refused by the department. Not to be frustrated in their wishes, the name "Leland" was proposed and accepted, and the town and office is now known by that name.

The first store in the village was opened in 1853, by Abraham Skinner. It stood immediately south of the railroad, on Main street, near the present carpenter shop of J. A. Newell. Mr. Skinner remained here until 1855, when his death occurred.

The first mechanic in town was Elias Hanson, who opened a blacksmith shop in 1854. The same year, Joseph Frost, Whitfield's first postmaster, erected the second store of the town, and remained in trade some time.

The railroad company erected the first grain warehouse. This was ready for use in the summer of 1853, and was used largely by farmers to store grain for autumn shipments. The lower part was used as the freight depot, and this structure was the only receptacle for grain for several years. About 1864, Thomas Thompson erected his elevator, and shortly after, the Richardson brothers theirs.

From the opening of the railroad until 1860, the growth of the town was very slow. That year, however, a good trade in grain sprang up, and the war coming on a year or two after, until the disastrous fire of 1868, an excellent trade was maintained, and Leland grew with surprising rapidity. The fire burned all the business part of the town, and cast a damper on its progress, from which it has not yet recovered. Its merchants suffered a blow from which many of them have not recovered, and the town is now hardly as active as during the interval mentioned. To this calamity may be added two other fires, which destroyed much property, and left the owners of the goods and property well nigh bankrupt.

Leland now contains several good stores, quite a number of shops, two good elevators, several saloons, and one or two hotels. The population is about eight hundred.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS.

Leland contains five churches; the Lutherans (Norwegian) and Norwegian M. E., the M. E., the Baptists, and the Catholic.

The first of these is the oldest organization in town. It was organized in 1847, about one mile south of town, but in 1866 they removed the church edifice to Leland, where they have since worshipped. They have now a strong church and support a regular ministry.

Shortly after the organization of this congregation, the Methodists established a church among the Norwegians, and erected a house of worship near that of the Lutherans. They removed to town some four years prior to their neighbors, however, where they still continue to worship.

In 1867 a Baptist church was organized here with a small membership. The next year they erected a comfortable house of worship and are now quite prosperous. The M. E. Society is one of the earliest formed in this community. They were not able, however, to erect a church until 1867, when they built their present structure. Until this time they worshipped in private houses, in the school house, and in the Norwegian M. E. church. The Catholic church, was organized and a house of worship erected in 1864. Their membership embraces a wide scope of territory, and the church is quite strong.

The pioneer school of Leland, was taught in the winter of 1854-5, by Nancy Merwin, in a room over Whitmore's store. This was used two years. In 1856, E. M. Kinney and others borrowed money, having secured a school district, and erected a small frame house, which was used until the erection of their present building, about 1864.

Now three teachers are employed, and an attendance of over two hundred pupils is steadily maintained.

Leland was incorporated in 1859. The present town board consists of the following gentlemen: J. C. Jacobson, president, David Evans, O. Simonson, C. Rempe, A. H. Dale, and T. Thompson. The clerk is F. G. Brown.

TONICA

Was laid out by Mr. A. J. West, owner of the land on which the original plat was made in 1853. This was shortly after the Illinois Central Railroad began running its trains, crossing the river at LaSalle by descending and ascending to and from the bottoms along the river. In 1854, the bridge over the river was completed, and more travel and freight was the consequence. Tonica began to partake of the increase of trade, and a few stores and shops were erected. Among the first to erect houses on the town site was Major Newton, who built his house at the south end of the main business row, and being appointed postmaster, kept the office here some time. The Union Store, built and operated by the surrounding farmers, and managed by Henry Kingsley, was among the first opened. Shortly afterward Simon Foss erected a store near the corner where the new brick store now stands. In 1868, Mr. Burgess purchased the building erected by the Union Store Company, and has occupied it since. The company had kept the store about twelve years. The next merchant after Mr. Foss was Mr. O. Cushman, who opened the first furniture store in Tonica.

Mr. W. J. Wilson started a good drug store on Pratt's corner, where he remained until the fire of 1867. This calamity was a severe blow to the town. It swept out of existence nearly every building on Main street in the business part, and had it not been for a brick structure towards the south end of the row of business houses, the destruction would have been complete. The work of rebuilding commenced at once. Mr. Wilson built again on the corner, A. P. Landes next, G. W. Keller and J. K. Brokaw after Landes, and J. P. Bassett joined to Keller and Brokaw a good brick. Nearly all who rebuilt profited by the lesson of the fire, and erected substantial brick structures, which are now used. Shortly after the establishment of the depot, two small warehouses were erected; but the enterprise, not proving remunerative, they were abandoned by their owners, who sold them for other purposes. Subsequently a large one was erected, which does all the grain trade of the town. The shipping interest of Tonica is chiefly confined to live stock, principally hogs. The town has the reputation of shipping more pork than any village of its size on the Illinois Central railroad.

In 1867 Mr. W. J. Wilson erected a grist mill, which is yet operated. Its chief trade, like that of the village, is with the surrounding farmers.

SCHOOLS.

As soon as the population of town demanded it, a school was opened in an old frame one-room building, located in a corner of the site of the town cemetery. It was moved here for the purposes designated, having been a dwelling previously. Before long it proved inadequate, and a larger building was erected, being located in a more central part of town, and the old house moved, as steps were being taken to lay out a village grave-yard. This second building was used until 1867, when the present four-room house was built. Since that time a good graded school has regularly been maintained.

THE PRESS.

In 1874 the Tonica News was established by C. M. Keller, who a year later sold to the present editor, W. A. McGrew. He is at present issuing a five-column, good local paper. A small paper called the Tonica Local is issued each Saturday by W. A. Flint. It is printed at Wenona.

CHURCHES.

The Methodists were the first to occupy the field here. They formed a class as soon as the town was established. About 1855 they erected their first church, while under the ministry of Rev. J. G. Evans. This is now used as a parsonage, the present commodious house of worship superceding it in 1859. They have about seventy members at present, and an attendance at the Suncay-School of nearly one hundred. The pastor is Rev. R. S. Russell.

The Congregationalist Church was organized January 7, 1857 with sixteen members. Of these only Warren Burgess and wife, and Mrs. Annie Barrass remain. The organization was effected in the Baptist Church by the Rev. G. B. Hubbard, who remained pastor until 1860. They worshipped in the shool house until 1861, when they erected their present church. Rev. Hubbard was succeeded by Rev. Wm. McConn, who preached until his death in 1865. He was followed by Rev. J. W. West, whose ministry extended until 1871, when Rev. J. C. Myres came and remained until 1874. He was succeeded by the present pastor, the Rev. H. Avery. There are now one hundred and forty communicants, and as many or more attendants at the Sunday school.

