John Thoreson came to Rockford in 1855, and was engaged as journeyman for some of the carriage and wagon establishments of the city until 1866, when he began for himself as a manufacturer of carriages and wagons. For a number of years after beginning business on his own account, he turned out much new and complete work, keeping from ten to twelve men constantly employed. He invested in valuable property in the city, and continued to do so until he is now a large property owner, and one of the most substantial men of the city. He was married in his native country, in 1848, to Miss Martha Oslund, who was born not far from Christiana, Norway, December 4, 1822, and who was a true helpmate to her husband until her death in Rockford, on the 31st of August, 1887. She was a devoted wife and mother, and a consistent member of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church of Rockford for thirty years. Mr. Thoreson is also a charter member of that church, and has been an official member for many years. In politics, he adheres to the Republican party.

His marriage resulted in the birth of seven children, only two of whom are living: Thomas, a carriage painter of Rockford; and Matilda J., wife of Alfred Abrahamson, who resides with her father. Mr. Abrahamson is a designer, stockholder and Director in the Mantel and Furniture Company, of Rockford. He and his wife are the parents of two children, Herbert and Amy.

In the year 1862, Mr. Thoreson enlisted from Rockford, in Company K, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, and served as a private with his regiment in the Cumberland Army. He was in the battles of Perryville, Stone River and Murfreesboro, where he was severely wounded in the left arm. He was sent to the hospital, and was there taken as a prisoner of war, being afterward confined in Libby Prison for two months. He was then exchanged and a few months later was honorably discharged for disability. He fought bravely for the Union, and was in many fierce battles. He is a member of the G. L. Nevius Post, No. 1, G. A. R., at Rockford.

MOS C. SAMMONS stands among the leaders of the stockraising and farming interests of Harlem Township. Winnebago County, where he owns a farm, which in point of cultivation and general improvement is scarcely surpassed by any in the neighborhood. He was born in Lincoln County, Province of Ontario, Canada, November 4, 1839. His father, John J. Sammons, is a native of Orange County, N. Y., his birth occurring December 18, 1782. His father, also named John, hailed from the Empire State, while the great-grandfather of our subject was born in Holland and came to America during Colonial days.

The grandfather of our subject was a farmer and died in Orange County, N. Y., in his ninety-sixth year, his wife departing this life at the age of ninety-four years. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and was highly respected in his community. John J. Sammons was reared and married in New York and in 1812 served in the war of that period. He went to Canada about 1823, and purchased a tract of timber land in Lincoln County, where he erected the log house in which our subject was born. He followed his trade of a blacksmith and resided there until 1856, when, accompanied by his wife and three children, he eame to Winnebago County. Locating in Harlem Township, he purchased the farm where our subject now resides, for which he paid $22.50 per acre, including the crop, which was in. Mr. Sammons devoted his time to the cultivation of his farm until the infirmities of old age caused him to retire. His decease occurred December 11, 1883, at the advanced age of one hundred and one years. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Anna Snure, a native of Lincoln County, Canada, her birth occurring October 6, 1796. She was the daughter of John Snure and died on the home farm September 17, 1860.

Amos C. Sammons was seventeen years of age when he came to this county, and at once commenced to assist his father in the work of the farm; he was never separated from his parents until their decease. He now owns and occupies the old homestead, which he is cultivating in a manner which brings him in the largest returns. June 20, 1867, he was married to Laura J. Rhodes, a native of Roscoe Township, Winnebago County, and the daughter of John J. Rhodes, who was born in Oneida County, N. Y. The grandfather of Mrs. Sammons, also named John, was born in 1reland, of English parents, and on emigrating to America resided for a time in Rome, N. Y., whence he removed to Marcellus, and operated a woolen mill until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Hannah Combes.

The great-grandfather of Mrs. Sammons, Thomas Rhodes, was born in England, and with three brothers came to America, locating in Rhode Island about 1710. He there married a Miss Butler, soon after which event he returned to Europe and settled in Roscrea, Ireland, where he built a stone house and spent the rest of his days.

John J. Rhodes was reared in New York State, and after the death of his wife went to Canada and established a woolen mill near London, in company with his brother Joseph. They operated successfully together until 1837, when Mr Rhodes came overland to Illinois, bringing with him a quantity of the cloth he had manufactured. Locating in what is now Roscoe Township, he entered a tract of Government land and erected a sawmill which he conducted for a number of years, his decease occurring in 1859. The mother of Mrs. Sammons, known in her maidenhoed as Pamelia Wilson, was born in Kilham, Niagara County, Canada, and was a daughter of Crowell and Hester Wilson; she died in 1875. Mr. and Mrs. Sammons have four children: Fred E., Harry L., William G. and Anna Laura. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, in his political relations, our subject is a Republican, easting his first vote for Abraham Lincoln.

HEODORE JOHNSON is a practical and progressive farmer of Winnebago County, residing on section 19, Cherry Valley Township, where he owns and operates seventy-six and one-half acres of land. His fields are well tilled, and the many improvements seen upon the farm indicate the thrift and enterprise of the owner.

The father of our subject, Montraville Johnson, was born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., January 21, 1809, and was a son of Henry Johnson, a native of Rhode Island, who died in Jefferson County, N. Y., about 1842. He was the father of a large family numbering ten sons and a daughter. Four died in childhood, but seven grew to mature years and became heads of families. Three are yet living: Warren, who resides in Ashtabula County, Ohio; Mrs. Patience Whitney, and Montraville Johnson. He was reared in the usual manner of farmer lads, and acquired but a limited education. In Hoosie, N. Y., he was united in marriage to Sarah Richmond, daughter of Frederick and Elsie Richmond. They were both about nineteen years of age when married, and upon a farm in the Empire State they began their domestic life. The year 1866 witnessed their emigration to Illinois, and the following year Mr. Johnson purchased fifty-six acres of land in Boone County, five miles northwest of Belvidere, where he carried on agricultural pursuits until 1883. He then sold his farm and removed to Rockford, where he made his home for two years, after which he settled upon his present farm.

The parental family numbered eight children, but five have passed away, all dying when quite young. The surviving members of the family are Delia, widow of George W. Tyler, who lives with her father and brother; Edward R., who is living in Hoosic Falls, N. Y.; and Theodore, of this sketch. Neither of the sons is married, Mr. Johnstein.

H.H.STONE.

son has but one grandchild, Sanford N. Tyler, son of Mrs. Tyler, who resides with her father. The young man now resides in Spokane Falls, Wash. Mrs. Johnson was called to her final rest on the 5th of July, 1880, and her remains were interred in the Tobine burial ground, near the old home in Boone County, where the son Lorenzo also lies.

Our subject was reared in the usual manner of farmer lads, and to farming has devoted his entire time and attention. He now operates his father's land, and is considered a successful farmer, industrious and enterprising. He is widely and favorably known throughout this community, and has many friends in the county. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles and his father has been a life-long Democrat.

IALMER H. STONE. A position of prominence among the citizens of Rockford is occupied by this gentleman, who has made his home in this city since March, 1884. However, he had resided in Winnebago County for ten years prior to his location in this city, having come hither in January, 1874, and spent some time in Rockford, where he was connected with the Hess-Hopkins Manufacturing Company. Afterward he purchased a well-improved farm three miles from the city, in Rockford Township, and operated that place until, on account of failing health caused by sunstroke, he relinquished his active labors and retired to the city.

Although no longer a resident of his farm, Mr. Stone still retains an interest in its management, and does a large business as a wholesale dairyman, supplying large hotels and restaurants with milk. He is one of the original stockholders in the Rockford Burial Case Company, of which he is now a Director, and has contributed not a little to the growth of this corporation, one of the most extensive in the Forest City. He came to this city from Minnesota, where he was engaged in business as a dry-goods merchant, furniture dealer and undertaker at St. Charles for some seventeen years.

Mr. Stone, whose portrait accompanies this sketch, was born in Franklin County, Vt., in 1835, and learned the trade of a mechanic in his youth. His father, James Stone, belonged to a worthy New England family, of English descent, his ancestors having emigrated to America prior to the Revolutionary War. He grew to manhood in the Green Mountain State, and in 4844, accompanied by his wife and children, removed to Sheboygan County, Wis., where he commenced life as a pioneer farmer within two miles of the last house on the west in the State at that time. It will thus be seen that he was one of the earliest settlers of that part of Wisconsin, and amid primitive surroundings he toiled for years, rearing a family of eight children, and improving a good property. One child died at the age of seven, but the remaining seven are all living, and, with the exception of our subject, are farmers.

James Stone continued to live in Wisconsin until his death in 1857, at the age of sixty-one years. He was prominent in local politics, and served as Justice of the Peace for many years. He named the town of Winooski, Sheboygan County, Wis., and was its first Postmaster. In political belief, he was a Republican, and favored all measures ealculated to advance the welfare of his community. His widow, who still survives, makes her home with a daughter, Mrs. Selden Akin, in Wisconsin. In February, 1892, she celebrated her ninety-third birthday, and although so old, is hale and active, writes with a steady hand, and has full possession of her physical and mental powers. Lucinda Danforth, as she was known in girlhood, was born in Vermont, and was of English extraction, and has for many years been identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In the parental family our subject is the youngest with one exception. He became of age in Wisconsin, and afterward went to Minnesota, where he lived a number of years. In the winter of 1863-64, he enlisted in the service of his country as a member of Company D, Seventh Minnesota Infantry, Capt. Rolla Banks and Col. William R. Marshall, ex-Governor of Minnesota, commanding. The regiment was an integral part of the Army of the Cumberland, and engaged in active battle as well as in detached duty. At the close of the war, Mr. Stone was honorably discharged in September, 1865, and returned to his Minnesota home.

In Wisconsin, Mr. Stone was married to Miss Lucy McMurphy, of Paincsville, Ohio, who died in St. Charles, Minn., nine years after marriage, leaving one son, Roy, now in Colorado. Afterward Mr. Stone was married, in this county, to Mary Etta Millard, who was born in Massachusetts, and came to Illinois when twenty years old, in 1865, settling with her parents on a farm near Rockford. Her father, John W. Millard, departed this life March 20, 1891, aged eighty years, his last days having been passed at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Stone. His widow, whose maiden name was Martha Harmon, still survives at the age of eighty years, and makes her home with her daughter in Rockford. Mr. and Mrs. Stone have one son, Frank, who is attending school in Rockford. In their religious connections, Mr. and Mrs. Stone are members of the Christian Union Church, and socially, he belongs to the Eastern Star. He is a Master Mason, and a prominent member of the G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, at Rockford.

OHN A. CARLSON, Superintendent of the Skandia Plow Company, in which he has been a stockholder and Director since its inception in 1880, has also filled his present position and that of foreman most of these years. With the correct business principles and ethiciency with which this business is conducted, it has not failed to contribute largely to the convenience of the community, and to its own established prosperity.

Mr. Carlson was born in Kalmar Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, December 18, 1845, and remained there until 1868, when he left home and friends to seek his fortune in the New World. He arrived in New York City in June of that year, and for a year following was a resident of Ford County, Ill. From there he went to Chicago to learn the blacksmith's trade, and afterward was foreman for Brown Bros., manufacturers of that city, until 1874, when he came to Rockford. For a number of years after coming to this city, he followed the blacksmith's trade, but finally became connected with the present plow company, and has since given this business his entire attention. He is a very skillful workman and thoroughly understands his business.

Since his residence in this country, Mr. Carlson has been joined by two brothers, Conrad and C. Alfred. The former is a grain dealer of Farnhamville, Iowa, and is married. The latter is single and resides in the mining regions of Beaverville, Cal. A sister, Tilda, is the wife of Gus Lindstrom and resides in Chicago. The parents are still living in Kalmar Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, and are now quite aged, the father, Carl Peterson, born in 1819, and the mother, Gustavia (Johnson) Peterson, born in 1822. The former is a Swedish farmer and both are members of the Swedish Lutheran Church.

Our subject was married in Rockford to Miss Lotta Anderson, a native of Wester Gothland, Sweden, who came to the United States with her mother in 1868. She was quite young when her father died in his native country, and her mother died after reaching this country, in going from Chicago to Rockford. Mrs. Carlson went on to Rockford, where she had two sisters living, and has since made her home in this city. She and her husband are members of the First Lutheran Church, and Mr. Carlson was Trustee of the same at one time. He is a Republican in politics. They are the parents of four interesting children: Alfred C., C. Alma, Henry and Leonard, all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Carlson have a very pleasant and comfortable home at No. 1201 Fourth Avenue, Rockford.

HARLES FLETCHER. The career of our subject as a pioneer citizen has been one eminently worthy and useful to the community in which he has resided, and his neighbors and old friends unitedly bear testimony to his sterling worth and valuable services. He is at the present time living a life of ease and retirement on South Main Street. Mr. Fletcher has been a resident of Winnebago County since 1854, and of the State since 1838, having spent the intervening years in Ogle County, where he located on a tract of three hundred acres of land in what is now Pine Rock Township. At that time the country was very sparsely settled, and Indians were often seen while traveling through that region. Mr. Fletcher went to Oregon for his mail, and hauled wheat to Chicago for many years to the market, receiving as low as fifty cents per bushel for it. The land in that part of Ogle County did not come into market until five years after our subject located there, and as Dixon was the land office, he went thither and entered his claim of three hundred acres. One-half of this he improved and resided upon until 1854, which was the date of his coming to Rockford.

Born in Kennebunk, York County, Me., October 30, 1818, our subject came hither from Massachusetts where his parents removed when he was a lad of nine years. He is a son of the Rev. Nathaniel H. Fletcher, a native of the Bay State, who was married to our subject's mother at Wells, Me. The lady bore the maiden name of Sarah Story, a native of that place, and the daughter of Capt. John Story. The young couple later returned to Middlesex County, Mass., where they spent the remainder of their lives, having become the parents of nine children.

Charles Fletcher is the youngest and only surviving member of the parental family. His father died September 4, 1834, having been connected with the Congregational Church as a minister for the greater part of his life. He was a well-educated man, being a graduate of Harvard College in the Class of 1793, and occupied a high position among his fellow-preachers. The decease of our subject's mother occurred May 26, 1831; she was also a member of the Congregational Church, and a true, consistent Christian lady.

Miss Anna M. Cory became the wife of our subject in Lowell, Mass. She is a native of Vermont, and a daughter of James and Deborah Cory, natives, of New England and Ontario, respectively. To our subject and his wife have been born four children, all of whom are deceased. They are members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church of this city, to the support of which they are liberal contributors. In his political relations, he has always been an ardent Republican.

TLIAM HENRY SCHOONMAKER. In this gentleman Winnebago County has a fine representative of its native-born citizens, one who by his enterprise, progressiveness and marked ability, is materially forwarding its financial welfare in several ways. He is at present residing on a portion of the old homestead, and is making a success of his occupation as a farmer.

Our subject, who was born in this county, May 5, 1852, is the son of Henry Schoonmaker, one of the pioneers of the county, who had his birth in the town of Knox, Albany County, N. Y., where also Henry Schoonmaker, the grandfather, as far as is known, was born and carried on the combined occupations of a blacksmith and farmer.

The father of our subject learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, but was later employed in an ax factory at Cohoes, N. Y. In 1838, accompanied by his wife and one child, he came to Illinois, at a time when Rockford was but a hamlet and all the land was owned by the Government. He made a claim to one hundred and sixty acres of land in what is now Winnebago Township, and when it came into market made the first entry in this county. He built a log house on his place, into which the family moved and where our subject was born. The elder Mr. Schoonmaker married Mary Lown, and departed this life on the old home farm in 1872, having at his death the magnificent estate of three hundred and twenty acres. The mother of our subject was a native of Scholiarie County, N. Y., and made her home on the old farm in Winnebago Township, until her death, April 11, 1892.

The eight children included in the parental family were Cornelia A., Emeline, John, David, Margaret N., William H., Charles E. and Mary. Our subject attended school in his youth, and assisted his father in cultivating the farm. He was married, in 1873, to Belinda Taugher, who was born in Pecatonica, this county, and was the daughter of James Taugher. The father was a native of Bellenair, Ireland, where also his father was born, and married Nora McCale. After the death of his wife, he came to America and died in Boston, two months later. The father of Mr. Schoonmaker was fifteen years old when he came to America, and after a short stay in Boston, went to Dunkirk, N. Y., and resided there until 1852, when he came to Pecatonica. Eighteen months later, he made Winnebago his home, being one of the oldest residents of the village. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Smith; she came from her native country, I reland, with a brother, when eighteen years of age, and died February 10, 1887. Mr. and Mrs. Schoonmaker have five children: Mary, Jennie, Laura, Winnie and Nellie. In his political views, Mr. Schoonmaker votes with his Republican party.

"USTAF V. LINDBLADE, who is engaged in the grocery business in Rockford, was born on the 14th of April, 1862, in the Province of Jensenping, Sweden, and is a son of John G. and Stena (Anderson) Lindblade. When he was only seven years of age, his parents came to this country and have since made their home in Rockford, where they are recognized as worthy people and valued citizens. Both are members of the Swedish Tabernacle of this city, Mr. Lindblade being one of the founders of the church and an active and leading member. He has also been one of its officers for some time, serving both as Deacon and Trustee. He votes with the Republican party. Only two of the children are now living. Alfred, the elder, married Charlotte Nordwall, and is living in Rockford.

Our subject is the younger of the two brothers. He was reared to manhood under the parental roof and acquired his education in the public schools of Rockford—He entered upon his business career as eterk in the grocery store, and after attaining his majority started out in business for himself. He ran a dairy for some eighteen months, and in May, 1889, as a partner of Mr. Peterson, began business as proprietor of a grocery store. Since December, 1891, he has been alone in business and has carried on a successful and lucrative trade.

In this city, Mr. Lindblade was united in marriage with Miss Anna S. Stockenberg, of Rockford, who was born in Sweden, and in 1868 came with her parents to this country. Her father, N. G. Stockenberg, is a farmer and dairyman of New Milford Township, and a well-known Swedish gentleman of this county. He and his wife were among the first, and are still leading, members in the Tabernacle Swedish Church, and are highly respected citizens.

Mrs. Lindblade remained with her parents until her marriage. By the union of our subject and his wife has been born a little daughter, Esther, March 11, 1887. Mr. and Mrs. Lindblade are among the prominent young Swedish people of this city. They are adherents of the same religious faith as their parents, and the husband is a Trustee in the church, in which he and his wife are faithful workers. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles, but has never sought or desired public office. He takes an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the city, its growth and its upbuilding, and gives his support to every worthy enterprise. He is a prosperous and promising young man who is bound to succeed in life, for he possesses the essential qualities of success and has excellent business ability, as his career has already demonstrated.

of years did a good business in Rockford as a house painter and decorator, but is now living a retired life, claims Scotland as the land of his nativity. He was born near Glasgow, while his parents were sojourning there, but during his youth, the family resided at different places. His father, John Johnson, was born in Scotland, and was of English extraction. He became a commercial traveler and from Manchester and Leeds, his headquarters, traveled all over the British provinces. He was thus engaged until his death.

Henry W. Pier.

He died very suddenly of a fever when sixty-five years of age.

Our subject is the only son of the family in this country. He acquired a good English education, and remained at home until fifteen years of age, when he started out in life for himself. He then went to Liverpool, where he served a seven years' apprenticeship under Mr. Beard, an English house painter and decorator, and after the death of his employer worked for his widow, serving as a journeyman. At length, he determined to try his fortune in America, and in the latter part of November, 1852, satled from Liverpool to the United States on the "Manhattan," landing in New York City, whence he went to Hamilton, N. Y., and subsequently to Earlville, that State, doing business as a boss painter until he came to Rockford.

Not long after his arrival in this country, Mr. Johnson was united in marriage to Miss Jennie M. Murphy. Unto them have been born three daughters: Lutitia, wife of L. M. Saley, editor of the Northwestern Lumberman, of Chicago, where they make their home; Sadie, wife of Dell E. Trahern, proprietor of the Rockford Brass Works, living with Mr. Johnson; and Nettie B., wife of C. R. Duncan, a dealer in fine arts at Detroit, Mich.

On coming to Rockford in 1856, Mr. Johnson embarked in business on his own account as a house painter and paper hanger, and did a successful business for many years. He was an expert at his work, and a skilled grainer and decorator. He built up a large trade, and from the beginning his efforts were crowned with prosperity, so that in the course of years he won a handsome competence. He was a straightforward and upright business man, enterprising and progressive, and well deserved his success. In December, 1890, he sold out to J. C. Pilkington, who had been in his employ for many years, and since that time has lived a retired life. He has a wide acquaintance in Rockford, and is well and favorably known. Himself, wife and children are members of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, and, in politics, he is a stalwart Republican, taking an active interest in the work of that party and its success. He is also a Knight Templar Mason and prominent in Masonic circles. Public-spirited and progressive, he gives his support and co-operation to all that pertains to the welfare of the community and the advancement of its best interests. The family is well worthy of representation in this volume. His daughters are all well married, their husbands being leading and successful business men in their various lines. Mrs. Trahern and her husband reside with her parents, and the lady is an artist of no inconsiderable ability.

ENRY W. PIER. More than one half-century ago in the Green Monntain State, a little district school was taught by a young gentleman, who, although a native of New York, had passed most of his life in Vermont. Among his pupils was a young lady in whom he had more than ordinary interest. She was about to leave Vermont for Illinois, together with her mother and sister, to join the other members of the family near Springfield. Teacher and pupil had a little private understanding in their business affairs, for they were to be in common, and it was arranged that he was to come West the ensuing year.

True to his promise, the year 1840 found our subject journeying Westward, and he finally reached Rochester, Sangamon County, Ill., his destination. There he found Nancy J. Taft in charge of a village school, and ready to step out of her position as teacher to give way to him. For six months the school was conducted in that manner, with an attendance of one hundred pupils. But neither was satisfied. They longed for a change and earnestly desired a home. Although the country was beautiful, yet the people were subject to fever and ague, and to establish a permanent home there would be to invite sickness and perchance an untimely death.

Henry W. Pier, for such was the name of the young gentleman, began to prepare to remove further North, and soon had a covered wagon, a span of bays and a trunk. Miss Taft, who was interested in the enterprise, also had a trunk and a dry-goods box filled with such things as only a woman's foresight could see the need of. In 1811, they were married and commenced their journey Northward, not knowing at that time just where they would locate.

Traveling through Peoria, Dixon, Rockford, Janesville, Madison and Ft. Winnebago, Mr Pier and his young wife at last reached Fond du Lac, Wis. Around them was a seemingly endless prairie, wild but beautiful. During their journey, wild animals would frequently cross the road, deer would gaze at them from the distance, and when the darkness of night would prevent further travel and they would lie down to sleep in the wagon, wolves would howl around them-the only noise that broke the silence of the night. The country to which they had come was healthy, but the Rock River region, through which they had passed, was ever uppermost in their mind and it was not long before they resolved to return hither in search of a home.

Accordingly, in the winter of 1841-42, Mr. and Mrs. Pier came to the vicinity of Belvidere, and here they have since resided, participating in the wondrous changes of fifty years and more. Mr. Pier has been principally engaged in farming, in which he has been very successful. In addition to his personal affairs, he has occupied positions of trust, both of a public and private character, and has discharged the duties of those offices with efficiency and fidelity. In politics, he is a Republican with Prohibition tendencies. Religiously, he is a firm believer in Jesus Christ as more than human, and the only One whose practices and teachmgs are safe to be accepted as our guide to eternal life. Those pioneers with whom he was associated in his younger years have mostly passed from the scenes of earth, but their places have been taken by others equally worthy, in whose hands the interests of Boone County are being upheld, and the principles of equity and justice are being promulgated.

As above stated, Mr. Pier is a native of New York and was born in Chenango County, January 9, 1815, the son of Albert D. and Clemma (Adams) Pier. Mrs. Pier was born in Addison County, Vt., September 5, 1819, the daughter of Josiah and Phebe (Davis) Taft. When our subject was a mere infant, his parents returned to Addison County, Vt., their native place, where the father soon afterward died. The mother was left destitute but struggled along bravely and untringly, inculcating lessons of virtue and honesty in her two children, our subject and a younger brother. Her memory is precious to our subject, who remembers that to her teachings he owes much.

Mr. and Mrs. Pier are the parents of two living children: the elder, Phebe L., married Marvin E. Woods, in 1870, and has since resided mostly in Iowa, although recently she removed to Colorado, where Mr. Woods died and lies buried. Their four children are all living. Frances C., the younger daughter, married Dr. Frank S. Whitman, in 1875, and has since made her home in Belvidere. This worthy family occupies a high place in the regard of the people of Boone County and there are few who have not either met them or heard much concerning their pioneer labors and noble characters.

The lithographic portrait of Mr. Pier accompanies this sketch.

OSES D. MARTIN. The attractive and commodious residence at No. 1007 Kilburn Avenue, Rockford, is owned and occupied by the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch and who is here passing his declining years in retirement. He has resided in the West since three years old, when he was brought by his parents to Ogle County, locating on a farm five miles from the city of Oregon. There he grew to man's estate, operated a farm, which he sold, and removed to Lee County in 1857. After improving a farm in China Township, he sold the place and returned to Ogle County, where he resided some four years.

We next find Mr. Martin a resident of Ashton, Lee County, where he operated as a lumber and grain merchant and was successful in accumulating a competency. With the earnings thus industriously obtained, he purchased one hundred and twenty acres of land, which he still owns and which is a well-improved farm. Afterward he removed to Cherokee County, Iowa, and after a sojourn of several years there, returned to Rockford, where he has since lived in retirement. However, his life is by no means an idle one, for in the oversight of his large landed interests he finds sufficent to occupy his attention and demand his supervision. He owns a substantial store building in Rockford, and other property of considerable value.

Born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, our subject is the son of John Martin, likewise a native of Canada. The paternal grandfather, James, was the son of an Irish nobleman, who, on account of his marriage with a lady of the Catholic faith, was disinherited and sent to America, thus founding the family in this country. After attaining his majority on the home farm, John Martin was married to Miss Annis Nettleton, who was born in Ontario, her parents being Connecticut people of New England ancestry. In 1838, Mr. and Mrs. John Martin removed with teams from Canada to Ogle County, camping by night and journeying in primitive fashion by day for six weeks, at the expiration of which time they reached Lafayette Township.

The first home of the family was a little log eabin which the father erected during his first visit to Lafayette Township on the land which he entered from the Government. So barren and drear was the surrounding country, that when the new home was pointed out to the wife and mother she burst into tears, but soon other settlers established homes near them and she became reconciled to the change. For many years, the bandits of the West were their neighbors, including such men as Norton Rich, Bill Bridge, and Dick and Tom Akins, but the only loss suffered on their account was that of a valuable horse.

The father, who was born in 1800, died at the home of our subject, in Ashton, in 1876. He was a good citizen and a worthy member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His wife, who was also born in 1800, survived him a number of years and died in Rockford, in 1887, leaving to her descendants the memory of a true Christian life. Three of her sons, James N., Henry L. and John W., are prominent ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Church and are scholars of wide reputation, the first-named having for twenty years been professor in the Pacific College, of California. Another son, Philetus S., is a ranchman near Pomona, Cal., on the Cheno Ranch. A daughter, Sarah J., formerly the wife of Joseph Earl, died in the prime of life, leaving two children.

The marriage of Moses D. Martin at Light House Point, Ogle County, united him with Miss Burella Paddock, who was born in Indiana and was brought by her parents to Ogle County when six months old. She was here reared, and received her education in a seminary at Willoughby, Ohio. Her father, Riley Paddock, an old settler of Ogle County, died in 1886, at an advanced age. Her mother, Eliza (Snoddy) Paddock, survives at a good old age and makes her home in Ashton.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin are the parents of six children, namely: Luna M., wife of W. B. King, of Redwood Falls, Minn., a prominent business man of that city; Elmer E., who operates a steam gristmill in Marcus, lowa, and there makes his home, his wife having in former years been known as Miss Cora Over; Lillian E., who is a teacher in the Lineoln Schools, at Rockford: Riley P., who is taking a post-graduate course in chemistry at the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill.; M. DeWitt, a pharmacist and druggist at Redwood Falls, Minn., and Maud L., who is in the public schools of Rockford. In their religious convictions, Mr. Martin and his estimable wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Socially, he is a Mason, and in politics is a stanch Republican. He has served as Supervisor and School Treasurer of Ogle and Lee Counties, and is deeply interested in all public measures.

AVID A. BARNARD, one of the foremost business men of Rockford, is now residing at No. 201 South First Street, where he has made his home for many years. He seems to be one of those quiet, unassuming gentlemen whose chief aspiration is an honest living, without that morbid ambition which sometimes leads to the wreck of fortune and character. He came to Rockford in 1853, when twenty-one years of age, and began business as a carpenter, but two years later gave this up and embarked in the lathing business which he has followed with marked success up to the present time. He has witnessed the wonderful growth of the city since his residence here, and has contributed his share towards its advancement and prosperity.

Our subject was born in Deerfield, Mass., on the 5th of October, 1831, and is a descendant of an old and prominent family of that State. His grandfather, David Barnard, was of English descent and a Revolutionary patriot, serving bravely and gallantly for independence. married a Massachusetts lady, and died at Shelburne, that State, when quite aged. His wife also died in that State. He was a cabinet-maker by trade. Their son, David Barnard, Jr., father of our subject, was one of a large family of children, and passed his boyhood and youth on a farm in his native State, Massachusetts. He married Miss Eliza Whitcomb, a native of Williamsburgh, Mass., and the daughter of David and Abigail (Hunt) Whitcomb, natives also of that State, in which they passed their last days, both dying at an advanced age.

Mr. Barnard passed almost his entire life in his native State, but died in Fairview, Pa., in the year 1843, while on his way home with a drove of cattle. He was fifty years of age. His widow died in 1850 when little past middle age. Of the six children born to this union, four grew to mature years, but only our subject and Calvin, who resides in Waukesha, Wis., and who has been a conductor on the St. Paul & Milwaukee Railroad for the last thirty-five years, are now living.

D. A. Barnard was married in Troy, N. Y., to Miss Mary Hamm, who was reared and educated in that city and who followed teaching for a few years before her marriage. Her parents, Henry and Mary (Miller) Hamm, are natives, respectively, of Troy, N. Y., and Hookeynorton, Oxfordshire, England, and now reside a short distance from Troy, N. Y. Mrs. Hamm's grandparents live in England, where they are classed among the best of its citizens. They are now seventy-six and sixty-seven years of age, respectively, and have been members of the Dutch Reformed Church for many years. They had ten children, eight of whom are yet living and generally prosperous in life. Mrs. Mary Hamm was left motherless at an early age and came with her father, Timothy Miller, to the United States when six years of age, Mr. and Mrs. Barnard's union was blessed by the birth of three children, who were as follows: Augustus, who died when nine years of age; Harry S. will soon graduate from the High School of Rockford; and Charles D., a bright little fellow of three years. Mrs. Barnard and Harry S. are members of the First Congregational Church. Mr. Barnard is a Republican in his political views.

USTAVUS A. SALSTROM, Secretary, Treasurer and manager of the Union Grocery Company of Rockford, was born in Saby Socken, Sweden, on the 18th of August, 1841, and at the age of twelve years, bade good-bye to his old home, and, in company with his family, sailed from Gottenburg, August 3, 1853. After a long and tedious journey, they landed in Charleston, S. C., and thence went to New York City. They had to wait nine weeks for a vessel to bring them to this country, and during that time the wife and mother died of cholera, which was then epidemic, leaving eight children, all under the age of thirteen years. On arriving in this country, the father had to leave his children in Pittsburg while he went to seek a home. Some very generous people aided him in reaching Pittsburg, and there three of the younger children were teft for a time in an orphan's home, while the father and the four older children went to Chicago, where he sought work. Subsequently, he went to St. Peter, Minn., where he was later joined by his children. He bore many hardships and trials, but at length overcame such difficulties, meeting with a fair degree of success. He died in Minnesota, in 1860, at the age of fortysix years. Both he and his wife were members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and were people of sterling worth. Two of the children are also deeeased. John served throughout the Rebellion as a member of the Fourth Minnesota Infantry, veteranized, and died after his return from the army; Charles also wore the blue during the late war, and is now located in Duluth, Minn., a prosperous business man of that place; Eve is now the wife of Dr. L. Liljenerantz, of Oakland, Cal.; Charlotte E. is the wife of John Green, a retired farmer of St. Peter, Minn.; Hattie is living with her sister in Oakland, Cal. Gustava is now deceased, and the whereabouts of Andrew are unknown.

Gustavus A. Salstrom, whose name heads this sketch, was married in this city to Miss Gustava Hegberg, who was born in Lundby, Sweden, December 26, 1847, and when a small child came with her parents to the United States in 1854. The family settled in Rockford, but the father and mother are now living near Winthrop, Minn., on a farm. Since coming to this country they have achieved success, and are now living retired, resting in the enjoyment of the fruits of their former toil. Mrs. Salstrom was the third in order of birth in their family of seven children, of whom three sons and three daughters are yet living.

Nine children grace the union of our subject and his wife: Charles F., Secretary of the Excelsior Furniture Company; Rachel, Gustavus A., a carver in one of the furniture factories of Rockford; David B., a carver by trade, now foreman in the Northwestern Parlor Furniture Company of Chicago; John E., book-keeper for the Union Grocery Company; Peter B., Luther A., Mary M. and Eya A.

Mr. Salstrom and his wife are active members of the First Lutheran Church, in which he has been Trustee and Deacon for some years, and Sundayschool Superintendent for four years. He exercises his right of franchise in support of the Republican party, of which he is a stalwart supporter, and has been Alderman of the Sixth Ward for six years, and at present holds that office. After coming to this country, he spent three years in Chicago, and eight years in Minnesota, ere locating in Rockford. He then came to this city in 1864, and for one year was employed as clerk, after which he formed a partnership with H. F. Peterson, in the grocery business. The firm continued as Peterson & Salstrom for fourteen years, after which the business was merged into the Union Grocery Company, which has met with a prosperous career. They have recently built a beautiful block, which is occupied by the company. They carry a large and complete line of staple and fancy groceries, and do an excellent business, having a large trade. In connection with his interest in this company, Mr. Salstrom was one of the men who was instrumental in establishing the Rockford Central Furniture Company in 1879, which he has served as a Director, and was a traveling salesman in its interest for several years prior to the time that he became manager of the grocery company in 1886. He is also connected with the Skandia Plow Company, and has an interest in two hundred and sixty-live acres of land near Worthington, Minn. In business circles he ranks high as a trustworthy and upright man, and his friends throughout the community are many.

UFUS LORD was born in Norwich, Conn., on the 17th of April, 1826, and his father, Lynds Lord, was born at the same place in 1787. The elder Mr. Lord followed farming in his native State, then in Pennsylvania and finally in Ohio. His wife, the mother of our subject, was Priseilla (Potter) Lord, of Norwich, Conn., the daughter of William and Olive (Fitch) Potter, of Lisbon, Conn. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Lord occurred on the 31st of January, 1821, and resulted in the birth of nine children, six sons and three daughters, viz.: Nathan L., Eleazer, William T., Laura A., Rufus (our subject), David H., Mary A., Caroline and Charles F. Only four of these children are now living. The parents removed from the Nutmeg State to Walnut Creek, Erie County, Pa., in the spring of 1829, and brought with them their six children. They settled on a farm with some improvements, made by an elder brother who had died, and a sawmill and gristmill on the place, run by water from the Walnut Creek, was operated by Mr. Lord. This mill was very near Lake Erie, and no matter how dry the season happened to be, Walnut Creek never failed. Often when streams were failing all over the State, grist was brought to this mill from a distance of one hundred miles, After residing on this farm for about seven years, Mr. Lord sold out and removed to Trumbull County, Ohio, where he bought a farm of one hundred and twenty-eight acres, well improved with a good hewn-log house. Here this contented couple resided many years, but finally sold out to their son, David II., and the father died near Quincy, III., whither he had gone on business, in the spring of 1857. He was seventy-two years of age and was buried there. His widow survived him twenty years, and died in Ravenna, Ohio, in 1877, when eighty-eight years of age. Five of her children were then living.

In 1846, the subject of this sketch left home, and with his brother, William T., went across the country to Illinois, driving over one thousand head of sheep. They were tifty-one days on the way and arrived in Rockford Township the 3d of August of that year. The next spring they sold the sheep not killed by the wolves, and Rufus took eighty acres of State land in Rockford Precinet, settling on it with his bride, Esther M. Campbell, to whom he was married November 28, 1849. She was a native of Yates County, N. Y., born June 20, 1825, and the daughter of Delmount and Permelia (Bennett) Campbell, the father a native of New York, and the mother of Vermont. Mrs. Lord came West with her parents when eighteen years of age and settled with them on a farm near Rockford. The father died at the home of our subject, in 1862, when sixty-three years of age. The mother had died in 1851, when about fifty-seven years of age. Mrs. Lord has one sister, Mrs. Walter Crowlev, who resides near her,

Mr. and Mrs. Lord sold their first farm in January, 1852, and bought one hundred and sixty-one acres where they now reside, for which they paid $700. On this was a small log house and there were about fifty acres cleared. Here they have resided ever since and have made many and vast improvements. In 1871, they erected a nice, roomy house, and the same year their mammoth barn, 42x64, with a basement nine feet high and a shed, 32x14, was creeted. This gives good stabling room for forty-five head of cattle and six horses. Mr. Lord keeps but few cows, just enough for their own use, and he has rented out his farm for the past fourteen years. He has held a number of local positions and has served many years as School Trustee and Justice of the Peace. Mr. and Mrs. Lord are Free-will Baptists in their religious views.

Mrs. Lord's niece, Mary J. Crowley, was taken into the family at the age of five years, and remained with them until she married Henry J. Fritz, and sixteen years afterward. She is the mother of three children, Walter R. Alma and Florence E.

ARREN ANDREWS. Among the worthiest of the representative agriculturists in this portion of the country is Mr. Andrews, who owns a fine farm of two hundred and sixtynine acres in Bonus Township. Boone County, Ill. Like many of the prosperous citizens of the county, he is a native of the Empire State, born in Onondaga County, April 42, 1821. He is a son of Eleazer and Daphnæ (Goodale) Andrews, natives of the Green Mountain State, but who passed the closing scenes of their lives in Onondaga County, N. Y., the father when about ninety-three years of age.

Warren Andrews remained at home until nineteen years of age, and then served three years' apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade. After this he got pay by the day, and by economy and good management he accumulated sufficient means to justify him in taking a wife. On the 8th of February, 1817, he celebrated his nuptials with Miss Louisa Keeler, who was born in Cortland County, N. Y., on the 25th of February, 1825. She is a daughter of Martin and Sally (Webster) Keeler. (See sketch of A, Keeler for family history.) To Mr. and Mrs. Andrews were born five children, who are as follows: Adelia, born in New York State, on the 5th of November, 1814, married Smith Marvin and is the mother of one child; Adelbert, also a native of New York, born March 27, 1849, married Miss Sarah Goodyear and is the father of two children, a son and daughter; Ella, born in this county, June 24, 1851, married Theodore Huffman and has one child, a danghter; Alda, also a native of this county, born October 29, 1853, married George Dean; and Frank, born in this county on the 3d of February, 1868, married Miss 1da Robbins and is the father of one child, a daughter.

After marriage, our subject rented his father's farm until 1849, when, in the spring of that year, he resolved to seek his fortune in the Far West. He came to Illinois in search of a suitable location, and in the spring of 1850 moved his family to Boone County, where he purchased seventy-three acres, on which stood an old log house. Into this he moved with his wife and little children and this roof sheltered them for four years, when Mr. Andrews sold out and bought his present line farm of two hundred and sixty-nine acres. On this he has made many very extensive improvements, and not only has he a fine, comfortable house, but his barns and outbuildings are all substantial and commodious. He conducts his farming operations in a manner suggestive of much thoroughness and experience, and is one of the active tillers of the soil in the community.

Politically a Republican, his association, as far as party is concerned, has always been with that body. He has never aspired to office and has never held any other than a few minor positions. He no doubt inherits his thrift and energy mostly from his Scottish ancestors on the mother's side of the family, but there were many successful farmers and professional men on the other side. Mr. Andrews had several nephews in the Civil War, and they became prominent men, both in serving their country in the war and in their different occupations.

RANCIS BROCKMAN, of Rockford, who is now living a retired life, claims Germany as the land of his nativity. He was born in Hanover, June 24, 1826, and at the early age of six years was left an orphan, his parents dying ten months apart. In the family were seven children, but four died in the Fatherland and two in this country, and for the past twenty-six years our subject has been the only survivor. They were all members of the Catholic Church.

Francis Brockman at a very early age began earning his own livelihood. He remained in his native land until eighteen years of age, when he determined to seek his fortune in the New World, and crossed the broad Atlantic from Bremen, landing in New Orleans in December, 1811. He went from there to St. Louis, Mo., where for two years he was employed in a brick yard, after which he began working in a cigar factory. On completing the trade in April, 1818, he went to Chicago, and in the autumn of the same year took up his residence in Peoria, where he remained until the following spring, when we again find him in St. Louis. At length, the cholera broke out in that city and he went up to Wurtemberg, Clayton County, Iowa, where his brother was living. In 1849, he returned to Peoria, where he spent the succeeding eight years of his life, running a eigar store for other parties until 1857.

While in that city, Mr. Brockman was united in marriage with Miss Louisa G. Schlink, who was born in Baltimore, Md., August 13, 1832. The same year, her parents had emigrated to this country from Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. Her father, Valentine Schlink, was a cooper by trade. He became a resident of Peoria County, Ill., where he purchased and improved a good farm, making it his home until a few years before his death, when he moved to McLean County, Ill., where his death occurred May 12, 1890, at the age of eighty-four years. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Ebler, died in Peoria County, in 1877, in the seventy-first year of her age. They were members of the German Catholic Church and had a large family of children. From the time she was six years of age until her marriage, Mrs. Brockman was a resident of Peoria County.

In 1857, Mr. Brockman came with his family to Rockford, and purchased the stock of Julius Mayr, carrying on a successful business as a tobacconist for many years. He secured a large and lucrative patronage and won a place among the well-to-do citizens of Winnebago County. He is now the owner of the business house at No. 311 State Street and several valuable residences in this city and Peoria, and the income derived therefrom enables him to lay aside all business cares and live a retired life, enjoying the competence which he won by his industry and enterprising efforts. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Brockman were born four children: Frances L., wife of Charles Guillman, foreman of the chemical department of the Fire Department of Peoria, Ill.; Tillie M. and Emma I., at home; and George, who is assistant Superintendent of the Hackensack Electric Light Company, of Hackensack, N. J. In St. Paul's Church of Brooklyn, he was united in marriage with Hattie Hanley, of Jerseyville, Ill.

Mr. Brockman is an Odd Fellow and Trustee of his lodge. His wife is a member of the Catholic Church. They are worthy people, highly respected, and our subject is regarded as one of the valued citizens of Rockford. For years, he has been a prominent member of the Germania society of this city and has been its Treasurer for lifteen years.

AMES 11. COMPTON, a successful dealer in all kinds of carriages, buggies, harness, farm implements, farm machinery, etc., and one of the popular and most successful business men of this city, has been a resident of Rockford since 1881, but has been engaged in business on his own account only since January, 1890. He is admirably located at No. 517 West State Street and has gained an enviable reputation as a successful business man. From the time he first came to this city he has been engaged in his present business, but for nine years of the time he was with Matthew Harvey, at the stand he now occupies, three years of that time. Mr. Compton's object now is to carry a fine and high grade of carriages to satisfy the demands of the best trade.

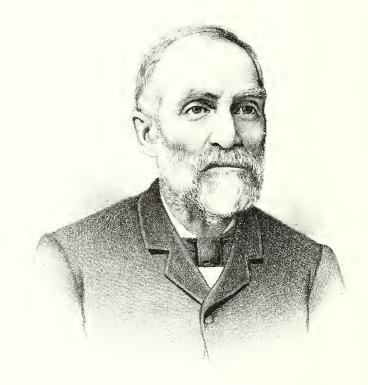

Our subject came to this State in May, 1852, and resided in Rockford for one year. Since then he has made his home in Winnebago County and was engaged in business as a mechanic and contractor for some time. After this, agricultural pursuits occupied his attention in this and Ogle County for eighteen years and his reputation as a hard-working, industrious man is well known. Since his residence here he has been identified with the business interests of this city, and the enterprise he has established is second to none in its line, and he may well feel a justifiable pride in it.

Born in Somerset County, N. J., our subject there grew to manhood and learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, which he followed for seven years before coming West. He came of New England stock, and was the son of Reuben Compton, who was also a native of New Jersey, born in 1798. The elder Mr. Compton followed agricultural pursuits all his life and remained in his native State until 1853, when he decided to move Westward. He came to Winnebago County, Hl., settled on a partially improved farm in Owen Township, and made many decided improvements in the same. He passed the remainder of his days on this, and died when over eighty years of age. The companion of his joys and sorrows remained a few years on the old home place and then too passed away, being also over eighty years of age. She had been formerly Miss Elizabeth Polson, a native of New Jersey, and her ancestors came from Holland, the original stock being members of the old, or regular, Baptist Church. They were the parents of ten children, four sons and one daughter now living. Two of the sons, John and Saul, were soldiers in the Rebellion, serving in the Seventy-fourth Illinois Regiment. The latter was killed in battle while bravely bearing his National colors. He had married, and by his death left a sorrowing wife and two little children who are still living. John was wounded at the battle of Ft. Donelson, and died soon afterward. He was single. Both were loyal and brave boys and are now numbered with the thousands of other brave lads who gave up their lives for their country.

In Somerset County, N. J., in 1847, our subject married Miss Hester A. Vandercook, who was born and reared in the same State, but in a county adjoining Somerset. She came of Dutch ancestors as the name indicates, and of New Jersey parentage. Her father, Henry Vandercook, was accidentally drowned when in the prime of life, while trying to save the life of another. His friend's life was saved but he himself was drowned. His wife, whose maiden name was Lydia Whale, having moved to Illinois in 1860, afterward married a Mr. C. Van Dyke, and both are now deceased.

Lamul F. Bergielel

the latter dying when eighty-four years of age and the former when seventy-seven years of age. They were the parents of three children, and after the death of her father, Mrs. Compton was reared by her mother and step-father, remaining with them until her marriage. She is a very intelligent and amiable lady.

In his political views, Mr. Compton advocates the principles of the Republican party, and in religion Mr. and Mrs. Compton are members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and both liberal contributors to the same. They have been blessed in their union by the birth of five children, one, Reuben, being now deceased. Those living are: Henry, a foreman in the Emerson-Talcott Manufacturing Company, married Miss Mary Forsyth, of Rockford; Nathan assists his father in the business and resides at home; Ella, wife of Robert McAvoy, an attorney of the firm of Frost & McAvoy; and Nellie at home.

AMUEL F. PENFIELD, senior partner in the firm of S. F. & G. F. Penfield, in Rockford, was born at Pittsford, Rutland County, Vt., in January, 1822. His parents were both natives of Fairfield County, Conn., the father having been born at Fairfield in 1780, and the mother at Sherman in 1786. They were both connected with large and influential families who were among the early settlers of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, and took an active and prominent part in forming the religious, educational and political institutions of those States.

About 1796, John Penfield, the grandfather of Samuel F., removed with his wife and unmarried children from Fartfield. Conn., to Pittsford, Vt., where he spent the remainder of his days, dying in November, 1829, aged eighty-two years. His family of five sons and five daughters all lived to a good old age, their average age at death being seventy-five and three-tenths years. All but one settled in Vermont and the near vicinity, taking and maintaining high positions in the communities where they resided, and leaving families which followed in their footsteps, and did credit to their memories. Their descendants have since become greatly scattered, being found in nearly all of the New England States, as well as most of the Middle and Western States.

Sturges Penfield, the father of Samuel F., returned to Fairfield County, Conn., in January, 1806, and brought Laura Giddings as a bride from Sherman to Pittsford, making the winter journey on horseback, instead of in a Pullman sleeper as his degenerate descendants would do now. Upon the spot where they first settled, they spent the remainder of their lives. There their six sons and six daughters were born and reared, all of whom reached maturity except one boy, who was accidentally poisoned. When a young man, Sturges learned the trade of a hatter, and carried on that business for many years, adding to it later the manufacture of woolen cloths and carpets, and also carried on a general merchandising store. was a man of the strictest integrity, and of decided moral convictions. He at one time owned and operated a distillery for making whiskey, from which he derived a large revenue; but when the subject of temperance began to be agitated, some sixty years ago, he became convinced of the wrong of that kind of business, tore out the worm and the still, sold them for old copper, and converted the distillery into a tenement house, and he was ever afterward a strong advocate of total abstinence and prohibition. In early life, he was a Whig, but when the slavery question began to be agitated, he embraced Abolition sentiments, and early joined the Abolition party, and acted and voted with them until that party was merged in the Republican party. He lived to see the liquor business outlawed in the State of his adoption, and slavery abolished in the nation. He and his wife were during most of their lives consistent Christians, and ardent and liberal supporters of the Congregational Church of Pittsford.