The Baptist church was organized in 1856. The members, as well as those comprising the organization of the Congregational church, principally came from Lowell, a small village some three miles east of the site of Tonica, which was soon abandoned on the laying out of the latter place. They erected their church the same year they were organized, and very kindly permitted other denominations to use until they could complete a house of their own. They have now ninety members and about sixty Sunday school scholars. The pastor is Rev. Williams, who has also charge of the church at L'Ostant.

L'OSTANT

Is a small village in Hope township, in the southwest part of the county. It was laid out by John M. Richey, whose portrait appears elsewhere, early in September, 1861. He had purchased the section of land, including the village site, many years before this date, and resided here from that time. The earliest residents in this part of the county, located near Wenona, Marshall county, among whom were Horace Graves, Capt. Dillman, and others. Rev. A. Osgood selected his farm in 1850, when there was not a dwelling in sight, and no thoughts of the village of L'Ostant. The land in this section of the county was partly composed of soldiers' claims, and it was these which Mr. Richey purchased when locating here in 1849. In 1862 he built the first building for a store, in which Mr. Wm. Richey, and a Mr. Massay, of Marseilles, placed the first stock of goods in town. The building is yet occupied for the same purpose, by Messrs. Belford, Solon and Berry. Shortly after the town was laid out, a post office was established, and Daney D. Clark, the first station agent, made postmaster. He brought the first station house to town, moving it in from some near locality. A shop or two was soon added to the houses of the town; other stores were built, and in a year or two there were a goodly number of buildings in the young village. As this was a good shipping point an elevator was among the first structures of prominence. To this, two others have since been added, until more grain is shipped from this point than from any other of its size in the county. The main growth of the town has been since the war. In 1866 the grist mill was erected by Mr. Richey, Dr. Reynolds and others, and continues in a good trade. The majority of produce shipped from town goes to Chicago, but a moderate share finding its way directly to St. Louis.

At present, L'Ostant contains about three hundred inhabitants, is well supplied with stores and shops of various kinds, almost the entire trade being with the surrounding country.

SCHOOLS.

The next summer after the town was laid out, a small frame house was erected, which served for two or three years as church, school house and town hall. It was used until 1868, when, becoming too small to accommodate the school population, it was sold to the Catholics, and by them converted into a church, which they still use. In 1868, steps were taken to secure a graded school, and the present comfortable school house was the result. It was built that year, and a good graded school opened in the autumn. The school still maintains its standard. The building contains four rooms, and will accommodate two hundred scholars. Nearly that number attend in the winter season.

CHURCHES.

The Baptists were the first to organize in the village. They formed a society in 1868, in a cottage now owned by Rev. A. Osgood, and for a while worshipped in the school house. The following year they erected their present house of worship. At the organization there were twelve members received. This number has been increased until there are forty, and able to sustain a minister a portion of his time. The Rev. Williams, pastor at Tonica, is at present supplying their pulpit. The attendance at Sunday school is about equal to the membership of the church.

The Methodists occupied this county prior to the commencement of the village. They had a congregation at Cedar Point, a few miles from L'Ostank, which they still sustain, and from that and other localities near the site of the village, had enough members to form a society about the same time the Baptist church was formed. They were organized with nine members, which number has since been increased to nearly or quite forty. They first occupied the school house, then the Baptist church until in 1869, they erected their present church. The Rev. E. B. England is the present pastor. The attendance at Sunday school is something over fifty scholars.

The Catholic church was formed about 1867. For awhile they used a room in the upper story of the pioneer store in town. In 1868 they purchased the old school house which they fitted for a church, and are still occupying it. They have now about one hundred and forty members under the pastoral care of Father Burch.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

L'Ostank was incorporated as a town under the general incorporation law in 1867. A public meeting of the citizens was held in Wood's Hall on August 2d, when fifty votes were cast in favor of incorporation, and none against. On the 12th an election for town trustees was held which resulted in the choice of the following persons: E. Altman, N. Dugan, W. W. Reynolds, A. Fisher and A. C. Schermerhorn. These soon after met, were sworn into office, and organized by electing as president of the board Mr. Altman, and as secretary, Mr. Schermerhorn.

LODGES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

L'Ostank Lodge No. 597, A. F. & A. M.—Officers: E. F. Dongan, W. M.; M. L. Sherman, S. W.; G. C. Spring, J. W.; H. U. Robinson, Sec'y.; W. S. Robertson, Treas. Meets at L'Ostank second and fourth Saturdays in each month.

HOMER, OR TROY GROVE,

Is the oldest village in this part of the county. It was laid out in 1836 by Kirtland and Colton who purchased the land of R. H. Wixom, who had entered it the year previous. Colton was a native of Homer, New York, and named the village in honor of his native place. William A. Hickok, father of the famous James B. Hickok, "Wild Bill," opened the first store on the town site, and here, in a rude dwelling, his noted son was born. The nearest town was Peru, which for many years was the public mart. Mr. Hickok was shortly followed by James Newton Reedor, Justin D. Wixom and John Johnston, the latter of whom opened a small store soon after his arrival. The earliest settler in Troy Grove township was Elias Carey, who located on section 24, in February, 1831.

The next May, Hiram Thornton joined him, these two being the only residents at the opening of the Black Hawk War. When danger became imminent, they removed to Fort Wilburn, opposite La Salle, and remained in its safety a few weeks. While there, Mrs. Carey gave birth to a son,—Geo. W.—who, though not born within the actual limits of the township, may claim to be the first white child born here. He still lives in Homer. Mr. Kelse had a cabin a short distance from the site of Homer, and here he opened a store before the village was laid out, and continued the sale of goods some time.

In 1835-36 a sawmill was erected by several of the settlers for their use, which was soon purchased by Reeder & Wixom, who sawed the lumber for the school house built in 1837. This primitive structure cost $205.00, and did good service for many years. The village of Homer grew well for several years. As there was another town by that name in the State, the postoffice was named Troy Grove, which name it still bears. Until the commencement of Mendota, all trade for this locality came to this town, and made a good business. Three or four stores were well supported, and an equal number of shops.

Mr. S. Frenburg, one of the oldest settlers in this part of the county, located here in 1849. At that time the trade was growing well, and continued so until Mendota was started. He removed there in 1859, where he still continues in business.

Many readers of these pages will remember well the letters of "Rural," in the Chicago Tribune of late years. The writer of these was Mr. M. L. Dunlap, one of the first teachers in Troy Grove township, the house wherein he taught being the first erected here. It stood on section 24, and was erected in 1834.

The small school house in town, already mentioned, was occupied until the erection of the present one. It is soon to be replaced by an elegant structure. The school district embraces a large area of country, and the attendance is hardly ever less than one hundred. The Presbyterian church of Homer is the germ of all Presbyterian congregations in this part of La Salle county. It was organized in 1849, with eight members. They were James and Mrs. Smith, A. Hoffman and wife, Mrs. Chapin, Mr. Nye and P. L. Porter and wife. The organization was effected at Batchelor's Ridge, about four miles east of Homer, in a school house. The presiding minister was Rev. James S. Baldwin. The same year they built a church there, which they occupied until 1850, when they erected one in Homer, and went there for divine services. In the erection of both these houses they received important aid from Rev. Patterson, of Chicago. In 1857, this church, then the New School Presbyterian, was purchased by the old school body, who were immediately organized by the Rev. Henderson and Mr. Fisk. Rev. Henderson preached here and at Mendota during his lifetime. The old house, becoming unsafe, the congregation not long since erected their present comfortable structure. The membership is now about fifty, no regular minister being sustained.

The Free Will Baptist church was organized in the Presbyterian church in the year 1860, with about fifty members, it being the result of a revival under the ministry of Rev. Coltron. They soon had a comfortable church edifice built, which they still occupy. They do not sustain a regular pastor, but are regularly supplied from other localities. Several other churches have been started in Homer, but the majority have removed to other places, where they organized anew. When the railroad was completed, a station was erected at a point nearly west of Homer, but afterwards moved to its present locality, two or three miles farther south. A depot was built here. A postoffice was established, and the station called Dimick. There are but few houses here, its nearness to Homer or Mendota precluding the possibility of making a large town.

DAYTON.

The earliest settlement in the township of Dayton was made in the spring of 1829, by a Mr. Clark, from Fort Clark, near Peoria. During the month of September Mr. John Green and brother made a journey through the northern and southern portions of Illinois, with a view of settlement. At the site of Dayton they found excellent water power, said to be equal to the best in the State, and a good country surrounding it, which induced them to pass by the marshy and uninviting site of Chicago, where they were strongly urged to locate. They traveled as far south as the State Capitol, Vandalia, and finally entered a claim on what was then known as the Rapids of Fox river, four miles above its confluence with the Illinois river, it being canal land and subject to entry at that date.

Mr. John Green purchased Mr. Clark's land and crops, and then returned East for his family. On the second day of November he started with them for his new home in the West. They were forty-five days on the journey, landing at the cabin he had purchased of Mr. Clark, on the 15th of December. Part of his route was over a country without a road, and comprehending the needs of a new country, he brought with him mill irons for both a saw and grist mill, also mill-wrights, and by the next harvest had erected a saw mill, in one end of which he placed a pair of "Nigger Heads," made from granite boulders near at hand, and on the Fourth of July, 1830, the first wheat was ground by water power in the northern section of the State.

Two years later the Black Hawk war broke out, and the few settlers in this vicinity built a log fort around the residence of Mr. Green, in the present village, and remained there until the evening of the massacre on Indian Creek, when, fearing the little fort would not protect them, they removed to Ottawa, reinforcing the small party already assembled there, and protected by a fort. Here they remained until fall, when the danger being considered past, they, in common with other settlers, returned to their claims. Peace being assured by the close of this war, and the removal of the Indians beyond the Mississippi river, settlers began to come in rapidly, and in 1833 a more substantial mill was erected. Being located at the foot of the rapids, at an exposed point from the spring freshets, whereby it was damaged, in 1834 a mill containing six run of stone was built a little farther up the bluff, which for a number of years did the grinding for a country comprising a radius of more than fifty miles in extent. This mill was operated until 1855, when it was replaced by the present one. It has four run of stone, and is now mainly supplying the home trade.

The woolen mills were built in 1842, by John Green & Sons, who were the first in the State to manufacture by the use of the power loom. They used their first building for this purpose until 1864, when the present five story stone factory was erected. A good trade in cloth is maintained.

About the time the woolen mills were started, or soon after, Mr. Wm. Strattan established a second flouring mill, containing four run of stone. It was operated some time, when becoming unremunerative it was abandoned. After lying idle several years it was torn away, and in 1876, the present flourishing paper mill was erected by S. W. Williams & Company. They are now manufacturing about two tons of paper daily.

The old mill building, erected in 1834, was in 1868 or '69, converted into a horse-collar manufactory. It is making from two thousand to two thousand five hundred dozen collars annually.

This abundant water power caused the location of these factories, and the growth of this small town. The site of the village was laid out by Daniel T. Hitt, County Surveyor, for Mr. Green, July 13th, 1837. As it is only four miles from the county seat, and upon a rather rough site, the growth of the town has been slow. The population is about three hundred. It contains one good store, a hotel, a few shops and the large industries already noted.

One of the finest sulphur springs in the West is situated a few miles above Dayton, and with a little improvement would make an excellent summer resort. The first store in Dayton was erected on the site of the present hotel barn. The present hotel is the only one ever built here. It was erected by Wm. Dunnavan soon after the town was established.

The first school house was built on the hill not far from the present hotel, and was used for educational and religious purposes until 1846, when a frame house was built. School was also held in a rented building, and in the front room of Mrs. Goodrich's residence. After that became too small, the present school house was erected in 1859 or '60. It contains one room, the school being conducted under the common school law. No church has ever been built in town, the school house answering that purpose, or the people attending elsewhere, generally at Ottawa.

The railroad was completed in January, 1871 through Dayton, and by means of it coal is brought to town with great ease and cheapness, thus facilitating the natural advantages of the town as a manufacturing point. The village has never been incorporated, being governed under the township organization.

SHERIDAN.