Samuel F. spent his childhood and youth at home, attending the district and select schools, and working on the farm and in the factory when not attending school. When about fourteen years old, he became a Christian, and united with the Congregational Church. He shortly afterward became animated with a desire to obtain a liberal education and prepare himself for the Gospel ministry. Having obtained the consent of his parents, he commenced fitting himself for college, studying with his pastor, the Rev. Willard Child, and attending the select schools, which were usually provided in the neighborhood each fall and winter. In February, 1838, his father took him to Burr Seminary, at Manchester, Vt., to complete his preparation for college, and in July, 1839, he was gradnated with honor from that institution, and in August following entered the Freshman class of Middlebury College. He took a good stand in his class, and during the latter part of his college life, was employed as private tutor to the children of Prof. A. C. Twining, one of his college instructors. He was ambitious and studious, and in order to maintain his standing in his class, and perform faithfully his duties as tutor, he was obliged to "burn the midnight oil" a good deal, the result of which was, that when about half through his Sophomore year he was compelled to leave college and abandon study entirely on account of the failure of his eyes.

After resting a few months, Mr. Penfield found his eyes so much improved, that he ventured to engage in teaching, and in the spring of 1811, accepted the situation of Principal of the Boys' Academy in Pottstown, Pa. After filling that position for a year, he found his eyes so far restored that he decided to return and try to complete his college course, and accordingly went home and made up the rest of his Sophomore studies, and at Commencement, in August, 1842, was examined and admitted to the Junior class of Middlebury College. But before the fall term commenced in September, he was again attacked with inflammation of the eyes, and reluctantly compelled to abandon the idea of completing his college course. He then returned to Pennsylvania and engaged as Principal of the Boys' Academy, in Orwigsburg, Schuylkill County. After teaching there a year and a half to the full satisfaction of the Trustees of the institution, he resigned his position and returned to Pittsford to assist his father in his business.

Subsequently, Mr. Penfield formed a partnership with H. F. Lothrop (who afterward became his brother-in-law), under the name of Lothrop & Penfield, and fitted up a thread mill for the manufacture of cotton thread in a building owned by Mr. Lothrop, near his father's factories. This business he followed until 1852, but finding it unremunerative, gave it up and returned to teaching. He taught private schools about two years in New Durham and North Hoboken, N. J., from which place he went to Pottsville, Pa., taking the position of Principal of the Grammar School, where he gave good satisfaction. This position he occupied until the spring of 1857, when he heard the call "Go West, young man," and obeyed it, locating at Rockford, Ill., where his two brothers, David S. and John G., were in business. Here he was employed as a teacher in the East Side High School and Grammar School for the first two years after they were organized. In 1860, he engaged in the insurance business, occupying the office with his brothers D. S. and J. G. Penfield, who were engaged in the real-estate and loaning business. In August, 1862, he enlisted as private in Company K., Seventy-fourth Regiment Illinois Infantry, and went into camp with the regiment at Camp Butler, Rockford, but upon examination by the regimental surgeon, for the purpose of being mustered into service, he was rejected on account of defective eyesight, so that he was not permitted to serve his country in that way. He then resumed the insurance business, and pursued the even tenor of his course.

In 1871, Mr. Penfield made a slight diversion from his usual labors, and spent most of that year in Kansas, as one of the Locating Committee, and General Manager of the so-called "Illinois Prohibition Colony" which located in the northern part of Dickinson County, and later became one of the influences which ultimately made Kansas a Prohibition State. He, however, kept up his insurance business in Rockford, which during his absence was looked after by his son George F.

In 1876, Mr. Penfield formed a partnership with George F, to carry on the insurance and real-estate business under the firm name of S. F. Penfield & Son. George F, had for several years been engaged in the insurance business in Chicago in connection with the Firemen's and Globe Insurance Companies of that city, and had developed an uncommon aptitude for that kind of business. Owing to the energy and skill which the junior partner brought into the concern, the business began to grow, and has continued to increase year by year until the present time. In January, 1881, the firm name was changed to S. F. & G. F. Penfield, which it has retained ever since. The firm probably represents at the present time a larger amount of insurance capital than any other one concern in the State, being upwards of $80,000,000, and probably does a larger fire insurance business than any other firm in the State outside of Chicago.

In April, 1881, the Home Building & Loan Association of Rockford was organized, chiefly through the instrumentality and efforts of George F. Penfield. S. F. Penfield was made its first Secretary, which office he held for three years. At the end of that time, George F. was elected Secretary, and has held that office ever since. The business of the Association has always been carried on in the office of S. F. & G. F. Penfield, and has grown to large proportions. The Association has loaned during the eleven years of its existence upward of $825,000, mostly in the city of Rockford, and has now in force loans amounting to $328,875. It has proved a blessing to many a poor man, who has, through its instrumentality, secured a home for his family, and formed habits of economy and thrift which will bless him and his family through

The earliest resident of the Penfield family in Rockford was David S., brother of our subject, who became a permanent resident of the place in 1838, and soon afterward gained prominence in business circles as a merchant and banker, a member of the old firm of Briggs, Spafford & Penfield, bankers. That banking institution was finally merged into the present Third National Bank, which is one of the successful and solid institutions of the city. He took an active interest in the enterprises of the city and its advancement until his death, which occurred in May, 1873, at the age of sixty-one.

In the fall of 1851, Samuel F. was married to Miss Lemira B. Clark, of Pawlet, Rutland County, Vt., who belonged to a large and influential family in Southern Vermont, and which is now, like many of the old New England families, scattered throughout the Middle and Western States. They have had five children, four sons and one daughter. The eldest, George F., is the active member of the firm of S. F. & G. F. Penfield. He is an energetic business man, stockholder and Director in several of the manufacturing companies of the city, and interested in several of the recent additions to the city. He was married, in the fall of 1876, to Miss Addie F. Sherman, at Jersey Shore, Pa., and they are the parents of six children, four daughters and two sons. They have a delightful residence on the west bank of Rock River, in the north part of the city.

The second son, Charles S., was married in 1879 to Miss Adella S. Potter, of West Springfield, Pa., and is the father of four children, one son and three daughters. He is a thorough-going business man, active, energetic and prompt, and readily secures the confidence and respect of all with whom he has business relations. He was for some six or seven years engaged in the real-estate and loan business in Spencer, Iowa, but for the last four years has been a railroad contractor of the firm of McDonald & Penfield, with headquarters at Fremont, Neb.

Edward M., the third son, is an expert book-keeper, and has been employed in the Rockford post-office, and in various manufacturing establishments in Rockford and elsewhere. He is now in the Government employ, gathering and compiling the statistics of the last census, and has merited and received high commendation from Hon. R. P. Porter, Superintendent of the Census Bureau.

Robert S., the youngest son, died of diphtheria when about nine years old. He was a bright and lovable boy, who easily won the hearts of his parents and teachers and all who knew him. Mabel S., the youngest child and only daughter, is a student in the Conservatory of Music at Oberlin, Ohio, and is a young lady of decided musical talent. Mr. and Mrs. Penfield have been for about thirty-five years members of the First Congregational Church of Rockford, in which he has been for many years a Deacon. Politically, he was as a young man a Whig, helped to make Vermont a Prohibition State, was in at the birth of the Republican party, and clung to it until he was forced out by his Prohibition principles. He now labors and acts with the Prohibition party, and will ever pray and labor for the suppression of the liquor traffic.

A lithographic portrait of Mr. Pentield accompanies this sketch.

ACOB VAN ALSTINE, for many years one of the prominent agriculturists of Winnebago County, has since 1884 lived retired in the city of Rockford, at No. 606 Rockton Avenue. He was born in the town of Glen, Montgomery County, N. Y., April 6, 1814, in which place his father, John A. Van Alstine, was also born.

Abraham Van Alstine, the grandfather of our subject, was born in the above-named county and was of Dutch ancestry. He served as a patriot in the Revolutionary War and died in 1832, in the town of Glen. His wife, who was Miss Ouackenbush, died on the same day and one hour later than her husband. The father of our subject learned the trade of a carpenter, in addition to which business he followed farming in the town of Glen for many years. Later, going to Michigan, he departed this life at the home of a daughter. near Vassar. The maiden name of his wife was Catherine Gardinier, a native of Montgomery County, and the daughter of Nicholas Gardinier. Her grandfather, Jacob Gardinier, was also a native of New York, and was a Captain during the Revolutionary War. His house was burned by the Indians during that period and on that same spot he erected another building, the nails which were used in its construction being manufactured by himself. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Nicholas Gardinier, was a farmer, and died in his native county in 1832. He was also a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and after his decease his widow, Rachel Gardinier, drew a pension. She was a native of the same county where his birth oc-penter and joiner, and when very young commenced boating on the Eric Canal, later owning a boat which was used in freighting, first from Montgomery County to Albany, and later from Buffalo to Albany and New York, which he followed for several seasons. While thus employed. he had an experience which came near costing him his life. About midnight two men came along and asked for a ride on the boat. Our subject consenting, they boarded the vessel. Leaving his brother to steer, Jacob retired to his bunk, but soon awoke to find one of the strange men standing over him with a revolver and demanding of him money or his life. Our subject reached for his pocketbook, which he handed to the robber, and as he did so, the robber attempted to shoot him, but the revolver missed fire, when Mr. Van Alstine grappled with his assailant, who was a much heavier man, and during the scuttle the robber fired twice but without effect. They struggled in the cabin for several minutes, when the stranger made his escape. During all that time, the brother of our subject had been having a similar experience with the other robber on deck. They both fell into the eanal, and the driver on the shore cut the horses loose and ran for his life.

In 1853, Mr. Van Alstine of this sketch came to Winnebago County and purchased eighty acres of land in Burritt Township, of which seven acres were broken. He found a shell of a house set on blocks on the land, which he made more comfortable and resided in while he improved his farm, splitting the rails for the fences himself from the timber on the land. Our subject resided there for fifteen years, when he sold the property and purchased at farm on the State Road in Winnebago Township, seven miles west of Rockford. There was a house and barn on the farm and our subject erected a fine set of frame buildings, residing there until 188t, when he came to Rockford.

January 16, 1813, Mr. Van Alstine and Miss Margaret Coventry, a native of Utica, N. Y., were united in marriage. The lady's father, Dr. Alexander Coventry, was born in Scotland, and early turned his attention to the study of medicine. He was educated in Edinburg, and after coming to America became a successful physician in Utica, where he made his home until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Margaret Van Vacton.

To Mr. and Mrs. Van Alstine of this sketch ten children have been born: John W., Charles, Jane, Alonzo, Martha, Mary, William, Leonard, Belle, and Cyrenus. The parents are members of the Presbyterian Church, and, in politics, our subject is a Republican. John W., the eldest son of our subject, served in the late war as a member of Company G. Forty-fourth Illinois Infantry, and was killed in the battle of Stone River. Charles W. served as a member of the Twelfth Cavalry.

ALMER PICKARD, who for many long years has resided upon his present farm on section 21, Harlem Township, Winnebago County, was born in Sterling, Cayuga Connty, N. Y., on the 5th of January, 1820, and is one of a family of eleven children. His great-grandfather, Nicholas Pickard, was a native of Germany and, on emigrating thence, settled in the Mohawk Valley, in New York, where he died at the advanced age of one hundred and one years and eleven months. His son, who also bore the name of Nicholas, was born in the Empire State, whence he removed to Ohio about 1825, and there resided until his death.

Smith W. Pickard, father of our subject, was born in Onondaga County, N. Y., and in his youth learned the blacksmith's trade. However, he followed the occupation of farming in Cayunga County, until 1829, when he returned to Onondaga County, where he resided until 1835. The three succeeding years of his life were spent in Orleans County, N. Y., and in 1838, accompanied by his wife and seven children, he came to Illinois, making the entire journey with teams. After five weeks of travel, he arrived in Lucas County, Ohio, where he remained during the winter, and the following spring pushed on to Stephenson County, locating nine miles west of Freeport, where he secured a tract of Government land.

The family lived in the wagon until a log house could be built, and all the hardships and experiences of frontier life fell to their lot. Mr. Pickard resided there until 1818, when he sold out and removed to Richland County. Wis. He there purchased and resided upon a farm near Richland Center, but after some years rented it and removed to the village, where he lived a retired life until called to his final rest at the age of seventy-six years. His wife, whose maiden name was Affa Skeel,was born in the Empire State and was a daughter of Abyram Skeel, who was born in the eastern part of New York, and spent his last days in Sterling, Cayuga County, after having followed farming for many years. Mrs. Pickard survived her husband a few years, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. G. Fowler, at Lena, Ill.

At the age of lifteen, Palmer Pickard began learning the trade of a woolen manufacturer, serving an apprenticeship of four years. In 1839, he came to Illinois by way of the Eric Canal and the Great Lakes and landed at Toledo, whence he walked the remaining distance to Stephenson County. During the winter, he aided his father in splitting rails and chopping wood, and the following spring began working by the month in Jo Daviess County, being in the employ of one man for two years. He then returned to Stephenson County, where liimself and brother built a cabin and kept bachelor's hall for a time, devoting their energies to the development of a farm.

Mr. Pickard resided with his brother until May, 1844, when he sold his teams and entered forty acres of Government land. In the above-mentioned year he went to Roscoe, this county, and assisted in establishing the woolen mills at that place, where for four years he occupied the position of foreman in the carding department. In the fall of 1818, he returned to New York, spending the winter in Camden, Oneida County. In May, 1849, we again find him in this State, engaged in the development of the farm which he had purchased in February, 1846. When he located at that place, there was a log house upon it, 16x16 feet, and thirty-five acres had been broken and fenced. After ten years the cabin was replaced by a small frame dwelling and in 1876 he built the commodious residence which is now his home. His farm comprises two hundred and twelve acres of highly improved land, and he also owns a twentyaere tract of timber in the same township.

In September, 1847, Mr. Pickard was united in marriage with Lydia Atwood, and their union has been blessed with five children: Jane E., Edgar J., Ella M., Alfred F. and Albert H. The family is a prominent one in this locality, ranking high in social circles. Mr. Pickard has long been a supporter of the Republican party, and in his religious views he is liberal.

The attention of the reader is invited to the portrait of Mr. Pickard, and a view of his attractive home, presented elsewhere in this volume.

EMUEL TIBBETS, M. D., a successful and skilled medical practitioner of Rockford, who since 1878 has made his home in this city, has prosecuted his profession here during all that time and has won a place in the foremost rank among his professional brethren in the county. The Doctor is a native of Adams County, III., and is desended from a family of English origin.

In the year 1686, the first ancestors of our subject to come to America crossed the Atlantic Ocean from their native land and settled in Dover, Stafford County, N. II. Members of the family figured prominently in New England history and fought for independence during the War of the Revolution. Samuel Tibbets, grandfather of our subject, lived and died in the Pine Tree State. where the father, Joshua Tibbets, was born and reared. He emigrated Westward in a very early day, becoming a pioneer of Quincy, Ill., and for many years was prominently connected with the growth and development of Adams County, and still makes his home in Quincy. He married Lucinda M. Ames, who was born and reared in New England, and when a young lady came to the West. She proved a true and faithful helpmate to her husband, and died in 1877, at the age of sixtytive years. The history of Adams County in an early day is largely concerned with the actions of the Tibbets, Ames and Woods families,

Our subject was educated at St. Paul's College, of Palmyra, Mo., after which he engaged in teaching. Later, he entered upon the study of medicine with a physician of Quiney, afterward was graduated from the medical department of the Michigan University, in the Class of '64, and was graduated from Bellevue Hospital Medical College, of New York City, in 1867. He made his first location in Dallas City, Ill., and subsequently engaged in practice for six years in Kirkwood, Ill., after which he came to Rockford. As before stated, he has been most successful and has performed some very difficult surgical operations which have won him a high reputation for skill in this line. He is now engaged in general practice but also makes a specialty of the eye and ear. Since locating here, he has spent eight months in New York City, studying for special treatment of the eye, car and throat, the latter study being under Dr. F. H. Bosworth, while his study of the eye and ear treatment was with Dr. Mittendorf, both gentlemen being professors in the Bellevue Hospital.

The Doctor was married in this city to Miss Cornelia E. Bradshaw, who was born in Rockford when it was a hamlet. Her father, Robert E. Bradshaw, one of the pioneers of the city, now resides at No. 1108 South Court Street. For many years he successfully followed farming in Winnebago Township, but for eighteen years has made his home at his present place of residence. He was born in the Empire State, but in early life went to London, England, where he learned the carpenter's trade and afterward worked on Windsor Castle. He later married Mrs. Cornelia E. Miller, who died in middle life.

The Doctor and his wife attend the Second Congregational Church, of which the lady is a member, and they rank high in the circles of society in which they move. He is one of the most prominent physicians of the city and is now enjoying a large and herative practice. He holds membership with the State Medical Society, with the American Medical National Association, and has also been a member of the Military Tract Medical Society, and Quincy Society. He was President of the Board of Medical Examiners of Pensions for four years and has been the examiner for various members of memberships. He is a Thirty-second Degree Mason, belonging to the Consistory of Freeport and the Crusade Commandery of Rockford. In politics, the Doctor is a Democrat. He has long been a close student of his profession and by his merit and ability has worked his way upward to the enviable position which he to-day occupies.

AVID R. PETERSON, a wide-awake and enterprising young business man of Rockford, has been connected with the Standard Furniture Company since its organization in 1887. He is one of its stockholders and Directors and from the beginning has held the office of Secretary and Treasurer. The success of the company is largely due to our subject, who has devoted his entire energies to it and its advancement and upbuilding. The company now employs about two hundred men and the business is in a flourishing condition.

Mr. Peterson first opened his eyes to the light of day in Central Sweden, December 8, 1865, and came of pure Swedish stock. His parents are both now deceased. His father, Peter Pehrson, was a prominent and well-known business man of the community in which he resided and took an active part in public affairs. He died in the faith of the Lutheran Church when sixty-five years of age. His wife, who was a most estimable lady and an active worker in the Lutheran Church, died in middle life. Their family numbered six children who are yet living, four being residents of America. Two of these came to this country prior to the emigration of our subject: August, who is now Secretary and Treasurer of the Central Furniture Company of this city, and G. A., who is now engaged in business in Wakefield, Neb. Since the arrival of Mr. Peterson, one sister has sought a home in the New World-Matilda, now the wife of F. A. Wall, a contractor and builder of Rockford.

The subject of this sketch acquired an excellent education in his native land in its academics and colleges. Thinking to better his financial condition, he decided to emigrate to America, and in 1882 crossed the Atlantic to New York, whence he came to Rockford. Since his arrival here, he has pursued a course of study in the business college.

He did elerical work for the Excelsior Furniture Company for some time and at the organization of the Standard Furniture Company became interested in it. In 1888, they began business and for about five years our subject has been its efficient Secretary and Treasurer.

Mr. Peterson is yet a young man but he has shown that in his composition are the elements necessary to success in business life. He is an industrious and energetic workman who has already secured an enviable position. With the First Lutheran Church he holds membership, and his right of franchise he exercises in support of the Republican party. Those who know him esteem him highly for his sterling worth and uprightness, and it is with pleasure that we present this sketch of his life to our readers.

B. STURTEVANT. There is no country in the world more distinguished for its flour than the United States. It is one of the leading articles of industry, and as such we have much reason to be proud of it. Our millers are men of enterprise and push, with which they combine that energy which never fails to secure success, and are ever ready to adopt a system that will produce a finer grade of flour. It need not be wondered at, therefore, if the millers here prosper, and find a ready demand for their flour. Flour and grain are among the staple articles of commerce in Rockford, and there is one extensively engaged as a manufacturer of flour and a wholesale dealer in flour and feed, Mr. Z. B. Sturtevant, who is widely known, having been before the public for the last twelve years. He has been the leading miller of Rockford since 1880, and has met with a wonderful degree of success. He is a stockholder in the Rockford Cracker Factory, and is Vice-President and a Director of the Rockford Driving Club, of which he was one of the promoters. He is a wellknown horseman and is very fond of that noble animal. At present, Mr. Sturtevant is Alderman of the Third Ward, is a Republican in politics, and has ever taken a decided interest in local matters.

Mr. Sturtevant is a native of Oneida County,

N. Y., born in the year 1817, and came West with his parents when a small boy. The family located at Delayan, Walworth County, Wis., in 1855, and there our subject passed his youthful days. He came to Rockford in 1867, and with the exception of three years, from 1877 until 1880, when he resided at Oregon, Ill., he has been a resident of this city. His father, Z. B. Sturtevant, Sr., was a native of Vermont, and came of New England ancestry. When a young man, he went to the Empire State, and was married in Utica to Miss Jane A. Story, afterward following his trade of contractor and builder, also of brick and stone mason, for many years. He then retired and returned to Delayan, Wis., where his death occurred in 1891, when eighty-five years of age. He was a prominent man and a much-esteemed citizen in the county and city where he had passed forty-five years of his life, and was a Congregationalist in his religious belief. His wife, who is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Dr. McLaughlin, of Jacksonville. Ill., is now sixty-eight years of age, but bears the burden of her years lightly. She adheres to the Congregational Church in religion.

Of the five sons and five daughters born to the worthy couple mentioned above, all are now married except one. Our subject married in Rockford Miss Fannie Simpson, who passed her early life in Rockford, and who was graduated at the High School of the city. She is a lady of much ability, was a school teacher for a number of years before her marriage, and as an educator ranked among the foremost. Her father, John Simpson, was an Eastern man, and after he came to Winnebago County was prominently identified with its growth and development. He had four children. three sons and one daughter. One son, M. D., is an old day clerk of the Plankinton House, Milwaukee, Wis., and another son, Edward L., is with the Monitor Publishing Company, of Rockford, and has been a newspaper man for a number of years. One son, Henry, also a clerk in the Plankinton House, died October fast in Milwaukee. Mr. Simpson was a blacksmith and manufacturer in Rockford for a number of years, and built the milts at Cherry Valley. Mr. and Mrs. Sturtevant are social leaders in the community, and their pleasant home, which bears every evidence of the taste and culture of its inmates, is the meeting place for the best class of people in the vicinity. Both are regular attendants at the Congregational Church. They have one child, a daughter, named Mabel.

USTAVE A. PETERSON, a cabinet-maker by trade, and a stockholder in the Central Furniture Company, is a gentleman who has won for himself an excellent reputation by his honorable methods of business and his intrinsic social qualities.

Our subject was born in Rockford, Ill., November 28, 1860, but comes of Swedish parentage, his father, P. A. Peterson, being a native of Smoland Provine, Sweden. The latter passed his boyhood and youth in the Old Country, learned the trade of a machinist, and was the first of the family to cross the ocean to America. He followed his trade in the East for some time, and with the money thus accumulated, returned to his native country and married Caroline Wettehall, who was born in the same province and near her husband. Shortly afterward, they took passage for the States, and after three years spent in New York State, near Brewster, they came to Rockford, Ill. This was in the latter part of the '50s, and since then Mr. Peterson has labored, following his trade as a machinist. He is now retired and is pleasantly situated at No. 1007 First Avenue, this city. He is rapidly nearing the age of seventy years, but is a well-preserved man. His wife, who was born in 1819, died in this city in 1881. She spent the last years of her life with the Methodist Episcopal Swedish Church, in which her husband holds membership at the present time. He is a Republican in polities. Of the two children born to this much esteemed couple, our subject is the younger. The sister, Rose, was born in Brewster, N. Y., was reared and educated in that city, and is now the housekeeper for her brother. She is a young lady possessed of more than the ordinary degree of amiability, and is well educated.

Except for about two years spent in the West, on the Pacific Slope, our subject has been a resident of Rockford. While growing up, he received a good practical education in the public schools and learned his trade in this city. He has ever been industrious and enterprising and is in every branch of his trade thoroughly versed and experienced. He owns a comfortable home at No. 1603 Charles Street, and there he has resided for some time.

NTON NEUMEISTER, who is engaged in the manufacture of wagons and carriages, in connection with which he has a repair shop, has carried on business in Rockford in this line since 1865. He is located at Nos. 115 and 119 North Madison Street, and is doing an excellent business, for, being a skilled mechanic, he has won a good trade. Whatever success he has won in life is due to his own efforts, and he may well be called a self-made man.

Mr. Neumeister was born in Furstenthum, Reuss. Germany, November 27, 1837, and is a son of Frederick Neumeister, a native of the same prov-There the latter grew to manhood and learned the iron-maker's trade with his father, who had followed it for many years. In his native land, he married Rosina Sack, who was also a native of the same locality. After the birth of all of their children, they came to America, taking passage at Bremen on a sailing-vessel in May, 1848. After a voyage of seven weeks, they reached New York, and went at once to the West by canal and the Great Lakes to Milwaukee. A year later, they removed to their new home, sixteen miles from that city, and Mr. Neumeister engaged in farming until his death, which occurred at the age of sixty-seven years. His wife afterwards returned to Milwaukee, and died in that city in September, 1891, when eighty-six years of age. Up to the last she retained her faculties, both physical and mental, to a wonderful degree. They were both members of the Lutheran Church, and Mr. Neumeister supported the Republican party by his ballot.

With his parents, our subject came to this country when a lad, and grew to manhood in Wisconsin, where he learned the trade of a wagon and earriage maker. In 1862, he enlisted as a member of the Twenty-sixth Wisconsin Infantry, which was incorporated in the Army of the Potomac. After participating in several engagements, he was transferred to the Army of the Cumberland, and during the battle of Kennesaw Mountain was wounded in the left arm. On being discharged in 1865, he came at once to Rockford and embarked in business, as before stated. As a companion on life's journey, Mr. Neumeister chose Miss Theresa Staps, their marriage being celebrated in Milwankee. She was born in Saxony, Germany, in April, 1841, and during her girlhood came with her parents to America in 1852, sailing from Bremen to New York City. Her people located in Milwaukee, and there her father died when in middle life. Her mother is still living in Wisconsin, with one of her daughters, and is now eighty years of age. Like her husband, she is a Lutheran in religious belief.

Mr. and Mrs. Neumeister also belong to the same church, and are well-known and prominent German people of Rockford. He has been for a number of years a member of the Germania societies, in which he takes an active interest. His right of franchise he exercises in support of the Republican party, but has never been an office-seeker. Empty-handed he began life for humself, and has steadily worked his way upward to a position of atlluence, now owning at his place of business three lots, built up with good business blocks, besides his pleasant residence on North Madison Street.

ATHANIEL MARKS. The farmers of Winnebago County are, almost without exception, thrifty, enterprising, industrious and progressive, meriting their success by judicious methods and excellent management. A worthy representative of the class, and one who stands especially high in the estimation of all with whom he comes in contact, is the owner of one of the finely-improved estates in Peratonica Township. Since Mr. Marks located upon the place in 1882, he has added to its buildings, increased its acreage from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and eighty-two, and, by a proper fertilization of the soil and rotation of crops, reaped large harvests of golden grain.

Mr. Marks was born in Mt. Bethel, Northampton County, Pa., April 26, 1834. His father, John, likewise a native of Northampton County, died in Lycoming County, Pa., at the age of lifty-three. His mother, whose maiden name was Mary Johnson, was born in the same county as her husband, and died in Jackson County. Mich., at the age of three-score and eleven years. They were worthy people, whose upright hive proved the possession of honorable principles inherited from a long line of Irish ancestors, and both belonged to families whose members followed agricultural pursuits through many generations.

During the late war, two of the brothers of our subject enlisted in the service of their country and fought valiantly until their death. Isaac enlisted in the Home Guards of Missouri and died in Jefferson City, Mo., during the war. Levi became a member of the Fifty-first Pennsylvania Infantry and was killed at the battle of Antietam. Their memories are dear in the hearts of their relatives, who are justly proud of these noble defenders of the country's honor.

After the death of his father, our subject remained on the old homestead with his mother until 1860, mean while gaining a practical knowledge of farming and acquiring a limited education. The family of which he was a member consisted of eight children, three of whom survive at this date (1892). The lady who became the wife of our subject, January 12, 1860, was Miss Mary A. Miller, a native of Berks County, Pa., born October 16, 1832. Her father, John Miller, died in Lycoming County, Pa., at the age of seventy years; her mother, Mary (Boyer) Miller, departed this life in Lycoming County, at the good old age of four-score and two. They were the parents of ten children, of whom three have passed from earth.

Soon after his marriage, Mr. Marks came to Winnebago County and purchased a farm comprising eighty acres in Seward Township. In 1861, he brought his wife to the new home, and for three years was actively engaged in improving the place. Then selling out, he removed to Iowa and for one year operated a rented farm. Thence he proceeded to Miller County, Mo., where he resided about five years, but not feeling satisfied with the soil or surroundings, again sought a home in Wunebago County, where he operated as a renter for ten years. By frugality and good judgment he was enabled at the expiration of that time to purchase the place where he now resides.

Mr. and Mrs. Marks have had a family of seven children, one of whom died when two and onehalf years old. Kate, who was born in Lycoming County, Pa., married F. R. Benson and they have five children; Hunter C., who was born in Seward Township, Winnebago County, married Miss Mattie Shelden and now resides in Seward Township; John M. was born in Seward Township and is at home, renting a portion of land adjoining the old homestead; Mary A., born in Black Hawk, lowa, married A. L. Comly and they have two children; Charles W., born in Miller County, Mo., is aiding his father on the farm; and Sarah A., who was born in Pecatonica Township, is with her parents. In his political adherence, Mr. Marks is a Republican and cast his first Presidential ballot for John C. Fremont. He is a stockholder in the shoe factory and a charter member of the company organizing the creamery, besides which he has been interested in various progressive measures for the growth of the community.

AMES ALBERT, retired, has been a resident of this city for the most part since 1850, and now resides in his comfortable home at No. 1011 North Second Street. He has been one of the most successful contractors and builders of the city and for many years had in his employ from forty to sixty men. He also had an interest as a grain and commission merchant, and had associated with him in business such prominent men as Elisha Kirk and Phil Armour; the latter, the well-known stockyards-man of Chicago, worked for them at $26 per month. Our subject was unusually successful and became the owner of some valuable property in Rockford, real estate in the southeastern part of the county, and large tracts of land in Wisconsin and Iowa, He is quite wealthy and can pass the remainder of his days in peace and plenty. He has witnessed the marvelous growth of the State since his residence here, and has aided materially in the advancement and prosperity of Rockford. He is an active local politician and was formerly a Whig, voting and working for William II. Harrison. He assisted in nominating Col. Fremont and since 1856 he has been an Independent Republican. He is well known as a progressive, public-spirited man, who is fully abreast of the times in all matters of public interest that tend to develop the resources of the State and improve the condition of the masses. Intelligent and well-read, he has ever made his presence felt.

Mr. Albert was born in Lancaster County, Pa., and comes of good old fighting stock, both his grandfathers, Peter Albert and Daniel Brenanaman, having served in the Revolutionary War. They were faithful and gallant soldiers, were with Gen. Washington during that terrible winter at Valley Forge, and one was an aide-de-camp to that General. Both passed their lives and received their final summons in Westmoreland County, Pa. Daniel Brenanaman had two sons in the War of 1812 and Peter Albert had a son-in-law, James Morrow, in the same war. Our subject and seven nephews were through the Rebellion and all were known as brave soldiers.

James Albert's parents, Peter and Fanny (Brenanaman) Albert, were natives of Germany and Pennsylvania, respectively, and were prominent people of the Keystone State, where they made their home. Peter Albert, Jr., was but two years old when his parents emigrated to America and settled in Pennsylvania. This was prior to the Revolutionary War. His father, Peter Albert, Sr., was the soldier referred to above. Peter Albert, Jr., was a tailor by trade and subsequently became a merchant of Westmoreland and Lancaster Counties, Pa. Later, he and his wife moved to Wayne County, Ohio, and there died when quite aged, the mother living eighty-seven years. They were members of the Lutheran Church for many years but Mrs. Albert linally became a Methodist.

James Albert, the subject of this sketch, is one of five children yet living, the eldest now eightynine years of age. Mr. Albert is himself seventysix. During the Civil War, he enlisted in the Sixth Missouri Infantry, Company I, and served faithfully for seventeen months. Then, on aceount of disability, he was discharged by special order. Since his return from the army, he has lived in Rockford. Mr. Albert has been twice married but has no children by either union. He is at present an advocate of Prohibition in polities. In his religious convictions, he is a Methodist. For some time, Mr. Albert held a Colonel's commission from an Ohio regiment in the local militia of the State.

7 MOS RUGG, one of the well-to-do farmers of Seward Township, Winnebago County, is a son of David and Eunice Rugg, and had his birth August 11, 1825, in Heath. Franklin County, Mass. He was married December 26, 1850, to Miss Eunice F., daughter of Luther Purrington, by whom he became the father of four children, one of whom is deceased. Those living are: Ada L., George A. and Edith L. Mrs. Eunice Rugg departed this life in Excelsior, Minn., March 15, 1863. Our subject, on the 4th of November, 1865, was again united in marriage, this time to Mrs. Mary T. Andrews, who was born August 16, 1820, in Steuben County, N. Y., and is the daughter of David and Nancy (Taylor) Weld. The father was a son of Luther and Betty (Rogers) Weld, the mother being in direct line of descent from John Rogers, who was burned at the stake. The grandfather of Luther Weld was a native of Wales, and on emigrating to the United States located in Chatham, Mass., where Luther was born, April 14, 1761; his wife was born at Guilford, Vt., April 9, 1772. They were both farmers in the Green Mountain State, where their decease occurred.

The father of Mrs. Weld was one of a family of ten children, and April 20, 1852, Miss Mary, his daughter, was married to Austin Andrews, who was born November 30, 1810, in Stockbridge, Mass. When an infant, he was taken by his parents to New York, and from there to Ohio, and after coming to Illinois, died in Winnebago County, March 9, 1857. Mr. Andrews came hither in 1836 in company with Judge Whittlesey, where he was numbered among the pioneers and prominent residents. His first marriage, which occurred May 6, 1840, united him with Miss Sarah J. Vance, by whom he became the father of two children, Sarah J. (Mrs. A. N. Bates), and Mary E., deceased. Mrs. Sarah J. Andrews was the daughter of John Vance, one of the first settlers of Seward Township, and after ten years of wedded life she died in 1850.

David Weld, the father of Mrs. Rugg, made his advent into this county in 1811, at which time he was accompanied by his daughter. He entered a tract of land from the Government, upon which he resided until his decease, May 2, 1859. He was very prominent in local affairs, and for several years was Supervisor, being the first of the township, County Judge and Justice of the Peace. In early life an old-line Whig, he later joined the Republican party, in whose ranks he was an arduous worker. Prior to coming to this State, Mr. Weld was an influential resident of his Eastern home, and for a number of years had been Deacon in the Congregational Church.

The parents of Mrs. Rugg were married September 1, 1819, the lady bearing the maiden name of Nancy Taylor. Her birth occurred in Massachusetts, she being the daughter of Jonathan Taylor, a native of New England. Her father was a member of the party who threw the tea overboard in Boston harbor. Nancy Taylor had eight brothers and sisters, many of whom were professional men and women, some of the latter being physicians with an income of $20,000 per year. The male members of the family participated in the Revolutionary War, and were fine men and soldiers.

Amos Rugg has traveled extensively throughout the United States, but is content to follow the occupation of a farmer, in which branch of work he has been so successful. With his wife, he is an influential member of the Congregational Church.

David W. Andrews, the eldest son of Mrs. Rugg, was born in this county, March 15, 1854. He left home years ago for the West, and has not been heard from since. Abijah Andrews had his birth March 26, 1856, and on October 14, 1879, was married to Miss Addie Coburn, who was born in this State, August 3, 1861. They have had two children, Linnie May, who was born February 15, 1881, and died the following April; and Louis C., whose birth occurred January 24, 1883.

OSEPH J. M. MYERS derives a comfortable income from his farming operations, which he carries on successfully in Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County. He is a representative of the German element that has played so important a part in the settlement and development of Illinois, and was born in Sarnico, Germany, June 16, 1811. His home is most beautifully located, and the residence, which is a handsome modern structure, cost $3,000. The home is supplied with all the comforts and conveniences which stamp its owner to be a thrifty and well-to-do citizen of the county.

The original of this sketch is a son of John and Elizabeth Myers, and from the age of ten to sixteen years he was employed at herding cattle in the Old Country. In 1857, when his parents emigrated to the New World, he immediately found employment on farms, receiving as remuneration for his services $2 per month and his board. He also cut cord-wood for three shillings a cord, and later, going to Milwaukee, spent two years in the Cream City and then came to Winnebago County, where he did farm work for four years at from $10 to $17 per month.

Mr. Myers, of this sketch, was married February 26, 1864, to Miss Sophia Glawe, who died four years later, when twenty-four years of age. Soon after his marriage, our subject rented a farm, which he operated for twelve years, and in the spring of 1875 moved to his present property, which he had purchased the year previous.

He of whom we write was married a second time to Miss Charlotte Dethwiller, who was born in Strasburg, France, August 21, 1847. She was the daughter of Henry and Charlotte Dethwiller, and was nine years old when brought to this country by her parents. By her union with our subject eight children were born, viz.: Eda, who was born June 27, 1871, married John Schmoock, a farmer; John F. H., born February 27, 1874; Frank. November 13, 1875; Anna C., February 2, 1876; William C., April 16, 1878; Louisa E., February 10, 1880; Rosa C., December 5, 1881, and Albert, the eldest of the family, who died at the age of four months.

Our subject later added to his farm in Pecatonica Township, and is now the proprietor of as fine a tract of land as is to be found in the county. His first one hundred and sixty acres cost him $40 per acre, and the last eighty, $60 per acre. With his wife he is a devoted member of the Lutheran Church, and takes a deep interest in all church matters. He takes a prominent part in public affairs, and votes the straight Republican ticket.

OUIS C. BLAKE, a well-known resident of Rockford, now living a retired life, was born in Newburg, N. Y., in 1833, and there acquired his education in the High School and an academy. While still in his teens, he became an auctioneer, learning the business in Albany, N. Y., with his grandfather, with whom he worked for some time. He later became advance agent for circus companies, and in this way traveled for many years through the South, becoming well acquainted with all the Southern States and the manners and customs of the people. His first connection was with the famous "Wizard of the Bugle," Almon Mentor, who was killed by a burglar at Covington, Ky. Mr. Blake afterward went upon the stage in the role of an Irish comedian. For some years he was with the Bailey Theatrical Company and played in all the leading cities of the North and South. He seemed especially adapted to this role and was very successful.

Mr. Blake at length came to Illinois, locating in Rochelle, where he spent about four years. During that time the Civil War broke out and he enlisted in Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry, under his friend, Capt. Andrus, and Col. W. H. L. Wallace. He went with his command to the front and in October of the same year was made Sergeant of the company. The following April he was made Sergeant-Major of the regiment and in November, 1862, was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Company G, to which he had been transferred from Company D. His promotion was an acknowledgment of his meritorious conduct at the battle of Ft. Donelson. In the latter part of 1863, he resigned and was honorably discharged. His first colonel having been killed at Ft. Donelson, he was afterward under the command of Col. Rausom and participated in every engagement of his regiment until mustered out of the service. Rheumatism was the cause of his resignation and it afterward confined him to his bed for nearly a whole year.

Mr. Blake married Miss Anna Kissam, of Newburg, N. Y., who was there reared and educated. She is a refined and cultured lady and is descended from the old Knickerbocker stock of New York. Her great-uncle, Col. Richard M. Varrick, was the first Recorder and Mayor of New York City. In their home they have some of the valuable silver plate that belonged to the Colonel which is treasured by them as a family heirloom. They also have a chair which belonged to Col. Varrick and was frequently occupied by Gen. Washington while the Colonel was serving on his staff. Other branches of the family, including the Livingstons and Rooseveltes, have figured prominently in the history of the country.

Mr. Blake came to Rockford in 1877, and secured a position with the Chicago & Iowa Railroad, now belonging to the Chicago, Burlington & Quiney Railroad. Three years later, he became ticket agent for the latter road and also for the Chicago & St. Paul, both having the same depot. A few months since, he severed his connection with the railroad companies, having acquired a comfortable competence. He is a genial, jovial man, warmhearted and well-read, and is quite prominent in social circles. He belongs to G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and to the order of Red Men. He has filled all the offices in the latter lodge and has been representative to the Great Council of the State and the United States. He has also passed through all the chairs of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and has been its representative to the Grand–Lodge of the State.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Blake were born three sons and two daughters, but May died in childhood. Cora is now the widow of C. H. Largent, and has one child; Louis C., Mason K. and Collins K. are all at home. The parents attend the Episcopal Church. Their beautiful home is at No. 527 North Church Street. Mr. Blake also owns a residence next to his home, which is one of the finest in the city.

RANK S. WEBBER, whose pleasant home in Flora Township, Boone County, comprises ninety aeres of land, was born in Dover, Piscataquis County, Me., February 21, 1834. He is a son of Alvin Webber, who was also born in the Pine Tree State, as was his father, Daniel Webber. The grandfather of our subject followed the sea for a number of years, and in 1845 came to Illinois and located in this township, where he spent his last years.

Alvin Webber was reared to agricultural pursuits, and resided in his native State until the removal of his parents to Illinois. When locating here, although the land was very cheap, ranging in price from $1.25 to $5.00 per acre, his means were not sufficient to enable him to invest in property. He was not, however, particularly pleased with the country, which bore little resemblance to its present prosperous condition, and so rented land for five years; during this time the country became more settled, and he was induced by his children to purchase land, and so became the proprietor of the east half of the southwest quarter of section 27, Flora Township. Here he improved a good farm, and resided until his death.

The mother of our subject bore the maiden name of Susan Grover, the daughter of Abraham and Susan Grover. Frank S. was a lad of eleven years when he came with his parents to Illinois, and remembers well the incidents of the overland journey and the pioneer life in this county. He attended the pioneer school, assisted the father on the farm, and resided at home until his marriage, when he purchased a farm in Monroe Township, Ogle County. After a residence there of seven years, our subject located upon the farm which he now occupies, and which is well improved with first-class buildings. He has, besides, fifteen acres of the old homestead and ten acres of timber land in Cherry Valley.

He of whom we write was married, May 18, 1857, to Arvilla, daughter of Newell and Clarinda (Hovery) Watkins. She was born in Tioga County, N. Y., and departed this life in 1876. The lady whom Mr. Webber chose as his second wife was Caroline Hammill, the ceremony being performed May 23, 1883. Mrs. Webber was born in Iowa County, Wis., while her father, Richard Hammill, was born, reared and married in England. On coming to America, he made his home in Dodgeville, Wis., and later purchased a tract of timber land two and one-half miles from Linden, which was his home until his decease. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Webber was Ann Yolton, a native of Cornwall, England, who died on the home farm in Wisconsin.

The wife of our subject was the youngest but one in a family of sixteen children born to her parents, and by her union with our subject is the mother of two children, Flora Belle and Earl S. Our subject has one child living by his first marriage, Frank S., the husband of Maggie Robinson. In politics, he votes the Republican ticket, and his wife, in religious matters, is identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

EMUEL FULLER is an enterprising and extensive farmer of Rockford Township, Winnebago County, residing on section 19. He is also a representative of one of the pioneer families of this locality and his parents should certainly be represented in this work. His father, John Fuller, was born in Worthington. Hampshire County, Mass., May 2, 1800, and was a son of Lemuel and Susan (Haskell) Fuller. On the 3d of September, 1831, he married Lucy Wilder, who was born in Hampshire County, Mass., April 5, 1808. Her grandfather, Seth Wilder, was a native of Salem, that State, whence he removed to Hampshire County, there making his home upon a farm until his death. Upon the same farm, Abel Wilder, father of Mrs. Fuller, was reared. On attaining to man's estate, he purchased land in that locality and engaged in agricultural pursuits, taking his grain to market in Albany and Troy, N. Y., for there were no railroads in those days. In 1816, he sold his land and removed to Windsor, Berkshire County, where he made his home until after the death of his wife, when he removed to the Empire State. The maiden name of Mrs. Wilder was Lucy Pratt. She was born in Weymouth, Mass., and died when Mrs. Fuller was but ten years of age.

After the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Fuller, they settled in Genesee County, where they made their home until 1839, which year witnessed their emigration Westward to Illinois. They went by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and thence with teams to Rockford, which they found to be a small hamlet in the midst of an unbroken tract of country. Mr. Miller made a claim on section 19, Rockford Township, and, as there were no buildings upon it, the family made their home in a store which had been erected about a mile and a half above their farm. They later moved into a log house in the same locality, and the following spring took up their residence in a log cabin adjoining the claim. In 1842, Mr. Fuller erected a frame residence on his own land, and there continued to make his home until his death, which occurred October 27, 1858. The family had borne all the hardships and privations of pioneer life, for when they came here the work of civilization and progress had searcely been begun. The few settlements were widely seattered, all kinds of wild game were plentiful, and Chicago was the nearest market.

Mr. and Mrs. Fuller were the parents of seven children: Lemuel, Levi B., Charles, Naney, John, Eliza and Ellen. The mother of this family is still living on the home farm, where she owns two hundred and seventy-eight acres of valuable land under a high state of cultivation. She is now well advanced in years, but is remarkably well preserved for one of her age, both physically and mentally, and still directs and assists in the house work. She is an estimable lady and has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances throughout this community.

Lemuel Fuller was born in Covington, Genesee County, N. Y., on the 16th of May, 1832, and was therefore only about seven years of age when he came with his parents to Illinois. Since that time, he has resided in Winnebago County. His education was acquired in the district schools of the neighborhood, and until his father's death he assisted him in the labors of the farm, with the exception of one year, which he spent in Harlem Township. He now resides with his mother on the home farm and is the owner of an adjoining farm of two hundred and fifty acres. Mr. Fuller is numbered among the enterprising and successful agriculturists of this community, and is a worthy representative of so prominent a pioneer family.

ENRY OLSON, polisher for the Skandia Plow Company, of Rockford, is a stockholder and ex-Director of that concern, and is a leading exponent of his branch of industry. He was one of the original promoters of this enterprise, and since it was started, in 1880, he has devoted his time, money and interest to its advancement.

Our subject is one of the many influential citizens of Rockford who claim Sweden as their native country, his birth occurring in Smoland Province, January 13, 1838, and he was twentynine years of age when he first touched American soil. This was about the 1st of May, 1868, and he first located in Muskegon, Mich. One year later, or in 1869, he came to Rockford, and has since been an industrious, hardworking man. For some time he was polisher for the N. C. Thompson Manufacturing Company, but since 1880 he has been with the present company. He has been successful, has accumulated considerable means, and recently creeted a modern and very pleasant residence at No. 509 Second Street.

Mr. Olson lost his parents, Olof and Christian (Peherson) Peherson, when but a child. They were members of the State Church and died when about middle age. He is the only one of the family in America. He selected as his companion in life Miss Martha Olson, also a native of Smoland Province, where she was reared and educated, and where her father, Harold Olson, is yet living. She was the only daughter of six children, all of whom are living in Rockford (see sketch of Robert Lind). She came to this country alone in October, 1868, resided in Michigan for a short time, and then came to Rockford, where she was married to Mr. Olson. Her father, who is seventy-two years of age, was for a number of years a resident of Rockford, his wife dying in the latter place in 1874, when sixty years of age. Her maiden name was Marie Christafson, and she was a member of the Lutheran Church, in which her husband still holds membership. Mr. and Mrs. Olson have been members of the First Lutheran Church of Rockford for twenty years. They are the parents of a bright and intelligent child, Alice A.

SAAC V. SEBRING. It is always a pleasure to record the events in the life of a member of one of those grand old families who have been identified with the history of this country since its earliest settlement, and who have been men of mark. The genealogy of the maternal ancestors of our subject, which is now being published, shows that their tirst representative in America was William Hartwell, who came over in the "Mayflower." There are now about one thousand of the name, who for the past eight years have held annual reunions at Concord, N. II. Their patriotism has been proved in the dark days of warfare, Grandfather Hartwell having served as a soldier from Vermont in the War of 1812, and his father, William, having faithfully defended the Colonies during the Revolutionary War.

The paternal ancestors of our subject originated in Holland, where Grandfather Sebring followed farming pursuits until he emigrated to America. Isaac B., father of our subject, was born in Pennsylvania, in December, 1811, and passed his youth on a farm. In 1841, near Eric, Pa., he was united in marriage to Miss Eunice Whitney Hartwell, who was born in Vermont in 1818. After the birth of their first child, they removed West, in the spring of 1845, making the journey by water to Milwaukee, and thence by team to Boone County, where they entered one hundred and twenty acres of Government land on section 25, Manchester Township.

The first step toward the improvement of the farm was the erection of a log house, a portion of which still stands, and which was roofed with sod. Other improvements followed as opportunity offered, and when the father died, in 1862, he left his family comfortably provided for. He was an upright man, firm in his convictions and a stanch adherent of the principles of truth and justice. During the Civil War, he enlisted as a member of Company C, Thirteenth Wisconsin Infantry, Capt. Cummings commanding. He served with valor for several months, but, while marching to Kansas with his regiment, was taken ill and died at a farmhouse, in April, 1862, at the age of fifty-one years.

The family of which our subject is a member consisted of eight children, one of whom died when eighteen months old, and Orinda when three years old. The others were Nathan B., born December 21, 1811; Harriet, September 30, 1845; Isaac V., January 27, 1850; Jane, February 6, 1852; Sarah, January 6, 1854; and Ella, March 25, 1855. All are still living with the exception of Nathan, who died in Washington, D. C., in August, 1862, from the effects of a gunshot wound. He entered the army in his twentieth year, becoming a member of Company K, Seventh Wisconsin Infantry, Capt. Gordon commanding, and served as a private until his death.

The mother of our subject was a daughter of William and Jane (Whitney) Hartwell, natives of New England, who removed to Illinois in 1845. She died in February, 1866, at the age of seventy-four years, leaving to her children a small estate of forty acres. All the children are married except our subject. Ilarrict is now Mrs. Augustus Cushman, of Shirland, Winnebago County; Jane became the wife of J. H. Livingston, a carpenter and mason; Sarah married Willis Hollister, of Belvidere; Ella is the wife of Oliver Webster, of Manchester Township, Boone County.

Our subject has passed his entire life in Boone County, and is now numbered among the prosperous farmers of Manchester Township, where he has a fine farm on section 35. The place comprises one hundred and sixty acres, including the forty agrees of the old homestead. In 1872, he bought forty acres, paying therefor the sum of $1,150, and in 1885 he purchased eighty acres for $3,000, including some splendid farming land. He conducts a general farming business and also engages in stock-raising to some extent. In 1884, he improved his farm by the erection of a large and substantial frame residence, in which he makes his home. He is a man of public spirit, has served his fellow-citizens as Highway Commissioner and School Director, and exerts his influence in behalf of those measures which are conducive to the good of the community.

APT. WILLIAM D. E. ANDRUS. One of the oldest and most highly-respected citizens of Winnebago County, who has been prominently connected with its growth and development for many years, is Capt. William D. E. Andrus, of Rockford, whose portrait is shown on another page.

A native of Chautauqua County, N. Y., our subject came West with his parents and with them settled in Illinois as early as 1843. Since then, with the exception of about four years spent in the army and a few years in Dakota, he has been a resident of this county. He has ever been industrious and practical, and as a result of his energy and good management he is the owner of a large amount of property in Rockford and extensive tracts of land in Bon Homme County, S. Dak., which is fast developing as a farming and dairy county. He has been interested in Dakota real estate since 1879, about which time he filled the position of Indian Agent at the Yankton Agency for three years and a half. He became interested in that State but not sufficiently to cause him to leave Illinois, his adopted State, in which he was reared and educated.

When the war broke out, our subject was among the first to respond to his country's call and was in the company that first telegraphed its services to the Governor in February, 1861, and that was one of the first to be accepted. The official record, direct from Washington, D. C., was as follows: "Entered service as a private, Rockford Zouaves, April 20, 1861. Mustered into service as Second Lieutenant, Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry, April 30, 1861. Regiment organized at Springfield, Ill., for three months' service. Re-enlisted in three years' service as Captain of Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry, July 30, 1861. Assigned to W. H. L. Mustered out, July 31, 1864, expiration of term." These facts, taken from the Adjutant-General's Report, show conclusively that the war record of Capt. Andrus is a good one.

After his return to the city of Rockford, Capt. Andrus embarked in business enterprises and has been fairly successful. He has a pleasant, cheerful disposition, is sociable and agreeable and his friends are legion. He has been an active worker in the G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., which he organized and of which he was the first Commander. The name it bears was suggested by Mr. Andrus, who gave it that title in honor of the first Captain of Company D. who subsequently became Colonel of the Eleventh Regiment and was killed in the battle of Vicksburg.

Mr. Andrus is a Thirty-second degree Mason, being a member of the Oriental Consistory of Chicago. He was a charter member of the Crusader Commandery No. 17, of Rockford, and was the Commander under a second dispensation, also filled the same position after the lodge was chartered. He has filled several of the offices of the Chapter and Blue Lodges, the former, Winnelago Chapter No. 24, and the latter, Star of the East No. 166. In polities he is a strong Republican.

Our subject was married in Chicago, Ill., to Miss Isabella Westfall, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was reared and educated at Sag Harbor. Her death occurred at the family residence in Rockford, in 1873, when in the prime of life. She was an intelligent, accomplished lady, and a devout member of the Presbyterian Church. They were the parents of two children, both of whom died young.

LEXANDER SMITH. The farming community of Harlem Township, Winnebago County, recognizes a worthy representative in the subject of this notice, who pursues the even tenor of his way on a magnificent tract of three hundred and twenty acres on section 35. He exercises considerable influence in the community, and is looked upon as one of its most reliable men. His industrious, frugal and temperate habits have gained him a competence which will enable him to pass his declining years in peace and comfort.

A number of the best residents in Harlem Township have been born in Argyleshire, Scotland, which is also the birthplace of our subject, his natal day being June 21, 1832. His parents were Daniel and Mary (Montgomery) Smith, whose sketch will be found in the biography of Robert Smith, on another page of this book. Our subject was a lad of ten years when making the trip to America with his parents, and remembers well the ocean voyage and the pioneer life in this country. After the death of his father, he carried on farming in company with his brothers, and in 1852, when a division of the property was made, they owned nearly six hundred acres. Daniel and our subject settled on the farm where Mr. Smith resides at the present time, and continued to work together until 1858, when the latter purchased his brother's interest in the old homestead, and began its cultivation. He has been very successful in all his undertakings, and is now one of the largest land-owners in the county, his farm being well improved and stocked with the best grades of horses, cattle, etc.

In 1858, our subject was married to Ann Smith, also a native of Kintyre, Scotland, and the daughter of James and Martha (Johnson) Smith. To them have been born six children: Barbara J., Hugh J., Mary A., and three deceased. The family are all members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church and have many friends in their wide circle of acquaintances.

SRAEL SOVEREIGN. Among the men who east their fortunes in Winnebago County, Ill., in 1840, and whose memory is respected by the people of this region is John Sovereign, the father of our subject. He was born in New Jersey, on the 28th of February, 1797, and was of German descent, although his parents were natives of New Jersey. He was four years of age when his parents moved to Ontario, Canada, and there he grew up to farm life, and was married to Miss M. Mabee. She was born in Canada, of Canadian parentage, and was probably of English descent. After marriage, John Sovereign and wife moved to Malihide Township, and there the latter died, in 1839, when just thirty-nine years of age. She left ten children, nearly all of whom grew to mature years. Two are now in California, one in Missouri and two in this State.

After the death of his wife, in 1839, John Sovereign came with teams and wagons and brought his family to Winnebago County, and November 10 of that year settled in Guilford Township. Being left with a large family, Mr. Sovereign took for his second wife Mrs. Mary Mason, a native of Illinois, and their marriage occurred in Boone County. She had a number of children by her first marriage, and died in this county when quite aged. Mr. Sovereign and both wives were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he was a local minister in Winnebago County, being known far and wide as a good, carnest Christian. He passed most of his life in that county, but died in California while on a visit to his son George, August 20, 1870. He was then seventy-two years of age. He was one of the leading pioneers of Guilford Township, and one of its best citizens. Active in benevolent and charitable enterprises, strong in his friendship, and brave in his defense of the right, few men were better respected than John Sovereign.

Israel Sovereign, our subject, was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, November 6, 1827, and finished his growth in Guilford Township, this county. In 1857, he came to Rockford, and became connected with the hardware business, which he followed until 1883, being one of the leading hardware dealers on the West Side. He yet owns a business block on South Main Street. Mr. Sovereign was one of the promoters of the Rockford Watch Company, is a stockholder in the same, and was one of the committee to investigate the watch-making business. Since its organization, he has been a Director, and has represented the watch company on the road for five years. He is a live business man, and has met with wonderful success for his house in the Northwestern States and parts of Canada, being very popular in his business, and justly merits the large measure of success achieved by his skill and industry. He is sociable and genial, a very pleasant conversationalist, strictly temperate in his habits, and, although sixty-four years of age, is free from ills and pains, and is as active as most men of forty. Our subject was married in this county to Miss Laura Judd, who came from Ohio to this State in early girlhood. Her parents, Jason and Rebecca (Shaw) Judd, settled on a farm in Durand Township, and there passed the remainder of their days. They were natives of Vermont and Massachusetts, respectively, and were representative people of their community. Mr. and Mrs. Sovereign have three children: C. Eugene, a prominent business man of Rockford, who first married a Miss Doyle, and after her death married Miss Elsie Irvine; Fred J., proprictor of the City Ice Company, married Luella Rhoades; and Alice M., at home. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Sovereign is a Republican in politics.

OHN ERLANDER is now living a retired life after many years devoted to active business in Rockford, where he has made his home since 1854. He is one of the worthy citizens that Sweden has furnished to this community. His birth occurred in that country, April 7, 1826, and he is a son of John and Steine (Pearson) Johnson, who spent their entire lives in their native land. The father died at the age of eighty-two years, his wife at the age of seventy-nine, and her mother reached the advanced age of ninety-four. They were life-long members of the Lutheran Church.

In 1851, our subject, his brother Peter, and sister Katie bade good-bye to their old home, and sailed from Gottenburg to New York City, reaching their destination after a voyage of seven weeks. They came on at once to Rockford, and all are yet living in this city. Mr. Erlander was married, in 1855, to Miss Christine Peterson, a native of Sweden, who came to Rockford the year previous, and died in 1857, at the age of twenty years, leaving one son, William, who departed this life at the age of fifteen. Our subject was again married, in 1857, this union being with a sister of his first wife, Ingas Peterson, who was born in Sweden, July 9, 1833, and is a daughter of Peter and Katie (Orvid) Johnson, who were also natives of that country, and who came to Rockford in 1854. They both died of cholera during the first week after locating in this city, at the ages of forty-eight and fifty-two years, respectively. They were members of the Lutheran Church.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Erlander have been born seven children: Frank, who died in childhood; Alfred is living in Chicago; Frank C., a watch-maker of Rockford; Peter E., who carries on a confectionery establishment in Chicago; Hannah C., a dressmaker of this city; Mary O., a milliner; and John J. The children all received good educational advantages, and are doing well in life. They and the parents are all members of the First Lutheran Church. They have a pleasant home at No. 402 South Third Street, supplied with all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life, and in social circles they rank high.

Mr. Erlander came to this city a poor man, with no capital except a knowledge of the tailor's trade. After working for some time for S. P. Franklin and John Frella as a journeyman, he opened a little shop of his own, and in the spring of 1861, went into the tailoring business with S. A. Johnson, the partnership continuing uninterrupted until 1885. In the meantime, they enlarged their business and carried a complete and extensive stock of ready-made clothing and gents' furnishing goods. From the beginning, their trade constantly increased, and it proved to Mr. Erlander a successful enterprise. In company with a few others, he became the founder of the Rockford Union Furniture Company in March, 1876, which has become one of the leading enterprises of the city. He was its first President, holding the office for three years, and was one of its Directors as long as he continued his connection with the company, He aided in establishing the Excelsior Furniture Company in 1880, became a member of the Board of Directors, and at one time the burden of the whole business rested almost entirely upon him. This was during the critical period of its existence, but he tided it safely over its threatened failure, and has made it one of the important industries of the city. He has been one of its Directors and its President for some years.

Mr. Erlander is a stockholder and Director in the Central Furniture Company; a stockholder in the Manufacturers' Bank; a stockholder and Director in the Rockford Brick Company; and was one of the chief organizers of the Swedish Mutual Fire Insurance Company, established in 1873. He became President of the company after its organization, and still holds that office. The important part he has borne in these enterprises has aided materially in the upbuilding of the city, the prosperity of his fellow-townsmen, and his own success. In politics, he is a stalwart Republican, and has been Supervisor of the Second Ward for nine years. He was one of the first members of the First Swedish Lutheran Church and Sunday-school, in which he has always been very much interested, has given liberally to its support, and taken an active part in its work. Whatever tends to benefit the community is sure to receive his hearty co-operation, and his aid is never withheld from any enterprise. He is an honored and valued citizen, respected by all, and it is with pleasure that we present this sketch to our readers.

ILLIAM C. PROUTY, deceased, was born in Brattleboro, Vt., in 1810, a descendant of an old and prominent New England family. He was educated in the High School of his native town and entered upon his business eareer in New York City, where he carried on trade in Chatham Square, then a prominent business quarter of the metropolis.

Returning to his native town, Mr. Prouty was joined in wedlock with Miss Adeline A. Wheelock, who was born in Wardsboro, Vt., in 1812. was graduated from the Brattleboro Academy and engaged in teaching for a short time before her marriage. Her father, Judge Henry Wheelock, was also a native of Vermont and was a son of Asa Wheelock, a native of Massachusetts and a prominent citizen of Windham County, Vt., where he resided for many years. His son Henry was Judge of that county for some years and afterward came to Illinois, bringing with him a stock of goods. He established a store in Byron, and was thus engaged for some time, becoming a prominent citizen of Ogle County. In politics, he was first a Whig and afterward a Republican, and held membership in the Congregational Church. In the Green Mountain State, he was married to Adelphia Converse, who was born in Massachusetts, but spent the greater part of her girlhood in Windham County, Vt. She proved to her husband a true helpmate until her death, which occurred in Rockford at an advanced age. Judge Wheelock later died at the age of eighty-two, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Lewis, of this city. A brother, Fred, is now living on the old homestead in Byron, Ill.; Erastus resides with Mrs. Prouty, and Mrs. Charles Lewis makes her home in Rockford.

Mr. Prouty first came to Illinois in 1811 and did business for some time in Byron, Ogle County, with his father-in-law, Judge Wheelock. He afterward established a general merchandise store in Pecatonica and subsequently came to Rockford. He was one of the leading men in this county for years and was well and widely known in business circles. He came to Rockford in the spring of 1875, and here engaged in the boot and shoe business until his death, when he was succeeded by his son Henry, who died just seven years later. Fred Prouty, another son of our subject, then became proprietor of the store and still carries on business at No. 126 State Street.

Our subject ever took a prominent part in political affairs and was a co-worker and a great friend of Horace Greeley. He was one of the leaders in the W. H. Harrison campaign and his widow now has in her possession a letter written at that time, which reads as follows:

Williamsburg, November 17, 1840,

SIR:

You are requested to attend a regular meeting of the Williamsburg Tippecanoe Association on Tuesday evening, November 17, at seven o'clock, at the log cabin.

By order of Temple Fay, President, William C. Prouty, Secretary.

Our subject was well fitted to be a leader of the people, and wherever he went occupied that position. He was straightforward and upright in all things, an honored and worthy man who was held in high regard by all who knew him. He died at his home in Rockford, September 8, 1878, at the age of sixty-eight years, and many friends mourned his loss. As pioneer, friend and neighbor, he won the esteem of all, and his portrait, which is presented on another page, will be regarded as a valuable addition to this work.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Prouty were born five children but two sons, both bearing the name of William II., died in the Empire State. Henry died at his home in this city when thirty-six years of age. The living are Adelaide A., wife of Dr. T. M.

Butler, a resident of Detroit; and Fred C., who married Sadie Kemp, of Chicago, and is now earrying on the shoe business established by his father. Mrs. Prouty is a most estimable lady, warmhearted and true, and possessing many noble qualities and excellencies of character which endear her to all.

AMPSON GRETTON, Jr. The following is a brief sketch of the career of Mr. Gretton, a man whose present substantial position in life has been reached entirely through his own perseverance; and the facts connected with his agricultural operations and their results only show what a person with courage and enlightened views can accomplish. The subject of this sketch first saw the light of day in New York State, his birth occurring in Monroe County, near the town of Brockport, September 19, 1813.

The father of our subject, Sampson Gretton, Sr., was born in Staffordshire, England, and was married to Miss Mary Berry, who was also a native of England, born in Lancashire. They came to America at an early date, settled in New York State, where they were married, and there made their home until the spring of 1819, when they came to Hinois. They located on the farm now owned by our subject and bought the land of a brother, who had taken it from the Government. Here they passed the remainder of their days engaged in tilling the soil, and were much esteemed in the community. The father died when about seventy-eight years of age, and the mother at the age of seventysix. They were the parents of three children, but lost two in infancy, our subject being the only one now living. They made many improvements on their fine farm, and lived to see the wilderness blossom like the rose.

Sampson Gretton, Jr., has been a resident of the old home-place for many years, and the improvements begun by his parents he has completed and made perfect. He still lives in the house first erected by his parents, is the owner of one hundred and forty-two acres of land and is prosperous and contented. On the 23d of November, 1869, our subject was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Lawman, a native of Lincolnshire, England, born December 30, 1818, and the daughter of John and Rebecca (Fillingham) Lawman, also natives of that country. In the year 1851, her parents came to the United States and settled in Spring Township, Boone County, IIL, where they still reside. They are classed among the best citizens of the county, and are active in all movements that have for their object the improvement and development of the county and township.

Three children have blessed our subject's union: Alice M., born on the 22d of May, 1871; Wallace, May 3, 1875, and Charles H., born on the 22d of January, 1890, all natives of this township and county. At an early age, our subject became familiar with the duties of the farm, and agricultural pursuits have been his principal occupation since. He is thorough and enterprising, and everything about his well-kept farm indicates that he is one of the prosperous and substantial men of the county. His excellent wife is a noted housekeeper, and is a lady of culture and intelligence. Her paternal grandparents were William and Amelia Lawman and her maternal grandparents, William and Sarah (Thursby) Fillingham, natives of Nottinghamshire, England. The great-grandfather, John Thursby, was also a native of Nottinghamshire, England. Like his father, our subject is a decided Republican in his political views, and is a strong advocate of the principles of that party.

MRI J. CUMMINGS, who carries on general farming on section 17, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, claims Ohio as the State of his nativity. He was born in Thompson, Geauga County, December 28, 1832. His grandfather, John Cummings, was an agriculturist, and spent his entire life in West Swanzey, N. II. He wedded Mary Hawk. Their son, Nehemiah Cummings, was born in West Swanzey, there acquired a common-school education, and, when a young man, started for the Far West. He became a pioneer of Geauga County, Ohio, and purchased a tract of heavily timbered land in Thompson Township, upon which he built a log cabin. There the family lived in true frontier style, and, while the father worked in the fields, the mother spun and wove the cloth used in making her children's gar-It was in 1844 that they left that home, and with their four children started with a team to Winnebago County, where they arrived seventeen days later. Mr. Cummings purchased land in Guilford Township, a tract of wild prairie land, and again the family experienced the hardships and privations of pioneer life. He there made his home until his death, in January, 1866. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Rebecca Coltam, was a native of Lincolnshire, England, and a daughter of Vincent Coltam.

Mr. Cummings, of this sketch, has long been a resident of Winnebago County, whither he came with his father when a lad of twelve years. He aided in the farm work, and remained at home until 1853, when he spent one year in Ohio. In 1854, he went to lowa, but after a few months returned to this State, and in 1856 again went to lowa, entering a tract of Government land in Floyd Township, but did not make a permanent location there. He afterwards exchanged that farm for his present home, upon which he has resided since his marriage.

On the 28th of October, 1858, Mr. Cummings wedded Anna Butler, a native of Franklin Town ship, Lycoming County, Pa. Her father was born in the North of Ireland, and was a son of John and Elizabeth (Bradley) Butler, who were natives of the Emerald Isle, and of Scotch descent. With his parents, he came to America when five years of age, and was reared and married in Pennsylvania, wedding Hannah Farr, a native of the Keystone State, as were her parents, William and Anna (Smith) Farr. They were of English lineage, and both the paternal and maternal grandfathers, William Farr and George Smith, were Revolutionary soldiers. Mr. Butler served in the War of 1812, and in 1854 came to Illinois, locating in Rockford Township, Winnebago County. He bought a farm upon which he resided until his death, four years later.

Four children have been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Cummings: Lillian, now the wife of Charles Fitts; Mary E., wife of Edwin Gorham; Abigail, wife of Elmer Knoud, and Butler N., who married Ella Elhott. The parents attend the Christian Union Church, of Rockford, and are worthy Christian people, possessed of many excellencies of character. In politics, Mr. Cummings is a Republican, and, socially, is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R. During the late war, he manifested his lovalty to the Union by enlisting, July 28, 1862, as a member of Company D, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. He served until the 1st of January following, when, on account of disability, he received his discharge. For two or three years he was unable to work, after which he resumed farming, and has since followed that occupation with signal success.

ETER M. NELSON, a contractor and builder of masonry and brick work, who has made his home in Rockford since 1871, is another of the worthy citizens that Sweden has furnished to Winnebago County. He was born in England, on the 12th of January, 1852, and was reared and educated in his native coun-His father, Nelso Peter Danielson, died in Sweden when forty-two years of age. His wife is yet living and is about sixty-seven years of age. Her maiden name was Chesta Hawkinson, and she has been a life-long member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, to which her husband also belonged. Three brothers, Alfred, John A. and Gust, have joined our subject in this country and now live in Rockford. Alfred wedded Christina Begeholdt, of Sweden; John A. married Emma Danielson, of the same country; and Gust was joined in wedlock with Anna Johnson.

Our subject was the first of his family to leave his native land and seek a home in the New World. He crossed the Atlantic from Sweden to Baltimore, and went Westward, landing in Chicago on the 12th of May, 1872. For two years he resided in that city and there learned his trade as a mason and brick layer. In 1874, as before stated, we find him a resident of Rockford, where he has since been engaged in business. He has met with signal success in his undertakings and has worked his way upward from an humble position to one of affluence. He is now enjoying a liberal patronage, and has helped build some two hundred and forty-seven of the good homes and public buildings of the city, and is the owner of some valuable property, including a brick and stone block at No. 105 Seventh Street, together with his residence at No. 107 Sixth Street.

In this city Mr. Nelson led to the marriage altar Miss Selma Harding, who was born in Sweden in 1863, and came to the United States when a child of only three years with her parents, who took up their residence in Rockford and have since made their home in this city. The death of Mrs. Nelson occurred on the 26th of June, 1891. She left three children to mourn her loss: Herbert A., Elmer L. and Verna A.

Mr. Nelson holds membership with the Lutheran Church, as did also his wife. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles but has never sought or desired political preferment for himself, as his time and attention have been wholly taken up with his business, in which he has met with signal success. He is public-spirited and progressive, manifesting a commendable interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the city, and is regarded by his fellow-townsmen as a man of sterling worth. He ranks high in business circles and is well known throughout this community, where he has made his home for eighteen consecutive years.

HARLES T. SPACKMAN, one of the prominent citizens of Belvidere, claims Illinois as the State of his nativity. He was born December 28, 1812, and is a son of William Spackman. The grandfather, George Spackman, was a native of England, and became a Baptist preacher. He came to America in 1826, and, after a year spent in New York, removed to Canada, locating four miles from St. Thomas, at what is now known as the Five Stakes. He erected a commodious house and opened a tavern. He also engaged in farming, and on Sunday filled a neighboring pulpit. At Five Stakes he resided until his death, which occurred at the advanced age of one hundred and three years, while his wife reached the age of ninety-seven. They had a family of six sons and five daughters.

William Spackman was a lad of twelve years when he came to America with his parents. He remained on the old-home farm until 1837, when he emigrated to Illinois and cast in his lot with the pioneer settlers of Ogle County. He was a carpenter by trade and erected the first building which could properly be called a store in Rockford. He was a member of the vigilance committee which was organized for protection against horse thieves and banditti of the prairie and is said to be one of the eleven men who shot the Drinalls. He was one of those arrested and held for trial, but the vigilantees visited the judge in large numbers and secured their release. Mr. Spackman secured a tract of land in Marion Township, a short distance from Byron, and there resided until 1852, when he came to Boone County, and purchased the Blood farm in Spring Township, engaging in agricultural pursuits at that place until 1861, when he enlisted in Company F, Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry, and participated in the battles of Ft. Donelson, Shiloh, Vicksburg and many others. He was afterwards taken sick, transferred to the invalid corps, and went to Washington with Col. Boyd. Although using his crutch, he went out from there and fought Early's troops in Virginia. He served three years and three months, after which he was honorably discharged and returned home. He continued to reside in this county until 1872, when he went to Arkansas, and bought a plantation at Grand Lake, engaging in agricultural pursuits until his death, in 1886. He wedded Mary Smith, daughter of John Smith, one of the pioneers of Michigan. She now resides with her children in Arizona. The family number the following children: Charles T., Mary A., Phila, Emma, Hattie and William.

The early educational advantages which our subject received were those afforded by the common schools. He afterwards attended school in Belvidere, and in 1866 and 1867 was a student in the State University at Ann Arbor, Mich. On his return home he resumed farming, which he followed until 1871, when he began the study of law with O. H. Wright. He studied one year and then again engaged in farming until 1876. Having been admitted to the Bar, he commenced practice in that year and is now numbered among—he prominent attorners of Belvidere.

In 1872, Mr. Spackman wedded Miss Eliza Roach, who was born near Marietta, Ohio, and is a daughter of John and Sarah Roach. They have ten children and the family circle yet remains unbroken. In order of birth they are as follows: Charles, Hattie, Emma, Bessic, Frank, William, Vina, Daisy, Grace and John.

In politics, Mr. Spackman is an ardent Republican and has frequently served as delegate to the county, district and State conventions. He was a charter member of T. G. Lawler Camp, of which he is now Captain, was one of the organizers of Boone Camp No. 52, M. W. A., is a member of the Royal Arcanum, Knights of Pythias, and of Belvidere Lodge No. 543, National Union. His wife is State President of the L. A. S. of S. of V. of Illinois. Mr. Spackman was elected Police Magistrate in 1885 and served continuously until 1890, when he was elected Justice of the Peace and now holds that office. He is an able lawyer and his merit has won him high rank at the Bar of Boone County.

EORGE W. REEVES, deceased, is numbered among the early settlers of Rockford, and for many years was one of its leading etizens. He was born in Gloucestershire, England, October 15, 1800, and was descended from an old English family which had resided in that country since the days of William the Conqueror. His parents lived and died in Gloucestershire, where they were highly respected residents and prominent Episcopalians.

Under the parental roof our subject was reared to manhood and in his native county learned the trade of a carriage-maker which he followed for twenty years in England, becoming an efficient and skilled mechanic, and throughout his life the character of his work justified the complimentary words passed upon it. Ere leaving his native land, he was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Reeves, who was born and reared in Gloucestershire, but, though of the same name, was not of the same family as her husband. After the birth of three children, they left their old home and took passage upon a sailing-vessel at Liverpool, in the summer of 1851. At length they landed at New York City, whence they came directly to Rockford.

Two of the children have since died. Mary A., the eldest, became the wife of George Reeves, now a resident of California, and died leaving two ehildren: Charles E., who married Miss Cora Moore and now resides in Pomona, Cal.; and Clara A., wife of D. N. Burrett, also of Pomona. Another child, Frank E., is deceased. George C., the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Reeves, died in middle life. He married Myra B. Weldon, who is also deceased. They were the parents of one daughter, Daisy C., now a student in the Normal of Los Angeles, Cal. Fannie M., the only surviving child of Mr. and Mrs. Reeves, is the widow of Rev. John H. Reeves, who died in 1885. He was a Methodist clergyman, belonging to the Rock River Conference, and his consistent Christian life endeared him to all his acquaintances. His widow now resides with her mother and is a most estimable Christian lady whose life is devoted to the work of the Master. She is especially interested in missions and is the Corresponding Secretary of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society in the Methodist Church of the Rockford district.

On coming to Rockford, our subject established a blacksmith and wagon and carriage making shop, and for some years the firm of Reeves & Co., his son-in-law. George Reeves, being his partner, did an extensive and successful business, located on West State Street. Their constantly increasing trade caused them to give employment to a number of men, and in the pursuit of business Mr. Reeves acquired a good competence, which enabled him to spend his last years in retirement. Soon after coming to Rockford, he purchased the lot on which he built his home and there resided until his death, which occurred October 22, 1887. He had been a resident of Rockford for more than thirty-six years, during which time he had proved his worth as a citizen, a straightforward business man and honorable gentleman. His lineaments are perpetuated for coming generations by his portrait on another page.

Mrs. Reeves still survives her husband and resides at their old home. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and her earnest Christian life is worthy of emulation. On March 27, 1892, she was seventy-nine years of age, but her years rest lightly upon her and her hair is hardly streaked with silver.

YMAN TAYLOR, who resides on section 28, Harlem Township, is numbered among the early settlers of Winnebago County, of 1840, and during the half-century which has since passed has been prominently identified with its upbuilding and advancement. He was born in Middlefield, Hampshire County, Mass., October 21, 1821. Tradition says that William Taylor, his grandfather, was born in Scotland and came to America as a soldier during the Revolutionary War. He settled on a farm in the town of Middlefield, where he spent the remainder of his days. His wife bore the maiden name of Priscilla Loveland.

Asa Taylor, the father of our subject, was also a native of the Bay State, born August 26, 1797. He was reared upon a farm and followed that occupation in the town of Middlefield until about 1840, when he emigrated Westward and settled in Harlem Township, Winnebago County, Ill., where his remaining years were passed; he departed this life in 1847. His wife, Lovisa Taylor, was born in Washington, Berkshire County, Mass., November 19, 1799, and was a daughter of Amos and Louisa (Bills) Haskin, who are mentioned in the sketch of Charles Haskin on another page of this work. Mrs. Taylor died February 7, 1881. Both parents were members of the Methodist Church. Their family numbered five children: Lyman, Harriet, Henry P., Mary and Josephine.

The subject of this sketch spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native State, there residing until October, 1840, when he came with his father to Illinois, making the journey by team to Albany, thence by the Eric Canal to Buffalo, and on by the Lakes to Chicago, where he again procured a team and proceeded to Winnebago County. The journey consumed nearly a month, During the same autumn, Mr. Taylor purchased a tract of land on section 29, Harlem Township. About twenty acres had been broken but there was not a building there or any other improvements. Mr. Taylor built a small frame house, doing most of the carpenter work himself; this was one of the first frame houses in the place. He then began life in earnest, and although he came to the county empty-handed, by his industrious efforts he gained a comfortable competence. He had to bear all the hardships and trials of pioneer life, but he overcame these and steadily worked his way upward.

In 1844, our subject married Elizabeth Bowman, who was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, April 27, 1824, and is a daughter of James and Ann (Steven) Bowman, both of whom were natives of Scotland. They came to America in 1836, accompanied by six of their seven children, and after a voyage of seven weeks landed at Quebec, whence they went to Huron County, Ohio, where the death of Mr. Bowman occurred in the fall of the same year. His widow continued to make her home in that locality until 1842, when she came by way of the Lakes to Illinois. She found Rockford to be a mere hamlet and the surrounding country but sparsely settled. In this county she made her home until her death. The Bowman family numbered seven children: Alexander, George, Ann. John, Elizabeth, Mary and James. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have been born five children: Andrew, Oliver, Louisa A., James, and one who died in infancy.

The parents are both members of the Harlem Methodist Church, and in this community where they have so long made their home have a wide acquaintance and many friends. In politics, Mr. Taylor is a Republican, having supported that party since its organization. He sold his first farm in 1872 and purchased that upon which he now resides on section 28, Harlem Township. He has erected a good set of farm buildings and made other improvements of both a useful and ornamental character. His fields are well tilled and the neat appearance of the place indicates the thrift and enterprise of the owner. Mr. Taylor is a leading farmer, a valued citizen and an honored pioneer, who well deserves representation in this volume.

HILIP W. MARSH, one of the prominent residents of Rockford, was born in New Milford, Litchfield County, Conn., December 22, 1815. His father, Bradley Marsh, was also a native of that place, as was his father, Samuel Marsh. The latter-named gentleman was of English ancestry and a farmer by occupation, spending his entire life in New Milford.

Bradley Marsh was reared on the home farm, where he followed agricultural pursuits. His daughter, Betsey A., who married Moody J. Howes, now owns and occupies the cld place. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Sally Wells; she was also born in New Milford, Conn., and was a daughter of Philip and Elizabeth Wells. The parental family of our subject included live children: Eliza L., Orin B., Betsey A., Philip and Sophia.

Our subject went to school in his native town and resided with his parents until reaching his sixteenth year, when he made his home with his sister Eliza at New Haven. He there learned the trade of a joiner but followed that occupation but a short time. He assisted in making the survey for the Housatonic Valley Railroad and after the road was completed from Bridgeport to New Canaan, our subject acted as conductor on the road for four months.

In 1845, Mr. Marsh came to Illinois via the railroad to Albany, then by way of the canal to Buffalo, where he embarked on the steamer which conveyed him to Chicago. He there met a farmer, who was in the city to dispose of his grain, and bargained with him to take him to Kishwaukee, a village located at the mouth of the Kishwaukee Creek in Winnebago County. At that time, this section of the country was very sparsely settled, deer, bears and other wild animals roaming at will over the country, and most of the land was in the possession of the Government. Mr. Marsh started in the mercantile business at Kishwaukee, and after remaining there a twelvemonth disposed of his store and removed to New Milford, Conn. In 1851, he returned to Winnebago County and for two months was engaged as clerk in a general store. At the expiration of that time, he purchased a farm in what is now New Milford Township, and at the organization of the same, our subject, in company with Horace Miller and a Mr. Moore, was appointed a committee to select a name for the township, and it was thus named New Milford in honor of the old home of Mr. Marsh.

The original of this sketch continued to cultivate the soil until 1883, at which time he traded his farm for property on Charles Street, Rockford, which he has lately platted into city lots. He was married, December 22, 1845, to Nancy E. Miller, who was born in Livingston County, N. Y., and who was the daughter of the Hon. Horace and Hannah (Clark) Miller. To Mr. and Mrs. Marsh have been born three children, namely: Philip. Arthur A. Clarence and Frank M. Mrs. Marsh is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in his political views, our subject, in early life a Whig, easting his first vote for Gen. Harrison in 1840, now votes the straight Republican ticket. He has been the recipient of various township offices within the gift of the people, the duties of which he has performed in a most satisfactory and creditable manner.

ADNEY LUFKIN, whose life has been an active one, and who has by his own industry and intelligent management secured a substantial footing among the citizens of this community, was born in North Yarmouth, Me., in 1821. His parents, Jacob B. and Elizabeth (Ludden) Lufkin, were natives of Cape Ann, Mass., and Maine, respectively, the father born in May, 1778. They were the parents of eleven children, two of whom died young, and of the nine who grew to adult years our subject was the youngest.

The paternal grandfather of our subject. Nathaniel Lufkin, was born in Cumberland, Me., September 4, 1791, and the maternal great-grandfather, Nathaniel Ludden, was a Revolutionary soldier. He was one of the minute men before the war and was among those who threw the tea into the Atlantic Ocean. He was very powerfully built, weighed two hundred pounds, and was six feet two inches in height. He died at his son's home in Maine when eighty-three years of age, his death having occurred in Pownal.

Our subject was reared to farm life and continued to cultivate the soil on his father's farm until seventeen years of age, when he went to sea on a merchantman from Portland and Boston, first on the bark "Ontario," going to the West Indies under Capt. Hambleton, and next on the "Henry Leeds," with Capt. Humphrey, to Havana, Cuba. He was on the ocean five years, and from before the mast at $16 per month, he was finally made second mate with a salary of $25 per month. He had a good common-school education and had kept his wages from the time he was seventeen years of age. He was married in Beloit, when twentyeight years of age, to Miss Mary A. Bamlet, of England, daughter of Joseph and Alice Bamlet.

Mr. Lufkin came West in the year 1844, coming from New Orleans on the Mississippi River, and he soon after settled in Manchester Township on a quarter-section, with his brother, David T., occupying an adjoining farm. They built a saw-mill soon after and conducted this until 1849 or 1850, when our subject was taken with the gold fever and went to California. During the ten years he remained in that State, he made a great deal but also lost heavily, so that when he returned he brought back little more than he started out with, save experience. During the Indian outbreak in 1851–55 in California, our subject raised a company of sixty men and was engaged for about three months subjugating the redskins.

Our subject's union was blessed by the birth of the following children: George W. is married and has four children; Elmer E., a farmer of Wyoming, is married; Alice May, now Mrs. Duncan McLean, her husband a farmer on the old homestead; Jesse W. is a carpenter in California; Edward A. is married and resides in Beloit, Wis.; and William W. is a teacher in Wyoming. The mother of these children passed away on the 2d of March, 1887, when sixty years of age.

Mr. Lufkin formerly owned three hundred and ninety acres of land, but he recently sold one hundred and seventy acres. He is very successful in all his farming operations and, in connection with this, also engages in stock-raising to some extent. He raises cattle, horses, hogs and a good grade of sheep, and everything about his place indicates a thrifty and progressive owner. Socially, he is a Master Mason, but in religion is a freethinker and a member of no church. He has been School Trustee and a member of the Committee on Highways. In 1860, our subject was a Douglas Democrat and a strong adherent and supporter of Peter Cooper, and still adheres to those principles.

EORGE G. WHEELER. This gentleman owns and occupies a valuable estate in Flora Township, Boone County, and is numbered among the enterprising and progressive agriculturists of his community. He was born August 19, 1832, in Portland, Chautauqua County, N. Y., and is the son of Lyman Wheeler, who was born in Westmoreland, N. H., in which State Aaron Wheeler, the grandfather of our subject, died.

Lyman Wheeler removed to New York State when a young man, and was married in Hoosic, soon after which event he went to Chautauqua County, and located in Portland Township, where he was engaged in cultivating the soil until 1842. Mr. Wheeler then became a resident of Cattaraugus County, and later came to Illinois in company with his wife, four children and his brother Adam and family. The brothers each possessed a team of horses and wagon, in which they made the journey West, and in Michigan traded the horses for two yoke of oxen and bought a third pair.

On locating in this State, Mr. Wheeler went to Roscoe, Winnebago County, and there operated a sawmill and farm for one year and at the end of that time came to Belvidere. He resided in the village for one and one-half years, then, entering a tract of land in Spring Township, erected a frame house and at once commenced the work of improving his purchase. He resided there for seven years, when he moved to the place which our subject now occupies and where his death occurred, November 29, 1872.

Sabra Wright, our subject's mother, was the daughter of Phineas and Asenath (Burnham) Wright and was born in Chester, Vt. She reared a family of four children and departed this life on the 31st of May, 1887. The sisters of our subject were Sarah, who died April 17, 1891; Susan S. and Calista A. He of whom we write was the only son of his parents and was nine years of age when he accompanied them on their removal to Illinois. He attended the pioneer schools of Belvidere, which were conducted on the subscription plan. He commenced when very young to assist his father in carrying on the farm and resided at home until the decease of his parents.

In 1862, Mr. Wheeler and Miss Helen M. Foster, who was born in Warsaw, Wyoming County, N. Y., were united in marriage. She was the daughter of Silas and Fannie (Smith) Foster, her father dying in 1846, in New York, which was his native State. The grandfather of Mrs. Wheeler, Luther Foster, was born in Southampton, L. L. in 1770, and, removing from there to Montague, N. J., resided for a time, and in 1823 became a resident of Warsaw, N. Y., where his decease occurred. The maiden name of his wife was Ruth Hedges. She was also a native of Southampton, who departed this life in 1860, at the advanced age of ninety-four years.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler have three children living: Arthur F., Charles O. and Hettie Grace. George B. died in infaney and Robie B. when thirteen years of age. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Phineas Wright, was born in Hinsdale, N. H., January 1, 1779, and in early life moved to Chester, Vt., and from there to Hoosic, Rensselaer County, N. Y., where he was engaged in the manufacture of slate roofing. He later removed to a farm in Sand Lake, where he died when ninetyone years old. He had been twice married, and was the father of twenty-six children, all of whom were living, with the exception of three, at the time of his death.

IDEON HOLLEM, of the firm of Hollem Bros., grocerymen, whose business quarters are located at No. 501 East State Street, with a branch store at the corner of Seventh Street and Fourteenth Avenue, is an energetic business man and abundantly worthy of the large measure of success achieved. This business was first started under the firm name of Hollem Bros. & Co., but later, in 1888, it became known as Hollem Bros., and this has since continued to be its title. The individual members of this firm are Albert and Gideon Hollem, and a younger brother, Elmer, manages the Fourteenth Avenue store, which was started in 1892. He is a bright, capable young fellow and full of push and energy. Hollem Bros. have been at their present location since 1883. They have by their fair and honest dealing built up an extensive trade. They carry on their affairs on the soundest business principles, and their reeord lends to these pages and Rockford credit and standing.

When eighteen years of age, Gideon Hollem began clerking for the Globe Tea Company, and four years later became a partner. He was born in Rockford, on the 1st of August, 1860, and he was carefully reared by good parents, and educated in the city schools. He was the third in order of birth of five children, three sons and two daughters, born to his parents, Andrew and Gustava Hollem. (For further particulars of parents see sketch of Albert Hollem.)

Gideon Hollem was married, in Rockford, to Miss Lizzie Flannery, who was born, reared and educated in this city, and who is of Irish parentage. Her father, Martin Flannery, died in Rockford when but little past middle age, and left his widow with a comfortable competence. The latter is now residing at No. 502 South Fourth Street, and is well along in years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollem have a pleasant and comfortable home at No. 109 Longwood Street and this is further brightened by their little son Edward. They are classed among the best citizens of the city, and are interested in all movements that have for their object the development and prosperity of their native town.

RED L. MILLER, a prosperous and enterprising young farmer, residing on section 18, Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, is the only son of John and Lucy A. (Merithew) Miller. His father was a native of New Jersey and was of German descent. When a young man he removed with his parents to Mt. Morris, Livingston County, N. Y. In the family were four sons and four daughters, all of whom grew to mature years. One daughter, Catherine, who married Samuel Crowley, died in Tuscarora, N. Y., in 1881, aged sixty-four years.

John Miller died where his son now resides, October 9, 1886, and was sixty four years of age. In Livingston County, February 16, 1850, he married, and then removed West to Janesville, Wis. Two years later he came to Illinois, locating upon a farm now occupied by our subject. He purchased one hundred and five acres of land from the Government, and in connection with farming followed his trade of earpentering. He worked very hard and his arduous labors at length brought him a competency. He started with nothing, but at his death left to his son four hundred acres of valuable land, all in one body, besides other property. He and his wife were both members of the Methodist Church of New Milford and did all in their power for its upbuilding and advancement. In politics, Mr. Miller was a Republican.

The subject of this sketch was reared to manhood under the parental roof, spending his boyhood days in the usual manner of farmer lads. On the 1st of August, 1881, he led to the marriage altar Miss Jennie Bartholomew, daughter of Charles B. and Hester (Weaver) Bartholomew. Her parents were natives of England and on emigrating to America about 1850, settled near Milwaukee, Wis., whence they afterward came to Rockford, and still later they became residents of Mason City, Iowa. They had a large family, but three sons and a daughter are now deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller have had three children: Daisy died January 18, 1884, at the age of sixteen months. Edna was born December 4, 1883, and Jesse on the 24th of February, 1889. The family reside at their pleasant home, a commodious and elegant residence situated in the midst of beautiful grounds. Mr. Miller has sold all of his farm, with the exception of this and one hundred acres of timber land. He raises about fifty hogs a year, but gives most of his time to the operation of his portable engine. Though reared to agricultural pursuits, his taste runs to machinery and he takes great pleasure in using the power of steam for threshing, plowing, etc. He has proved how extremely useful his machine is in breaking among the grub oaks, in cutting large roots and in turning over stumps. When his engine is not used in this way, he utilizes it for elevating ice, for threshing, or in helping some manufacturer's broken engine. He is a practical mechanic and in the business which he now follows is meeting with excellent success. Other than devoting his attention to this line of work, he is living retired, for he possesses a competence amply sufficient for all his wants. He and his wife are held in high esteem and rank high in social circles.

ALPH ROBERTS, editor and proprietor of the Beividere Standard, has published this paper ionger, probably, than any other editor in the State of Illinois. He is a prominent and influential citizen of this community and well deserves representation in this volume. He was born in East Hartford, Conn., December 15, 1822, and belongs to the good old Revolutionary stock. His grandfather, William Roberts, served in the Revolutionary War and was captured by the British, but made his escape from the old prison ship in New York harbor and swam ashore. He was a cooper by trade, and spent his last years in East Hartford. He married Abigail Stanley, of Coventry, Conn., who after her husband's death received a pension. She died at the advanced age of ninety-seven.

Isaac Roberts, father of our subject, was born in East Hartford, and learned the trade of a hatter. For some years he was foreman in the factory of Hoadley & Chaiker, of Hartford, after which he began business for himself in East Hartford as a partner of Hubbard Hills, the connection continuing for some time. He married Anna Ensign, daughter of Solomon Ensign, and both died at their home in East Hartford.

Our subject acquired his education in the schools of his native town, and, at the age of sixteen, started out in life for himself. He commenced to learn the printer's trade in the office of the Congregationalist, in Hartford, and after a short time went to New York City, where he was employed in a book and job printing office until 1843. In that year he determined to try his fortune in the West, and emigrated to Chicago, where he secured employment with the firm of Ellis & Fergus, book and job printers, but remained with them only a few months, when he went to St. Louis, and then to the American Bottoms, on the Illinois side of the Mississippi River, where he engaged in clerking for a time. His next place of residence was in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he was employed in a stereotype foundry until the spring of 1845, when be returned to his old home in Connecticut, and was again employed at his trade in that place until 1850. On again coming West, he located in Woodstock, Ill., in 1850, where, in company with F. D. Austin, he established the Woodstock Democrat, and continued its publication for a year, when he sold out to his partner and came to Belvidere. Here he established the Belyidere Standard in 1851. and has conducted the paper as sole proprietor continuously since.

After locating here, in September, 1856, Mr. Roberts was united in marriage with Phobe L. Cowderey, who was born in Troy, N, Y., and is a daughter of Asa and Laura Cowderey. They have had three children: Anna, wife of William Sower, now deceased; Bertha E., now the wife of H. W. Ames, a resident of Chicago; and Jessie, at home.

In early life, Mr. Roberts was a Democrat, but was an opponent of slavery, and when the Republican party sprang into existence to prevent its further extension, he was one of the first to espouse its cause and was a delegate to the first Illinois State Convention of that party. The fact that he has so long published the Belvidere Standard is sufficient evidence of its success. He is a bright and interesting writer and his paper is well deserving of the liberal patronage which it receives.

LBERT HOLLEM, groceryman, Rockford, Ill. "The food we cat" is a vitally important question, and one which concerns the health and happiness of every man, woman and child. It is but natural to suppose that the best groceries are to be found in those establishments which transact the largest business. One of the finest appointed grocery stores in Rockford is that of Hollem Bros., located at No. 501 East State Street. The business has attained a wonderful degree of success under its present management, and the stock embraces everything in the line of fancy groceries, provisions, teas, coffees, etc., in fact, everything that is found in a first-class house. This business was formerly under the firm title of Hollem Bros. & Co., known as the Globe Tea Company, and was started in 1883. In 1888, it took its present title.

Our subject is the senior, and his brother the junior, member of the firm, and both are active young men, conducting their business on the soundest principles and carrying on an institution worthy of being called representative. Both were born, reared and educated in Rockford, where they are well and favorably known, and Albert clerked in this city for about eight years previous to starting in business for himself. These young men are interested in various local enterprises, are public-spirited, and are respected in social and commercial circles.