This handsome little village, with its handsome residences, tasty church edifices, elegant school house, well conducted business houses, shops, etc., of a population of 300 people of thrift, intelligence and hospitality, is situated in the northwestern corner of Mission township, in the northeastern part of the county. Building a town here was not much thought of until the building of the Fox River Division of the C. B. & Q. Railroad, when a tract of land was laid off in town lots, and the work of building a town or village commenced. Situated in the heart of as grand and productive a region of country as exists anywhere on the American continent. Sheridan is an important shipping point for grain, stock, &c. The situation is a beautiful one, on an elevated plateau of ground, about one mile south of Fox river. On the South, East and West of the village, the land is slightly rolling, while to the North the foliage of the groves of timber skirting Fox river, lends additional attraction to the beauty of the place, and relieves the eye of the monotony of a level, treeless prairie. Building material is plenty and cheap. As a village for a country residence, where water is good and abundant, atmosphere healthy, society good, and churches and schools fully established, Sheridan presents advantages of no mean order.

GRAND RIDGE

Is a village in Farm Ridge township, eight miles south of Ottawa, on the line of the Fox River Division of the C. B. & Q. R. R. The first business house was built by E. Core, in 1870, the same year the railroad was completed and put in operation. In 1873, J. T. Porter erected a grain elevator. In 1874, the owners of the land on either side of the road, David Crumrine and Joseph Boyd laid off a part of their respective lands adjoining the track, in town lots, after which building was commenced on a more extended scale, and now it is a very handsome farm village, and is a point from which a large amount of grain and produce finds its way to market. In the latter part of 1876, Porter sold his elevator to F. McIlvaine, who still conducts the business. E. Cole conducts another elevator, and it is estimated that at least 1,200 car loads of grain are annually shipped from these elevators.

The second business house was erected by F. H. Poundstone, in 1871. In June, 1873, Garrison & Hornick opened a first class dry goods, notion and grocery house, meeting with lucrative return. It is estimated that the aggregate business of Grand Ridge will amount to $75,000 annually.

There are nine business houses in Grand Ridge, including dry goods and grocery houses, etc., two physicians, and a proportionate number of mechanics. A good two-story school-house is in course of erection. The Presbyterians have a good house of worship, and the character of the people for thrift, enterprise and morality, will rank with that of any other people in the State.

The Presbyterian church in Grand Ridge was organized June 17, 1865, in the Van Doren school house, by a committee from the Peoria Presbytery, consisting of the Rev. Robert Johnson and Rev. John Marquis. The original members were Wm. McMillan, Jane B. McMillan, Araminta Poundstone, Joseph Boyd, Elvira Boyd, J. T. Van Doren, Sarah C. Van Doren, James H. Boyd and Isabella Boyd. The house of worship was erected in 1864, at an expense of $1,800, and soon after, a parsonage, costing $800. The first pastor was Rev. John Moore, who remained some time. At present the pulpit is vacant.

LODGES.

Victor Lodge, No. 578, I. O. O. F.—Instituted June 11, 1875. Officers, E. A. Dearth, N. G.; John H. Moss, V. G.; Jas. E. Jones, Sec'y; Lacy Hibbs, Treas. Meets at Grand Ridge, Ills., every Saturday evening.

MERIDEN

Is a small town on the C., B. & Q. R. R., about five miles northeast from Mendota. It was laid out by John Grey, county surveyor, for Samuel Wiley, May 4th, 1863. A Mr. Jones erected a warehouse that year, and commenced the trade in grain. The town is too close to Mendota to attain any growth, as all trade of any value goes to that city. There are a few small stores, several shops of various kinds, which find their trade chiefly confined to the immediate locality.

There is no church in town, the church-going people attending principally at Mendota. A good school is well sustained.

TRIUMPH,

A small town east of Homer, was laid out by Stephen R. Beggs, in 1836. He named the prospective town La Fayette, but failing in his expectations, vacated his plat. Many years after, the present village of Triumph was laid out on the old site. It now contains about a hundred inhabitants, supporting a few shops and stores, a school and church. Joseph Reynolds was the first settler here, coming as early as 1830. At the opening of the Black Hawk war, Reynolds, Carey and Thornton were the only settlers in this part of the county. The two latter went to Fort Wilburn for safety, while Reynolds repaired farther east, and did not return. He afterwards sold his claim to Asa Baldwin.

NEW RUTLAND

Is a small village in the extreme southwestern part of the county, in Groveland township; part of the town is in Marshal county. It was surveyed in November, 1855, by D. F. Hitt, County Surveyor, the owner being Mr. Wm. B. Burns. The town contains two or three good stores, as many shops, and excellent school and religious privileges. It is the shipping point for this portion of both counties, large amounts of grain being sold from this town. Corn is the chief product. As high as three hundred thousand bushels being occasionally shipped in one year. The township was settled as early as 1833, directly at the close of the Sac war. It is filled with an enterprising class of New England farmers, who take great pride in the education of their children, and in the advancement of their township. At one time, in the history of the two townships of Groveland and Osage, it was desired to add them to some other county, owing to their isolated situation. Then the land was considered comparatively worthless, and no county wanted them. Now Groveland, especially, is considered the finest stock-growing township in LaSalle County, save Grand Rapids, and any county would be pleased to attach either to her borders. LaSalle, however, desires to retain both.

GARFIELD

Is situated a few miles above New Rutland, on the railroad. It was laid out by Robert Wilson, deputy county surveyor, in July 1868, for Mr. Robert Davis owner of the town site. It is still a small town, engaged in trade with the surrounding farmers, and in shipping their produce.

RANSON

Is a small town in Allen township. It was laid out on the 8th and 9th days of December, 1875, by George Brumbach, county surveyor, for Marcus J. Lane and Wm. H. McIntyre, school trustees, it being on the school section. It is a convenient post office and trading point for this point of the county, there being no railroad near.

DANA

Was laid out by George Brumbach, in the Spring of 1873. The proprietors were John Bane, John H. Martin, Robert Clegg, Fawcett Plumb, and others. It is in the southeastern part of Groveland township, and is growing into a good trading point.

VERMILLIONVILLE.

This is one of the oldest villages in La Salle county. It was platted in the spring of 1836, for Isaac Dimmick, by L. W. Dimmick, Deputy County Surveyor. At one time the village attained considerable growth, and was engaged in an extended trade. The advent of railroads in later years changed the tide of commerce, and Vermillionville, as well as many others, began to decline. A store and a shop or two remain, and but little trade is carried on, and will probably be discontinued before long.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Brookfield Presbyterian Church. The Presbyterian Church was organized Dec. 1, 1833, at South Ottawa village, by Rev. E. H. Hazard, who was its first minister. Benjamin Moore, Augustine Smith and Jesse A. Clark were the first elders. The society worshipped at the above place until April 24, 1840, when they removed to Brookfield, and are now located on section 18. The present pastor is Rev. Robert Seaman, and they have connected with the church a Sunday school of about 100 scholars, under the superintendence of the pastor.