Our subject's father, Andrew Hollem, was a native of Sweden, but came to the United States and Rockford in 1854. Since then, he has been prominently connected with the growth and prosperity of the city, and has a fine home at No. 606 Elm Street. He is well thought of in the city and is now quite well along in years. He was married in Kane County, Ill., to Miss Gustava Anderson, who was also a native of Sweden, and came to this country when a young woman. Both parents are much respected and have a wide circle of friends. Their family consisted of five children, three sons and two daughters: Paulina, wife of T. F. Strommerts, a butcher running a meat-market in Rockford; Albert, our subject; Gideon married Miss Elizabeth Flannery, and is a partner with Albert; Julia, wife of Adolph Ekstein, a druggist at Los Angeles, Cal.; and Elmer, who resides with his parents and is running a branch store for his brothers at the corner of Seventh Street and Fourteenth Avenue.

Albert Hollem was married in Rockford to Miss Amanda Huldt, a native of Sweden, who came to America when a young girl, and who was reared and educated in this city. Her father, Charles M. Huldt, was a well-known and very skillful machinist and mechanic of the Utter Manufacturing Company. To Mr. and Mrs. Hollem have been born one daughter, Hazel C. They are prominent young people of the county and have a great many friends. Mr. Hollem is a member of Rockford Łodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M., and he and his father and brothers are stanch Republicans.

OSEPH BARNINGHAM was born in Marsden, Yorkshire, England, April 27th, 1816, and served as an apprentice to the trade of a machinist in his native country. Poor and without friends, he came alone to America in 1842, and after being employed in machine shops in different places, finally secured a position as an engineer on the New York & Eric Railroad. Later, coming West, he became engineer on the Chicago & Galena Railroad, now the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, and was soon given the position of Master Mechanic of the shops at Freeport, where he remained fourteen years.

Afterward Mr. Barningham went to Cincinnati,

Ohio, and entered the employ of the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad and was in its shops at Cochran, Ind. At one time he was also engaged in manufacturing street cars in Chicago, in company with John Ebbert, and, in connection with him, manufactured the first dummy engine used on the street railway in Chicago, which was employed in carrying passengers to and from the Stock Yards.

In 1847, Mr. Barningham married Viletta A. Brewer at Buffalo, N.Y. She was born in Milford, Otsego County, N.Y., August 31, 1825. In 1849, accompanied by his wife, he came to Illinois and located in Durand Township, Winnebago County, Eight children were born to them, six of whom, Frances, Addison, Delos, J. D., Angerona and Gager are now living. His wife died October 5, 1882, and he survived her ten years, dying March 2, 1892. He was prominent in the development of the resources of the country and was one of its foremost citizens until his death.

DDISON J. BARNINGHAM, the eldest son of Joseph Barningham, was born March 3, 1850, in Durand Township, Winnebago County, where he now owns and occupies a fine farm on section 22. He was reared to farming pursuits. In 1876, he purchased eighty acres of his present farm, and three years later added forty acres, which now includes as fine land as can be found in Durand Township.

In 1879, Mr. Barningham was married to Miss Hattie S., daughter of Wilson H. and Eliza Crandall, whose sketch is published on another page of this work. Mrs. Barningham died at her home in 1881. November 21, 1885, Mr. Barningham was united in marriage with Mattie, daughter of Richard and Matilda (Tombs) Sackett. She was born in Chicago, July 2, 1864. They have one son, Dewitt B., who was born November 26, 1886. In his political relations, our subject votes for the man instead of the party.

Mr. Barningham was elected President of the Durand Mutual Fire Insurance Company in 1891. He is also a member of Durand Lodge No. 302.

led Stackhus

F. & A. M., and is serving his ninth term as Secretary of that order. His possessions are the result of his industry and good judgment. In his farming pursuits he is conducting his affairs in the most intelligent and profitable manner. He occupies an honored position in the business and social circles of the community.

HARLES A. STOCKHUS. The gentleman whose portrait appears on the opposite page has been a stockholder and Director of the Skandia Plow Company since its organization and is also Superintendent of the smithing department. He was born in Smoland, Sweden, and is a son of Gustaf and Sarah (Mangson) Stockhus, the former born in August, 1809, and the latter in 1811. Both are yet living and have been life-long members of the Lutheran Church. By trade the father is a mechanic and his business career has been a successful one. The eldest daughter of the family, Mrs. Anna C. Elm, is yet living in Sweden. A brother, J. P., was the first to cross the Atlantic, having come to this country in 1868. He is now married and with his family resides on a farm in McPherson County, Kan. Another brother, John G., now resides on Eighth Street in Rockford and is a mechanic in the employ of the Skandia Plow Company.

Charles Stockhus spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native Province and while still young served a five years' apprenticeship to the blacksmith's trade. With the hope of bettering his financial condition in America, he bade goodbye to home and friends and in the spring of 1869 sailed for the New World. He landed at Quebec, Canada, and thence came to Rockford, where he joined his brother, J. P. He has since been recognized as one of the energetic and enterprising Swedish citizens of the county. He was instrumental in organizing the Skandia Plow Company, one of the leading industries of the city. He is himself a practical and skilled workman and now has under his charge forty employes. Much of the success of the business is due to his excellent management and he has made it one of the paying institutions of the city. Mr. Stockhus has been connected with the Union Grocery Company of Rockford since coming to the city and has aided in the promotion of other enterprises calculated to promote the general welfare. His own industry and perseverance have won him success, and in addition to his other business he is the owner of some improved real estate in Rockford, including his comfortable home at No. 608 South Third Street.

At Rockford, Mr. Stockhus was joined in wedlock with Miss Christina Pherson, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, July 21, 1850. She spent the days of her maidenhood in her native land, and in 1869 eame alone to this country, settling in Rockford, where she joined her brother, James P. Talbot, who had located here a year previous and is now a farmer of McPherson County, Kan. Her father, Per Bengston, was born in 1806, followed farming throughout his entire life and died in Smoland, Sweden, in 1878. ####

ENJAMIN S. MORSE has for seventeen years engaged in the livery business in Rockford. His residence in the county dates from 1849, when, a young man of seventeen years, he came with his parents to this county. His father, William Morse, was a native of Grimsby, Ontario, Canada, born March 2, 1806. He learned the trade of a mechanic and carpenter and became a skilled and successful workman. In Palermo, Canada, in 1830, he married Miss Lavina Smith, the eldest of three children born to Benjamin Smith, an early settler in the Province of Ontario. In the midst of the forest, he hewed out a farm and became a successful agriculturist, owning two hundred acres of line land. His death there occurred in 1850, at an advanced age. His wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Shook, had died at the advanced age of ninety-seven years. They were both members of the Methodist Church and were devoted Christian people.

William Morse and his wife continued to reside in the Province of Ontario, for some years, where he followed his trade and also engaged in the drygoods business. He made considerable money, but when the Canadian Rebellion broke out, he lost all and removed to New York, settling near Lockport. In 1840, he returned to Canada, and in 1849 came with his family to Illinois, making the journey by team and camping out along the wayside at night. In this county, he made a good farm but afterward lost it through misplaced confidence. Later, he went to California with teams, returning to Rockford after seven years. The mother of our subject died August 21, 1870, after which Mr. Morse wedded Mrs. Clarissa Woodworth, nee Hills, who was born in Melbourne, Lower Canada, September 9, 1805, and now with her husband resides with our subject. William Morse is past his eighty-sixth year but is still well preserved for one of his age. For many years he has been a member of the Baptist Church. In politics, he formerly supported the Republican party, but now votes with the Prohibition party.

Benjamin Morse was born in Palermo, in 1834, and there resided until with his parents he came to Illinois. He has borne many of the hardships and experiences of pioneer life and is a well-known citizen of this community. In Guilford, he married Miss Caroline Woodworth, who was born in the Province of Ontario, September 13, 1839, and was brought by her parents to this county in July, 1840, the family settling in Guilford Township, on a new farm, where she was reared. Her father, Gershon Woodworth, also a native of Canada, followed farming in Guilford Township until his death in 1872, since which time his widow has become the wife of William Morse, as before stated.

Unto our subject and his wife were born three children: Charles P., a graduate of the city schools, now living on Avon Street, in Rockford, is a messenger for the Adams Express Company. He wedded Miss Maggie Mc Pherson. Fred R. holds a position as agent for the Adams Express Company in Kirkland, Ill., and John II. is still attending school. The parents attend the Christian Church, and the father and sons are Republicans in political sentiment.

As before stated, Mr. Morse has long engaged in the livery business in Rockford and for fourteen years carried on two stables. His courteous manner and attention to the wants of his customers has won him a liberal patronage and thereby he has secured a good income. He also owns a fine farm of two hundred and nineteen acres in Guilford Township, well improved and highly cultivated. He has a wide acquaintance throughout this community and is highly esteemed by his many friends.

EV1 LANDERS, who is engaged in general (a) farming on section 32. Harlem Township, Winnebago County, is a native of the Empire State. He was born in Somerset, Niagara County, April 16, 1819, and is descended from an old New England family. His grandfather, Aquilla Landers, was born in Shoreham, Vt., whence he removed to Orleans County, N. Y., where he spent his last year engaged in farming. Benjamin Landers, the father of Levi, was also born in Shoreham, where he was reared and married, Miss Cynthia Intin becoming his wife. They removed to New York and were among the early settlers of Niagara County. Mr. Landers there purchased eighty acres of land in the town of Somerset, and upon it built the log cabin in which our subject was born. There were then no railroads in the county, no convenient markets, and no mills or post-offices nearer than Rochester, fifty miles away. people lived mostly off the products of their farms and the wild game and fish which could be obtained in abundance. Mr. Landers cleared his land and made it his home for some years, after which he sold out and bought a tract of timber land in the same township, where he improved a farm and made his home until called to his final rest. His wife died also on the old homestead about 1825.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who has ever been identified with agricultural pursuits. Almost as soon as he could reach the plow handles, he began assisting his father in the farm work and remained at home until after the latter's death. As a companion and helpmate on life's journey, he chose Mrs. Anna (Wood) Landers, their union being celebrated January 22, 1844. The lady was born in New York, January 20, 1825. Her father, Samuel D. Wood, was a native of Connecticut, whence he removed to the Empire State when a young man. He there engaged in farming and was married in the town of Henrietta to Eunice Herrick, a native of New York, and a daughter of Luther and Mary (Johnson) Herrick. He bought a farm a few miles from Rochester, where he resided some years, and then took up his residence in the town of Somerset, Niagara County, where he made his home until about 1847. In that year, he came Westward to Winnebago County, Ill., and bought a tract of land which is now included in the village of Winnebago. After a time, he removed to Shirland Township, where he bought a farm and made his home for a few years, after which he resided with Mrs. Landers until his death, about 1862. His wife long survived him, passing away in 1887. Their daughter was first married at the age of fifteen, when she became the wife of Caleb Landers, a brother of our subject. His death occurred in January, 1841.

It was in 1846 that our subject, accompanied by his wife and two children, came to Illinois, making the journey by way of the Lakes. He was then not only empty-handed, but was $50 in debt, so we see that his entire possessions have been made since that time. For three years, he rented land in Guilford Township, and then bought forty acres of timber land in Shirland Township, upon which a frame house had been built. Two years afterward, he sold the place and removed to Green County, Wis., but lived there for only two years, when he returned to Shirland Township and bought one hundred and twenty-seven acres of land near his former home. He there resided until 1867, since which time he has been living on his farm in Harlem Township. His life has been well and worthily spent, and, though a quiet and unassuming man, he has gained the high regard of those with whom he has come in contact.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Landers were born three children: Roderick, the only son; Eunice, now the wife of William Rogers, of Rockford; and Eliza, wife of Oliver Taylor, of Harlem Township.

RS. ISABELL COY has for the long period of forty-six years been a resident of Winnebago County, and well deserves representation in this volume. She now " resides on section 15, Guilford Township. She was born in Buffalo Township, Union County, Pa., and is descended from an old family of that State. The great-grandfather of Mrs. Coy, Mr. Royer, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Her grandparents, John Paul and Eva (Royer) Ziebach, were natives of the Keystone State, and there the father followed teaching throughout his entire life. The father of Mrs. Cov., Jacob Ziebach, was born in Berks County, Pa., and on attaining his majority wedded Anna Pollock, who was born in Chester County, that State, and was a daughter of John and Isabella (Rolance) Pollock, also natives of Pennsylvania, where they spent their entire lives. The young couple began their domestic life upon a farm in Buffalo Township, Union County, where they continued to reside until called to the home beyond. Their family numbered eleven children.

Mrs. Coy spent the days of her girlhood in her native county and remained with her parents until 1846, when, with her married sister and her husband, she started from Pennsylvania to Illinois, on the last day of August. The entire journey was made in a spring wagon, and after four weeks of travel they reached Winnebago County, which was then situated on the frontier. On the 11th of April, 1847, Isabell gave her hand in marriage to William Coy, a native of England, born in Lincolnshire, and a son of Thomas and Mary Coy, who were also natives of England, and there spent their entire lives. Mr. Coy came to America in 1844, and at once made his way to Rockford, soon afterward purchasing the farm on which the family now reside. The young couple there located immediately after their marriage. It was a tract of wild land but he transformed it into rich and fertile fields, and added greatly to its beauty and value by erecting good buildings, such as are found on a model farm, and planting fruit and ornamental trees.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Coy was born a family of four children, who were reared to habits of industry and are now occupying useful and responsible positions in society. The eldest, Robert, is a graduate of the Chicago Medical College and is now engaged in the practice of his profession in Rockford; Anna is an artist and resides in the same city; William manages the home farm for his mother; and Emma is successfully engaged in teaching in Rockford. This family ranks high in social circles and its members are well deserving the warm regard in which they are held. William Coy died December 14, 1885.

OHN J. MERRILL. Perhaps there is no resident of the county more generally admired, or who has a larger circle of friends, than the subject of this sketch, who has won the regard of all, not only on account of his genial, pleasant disposition, but for his uprightness and unquestioned honesty. A native of New York State, he was born in Herkimer County on the 15th of May, 1833, and is a brother of Thomas S. Merrill (see sketch for family history).

The happy domestic life of our subject began on the 1st of January, 1856, by his marriage to Miss Sarah D. Beebe, also a native of the Empire State, born in Tioga County, in the town of Apalachin, on the 30th of July, 1836. Her parents, David and Nancy (Heaton) Beebe, were natives of Broome County, N. Y., where they resided for many years. Subsequently, however, they moved to Iowa and there passed the closing seenes of their lives, the father dying at the age of eighty-two, and the mother when in her eighty-first year. David Beebe was the son of Joel and Mary Beebe, who were also natives of Broome County, N. Y., and came with his parents to Boone County, Ill., in the spring of 1837. He built the third house in the town of Belvidere and resided there for some time. Joel Beebe died in Minnesota when seventy years of age and his wife died in Iowa at the advanced age of ninety-three. Mrs. Merrill was one of six children, four now living, and all farmers.

To Mr. and Mrs. Merrill were born four children, but three are deceased. The one now living is Mary D., who was born in Bremer County, Iowa, on the 5th of September, 1856, and who married F. A. Winne. She is the mother of three children and she and her husband reside in Spring Township, this county.

Our subject was reared on the farm and remained under the parental roof until twenty-three years of age, when he went to Bremer County, lowa. There he purchased forty acres of land and there resided until 1861, when he enlisted in the army. He volunteered in Company B, Ninetyfifth Illinois Infantry, and served three years, two years of the time as clerk in the Commissary Department. He was mustered out in the fall of 1865 and returned to his home, where he clerked for some time. Later, he and his wife went to Mitchellville, lowa, and his wife was matron of the seminary at that place for three years and he was janitor for some time. He then came to this county, and two years later built a store at Herbert, the first one in that place, and was the Postmaster there four years under Grover Cleveland. He then sold out and moved to Belvidere where he has lived retired ever since. He lost his health in the war and has never been very strong or well since.

Mr. Merrill is a Republican in politics and his first Presidential vote was for James Buchanan. Later he voted for S. A. Douglas, then for U. S. Grant, and has voted with the Republicans ever since. He has held a number of local offices in this county, also held office while a resident of Bremer County, Iowa, and is one of the representative men of this section. Socially, he is a Royal Arch Mason, Eastern Star Lodge No. 60, and a member of the Chapter. He is also a member of Hurlburt Post No. 464, G. A. R., and has been Sergeant for two or three years. Mrs. Merrill is associated in her church relations with the Universalist denomination. She is a member of the Ladies' Aid Society, No. 9, and was Treasurer of the same for some time. Mr. Merrill has in his possession a number of coat buttons on which are engraved the letters C. A. These, Mr. Merrill says, his grandfather Smith had on his coat during the Revolutionary War and he has been offered $20 apiece for them.

HALOR S. KILBURN. For about forty-seven years, this gentleman was a worthy resident of Winnebago County. He was a man who possessed an original and thoughtful mind, whose advanced ideas and progressive principles resulted in his own good and the good of those around him. He was born in Berkshire County, Mass., on the 10th of June, 1813, and his parents, Shalor and Betsy E. (Brown) Kilburn, were natives also of the Old Bay State. The father, who was a tanner and shoemaker by trade, passed his life in his native State, and Connecticut, and died in the latter State when in the prime of life.

Our subject's mother afterward married a Mr. Hewitt, and removed to New York State, where her husband died. She then made her home with her son Shalor S., in Harlem Township, this county, until her death, when seventy-seven years of age. She was an exemplary member of the Methodist Church and an excellent woman. Shalor S. Kilburn was one of five children born to his parents. In boyhood, he went to Oneida County, N. Y., and remained there until twenty-five years of age.

There Mr. Kilburn was married to Miss Mary Bartholomew, a native of New Haven County, Conn., born December 29, 1818. She was but six months old when her parents, Eben G. and Anna (Simons) Bartholomew, settled in Oneida County, N. Y. They resided in that county for a number of years and then returned to Connecticut to care for Mr. Bartholomew's father, Osee Bartholomew, who died at an advanced age. Six months later, his son Eben followed him to the grave. He was a well-informed man and had spent his early life as a teacher. The widow returned to Oneida County, N. Y., and her second marriage was to David Hulbert, with whom she came to Illinois in 1847. They settled in Harlem Township, Winnebago County, and there remained until called hence, Mr. Hulbert dying when about seventy-five, and Mrs. Hulbert when seventy-four years of age. Both were original charter members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Harlem Township.

. Mrs. Kilburn was one of a small family of children born to her parents and was fourteen years of age when her father died. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and takes a deep interest in all religious work. Mr. Kilburn, accompanied by his family, came to Harlem Township, Winnebago County, in 1815, when the country was comparatively new. He purchased eighty acres of land here, hauling lumber from Chicago with ox-teams to build a house, and followed farming pursuits until his death. He was also a commercial traveler and for many years was on the road for the firm of Savage & Love, of Beloit, Wis. He was also with John P. Manny and N. C. Thompson, of Roekford.

The genial disposition and upright character for which Mr. Kilburn was known, drew around him a large circle of friends, and his place in business and social circles was found hard to fill. His death occurred on the 15th of January, 1874, when seventy-one years of age. He was a Methodist in his religious belief, and, in polities, was a strong supporter of the Republican party. He was one of those solid, substantial citizens who honor the community in which their lot is east. Mr. and Mrs. Kilburn became the parents of four children: Charles O., who died when eleven years of age: Anna, who became the wife of Rodger Miller, a farmer; Sarah, who married Herbert R. Parker, a retired farmer, and Mary, the wife of James Roney, who is in the express business at Rockford. Mrs. Kilburn has some old family relics which she values very highly. Now in the twilight of her useful life, she is surrounded by the comforts which she aided her husband in accumulating, and has the love of those who have had the privilege of associating with her.

In this connection will be found a portrait of the late Mr. Kilburn.

HARLES P. BRADY. This pioneer of Winnebago County, on coming hither in 1836, found the country new and the land unimproved, and has witnessed the wonderful transformation which the passing years have brought. His first purchase of land was made from the Government, and consisted of a tract in Burritt Township, on which not a furrow had been turned. Returning to Pennsylvania, be there resided until 1840, and in July of that year once more came West, and commenced active operations as a tiller of the soil.

Success crowned the arduous exertions of Mr. Brady, and he improved considerable valuable property, which he still owns. He may justly be termed a self-made man, as what he has and what he is may be attributed to his industry and judicious management. Prior to coming to Illinois in 1836, he had made his home for a time in New York State, and in journeying Westward had for a traveling companion one James Hoffman. The two young men came via the river and canal to Buffalo, N. Y., thence by boat on Lake Erie to Detroit, and from there on foot over the country to Rockford, working their way and carrying good guns, with which they killed enough game to subsist upon.

Mr. Brady explains as his reason for coming to Rockford on foot, that there was no other way of reaching the place except by stage, and the one who came in the latter vehicle had to walk and carry a rail, while the one who walked had no rail to carry, hence his decision to walk. When he returned East in 1837, he went down the Mississippi in a tow-boat, thence up the Ohio to Pittsburg, and from there across to Philadelphia. The return trip in 1810 was made in a similar way. The usual pioneer experiences fell to the lot of Mr. Brady, who was obliged to go to Chicago, the nearest market, while Dixon was the nearest postoffice. Occasionally he would take pork and grain to the Wisconsin pineries, trade them for lumber, which he would raft down the rivers and sell in order to purchase Government land.

Born in Bucks County, Pa., December 11, 1814, our subject is the only son of Benjamin Brady, who died when his son was only six years old. The mother of our subject was Miss Betsy Pettett, who died when her son was only three months Thus early orphaned, Charles P. was reared by an uncle, and while quite young gained a practical knowledge of farming. He was married in Rockford to Miss Mercy L. Huntsman, the eeremony being performed by the late Rev. John Mrs. Brady was born in Ohio, of which Morrell. State her parents were early settlers, later removing to Illinois and settling in Rockford. Here the father, George Huntsman, died when quite old; her mother died in Indiana.

Mrs. Brady was born in July, 1815, and died in Rockford in 1883, mourned by all who knew her. She was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a devoted worker in the canse of temperance. She was the mother of four children, one of whom, Roy, is deceased. Annjenett, widow of James Atkinson, resides in Burritt, this county; Philura I. is the wife of Edgar A. Van Wie, Secretary, Treasurer and manager of the Rockford Electric Company. Mr. and Mrs. Van Wie reside at No. 701 North Court Street, and are the parents of three children. Henry H. married Georgia Terrell, and resides in Chicago. Religiously, Mr. Brady is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in his political affiliations was formerly a Republican, but is now a Prohibitionist.

OHN PEHRSON has filled the position of Superintendent of the wood department in the Skandia Plow Company since its organization, except four years when he was salesman on the road, and from almost the first he has been a stockholder and Director in that enterprise. This company is thoroughly typical, not alone of the comprehensive growth and increasing importance of Rockford, but its career is a source of public pride, delineating, as it does, the general business enterprise and sagacity of some of the leading citizens.

Our subject, who is by trade a wood-worker and pattern-maker, and upon whose shoulders the care and charge of the wood department immediately rests, has been a resident of Rockford since 1865, and during that time he been industrious and frugal, thus accumulating a handsome competence. He was one of the first stockholders of the Union Furniture Factory and he was formerly a stockholder of the Excelsior Furniture Factory, in which he was Superintendent for about three years. For four years, he was on the road as salesman for the Skandia Plow Company and met with much success in that capacity.

Mr. Pehrson came to Rockford from his native country, Sweden, his birth occurring in Skania Province, March 1, 1840, and this city has been his home up to the present. He is a descendant of worthy Swedish ancestors and inherits all those characteristics of energy and perseverance usual to this class of people. After learning his trade in his native country, he took passage for America, and after a reasonable length of time on the briny deep, landed in the Empire City, where he remained but a short time. From there, he went to Michigan, but a few weeks later he came on to Rockford, where he has been actively engaged in business and is now one of the foremost, substantial citizens. Since his residence in this country, he has been joined by two sisters: Anna, wife of Andrew Nelson, a farmer of Marengo, Iowa, and Hannah, wife of Oscar Ackeson, a boot and shoe merchant, who is quartered in the Exchange Bank Building, on Seventh Street, Rockford.

The parents of Mr. Pehrson never came to the United States but have passed their entire lives in that grand old country, Sweden, whose sons and daughters are among the most thrifty and enterprising people of the world. The father, Peter Pehrson, was a butcher and meat dealer, and a man whose honesty and uprightness were proverbial. He died when sixty-seven years of age. The mother, who is still living and closely verging on eighty-four years, finds a comfortable home with her son Andrew, at Malmo, Sweden. A life-long member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, this venerable old lady is well known in her section and is highly respected.

John Pehrson was first married, in Rockford, to Miss Sophia Ekbock, who is also of Swedish nativity, born in Smoland Province. She remained in her native country until twenty-two years of age, and then braved Neptune's tender mercies and came to America and Rockford. She was identified with the First Lutheran Church and was a lady possessed of many virtues of mind and heart. One child, Frederick William, was born to this union, and he is now at home.

Mr. Pehrson's second marriage was to Miss Anna Bergandal, a native of Kalmar Lan, Sweden, born March 18, 1862, but who was grown when she came to the United States. She has a brother, Axel, and a sister, Alma, both living in Chicago and single. Mr. Pehrson is a firm believer in the advantages of the platform held by the Republican party, and casts his vote most unreservedly with that party. He and Mrs. Pehrson are members of the First Lutheran Church.

OHNSTON WELDON MONTEITH, one of the prominent business men of Rockford, is at present successfully engaged in contracting and building. His birth occurring in 1848 in far-away Glasgow, Scotland, he is the son of Thomas and Eliza (Weldon) Monteith, both of whom were natives of that country, the male members on both sides of the house for many generations back being carpenters and builders. The father of our subject followed that trade in his native land; since coming to America in 1882, he has made his home with our subject; the mother died in Scotland.

The following are the names of the seven children comprising the parental household: James, Martha, Johnston, Mary, Sallie, Thomas, and Lizzie, all of whom, with the exception of our subject, make their home in Philadelphia. Johnston received a good education in the parish schools of Scotland and came to the New World with an elder brother, when a lad of thirteen years. Locating in Philadelphia, and being ambitious to learn the English language, he became a student in the log school of that place and is to-day an intelligent and well-read man. A natural mechanic, Mr. Monteith soon began to work at the trade of a carpenter with his brother, which business they followed in Philadelphia until 1881, when they came to Bradford, Ill., and one year later to Rockford, since which time our subject has been identified with the business interests of this city.

The ceremony which united our subject in marriage with Miss Genevieve Menah was performed December 22, 1871. Mrs. Monteith was a native of the Quaker City and was a daughter of Alexander Menah, also a native of Scotland, who emigrated to America soon after his marriage and engaged in the mercantile business in the abovenamed city, where he is still one of the prominent dry-goods merchants. His wife, the mother of Mrs. Monteith, was Rebecca McClellan; her birth also occurred in Scotland and the date of her decease was December 11, 1891. She was the mother of seven children, viz: Maggie, Nellie, Letitia, Genevieve, Lucy, Mary and Willie. Lucy and Maggie are deceased. The two children born to Mr. and Mrs. Monteith are Lillian W. and J. Alexander.

RANCIS H. CLARK, a successful and skillful mechanic residing at No. 100 East Street, where he has a pleasant and comfortable home, has been a resident of Rockford since 1883. He was a native of Ontario, Canada, where his birth occurred November 23, 1831, and his parents, Francis and Cornelia (Ross) Clark, were natives, respectively, of New York and Connecticut. The paternal grandfather, Francis Clark, Sr., was a native of the Emerald Isle but came to America when a young man and settled in New England.

During the Revolutionary War Francis Clark, Sr., served in defense of his adopted country, and subsequently married a New England lass, a Miss Hamilton, with whom he settled in Franklin County, N. Y. They were among the pioneer settlers of that county and Mr. Clark followed agricultural pursuits in a small way, his trade being that of a tanner and currier, at which he was unusually successful. Later he was a boot and shoe dealer. He and his wife died in the Empire State when well along in years, and both were members of the Episcopal Church.

Francis Clark, Jr., passed his boyhood days on a farm and in learning the lumber business, following the latter principally in Ontario, Canada, until 1835, when he came to New York State. He settled on a new farm in St. Lawrence County, and there he and his wife soon had a good home. He died there in 1861, when seventy-three years of age, and his wife followed him to the grave four years later, in 1865. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. Mrs. Clark was born in Danbury, Conn., in 1790, but was reared and educated in Canada. She was a cousin of P. T. Barnum, the showman. Mr. and Mrs. Clark were for years members of the Episcopal Church, but later in life she joined the Methodists. Of the seven children born to this worthy couple, six are now living and Francis II. Clark is the youngest. He was four years of age when his parents moved to New York State and he was a resident of that State until 1869, when he came to Illinois, settling in Poplar Grove, Boone County. While a resident of New York, he learned the trade of a millwright and pattern-maker. In 1864, he enlisted from St. Lawrence County, that State, in the Sixth New York Regiment, Company M, and served as a private until his discharge on the 25th of August, 1865.

Our subject was in a number of prominent engagements, and after the battle of Fisher Hill he was one of thirty-two who reported at roll-call. While in service he was sick for some time from exposure, and he was crippled while doing drill duty. After remaining in the hospital for some time, he was honorably discharged and returned to New York State. There he was married to Miss Sophronia Richardson, a native of St. Lawrence County and the daughter of Samuel Richardson, who lived and died in that county. The latter was seventy-four at the time of his death. He served in the War of 1812. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Johnson, died when eighty-five years of age. Mrs. Clark was reared and educated in her native county and taught school there six years before her marriage. This union resulted in the birth of three living children: Preston, an attorney, and proprietor of the Mineral Springs at Peoria, was married to Miss Julia Eaton, who was County Superintendent of Schools of Boone County, but is now deceased; Burton F., an engraver in the Rockford Silver Plate Company, is now at home; Etta S., at home and a musical graduate, is a teacher of vocal music and is now chorister in the Christian Union Church. Mr. Clark is a Republican in politics, and he is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mrs. Clark is a member of the Methodist Church.

RANK S. WHITMAN, M. D., a practicing physician of Belvidere, has the honor of being a native of this city. He was born September 27, 1849, and is descended from an old Whitman, was a native of Connecticut and became one of the early settlers of Fairfield, Vt. He was a hatter by trade, but engaged in farming in the Green Mountain State. He afterward purchased a farm in Portland, Chautauqua County, N. Y., where he made his home until 1840, removing thence to Boone County and locating in Belvidere, where he made his home until his death in 1851. He married Sarah Spencer, who died in Portland, N. Y.

Hiram Whitman, father of our subject, was born in Fairfield, Vt., December 12, 1806, and when a young man went to New York, purchasing a tract of land in Chautauqua County. There he engaged in farming until 1837, after which he spent two years upon his father's farm in Portland. On the 5th of October, 1830, he married Clarinda Hanchett, who was born in Herkimer, N. Y., December 19, 1808. She is a daughter of Zacheus and Lucy (Cottrell) Hanchett, the former a native of Suffolk, Conn., and the later of Washington, Mass., where they were married in 1793. They removed to Herkimer, N. Y., and after a tew years went to Chautauqua County, being numbered among its pioneer settlers. They purchased a tract of heavily timbered land and in the midst of the forest developed a farm, experiencing all the privations and hardships of frontier life. Mr. Hanchett there died in his ninety-sixth year.

In 1839, with his wife and one child, Mr. Whitman came to Illinois, making the entire journey overland with teams. After twenty days of travel, he arrived at Belvidere on the 25th of October, and after a few months made a claim in Belvidere Township. To the cultivation and improvement of his land, he devoted his time and attention until his death, which occurred on the 10th of May, 1855. His wife survives him and makes her home in Belvidere. She enjoys good health and her faculties are still unimpaired. She has a family of four children: Royal T., Emily M., Gilbert R. and Frank S.

No event of special importance occurred during the Doctor's youth. After acquiring his early education in the public schools of Belvidere, he became a student in the Chicago University and subsequently engaged in teaching one year, being Principal of the schools in Roscoe, Winnebago County. Wishing to make the practice of medicine his life work, he began studying with Dr. James K. Soule, of Belvidere, and attended lectures at Hahnemann Medical College of Chicago, from which he was graduated in the Class of February, 1872. The same year, he opened an office in Belvidere and has since successfully engaged in practice.

On the 20th of January, 1875, Dr. Whitman married Frank C. Pier, a native of Belvidere. This worthy couple rank high in social circles and are widely and favorably known throughout the community. The Doctor is a member of the Illinois State Medical Society and the American Institute of Homeopathy, the oldest national medical association in the United States. He also belongs to Belvidere Lodge No. 289, K. T. He is a member of Court Clair No. 183, I. O. of F., and of Garrison No. 27, K. G. He exercises his right of franchise in support of the Republican party, and has served as President of the School Board, member of the Common Council, was two terms Mayor of the city and for three terms was County Coroner. He is a member of the Congressional Committee of Boone County, is President of the Boone County Board of Pension Examiners, and is Vice-President of the People's Bank, of Belvidere. He was also an alternate delegate-at-large for the State of Illinois at the last National Republican Convention held at Minneapolis. The Doctor is now enjoying a liberal patronage, gained through his skill and ability, and he ranks deservedly high among his professional brethren.

Elsewhere in this volume will be noticed a lithographic portrait of Dr. Whitman.

APT. HENRY KNOWLES, who is now living a retired life at the corner of North and Winnebago Streets, was born in Orleans, Mass., July 20, 1834, and is a son of Elijah and Abigail (Freeman) Knowles. His father lived and died on a farm in Brewster, Mass., passing away at the age of eighty-one years. His wife died November 5, 1891, at the advanced age of eightyseven. She too was a native of the Bay State, and died in Brewster. Our subject comes of a long line of sca-faring men. His maternal uncle was a prominent master of vessels, and two of his brothers followed the sea. One of them, Elijah F., is now a retired shipmaster residing in Brewster, and the other brother, Albert C., was master of a vessel which was destroyed by a cyclone on the Indian Sea, and all on board were lost.

Capt. Knowles, whose name heads this sketch, was reared and educated in Brewster, Mass., and when fourteen years of age, went with a friend of the family, Capt. Crosby, to sea as a cabin boy, and thus became connected as a sailor in the cotton trade between this country and Europe. He rapidly won promotion, and on the Captain's death, which occurred on a voyage between New Orleans and Liverpool, Mr. Knowles, though only nineteen years of age at that time, took charge of the vessel. He continued in command of that vessel for some time, and later was master of the "Albatross," the "Massachusetts," the "Western Star" and the 'Belle Creole,' Of the two former he was master for only a few years. He was part owner, and was master of the "Western Star" for eight years, and was similarly connected with the "Belle Creole" for four years, or until 1870, when he left the sea and eame West. He has sailed over many of the most important seas, has visited Liverpool, Bombay, and all the ports of South America. He did business as a shipper of guano, and in 1869, with a load of that product on board, his vessel sprung a leak. The guano filled the pumps, which prevented them from being worked, and the ship sunk, but all on board were saved. The Captain was the last to leave the vessel, just as it sank in the waters of the tropies. He stood in great favor with his men, and he had many warm friends among the leading captains of Boston, including Benjamin Bangs and Elijah Williams.

Mr. Knowles was married in the Bay State to Miss Lizzie D. Collins, who was born in West Dennis, Mass., January 30, 1842, and a daughter of Capt. Seth and Anna (Knowles) Collins, both of whom are now deceased. Her father was a prominent business man of the Merchants' Service, and was master of a merchant vessel for some years. He continued to own an interest in a ship, but spent his last years on his estate at West Dennis, where he died at the age of seventy-two. After his death, his widow came to the West, and made her home with Mrs. Knowles, in Rockford, until ealled to her final rest. In the family were two sons, Jonathan and Ansel, who were large commission merchants of Philadelphia for many years. The former is now living a retired life in West Dennis, Mass., and the latter is now deceased. They were both prominent and well-known business men of Philadelphia for many years.

Unto Capt. Knowles and his wife have been born seven children, but John C. and Ellie M. are both now deceased. Grace Pacific was born on the Pacific Ocean, off the coast of Peru, and is the wife of Alfred Holt, an attorney of Chicago; Herbert is a member of the firm of Johnson & Knowles, realestate dealers of this city; Abbie F., Royal E. and Edwin W. are all at home.

The Captain and his wife are member of the Second Congregational Church, and, in politics, he is a Republican. He also belongs to the Masonic order, of which he became a member on the Island of Malta. On coming to Rockford in 1870, he formed a partnership with Ansel Collins, and for five years they engaged in the grocery business, after which the Captain became a wholesale dealer in butter, cheese and eggs. To this he devoted his time and attention until about three years since, when, on account of failing health, he sold out and has since lived retired. His life has been a varied one, and well and worthily spent.

THEODORE C. DECKER. This gentleman is classed among the wide-awake, thoroughgoing business men of Winnebago County, and the active manner in which he has taken advantage of every method and idea tending towards enhancing the value of his property has had considerable to do with his success in life. Mr. Decker was born in Orange County, N. Y., as were also his father, Cornelius S. Decker, and his grandfather, Levi Decker, both tillers of the soil. The grandfather married Miss Roxanna Mould, and they became the parents of seven sons, only two now surviving; one of these, William Decker, is seventy-six years of age and a resident of Newburg, N. Y. Levi Deeker died at the advanced age of ninety-eight years and his wife survived him until 1877, dying when sixty-eight years old.

The father of our subject, Cornelius Decker, was born in the year 1818 and was married in his native county to Miss Jane Ashby, a native also of Orange County, N. Y., and the daughter of John Ashby, of the same county and State and a farmer by occupation. In 1861, Mr. Decker sold his farm in New York State and moved to Zanesville, Wis., where he purchased a tract of eleven hundred and eighty acres, settling on the same with his wife and nine children, seven sons and two daughters. There he continued to cultivate the soil on a large scale for about twenty-eight years, or until 1888, when he concluded to try his fortune in another part of the county. He purchased forty acres in Rock Township, the same State, and there he and his admirable wife reside at the present time, both enjoying good health. They lost four children in infancy, two of each sex, and those now living are Jonathan M., Frank D., William, Theodore C., John A. and Anna G., the latter now Mrs. David Mould, a resident of Sioux City, Iowa.

Theodore C. Decker, the subject of this sketch, was born on the 8th of February, 1851, and was but ten years of age when his parents moved to Wisconsin. He was early trained to the tedious details of farm life, and in 1880 he selected his life companion in the person of Miss Mary McNamara, of Chicago. Her parents, Lawrence and Harriet (Hickox) McNamara, were natives of Williamstown, Mass., in which State Mrs. Decker received a thorough education, graduating at the Westfield Normal School there. After teaching in her native town and in Worcester, and still later in the Graylock Institute at Williamstown, Mass., she came West to Chicago, where she taught in the public schools for eight years. She was thoroughly in love with her calling and must have been a very successful educator, for she has the happy faculty of winning and keeping friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Decker commenced housekeeping in 1882, and the same year purchased twenty acres of choice land on section 3, Roseoe Township, Ill., two miles east of Beloft, for which he paid $115 per acre. On this Mr. Decker has erected two large tobacco sheds and a large stock barn, in which he has a large silo tank, or cellar, with a capacity of one hundred and thirteen tons. He has rebuilt his residence, and everything about the place indicates to the beholder that the owners are people of culture and refinement. Mrs. Decker is quite a horticulturist and takes as much pleasure with her fine strawberries as her husband does with his fifteen acres of tobacco, if she does not realize as much profit as he does from his twenty-four thousand to thirty thousand pounds of the weed per year. Mr. Decker has some fine Jersey cattle and keeps from fifteen to twenty cows. He makes thousands of pounds of the choicest butter and sells it to the consumers of Chicago, where he has some customers among the best people. By growing corn fodder, which is made into ensilage, he can feed many head of stock from these twenty acres, and the eight acres which he hires. He has raised some of the finest of Jersey cows, there being in his herd Muriel the Third, who was on exhibition at the Philadelphia Centennial, 1876.

Mr. and Mrs. Decker lost an infant son, and they now have one son living, Frank D., born September 16, 1881, who is a promising boy, having made four grades in three years. Mr. Decker has been a Democrat, but under the salutary influence of his wife is likely to become a good Republican. They are both members of the Congregational Clurch, and are held in high esteem in the community.

SHLEY KNAPP. The results of industry, thrift and wise judgment have been manifested in the career of this gentleman, who, in all matters pertaining to his financial standing, has fairly earned the title of a self-made man. He is one of the oldest settlers of Burritt Township, Winnebago County, having come here about the year 1842, and he now owns and occupies a tract of two hundred acres of fine land.

The gentleman of whom we write was born in Eldred, McKean County, Pa., January 7, 1821. His father, Jacob, was born in New York State, and his father, Luke Knapp, came from Connecticut, and spent his last days in New York. The father of our subject was reared on the home farm, and as soon as old enough went to Pennsylvania, where he bought a tract of timber land in Eldred Township, and cleared and improved a farm, residing there until his demise, January 18, 1863, at the advanced age of ninety years and six months. The maiden name of our subject's mother was Mary Cahoon; she was a native of the Empire State, and the widow of a Mr. Brainard. She spent her last days on the home farm in Eldred Township, dving February 28, 1854, when past sixty-nine years,

The original of this sketch received his education in his native township, attending the pioneer schools taught in the old log schoolhouse with its home-made furniture. He resided with his parents until reaching his majority, when he started out in the world for himself with $1.50 in his pocket. He walked to Eric County, N. Y., and secured work in a harvest field two months, and in the fall was engaged in stacking straw. In October of 1842, Ashley Knapp started with his earnings in his pocket for Illinois, and came by steamer to Milwaukce, on foot to Beloit, and rode the remainder of the way to Burritt Township. His brother having previously come to this State, he stopped with him a short time, then went to Joe Daviess County, and secured a job splitting rails at fifty cents per hundred and his board. He was very industrious and saved his earnings, and was soon enabled to purchase ten acres of timber land which he still owns, which is located on section 6, Burritt Township. The next year he received $13 per month for his labors, and with this, in 1844, bought forty acres more, a part of which was improved prairie land on section 8 of the same township, and there commenced his career as an independent farmer. Four years later, our subject bought the farm where he now resides, paying for it $3.50 per acre, it including the northwest quarter of section 16, and the west half of the northeast quarter of same section. He did not have the money to pay down for his land, and had to pay ten per cent. interest.

At the time of Mr. Knapp's coming here there were no railroads, and Chicago was the principal marketing place, and he had to haul his wheat there, fording the river at Rockford, and selling his wheat for fifty and fifty-five cents per bushel. On the return trip, he would bring merchandise and other necessaries for family use. The lumber with which he crected his first house was all hauled from Chicago by himself. His present farm contains two hundred acres, and is one of the best in the county, its good substantial buildings showing it to be in the hands of a sagacious manager. A number of springs of pure water, which flow from one hundred and fifty to two hundred barrels an hour, are to be found on the place. He has built a dam and formed a beautiful pond, in which are to be found the speekled-back trout.

The subject of this life notice, was married, in 1844, to Elizabeth (Herrington) Williams, a native of Canada, and a daughter of the Rev. Richard Herrington, and the widow of Warren Williams. Mrs. Knapp died December 14, 1888. Mr. Knapp has three children living, namely: Loretta Bate, Aurella Franklin and Warren J. Lucretia, the youngest daughter, married John S. Bates, and died in Rockford, in July, 1890. Lovina, the third ehild, died when eight years old. Mr. Knapp is a consistent member of the Baptist Church, of which his estimable wife was also a valued member. From a genealogy of the Knapp family, we find they are of Saxon origin, three brothers having come to America, William, Nieholas and Roger, in 1630. Their descendants are numerous, and settled in the various different States of this continent. Mr. Knapp is a most excellent man, highly spoken of by all who know him, his habits being unexceptionable, and his whole life most exemplary.

UST A. WANSTROM, junior partner of the firm of Johnson & Wanstrom, dealers in clothing and merchant tailoring goods, loeated at No. 420 East State Street, has been a partner in this concern since the 1st of May, 1885. He is a wide-awake and enterprising young business man and one well known throughout the community. He was born in Sweden on the 17th of March, 1861, and was still quite young when he crossed the Atlantic to America with his parents, Gust and Gustava (Barson) Wanstrom. The family came at once to Rockford, where they have since resided. His father, a earpenter by trade, is now living a retired life at his home on Third Avenue. Both himself and wife are about sixtyfive years of age. They are members of the First Lutheran Church and are highly respected people. Of their family two sons and two daughters are yet living.

Our subject was reared to manhood in this city, and when a youth applied himself to study and got a practical education. In the early part of 1871, he went to Chicago and was a clerk in a meat-market in that city for two years, after which he returned to Rockford and has here since resided. Having learned the trade of a cabinet-maker, he became connected with the Central Furniture Company and was one of its stockholders. He also was employed in the Forest City Furniture Company and is now a Director in the Royal Sewing Machine Company, which was organized in this eity in the summer of 1890. He is also interested in other concerns, and by close attention to business has already won a handsome competence.

Mr. Wanstrom was married in this city in 1888, the lady of his choice being Miss Emma Anderson, who was born and reared in Rockford and is a daughter of Andrew Anderson. Her father is now a successful farmer, living in the town of Newport, and is a prominent citizen there. Himself and wife are members of the First Lutheran Church of Rockford and take an active interest in its work.

Mr. and Mrs. Wanstrom occupy a pleasant home at No. 909 Kishwaukee Street, where hospitality abounds and good cheer reigns supreme. They are active members of the First Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Wanstrom has been a Trustee for nine years. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles. He has been the architect of his own fortunes, and that he has worked truly and well is shown by the success that has crowned his efforts. He is recognized as one of the leading business men of the city, and is now one of its prosperous residents, enjoying a competence well carned and richly deserved.

ARTIN HILLIARD, who is engaged in the grocery business at No. 412 Seventh Street, has carried on operations in that line in Rockford for about twenty years. His life has been full of varied and interesting experiences and its record, we feel assured, will be received with interest by many of our readers. He has sailed all over the globe and traveled through several countries. From his native home in Sweden he went to Germany, and later took passage at Hamburg on a sailing-vessel which three months later landed him in New York City. He afterwards went to sea, shipping before the mast, and became second mate on a merchant ship, of which he formed one of the crew for several years. It sailed in nearly all the waters of the globe and he landed at the chief scaports of the world, especially in the European countries, the South American provinces and Australia. He rounded Cape Horn and Cape Good Hope, and went through all the experiences of the old tar. After one voyage which lasted for thirteen months, he left his vessel at Liverpool, England, and thence again crossed the water to New Orleans and proceeded up the Mississippi River, on whose waters he then sailed for two years, from the mouth to St. Paul.

Later, Mr. Hilliard's mode of life was completely changed, and he became a member of the United States Artillery, serving for five years at Key West, Fla. On his discharge from the service, he opened a grocery store in that place, where he did business for some time. While in the army, nearly the whole of his company died of yellow fever and Mr. Hilliard himself took the fever, barely escaping death. He afterwards sold his interest in the store and came to the North, locating in Chicago, where he opened a grocery on the corner of Chicago and La Salle Avenues. Subsequently, he did business at the corner of Superior and North Clark Streets, but later sold out and went to California across the plains. After a wearisome journey of six months, he arrived at his destination and for ten years engaged in mining in Placer County, not far from the American River. After that varied but successful period in his life, he started on the return trip by way of the Isthmus of Panama. At Aspinwall he took the smallpox and was confined in the hospital for thirty-one days. He then proceeded to New York, where he had a severe attack of Shagers fever, from which he had not recovered on reaching Rockford.

In Chicago, Mr. Hilliard wedded a Swedish lady, Miss Amelia Long, who was a good wife and helpmate to her husband until her death, which occurred in the autumn of 1873. She left two small children: Joseph, the elder, a promising young man, graduated from the Rockford Business College and now assists his father in the store; Emma A., who for some time has been house-keeper for her father and brother, is a cultured young lady, well educated. The family attend the First Lutheran Church and are held in high regard in the circles of society in which they move. Mr. Hilliard is a member of the Odd Fellows' Society, and, in politics, is a supporter of Republican principles. He is now seventy-three years of age, but his years rest lightly upon him and his faculties are still unimpaired. He has led a busy and useful life and has seen much of the world. His varied experiences have made him a well-informed man and a pleasant and entertaining companion.

ELLS FISII. In seanning the lives and enterprises of the citizens of Rockford, it is pleasant to note the exercise of enterprise in every walk of life, and the achievement of success in every department of business. This we are able to discern in the career of our subject, who was formerly a farmer but is now retired. He came here from his farm in Winnebago Township, this county, early in the year 1892, located on Rockton Avenue, and has since been connected with the Rockford Galvanizing Works.

Our subject made his first appearance in Winnebago County in the fall of 1868, and purchased a good farm of one hundred and fifteen acres on section 4, of Winnebago Township, where he resided for twenty-three years. He made many improvements, creeded good buildings of all kinds, and was considered one of the most progressive and successful agriculturists of his section. During the last twelve years of his life on the farm, he earried on a dairy business and was as successful in this as in all previous enterprises.

The Keystone State claims him as her son, and he was born in Pike County, of that State, on the 15th of January, 1831. He was but a small child when he moved with his parents to New York State, and settled with them in Tompkins County, where he remained until he came West to Illinois. His parents, Joseph J. and Sarah (Cole) Fish, were natives of Pennsylvania, and were of German and English descent, respectively. After the marriage of this worthy couple, they continued to make their home in Pennsylvania for a number of years and then moved to New York State, where both passed the remainder of their lives. The father was a mason by trade and an honest, hardworking man. He was a Methodist in religion, and a Whig in politics. The mother was also a Methodist in her religious views. Both died on the old homestead in Tompkins County, the father when sixty-two years of age, and the mother about twelve years later. They were worthy and much esteemed people. Her father was a patriot of the Revolution and was in Gen. Washington's army.

Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Fish, five sons and four daughters, and three of the sons, William, John and James, were in the Civil War, the last two serving through the entire conflict. William was Captain of the company in his regiment (the One Hundred and Ninth) and was killed while gallantly leading the same in the first charge on Petersburg, Va., during the disastrous explosion of the mines under that place. He was then a single man. James and John returned to the parental roof, but the former is now deceased. Another son, Joseph C., now resides in Kansas City, Mo. All the daughters are deceased.

Wells Fish was married first in Tompkins County, N. Y., to Miss Margaret Theal, who was born in Westchester County but reared in Tompkins County. Mated in temperament and in nature, this union proved most happy, and as the years passed one child was born to them. Willard, who died when about nine years of age. Mrs. Fish passed away from this life while yet in the vigor of her womanhood, when about forty-nine years of age, her death occurring in Winnebago County.

The second marriage of Mr. Wells occurred in Winnebago County, to Mrs. Mary Colson, nee Wygant, who was born and reared in Steuben County, N. Y. She was first married to Ezra Colson, who was a New York State merchant and who served through the Rebellion, dying a few years after returning from the army. He left one child, Ada, who is now the wife of James Rodgers, present proprietor of the Rockford Galvanizing Works, which he has controlled for the past three years. Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers now reside in Rockford and are prominent and much esteemed young people. To Mr. Fish's present union has been born one child, Harry, who is attending the public schools of the city. Mr. Fish is a Republican in politics and two years previous to coming to Rockford he was Assessor for two years. He was also Township Trustee for fifteen years. He and Mrs. Fish attend the Presbyterian Church.

ZRA B. SACKETT has been a resident of Rockford since the spring of 1855, when he came to this city and established business as a painter and house decorator. He began on a small scale, but has steadily worked up a growing trade until he now has a liberal patronage. Many of the private residences and public buildings of the city have been beautified by his handiwork, for he is an expert in this line.

Mr. Sackett was born in Volney Township, Oswego County, N. Y., in 1822, and at the age of fifteen removed with his parents to Chautauqua County, where he was reared and educated. The Sackett family was founded in America by three brothers of English birth who emigrated to this country prior to the Revolutionary War. His father, Anson Sackett, was a native of Vermont, and in that State married Theodosia Ruggles, who came of a good old New England family. Soon after their marriage, they removed to the Empire State, locating on a farm in Oswego County, and there all their children were born. As before stated, the family subsequently went to Chautauqua County, where the parents spent their remaining days, residing on a farm in the township of Hanover until called to their final rest. Mr. Sackett died at the age of eighty-four and his wife died five years previous, in her seventy-sixth year. They were members of the Episcopal Church and lived unassuming, upright lives. Their family numbered thirteen children, four of whom died in infancy. Of the nine who grew to mature years, three sons and three daughters are yet living. One sister, Mrs. William Swits, resides in Rockford.

No event of special importance occurred during the childhood of our subject. In Westfield, N. Y., after arriving at man's estate, he married Miss Fond du Lae, Wis.

Simena R. Ward, daughter of Richard and Lois (Wilcox) Ward, natives of Connecticut. After their marriage, her parents removed to what was then Log City, Madison County, N. Y., where Mr. Ward established a tannery and carried on a shoe store. Subsequently, he removed with his family to Chautauqua County, where he followed agricultural pursuits until his death, at the age of eighty-two. His wife had passed away a good many years previous, when sixty years of age. They were members of the Congregational Church and were known as kind, hospitable and Cl people. With one exception, all of their the cen children grew to manhood and womanhood and were all married but two. There is but one sister of Mrs. Sackett now living, Mrs. R. E. Morris, of Unto Mr. and Mrs. Sackett have been born four children: Minnie, who died at the age of two and a half years; Jennie S., wife of Dr. Clinton B. Helms, a successful dentist of Rockford, residing on Walnut Street with his wife and their two children, Charles and Raymond; Charles T., who occupies a clerical position with the Rockford Insurance Company, wedded May Manny, by whom he has one daughter, Edith, and their home is on North Church Street; Harry B., the youngest, is a special agent for the Rockford Insurance Company. The family is widely and favorably known throughout this community. The parents are both members of the Episcopal Church and Mr. Sackett has served as Vestryman. In politics, he is a Republican, and, socially, is a Master Mason. He owns a good business house at No. 119 First Street and a comfortable and modern home at No. 205 South First Street. His success in life has all been due to his own efforts and he may well be termed a self-made man.

EORGE II. S. KENT, of Roscoe, was born in Eric County, Pa., April 7, 1821. The founder of the family in America was Asa Kent, who was brought when a babe from England to America about two years after the landing of the "Mayflower." The grandfather sof our subject, who also bore the name of Asa Kent, was born in Connecticut in 1759. He removed from Oneida County, N. Y., to Ashtabula County, Ohio, where he died at the age of sixty-eight years, leaving a wife and six children, two sons and four daughters. Asa Kent, Jr., father of our subject, was born in Oneida County, N. Y., in 1792, and at the age of twenty-two years went to Eric County, Pa., where he bought one hundred acres of timber land at $4 per acre. Many years afterward, he came to Illinois, locating in Winnebago County, where he died at the age of sixty, leaving three sons and a daughter, namely: George H. S., of this sketch; Sarah, who was born in 1825; Hiram, who was born in 1830, and died in Rosece, of smallpox in 1853, at the age of twenty-three years; and Elphinstone, named for Lord Elphinstone, of England, who is a farmer of Potter County, S. Dak.

Our subject spent the first twenty-three years of his life upon his father's farm in Eric County, which he helped to clear. On completing his education, acquired in the common schools, he engaged in teaching for four successive winters. The spring of 1844 witnessed his arrival in Roscoe. He came on the old steamer "Madison" commanded by Capt. Wilkinson, of Erie, who spent almost a lifetime on the Lakes and died on his boat. They were seven days coming from Eric to Chicago, and Mr. Kent rode from there to Belvidere with a farmer who had been to market. He traversed the distance between Belvidere and Roseoe on foot. Here he purchased a team and followed teaming to Chicago and many other points in the Northwest, carrying prospecting parties. He made his first purchase of land in 1849, becoming possessor of forty acres, for which he paid $10 per acre. It is still his property, but is worth five times that sum to-day. He afterwards added to his landed possessions from time to time, until now four hundred and fifty acres vield to him a good income. He continued to engage in active farming until 1891, when he bought his present residence, which was the home of Mrs. Kent's parents from 1847 until 1874.

In this house, in the fall of 1853, Mr. Kent and Miss B. P. Smith were united in marriage. The lady was born in Mercer County, Pa., in 1830, and when a maiden of sixteen summers came to

P. M. REED.

Roseoe with her parents, John C. and Charlotte (Croy) Smith, the former a native of the Keystone State, and the latter of Vermont. With their eight children, they came West during a pleasant autumn, and after an enjoyable journey of twenty-three days, arrived at their destination, but soon after locating here the family were all taken with chills and fever. The parents died at the home of Mrs. Kent in February, 1881. Both died of paralysis within a few hours of each other, at the age of eighty-one years, and were buried in the same grave.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Kent have been born six children, but three are now deceased. Charles and Fred died in childhood, and William Forest died of typhoid fever in Fargo, N. Dak., in January, 1883, at the age of twenty-three years; Francis Smith, born in 1854, is operating the home farm; Mary E., born in 1855, has been suffering from insanity since 1883; and Ernestine D. is now the wife of Victor G. Coe, of Iowa City, Iowa, who was graduated from the State University and is now pursuing a law course. The parents of this family are members of the Congregational Church. Mr. Kent has been a life-long Republican, and is a stanch supporter of that party. He may truly be called a self-made man, for by his own efforts he has worked his way upward to a position of affluence, and certainly deserves great credit for the prosperity which has crowned his labors.

ETER M. REED. At one time this gentleman was a leading contractor and builder of Rockford, and many evidences of his ability and skill in that direction are to be seen in the city. He was regarded as a first-class workman, a reliable and straightforward man, and an excellent citizen. For many years he was one of the foremost contractors and builders of Rockford and had in his employ most of the time from forty to fifty men. Were it necessary to add more as to his ability as a mechanic or builder, perhaps the greatest compliment that could be paid him would be to point out those monuments of his handiwork which now grace the city. He was seriously injured by a fall from a grain elevator he was building, and died on the morning of the 7th of November, 1889. Honored and respected alike in business and social circles, his sudden death was lamented by all.

Mr. Reed was born in the Valley of Karlmeir, Sweden, September 16, 1838, and his parents, who were natives also of that country, are still residing there and are quite aged. The father is a farmer by occupation. Peter M. Reed attained to manhood and learned the carpenter's trade in his native country. In 1864, he emigrated to America, and, coming to Illinois, located in Rockford, where he became the owner of some valuable property, and where his widow is now residing. He also owned stock in the shoe and upholstery factory of that city.

For some time after coming to Rockford, Mr. Reed was engaged as a bridge-builder throughout the West and owned a construction car, which was well-equipped for boarding his men. He was very successful, but the work was not congenial to him, and he entered the building and contracting business in this city. In the meantime, he had gone to Chicago, and for four years was in the employ of the Street Car Company, laying tracks and building houses for their use, etc. In 1873, he returned to Rockford and there remained until his death.

In Chicago, Mr. Reed was married to Miss Johanna Peterson, a native of Sweden, born near the birthplace of her husband, on the 11th of November, 1838, and she was there reared and educated. Her parents, John and Christina (Daniels) Peterson, were natives of that country and the father is a farmer. Both are living, the father being eighty years of age. They are members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Mrs. Reed belongs to the Lutheran Church and her husband held membership in the same. In his political views, Mr. Reed was a Republican, and, socially, he was a member of the Independent Order of Mutual Aid. He was the father of seven children, two, Dalia and Anton, and one unnamed, having passed away before him. The others are Ansel, a promising young man, who is now engaged in the silver plate business in Connecticut; P. Victor, a machinist for the Barnes' Manufacturing Company of Rockford; Selma and Tura, who are at home.

On another page a portrait of Mr. Reed is presented to our readers.

ACOB BLEWFIELD, now retired and living comfortably with his daughter at No. 110 North Horsman Street, has only been with the latter about a year, having prevously made his home on Auburn Street, in the suburbs of the northwest part of the city, where he owns eleven acres of very valuable property.

Mr. Blewfield was born in Rockland County, N. Y., June 9, 1818, and came of an old and prominent New York State family. His grandfather Blewfield was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and served with the Colonists in many engagements. He was wounded in an engagement on the Hudson River, and his death resulted from these wounds a few years later. He was an early settler of Rockland County, N. Y., and there spent all his active life. He came of German parentage. He left a large family of children, and one, John, was the father of our subject. The latter, with the elder members of the family, spelled their names Blofield. He was born near Haverstraw, in Rockland County, and was engaged in different occupations until his death, when about four-score years of age. For some time he was engaged in building the lighthouse on Stony Point, in the Hudson River, where his maternal grandfather had fought during the Revolution. John Blewfield, or Blofield, was a man of sterling traits of character, and was a worthy citizen of his community. He was married on the Hudson River to Miss Hannah Dikens, who was also a native of Haverstraw, Rockland County, and who inherited French blood from her paternal, and Dutch from her maternal, ancestors. Her father, Richard Dikens, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and his knowledge of Stony Point, N. Y., and of the most accessible route to it, was the cause of his being selected as the leader of the American forces in the successful attack on that position. He died at an advanced age, near the Hudson River, in Rockland County, and was an excellent specimen of the old settlers of that day. Many were the interesting stories told by this gentleman and his worthy wife of the early days, and our subject remembers most of them. He also remembers when he wore pants made from flax that had been woven by his grandmother.

The mother of our subject, Hannah Blewfield, was one of ten children, four sons and six daughters, all of whom lived to be aged people. Eight were married and reared large families, but all are now decrased.

Our subject was one of the following family: Polly, John, Peggy, Abbey, Nancy, Tilley, Jacob, Abraham and Samuel. All these reached mature years, married, and all had families. Jacob and his brother Abraham are the only ones now living. The latter resides at Haverstraw, N. Y., and is a successful agriculturist. Jacob was reared in his native county, and when nearly of age, or about sixty-three years ago, began boating on the Hudson River, the name of his first boat being "Mad Anthony," on which he remained and cooked for some time. Later, he became a man before the mast, and subsequently master of the boat "Fair Play," that plied between Albany and New York City. He saw the first steamboat that made that trip. He has ever been industrious and ambitious, and what he has accumulated is the result of hard work on his part. He assisted in building many of the public works in the harbor of New York City, including the dry-dock, and worked on what is known as Gibitt's Island.

Mr. Blewfield is now seventy-four years of age, but remarkably well preserved for his years, both in mind and body. His memory is retentive, and he remembers events of his early life very vividly. He was married at Haverstraw, Rockland County, N. Y., to Miss Rachel Springstead, who was born and reared in that place. Her parents, Jacob and Lotta (Forkingson) Springstead, were also natives of that county, in which they passed their entire lives, dying when quite aged. Of the large family of children born to them, four are now living: Jacob, David, Sarah and Nancy, all of whom are married and have families.

Mrs. Blewfield died at her home in this city on the 26th of April, 1891, when nearly seventy-three years of age. She was an excellent woman, and in every way a true companion to her husband. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Of the eleven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Blewfield, two are deceased, Lotta and Malinda, the latter dying when young. The former married George Kilburn, of Detroit, Mich. The living children are: Amelia, wife of William Stewart; Sarah, wife of Ed Richardson, a well driller, of Rockford; S. Gus married Miss Nellie Winchester, and is engaged in the saloon business in Rockford; Mary married Kit Sawyer, a business man of Rockford; Matilda is the wife of George Gailor, a blacksmith of Rockford; Jacob, at home; Dell, wife of Jerome Blewfield, a bartender for Gus Blewfield, at the Holland House, of Rockford; Charles, agent for the Illinois Central Railroad, of East Rockford, married Miss Florence Soul, and Hattie, wife of Wallie Furman, a milk dealer.

Mr. Blewfield is one of the honest, upright citizens of the city, and is public spirited and enterprising. In politics, he is a Democrat.

INER CLIKEMAN. A prominent position among the prosperous and thrifty farmers of Winnebago County is occupied by this gentleman, who owns and operates a fine estate in Owen Township. He was born in Wright, Schoharic County, N. Y., February 26, 1832. He comes of German ancestry, his grandfather, Lawrence Clikeman, having emigrated from his native land. Germany, during the Revolutionary War, in which he served as a soldier in the British army. During the conflict, he was taken prisoner, and upon being liberated became a legalized citizen of the United States. He died in the town of Knox, Albany County, N. Y.

Peter Clikeman, father of our subject, was born in Albany County, N. Y., was there reared and married and followed farming pursuits. After the Civil War, he came West to Winnebago County and spent his last years with his children. His marriage united him with Jane, daughter of John and Magdaline Hilligass, and a native of New York, her death occurring in the town of Wright. She reared seven children, namely: Mary A., Magdaline, John F., Miner, Seneca, Jacob A. and Peter II.

The subject of this sketch was reared in his native county and at the age of nineteen engaged to learn the trade of a carpenter and joiner, at which he served an apprenticeship of three years and then followed the trade for one year in the Empire State. In 1862, he removed West to Illinois, and, settling in Owen Township, operated as a renter for about six years and also worked a time at his trade. His next venture was the purchase of the farm where he now resides, which at that time was entirely unimproved, having not a single tree nor any building upon it. He has planted fruit, shade and ornamental trees, erected a fine set of farm buildings, and brought the two hundred and sixty acres to fine cultivation. In 1886, he bought one hundred and sixty acres in Jackson County, Minn., which are well improved and embellished with suitable buildings, and that place he now rents.

June 4, 1852, Mr. Clikeman was united in marriage with Ann Elizabeth Allen, who was born in Berne, Albany County, N. Y. Her father, William Allen, was, it is thought, born in the same county. John Allen, her grandfather, was a farmer in Knox, Albany County, N. Y., and there spent his last years. William Allen learned the trade of a carpenter, which he followed during most of his entire life. He is now living at Reidsville, N. Y., with his daughter and has reached the advanced age of eighty-three years. The mother of Mrs. Clikeman, whose maiden name was Eliza Ann Angle, was born in Albany County, N. Y., the daughter of Philip and Lydia (Miller) Angle, and passed her days in Albany County.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Clikeman includes the following living children: Charles, Sidney, Austin, Vernie A. and William C. Adella and Laura are deceased. Charles Clikeman is a carpenter and joiner, but is at present managing his father's farm. Sidney, now residing in Rockford, is a thorough and skilled mechanic. Austin is an extensive farmer at Greene. Butler County, Iowa.

Vernie A., now residing at Rockford, has followed school teaching for ten years, and is one of the best teachers in Winnebago County; he is an exemplary young man, of good moral habits, and is connected with the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church. William C. is a professional tonsorial artist of Chicago. The position occupied by the family in social circles is an enviable one, and they enjoy the esteem of a host of warm personal friends. In his political belief, Mr. Clikeman is a Republican, and his progressive spirit and energetic disposition have been instrumental in the promotion of the public welfare.

UST BERGQUIST, Superintendent of the furnishing department of the Rockford Manufacturing Company, has held that position since its organization in 1889 and is a stockholder in the same. For mineteen years, he was a painter for Emerson, Talcott & Co., and this has been his principal occupation through life. Since 1869, he has lived in Rockford and he now has a comfortable home at No. 904 Seventh Street. He is a man of push, enterprise and reliability, and a popular member of the company.

Mr. Bergquist was born in Vermland, Sweden, July 7, 1836, and while growing up learned the painter's trade. He is a brother of Oscar Bergquist, in whose sketch will be found a full history of the family. Our subject was married, in his native country, to Miss Mary Swensen, who was born and reared in the same neighborhood and who was the only one of her family to set foot upon American soil. Her mother was born in 1802 and died in Sweden in 1888. The father, Swen Olson, was born in 1799 and is still living. He has been a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church all his life and his wife was a worthy member of the same. He has a son and two daughters living in Sweden, all quite aged now.

After marriage, Mr. Bergquist and his wife lived in their native province until after the birth of three of their children when they came to the United States, settling in Rockford, Ill. Mr. Bergquist came over in 1869 and his wife with her children followed him in the fall of that year. Since coming to this country, they have had four children, seven in all, but two are deceased: Mathias died when six months old in Sweden; a son, Fred La, a promising young man, died in Rockford when seventeen years of age. The children living are Emma, wife of August N. A. Larson, who is a cabinet-maker and assistant Superintendent of the Desk and Furniture Company of Rockford; S. Oscar, Secretary and Treasurer of the Desk and Furniture Company, of Rockford (see sketch); Gustaf A., a painter of the Skandia Plow Company, married Hilma Johnson; Axel T., at home, single, and Andrew W., at home, single.

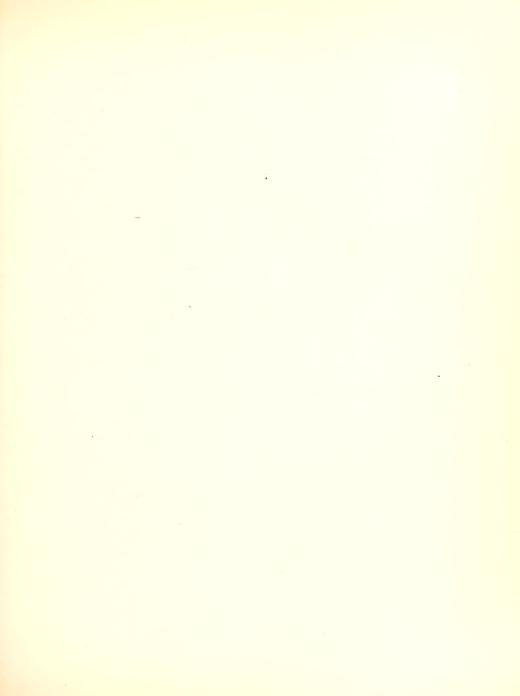

Mr. and Mrs. Bergquist were among the early settlers of Rockford and have witnessed the wonderful changes made in the city during their residence here. They are honest, upright people and are universally respected. All the family hold membership in the Zion Lutheran Church. Mr. Bergquist is active in politics and easts his vote with the Republican party.

HARLES A. FORSBERG is the Superintendent of the Rockford Machine Company, of Rockford, which he established in November, 1889. Two years later, it was incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000, since which time he has been President and Superintendent, while F. A. Lindstedt occupies the position of Secretary. Their plant is located at Nos. 902 and 904 Tenth Street, and they employ thirteen men, who are engaged in the manufacture of wood-working machinery, making a specialty of that used in furniture factories.

Mr. Forsberg was born in Sweden, September 2, 1856, and is a son of Gustaf Forsberg, who was born in that country in 1834, and there makes his home. He is one of the old railroad engineers of his native land, and is a practical machinist and successful inventor. His wife, whose maiden name was Caroline Lendstedt, died in Sweden in 1877.

Our subject is the only member of the family residing in this country. The days of his boyhood and youth were passed in Sweden, where, at the age of thirteen, he began learning the machinist's trade, which he followed for some years. Subsesequently, he became an engineer on board an ocean steamer in the European waters, sailing as far north as Hammerfest. He has been in the northern regions, where the sun has shone for months, and visited many ports in those waters. In 1880, he determined to try his fortune in America, and sailed for New York. The following year he came to Rockford, where he has since made his home.

Mr. Forsberg was united in marriage in this city with Miss Emma Anderson, who was born in Sweden, October 9, 1858, and came to this country in 1881. Soon afterwards, she gave her hand in marriage to our subject, and their union has been blessed with a family of six children, namely: Guerda, Gustaf, Fritz, Olga, Mary and Edith, all of whom are attending school in this city. The parents attend the Baptist Church, of which Mrs. Forsberg is a member. On questions of National importance, Mr. Forsberg votes with the Republican party. He is a public-spirited and progressive eitizen, and one of the prominent Swedish gentlemen of Rockford. Following the business of a machinist, he has won success, which is due entirely to his own efforts, and for it he certainly de-A man of sterling worth, he serves great credit. well deserves representation in the history of his adopted county.

EWIS J. WING, who resides on section 20, Rockford Township, Winnebago County, was born in Roxbury. Delaware County, N. Y., on the 9th of December, 1809, and is a son of Samuel Wing, a native of Fishkill, Dutchess County, N. Y. The grandfather, Elihu Wing, was also a native of the Empire State and a member of the Society of Friends. He removed from Dutchess County to White Plains, N. Y., in a very early day. He met his death while assisting in raising a building.

Samuel Wing was quite young when his father died. He settled in Roxbury after his marriage and bought a farm where he made his home until 1812, when he removed to Ulster County, N. Y. Subsequently, he returned to Delaware County, and later removed to Chenango County, where his death occurred. He married Esther Bennett, who was born in Fishkill, Dutchess County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Kelly) Bennett. She spent her last years with her daughter in the town of Hector, N. Y.

The subject of this sketch was reared to manhood in the State of his nativity, his boyhood days being spent in the usual manner of farmer lads upon the frontier. His mother spun and wove cloth and the children were all dressed in home-spun clothing. Lewis remained at home until about the time of his marriage, which was celebrated in 1834, Miss Eleanor Bartle becoming his wife. She was a native of Chenango County, N. Y., and died in Boone County, Ill., in 1853. Mr. Wing was again married, on the 21st of May, 1855, his second union being with Susan Hickley, who was born in Orleans County, Vt., and died in June, 1891, leaving three children: Lewis, Emma and Katie. By the first marriage were born five children: Elijah, Mary, George, Almena and Eleanor.

Mr. Wing's first purchase of land consisted of twenty-five acres in Green Township, Chenango County, N. Y. Upon his marriage, he settled thereon, making it his home for four years. He had learned the trade of a miller and followed it in addition to farming. When he sold out in Chenango County, he removed to Steuben County, of the same State, where he rented a mill and engaged in that business until 1844. That year witnessed his emigration to Ohio, where he resided in Ashtabula County for ten months.

In 1845. Mr. Wing came to Illinois, accompanied by his wife and four children, making the journey with teams. Locating in Belvidere, Boone County, he there engaged in milling until 1849, when he removed to Cherry Valley Township, where he rented a tract of land for four years. He then purchased a farm in Flora Township, Boone County, where he engaged in farming until 1862, when he sold and purchased a farm in Cherry Valley Township. Upon that land he resided until 1870, when he again sold and bought the farm which is now his home. It is located on section 20, Rockford Township, and borders on the Rock River. The well-tifled fields and many improvements indicate the thrift and enterprise of the owner, who is regarded as one of the successful and progressive agriculturists of the community as well as a valued citizen. In politics, Mr. Wing was a Whig in early life and also a stanch Abolitionist, and since the organization of the Republican party has been one of its stalwart supporters.

The lithographic portrait of Mr. Wing accompanies this sketch.

DWARD MULFORD. This gentleman, who is one of the prominent residents of Rockford, personally superintends the operation of his two farms, one of which is in Ogle County, and contains two hundred and forty-two acres, while the other includes a quarter-section in Boone County.

The original of this sketch was born in Guilford Township, Winnebago County, March 31, 1841, and is the son of William Mulford, a native of Long Island. From a genealogical chart of the Mulford family, which was published by William Remsen Mulford, of New York City, who was a member of the New York Genealogical and Ilistorical Society, we extract the following information in regard to the early history of the family:

The first ancestor of our subject in America was John Mulford, who was born in England, and on emigrating to this country was accompanied by his brother William, they making their home in Connecticut. John's name appears many times in the Minutes of the Council of Connecticut. He removed from that State to Southampton, L. I., previous to 1613. The next in line was his son, Capt. Samuel Mulford, who was a town officer in Southampton at a very early age, and was Captain in the Colonial militia. He went to England in 1716 and appeared before a committee of the Ilouse of Lords, and by his pleading, the duty on whale oil was removed. He was a member of the Provisional Assembly. The next in line was his son, Capt. Mathew Mulford, who was a land-owner in Southampton and also a Captain in the Colonial militia. Following him was Col. David Mulford, also a native of Southampton and a Colonel in active service in the Revolutionary War. The next in line was Mathew Mulford, the grandfather of our subject. He was born in Southampton and removed to Rensselaer County, N. Y., in 1800, where he was one of the early pioneers. He secured a tract of land which he improved and resided upon until his death, on the 21th of March, 1845. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Hutchinson; she departed this life July 31, 1834. Mr. Mathew Mulford served in the War of 1812 and was a pensioner of the Government during his last years.

The father of our subject was reared to agricultural pursuits in his native State, where he resided until 1835, at which time he came to Illinois, being one of the early settlers of Winnebago County. There were but one or two houses where Rockford now stands, and at that early day the land surveys were not yet completed. Wolves, deer, bears and other wild animals were numerous and Indians often proved troublesome. Mr. Mulford made a claim to a tract of Government land in what is now Guilford Township, where he erected a log cabin, covering it with poles, on which he strewed hay. Being single he kept "batch" for a time, and in that humble abode commenced housekeeping after his marriage. He continued to reside there until his death, March 2, 1862.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Lucy Stewart. She was born in Orleans County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Nathan and Lydia (Young) Stewart. The children born of her union with Mr. Mulford were named respectively Eli H., Edward, John H., William D., Charles L., Mary E. and Ida Viola. Edward Mulford, of this sketch, was reared on the home farm and attended the pioneer school in Cherry Valley Township. The first schoolhouse was built of brick, with seats made of slabs placed on wooden pins for legs. In his early youth, he remembers that there were no railroads in this locality and Chicago was the nearest market and depot of supplies.

The original of this sketch remained with his parents until the outbreak of the Civil War, when, in June, 1862, he enlisted in Company A. Sixtyseventh Illinois Infantry, serving his country bravely and honorably for three months, at the end of which time he was discharged on account of disability resulting from a sunstroke. Later, he located at Cherry Valley, where he engaged in the drug business and also in buying and shipping grain, continuing thus actively engaged for about ten years. In 1882, he came to Rockford, where he has since resided. He has always maintained an interest in agricultural pursuits and now owns a farm of two hundred and forty-two acres in Ogle County and one of one hundred and sixty acres in Boone County, and gives his personal attention to the supervision of both.

October 22, 1867, Edward Mulford was united in marriage with Sophronia Johnson, who was born in Cherry Valley, Winnebago County, November 22, 1844. To them have been born two children, Mary Edna and William B. In his political views, our subject votes with the Republican party, and, being a Grand Army man, is a member of Nevius Post No. 1.

Peter B. Johnson, the father of Mrs. Mulford, was born in Sturbridge, Worcester County, Mass., where his father. James Johnson, as far as is known, was also born. The latter-named gentleman was a farmer and passed his last days in Sturbridge. The grandmother of Mrs. Mulford was the daughter of Peter Belknap. She died on the home farm in Sturbridge. The father of our subject's wife was a tanner by trade, which occupation he did not follow, however, being engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes at Sturbridge. In 1837, he emigrated to Illinois and located in what is now Cherry Valley Township, this county, where his twin brother, James B., had previously located. There he entered a tract of land from the Government, three miles south of the village, and erected a log house in which the two families made their home for a time. Mr. Johnson then erected a brick residence, in which the two families again took up their abode and here Mr. Johnson improved a farm and resided until 1856. At that date, he sold his property and removed to Rockford, where he made his home a few months and then located on another farm which he owned in Cherry Valley Township, and there passed the remainder of his life. His wife was Miss Sophronia Lamb, who was born in Sturbridge, Mass., and was a daughter of Luther and Lavinia (Willard) Lamb. She died on the home farm in 1844. The father of Mrs. Mulford served as Assessor of Cherry Valley Township and also held the responsible position of Sheriff of Winnebago County.

OSEPH C. TRUMAN is one of those farmers whose places, by virtue of their well-tilled acres, their neat buildings and general appearance of prosperity, proclaim them to be men who are ambitious to reach for a higher state of perfection. His home is located on section 26, Rockton Township, Winnebago County, where he is engaged in mixed farming.

He of whom we write was born November 25, 1828, in Jefferson County, N. Y., and is a son of Joseph Truman, who departed this life November 27, 1829, when thirty-one years of age, leaving a widow and a son, our subject. His wife was prior to her marriage Miss Fannie Fitch and had her birth in Tolland County, Conn. She is the daughter of Converse and Aruma (Grant) Fitch, who were farmers and lived and died in the Nutmeg State at the respective ages of seventy-eight and eightysix years. They were the parents of the following sons and daughters: William, Russell, Orsan, Halsey, Augusta C., Warren, Hial, Nathan, Fannie and Lorina, the only one living, and who is now Mrs. Nelson W. Northrop, of Ellicottsville, N. Y. When about ten or twelve years of age, Mr. Truman of this sketch went to live with one Joseph Clark, a farmer and silk manufacturer. After being in his employ until seventeen years of age, he struck out for himself and worked as a woolen manufacturer in Massachusetts and Connecticut for nine years, where he was boss weaver or, more properly speaking, foreman of his department.

Joseph C. Truman and Miss Mary A. Hollister, who was born September 28, 1832, were united in marriage in 1851. Three years later, the young couple came West to Rockton, where our subject was engaged in the paper mill. Two years thereafter, the firm sold out and our subject then purchased eighty acres of land, for which he paid $25 per acre and which is his present abiding-place. He built thereon a house, 21x28 feet in dimensions, and in 1871 creeted his present commodious barn, 35x50 feet. He has since added other land to his estate and is more than ordinarily successful in cultivating the soil.

To Mr. and Mrs. Truman have been born four sons and one daughter, the first-born of whom died when an infant. The other members of the family are Burdett C., a farmer in this township, who married Rhoda A. Weed, of Lanark, and has five sons; Lissie M., now Mrs. Edwin S. Gleasman, resides in Owen Township; Arthur died in 1856 when nine months old, and Fred C., who died, aged eighteen years, in September, 1890. Although brought no among Democratic friends, our subject has only voted for one candidate of that persuasion—Franklin Pierce; he now casts a Republican vote and has for eleven years been Assessor of his township and School Director and Clerk of the School Board for twenty-one years. With his wife, he is a conscientious member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Rockton.

*HOMAS HALL is numbered among the early settlers of Winnebago County, where he has made his home for over a quarter of a cenlle is now living a retired life at No. 1504 Charles Street, Rockford. Of English birth, he was born in Shropshire in 1828, and was a son of Richard and Sarah (Forgham) Hall, also natives of that county, where they spent their entire lives. The father by occupation was a farmer, and followed that business throughout his entire life. He died at the age of seventy and his wife passed away in her sixty-sixth year. Both were members of the Methodist Church. In their family were seven sons and three daughters, and all the daughters and four sons reside in England. William and James died in that land, and another brother, John, who came to this country, enlisted in Company II. One Hundred and Nineteenth New York Infantry, under Capt. Stevens, went to the front and participated in many engagements. He finally took sick, and died in the hospital at Fortress Monroe, thus giving his life in defense of his adopted country.

In the usual manner of farmer lads, our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth, and attained his majority in his native county. At length, he bade good-bye to his old home, and, boarding the "Martha Jane Ward," sailed from Liverpool to New York, where he arrived four weeks later. He went to Westmoreland, Oneida County, N. Y., and in the foundries of that place learned the While in Westmoreland, he led molder's trade. to the marriage altar Miss Elizabeth Hargrayes, a native of Lancashire, England, who, when a maiden of fifteen summers, came to the United States with her father, James Hargraves, and her brothers. Her mother had died in England. The family located in Westmoreland, where Mr. Hargraves resided for some years, and then removed to Rondout, N. Y., where he died at the age of fifty-seven years. His wife was forty-nine years of age when her death occurred. They were both members of the Church of England, and were descended from old English families. Mrs. Hall has one brother living, James Hargraves, who is Superintendent of the Wiltwick Seminary, of Kingston, N. Y. He is married, but has no family.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hall have been born six children: Mary, wife of Charles Cary, an employe of the Northwestern Railroad Company, residing in Rockford; William, who, with his father, operates the dairy and fruit farm in Guilford Township, married Amelia Kauffman; James wedded Grace Craill and they reside in Rockford, where he is engaged in clerical work with the Rockford Insurance Company; Hattie, Edith and Nellic at home. Edith, who was educated in the Business College of Rockford, is now employed in Mr. Little's abstract office in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall are members of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church, and in social circles they rank high. On coming to Rockford, he began business as a molder with the firm of Clark & Utter, and afterwards was in the employ of N. C. Thompson. He was industrious and enterprising, attending carefully to the details of business, so that he won considerable property, and, having made profitable investments, is now enjoying a comfortable competence. He is practically living retired, but owns a well-improved farm of ninety-five acres in Guilford Township, where is carried on the dairy business, and vegetables and fruits are also raised for the city market. The farm is in charge of his son William.

OHN D. W. RAY, of Belvidere, claims New York as the State of his nativity. He was born in Fallsburgh, Sullivan County, July 30, 1855, and is of English descent. His great-grandfather, Stephen Ray, was probably a native of England and the founder of the family in America. The grandfather was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., and married Acey Crane, a native of Litchfield County, Conn. Removing to Sullivan County, he became one of the earliest settlers of Thompson Township, where both he and his wife died in the month of March, 1812.

Miles S. Ray, father of our subject, was born in Amenia, Dutchess County, and was only seven years old when his parents died. He found a home with a farmer residing in Monticello, Sullivan County, with whom he resided until he was twenty years of age, when he began to learn the earpenter's trade. He followed that occupation for ten years, and then, purchasing land in the town of Fallsburgh, engaged in farming until his emigration to Illinois in 1856. He settled in Flora Township, Boone County, and there made his home until 1864, since which time he has been a resident of Belvidere. Although he has now reached the advanced age of eighty-six years, he is enjoying good health and his mental faculties are still unimpaired. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Ellen E. Hardenbergh, died in Belvidere in 1873. She was born in Sullivan County, N. Y., in 1812, and was a daughter of Thomas R. and Rachel (Be Vere) Hardenbergh. Her grandfather, Rev. Johannus Hardenbergh, was a native of Holland, and a minister of the Dutch Reformed Church.

Mr. Ray of this sketch has been a resident of Illinois since his third year. He acquired his early education in the schools of Flora Township and supplemented his common-school studies by a course in the State University at Champaign. He then started out in life for himself, and, going to Chicago, was employed in various kinds of work for about five years. He then returned to Belvidere, where he has made his home almost continuously since, and for the past few years has devoted his time to looking after his private interests.

Our subject has been twice married. He wedded Carrie E. Roberts, a native of De Kalb County, Ill., and a daughter of Alanson and Mary Roberts. She died in December, 1886. In July, 1887, Mary Lewis became the wife of Mr. Ray. She is a native of Troy Grove, La Salle County, and a daughter of Joseph and Jennie (Wallace) Lewis. Two children were born of the first union, Thomas Floyd and Ora Louise.

In politics, Mr. Ray is independent, voting for the man regardless of party affiliations. Socially, he is a member of Belvidere Lodge, No. 289 K. of P. His wife holds membership with the Baptist Church. They are people of sterling worth, whose many friends throughout the community hold them in high esteem for their excellencies of character.

The portrait of Mr. Ray accompanies this sketch of his life.

ACOB LIGGET. This gentleman's early identity with the farming and stock-growing interests of this part of Illinois entitles him to representation in this BIOGRAPHICAL REGORD as a pioneer of Winnebago County. He is also what may be termed a self-made man, as he came to the county poor in this world's goods but has by persistent industry and good judgment acquired a competence which has enabled him to retire from active life.

He of whom we write was born in Chester County, Pa., August 26, 1823, and is at the present time residing in the village of Winnebago. His father, Samuel Ligget, was also born in the Keystone State, and was reared and learned the trade of a wagonmaker and millwright in Chester County. He followed those trades during his entire life, spending his last years in Pottstown, Berks County. Our subject's mother bore the name of Barbara Starrett, also a native of the same county as was her husband, and the daughter of William Starrett, who, as far as is known, hailed from Chester County.

The maternal grandfather of our subject was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and departed this life in Chester County, Pa. His daughter, the mother of our subject, reared a family of seven children, and died in Berks County; Jacob of this sketch grew up on the home farm and lived with his parents until fifteen years of age, when he began to eare for himself, his first work being on farms in the neighborhood. After his marriage, he rented land in Chester County for five years, and in 1854 emigrated to Winnebago County, having visited the section the year previous and purchased one hundred acres of land, eighty acres of which were prairie and twenty timber; forty acres of the former were broken, but did not boast of any buildings. Mr. Ligget at once erected a comfortable house on the new farm, into which the family moved and resided for twenty-eight years. At the end of that time, he rented the place and, as before stated, is now residing in Winnebago. His landed estate now comprises two hundred and two acres of excellent land, the rental of which brings him in a handsome income.

The lady to whom our subject was united in marriage March 27, 1849, was born in Laneaster County, Pa., January 15, 1823, and bore the name of Ann, daughter of James Ayres. Her father was also a native of the above-named county, where also his father, Jacob, as far as is known, was born. The latter-named gentleman was employed in the iron works of that county, where his decease occurred. The father of Mrs. Ligget married Naney Morrow, who was born and died in Laneaster County.

The following are the seven children born to our subject and his wife: Mary J. married Bryon Briggs; Henry B. married Martha E. Bunn, and is the father of four children: Willie, Lillian, Anna, and an infant unnamed; Ann A. is Mrs. Edward H. Warner, and her three children are Nellie, Myrtle and Blanch. Clara E. married G. W. Bunn, and is the mother of three sons: Albert J., Henry F. and Lee J.; Clinton T. took to wife Alice Mack, and is the father of four children: Howard C., Alma A., Cora A. and Ethel M.; Ida L. is Mrs. Millard Hollenbeck, and has one son, Henry J.; Ella F. is the wife of Charles McManners, and has two children: Alta L. and Olive Hazel. Mr. and Mrs. Ligget are members in good standing of the Presbyterian Church and are numbered among the well-to-do and honored citizens of the county.

ETER J. OBERG, a live business man engaged with the Rockford Manufacturing Company, has made his home in this city since 1868, and for a number of years has resided at No. 708 First Avenuc. He is a gentleman of energetic and accomplished business habits, and prompt and reliable in all transactions.

Like the majority of the residents of Rockford, Mr. Oberg claims Sweden as his native land, and was born in Smoland Province, that country, on the 4th of December, 1830. Three years later, his father, Andrew S. Oberg, died, when about forty years of age. The latter was a soldier in the regular army in his native country, Sweden. In 1846, the mother was struck by lightning and instantly killed. She was about forty-five years of age.

Our subject was married in his native country to Mrs. Inga S. Jacobson, who was born and reared in the same province as her husband. Her father died there when forty-nine years of age. He was a farmer all his life. His wife is yet living at her old home in Sweden, and, although ninety-five years of age, is comparatively smart and active. She is a member of the Lutheran Church, and her husband held membership in the same. They were the parents of but one child, Mrs. Oberg.

In the spring of 1868, our subject came to America and was followed by his wife and two children in the fall of that year. He immediately located in Rockford and, with the exception of one year spent in the South, he has been a resident of this city since. For some time after locating here, he was with the John P. Manney Manufacturing Company, and ran the emery wheel for that corporation for nineteen years. He still follows that business.

To his marriage have been born ten children, five now deceased: Carl A, died when five years of age; Matina C., at the age of fourteen months; Rug W., when eleven months old; Bada M., when three months old, and an infant unnamed. Those living are Anna G., wife of John H. Larson, a farmer of Cherry Valley Township; John A., now of the firm of Oberg & Rahkar, leading tonsorial artists, is doing a successful business at No. 401 East State Street, He began for himself at the age of eighteen, and later associated himself with his present partner, Mr. Rahkar. He is a stockholder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, also the Rockford Land Company, doing business in Chicago, and in the Rockford Building and Loan Association. He is chairman of the musical committee in the Christian Union Church, which position he has held for two years, and he is a member of that church. Socially, he is a member of Genevieve Lodge, No. 274, K. of P., and is Past Chancellor. He was a charter member of the lodge, and one of its first officers. He is a social, pleasant young man, ranks well in social and musical circles, and has many friends. Following this son are Olivia M., wife of Gus. J. Johnson, a tonsorial artist of Rockford; Frank A. and Charles G. W., at home. The parents of these children are members of the Emanuel Church.

R. JOHN W. THOMAS: a physician and surgeon of Rockford, was born in Waukesha County, Wis., in 1857. The family was founded in this country by Capt. Whitemore Thomas, a sea-captain, who emigrated from his home in Wales to America about 1700. William Thomas, the great-grandfather of our subject, lived and died in Vermont. His son John, the grandfather of the Doctor, was a mechanic and farmer and married a Vermont lady, Miss Augusta Spaulding, who traced her ancestry back to the Pilgrim Fathers. On emigrating Westward about 1842, they became residents of Waukesha County, Wis., locating on land in Vernon Township, which they obtained from the Government. There Mr. Thomas and his wife spent their remaining days, the former dying at the age of three-score years, and the latter when about eighty years of age. They were well-known pioneers of that county and highly-respected people.

Edwin B. Thomas, father of our subject, was the only son and the fourth child in a family of five children, all but one of whom are yet living, are married and have families. He was about fifteen years of age when he located in Wisconsin, and in Waukesha County attained his majority. He has since then engaged in farming and stock-raising, making a specialty of draft and road horses, Cleveland Bays, English Shire and Percheron. His cattle are thoroughbred Red Polled. He is also extensively engaged in market gardening and owns two large greenhouses. His home, called the "Evergreen Stock Farm," is well known throughout that part of the State, and Mr. Thomas is a prominent and very successful farmer. He was married in Vernon Township, Waukesha Connty, to Cornelia Munger, a native of Indiana, who in childhood went to Wisconsin with her parents, Gains and Celia (Smith) Munger, who settled in Vernon Township upon a new farm which they developed and improved. The death of the mother occurred there, but the father died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas, a few years previous. Both had passed the age of eighty years,

Dr. Thomas was reared in Waukesha County and began his literary education in Rochester Seminary, in Racine County, Wis. 1n 1875, he entered the scientific department of the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and was graduated in the Class of '79. He was a hard student and always at the head of his class. Then for ten years he engaged in milling as a practical business man. Subsequently, he took a term of lectures in Rush Medical College, of Chicago, after which he entered the Chicago Homeopathic College and was graduated from that institution in the Class of '91. There he was also foremost in his classes, was President of the class organization and was President of the Hahmemann Society. He commenced practice in Rockford in April, 1891, and although only a year has since passed, he has already won recognition as a young man of superior ability.

The Doctor was married, in Waterford, Racine County, Wis., to Miss Luella Eecles, who was born in that county and educated at Rochester Seminary and the University of Wisconsin. Her father, Andrew Eccles, is now deceased, but her mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Earnshaw, makes her home with Mrs. Thomas. The Dector and his wife have an interesting family of four children: Roy E., Harold E., Bessie C. and Marjorie. The parents are both members of the Second Congregational Church. The Doctor was formerly a Republican in politics but is now a Prohibitionist. His studies have well fitted him for the work he has undertaken, and his skill and ability will not be many years in winning him a foremost place among his professional brethren.

APT. C. HOVEY, deceased, was a resident of Capron, Boone County, for a number of years, but died in 1857 in California. He was born November 29, 1821, in New York, and was the son of Richard C. Hovey, also a native of the Empire State, and a Captain in the militia. The title of Captain was bestowed upon our subject in honor of his father.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hovey went to Ohio from New York and in an early day came to Illinois. The mother's maiden name was Abigail Kimball; she reared a family of thirteen children, live of whom are sons. The parents farmed in Round Prairie for many years, where they had purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land from the Government. The father died after the war at an advanced age and the mother followed him to the better land three years later, having attained her three-score years and ten. Two children of the parental family are residing in California, one in lowa and the rest in Illinois.

Miss Lavina, daughter of Jonathan and Martha (Rogers) Webster, was united in marriage with our subject in 1845, and in 1851 they crossed the plains to California, where the husband and father died in 1857. Mrs. Hovey's parents were natives of New York, and reared a family of six daughters and one son. One child died in infaney and one son was drowned at Buffalo. A sister of our subject's wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Lambert, makes her home with Mrs. Hovey, and another sister, Fannie, is the widow of Rowell Hovey and resides at Capron.

To our subject and his wife have been born two daughters: Sarah, Mrs. Charles Whitcomb, of Minnesota, and Amanda, who married Christopher Ward, who also lives in that State. The sons-in-law were both soldiers during the late war, serving a period of nearly five years, Mr. Whitcomb being a musician in the infantry and Mr. Ward serving in a cavalry regiment. Mrs. Hovey had a son George, who volunteered when seventeen years of age, becoming a member of Company 1, Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, and died of congestive chills in Arkansas, where he lies buried.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lambert, as before stated, resides with Mrs. Hovey, and is the widow of James B. Lambert, who died on Round Prairie, April 8, 1875, leaving three sons. One son, Morris, died March 4, 1892, leaving a wife and three children, and Mary Jane departed this life when twenty-three years of age. Melville resides in Minnesota; and John W. resides in Illinois.

ENRY A. WEBBER. He whose name adorns this page is a worthy representative of an honorable and ingenious English family. The same traits which made his father and brothers successful in the various interests in which they were engaged is discovered in our subject in an augmented degree. He is residing at the present time in the city of Rockton and is the manufacturer of the Webber Combination Angle Sieve, whose capacity for separating mixed grain is from thirty to forty bushels per hour.

He of whom we write was born in Somersetshire, England, August 19, 1849, and is a son of William Webber, whose birth occurred in the same country in 1807. In the fall of 1849, the latter-named gentleman, accompanied by his wife and eight children, set sail for American shores. On reaching this country, he purchased five farms, which aggregated six hundred and forty acres, all in one body, for which he paid spot eash. The wife and mother died while on a visit to her son Herman, when eighty-four years of age. William Webber departed this life in June, 1889, at the home of his daughter in Wempletown, this State.