CATLIN THOS. D. Secretary and Treasurer Ottawa Glass Co.; born in Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., March 12, 1838; came to this Co. in April, 1858; Republican; Congregationalist; married Helen C. Plant, Oct. 10, 1866; she was born in Utica, N. Y., July 13, 1841; Mr. Catlin is Assignee of Caldwell, Clark & Co., and Secretary of the Illinois and Mississippi Telegraph Co.

CATON JOHN DEAN, L.L. D. Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Illinois; born in Monroe, Orange Co., N. Y., March 19, 1812; came to this Co. in 1842; his father, Robert Caton, was a Farmer and Quaker preacher; had sixteen children born to him, all of whom grew to maturity; he died when John Dean, his fifteenth child, and twelfth son, was but three years old. The subject of this sketch came to Chicago in 1833, when that place contained but two hundred inhabitants. Here he commenced the practice of law, and for want of better accommodations, was compelled to receive, hear and advise his clients on a log or dry goods box, or upon the river bank. With the exception of one gentleman, who preceded him by only a few days, he was the first resident lawyer who ever brought a case into the Court of Record of Cook County. He soon after made a journey of three hundred miles, on horseback, to Granville, Ill., where he was admitted to the bar of the State. The exposure to which he was subjected on this trip, prostrated him with a severe illness, from which he did not recover until the close of the year. Early in January, 1834, he conducted the first United States post coach that ever went through to Ottawa, and reached its destination in safety. He was really the only man then to be found who had been over the route and knew the way. In July, 1835, Mr. Caton went to New Hartford, near Utica, N. Y., where he married, on the 29th of the same month, Laune Adelaide Sherrill, of that place. Returning to Chicago, he engaged in his profession with so much earnestness, that after a few years his health gave way, and he removed to Plainfield, Ill., to recuperate his overworked brain and system. He purchased a farm of fifteen hundred acres near this place, where he followed, for a number of years, the dual profession of farmer and lawyer, which restored him to robust health and strength. In 1842, he was appointed by Gov. Carlin as Supreme Judge of the State for the winter term, being then only thirty years of age. There were nine of these judges, each holding a Circuit Court in the summer, and together constituting in the winter a General Supreme Court. His circuit embraced twelve counties, including LaSalle, and at Ottawa, the county seat of that county, he took up his residence immediately upon his appointment. In 1853, by the resignation of Chief Justice Scates, he became Chief Justice, and continued in this distinguished capacity until 1864, when he resigned. For nearly twenty-two years he served the State in its highest judicial tribunal. He still owns and manages a farm of fourteen hundred acres at Plainfield, one of the finest in Will County. Is president and principal owner of an extensive glass factory at Ottawa. Attached to his fine residence in Ottawa, is a beautiful park of about one hundred and thirty-five acres, in which he keeps deer, comprising every species known to North America, and many others from foreign countries. Since retiring from his profession, in 1864, he has traveled in every section of his own country, visiting the Pacific coast three times. He has visited Europe twice, traveling extensively in England, Scotland, France, Italy, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, stopping for a time at Hammerfett, the most northern town in the world. He is author of several deservedly popular works, which do credit to his reputation as a ripe scholar and racy writer. Among some of the most noted are, "Origin of the Prairies," "American Deer," "Summer in Norway," and an exhaustive work on the "American Cervus." In 1874, he purchased a residence in Chicago, where he passes his winters, living in the summer at his beautiful home in Ottawa. There is no man in Illinois to-day, perhaps, who stands higher in the estimation of the public, as a jurist and civilian. His fame is not confined to his own State; but he is widely known to both hemispheres as a scholar and an author.

LANING CAPT. JAMES, Was born in the village of Bridgeport, adjoining the Post Town of Brownsville, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, May 19th, A. D. 1821; received a limited common school education; commenced at the age of fourteen years to learn the trade of cabinet maker; afterwards worked at carpentering, building, engineering and mill work, in all of which he became well versed; at the age of twenty-two engaged in steam-boating on the western rivers, as clerk and captain; first visited LaSalle county, Ill., as First Clerk of steamer Lehigh, landing at Ottawa, July 31st, 1844; made several trips during that and the next year from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Hennepin and Peru, Ill.; afterwards engaged in steamboat cabin building at his native town, for several years, acquiring a thorough knowledge of steamboat building from keel to hurricane-deck. This, together with his experience in navigating the western rivers, fitted him in a high degree for the position he afterwards attained in the Inland Navy of the United States. The beginning of the war for the Union found him engaged in steamboating at St. Louis. Captain, (afterwards Rear Admiral,) Andrew H. Foote, U. S. N., arrived at St. Louis in the fall of 1861, for the purpose of organizing the Western Flotilla, the gun-boats for which were then in an advanced state of completion. He was accompanied by Commander Wm. D. Porter, and other regular naval officers, who were to have immediate command of the gun-boats; the subordinate officers to be appointed from civil life. Commander, afterwards Commodore, Porter, was assigned to the Essex, this being the first Iron-Clad war vessel ever commissioned by the United States. To Commodore Porter Captain Laning offered his services as a volunteer for three years, or during the war, which were accepted; and a commission was issued by Flag Officer Foote, bearing date Sept. 23d, 1861, as a Second Master in the Western Flotilla, (a rank equivalent to Second Lieutenant in the army,) and he was ordered to report for duty on board U. S. gun-boat Essex, as 2d officer in command of the 1st Division and Bow Battery. During the winter of '61-2 the Essex was engaged in cruising between Cairo and the strong fortifications of the enemy at Columbus on the Mississippi River. Early in February she was ordered to proceed to an anchorage a few miles below Fort Henry, on the Tennessee river, in company with several other iron-clads, for the purpose of making a combined attack with the army on the stronghold of the enemy, which was considered the center of the Rebel line extending from Bowling Green, Ky., to Columbus on the Mississippi River. The battle of Fort Henry, which occurred Feb. 6th, 1862, was one of the most important battles fought during the Rebellion, and was especially remarkable as being the first battle ever fought in defence of the United States in which iron-clad vessels were engaged with land fortifications. This being the first practical test of the untried iron-clads, was a most signal victory for the navy, for the army, owing to heavy rains, were unable to arrive in time to co-operate, and the fort was taken and the Rebel line broken by the navy alone; the Essex being most conspicuous, having, in the language of Flag Officer Foote, rendered "most effective" service. General Lloyd Tilghman, who commanded the fort, also bore testimony to the destructiveness of her fire (after his surrender).