Henry A. Webber of this sketch was reared on a farm, and was given good educational advantages, and when twenty years of age left the farm and in company with his brothers. William and John, began manufacturing what was known as the Webber Reapers, of which they were the patentees. In the course of lifteen years, our subject purchased the interest of his brothers and managed affairs for himself for some years, since which time he has been engaged in the manufacture of the combination sieve.

June 26, 1866, Mr. Webber and Mrs. Sarah A. Kennedy, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Henderson) Jewett, were united in marriage in Hubbard, Ohio. They have made their home since that time in Rockton, with the exception of four years, when Mr. Webber was engaged as a merchant in Mendota, this State. For a like time after coming here, he was employed in the factory of John Spafford, patenting machines.

The wife of our subject was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1841. Her father, who was a native of the same place, died in 1849, when thirtyfour years of age, leaving a widow and four children. Her union with our subject has been blessed by the birth of three children, one of whom, Franklin J., died when six years of age in 1882. Those living are Mamie E., wife of William Alden, a farmer in Rockton Township, and Gertie E., who was born in October, 1883. In politics, Mr. Webber is a Republican but is not so rabid, however, but that he can see good in all men and parties, His wife is a noble, true-hearted woman, and with her husband is a member of the Congregational Church, in which the latter has been Trustee for eighteen years.

Mr. Webber is making a success of his grain and seed separator, his sales amounting to $4,000 per year and constantly on the increase. James N. Jewett, a brother of Mrs. Webber, was a soldier during the late war and met his death. January 2, 1863, at the battle of Stone River. Her mother, who was born in Eastern Pennsylvania in May, 1818, is now nearly seventy-four years of age and makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Webber.

HERRICK SCHOONMAKER, who is living retired in the village of Latham, Winnebago County, owns three hundred acres of well-improved land on the east bank of Rock River, which is operated in a most intelligent manner by his sons. Our subject was born in Florida, Montgomery County, N. Y., October 4, 1824, where his father, Peter, and his grandfather, Cherrick, Sr., as far as is known, were born. The latter-named gentleman was of Dutch ancestry, and carried on farming in Florida until his death.

Peter Schoonmaker learned and followed the trades of tanner, currier, and harness-maker, carrying on business in Berne, Albany County, after which he lived in different parts of the Empire State, spending his last years in Knox, Albany County, his death occurring July 29, 1856. The maiden name of his second wife was Elizabeth Schemerhorn, also a native of that State, and the daughter of Frederick Schemerhorn, who, it is thought, was born in Greene County. When a lad of sixteen years, the maternal grandfather of our subject was taken captive by the Indians and held a prisoner for four years and four months, when he was purchased by a white man for $40. He wrote an interesting account of his experience which he had published in book form.

The mother of our subject died at her home in the town of Knox. Cherrick was reared to manhood in his native State and commenced to earn his own living as soon as old enough, by working out on farms by the month. He began in business for himself by working farms on shares, and finally purchased eighteen acres in the town of Knox, where he resided until 1857. Two years previously he had come to Winnebago County and bought eighty acres of land in Owen Township, of which forty aeres were broken; a log house constituted the improvements. He paid the sum of $1,300 for the property, and in 1857 took up his abode in a log cabin in which he resided for seven years, at the end of which time he erected a substantial frame building in which the family made their home until 1865. Mr. Schoonmaker then disposed of that property and became the proprietor of the Anson Owen farm, where he lived until 1883; then selling that, he purchased the farm which he still owns in Harlem Township. This he improved with three sets of frame buildings and after occupying it for two years left it in charge of his sons and removed to Lapham, where he is now living retired in a pleasant home.

August 19, 1848, Charity Dearing, a native of Wright, Schoharie County, N. Y., became the wife of our subject. She was born January 5, 1827, and is a daughter of Frederick Dearing, also a native of the Empire State, of German parents. The grandfather of Mrs. Schoonmaker was a pioneer of Schoharie County, where his last few years were spent. Her father, in addition to earrying on a farm, was engaged in the lumber business, and passed his entire life in the above-named county. The maiden name of her mother was Catherine Hillsey, a native of New York State and of German parents.

Our subject and his wife have two children living: David, who married Ida Wright, and Fred, the husband of Minnie Brighton. Catherine, the second child, died at the age of thirteen years and two months; Elizabeth, the next in order of birth, passed away when eleven years and one month of age.

OSEPH G. LYFORD, Esq., formerly the efficient County Treasurer of Winnebago County, residing on section 11, Guilford Township, first opened his eyes to the light of day on the 2d of December, 1839, in Canterbury, N. II. His grandfather, Dudley Lyford, was a farmer, and spent his entire life in the Granite State. The father, Thomas Lyford, was also a native of New Hampshire, was reared to agricultural pursuits, and at the age of eighteen commenced to learn the trade of a stone-cutter. He married Eliza Greely, who was born in Gilmanton, N. H., and was a daughter of Joseph Greely. Immediately after his marriage, Mr. Lyford engaged in farming in Canterbury, where he resided until 1842, when, with his wife and three children, he started with teams for Illinois, and, on reaching Winnebago County, located in Roscoe Township, among its early settlers. The following spring, he purchased a farm of his brother-in-law, upon which was a log house. Into this the family removed and began life in the West in true pioneer style. Mr. Lyford died in December, 1859, on the home farm which is now owned by his son Dudley. His wife survived him some years, and died in Rockford in June, 1874. Their family numbered seven children, as follows: Dudley, Elizabeth G., Joseph G., Alice H., Thomas, Augusta A. and Charles C.

Our subject was only in his third year, when, with his parents, he came to Illinois, and his recollections are of Winnebago County. He was reared amid the wild scenes of frontier life, and his early education was acquired in the common schools, after which he was a student in the High School of Roscoe, and in Beloit College, of Beloit, Wis. He then engaged in teaching for one term, and in 1865 went to Albany, N. Y., entering the Albany Law School, from which he was graduated in the Class of '66. He then embarked in the practice of law in Rockford, and continued to follow that profession until 1870, when he was appointed County Treasurer, filling the office until the autumn of 1871. Until 1877, he continued to reside in Rockford, when he rented the farm in Roscoe Township which was his home for two years. He then bought his present farm, and to its cultivation has since devoted his energies.

On the 1st of January, 1868, Mr. Lyford was joined in wedlock to Miss Emily M. Brown, a native of Shirley, Mass., and a daughter of Rev. Hope Brown, who was born in Concord, Mass., February 16, 1798. He acquired his literary education in Amherst College, and for two years studied theology in Princeton, after which he was ordained a minister of the Congregational Church in Shirley, Mass., June 22, 1830. At the same time he was installed as pastor of that church, but after fifteen years resigned and removed to Naperville, Ill., where he had charge of the church from 1845 until 1856. In that year he went to Rockford, and was financial agent for the Rockford Female Seminary for thirteen years. During the remainder of his days, he lived retired at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. S. Himman, of Beloit. He passed away in 1883, at the age of eighty-five years. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary P. Fuller, was born in Fitchburg, Mass., and was a daughter of Benjamin Fuller. She died at the home of Mrs. Lyford, in August, 1890. This worthy comple were prominent people, highly respected by all who knew them.

Unto our subject and his wife have been born two children, Starr and May. The mother is a member of the First Congregational Church of Rockford, and a most estimable lady. Mr. Lyford was a Republican in politics for some years, but has been a Democrat since 1876. He has a wide acquaintance throughout Winnebago County, where almost his entire life has been passed, and is recognized as one of its valued citizens.

OHN SEATON. Many of the most active and enterprising residents of Shirland Township, Winnebago County, are natives of this county and have here spent the greater part of their lives. In them we find men of true loyalty to the interests of this part of the State, and who understand, as it were by instinct, the needs, social and industrial, of this vicinity and have a thorough knowledge of its resources. They are, therefore, better adapted to succeed here than a stranger could and are probably, without exception, warmly devoted to the prosperity of their native place.

Mr. Seaton was born at his present home in Shirland Township on the 19th of April, 1846. His father, George Seaton, was born in Westmoreland, N. Y., in 1803, and his grandfather, George Seaton, was a native of Vermont who, with his wife, Hannah (Wheeling) Seaton, went to New York at an early day. They reared six children, George Seaton, Jr., being the fourth son and child. The elder George Seaton was a millwright by trade and also a miller, rearing his son George Seaton, Jr., to the same trade. The latter was married in Oneida County, on the 28th of April, 1830, to Miss Abigail Makinstry, a native of Stafford, Conn., born November 29, 1805, and the daughter of Solomon and Jerusha (Baldwin) Makinstry, both New Englanders and the father a farmer and carpenter. Mr. and Mrs. Makinstry reared eleven children, five sons and six daughters, and died in the East, the father at the age of eighty-six, and the mother at the age of seventy-three years.

The parents of our subject left New York in 1838 and with a three-horse team started for the State of Illinois. They were well equipped with a stove, cooking utensils, bedding, &c., &c., and with their four small children were quite comfortable in making the trip. They were several weeks en route and after reaching their Western home set up housekeeping in the crude log house Mr. Seaton had erected on his two hundred acres the year previous. He paid $1.25 per acre for his land and at once set work to clear his farm and make improvements. He followed agricultural pursuits all his life and was well known for his thrift and enterprise. He died on the 4th of July, 1857, when fifty-four years of age, of lung fever and quick consumption, and left his widow and eight living children. Mrs. Seaton is still living and, although now nearly eighty-seven years of age, is still quite strong, both mentally and physically. She has been a hard worker all her life until within the last nine years, since which time her daughter has taken the best and tenderest care of her. She has been a Methodist for sixty years and expects to pass away triumphant in that faith. Mr. Seaton was a Republican in polities.

Eight of the ten children born to this worthy couple lived to be grown, but two, Francis and Eli, died in early boyhood. The others were named Leonard C., Julia Ann, Adaline, Delani, Laura, Abbie, John (our subject) and Dorothy, respectively. Of these there are five living: Leonard C. volunteered in a regiment of Minnesota eavalry in 1862 and served three years in the West, fighting the Indians. His death occurred in Ellensburg, Wash., October 13, 1890, when nearly sixty years of age. Julia Ann, who married Steven Card, died April 19, 1885, when fifty-three years of age, leaving five children; Abbie died in Redfield, Iowa, in 1887, when forty-three years of age

John Seaton, the subject of this sketch, was reared on the farm where he now resides and has spent his whole life in tilling the soil. He was married, May 15, 1883, to Mrs. Alice L. Ryan, nee Tambling, a daughter of William II. and Miranda (Small) Tambling, both natives of New England. Her parents later moved to Stockholm, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and there Mrs. Seaton was born on the 19th of November, 1843. She came with her parents to Wisconsin in 1852. Her mother died in-Forest, Livingston County, Ill., in January, 1877, when sixty-nine years of age, and the father passed away at Eagle River, Wis., May 20, 1889, when eighty years of age. They were the parents of six children. Mr. Seaton is a member of the Farmers' Mutual Benevolent Association, and although formerly a Republican in politics, is now a Prohibitionist. Mrs. Seaton's first marriage resulted in the birth of six children, but only one, Maggie, is now living. She makes her home in Wisconsin.

ENSLY KEZAR, an intelligent and highly respected farmer living on section 24, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, has been identified with the history of this community for more than half a century. He has ever borne his share in the work of development and upbuilding, has been an eye-witness of its progress and advancement, and well deserves mention among its honored pioneers.

Mr. Kezar was born in Shirley, Middlesex County, Mass., June 22, 1813, and is a son of Moses Kezar, who was born in Groton, Mass., July 26, 1790. The great-grandfather of our subject also bore the name of Moses. He was born in 1710, and became an early settler of Shirley, Mass., where he improved a farm, making it his home until his death. His son Jonathan was born January 9, 1750, was reared to agricultural pursuits, and died in Shirley in 1829. His wife bore the maiden name of Abigail Stowe.

Moses Kezar, Jr., learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, which he followed in Shirley, Mass., throughout his entire life. His death occurred in July, 1825. He married Celinda Page, who was born in Shirley, and who was a daughter of Jonas and Lucy (Holden) Page. Her mother died February 10, 1841. The father was an agriculturist, and spent his entire life in Shirley, passing away on the 26th of January, 1822. He was a descendant of John Page, who came from Durham, England, to America in 1630. The mother of our subject survived her husband some years, and was called to her final rest while living in Groton, Mass. Their family numbered five children: Bensly, Charles, Walter, Elvira and Maria S.

Our subject went to Groton when a lad of sixteen years, and began learning the trade of a hatter, serving as an apprentice until he reached his majority. He then followed the business on his own account until 1836, when he decided to try his fortune in the Far West, and started for Illinois, making the journey via the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes to Detroit, and by team the remaining distance. He located in what was then Winnebago County, but is now a part of Boone County. At that time Chicago was a mere village, and the greater part of the land in this vicinity was not yet surveyed. Deer and other kinds of wild game roamed over the prairie at will, the settlers were few, and many of the towns had not yet sprung into existence. Mr. Kezar made a claim about a mile east of Cherry Valley, upon which he creeted a log cabin covered with shakes, but soon afterwards sold to William Fitch and Henry Lawrence. Our subject then turned his attention to milling, being connected with the first gristmill in either Winnebago or Boone Counties. It was located in Newburg, and he continued to engage in its operation until 1850, when he purchased land in the town of Flora and engaged in farming. In 1855, he sold and bought a farm in Guiford Township, his present home.

On the 5th of January, 1844, Mr. Kezar married Catherine Bartle, a native of the Empire State, and a daughter of John and Rose Bartle. Her death occurred April 9, 1845, and he was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Amanda M. (Wilder) Holcomb. She was born in New York, and was a daughter of Orin Wilder. She became the wife of our subject January 30, 1849, and was called to her final rest June 23, 1886, leaving five children: Jerome M., Hosea B., Charles F., Walter P., and Helen A. The last-named is the wife of Fred H. Chamberlain.

In religious belief, Mr. Kezar is a Universalist. He is a well-informed man and a public-spirited and progressive citizen. To the pioneers we owe a debt of gratitude for what they have done for the county, and among them our subject deserves honorable mention.

NDREW OLSON, foreman of the Forest City Furniture Company, has for some years been identified with the business interests of Rockford, where he has made his home since 1862. He came to the United States from Sweden, his native land. He was born in 1851, and with his parents crossed the Atlantic to this country. His father, L. O. Johnson, is still living at the age of seventy-three years, and makes his home in Rockford. His wife died in this city in 1889, at the age of sixty-two years. Mr. Johnson is a member of the First Lutheran Church, to which the mother of our subject also belonged.

Under the parental roof Andrew Olson remained until after he had attained his majority. He learned the trade of a cabinet-finisher in his native land, and it has since been his life work. He is an experienced and expert workman, and well capable of filling the responsible position which he has held since 1875, a period of seventeen consecutive years. He is ever watchful over the interests of his company, attends carefully to every detail of business, and has the entire confidence and respect of his employers.

At Rockford, in 1876, Mr. Olson led to the marriage altar Miss Christina Hedland, who was born in Sweden in 1858, and came with her parents to the United States, the family locating in Rockford, where the death of her father occurred. His wife is still living at an advanced age. They were both members of the First Lutheran Church of this city. With that congregation our subject and his estimable wife also hold membership.

In politics, Mr. Olson is a supporter of Republican principles, and while he feels an interest in political affairs, has never sought or desired official preferment for himself. He is public-spirited and progressive, manifesting a commendable interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the community, its growth and its upbuilding. Mr. and Mrs. Olson rank high in the circles of society in which they move, and have a commodious and fine home at No. 1202, Seventh Street, which is the abode of hospitality. Unto this worthy couple were born live children, four of whom are yet living, two sons and two daughters; Edward II., George II., Edna R. and Della R. By his own efforts, Mr. Olson has worked his way upward, and has now a comfortable competence.

UGUSTUS DEVILLO HALE, an enterprising farmer residing on section 6, Bonus Township, is a representative of one of the honored pioneer families of Boone His father and grandfather, both of whom bore the name of Oliver Hale, were natives of Tompkins, Delaware County, N. Y., where the great-grandfather, a native of New Hampshire, had settled in an early day. The grandfather served in the Commissary Department during the Revolutionary War. He was a farmer and spent his entire life in the town of Tompkins. Under the parental roof, Oliver Hale, Jr., was reared to manhood, and engaged in agricultural pursuits and stockraising. It was before the days of railroads, and he drove his stock to market in Philadelphia and New York.

In 1836, with his wife and three children, he came to Illinois, making his first location in Ottawa, whence he came to Boone County with oxteams. At that time the land was all owned by the Government, and had not yet been surveyed. There were four log cabins where Belvidere now stands, and no other buildings were in sight, and the nearest settler north was thirty-one miles distant. Deer and other kinds of wild game were seen in abundance. Mr. Hale purchased a tract of Government land four miles northeast of Belvidere, and their first home was a double log cabin, covered with shakes. The floor was made of puncheons, and the chimney of clay and sticks. They bore all the experiences and hardships of pioneer life, had to go eighty miles to mill and market, and in consequence were forced to live mostly off the products of their farm. Mr. Hale engaged in the cultivation of his land for many years, and then removed to Belvidere, where he spent eight years, after which he returned to the home farm, where the remainder of his days were passed, his death occurring in December, 1885. His wife was in her maidenhood Miss Susan Bradt. She was born in Chenango County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Augustus and Anna (Evans) Bradt, the former a native of Holland. Her death occurred in 1879. She was the mother of seven children, two of whom are yet living, Augustus and Catherine M.

Our subject was born in Tompkins, Delaware County, N. Y., June 22, 1831, and was only five years of age when he came with his parents to Illinois. He has witnessed the entire growth and development of Boone County. His education was acquired in the pioneer schools. The first one taught in the township where he resided was held in the shade of a burr oak tree, and later in a log building, where the seats were made of slabs set up on wooden pins, while a writing desk was formed of a board laid on long pins which had been driven into the wall. Mr. Hale was early inured to the arduous task of developing a farm from the wild land, and has never left the old homestead, the title of which his father secured from the Government. The farm now comprises two hundred and forty acres of highly improved land, and the rich and fertile fields yield him a golden tribute in return for his care and cultivation.

On the 13th of December, 1855, Mr. Hale was joined in wedlock with Mary Hull, who was born in Putnam County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Walter B. and Martha (Hill) Hull. Unto them were born six children: Abigail Adelia, Addie C., John P., Frank D., Meeker O. B. and Fred N. The mother was called to her final rest on the 1st of April. 1889, and her death was deeply regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Mr. Hale is a Republican in politics, having been one of its stalwart supporters since the organization of the party. Few have longer resided in this community than our subject, who for more than half a century has resided upon the farm which is yet his home. As an honored pioneer he well deserves representation in this volume, and it is with pleasure that we record his sketch.

AMES F. RAMSEY. The results of industry and undagging perseverance are shown in the life of the above-named gentleman, who owns, and is living retired upon, a good estate in Caledonia Township, Boone County. A brief outline of the labors in which Mr. Ramsey has been engaged, will be of interest to our readers. He was born in Ohio, in 1823, and is the son of James Ramsey, who came from Scotland when a young man, and immediately located in Ohio, where he was married to Hannah Richardson, and moved to and settled in Boone County, Ill., in 1838.

The parental family of our subject included ten children, all of whom lived to mature years, and of whom four sons and two daughters are still living. Three of the brothers of our subject were volunteer soldiers in the late war, two of them serving during the entire struggle. The father departed this life in Manchester, and his good wife, who survived him many years, died June 18, 1889, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years.

The original of this sketch was married in 1849, in Ohio, to Abigail Watts, who was born in that State in 1829. Her parents, James and Anna Watts, died when Mrs. Ramsey was an infant. By her union with our subject, five children have been born, namely: George, who married Mary Clement, of Wisconsin, is station agent at Jackson Junction, and has one son and one daughter;

Edwin, who married Ella Barmore, of Manchester Township, lost his wife in February, 1891, after having become the father of three children: Stella, Nettie and Leah; Charles, who is station agent at Babeock, Wis., married Mand Henderson, and has had born to him one son, Guy, and a daughter, Grace; Bina, now Mrs. John Elliott, of Morgan Park, Ill., is preparing for the Baptist ministry; Carrie married John Howell, of Capron, who is the foreman of the creamery.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey started in life empty-handed and, being blessed with health, by industry and good judgment have accumulated a handsome property, and are the possessors of a quarter-section of land, under good cultivation, in Floyd County, lowa; one hundred and ten acres in Caledonia Township, this county, and also a pleasant two-story house and one acre of ground in Clinton, Wis. They are members in good standing of the Congregational Church, and our subject, in politics, is an unswerving Republican.

SAIAH J. SHELDEN. No location on the continent excels that of Northern Illinois for the encouragement offered to agriculturists in supplying the means for their success. With a delightful climate, fertile soil and every facility for transportation, it is not strange that the farming population has increased with a rapidity seldom witnessed elsewhere, and that examples of success are very numerous.

Among the farmers who have become prosperous through industry and energy, may be mentioned the gentleman whose name introduces these paragraphs, and whose position is among the most influential agriculturists of Seward Township, Winnebago County. He was born in Granger, Medina County, Ohio, October 17, 1829, and is the son of David and Anna Shelden, of whom further mention is made in the sketch of G. G. Shelden, presented on another page.

In the youth of our subject, the biographical writer finds little of especial importance to chronicle, his time being devoted to the usual routine of school studies and farm labor. He was married

May 19, 1853, in Granger, Ohio, to Miss Orenda Phelps, who was born October 1, 1831, in the town of Kent, Portage County, Ohio. Her parents were Silas and Clarinda (Williams) Phelps, the father being a native of Connecticut, and the son of Josiah and Roxina Phelps, natives of New England, and descended from English forefathers. Mrs. Shelden is one of ten children, of whom six are now living (1892). Two brothers were in the war. Silas in the Forty-fifth, and Will in the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry.

The record of the children of our subject and his estimable wife is as follows: Silas J., born March 2, 1855, is married to Lavina Everette, and has one child, Charles Jay; Elnora died October 18, 1859, aged nine months; William D., born July 29, 1860, married Miss Lillie Stockburger, a school teacher, has one child, Verna May, and lives in Seward; Charles L. born November 5, 1863, married Miss Watie Everette, a school teacher, and has one child, Clare Isaiah; Mattie O., born April 20, 1867, is the wife of Hunter Marks, and resides in Seward; Sarah A. died May 17, 1891, aged twenty-one years and three months; Edward J., born March 13, 1872, and Frank L., July 20, 1874, are still with their parents.

After his marriage, our subject came to Winnebago County, where, with his hard-earned cash, he bought a tract of land comprising about one hundred and ten acres. His labors being crowned with success, he continued to add to the original purchase until he acquired six hundred and forty acres, of which he subsequently sold two hundred and forty acres to his sons on easy terms. He still owns two hundred and forty acres, and eleven lots in West Rockford, and devotes much time and attention to Holstein eattle. The high grade of dairy cows in this section of country is largely due to his untiring exertions in introducing that excellent breed of bovine. His success in that department of agriculture is worthy of special mention. He also breeds the finest of Norman horses.

Mr. Shelden is a Republican, but never meddles in political affairs, although at the request of his fellow-citizens he has filled several local offices for years, and his services have been efficient in the best interests of the community. He and his wife are highly esteemed throughout the community, and although their attention is largely devoted to home cares and duties, they nevertheless lind time to aid in church and charitable work, Mrs. Shelden being a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mattic and Sarah were graduates of Winnebago High School, and taught school many terms.

AMES WALSH is one of the prosperous and substantial business men of Rockford, Ill., and is interested indirectly with his sons in general merchandising. He is also proprietor of the Rockford Bottling Works at No. 408 South Main Street. The sons are engaged in the general grocery business and are quartered at No. 402 Elm Street, where they have a lucrative business.

Mr. Walsh came to Rockford in the spring of 1858 and, with the exception of a few years, has been a resident of this city ever since. In 1869, he formed a partnership with Michael Joyce and they continued in business together until March, 1882, since which time Mr. Walsh has had his sons in business with him. Mr. Walsh has been frugal and industrious, has made money, and is owner of some excellent property in this city, including the business house at No. 402 Elm Street and a fine residence at No. 719 South Winnebago Street.

Our subject came here from the Keystone State, and was but fifteen years of age when he left his native place, County Tipperary, Ireland, and came to the United States. He was born in 1838, and when about ten years of age, his father, Patrick Walsh, and his mother, Bridget Lubey, both died. The father died on the 8th of February, 1849, when only fifty-seven years of age, and the mother followed him to the grave in May of the same year, when fifty-five years. They were both life-long members of the Catholic Church. The father was a native of Walshbog, County Tipperary, Ireland, the same being named in honor of the family, and was a carpenter by trade. Of the eight children born to this union only one beside our subject is now living, Mary, wife of Thomas Slaterly, who was a prominent contractor and builder in Indiana, and who is now engaged in farming near Crawfordsville of that State, owning his farm of two hundred acres.

The original of this sketch was married, in Rockford, to Miss Mary Delaney, a native of County Tipperary, Ireland, born in 1842, and the daughter of Edward and Johanna (Tracy) Delaney, both of that county. There the father died when in the prime of life and when his daughter, Mrs. Walsh, the only one born to her parents, was but a small child. In 1856, she came with her mother to the United States and they made their home in West Chester, Chester County, Pa. until 1862; when they came to Rockford, Ill. In this city the mother's death occurred in March, 1891, when seventy-eight years of age. She, as well as her husband, was a life-long member of the Catholic Church.

Of the seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Walsh, two are deceased: William, Sr., and William, Jr., both of whom died young. Those living are Thomas F. and James P., in the grocery business at No. 402 Elm Street and successful young men; John J., book-keeper for his father in the bottling works; Alice C., now at school at St. Joseph's Academy, Dubuque, Iowa, and M. Bessie, at home, going to St. Mary's School. All the family are members of St. Mary's Catholic Church. Mr. Walsh is a Democrat in national politics, and his first Presidential vote was east for Stephen A. Douglas.

EYMOUR FULLER, who is prominently identified with the agricultural interests of Flora Township, Boone County, was born in Shaftsbury. Bennington County, Vt., July 8, 1817. His father, Solomon Fuller, it is thought, was born in Connecticut and followed the life of a farmer. He removed to Shaftsbury, Vt., and after residing there a number of years, in 1835 took up his abode in Wyoming County, N. Y., and, purchasing a farm in the town of White, made that place his home until his decease at the advanced age of ninety-one years. His wife, prior to her marriage, was known as Persis Bennett; after the death of her husband she came to Illinois, and departed this life at the home of our subject, when in her eighty-third year.

Seymour Fuller, of this sketch, was eighteen years of age when his parents removed to the Empire State, where he was married and resided in Wyoming County until 1844, the date of his coming to Illinois. He was accompanied hither by his wife and two children, and came by teams to Buffalo, then by way of the Lakes to Chicago, where he purchased a team of horses and a wagon, which conveyed the family to this county. The country round about in that early day was very sparsely settled, but our subject determined to make this his future home, and consequently purchased eighty acres of land, which is now included in his present farm. His means being very limited at that time, he crected a small frame house in accordance with his means, in which his family lived comfortably for a number of years.

The lady to whom our subject was married in Wyoming County, N. Y., in 1840, was Eliza A. Mordoff; she was born in the above-named county, and was the daughter of James and Polly Mordoff. By her union with Mr. Fuller five children were born, James A., George H., Charles E., DeFay A., and May. She departed this life in November, 1885.

Our subject is now the proprietor of a splendid estate of two hundred and forty acres, which are well improved in every particular, and bring him in good returns. In early life, he voted the Whig ticket, but since the formation of the Republican party has always been found in its ranks.

OBERT PARKIHLL. The portrait on the opposite page perpetuates the features of one of the well-known and enterprising business men of Belvidere. For about thirty years he has been a coal dealer of this city, and has built np an excellent trade which has constantly increased from the beginning. Fair and upright in all his dealings, and courteous in his treatment of his customers, he has thus secured a liberal patronage, of which he is well worthy.

A native of Renfrewshire, Scotland, Mr. Parkhill was born March 18, 1826, and belongs to an old Scotch family. His grandfather and father, both of whom bore the name of John, were natives of Ayrshire. The latter was for some years foreman in a cotton factory in Renfrewshire. In 1818, he bade good-bye to his old home, and took passage on the "Ann Harley," which sailed from Glasgow on the 3d of April, and reached New York on the 10th of May. He was accompanied by six of his children. His wife, whose maiden name was Margaret Smith, was born in Avrshire, and died in Renfrewshire before the emigration of the family to America. Mr. Parkhill went at once to Rhode Island, where he was employed in a cotton factory until 1853, when he came to Hinois and made his home with his children until his death. His last days were spent in the home of a daughter, in Boone County. The six children were Elizabeth, John, Robert, Agnes, Margaret and Jen-

Robert Parkhill, of this sketch, may well be called a self-made man. At the early age of nine years, he commenced life for himself, working in a cotton factory, where he was employed with his father until he crossed the briny deep. He then secured work in a mill at Providence, R. I., and there remained until the year 1855, when he came to Boone County, and then, in company with his brother, purchased a tract of land. For three years he engaged in farming, after which he went to Rockford, and was employed for about three years in the shops of the N. C. Thompson Manufacturing Company. He next came to Belvidere. and embarked in the business in which he is now engaged, and which he has followed continuously since.

In 1854, Mr. Parkhill was united in marriage to Jane Cunningham, who was born in Lanarkshire, Scotland, and died in Belvidere in 1887, leaving three children: Margaret, Charles E. and Marietta, wife of Charles M. Peale. In religious belief, Mr. Parkhill is a Presbyterian, and his wife was a member of the same church. He has been a stanch supporter of the Republican party since its organization, and has filled various offices of honor and trust. He was a member of the first Board of Ald-men after the organization of the city, was for some years a member of the City School Board and has represented his township on the County Board of Supervisors. He is now a member of the County Central Committee of the Republican party, and for some years was its Chairman. His public duties he has ever discharged with promptness and fidelity, thereby winning the commendation of all concerned.

P. B. JONES. The history of every community is made up, so far as its more interesting features are concerned, of the events and transactions of the lives of its prominent, representative citizens. In any worthy history of Boone County, an outline of the life of the subject of the present sketch should not fail to be given, together with a sketch of the family. Mr. Jones was born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., June 6, 1854, and is a son of J. P. Jones, of Cherry Valley.

Our subject received a good practical education in the schools of Belvidere and finished in Rockford. He remained home until twenty-three years of age, but began fighting his own way in life at the age of twenty-one. He purchased a one-half interest in his father's farm and in other ways demonstrated that he had much energy and push about him. He was married, on the 31st of December, 1878, to Miss Elvira Howard, a native of Cherry Valley, Ill., born November 7, 1861, and a daughter of Wesley and Elvira (Brown) Howard. Mrs. Jones was well educated in Evanston, Ill., and was subsequently in a convent in Chicago.

Since starting out for himself, our subject has been engaged in breeding Hereford cattle in connection with agricultural pursuits and is one of the most successful stockmen and farmers in the county. He has one of the finest residences in his section. All his farming operations are conducted in a manner which clearly proves his efficiency as a tiller of the soil, and as a stockman his reputation is firmly established. He usually has about seventy-five head of choice Hereford cattle and keeps nothing but full-blooded stock. Besides having a fine herd of Herefords, our subject makes a specialty of breeding trotting horses, and owns some most promising stock in this line. At the head of his herd of Herefords is "Prince Edward the II," No. 14,117. At some of the most noteworthy exhibits of blooded stock, this animal has taken first prize. In trotting stock, Mr. Jones keeps standard-bred horses, and an animal coming from the J. P. B. Jones farm is sufficient guarantee of its pedigree and qualities generally.

Mr. Jones is a member of Blue Lodge No. 173, of Cherry Valley, A. F. & A. M.; Kishwaukee Chapter No. 90, R. A. M., of Belvidere; Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T., of Rockford; Cherry Valley Lodge, I. O. O. F.; Vesper Lodge, K. P.; Cherry Valley Camp No. 277, M. W. A.; and the National Union, of Belvidere. He votes with the Republican party. His rural home is the abode of domestic happiness and the center of true hospitality.

SEORGE SANDS, one of the well-known and prosperous farmers of Boone County, Ill. is a descendant of English ancestors, whose principal occupations were as merchants. However, they finally drifted into tillers of the soil and that has been the occupation our subject has pursued all his life. He was originally from New York State, born in Hancock, Delaware County, October 7, 1818, and his parents, Samuel and Artemedia (Covey) Sands, were natives of the same State, the father born in the same county. Samuel was engaged in the lumber business for many years, also followed merchandising, and in connection carried on a small farm for many years. In 1838, he sold out and came via the canal and Lakes to Chicago, and then, with the four horses brought with him, he and his family pushed on to this county. They first settled in Bonus Township, and cultivated the soil for many years. The father made his home with his children during the latter part of his life, but died at his own home when eighty-nine years of age. The mother died in Placer County, Cal., when seventy-eight years of age. Samuel Sands was a son of George and Jemima (Smith) Sands, both natives of the Empire State, who died in Delaware County of that State when well along in years.

Our subject was one of seven children, four sons and three daughters, and remained with his parents until twenty-one years of age, working on the farm for his father. After reaching his majority, he branched out for himself, and after coming to the West, in 1838, he took up three hundred and fifty acres of Government land and began making improvements. On the 18th of January, 1844, he was married to Miss Betsey Sands, a native of Tompkins Township, Delaware County, N. Y., born April 2, 1826, and a sister of Frederick Sands (see sketch). Mrs. Sands' father was the very first settler on Bonus Prairie, Boone County, Ill., and experienced in every way the trials and privations incident to early settlement. He was born July 8, 1801, and his wife was born in 1802.

To Mr. and Mrs. Sands were born seven ehildren, only three now living: George II., a native of Bonus Township, Boone County, married Miss Esther D. Ricks, and has one daughter. He is in Idaho and is engaged in the stock business; Clarence O. was also born in this county, and married Miss Martha Cooper, who bore him one son. He is also engaged in the stock business in Idaho. Edward F., born in the same place, married Miss Clara Susie Ricks, who died January 20, 1890, leaving a little girl. Edward is also in the stock business in Idaho, and the boys have a thousand acres of ranch land.

After marriage, our subject settled in a log house, 16x20 feet, built by his own hands on the Government land, and there he lived for ten years, all of his children having been born there. In 1850, like thousands of others, he was filled with a great desire to reach the gold regions of California and went overland with a company. He remained there for eighteen months, and then returned by way of the 1sthmus to his home in Illinois. In 1852, he returned to the Pacific coast, and for two years was engaged in mining and merchandising. He then sold out and returned to Boone County, Ill., and sold his old home in Bonus Township. After this he bought his present farm of about two hundred acres which was then mostly wild and uncultivated, and this has since been transformed into one of the finest tracts of land in the county. His home is very pleasant and cheerful and is presided over by that noted housekeeper, his worthy wife. Mr. Sands is engaged in general farming, but stock-raising is his principal occupation. He is also interested in the stock ranches owned by his sons in Idaho. They first thought of locating in that State in 1883, and in March of that year Mr. Sands and his sons took some blooded stock with them, a dairy outfit for one hundred cows, and then bought a few hundred head after reaching that State (then a territory). Mr. Sands sold out his stock and returned to Illinois, leaving his boys to conduct further operations there. They are now classed among the largest ranchmen of the Great West.

Mrs. Sands, who is a most intelligent and refined lady, was elected School Director in her township, the first time in the history of the county that a lady has filled that position. She is also a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in which she has held office, and she and her husband are members of the Patrons of Husbandry No. 2,349, to which they have belonged ever since its organization. Mr. Sands voted the Democratic ticket once, and since then he has been a most earnest supporter of Republican principles. He voted for Gen. Fremont, was with that noted man in the mountains, and returned to the East by way of the Isthmus with him. His sons are all Republicans and bright business men in the young State of Idaho.

ILLIAM MALTBIE ROWLAND was born in Fairfield, Conn., June 25, 1796. His father and grandfather were honored lawyers. His grandmother was Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Fitch, Governor of Connecticut (1754-66). He himself read law, but relinquished it for a merantile life, into which he entered at an early age in the city of New York. He married Clara Leonard, daughter of Rev. Henry Wight, D. D., of Bristol, R. I., a graduate of Harvard, and a soldier of the Revolution, as was also her maternal grandfather, Col. Zephaniah Leonard, of Taunton, Mass. While still young, Mr. Rowland removed to Augusta, Ga., where he was first a merchant and later was connected with the Iron Steamboat Company, a corporation running a line of steamers between Augusta and Savannah.

During his residence in Augusta, Mr. Rowland was an honored citizen, and was vigorous and prompt in support of all measures for the public good. Soon after the repeal of the Missouri Compromise in 1854, the Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, then Member of Congress, informally received the leading citizens of Augusta. Long his warm friend, Mr. Rowland alone did not join in the congratulations offered Mr. Stephens, but assured him that the repeal would be most calamitous to the country at large, and especially to the South.

In 1855, our subject removed with his family to Rockford, Ill. Here he lived until his death, April 29, 1869, leaving in the hearts of those who knew him the memory of those virtues which most adorn our human nature. In 1871, Mrs. Rowland and her daughters removed to Chicago, where she died December 26, 1880. Two sons still reside in Rockford: Wilham L. was graduated at Yale College in 1852, and has been Librarian of the Public Library since its establishment in 1872; and Robert C., a soldier in the Union army, and since the war a well-known druggist.

EORGE S. BROWN bears the distinction of being the oldest living native-born resident now making his home within the confines of Rockford Township, Winnebago County. He is highly honored for the active part he has taken in developing its resources and in furthering its material prosperity. He is the fortunate possessor of large and splendidly cultivated lands in this and other townships, and on his homestead is successfully engaged in farming pursuits.

The subject of this sketch, whose portrait will be noticed on the opposite page, was born in the city of Rockford on June 23, 1839, to Mowry and Lucy (Pease) Brown. When an infant of one year, his parents removed from the city to a farm in Owen Township, where he grew to mature years. His education was obtained in this district and he attended the first school taught in the first schoolhouse ever creeted in Owen Township, Mercy Nichols, who afterward became the wife of William McKindley, being his teacher. Remaining on the old homestead until reaching his twentieth year, our subject commenced to learn the trade of a carpenter, which occupation he followed until the year 1865. He was very industrious and saved his earnings and in the year above mentioned was enabled to buy one hundred acres of land on section 35, Owen Township, paying one-third cash for his place. He at once commenced the career of a successful farmer, and devoted his attention closely to cultivating his place.

On that farm our subject resided until 1881, when, having purchased an estate of seventy acres on North Main Street, near the city of Rockford, he removed to this place and has since been a resident here. The original one hundred acres still remain in his possession, and besides that he owns one hundred and forty-four acres on sections 25 and 36, of the same township, and another tract of one hundred and thirty-one and one-half acres on sections 17 and 48, Guilford Township. These several fine estates Mr. Brown rents to tenants and is in receipt therefrom of a profitable income. When the "boom" of 1890 "struck" the city of Rockford, he sold sixty-live acres of his Rockford farm, retaining five acres for his home.

Mr. Brown's home is made pleasant and his life is cheered by the presence of his amiable wife, with whom he was united in marriage in 1868. Jennie Rogers, as she was formerly known, was born in England and came to America with her parents, John and Jane Rogers, when a child of five years. She was reared in Guilford Township, this county, receiving her education in the district schools. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Brown there have been born eight children, namely: William, Flora, Edith, Lucy, George, Jessie, Ruby and Norma. Flora married Fred W. Johns. Mrs. Brown is a member in good standing of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Brown easts his Presidential vote with the Republican party, never swerving from its principles at any time. Their pleasant and attractive home is the frequent resort of the friends whom they have gathered around them during their residence here, and by whom they will be kindly remembered long after they have departed hence.

HARLES E. BROWN. This gentleman, who owned a fine farm of sixty-one and one-half acres, located one-half mile from Rockford, during the "boom" of 1890 sold all of his tract but seven acres, on which he is residing at the present time. He is also the proprietor of an excellent estate of three hundred and twenty-five acres in Owen Township, Winnebago County, which is operated by his son.

September 15, 1841, the birth of our subject occurred in Jersey County, this State. He was one of eleven children born to Mowry and Lucy (Pease) Brown, the former a native of Rhode Island. His grandfather, Joseph Brown, followed farming pursuits in his native State (Rhode Island), where he passed the greater part of his life, although his death occurred at the home of the father of our subject in Illinois. Mowry Brown was reared and educated in his native town and, when choosing an occupation for himself, learned the carpenter's trade, soon after which he came to the Prairie State, and located near Alton, following his trade until 1838.

At that date Mowry Brown made his advent into Winnebago County, when most of the land in this section was owned by the Government, and the city of Rockford was little more than a hamlet. He prosecuted his trade in Rockford for a time, then entering a tract of land in what is now Owen Township, erected thereon a log cabin and made that place his home for a number of years. As there were no railroads in this locality, and Chicago was the nearest market, all the farm products were conveyed thither by means of ox-teams. Mr. Brown carried on the carpenter's trade, at the same time superintending the improvement of his new home where he resided until his death.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Lucy Pease. She was born in Medina, N. Y., and now resides on the old homestead in Owen Township. She was on a visit in Jersey County, this State, when our subject was born, and as he was an infant when his mother returned to Winnebago County, he very naturally feels that he is a native of this place. He has been a permanent resident of this county and has witnessed its entire growth and development. In his early days he attended the pioneer log schoolhouse, which was furnished in the most primitive manner. On attaining his seventeenth year, in company with his brother George, he rented a tract of land in Owen Township and engaged in farming. They also purchased a threshing-machine which they operated with extraordinary success for a number of years, and continued to work together until about six years previous to the marriage of our subject. After celebrating that important event, Mr. Brown became a fireman on an engine running on the Atlanta & Great Western Railroad, and was thus engaged for a twelvemonth, when he located on a tract of land which he had purchased in Owen Township. He cultivated the soil for four years, then, disposing of his estate, was employed in manufacturing brick in company with his father and brother, operating together for nine years.

Believing agriculture to be the most profitable business in which he could engage, Mr. Brown purchased two hundred and forty aeres of land in Owen Township, where he cultivated the soil for six years, and then became proprietor of the sixtyone and one-half acres located one-half mile from Rockford and which has been mentioned above.

December 27, 1864, Mr. Brown was married to Miss Frances Mary Burritt, a native of Auburn, Cayuga County, N. Y. She was one of seven children born to Charles and Laura (Rennington) Burritt, the former a native of Bridgeport, Conn. Her paternal grandparents, Eben and Polly Burritt, were natives of the Nutmeg State, whence they removed to New York State and located in the town of Sennett, where the grandfather bought a tract of timber land and followed farming pursuits until his demise.

In early manhood, Charles Burritt, father of Mrs. Brown, removed to New York State, where he purehased a farm in Ira, Cayuga County, and there resided for a few years. Later, disposing of his estate, he embarked in the hardware business in Weedsport, and remained thus engaged until 1855, when he came to Illinois and settled on a tract of partially-improved land in Owen Township, Winnebago County. There he continued to cultivate his land and improve the farm for many years. He departed thus life at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brown. His wife, whose maiden name was Laura Remington, was, it is thought, a native of Connectient. She removed to New York with her parents at an early day, and died on the home farm in Owen Township, Winnebago County. With her husband, she was a faithful member of the Second Congregational Church.

The six children born to Mr. Brown and his estimable wife are named as follows: Harry W., Nellie L., Mabel F., Mowry C., Ralph E. and Maude E. Harry W. married Miss Fannie M. Johns and they are the parents of two children: Orville and Aurilla. In political matters, Mr. Brown affiliates with the Republican party and is known as one of the most public-spirited citizens of the community He and his wife are devoted members of the Christian Union Church and are people of high social standing in Rockford and vicinity.

In connection with this sketch will be found a portrait of Mr. Brown, on another page.

HOMAS SCOTT, who does an extensive business as a dealer in coal and wood in Rockford, his office being located on East State near Bridge Street, is of English birth. He is a native of Kent County, England. His paternal grandfather, Robert Scott, Sr., was born in Norfolk, England, but after his marriage removed to Epsom, in Surrey County, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was a shopkeeper, and died when past the age of eighty years. Robert Scott, Jr., father of our subject, was born in Epsom, and was a small merchant or shopkeeper. He spent much of his life in Aldington, Kent County, and both he and his wife passed away at about the age of eighty years. The latter's maiden name was Charlotte Simmons, and she was one of sixteen children, all born in Kent County. Both Mr. and Mrs. Scott were members of the Episcopal Church and were worthy and respected people. Only two of the children are yet living: Thomas and Mrs. Tapley, of Racine, Wis., and they are also the only ones who came to the United States.

Thomas Scott was married in his native county to Miss Mary Tunbridge, who was born and reared in Kent County, and came with her husband to America. They left London on the last day of March, 1850, and after a voyage of six weeks on a sailing-vessel, landed in New York, whence they came to the West. Mrs. Scott died of consumption at her home in Rockford, in 1864. She was a true and faithful wife and a member of the Episeopal Church. Mr. Scott has been again married, his second union being with Margaret Williams, who was born in Canada, of English descent. Her death occurred in this city in 1882, and her loss was deeply mourned by her husband and many friends, for she was a worthy woman, possessing many excellencies of character. Miss Frances A. Suthern, an intelligent and cultured young lady, a niece of Mr. Scott, has made her home with him for ten years and is now acting as his house-

Mr. Scott came to Rockford in 1862, in connection with the railroad now known as the Northwestern. He had been in the employ of the company since August, 1852, having become a railroad builder in Chicago. He shipped the first load of coal sent West of Chicago on the Northwestern, and since that time has been more or less closely connected with the railroad interests. He has paid the company more than $300,000 for freight, which shows that his success has been excellent. He began dealing in wood and coal in 1863, at his present location, on a small scale, but as his trade increased, he likewise increased his facilities, and now has a storage capacity for five thousand tons of coal. He also has a large wood supply which he cuts from his timbered tracts in Sauk County, Wis., and now handles a large amount of fuel, in fact, is doing a very extensive business in this line, and is one of the prosperous merchants of the city.

Mr. Scott may truly be called a self-made man, for all that he has he has made through his own efforts. Since coming to America, he has made four trips back to his native home in England, but while he enjoys visiting that country he would not change his home in America for one in the land of his birth. He is a public-spirited and progressive man, a wide-awake and enterprising merchant and one of the valued citizens of Rockford.

EWITT C. CADY. Among the prominent and successful agriculturists and stock-raisers of Winnebago County, we take pleasure in introducing to our readers the worthy subject of this sketch, one of the pioneers and representative citizens of Manchester Township, Mr. Cady was born in Oneida County, N. Y., in 1828, the son of Alvah and Catherine (Brookins) Cady, his father a native of the Old Bay State. The grandparents, Chester and Mary A. (Nichols) Cady, were originally from Massachusetts, but after the birth of all of their children, four sons and four daughters, they removed to New York State and there passed the remainder of their days, the grandfather dying at the age of eighty-four and the grandmother at the age of seventy-eight years.

The marriage of Alvah Cady and Catherine Brookins occurred in Oneida County, N. Y., and when their son Dewitt C. was three years of age, or in 1831, they removed to near Tyrone, Stenben County, that State, and purchased land. Their tract was covered with heavy timber, but Mr. Cady, who was a strong man and a great worker, went resolutely to work to clear the land. About this time, many Eastern people were emigrating Westward and Mr. and Mrs. Cady determined to try their luck with others.

In 1836, with their five children, this ambitious couple pushed into Illinois and took up a quarter-section in the northwest corner of Boone County, all timber and marsh land. They resided there until after the war, and in 1867 sold out and moved to South Haven, Mich. There Mrs. Cady died in 1880, when eighty years of age. Mr. Cady survived his wife ten years and died at the home of his son in 1890, when ninety years of age. They were the parents of six sons and one daughter: Francis R., at South Haven, Mich.; Sylvester B., who died at home when twenty years of age; D. C. (our subject); Chester C., a farmer and mason at Waverly, Iowa; Mary E., Mrs. Cornell, of Manchester Township; William H., who died at Iowa Falls, Iowa, in 1891, when forty-eight years of age; and Jay, a farmer in Michigan.

Alvah Cady and wife were the first settlers in Manchester Township, having removed there November 10, 1836. They came from New York by Erie Canal and Buffalo, starting in September, and from Buffalo to Chicago on the old steamer "Pennsylvania," Capt. Cotton, and John Smith, mate. There was not a public wharf in Chicago then, nor a public landing-place, and they had to pay twenty-five cents a hundred for all goods landed. They crossed the Chicago River on a rope ferry and all other streams were forded. They paid $20 for a team to take their goods to Downer's Grove, and there the family remained with an uncle, Hiram, while Alvah Cady and his brother started on foot for the Rock River country, with only the Indian trails to follow. They came to Gen. Brown's place near Roseoe, and later returned for the family and goods with an ox-team and wagon belonging to the latter.

Their first stopping place was St. Charles, where Mr. Cady paid $1 for one hundred friction matches, the first he had ever seen, and about one-half of which were worthless. They stalled in the mud on had to remain in the woods all night, being screnaded during that time by prairie wolves. They tried to cross the Kiskwaukee River at Belvidere on the new bridge not yet finished, and had a narrow escape from going into the stream. The mother was on foot and blocked the wagon wheel, or the team and load would have fallen into the water. The next stop was made at Drakes, near Beaver Creek, and the next place was Gen. Brown's.

After much trouble, Mr. Cady selected a claim, and in one day erected a log cabin, Gen. Brown furnishing boards from the nearest sawmill for the floor and roof and for beds. The first school in the Township of Manchester was during the winter of 1837–38, which Mrs. Cady taught in her own log cabin, the pupils being her own children and Gen. Brown's. During the first winter, Mr. Cady worked for wages to support his family, and in addition cut and split enough rails to fence ten acres, his wife and three eldest sons setting up the rails. Thus by the hard work and energy of these sturdy pioneers were made possible the pleasant homes of to-day.

In those pioneer times, it required a month to get a letter from New York, and twenty-five cents to get it out of the postoffice. The nearest postoffice was Belvidere, twenty-five miles distant. Mr. Cady, learning that there was a letter for him at the office, went nine miles to borrow the necessary twenty-five cents, then walked to Belvidere, and secured the letter. Opening it, he found it was from a party in Galena requesting his vote. Had the writer been present, it is probable that there would have been one less office-seeker, at least so Mr. Cady said. In the winter of 1837-38, he walked to Southport (now Kenosha), a distance of sixty-five miles, in one day, and two days later returned home, bringing with him some leather with which to make the children's shoes for the winter.

When twenty-eight years of age, our subject married Miss Lavina Hill, of Boone County, and they have resided on their present farm since 1867. During the late war, Mr. Cady enlisted in Company II. Twelfth Illinois Cavalry in 1863, and his brother William, and cousin, Horace D. Cady, enlisted at the same time. Our subject served until the close of the war and was mustered out at Houston, Tex., in 1866. He then returned to his home and bought the farm he now owns the following year.

Mr. and Mrs. Cady have lost two children: Alice M., who died in 1862, when nearly two years of age, and Sylvester B., whose death occurred in 1868, when eleven years of age, the result of being kicked by a horse. They have five sons and one daughter living: Herbert J., a farmer, who resides in Rock County, Wis., married Miss Blanch Bebee, of Manehester Township; Edward, a carriage-maker of Kalamazoo, Mich., married Miss Alvira Haines, of Michigan; Ray, a young man of twenty-three, is a farmer; Minnie is at home; Wayne is a young man of eighteen years; and Ross, a youth of lifteen, is quite a farmer with his father.

Mr. Cady does general farming and is also somewhat of a stock-raiser, having some good horses on his place, and raises all the cereals but wheat. He has ever been a Republican in politics. He is a member of the Anti-Horse Thief Association, and the L. H. D. Crane Post, No. 52, G. A. R., of Beloit.

NDREW G. NELSON. A picture of the grocery business of Rockford would be incomplete without a space on the canvas being devoted to the name of Nelson. Mr. Nelson came to Rockford in December, 1869, when ten years of age, and for some time was with the well-known firm of McCormack & Johnson, oatmeal merchants of this city. In the spring of 1888, he began business for himself at No. 311 Kishwaukee Street, and soon built up a lucrative trade, the same increasing to such an extent that he was obliged to move into larger and better quarters. He is now located at No. 413 Seventh Street, has a business house 65x23 feet, and the trade he enjoys is unquestionably one of the most successful of its line in the city, and from its very inception has enjoyed a reputation consistent with its management. All that is handled is selected with the greatest care, and is sold at moderate prices. He has seven employes constantly at work.

Mr. Nelson was born in Sweden, February 18, 1859, and in 1869 he came with his mother and his brothers and sisters to the United States to join his father who had crossed over the previous year. The first of the family to come to the United States was an uncle of our subject's, Peter Heiberg, and his family, formerly of Rockford but now residing at St. Peter, Minn.

Our subject's parents, Peter and Hannah (Christofson) Nelson, are now residing in Rockford, at No. 1301 Seminary Street, and are about sixty years of age. Both hold membership in the Zion Lutheran Church. Of the nine children born to their union, part are in Minnesota and part here. They are as follows: Oscar, dealer in crockery at Duluth, Minn., married Miss Hilda Hulquist; August resides at home and is an engineer in the Mechanics' Furniture Factory in this city; Andrew G. (our subject); Tilda, wife of Charles Hult, now resides on a farm near Jackson, Minn.; Emma, wife of Erick Lagerquist, resides at No. 807 Second Avenue, Rockford; Albert, now of Brainard, Minn.; Fena L. resides at home and is a bookkeeper for her brother, A. G., and is an intelligent, wide-awake young lady; and Emel, with the sister in Jackson, Minn.

The immediate subject of this sketch was married in Rockford to Miss Ida M. Wargber, a native of Sweden, born in 1865, and the fruits of this union were three children: Cora A., Daisy M., and Enoch E. They have adopted one child, a boy named Albon. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson hold membership in the Emanuel Lutheran Church. Mr. Nelson is independent in politics. Mrs. Nelson's father, Gus Wargber, and family came to the United States about 1868, and are now residing at No. 504 Pope Street, this city. They are about sixty years of age and are worthy members of the First Lutheran Church.

UGENE HOVEY. He whose name is at the head of this sketch is one of the intelligent and progressive young farmers of Boone County and is residing on the place where he was born, October 23, 1849, and which is pleasantly located on section 33, Le Roy Township. He has proved himself efficient in promoting the growth and developing the resources of the old homestead and none is worthy of more esteem than is Mr. Hovey.

Rowell R. Hovey, the father of our subject, was born in New Hampshire, in 1817, and his father, E. H. Hovey, was born in New England, about 1796. The latter-named gentlemen was self-made in all that the term implies, was well informed on topics which interested his community, and, after emigrating to Illinois, was for many years Justice of the Peace. He was married in New England and moved West to Ohio about 1832, where he made his home a few years, and in 1835–36 came with a portion of his family of ten children to Illinois, and settled on a quarter-section of land which he had entered from the Government in an early day. He resided on the tract until his decease, in February, 1871, in his seventy-fifth year. His wife survived him for four of five years and died at a good old age, leaving a family of four sons and four daughters, and buried three children when young.

The direct progenitor of our subject was married, in 1841, to Miss Sarah Norris, who lived only one year after her marriage and departed this life in Le Roy Township. The lady who became his second wife was Fannie, daughter of Daniel Webster, of New York. She resided on the home which is the present property of our subject until the latter's marriage, when the mother removed to Capron.

The father of our subject with three of his brothers, during the gold excitement in California, went overland to that State and worked in the mines for nearly thirty-two years, during which time he made and lost a great deal of money, and when returning home was possessed of but little means. He departed this life in Capron, April 16, 1889, when seventy-two years of age. His wife, who survives him, has attained her three-score and ten years. Our subject has one brother, Theron R., who was born in 1847, and married Altee Draper, of Capron. To them has been born a son, Henry.

In February, 1881, our subject was married to Miss Sarah, daughter of John and Ann (Phillip) Lascelles, natives, respectively, of Ireland and Canada. The parents were residents of Chicago for many years, where the father was a merchant, which business he still carries on at Capron. To Mr. and Mrs. Hovey have been born three children: Roger M., John Earl and William T. Our subject, in May, 1881, purchased eighty acres of his present farm, which was the old homestead, and has since added thereto until his estate now comprises two hundred and seventy-five broad acres. He erected his large barn in 1884 and is still living in a house which was erected by his father a half-century ago. It is a solid, hewed-log fortress, but Mr. Hovey proposes to erect a comfortable and modern residence in the near future. In polities, he votes the Democratic ticket and, in social matters, is a Modern Woodman. With his wife he is a member of the Christian Church and gives liberally of his means to its support.

He of whom we write has been a hard-working and industrious man and has done his full share of pioneer work in opening up this section of country. He has been eminently worthy and useful to his community, and his neighbors and old friends unitedly bear testimony to his sterling worth, integrity and valuable services. His mother is still living in Capron, and can relate many an interesting tale of early settlement in Boone County.

INFIELD S. BILLINGS, senior member of the firm of Billings Bros., is one of the prominent business men of Rockford. The establishment, in which the firm earries on a large and lucrative business, is located at No. 812 South Main Street, is 22x104 feet in dimensions, and is stocked with a complete line of hardware, tinware, and the various other adjuncts of that line of business.

Prior to 1888, when the present firm was established, our subject conducted business for some four years under the title of Glassell & Billings, and by reliable dealings and judicious business methods, has gained an enviable reputation as a business man. The junior member of the firm, G. W. Billings, is a young man of great enterprise, and the brothers combine those qualities which fit them for success in any chosen department of labor.

The first eleven years in the life of our subject were passed in Montgomery County, N. Y., where he was born May 6, 1839. At the above-mentioned age, he came West with his parents, James and Temperance J. (Bunn) Billings, settling in Rock County, Wis. In 1863, the father and mother removed to Butler County, Iowa, where they now reside on the farm they seeured on first locating there. They have attained to advanced ages (1892), the father being seventy-eight and the mother seventy-six, and both are in good health.

The third son in a family of eleven children surviving of the thirteen born to James and Temperance Billings is the subject of this sketch. For a time after he came West in 1850, he lived in Rock County, Wis., but in 1865 removed to Grundy County, Iowa, where he was engaged as a farmer, and whence he removed to Rockford. In Rock County, Wis., he was united in marriage with Miss Amanda Snell, who was born in Montgomery County, N. Y., in 1843. She was a young woman when her parents, Charles and Naney (Lathers) Snell, removed from New York State to Rock County, Wis., settling on a farm, where the father died at the age of sixty-five. His wife afterward went to Nebraska, where she passed away at the age of sixty years.

Mrs. Amanda Billings died at her home in Grundy County, lowa, leaving one child, William D., who now lives in South Dakota. The wife and mother was a sincere Christian, identified with the Baptist Church, and a lady of culture and refinement, whose friends held her in high esteem. Although by no means an active worker in political matters, Mr. Billings is a sound Republican, and is careful to cast his ballot for the candidates of that party. Socially, he is connected with Lodge No. 366, R. A. M., at Rockford, and is prominently connected with the most important measures originated in behalf of the city.

HARLES A. LUNDVALL, a widely known and highly respected Swedish-American etitzen of Winnebago County, owns and operates a fine farm of one hundred and fifty-six acres on section 19, Guilford Township. There are good buildings, such as are seen upon a model farm; the fields are well tilled, and the neat appearance of the place indicates the thrift and enterprise of the owner. He has won success in his undertakings and is now numbered among the substantial citizens of the community.

Mr. Lundvall was born in Smoland, Sweden, on the 3d of May, 1850. His father is yet living at the age of three-score and ten years and is the owner of a large farm and store. His first wife died in 1865, when in the prime of life, after which Mr. Samuelson was a second time married. this union being with Miss Lena C. Samuelson, by whom he had two children, both now married and living in Sweden. Our subject is the second of four children born of the first union, three residing in this country; the other, Sophia, is the wife of N. P. Dahlburg, a farmer of Sweden. J. O. Lundvall is now living on a farm near Dayton, Iowa, and the other sister is the wife of P. Larson, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work.

Our subject spent his boyhood days in the land of his nativity and in the spring of 1867, when seventeen years of age, crossed the broad Atlantic to America. In Chicago, he led to the marriage altar Miss Augustina C. Swanson, who in 1868 came with her sister to this country from Sweden, Her sister Louisa is now living her native land. in Rockford, where they first located. parents are now deceased, both having been called to their final rest in Sweden. By the union of Mr. and Mrs. Lundvall have been born six children: Hulda R., Alice R., Abion S., Julia E., Henry L. and Charles E. The two eldest daughters have been educated in the Rockford Business College, and the family is one of which the parents may well be proud.

Our subject and his wife are prominent members of the First Lutheran Church of Rockford and take an active interest in its work. He has served as Trustee for many years and was a member of the building committee at the time when the elegant church edifice was erected. In politics, he is a Republican, but has never been an office-seeker. However, he has served as School Director for some years and the cause of education finds in him a warm friend. He gives his support to whatever is ealculated to benefit or improve the community or promote the general welfare, and is a valued eitizen of Guilford Township, highly respected by all. In connection with his other business interests, he owns eight acres of land, now included within the city limits of Rockford. It has been platted and is a very valuable property. He is also Secretary, Treasurer and Manager of the Skandia Brick Company, which employs about thirty-five hands and makes over three million bricks annually. He is interested in the Union Grocery Company, which has a capital stock of $25,000, and is a stockholder in the Skandia Furniture Company and the Rockford Manufacturing Company, also an active member and a stockholder in the Swedish Building and Loan Association.

LBERT F. BAXTER. We are pleased to present the name of a highly respected farmer, who resides in Spring Township, Boone County, and who is a native of this vicinity, his birth occurring December 10, 1855. His parents were John and Harriet (Smithson) Baxter, the father born in England, June 20, 1807. He was a farmer by occupation, and in 1832 left that country and after a voyage of seven weeks landed at Montreal, Canada. He made his home there for four years and in 1836 came to the States and for a twelvemonth resided in Chicago. At the expiration of that time, the elder Mr. Baxter came to Boone County and purchased forty acres which is included in the home farm. The estate included now, however, two hundred and eighty acres and is the joint possession of our subjeet and his mother.

John Baxter was a member of a family including five children, all of whom are deceased. His wife is a daughter of James and Elizabeth Smithson, of England, she being the eldest in a family of seven children.

The parents of our subject reared a family of ten children, namely: Jonas, Mary A., Emeline, William, John S., Eliza, Thomas M., Harriet E., Rosanna and Albert F. He was married, April 14, 1880, to Miss Ella Stillwell, who was born in Madison County, N. Y., and of their union have been born five children: Gertie M., John C., Fred C., Bert W. and an infant named Harry C. Mrs. Baxter is the daughter of Charles and Jane (Garlock) Stillwell, who make their home in Belvidere.

The father of our subject was in early life a Whig but during his last years voted the Prohibition ticket. He was an active worker in the Methodist Episcopal Church and for years was Class-Leader in that denomination. He was always a strong advocate of temperance measures and was willing at any time to promote that policy which looked at all times to the moral and business upbuilding of his community.

HEPHERD LEACH was one of the earliest settlers of Winnebago County, and this work would be incomplete without this sketch. His paternal grandfather, Abisha Leach, was born in Scituate, Mass., in March, 1740, and tradition says he was a descendant of Dr. Leach, a physician to King George IV. He probably spent his entire life in Massachusetts.

Andrew Leach, father of our subject, was born in Easton, Mass., December 14, 1768, and was a pioneer of Pittsford, Vt., where he purchased a large tract of unbroken land, which he developed and improved. In connection with this, he operated a foundry and woolen mill, and did business as a merchant. He was one of the leading citizens of Pittsford and became quite wealthy. He was married three times; his first wife was Mary Powers, whom he married in 1807, his second union being with Mrs. Bowman in Pittsford, in 1810. Her maiden name was Deborah Spooner, and she was born in New London, Conn., February 8, 1777, being a lineal descendant of John Alden, the Pilgrim. Her father, Juda Paddock, was a Revolutionary soldier and participated in the battle of Bunker Hill. After the war, he edited a paper in Connecticut, but when the new State of Vermont was organized and offered a bonus of one hundred bushels of wheat to any one who would start a paper there, he accepted the offer and published the first paper in Vermont. It was called the Vermont Gazette and its motto was:

"Pliant as reeds where streams of freedom glide, Firm as the hills to stem oppression's tide,"

Our subject, Shepherd Leach, was born in Pittsford, Rutland County, Vt., August 17, 1811. Here he was reared and educated, and, on attaining man's estate, became associated with his father in business, but failing in health, he went to Troy, N. Y., where he was a book-keeper for a short time in the Stewart Stove Company, after which he came to Michigan in 1837. Two years were spent in Detroit and Ypsilanti, and in 1839 he came on horseback to Rockford, where he formed a partnership with D. S. Penfield and engaged in the hardware business on East State Street. Later on, the firm purchased about two thousand acres of new land, making a fine property out of it. He became the owner of nearly the entire amount and put many fine farm buildings upon it. At the time of his death, he owned about one thousand acres of land and was one of the best-known farmers in the county. His land was watered by living streams, and his skill and ability as an agriculturist made him owner of one of the finest farms in Illinois.

In Massachusetts, in 1818, Mr. Leach married Phoebe H. Allen, who was born in Heath, Franklin County, January 25, 1820. After acquiring her education at Mt. Holyoke Seminary, she engaged in teaching for some years. She came of a prominent family of Franklin County, her father being a mechanic and farmer. Both parents died on the same day-August 7, 1847. Elijah Allen passed away in the morning, being then sixty-five years of age, and in the evening his wife, Rhoda, was called to her final rest, at the age of fiftyeight years. They were active members of the Congregational Church and lived consistent Christian lives. In their family were twelve children, David, and Wealtha, widow of Yardley Hough, both of whom reside in Highland, Kan., and Mrs. Leach being the only ones now living.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Leach were born five children: Ida, who died in infancy; Clara, wife of W. L. Frisbie, a farmer of Rockford Township; Lizzie, wife of Dr. Frank E. Waxham, a prominent physician of Chicago; Harriet S., wife of Edgar E. Bartlett, President of the Rockford Register-Gazette Company; and Emma Allen, the wife of Joel B. Whitehead, a successful real-estate dealer of Rockford.

Mr. Leach ever bore his share in the development and upbuilding of the county. He came here when it was in its primitive condition, and did everything in his power for the general welfare of the community. In politics, he was a stalwart Republican and took an active part in local affairs, but was never an office-seeker. Owing to poor health during the last fifteen years of his life, his winters were spent in California and in the South. There was no more honest and honorable man in the county, and no one had more friends. The respect of the entire community was given him, and he was worthy of that high regard. A partial stroke of paralysis prevented his doing any hard manual labor for many years. Although his health was poor, his mental faculties remained unimpaired to the day of his death, which occurred July 9, 1885, thus closing a very active and earnest life.

Mrs. Leach proved herself a true and faithful helpmate to her husband, who was ever kind and loving to her, and in his death she suffered an irreparable loss. Her life also has been well and worthily spent, and she has thus won the love of all. She and her children are members of the Second Congregational Church of this city.

EVI RHOADES. Perhaps no citizen of Rockford was better known than Mr. Rhoades, and his earcer all through life was unusually successful, which was largely due to his great executive ability, and good common sense. His opinion on any important subject was eagerly sought for and highly respected, and although a man who did not make intimate friends quickly, he was always true as steel to those whom he knew and loved.

The pen is almost too clumsy to do justice to the life of Mr. Rhoades, and picture the ups and downs with which he contended. He was born in Hinsdale, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., June 25, 1830, and died at his elegant home, No. 710 North Court Street, on the 19th of November, 1891, when sixty-one years and four months old. Like many of the old Eastern families, his parents were in very moderate circumstances. In 1836, they removed to Alabama, Genesee County, N. Y., where, after a residence of seven years, they joined the vast army which was moving Westward at that time. Most of the trip was made by wagon, and they finally settled at Troy. Wis., and engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Levi was then quite young, and was compelled to assist his father, David Rhoades, in the farm work, gaining what education he could when not thus engaged. When seventeen years of age, he made a start for himself, coming to Rockford, where he did almost any kind of work offered him, such as splitting wood, etc. In 1818, he entered the cooper-shop of Harry Landers, in that city, and there learned his trade. He was energetic in his work, quick to pick up a point about the business. and after three years of tireless effort had accumulated sufficient means to purchase a half-interest in the business. In 1853, he bought out Mr. Lander's interest, their main plant being located just south of where now stands the W. F. & John Barnes' foundry, and ran the cooperage business until 1884, supplying all the mills in that vicinity with barrels. In 1865, he formed a partnership with Isaac and C. M. Utter & Company, for the manufacture of paper, and was still at the head of the firm at the time of his death.

When the People's Bank was organized, in 1873, Mr. Rhoades was one of the heaviest backers, and always remained a Director in the institution. He was a prime mover in the organization of the Rockford Watch Company, which has done its full share toward the upbuilding of the city, was the first President of the company, and Director until his death. With H. W. Price and Irvin French, he was largely instrumental in securing the removal of the Watch Case Company from Racine to Rockford. Besides being a stockholder in the Phonix Furniture Company, and also many other industries in the city, at the time of his death he was President of the firm of Rhoades, Utter & Co., President of the Water-power Company, Vice-president of the Rockford City Railway Company, and Director in the following companies: Rockford Silver Plate Company, Rockford Watch Company, Rockford Tack Company, People's Bank, Rockford Shoe Company, Home Building & Loan Association, Merchants' and Manufacturers' Insurance Company, and the Harlem Park Company.

Mr. Rhoades was regarded as one of the wealthy men of the city. He led a Christian life, and was always most active in church work. At an early day he joined the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church, and was one of the most devont believers of the society. When he removed to the West Side, he associated himself with the Court Street Methodist Episcopal society by letter, and afterward was a regular attendant. To his efforts is largely due the construction of the imposing edifice occupied by this society. He was Chairman of the Building Committee, also President of the Board of Trustees, and gave the work his personal supervision while the church was being built, to be sure that no weak spots were left, and the best of material used. He gave largely to the building fund, his donation, it is said, being in the neighborhood of $6,000. No person ever applied to him in vain for financial assistance in religious work.

In politics, Mr. Rhoades was a stauch Republican, and a great believer in the principles of that party, although of late years he had taken no active part in campaigns. During the Greeley Presidential campaign, he was a strong supporter of that gentleman, and achieved the reputation of making the best stump speeches of any man in the district. He was himself a candidate on the ticket that year for the Senate, running far ahead of his colleagues, but was defeated. In 1876, he was elected Mayor, and served one term in an able and dignified manner, doing all in his power to promote the best interests of the city. In the school sense of the word, Mr. Rhoades was not a scholar, but in the practical sense, he was an educated man. He was an excellent mathematician, and could solve the most difficult problems readily. He always believed in doing things well.

Mr. Rhoades was married on the 24th of December, 1854, to Mrs. Frederica (Reik) Rhoades, widow of his brother, Stephen Rhoades, who died in Rockford. For nearly forty years Levi Rhoades was one of the most faithful and loving of husbands, bestowing everything possible upon the home circle that could aid in his family's happiness. Three children were born of this union: Clinton F., who died when about twelve months old; Lucinda H., now the wife of James N. Harris, foreman of the Rhoades & Utter Paper Mill, resides with her mother in Rockford and has one child, Florence F.; Luella I. married Frederick J. Sovereign, proprietor of the City Ice Company, and they have one child, Clinton I.

Mrs. Rhoades was born at Hazelstein, near Stuttgart, Germany, and her parents were natives of the same country. The father, Michael Reik, was a thoroughly educated and prominent farmer of his native country. He was a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, in which his wife also held membership, and was a liberal contributor to the same. He died when sixty-four years of age, and his widow followed him to the grave when seventy-seven years of age. Mrs. Rhoades was the youngest daughter born to this worthy couple, and she, with her brother John A., and sister, Anna M., who was married, sailed for the United States in 1847, and were only twenty-one days in crossing the ocean. They came to Milwaukee, Wis., but subsequently removed to Walworth County, of that State, where Miss Reik grew to womanhood.

The portrait of the late Mr. Rhoades accompanies this sketch.

BRAM CHAMPION. England numbers many representatives among the best class of citizens in Illinois. There is a sterling quality about the nationality that particularly fits them for pioneer life and we as Americans are greatly indebted to settlers of English birth for the rapid advancement made in our civilization. He whose name heads this sketch and who is a representative farmer of Harrison Township, Winnebago County, Ill., was born in England in July, 1846. His father, Abraham Champion, was born in the same place, Somersetshire, England, in 1814, and was a farmer, as was also his father before him. His first wife, the mother of our subjeet, was Elizabeth French, and she was born in the same place in 1815. To this union were born nine children, one of whom, Emma, died when about six years of age. This family came to the United States in the spring of 1856, and located in Rockton, Ill., but two years later rented a farm in Owen Township. There the parents resided five years and then purchased an eighty-acre farm in Harrison Township, paying $16 per acre for it. To the original tract was added land from time to time until at the time of Mr. Champion's death it numbered two hundred and twenty-five acres. His wife died on this farm in August, 1871, and his second marriage was to Mrs. Sophia Diamond, nee Newman, widow of John Diamond. Mr. Champion passed away on January 1, 1890, when seventy-six years of age, and his wife followed him to the grave on the 22d of the following February.

The eight children of the first union are still living and are as follows: James, a farmer in Harrison, married Miss Mary Diamond and they have two children, a son and daughter; Charles, a contractor and builder, is a man of considerable wealth; Mary Ann married Henry Gummon, a farmer near the town of Harrison; Elizabeth married John Carpenter, a farmer near Harrison; Abram (our subject); Jane, now Mrs. James Oliver, of Harrison; Isaac, a wealthy farmer of Burlingame, Kan.; and Henry, a carpenter of Chicago, Abram Champion started out at the age of twenty-five years as an agriculturist, and it was quite natural that he should choose that as his calling in life for he had been trained to it from an early age, and his ancestors for generations had followed the same occupation. He first rented a farm in company with his brother Isaac, the David Jewett farm, in Owen Township, and this they conducted successfully for three years. They next rented the farm of James Champion for five years,

On July 10, 1872, our subject married Miss Ida F. Dobson, of Harrison, daughter of Edwin and Elizabeth (Hamer) Dobson, the father a native of New England, and the mother of England. After this union, Mr. Champion and wife resided on the Jewett farm, also the James Champion farm, and then bought about one hundred and thirty-three acres, for which he paid $4,000. He went in debt for the most of it but has since added to this tract until he now owns four hundred acres, all under the plow except fifty acres in timber and seventy-five acres in pasture land. In 1882, he built a barn 32x42 feet, and in 1890 he enlarged it 36x32. In 1885, his fine modern residence was erected, and all his outbuildings are good and substantial. Mr. Champion has cleared most of his land and marketed the wood in Rockton, Beloit and Rockford. He raises all the small kinds of grain, and keeps a dairy of sixteen cows, sending the cream to the factory.

Mr. Champion's marriage resulted in the birth of five children, viz: Lizzie M., Minnie M., Rena M., Nora J., and Edna F., all attending the district school except Miss Lizzie, who is in the Rockford Academy fitting herself for a teacher, and the baby. Mr. Champion was formerly a Republican in politics, but he is now Independent. He is not the worker he was at one time, on account of an injury received by a run-a-way team. Mrs. Champion was a school teacher before her marriage and is a lady of intelligence and a model wife and mother.

ETER McGEACHIE derives a comfortable income from his farming operations, which he is carrying on very successfully in Winnebago Township, Winnebago County. He is a representative of the Scotch element that has played so important a part in the settlement and development of the Great West, and his thrift and industry make him a most desirable citizen.

Mr. McGeachie was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, May 10, 1830, a son of Duncan McGeachie, born in the same county as his son, and his father, Archibald McGeachie, was, as far as is known, born in the same place, and farmed on land owned by the Duke of Argyle; he spent his entire life there. The father of our subject, who died in 1848, was reared and married in his native place and spent his entire life there, following the vocation of a farmer. He was married to Ellen Ralston, a daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Piekan) Ralston; she came to America and spent her last years with her children, dying at the home of our subject in February, 1867. The parents were valued members of the Presbyterian Church, and reared seven children: Thomas, Archibald, Margaret, Dunean, Peter, Ellen and Barbara.

Our subject was reared and educated in his native place, attending the common schools and at the same time assisting his father on the home farm until twenty years of age, when he commenced farming for himself on land that his father and grandfather had worked. In the year 1863, he gave up the lease, and, deciding to come to America, sailed from Liverpool on the vessel "New York" and arrived at that city after an uneventful vovage. Coming direct to Winnebago County, he stopped for a time with his brother in Roscoe, and in January, 1861, bought the land included in his present farm. Going to Kansas in February of the same year, he shortly returned and located on the same land where he has ever since resided. The farm is pleasantly located five miles west of the Court House and is in a high state of cultivation, adorned with fruit and shade trees of various descriptions, besides fine farm buildings, and every part of the estate gives evidence of the prudence and good judgment of its owner, and likewise shows that he is a man of good taste and domestic instincts.

Mr. McGeachie has had the assistance of a good and faithful wife since his marriage, January 10, 1865, to Ellen Campbell, the ceremony taking place at Atchison Mo. Mrs. McGeachie was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, March 4, 1844, and has borne her husband seven children: Donelda, Mary, Archibald, Barbara, Edward Peter, Grace N. and Florence M. The father of Mrs. McGeachie was Donald Campbell, born in Argyleshire, and his father, Archibald Campbell, was in early life a merchant, later a farmer, and, as far as is known. spent his entire life in his native land. Donald Campbell was reared to agricultural pursuits and resided in Argyleshire until 1851, when he sailed from Glasgow in the sailing-vessel "Allen Kerr" to America, accompanied by his wife and five of his seven children. After a voyage of seven weeks, they landed at Quebec, and thence came directly to Illinois, settling in DeKalb County, where he bought a tract of land and engaged in farming for nine years. At the expiration of that time, Mr. Campbell moved to Lyon County, Kan., on a tract of land, but he sickened, and died two or three weeks after his arrival in that State. The maiden name of his wife was Barbara McGeachie, a native of Scotland and a daughter of Archibald McGeachie. After the death of her husband, she bought a home in the village of Plymouth, Kan., which was then but a hamlet, and has there resided since. The names of her children are Mary A., Catherine, Barbara, Neil, Malcolm, Jessie and Ellen, respectively.

Our subject and his estimable wife are members in good standing of the First Presbyterian Church of Rockford.

EORGE S. ELLIS, a prominent figure among the business men of Rockton, has for many years been engaged as a blacksmith, in which department of trade he has acquired a good understanding of all its details. He is a man who attends strictly to business, and bears the reputation of being reliable and worthy of being trusted in any business which his judgment may justify him in undertaking. Our subject, who was born in Canada in September 1840, is the son of David Ellis, a native of New York who emigrated to Canada, where he resided for a number of years and in 1845 came with his family to Owen Township, Winnebago County. He departed this life two years later, leaving his widow with eight children.

George S. Ellis was the fourth son and seventh child in the parental family, six of whom still survive. The mother, whose maiden name was Maria Spencer, departed this life at the home of her daughter in Harrison Township, this county, in 1850, when forty-eight years of age. Our subject was thus wholly orphaned when nine years of age and from that time he has had to "paddle his own canoe." He obtained his schooling after leaving home by working for his board and attending school during the winter. When seventeen years of age, he rented land and engaged in farming on his own account.

In 1861, he of whom we write and Miss Ruth, daughter of William Knapp, were united in marriage. The young couple located in Rockton in the fall of 1864, where our subject was for seven years engaged in teaming, and in 1871 purchased, for $400, a half interest in the blacksmith business of Arthur Stiles. Five years later, he bought out his partner, since which time he has built up a lucrative trade as village blacksmith. He has acted in the capacity of "mine host" of each of the hotels here for about two years, and has served as a member of the Village Board for four years and School Director some ten years.

Five children have been granted Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, one of whom, a son Jesse, died when two and a half years of age. Those living are Emma, now Mrs. Byron Estes of Beloit, Wis.; Lena, who married E. P. Shotliff, of Rockton; William and Flora. Although our subject usually easts a Republican vote, he reserves a right to vote for the man whom he considers will best fill the office. He is a great lover of horses and possesses one of the most promising stock animals in this section, a very swift pacer. Mrs. Ellis is a consistent and devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

OHN T. PARKER. The old Bay State has furnished to Boone County a number of representative citizens, among whom may be mentioned John T. Parker, who died at his home in Spring Township, June 12, 1892. In everything connected with the growth and prosperity of the county he took an active interest, and as a tiller of the soil ever stood in the foremost ranks.

Born in Worcester County, Mass., in the town of Fitchburg, October 27, 1810, our subject was the son of Samuel and Lydia (Allen) Parker, natives of Massachusetts, and the father of English descent. The Parkers were New Englanders and for the most part followed agricultural pursuits for a livelihood. Samuel Parker died in Illinois when sixty-three years of age, and his wife received her final summons in New York State when eighty years of age. Our subject's maternal grandfather was a valiant soldier in the Revolutionary War and participated in the battle of Lexington.

The original of this notice was one of thirteen children, three of whom are living. One sister resides with our subject and another sister makes her home in the Empire State. John T. Parker remained at home until twenty-one years of age. and up to that time worked with his father at the carpenter's and joiner's trade. He then started out to make his own way in life and went to Pennsylvania, where for three years he was engaged in building mills. He subsequently tried his hand at dressing feathers, and after working at that for some time with an uncle and putting in nearly all of his hard-earned money, he decided to quit and embark in other enterprises more suited to his taste. After this, he was in the saw-mill business for a number of months but later returned home and there followed the trade of a carpenter until the spring of 1816, when he made his advent into the State of Illinois.

Previous to this, on the 3d of September, 1837, he was wedded to Miss Eunice Lindsay, a native of Otsego County, N. Y., born September 3, 1813, and one of twelve children, four now living, born to David and Jemina (Crane) Lindsay, also natives of the Empire State. Her father died in Madison County, N. Y., when eighty years of age, and his wife passed away in Minnesota. At the above-mentioned date, 1846, our subject, with his father and family, came by way of the Eric Canal and Lakes to Chicago, and there hired a team to take them to near Belvidere, Boone County. In that place, on account of sickness, they remained two months, and there our subject's father and only child died.

Later, Mr. Parker and his wife settled on rented land and in 1848, having accumulated considerable means by their frugality and industry, they bought the farm where they spent their remaining years. He first pre-empted eighty acres but later added forty acres to this, thus making a snug farm of one hundred and twenty acres. He first erected a small frame house, in which they lived for years, and in 1861 built the present substantial building. To the original tract, he added enough to make one hundred and sixty acres, which is now worth fully $65 per acre, and he put in over $1,500 worth of tiling. The farm is one of the most productive and best improved in the county. His early market was Chicago and often he was eight or nine days on the trip. He was thrifty and enterprising, no doubt inheriting his energy from his sturdy and energetic ancestors, and his ability as an agriculturist was well known.

Owing to his intelligence and superior ability, Mr. Parker was called upon to occupy most of the local offices of the township and discharged the duties of the same in a very creditable manner. He affiliated with the Democrats up to the formation of the Republican party, with which he afterward voted. His first Presidential ballot was cast for Andrew Jackson. He had several nephews, Parkers, in the Civil War, and some of them laid down their lives for the Stars and Stripes. On the 3d of February, 1891, Mr. Parker was called upon to mourn the loss of his affectionate wife, who passed away at the old home place. She was an excellent woman and well worthy the esteem of all. They had two children: Harriet, who died as abovementioned, at Belvidere, and Henry L., who died before the family left New York State. Little more than a year after the death of his wife, Mr. Parker closed his eyes on the seenes of earth and passed to the Great Beyond June 12, 1892. To the last, he retained his deep interest in the welfare of his community and fellow-citizens, and was quite hearty and active, notwithstanding his advanced age. His friends will be pleased to notice his portrait on another page of this volume.

O. N. WALL, the practical and fashionable tailor, whose artistic cuts and perfect fits are known throughout the aristocratic portion of the city, is located over No-324 East State Street, where he keeps employed from four to six of the most skilled workmen. Among his permanent customers are many of Rockford's best dressed citizens, who thoroughly appreciate and understand the merits of a first-class tailor, and who find in Mr. Wall's establishment not only the best goods in the country, but a place where the style and trimming of a garment is a matter of careful study.

Mr. Wall was originally from Helsingland,

Sweden, born September 1, 1846, and while growing up learned the tailor trade. He was left an orphan when but a boy, his parents having died when comparatively young people. His father, Gust Nordenvall, was a prominent man in his community, holding many minor offices, such as town elerk, and organist in the State Church. The mother, who died when about thirty-two years of age, was a Lutheran in her religious convictions and a devout and worthy Christian. They were the parents of two children, but only our subject is now living. The other, Gust, was a married man and died in Chicago, leaving a widow and two daughters. Gust Nordenvall, Sr., was three times married and had children by each wife. To his last union was born a daughter, Anna, who is now the wife of Mr. Hess, the Methodist clergyman of the Swedish Church of Rockford.

It was in the year 1865 that Mr. Wall crossed the ocean to America and he first followed his trade in Brooklyn, N. Y. Later he was in business in different eities of that State and Pennsylvania, but in 1877 he came to Rockford, Ill., and in partnership with George Johnson established a merchant tailoring establishment on East State Street. They continued together until January 1, 1885, since which time Mr. Wall has continued the business alone. He is a live, energetic business man and one of the leading exponents of the merchant tailor's art in the city. By industry and good business management he has been unusually successful and is now the owner of some valuable improved property in the city, besides a comfortable home at No. 302 North Fourth Street. He also owns stock in the Standard Furniture Company, and the Rockford Manufacturing Company of the city.

Mr. Wall was married in Brooklyn, N. Y., June 6, 1869, to Miss Ida Hult, a native of Kalmar Lan, Sweden, born in March, 1847, and who came alone to the United States in 1866. Her father died in Sweden and her mother subsequently came to the United States, being now a resident of Jamestown, N. Y. Mrs. Wall's brother. Capt. C. A. Hult, now a resident of Jamestown, N. Y., was the first of the family to come to this country. He fought for the Union during the Rebellion.

Mr. and Mrs. Wall became the parents of five children, two of whom died in infaney. Those living are: Anna W., attending business college; Walter C. G., and Louis W. Soeially, Mr. Wall is a Knight Templar in the Masonie fraternity, and, politically, he is an active worker for the Republican party whose principles he advocates. He and his wife are members of the Swedish Methodist Church and he is an official in the same.

LEXANDER ANDERSON, a retired florist, whose commodious and pleasant residence is at No. 714 North First Street, came to this city in May, 1853, and was first engaged as a flower gardener by Mr. Townsend, with whom he remained for a number of years. He was subsequently with Mr. M. Starr, another old settler of the city. Later still, he worked for others, ineluding G. A. Sanford, and Emerson & Company, remaining with this company for fourteen years. In this way he has passed his life thus far and has saved a fair amount of his income, the same he is now enjoying. He has been overseer for the East Side Park for a number of years and holds that position at the present time. He is well known in Rockford, and is well liked by all.

Mr. Anderson claims Sweden as his native land, and was born in Wester Gothland. of that country, October 12, 1823. He remained there until twentynine years of age, and in the spring of 1852 he left home and friends to seek his fortune in the States. On the 2d of July of that year, he reached Boston and came thence to Chicago by ears, making the distance in five days. After about a year spent in the vicinity of that city he came on to Rockford.

He was the only one of his family to set foot on American soil, and the youngest of seven children born to his parents, Andrew S. and Breta (Hallenberg) Anderson, natives of Sweden, in which country both received their final summons, the factor dying when about eighty-nine years of age and the mother also when quite aged. The family were all members of the State Church of Sweden.

Our subject was married in Rockford to Miss Erica Peterson, who was born in Wester Gothland, Sweden, July 4, 1833, and whose parents, Peter Maline and Ingra M. (Hollemberg) Peterson, were also natives of that country. They passed their entire lives there, the father engaged as a farmer, and both lived to be quite old people. Mrs. Anderson passed her youthful days in her native province, and in 1855, with her sister, Ingra (who is now deceased, having died in Rockford after her marriage), came to the United States and settled in Rockford, Ill. She was married shortly afterwards, or in 1857, to Mr. Anderson, and bore him five children, one deceased, Olivia L., who died when about four years of age. Those children living are: Edward, in business in Belvidere, married Miss Ida Lindenle; Selma V., wife of John Hult, a earver in the furniture factory; Victor L., a machinist with the Nelson Knitting Company, married Miss Jennie Lundine, and Mary at home, a seamstress and dressmaker. All the family are members of the First Lutheran Church, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson being among the older members of the same. Mr. Anderson is an ardent Republican and east his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln.

LETCHER COFFIN. The agricultural element that has been so largely instrumental in the upbuilding of Winnebago County is well represented by this gentleman, who is one of the foremost farmers and stockraisers of Burritt Township, where he owns a large and valuable farm. Mr. Cotfin was born November 6, 1841, in Roscoe, this county, a son of Henderson W. Coffin, born in Newport, Herkimer County, N. Y., and he in turn was a son of Isaac, who was born in the town of Deerfield, Herkimer County, N Y. His father, the great-grandfather of our subject, was from New England and was one of the first settlers of the town of Deerfield. He cleared a farm from the wilderness and resided there until his death. Isaac Coffin was reared on a farm and always followed farming as a vocation, assisting in clearing seven different farms. From Herkimer County, he went to St. Lawrence County about the year 1839, bought a tract of timber land, and with the assistance of his sons cleared it and spent his remaining days there. His wife was known in her maiden days as Peggy Patton; she was a native of Eastern New York and the daughter of a Revolutionary soldier. She passed away in St. Lawrence County.

The father of our subject went to Canada when a young man and there learned the trade of a brickmaker with his brother Horace. From there they came to Illinois in 1838, and located in Winnebago County, Henderson still remaining in the employ of his brother. Sometime later, he started in farming for himself and went to Beloit, prospecting for a short time, and then established a brickyard. He had previous to this time entered a tract of Government land in what is now Burritt Township, and in 1860 settled on that land. There he engaged in farming some years, then removed to Winnebago Township, and bought a tract of land and made his home thereon until his death in May, 1876. The maiden name of his wife was Mary II. Kenear; she was born in New York State and now makes her home in Rockford. The father of our subject was a very industrious man, possessed of good judgment, and was one of the most successful farmers in the county, and at one time owned upwards of one thousand acres of land.

Our subject is one of eleven children born to his parents and he received his education in the public schools of this county. Reared to farming pursuits, he has always followed that vocation and is now the owner of a fine tract of land comprising two hundred and forty broad and fertile acres which are finely improved, and good and substantial buildings are creeted thereon.

The date of the marriage of our subject and Miss Harriet Keeling was December 22, 1879. Mrs. Collin was born in Philadelphia, Pa., and is a daughter of John Keeling, who was born near Liverpool, England, and a son of William and Harriet Keeling. The grandfather of Mrs. Coffin was a tailor by trade and on coming to America settled in Philadelphia and followed his trade there some years. From there he came to Rockford, and resided here until his death. His son John learned the trade of a tailor and also followed it for some time after coming to America. He is still a resident of Rockford and is now engaged as a house decorator. The maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Taylor, a native of England, and a daughter of William Taylor, and came to this country with a brother and sister.

Our subject and his estimable wife have had born to them two children: Gertrude May and Alta Marie. Mr. Coffin votes the Republican ticket in politics.

EORGE A. WADDELL, who resides on section 32, Guilford Township, is an enterprising and representative agriculturist of Winnebago County, and one of the worthy citizens that the Empire State has furnished to Illinois. He was born in the town of Bethel, Sullivan County, N. Y., April 1, 1853, and is of Scotch descent. His paternal grandfather was born in Scotland, and came to America accompanied by his wife and one son. He located in Sullivan County and there purchased a farm, upon which he spent the remainder of his life. James Waddell, father of our subject, was a native of Sullivan County and was there reared and acquired a common-school education. On attaining his majority, he was joined in wedlock with Mary J. Breakey, also a native of that county and a daughter of John and Elosia Breakey. The maternal grandfather of our subject was born on the Emerald Isle and was of Scotch descent. His wife was a native of New England. Mr. and Mrs. Waddell began their domestic life upon the farm in Bethel Township where the former now resides. His wife was called to her final rest in 1874.

We now take up the personal history of George A. Waddell, whose boyhood and youth were passed in the usual manner of farmer lads. He aided in the labors of the farm during the summer months and in the winter season attended the district schools of the neighborhood. Remaining under the parental roof until he had attained his majority, he then started out in life for himself and went to Orange County, N. Y., where the succeeding year and a half of his life were passed. On the expiration of that period, he determined to try his fortune in Illinois, and emigrated to Winnebago County, where he was employed as a farm hand for a month and a half. He then rented land, and it was not until 1888 that he purchased the farm on which he now resides.

As a companion and helpmate on life's journey, Mr. Waddell chose Miss Minnie C. Scoville, a native of Ogle County, Ill., and a daughter of Stephen T, and Lucy (Preston) Scoville. Her parents are mentioned elsewhere in this work in connection with the sketch of Hon. II. C. Scoville. The union of our subject and his wife was celebrated in 1879, and the worthy couple are held in high regard throughout this community. They are both members of the Centennial Methodist Church of Rockford, and, in politics, Mr. Waddell is a Republican but has never sought or desired public office, preferring to give his entire time and attention to his business interests. On removing to the farm, he erected good buildings and has made many other improvements, which have greatly increased its value and made it a desirable place of residence. His home is pleasantly and conveniently situated about three miles and onehalf from the court house.

GBERT PHELPS, who is the oldest native-born citizen of Winnebago County now residing within its limits, was the owner and occupant of two hundred and forty acres of excellent land in Owen Township. His portrait and life sketch will therefore possess unusual interest for the reader. His birth occurred in Rockford Township, April 20, 1837, while his father, John Phelps, was born and reared in St. Albans, Vt. The latter-named gentleman was a carpenter by trade, and when a young man removed to Buffalo, N. Y., where he was engaged in that line of work for a time, and early in 1836 came West to the Territory of Michigan, where his marriage occurred.

Immediately after that event, the young couple started for the Prairie State, making the journey overland with a team. Their first stop was made at Paw Paw Grove, where Mr. Phelps left his wife, and, starting out to seek a location, came to Winnebago County when Rockford contained but a few families, and the Government surveys to the land in the surrounding country had not yet been completed. Deciding to locate in Rockford, he purchased property on South Second Street, opposite the present site of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church, and, bringing his wife hither, they established themselves in this community.

Mr. Phelps prosecuted his trade there until 1816, when he removed to what is now Cherry Valley Township, and making settlement on a tract of Government land, erected a log house and commenced the work of subduing nature, erecting a cabin and improving his farm. He worked at his trade a part of each year for some time, and occupied that farm until 1864, when he sold it and removed to Pecatonica Village, and was there for a number of years engaged in the hardware business, He later became identified with the business interests of Davis, Stephenson County, where he carried on a profitable lumber trade. On account of failing health, however, he was compelled to retire from active work, and died in the village of Durand, July 7, 1874.

Mrs. Lucretia (Kimball) Phelps, the mother of our subject, was born in the Green Mountain State and now resides with her son at Plymouth, Mo. She became the mother of the following-named four children: Egbert, John A., Hannibal, and Helen M., who became the wife of O. H. Davis, and died at Durand. The original of this sketch was ten years of age when he was brought to Cherry Valley Township, and after attending the schools first in Rockford and then in that township, entered the High School in Rockford. He assist d his father on the farm, and remained at home until twenty-two years of age, when he was employed at surveying in and around Rockford for two years.

In 1863, our subject enlisted in Company K, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, and served until after the close of the war, most of the time being under Pope in Missouri, Arkansas and Kansas, fighting the guerrillas and bushwhackers, which was the most dangerous kind of warfare. In December, 1865, he was discharged, and returning home.

engaged in teaming at Pecatonica. Two years later, he settled upon the farm which he now owns and occupies, and on which may be found all the buildings necessary for carrying on a first-class estate.

The ceremony which united Miss Mary E. Brown and Egbert Phelps was performed November 29, 1866. The lady was born in Owen Township, this county, September 12, 1813, and was the only daughter of Mowry and Lucy (Pease) Brown, for a further sketch of whom the reader is referred to the biography of R. E. Brown. The two children comprising the honsehold of our subject and his wife are Charles E. and Zora E. Republican in politics, Mr. Phelps takes an active interest in all local affairs. Socially, he is a member of Nevius Post No 1, G. A. R., while Mrs. Phelps is connected with the Woman's Relief Corps, of Rockford.