The first shell fired from the Essex entered the fortifications, exploded handsomely, dismounted a gun, and did other execution, and it may be recorded as a historical fact, that this was the first shot ever fired from the deck of an iron-clad vessel, (which did execution,) in defence of the United States.

Capt. Laning had command of the battery during most of the engagement, and received promotion for meritorious services. Just before the fort surrendered he and his division were relieved by the 2d division, which had as yet taken no part in the battle; in five minutes afterwards the officer who took his place was mortally wounded.

The Essex being somewhat defective in construction, and considerably used up in the fight, was ordered to St. Louis for reconstruction, Capt. Laning assisting in the superintendence of the work, during which time he was engaged with Commodore Porter in perfecting plans for a powerful ram gun-boat, which the exigencies of the war demanded, to be converted from one of the most powerful Mississippi River steamers. These plans were approved by the war department, and an order was received to purchase such a steamer, and proceed with all possible despatch to prepare her for service. The steamer Aleck Scott was selected and purchased, and Capt. Laning detailed to superintend her reconstruction and she was named "Fort Henry," in honor of our recent victory. Under this name this vessel was reconstructed, but before being placed in commission the Hon. Secretary of the Navy changed her name to La Fayette, in honor of that distinguished general of the Revolutionary War. This vessel was 296 feet in length over all, 40 feet wide at the knuckle, and 52 feet on deck; her sides being an angle of 30 degrees; her depth of hold was 10 feet, and draught of water 8½ feet; her bottom was 18 inches thick; her sides at the knuckle 18 inches; at the main deck 6 feet; her casemates were 22 inches of solid timber, put together in layers with bolts and spikes, the layers being alternately upright and horizontal; she was covered with one inch of iron plating on her sides from spar-deck to one foot below the water line; her forward and after casemates were circular, and covered with two-inch plating at an angle of 45 degrees. Her machinery consisted of 2 high-pressure engines, (side wheel,) cylinders 26 inches in diameter, 8 feet stroke, with 5 double flue boilers, 42 inches in diameter, 24 feet long; her machinery was all protected with heavy casemates and iron plating and grating. She had on her bow a ram, made of gun metal, weighing 24,000 pounds, put on in eight sections, and bound together by means of steel keys dovetailed in, and a steel band shrunk around the points; this ram was backed up by a solid timber bow for 37 feet, and a Kelson bulkhead running from stem to stern, 16 inches thick, secured with heavy iron bolts, from keel to main deck. Her weight was 1,700 tons, and her speed against the Mississippi current five miles per hour. Her batteries consisted of two eleven-inch Dahlgren Pivot Guns at the bow, each throwing a shell weighing 104 pounds, and requiring a charge of 15 pounds of powder; two 100-pound Parrot rifle-guns at the stern, and four nine-inch Dahlgren and one 50-pound Parrot rifle on each broadside, making 14 guns of the heaviest calibre then in use. Soon after commencing the La Fayette, orders were received for the purchase of another, to be finished on the same general plans. The steamer Choctaw was purchased and reconstructed under that name. This work occupied the balance of the year '62, and the spring of '63, when they were both finished and put into commission, their joint cost being about $500,000. The amount of iron used in their construction was 700 tons, and of timber about 250,000 feet was consumed. Commodore Porter having been ordered to Vicksburg with the Essex in July, 1862, the superintendence of these vessels devolved entirely upon Capt. Laning. The Western Flotilla having been transferred in the meantime from the army to the regular navy, by act of Congress all vessels then in commission were turned over to the navy department, whilst those under construction, to avoid confusion in accounts, had to be finished and paid for by the army. Capt. Laning found himself, as it were, neither one nor the other, and for several months pushed on the work with none to molest, the chief quartermaster of the army footing the bills. The vessels were both finished and put into commission, their batteries mounted, supplies put on board, and flags hoisted on both by Capt. Laning, being perhaps the only instance in the history of the United States where a volunteer officer of his rank was entrusted with such responsible duties, acting as commanding officer of two of the most powerful vessels in the Mississippi Squadron, and superintendent of construction at the same time. For this service he was promoted to the rank of Acting Volunteer Lieutenant in the regular navy of the U. S. After remaining at St. Louis a short time to settle his accounts with the quarter-master's department, he was assigned in the fall of '63 to the command of the U. S. Steamer Rattler, then stationed at Roaney, Miss., with command of the river from Roaney Island to Grand Gulf. Early in the spring of '64 his vessel was ordered to Davis Bend, 35 miles below Vicksburg, to guard the iron-clad Indianola, which vessel had been captured from us by the enemy some months previous, and sunk, at extreme high water, on the farm of Joseph Davis, (brother of the Rebel President,) just outside the levee on the main land, just one mile from the channel of the river at low water, a wide sand-bar intervening, which overflowed at an ordinary stage of high water, but the vessel having been floated in on extraordinary high water the probabilities were that several years might elapse before she could be floated out again. Captain Laning at once formed the design of launching her and restoring her to the service, her value for rebuilding being about $280,000.

His plan was to raise her up, placing blocks and cribs under her bottom; thoroughly repair and straighten her; excavate a basin in the sand-bar large enough to float her, lay a set of launching ways and place her on cradles and slide ways, removing the blocks and cribs, and on the first rise of the river which overflowed the sand-bar and filled up the basin, to launch her and float her out. Admiral David D. Porter, then in command of the squadron, approved these plans and gave Capt. Laning carte blanc orders to assume command of the Indianola and proceed to launch her in his own way, and when afloat to have her towed to Mound City Navy Yard, superintend her reconstruction, mount new batteries, and report for duty. The work was at once commenced. By means of jack-screws this ponderous vessel, weighing eleven hundred tons, was raised from the ground six feet, and in just forty days was ready for launching, the ways being laid and the basin excavated, and a channel 200 yards long, 55 feet wide, and an average depth of 9 feet, having been excavated for the launching ways. This required the removal of about 6,000 cubic yards of sand with shovels and wheelbarrows, kindly furnished by Gen. Sherman, in command of the army at Vicksburg. The number of blocks and pieces of cribbing used was about 2,000, cut from the cotton-wood groves adjacent to the vessel. The number of sailors employed on the work was about 100 each day, besides about 50 carpenters and caulkers. The cost in cash to the Government was less than $7,000. On the 11th of January, 1865, the water having risen to the proper stage, she was successfully launched and floated out, and was towed to Mound City Navy Yard, arriving there on the 17th. For this service Capt. Laning was again recommended for promotion, and received from Admiral Porter, who was then in command of the North Atlantic squadron, the following

NORTH ATLANTIC SQUADRON,
U. S. FLAG SHIP MALVERN, }
CAPE FEAR RIVER, Jan. 31, 1865. }

Dear Sir:

I must congratulate you most sincerely at the successful issue of your labors on the Indianola. It is but an additional evidence of your character for industry, perseverance and intelligence, and reflects the greatest credit upon you, as well as the service to which you belong. It is no small triumph thus to have placed again in our hands for service a most valuable vessel, taken from us by the enemy. There are triumphs of skill such as you have displayed, as glorious as if the result was from combat, and as such you have my highest commendations.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) DAVID D. PORTER,
Rear Admiral.

To Acting Vol. Lieut.

Jas. Laning, U. S. N., MOUND CITY, ILL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 14, 1870.
CAPT. JAS. LANING, La Salle, Ill.:

Dear Sir—Herewith find enclosed certificates of Non-Indebtedness from the 2d and 3d Auditors of the Treasury and from the Ordnance office of the U. S. army, which cover all possible liabilities that you may have incurred in your official capacity, and establish a record of which you may well be proud. This satisfactory result is truly wonderful in consideration of the magnitude of your disbursements and the loose manner in which accounts were kept during the first years of the war, and I can most heartily congratulate you upon your good fortune in getting a release from all liabilities without the intervention of Congress.

Truly yours,

GEO. S. PRINDLE,
Attorney and Solicitor.

ORDNANCE OFFICE.

GEO. M. PRINDLE, Esq.:

Sir—In reply to your verbal inquiry as to whether acting Lieut James Laning, U. S. N., Superintendent of Gun Boat Construction, is indebted to this office on account of ordnance and ordnance stores, I have to inform you that he is not indebted, so far as known to this Bureau, for such stores.

(Signed) W. L. SMOOT,
Lieut. of Ordnance.

Since the war, Capt. Laning has been successfully operating the Phoenix Glass Works, at LaSalle, having now been a resident of LaSalle Co. twenty-two years, and at this writing, is just fifty-six years of age. He first married, in his native town, on Sept. 9, 1845, Miss Catherine Emma Jones, who bore him six children, three of whom died in infancy; the others, Mrs. H. H. Candee, of Cairo, Ill.; Mrs. S. V. Cornish, and Miss Lydia M. Laning, still survive. His wife died at St. Louis, Dec. 26, 1859, and he again married, July 16, 1864, Mrs. Sarah A., widow of James M. Mills, (deceased), who is still living.

Inf. in April, 1861, for one hundred days, first call; then in same year, in August, re-enlisted in 26th Ill. Inf.; in April, 1862, near Island No. 10, during a severe storm when several soldiers were killed by falling of trees during the night time, he was severely injured by tree and limbs falling on him, and was honorably discharged June 1, 1862; re-enlisted again, Aug. 5, 1863, as veteran in 104th I. V. I., and remained until the close of war, when he was honorably discharged June 13, 1865; married Miss Celia Pearre, Dec. 31, 1872; she was born in Adams Co.

Ohio, May 19, 1852; one son, Jos. P., named after Grandfather Ebersol; Albert H. Ebersol is the oldest settler in the town of Grand Rapids.

EBERSOL JOSEPH (deceased), was born in the year 1790, in what is now Dauphin Co., in the State of Pennsylvania, his father, Abram Ebersol, having settled there about the year 1765, from Germany. Joseph, at 17 years of age, was apprenticed to learn the blacksmith's trade, serving a term of four years. At 26 years of age he was married to Elizabeth Shuey. A few years later, having met with some losses, he abandoned his shop and rented a farm, on which he moved with his young family, and continued on the same until the summer of 1834, when he determined to seek fortune in the far West. He accordingly sold out his goods, and with two horses and wagon started for Eldorado, May 4, 1834. Arriving at Wheeling, Va., he first saw a steamboat, and embarked on the steamboat Emigrant for Cincinnati, the Queen City of the West. Thence he traveled overland, via Dayton, Richmond, Indianapolis, to Danville, Ill. Here he met Mr. Killpatrick, who was going to Winchester, Schuyler Co., Ill., who afterwards became State Senator. Both families journeyed in company through the Prairie State, via Decatur and Springfield, to Jacksonville, where, meeting with two old friends, Downey Buchanan and Dr. James Roberts, he camped, and visited the counties of Adams and Schuyler, on horseback, during which he learned to distrust the land titles in the military district, and hence determined to seek a home elsewhere. On his return to Jacksonville, the friends held a council, which resulted in his visiting LaSalle Co. He arrived at Ottawa, July 16, 1834, and encamped under some magnificent white oaks that stood at the head of the Glover Ravine. His friends Buchanan and Roberts followed, and settled in Ottawa the next summer. From the camp last mentioned, the county was explored for a suitable location, which was chosen on the head of Covel Creek, on the border of the prairie, near what has since been known as Island Grove, Secs. 5 and 6, Range 4 E, Grand Rapids Township. Paying the Widow McKernan $500 for her claim, leaving him only $100, he and his industrious partner at once applied themselves to the task of improving and beautifying their new home. They began here Aug. 1, 1834. The Indians became constant visitors at his house, but were friendly, and no fears were entertained. Here he lived and labored until the day of his demise, which took place in 1873, his faithful consort having preceded him about three years. Of the period from 1834 to 1873 it is hardly necessary to speak, as all the old settlers for a hundred or more miles around him have often partaken of his hospitality, and have known him as an honorable and honest man. In 1836 the public lands were put upon the market, in the month of June. The season was a very rainy one, and as the teams could not be spared from the farm, he walked to Chicago, bid off 164 acres of land, covering his improvements, and returned to the bosom of his family, with a title from the government for the same. He now had a sure home for himself and family, and with this practical plank in the platform of his theology, viz. that, "Work is worship," he earnestly applied himself to the work in hand, and with the aid of his energetic and never-tiring consort, was able to divide real estate among his children to the value of thirty-five to forty thousand dollars, and this without entering into any of the speculating schemes which were so common at this time. Being a teetotaler, never tasting or touching spirituous liquors, by honest and persevering industry and economy, fair and honorable dealing, he won the confidence and respect of his contemporaries. He came to be regarded, and was one of the solid men of our County. His remains now rest on the bank of his favorite stream, and the trees he loved, shade and seem to guard the beautiful monument that marks the spot where he rests, and where his descendants make pilgrimages to keep alive his memory, and that of the partner of his labors, to read this brief and modest inscription:

WALKER AUGUSTUS E.
Capitalist; 122 La Salle street; born at Ottawa, July 14, 1842; married Miss Isabel Chomplin, in February, 1871; have three children.

WALKER GEORGE ELMORE. was born at Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 24, 1803, and came to St. Clair Co., in this State, in 1812. Fourteen years later the family removed to and settled in Ottawa. Attaining his majority, the subject of this sketch engaged in trading with the Indians, and by always keeping faith with them in all his engagements, he obtained influence and possession of their perfect confidence, which proved so advantageous in many trying emergencies during the Indian troubles incident to the early occupancy of this Co. by the whites. About this time, also, he became connected with a company in the construction of the first railroad ever built in Illinois, a road leading from East St. Louis to the coal mines at the "bluffs." After this was finished, Mr. Walker returned to Ottawa, locating here permanently, and on the organization of LaSalle Co. in 1830, was elected its first sheriff. It was while holding this position that Mr. W. made that remarkable trip to the far West after some Indian prisoners, the recital of which sounds like overdrawn fiction. The substance of the narrative is, that in 1832, during the Black Hawk war, a family named Beresford, on Indian Creek, had been cruelly murdered by the Indians. Two young Indians were afterwards identified as engaged in the murder, and were indicted for the crime by the Grand Jury of La Salle County. The Indians were placed in charge of Mr. Walker, but as the trial was postponed for six months, the tribe to which the young men belonged had moved away beyond the Mississippi, and Mr. Walker allowed them to follow, himself going bail for their return and appearance at the next term of the court. At the appointed time the Indians returned, but on account of floods, etc., no court was held, and the Indians returned to their tribe, supposing the matter was done with. At the next term of the court, however, Mr. Walker was called upon to produce his prisoners, and he promptly started on a journey of 300 miles across the country, on horseback and alone, to bring them. In due course of time he presented himself to the tribe and stated his case, when, without hesitation, the young men were placed in his charge, and alone he produced them in Ottawa on the day appointed for their trial. The Indians, it may be added, were acquitted. During the Black Hawk war, Mr. W. organized and became captain of a band of friendly Indians, rendering frequent and efficient service. His familiarity with the Indian dialects enabled him also to be of important service during that war to Gen. Scott as interpreter. Subsequently Mr. W. was employed by the government as surveyor in Illinois, Missouri, Mississippi, etc., following the vocation for several years. He then returned to Ottawa and engaged in the mercantile business, pursuing it with varying fortunes from about 1838 until about 1854, when he retired from the business in Ottawa, having amassed a goodly fortune. More on account of his health than with a view to profit, Mr. W. was next found in the wilds of Union County, Ill., opening a fruit farm, in which he was entirely successful. He then removed to Chicago, where he resided permanently until his death. After a busy and useful life, Mr. Walker's death occurred at the residence of his son, Evans A. Walker, 34 Indiana avenue, on Monday, Nov. 9, 1874, at the age of seventy-one years. His body was taken to Ottawa, for burial among his kindred. His wife was Miss Margaret Thomas, of St. Clair Co., to whom he was married in 1836, and by whom he had eight children, only two of whom, Evans Augustus Walker and Mrs. Mary A. Coleman, survive him. In referring to his death, the Ottawa Free Trade, of Nov. 14, 1874, said: "Mr. Walker, through life, was known as a man of great energy of character, of fine business qualifications, of fair education, and in all the walks of life, noted for his strict probity and uprightness of character. Kindly, genial and benevolent, he always had around him a host of warm personal friends, among whom might be mentioned most of the historic names of Illinois and adjoining States."

J. D. EASTER & CO.

The developing of this great western country has brought to the front a few representative men in each of the leading branches of industry. To develop the state, and cause it to blossom like the rose, necessitated farmers; and farmers could do nothing without tools and machines, and the result was far-seeing men, with energy and enterprise, laid the foundation of the great industries that, by the aid of capital, have been developed into mammoth institutions.

Among the manufacturers engaged in producing machinery and implements for the farmers, there is probably nowhere to be found a firm more widely and favorably known, than that of J. D. Easter & Co., Chicago. They are recognized as the originators and introducers of the celebrated Marsh Harvester, the original of its class, and to-day the most successful Harvester made. The experience of each year suggests new ideas that are at once adopted and added to the machine, keeping it in advance of all the other machinery devised for grain gathering. Heeding the call for an Automatic Grain Binder, they have secured the most simple and satisfactory device yet invented, and attached it to the Marsh, and together they are the most complete machine for the farmer known for harvesting. Not content with a harvester of common size only, they also make one called the Harvester King; which is the Marsh, increased to a six foot cut, and has an immense capacity for work. In addition to these harvesters, they also make the Warrior Mower, the most perfectly working grass cutter in the field. With this, as with all machines they make, the very best material and workmanship is employed, and the Warrior is celebrated for its perfect work and durability.

The Corr Sulky Plow, also made by them, is a marvel of perfection in its work. It is almost amusing to see with what ease a small boy can manage it, and do as satisfactory work as an experienced man. The independent crank axle adjusts it to any condition or shape of surface, and it will work any where that a plow can be asked to run.

Their experience in the field, among the farmers and stock men, brought to their notice the need of automatic pumps that can be depended on. To meet this necessity they commenced the manufacture of the Marsh Wind Mill, to all intents and purposes the same as any other mill, save in one important feature, and that is its graduating crank, by which the amount of work done by the mill is wholly governed by the winds, the stroke to the pump being changed from about three inches to eight inches, so that it will work in a lighter wind than any other wind mill made, and in strong winds increases its work, by which means it will do more pumping, by half, than any other of the same size. These facts, we are assured, can be demonstrated at any time.

These are the leading machines they make. In addition to them, they also make the Easter Harvester, in two sizes—6½ and 5 feet cut; the Marsh Riding Cultivator; a Header Attachment for the Harvester, etc., making them the manufacturers of the largest assortment of large and useful farm implements and machines in the country. To have room in which to do all the work required in supplying these to the farmers, they built a substantial brick block at Nos. 14 and 18, South Canal Street, 50x150, three stories high, where they have a most complete and convenient warehouse and offices, and can transact their immense business without delay or confusion.