ENJAMIN F. GARRETT, one of the enterprising farmers of Guilford Township, Winnebago County, has demonstrated the fact that perseverance and zeal will prevail to conquer circumstances and gain a competence for him who exercises those qualities. He now owns two hundred acres of fine land. All of the improvements—and they are many and excellent—have been made by the present owner of the farm and reflect credit upon his judgment and thrift.

Born July 10, 1835, in Lake County, Ohio, our subject is the youngest son of Thomas and Margaret (Kewish) Garrett, whose history will be found in the biography of Robert Garrett on another page of this volume. Benjamin was three years of age when his parents came to this county, so he has but little recollection of other than his adopted home. He began working on the farm as soon as old enough and, making his home with his parents until his marriage, then rented land until 1864.

In August of the above-named year, Benjamin Garrett enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Forty-sixth Illinois Infantry, and served his country faithfully and well until the close of the war, when he received his honorable discharge in August of 1865. Returning home, our subject engaged in work at the carpenter's trade in partnership with his brother Robert, and a twelvemonth later purchased the farm where he now resides. There was on the place a house 11x20 feet in dimensions, also a board stable. Mr. Garrett added to his property until his estate now includes two hundred acres, which its owner has beautified by planting ornamental fruit and shade trees and erecting a good set of buildings thereon.

Miss Esther A. Hayes was married to our subject in 1860; she is a native of this county and township, her birth having occurred in July, 1849. Her father, Samuel Baker Hayes, was born, reared and married in Connecticut, whence he removed to Canada, purchasing a farm near St. Thomas. His wife dying at that place, he later married the mother of Mrs. Garrett, whose maiden name was Catherine Grovero. She was a native of Canada and of French ancestry. In the fall of 1838, the parents of Mrs. Garrett came to Winnebago County, where the father purchased a claim to a tract of Government land on section 17, Guilford Township. There he erected the log house in which Mrs. Garrett was born and in which the family resided until the decease of the parents,

Our subject and his wife have one son, Bruce II. Mr. Garrett is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and in politics casts a straight Republican vote.

HARLES M. KEELER has the honor of claiming Belvidere as his native city. He here first opened his eyes to the light of day, October 31, 1857. His grandfather, Calvin Keeler, was a farmer and spent his last years in Cortland County, N. Y., where Milton E. Keeler, father of our subject, was born. He there resided until sixteen years of age, when, in 1849, he left the parental roof and came to Illinois, where he engaged in clerking until the war. In September, 1862, he joined the boys in blue of Company B. Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, and was mustered in as First Licutenant. He participated in the Vicksburg campaign, and the Red River expedition, and after serving two years returned home, having resigned on account of ill-health. He then embarked in the mercantile business in Belvidere and continued operations in that line until 1871, when he purchased the creamery at Garden Prairie and conducted that business until 1877. He then sold and returned to Belvidere. He was elected County Clerk in the fall of 1877, and so faithfully did he perform his duties that he was re-elected at each succeeding election, holding the office until his death, which occurred January 29, 1884. Mrs. Keeler still survives her husband. She bore the maiden name of Louisa Owen and was born in Canandaigua, N. Y. Her father, Joseph Owen, was a soldier in the War of 1812, and during his last years received a pension in recognition of his services. His father was one of the heroes of the Revolutionary War.

Charles Keeler is one of eight children as follows: George II., Charles M., Willis E., Frank II., May B. Dunton, Helen L. Tousley, Grace M. Dawson and Emma C.

Our subject acquired his early education in the schools of Belvidere, and after the removal of the family to Garden Prairie assisted his father in the creamery. On returning to this city, he served as Deputy County Clerk for four years, after which he went t Chicago and was employed as assistant book-keeper by the firm of Clement, Bane & Co., with whom he remained until his father's death, when he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of County Clerk. In 1884, he was elected to that office, re-elected in 1886 and again in 1890, and is the present incumbent.

Mr. Keeler was married, June 25, 1884, to Julia Nixon, who was born at Ringwood, McHenry County, Ill., and is a daughter of the Hon. Alexander H. and Frances (Condict) Nixon, who were early settlers of McHenry County. Her father was a man of prominence who served one term in the Senate and three or four terms in the State Legislature. He died during the war. By the union of our subject and his wife have been born two interesting children, Clara L. and Marguerite. The parents are both members of the First Presbyterian Church, and Mr. Keeler is Adjutant of the Illinois Division Sons of Veterans. His efficiency as County Clerk and his faithful performance of duty are well attested by his long continued service, which also indicates his popularity and the high regard in which he is held by all.

AMES AUGUSTUS BENNETT, of Belvidere. has for more than half a century resided in Boone County, and is a worthy representative of one of its honored pioneer families. His grandfather was a farmer of Groton, Middlesex County, Mass. His father was born in that locality, and resided in Groton until 1839, when, in the month of May, he started Westward, accompanied by his wife and four children. They went by way of the Eric Canal from Albany to Buffalo, where they embarked on a steamer and in that way reached Chicago, where Mr. Bennett purchased a team of horses and a pair of oxen, and, attaching them to wagons he had brought with him, made an overland journey to Boone County. At that time few improvements had here been made, the few settlers lived in log cabins and their homes were widely scattered. The family moved into a log house with another family and there resided until fall. when Mr. Bennett purchased a tract of land near Newburg, where they spent the winter. He suffered very much from ague during the winter and in the spring concluded to leave that location, so purchased a tract of wild land on South Prairie, now included in Flora Township. Building a barn, the family occupied that as a place of residence during the summer, while the house was being moved from Newburg. Four years later, he purchased a farm on the north bank of the Kishwaukee River, a portion of which is now included within the city limits, and erected a commodious brick residence, frame barn and other buildings. He made it one of the desirable farms of the locality and continued its cultivation until his death in 1868.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Mary Shattuck. She was born in Groton, Mass., and died in January, 1892. She had a family of seven children, six of whom grew to mature years; James Augustus; Samuel, now deceased; John II., a resident of Belvidere; Sarah J., who is living in Bonus Township; George. of Coffey County, Kan., and Charles, a resident of Flora Township. Since the death of Mrs. Bennett, the farm has been sold to the Lincoln Avenue Land Company and it is platted and known as Fair View, and the company have already sold a large number of lots.

The subject of this sketch was a lad of only nine years, when, with his parents, he came to Illinois. He remembers well many incidents of the long journey. He was reared amid the wild scenes of the frontier to habits of industry, and at an early age became inured to the hard labors of the farm. In the winter season he attended the schools of the neighborhood, while in the summer months he assisted his father in the cultivation of the land, remaining under the parental roof until he had attained his majority, when he started out in life for himself. Since June, 1839, he has resided continuously in Boone County, and is numbered among its worthy pioneers. He has ever borne his share in its upbuilding and advancement and is recognized as a public-spirited and progressive citizen of the community.

EUBEN H. IRONS, who is now living a retired life in Rockford, was born near Zanesville, Ohio, August 18, 1826, and is a ( ) son of David Irons, a native of Schuvlkill County, Pa., and was reared on a farm and worked in a sawmill owned by his father. About the time the war broke out, he enlisted as a soldier of the navy and fought in many engagements during that second struggle for American independence. On his return to Pennsylvania, he learned the blacksmith's trade, which proved to him a lucrative occupation. Subsequently, he removed to Ohio, becoming one of the early settlers of Zanesville. He there established a smithy and did much work on the first bridge that spanned the Maskenyuns River at that place. Subsequently, he purchased a farm in Franklin County, Ohio, not far from Columbus, and earried that on in connection with blacksmithing. After some years he brought his family, with teams, to Illinois in 1847, again becoming a pioneer. He settled on a farm in Shirland, where his death occurred when past the age of seventy years. His wife survived him and died at the home of her son Reuben, while the latter was living in Clinton County, Iowa. She was then sixty-eight years of age. In the family were nine children, all of whom grew to manhood and womanhood, while two sons and six daughters are yet living.

The subject of this sketch remained upon his father's farm in Ohio until nineteen years of age, when he came to Illinois, locating in this county in 1847. After some years he removed to Clinton County, Iowa, where he spent sixteen years, after which he returned to Illinois and made a settlement in Cherry Valley Township, where he carried on farming. He is numbered among the honored pioneers of the county and has borne the usual experiences of frontier life. In those early days he has hauled grain to Chicago and Milwaukee and then frequently received only twenty-five eents per bushel for it. He began life empty-handed but has worked his way upward to a position of affluence. He still owns some good property in Woodbury County, Iowa, two hundred and forty acres of fine and well-improved land; and also has one hundred and sixty acres near Huron, S. Dak., and some property in Kansas. His property in Rockford is quite valuable also.

Mr. Irons was married in this county to Miss Eliza Atwood, who was born near Chatham, in the Province of Ontario, Canada, March 23, 1830, and is a daughter of Patten and Anna (Brooks) Atwood, natives of Massachusetts and Canada, respectively. They were married in the latter country and settled not far from Chatham, where Mr. Atwood engaged in the milling business for twelve years. In 1839, he came to the United States and made a settlement in this county, where he has since resided. He is now a well-to-do farmer of Owen Township, and is eighty-seven years of age. His wife died July 30, 1890, at the age of eightythree years, in the faith of the Baptist Church, to which Mr. Atwood also belongs. He was an Abolitionist and joined the Republican party on its organization. For sixty-five years he and his wife traveled life's journey together and were highly respected people. Unto them were born fifteen children, and, with the exception of one who died in childhood, all are yet living and have married. The eldest is sixty-five and the youngest forty-one years of age. They have all been quite successful in life and the family is noted for longevity.

Mrs. Irons was the third in order of birth. She was carefully reared and is a lady of noble and generous character, held in high esteem by all. With the Baptist Church she holds membership. By her marriage she has become the mother of four children, three living: Frank L., who was a farmer of Marshall County, Kan., wedded M. L. Scovill, and passed away November 10, 1891, at the age of thirty-eight years, leaving three daughters; he had buried a son Reuben nine months before his death. Charles L. married Emma Alger and is a farmer of Woodbury County, Iowa; Anna E., wife of Walter Belshaw, a carpenter residing in Oregon City, Ore.; and Vina M., wife of Henry Foote, a carpenter of the same place.

In polities, Mr. Irons is a Republican. He has resided in this city for some seventeen years and is now living a retired life at No. 410 North First Street. He is numbered among the early settlers of the county and since locating here more than forty years ago has been identified with its upbuilding and progress.

ORATIO C. DEMUNN, ex-Circuit Clerk of Boone County, is at present residing in Belvidere. He was born in Alexander, Genesee County, N. Y., November 12, 1824, and is a son of John DeMunn, who, as far as is known, was born in New York State, of French parents. The latter-named gentleman was well educated and practiced law to some extent. He was also engaged in agricultural pursuits on a farm which he owned in the town of Alexander, where his death occurred in November, 1826.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Clarissa Goodwill. She was born in Tolland County, Conn., and was first married to Wilham C. Tisdale, by whom she became the mother of seven children. By her union with Mr. DeMunn four children were born. She continued to reside on the farm in Alexander until 1860, when she sold out and, moving one mile west, lived there until 1865, which was the date of her advent into Boone County, where her decease occurred.

Horatio C. DeMunn received his early education in the district schools of his native town, which was later advanced by attendance at the Genesce and Wyoming Seminary. When twenty years of age, he began teaching school, and was so employed until 1846, in Genesce County. Our subject then came to Boone County, settling in the town of Le Roy, and, in addition to cultivating the soil, was employed as a teacher until 1857. That year he received the appointment of Deputy Circuit Clerk, which office he held until 1864, when he was elected Circuit Clerk, being elected to that position for three full terms of four years each. Since that time he has served either as Deputy or Assist ant Clerk.

Miss Abigail Stackpole, who was born in the town of Camden, Me., November 24, 1830, became the wife of our subject in 1849. Her father, James Stackpole, was born in Belfast, Me., and was a son of Aaron and Hannah (Young) Stackpole, natives, also, of the Pine Tree State, where they spent their entire lives. The parents of Mrs. DeMunn were reared and married in Maine, and in 1838 went to Wisconsin, traveling via Boston and Philadelphia to Pittsburg, thence by way of the Ohio, Mississippi and Illinois Rivers to Peru, this State, where they engaged a team and went overland to the Badger State, locating at Beloit. There the father was engaged as a produce and provision merchant. At that early day the land in Wisconsin and Northern Illinois was very sparsely settled and the greater portion of it was owned by the Government. Mr. Stackpole often teamed from Beloit to the pineries, where he sold his provisions. In 1844, he purchased land in Manchester, Boone County, where he made his home and operated a farm until about 1852, when he went West to Garnaville, Clayton County, Iowa, and for about four years he carried on a thriving business in From that place he went to Prairie du Chien and became the possessor of one of the islands in the river in front of that city, from which he supplied the shippers of cattle with hay and grain. His death occurred in that place in 1886.

The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. DeMunn was Eliza Dunton. She was born in Waldo, Me., and was the daughter of Isaac and Abigail Dunton. Her death occurred in Beloit, in 1840. The four children born to our subject and his wife are George; Ella, Mrs. George Vickers; Kittie, the wife of L. C. Palmer; and Gertrude. Our subject has east a Republican vote since the formation of the party, and has aided in many ways in the upbuilding of his community.

UFUS W. GRAVES, who owns two hundred and forty acres of land on section 11, Roscoe Township, Winnebago County, was born in Norwich, Chenango County, N. Y., in the region which he thinks the most desolate in this fair land. His grandfather, Israel Graves, a native of Connecticut, was one of the pioneer settlers of Norwich. He married Lydia Wells and they reared four sons and three daughters. One of the latter is still living. Mr. Graves died in Rock County, Wis., at an advanced age, and his wife passed away in Ohio.

Obed Graves, father of our subject, was the third child in that family and was born in Cortland County, N. Y., in 1797. He was reared as a laborer and for some years followed teaming. When a young man, he married Allie Monroe, who at a very early age was left an orphan in Cortland County. They came West from Chenango County in September, 1817, settling in Roscoe Township. Their eight sons and one daughter were all born in Chenango County. One son died in infancy but the others grew to mature years. Mr. Graves engaged in farming on rented land for some time and spent the last ten years of his life with his son at his present home. His death occurred in December, 1889, at the age of ninety-three. He remained physically strong up to the last, but two years before his death his mind gave way. His wife died in March, 1887, at the age of eighty-four years. Four children of the family are yet living: Perry O., a farmer of Wisconsin; Rufus W.; Calferna, widow of Spencer Brown and a resident of Minnesota; and George, who makes his home in Beloit, Wis.

Our subject was reared in his native State, and in 1846 came to Illinois by way of the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes. He had embarked for Racine, but a heavy gale was encountered and the passengers were landed at Chicago. Mr. Graves was married on the 25th of February of that year to Julia A. Thornton, of Norwich, N. Y., daughter of Smith D. and Asha (Bolton) Thornton, who were among the early settlers of Roscoe Township. The young couple on reaching their destination had only money enough to buy a $14 cow and a fifteen-cent skimmer. They commenced keeping house in a log eabin with his eldest brother, who had come to the county in 1815. For ten years Mr. Graves rented land and then worked on the railroad for two years. His first purchase of land consisted of twelve and one-half acres, and he also bought a third interest in a house. He next purchased fiftyfive acres, the old Thornton homestead, which his father-in-law had entered from the Government. He then bought his present home, which yet contains two hundred and forty acres, although he has given fifty-five acres to his eldest son, fifty acres to his daughter, and has sold forty acres.

Mrs. Graves was called to her final rest in September, 1890, at the age of sixty-two years, leaving two sons and a daughter: Orlando, a resident of Beloit, Wis.; Frances, wife of George Muchmore, who resides on an adjoining farm; and Jay, who operates the home farm. Jay married Laura Frank, a native of New York, born of German parentage.

Mr. Graves is now serving as Road Commissioner, which position he has held for thirty years, and for twelve years he has been Justice of the Peace. This statement is the highest testimonial which could be given of his ellicient and faithful service. In politics, he was a Democrat until appointed to solicit subscriptions for bounty money to send men to the front during the late war. He found that the Republicans subscribed willingly, while nearly every Democrat refused, or gave grudgingly, and since that experience, Mr. Graves has been a stalwart Republican. His life has been well and worthily spent and he is now enjoying a well-earned rest. He has the confidence of all with whom he has been brought in contact, and is held in high regard by his many friends.

HILETUS S. DOOLITTLE, one of the prominent and honored pioneers, in fact, the earliest settler of Harlem Township, Winnebago County, now residing on section 19, was born in Boston, Eric County, N. Y., August 6, 1811. His father, Calvin Doolittle, was born in the Green Mountain State and was a son of Amzi Doolittle, also a native of Vermont. His mother, Susanah Cary, was born in Westfield, Mass., and was married October 12, 1801. Her parents were Richard and Marsina (Ford) Cary. The father was a Revolutionary soldier who served under Gen. Washington. Amzi Doolittle, on removing to New York, settled in the town of Nelson, Madison County, and in the midst of the forest hewed out a farm, upon which he made his home until the year 1820, when he started Westward, journeying with a team to Morgan County, Ill. He bought Government land and then started to return to the East for his family, but was taken sick before reaching home and died in Indiana. His wife, who bore the name of Mary Hazelton, died in Austin, Erie County, N. Y.

The father of our subject was reared to manhood in the Empire State and settled in the town of Boston, Erie County. Subsequently, he became a resident of Pennsylvania, where he made his home until 1823, when he went to Cattaraugus County, N. Y., where he resided about twelve years; he then came to Michigan, where he resided for two years, and from there to Illinois, locating in what is now Harlem Township, Winnebago County. He made a claim, purchasing the land of the Government at the land sale in Galena, when it came into market. Some time later he removed to Guilford Township, where he purchased a farm, on which he made his home until called to his final rest.

Our subject spent the first nine years of his life in the State of his nativity and then accompanied his parents to Mercer County, Pa. After three years, they became residents of Little Valley, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., where they lived until 1835, which year witnessed their removal to Michigan. Mr. Doolittle remained there two years, and in 1837 came to Illinois. He made the entire distance with teams and after six weeks of travel reached his destination. In March, 1837, he loeated on the land which he now owns and occupies. He entered it from the Government and every improvement on the place is a monument to his thrift and enterprise, for when he came into the possession of his farm not even a furrow had been turned upon it.

On September 14, 1834, Mr. Doolittle wedded Sally A. Knox, a native of Augusta, Niagara County, N. Y., and a daughter of Elijah Knox. She was killed by lightning in 1854, leaving three sons living: Russell C., Alonzo P., and Myron 11. Edwin H. is deceased. Russell C., Alonzo P., and Edwin II. served in the Union Army. On May 6, 1857, our subject was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Paulina Arnold, who was born in Essex County, Canada, and is a daughter of Edward and Ann (Abbott) Reynolds. Her father was born in Mercer County, Pa., and was quite young when his parents, George and Jane (Morton) Reynolds, removed to what is now Michigan, and thence to Essex County, Canada, where they were among the early settlers. After his marriage, he went with his wife to Ohio, and purchased a farm in Cuyahoga County, upon which he made his home until his death. In Canada, Paulina Reynolds became the wife of David Arnold, who was born in that country and there spent his entire life, passing away in 1841. Three children were born of that union: Solon F.; Ann J., who is now the wife of Russell Doolittle, and William W.

Mr. Doolittle of this sketch bore all the usual experiences and hardships of pioneer life. He came to this country at a very early day, when Chicago was one of the nearest markets. The settlements were few and far between and deer and other wild game roamed over the prairies at will. He bore his share in the development and upbuilding of the county and with the history of Harlem Township his name is inseparably connected. No other man residing within its borders has so long there made his home as Mr. Doolittle, and this work would be incomplete without his sketch. Our subject has held several offices, among which was that of Justice of the Peace for twenty-seven years, and Supervisor two terms, and Clerk and Treasurer of the Free-will Baptist Quarterly Meetings for thirty-five years.

UGUSTUS W. ROBINSON, one of the early settlers of Flora Township, Boone County, was born in the town of Atkinson, Piscataquis County, Me., October 7, 1831, where also his father, Elijah, and grandfather, Capt. James Robinson, were born. The great-grandfather of our subject hailed from Scotland, and, coming to America during Colonial times, located in that part of the Massachusetts Bay Colony now included in the State of Maine. He was a seafaring man and commanded a vessel.

Capt. James Robinson was Commodore of a vessel, and during the War of 1812 was captured by the British but soon retaken by the French. He then returned to Portland, and, fitting up a privateer, commanded the vessel until the close of the war. In 1844, he came to Illinois and purchased land in this county in company with his son-in-law, Augustus Harron. This was in Flora Township, where he was residing at the time of his decease. The lady to whom he was married bore the name of Sarah Mitchell; she was also a native of Maine and died in this township.

Elijah Robinson followed the sea until thirtyfive years of age, and in the year 1842 came with his wife and six children to Illinois with teams, and, after about eight weeks' travel, located in Flora Township. The family moved into a vacant log house, the roof of which was covered with shakes held in place with weight poles. Mr. Robinson entered a tract of Government land, and while the family were living in the log house, he cut logs from his place which he drew to the mill at Newburg, had them sawed and erected a frame house. He improved the greater portion of his land, upon which he resided for several years, then selling out, removed to Hamilton County, Mo., where he spent the remainder of his days. His wife, Miss Deborah A. Cochran, was the daughter of John Cochran and departed this life in Flora Township.

Augustus W. Robinson came to Illinois with his parents when eleven years of age, and has witnessed the entire growth and development of this section of country. He attended the pioneer schools of Flora Township, the tirst being taught in the log house with home-made seats. He resided with his father until eighteen years of age, then went to the pineries of Wisconsin and was employed in chopping until the following spring. He then rafted lumber down the Wisconsin and Mississippi Rivers for a time, and on returning home aided his father in conducting the farm. Returning to the pineries, he was there employed for about three years, and before reaching his majority had saved money enough to pay for sixty acres of land, which were located on sections 27 and 34. He did not locate on the property, however, and a few months afterward traded for eighty acres on section 22, where he made his home for ten years. This he sold, and now owns two farms in Flora Township, on the southwest quarter of section 14, where he is successfully engaged in mixed farming. Mr. Robinson is now living retired in a pleasant home in Belvidere.

Miss Mary, the daughter of David Russell, was united in marriage with our subject in 1852. She was born in Vermont, while her father was a native of Massachusetts. Mr. Russell removed to the Green Mountain State in early life, where he resided until 1835, then came overland with teams to this State, being one of the first settlers in what is now Franklin Township. De Kalb County. He made a claim to a tract of Government land when it came into market, on which he erected a log house where he lived for two years, at the end of that time taking up his abode in this township, where his death occurred. The maiden name of his wife was Lydia Woodward; she was born in Vermont and died on the home farm in this county.

Respectfully yours

To Mr. and Mrs. Robinson have been born two children: Freddie, who died at the age of twenty months, and Annie, whose death occurred when seventeen months old. They have an adopted daughter, Maggie, now Mrs. Frank Webber, Jr. Our subject is a Republican in politics, and for four years served on the County Board of Supervisors.

ORACE BROWN. Like all other cities of note, Rockford has been built up by a class of energetic men, among whom may be properly mentioned Mr. Brown, whose portrait and biographical sketch are here presented. He is one of the charter members and Vice-president of the Rockford National Bank, which important position he has held since its organization in 1871. He has also been a charter member of the Forest City Insurance Company and has served as a member of its Board of Directors, and as Treasurer and Vice-president of the company. He was elected President of the Skandia Furniture Company at the time of its organization.

Born in Springfield, Windsor County, Vt., June 24, 1824, our subject is the grandson of Elisha Brown, who was, from the best information at hand, a native of Winchendon, Mass., and of English ancestry. The latter-named gentleman was a patriot of the Revolutionary War, participating in the battle of Bunker Hill. He emigrated to the town of Springfield in 1788, where he was among the very early settlers. He purchased a tract of land on the east side of the village, which he cleared, and sold with the intention of going to Western New York, but, being prevailed on by his wife and friends to remain, he bought another tract of timber land on the west side of the village. This he improved and put under excellent cultivation and continued to reside upon it until his death, September 10, 1827, when in his seventy-ninth year.

The maiden name of the grandmother of our subject was Merril Bates; she was born in Cohasset, Mass., in 1754, and was also of English ancestry. Her father was killed in the battle of Bunker Hill. Mrs. Merril Brown departed this life in Springfield, Vt., August 22, 1851, after having attained the advanced age of ninety-seven years.

Jonathan Brown, the father of him of whom we write, was a native of Springfield, Vt., where his birth occurred, October 5, 1796. His father operated a tannery and shoe factory in connection with his farming interests, and the father of our subject learned the trade of a shoemaker under him. After attaining his majority, he was in the employ of his father for five years, at the expiration of which time he located on land given him by the latter and which was located one and one-half miles northwest of Springfield. He continued to make his home on that estate for a number of years, and later moving into the village, lived retired until his decease, August 8, 1878.

Hannah Stocker was the maiden name of our subject's mother; she was born in Springfield, Vt., November 1, 1801, and was the daughter of Elijah Stocker, a native of the Bay State, and of English ancestry. Mr. Stocker was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and, like many of the ancestors of our subject, participated in the famous battle of Bunker Hill. He was among the early settlers of Springfield, where he departed this life in 1807. He had married Sallie Scholey, who was born in Lynn, Mass., of Scotch ancestry. Hannah Stockes, on the death of her husband, was married to a Mr. Towne, and spent her last days in Windsor County, Vt. The children of whom she became the mother bore the respective names of Emily Lois, Horace, Henry (see sketch), Augusta, Homer, and Abbic. The eldest child was born May 1, 1823, and died December 17, 1824.

Horace Brown was reared and educated in his native county, and assisted his father in operating the home farm until reaching his twentieth year. He then engaged to work one summer for William Thayer, whose daughter he afterward married. In 1845, he went to Lausingburgh, N. Y., where he was engaged in the manufacture of oilcloth, continuing to be thus employed until 1850, when he came to Hilinois to look over the country, with a view to securing a location for his future home. He came by the way of the railroad to Buffalo, where he embarked on the steamer "Niagara," Capt. Pease commanding, to Chicago, which was then a city of about thirty thousand population. From there he went to Elgin, at that time the Western terminus of the railroad, and thence by stage to Rockford, a village of eighteen hundred. He immediately secured two hundred acres of land in what is now New Milford Township, paying for the same $10 an acre. One hundred acres of this tract was under cultivation, and he spent the first winter on the farm. He then returned to Vermont and was married, in September, 1850, to Mary A. Thayer. He at once started with his bride for Rockford, coming hither via the same route as when making the trip alone, some time previously.

It was the intention of Mr. Brown to make his permanent home upon the above-named farm, but as wheat at that time sold for forty-five or fifty cents a bushel, and as there was no market whatever for corn, except as feed, he spent the winter in Rockford. He returned to Lansingburgh, N. Y., and resumed work in the oil-cloth factory, where he was employed until the fall of 1852, when he again came to Rockford and traded his farm for West Side city property, opening up in the livery business in partnership with G. W. Reynolds. Mr. Brown was thus successfully engaged for two years, when he disposed of his interest in the business and returned to his native town. spending the winter in the village of Springfield. he purchased a farm near that village, which he sold at a good profit a few weeks later. He then became owner of a sawmill, which was operated by water-power on the Black River, and at the same time purchased a pleasant home in the village. Later, he bought sixty acres of his Grandfather Brown's homestead, in addition to which, he became the owner of a like amount of timber land, which was located three miles from the village.

In the fall of 1858, he disposed of his interests in his native State, and in the spring of the following year came to Rockford, where he has been a continuous resident since. When locating in that section, Luke Joslin, the uncle of his wife, owned a large tract of land, now known as Park Ridge. He deeded forty-four acres of his property to our subject, which is his present beautiful home. The Ridge extends from north to south, with a western slope, on the top of which is located his commodious residence. This is a farm structure of a modern style of architecture and is finished and furnished in a style which indicates that its inmates are people of culture and means. The dwelling is so located that it commands a magnificent view of the Rock River and also the city, the interests of which he has been an active factor in promoting.

Mrs. Horace Brown was born in Springfield, Vt., and is the daughter of the Hon. William Thayer, whose birth occurred January 17, 1790, in Rockingham, that State. His father, Capt. William Thayer, was a native of Massachusetts and was one of the early settlers in the town of Rockingham, where he improved a fine farm and spent the remainder of his days. The maiden name of his wife, the grandmother of Mrs. Brown, was Susan Lincoln; she was also born in Massachusetts, and departed this life on the home farm in Rockingham. The father of Mrs. Brown, when a young man, joined the State militia, of which he was commissioned Captain. After his marriage, he located in Springfield, Windsor County, and there operated a tannery and was engaged in the manufacture of shoes for a number of years. Desiring to pass his remaining years on the old homestead in Rockingham, he returned there and died December 23, 1853.

The maiden name of Mrs. Brown's mother was Sarah Joslin; her birth occurred on the 15th of August, 1794, in Winchendon, Mass. Her father was Peter Joslin, whose birth occurred October 12, 1759, in Lancaster, Mass. He was married, in 1786, to Sarah Kidder, who was also a native of that place, having been born August 30, 1764. They continued to reside in Winchendon some years after their marriage, thence went to Walpole, N. H., where they passed the remainder of their life. Mrs. Sarah Thayer died January 5, 1858, in Rockingham, after having become the mother of the following six children: Sarah, Mary A., Herman, John, Harriet and George.

Mr, and Mrs. Horace Brown of this sketch have one son living, William Thayer, who married Mary L. Spalding, and has two children: Horace Spalding, and Harriet Irene. He resides at Kenwood, Chicago, and is a man of broad and comprehensive business attainments. He is a member of the firm of A. G. Spalding & Bros., wholesale and retail dealers in sporting goods, with their main office in New York and branch establishments in London, Chicago and Philadelphia.

The eldest daughter of our subject, Alice C., was born in Springfield, Vt., April 28, 1856; she married Duncan II. Ferguson, and died March 23, 1890, leaving one son, Donald Brown. Carrie A., the second daughter of our subject, was born July 27, 1860, and passed to the world beyond April 10, 1885. Our subject and his estimable wife are influential members of the First Congregational Church, to the support of which they are liberal contributors.

In politics, Mr. Brown has been an ardent Republican since the organization of that party. He has been the recipient of many positions of trust in local affairs, and for nine years was City Treasurer. Being of a retiring disposition, he has always shrunk from notoriety and public notice, and although he has often been urged by his friends to allow the use of his name as a candidate for the highest office in the gift of his fellow-townsmen, he has invariably declined. A man of decided ability, he is very popular with the people of this city, and is well calculated to aid in the upbuilding of a new country, being a citizen of sterling worth and integrity.

OHN BEATTIE, deceased. The subject of this sketch was a man whose sterling worth of character was recognized by all, and his death, which occurred at his residence in Rockford, on the 3d of December, 1889, was deeply deplored by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, as well as by his own immediate and sorrowing household. For more than fifty years he had been a resident of Rockford, and during his whole life naught was ever said derogatory to his character and honor. Kind and warm-hearted, his memory will live in the hearts of the people long after his body has moldered to dust. He had a beautiful home in Rockford, and was surrounded by all that made life enjoyable—domestic happiness and prosperity, a clean conscience and abundant means. To his praise, it may be said that his accumulations were made without loss or injustice to others, and that he was strictly upright and honorable in all his dealings.

Mr. Beattie was born in the North of Ireland, on the 21st of June, 1811, and was of Scotch parentage. In 1831, he left the land of his birth for America, and, like so many other successful citizens, his only patrimony was his vigor of body and mind. He landed in the city of New York and followed earpentering until the year 1837, when, in company with the late William Peters, he moved to Rockford, where he became identified with the push and bustle of that frontier town. Success followed his efforts, and he soon became the owner of a block of land in the principal part of the city, and this has been the home of the family for many years. He owned several business houses on West State Street, also other valuable property, and was one of the city's most prosperous and thorough-going men. In politics, he was a Republican.

Previous to coming to Rockford, Mr. Beattie went to Canada, and was married in Niagara to Miss Mary A. Davidson, who was then residing with her brother at that place. Miss Davidson, like Mr. Beattie, was of Scotch parentage, born in the North of Ireland, February 2, 1815, and both were reared in the same neighborhood. She came with her husband to Rockford in 1838, and during all the subsequent years stood side by side with him in the journey of life. She survived him a little over two years and died at her home in this city on the 7th of December, 1891. She was reared in the faith of the Episcopal Church and was a most excellent woman. Mr. Beattie's parents were natives of Scotland, and were representative citizens of their community. Both were members of the Presbyterian Church, and their son, the subject of this sketch, also held memberslup in the same. The latter was the only one of the family to come to the States.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Beattie were born seven children, but four of whom survive: Edward W., a real-estate dealer, resides in Helena, Mont., is quite an active and extensive business man, and is largely interested in mines. He married Miss Caroline O. Berry, who is now deceased. Mary 1. and Anna reside at the old home and are cultured and intelligent ladies; George D. is a partner with his brother in business at Helena, and is engaged in extensive business operations. The children deceased are Alexander II., who had been admitted to the Bar, and had a successful professional career opening before him, but he enlisted in the Seventy-fourth Illinois Regiment, and the wounds he received during service were in the end the cause of his death, December 20, 1884. He was a prosperous business man of Helena, Mont. John H. died February 26, 1863, when about twenty-one years of age, and Anna died when young. The surviving members of the family in Rockford attend the Second Congregational Church.

OHN W. BEATSON, County Treasurer of Winnebago County, was elected to that office in November, 1890, which position he fills to the general satisfaction of the community. In politics, he is a decided Republican and is recognized as a great worker in the ranks. Being a Grand Army man, he is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, and Winnebago Lodge No. 31, 1, 0, 0, F., in which order he has many friends by whom he is highly regarded. He is also connected with Eastern Star Lodge No. 166, A. F. & A. M., Winnebago Chapter No. 24, R. A. M., Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T., and Rockford Camp No. 51, M. W. A.

Mr. Beatson was born in Kinross-shire, Scotland, April 20, 1840, being the son of William Beatson, also a native of that place, as was his grandfather. The father of our subject learned the trade of a stone mason, which he followed in his native land until 1843, when, with his wife and three children, he set sail from Edinboro and landed at New York, after a voyage of seven weeks. Going to the town of Florida, Montgomery County, N. Y., Mr. Beatson lived there for six years, when he came to Winnebago County by the way of the Lakes to Milwankee, and thence overland with teams to this section. He bought eighty acres of Government land in what is now Burritt Township, where he at once erected a house of slabs and resided with his family for a number of years. Later coming to Rockford, he lived retired until his decease, June 6, 1882. His wife at the time of their marriage was known as Elizabeth Wilson, a native of Scotland; she now resides in Rockford, in the seventy-eighth year of her age.

The original of this sketch was the second in order of birth of the parental family of seven children, his brothers and sisters being George A., Janet, Agnes, David, Caroline and Julia, He was three years of age when brought to the New World and thus has no recollection of his native land. In 1859, Mr. Beatson went to Colorado in company with five other gentlemen, they traveling with teams to Quincy, where they embarked on a steamboat to Hannibal, then by way of railroad to St. Joseph, Mo., where they secured teams and journeyed across the plains. At that time Denver was a city of wigwams, containing but one white man, who kept store in a log building. Our subjeet, going to Gregory Diggings, engaged in quartz mining, remaining there for a twelvemonth, when he returned and resumed farming on the old home farm. April 18, 1861, however, at the first call for troops, Mr. Beatson enlisted in Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry for three months. He was mustered in at Springfield, whence he went to Bird's Point, where he remained until the expiration of his term of service, and receiving his discharge in August, returned home, and resumed farming until the following year, when he again became a member of Company D, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. Going South with his regiment, our subject participated in all the marches and battles in which it was engaged until the close of the war. Among the more important battles in which he fought we make mention of Stone River, Chattanooga, Missionary Ridge, and the Aslanta Campaign, and he was later with the command of Thomas in the pursuit of Hood's army, and thus occurred the battles of Franklin and Nashville. Being wounded at Mission Ridge twice, our subject remained with his regiment in preference to going to the hospital. He was appointed First Sergeant at the organization of the regiment, and in April, 1863, was promoted to be Second Lieutenant, and again, in April, 1864, was honored with the rank of First Lieutenant, commanding the company from November, 1863, until his discharge at Nashville, Tenn., June 10, 1865.

Returning again to the peaceful pursuits of farm life, Mr. Beatson was engaged in cultivating the soil until 1869, when he went to Winnebago Township and purchased a farm, upon which he resided until 1875, when he removed to another portion of the township, on a tract which came into his possession, and there made his home until 1882. At that date coming to Rockford, our subject has since been actively engaged in promoting its welfare.

Jennie E. Van Alstine, December 14, 1865, was united in marriage with our subject. She is a native of Montgomery County, N. Y., and the daughter of Jacob G. and Margaret (Coventry) Van Alstine. To them have been born four children, Rosilla, Daisy, Margaret, and Hattie, who all reside with their parents.

ICHARD LIGITFOOT is a typical representative of the industrious and intelligent English pioneers of Winnebago County, who have been so useful in developing its rich agricultural resources. Coming here in 1851, he identified himself with the farmers and stockraisers of Burritt Township, and is living retired at the present time on his splendid estate of two hundred and forty-five acres.

Born in Landsallas Parish, County Cornwall, England, January 29, 1824, our subject is a son of William Lightfoot, who, with his father, Richard, was a native of the above-named shire. The father of our subject was reared on a farm and spent his entire life in Cornwall. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Hocken; she was also a native of the above-named parish and county, and the daughter of William Hocken. Mrs. Lightfoot reared a family of nine children: Richard, Elizabeth, Mary A., Jane A., William, Nathaniel, Sophia, Anna and Maria. Nathaniel came to the New World, and died in the service of the United States during the late war. Jane is at the present time residing in California.

Richard Lightfoot commenced when very young to assist his grandfather on the home farm, residing with him until twenty-four years of age, when he returned home, and in 1851 came to America, setting sail from Plymouth, and landing in Quebee after a tedious voyage of eight weeks and four days. Our subject immediately came to Winnebago County by way of the water route to Huntley, McHenry County, this State, and as there were no railroads in the vicinity, engaged a team to convey him to this county. He commenced life here by working out by the month for four years, and rented land for four years, at the end of which time, being industrious and economical, he was enabled to purchase a tract of eighty acres in Burritt Township. There were a small frame house and log stable on the place, into the former of which Mr. Lightfoot moved and commenced the work of improving his land, for which he had paid $20 per acre. At one time he was the proprietor of three hundred and twenty-five acres, but, disposing of a portion of it, still owns two hundred and fortyfive acres which he has improved with good buildings and machinery. In 1881, he built a beautiful residence one-quarter of a mile distant from the old home, in which he purposes to spend his declining years in peace and quietness.

Susannah (Statham) Swindall became the wife of our subject, October 10, 1859. She was born in the village of Draycott, Derbyshire, England, June 14, 1825, and is a daughter of William and Anna (Astell) Statham. Her father was born in the same village in which her birth occurred, and was the son of Thomas and Mary (Allen) Statham, The mother of Mrs. Lightfoot was born at Winn Mills, Derbyshire, England, and was a daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Boxon) Astell, Mrs. Lightfoot was married in Stockport, Lancashire, when twenty-one years of age, to John Swindall a native of that county, with whom she came to America in 1849, sailing from Liverpool, March 21, on the vessel "Washington." Arriving in Boston, one month later, the young couple located in Salem, Mass., where they resided until 1857, and then came to Rockford, where the husband died in 1859

Mr. and Mrs. Lightfoot have one son, Nathaniel, who married Melissa Franklin, and is the father of two children: Eva May and Albert Richard, By her first union, the wife of our subject is the mother of three children: William J., Margaret Ann and Emma J. William married Sarah Sullivan, and is the father of two children, Guy and Glenn; Margaret is the wife of Henry Heiestand, which union has resulted in the birth of four children: Guy, Orate May, Floyd and Robbie; Emma, Mrs. George Franklin, has six children: Susie, Edith, Carroll, Walter, Bertha and Irmy. Our subject and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and by the members of the congregation, as well as by the citizens in general, they are respected as their good qualities deserve.

SEORGE C. TALLERDAY, M. D., has been s engaged in the practice of medicine in Belvidere since 1890. His life record is as follows: He was born in Cass County, Mich., on the 2d of September, 1851. His father, David S. Tallerday, was born near Auburn, N. Y., and was a son of James Tallerday, Esq. The great-grandfather of our subject, James Tallerday, Sr., was a native of France and with La Fayette came to America. He commanded a vessel in the interests of the Colonies during the Revolutionary War. On one oceasion, he went ashore to get some water, and as he was returning to his vessel in a skiff, was shot by a poisoned arrow and died from the effects of the wound. His two sons were taken ashore and reared by a Dutch family in New York. One of the brothers spelled the name Talady.

The father of our subject was reared and married in the Empire State and went to Elkhart County, Ind., becoming one of its early settlers. He there secured a tract of land and engaged in farming until 1854, when he removed to Williams County, Ohio, and bought a farm in Bridgewater Township. After operating it for four years, he removed to Stryker, where he engaged in merchandising until the breaking out of the war. At the first call for troops, he assisted in raising Company E of the Fourteenth Ohio Infantry and was commissioned Second Lieutenant and afterward promoted to the rank of First Lieutenant. troops were mustered in for three months but served nearly five. When honorably discharged, Mr. Tallerday returned home and raised another company, which became Company C, of the Thirtyeighth Ohio Regiment. He was mustered in as Captain. After the battle of Mill Spring, he was taken sick and sent to Louisville, Ky., where he was placed in charge of the transfer office, directly under the orders of Secretary Stanton. He remained in charge at that place until the spring of 1863, when he was placed in charge of the United States steamer "Baltie," with the rank of Major, and continued in the marine service until after the elose of the war, when he settled in Mississippi. He purchased a plantation at Canton, and engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1867, when, on account of the hostility of the people in that region, he returned to the North and engaged in mercantile pursuits in Chicago. For the past eight years, he has been engaged in the real-estate business in Washington, D. C. His wife bore the maiden name of Caroline Graves. She was born in Niagara County, N. Y., and is a daughter of Josiah and Eunice Graves.

The Doctor began his education in the district schools of Williams County, and afterward attended the village schools of La Grange, Ohio, He was in Louisville at the time his father was stationed there and daily made the rounds of the hospital. Though but a boy at the time, he determined then that he would become a physician. After the war, he attended a select school in Vicksburg and later the graded school of Kendallville, Ind., and Bryan, Ohio. At the age of thirteen years, he began supporting himself, and from that time forward not only earned his own livelihood but paid his own tuition through college. Until seventeen years of age, he traveled quite extensively and at the age of eighteen years commenced teaching, which he followed until 1872. In the meantime, he spent all his leisure hours in studying medicine. From 1872 until 1877, he engaged in merchandising in Chicago and during that time kept up his medical studies. In the latter year, he entered the office of Prof. W. H. Davis, of Chicago, and in 1880 was graduated from the Bennett Medical College. In June of that year, he located at Poplar Grove and at once entered upon a lucrative practice, which he continued until 1890, when he came to Belvidere.

On the 1st of January, 1872, Mr. Tallerday and Susan Markley were married. The lady was born in Fulton County, Ohio, was a daughter of Andrew J. Markley and died June 22, 1888. On the 11th of May, 1891, the Doetor wedded Julia Markley, a sister of his first wife. By the former union were born four children but Jesse, who was born March 9, 1875, died April 17, 1881. Myrta, George C. and Lottie are still living.

The Doctor is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M.; Harvard Commandery, K. T.; Poplar Grove Lodge, A. O. U. W.; Boone Camp No. 52, M. W. A., and T. G. Lawler Camp, S. V. Dr. Tallerday has seeured a liberal patronage, the result of his skill and ability, and among his professional brethren ranks high. His career has already been a successful one and undoubtedly he will steadily continue to work his way upward.

ENRY GABLE, who has been a resident of the village of Cherry Valley since March, 1890, was born in Erie County, N. Y., in 1836. His father, who had his birth in Pennsylvania in 1804, emigrated to the Empire State, where he resided until his death in 1865, when sixty-one years of age. His wife, Miss Betsey Leib, hailed from Lancaster County, Pa., and died in 1875 in her sixty-eighth year. The parents of our subject were married in New York, where they became the parents of seven children, one of whom, a daughter, Sarah, died when eighteen years of age. A brother of our subject, William Gable, was a volunteer during the late Civil War, and saw much active service in the Union army.

He of whom we write was given but limited advantages for obtaining an education, and at the time his parents emigrated to Cherry Valley, Winnebago County, he accompanied them hither. His father was also a volunteer in the late war, but after serving ninety days was rejected. The elder Mr. Gable located eighty acres of Government land, which was then called The Island, where he erected a comfortable house and resided for a number of years. That property was the last Government land that was entered in this township. He later traded his property, which was valued at $25 an acre, for one hundred and twenty acres of land in Fayette County, Iowa. After a residence there of three years, in 1859 he returned to Cherry Valley Township, where he was residing at the time of his decease.

Henry Gable and Miss Minerva Wood, of Canada East, were united in marriage in 1860. The lady was the daughter of Peter and Laura (Hitchcock) Wood. Her mother was a sister of Chester Hitchcock, of California. They farmed on rented land after their marriage, and the first property which Mr. Gable owned consisted of fifty acres which he purchased in Belvidere Township, in 1868. After a residence there of three years, our subject disposed of that property and moved onto a farm of one hundred and ten aeres which he had purchased in Fayette County, Iowa, and after residing upon it three years, in 1871 returned to this county and farmed on the historic Black Hawk property, which place was his home until 1879. Our subject then became the proprietor of one hundred and five acres on section 16, known as the Frick Farm, for which he paid $25.50 per acre, with fair improvements. This he cultivated in a most profitable manner, until in March, 1890, he disposed of it at $50 an acre, and moved into the village of Cherry Valley.

To our subject and his estimable wife have been born one daughter and one son: Fannie B., who was born in September, 1862, and Chester B., who was born in February, 1867. The daughter is now Mrs. Alden Cramer, a broom manufacturer of Cherry Valley; they have one son. Earl B., a bright lad of seven years. Mr. Gable has cast his vote and influence in favor of the candidates of the Republican party.

The father of Mrs. Gable was one of the pioneers of West Shefford, Canada, and came to the States and located in this township in 1857, where he died at the advanced age of seventy-one years. His wife, who preceded him to the better land, died in 1862. They were the parents of four daughters, all of whom are living in different States.

ILLIAM L. GRONEMAN, now deceased, was for many years a well-known and prominent citizen of Rockford. He was born in Prussia, in the year 1823. His father was a Lutheran minister, who devoted his entire life to Gospel work. Our subject was reared to manhood in his native land, his early life passing uneventfully, and at length be engaged in merchandising on a small scale. It was in 1854 that he carried out his determination to come to America. Bidding good-bye to his old home, he crossed the Atlantic, taking passage on a sailing-vessel at Bremen. He made his first location in Rockford, but after a short time went to Dubuque, Iowa, where he spent some ten years. He then returned to this city, where he made his home until his death in 1878.

In 1864, Mr. Groneman led to the marriage altar Miss Justena Sander, who was born on the banks of the Rhine in Germany, June 14, 1838. Her parents, John and Susanna (Loudenbeimer) Sander, spent their entire lives in that country. About eighty years ago, Peter Sander, the grandfather of Mis. Groneman, lived a few years in Philadelphia, and then returned to his native land. Her father was a cattle-dealer and butcher, and died at the age of seventy years, his wife passing away the year previous. They were both members of the Presbyterian Church. Their family numbered six children, four of whom are living in this country: a brother in New York, a sister in Rockford, Mrs. Groneman, and a brother Jacob in Milwaukee. Wis. It was in 1859 that Mrs. Groneman came to the United States. Her residence in Rockford dates since 1863, and here she has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Two children were born unto Mr. and Mrs. Groneman, but William T. died in Dubuque, Iowa, at the age of three months. Herman, the surviving son, resides at home with his mother. He is a prominent young man, and prosperous. Being industrious and enterprising, he is meeting with excellent success, and is recognized as a wide-awake and enterprising young business man. He is an honored member of, and takes quite an active interest in, the Odd Fellows' Society.

After his return to Rockford in 1866, Mr. Groneman opened a restaurant in this city, carrying on business in that line until within a few years of his death. From the beginning, he secured a liberal patronage, and had an excellent trade. As his financial resources increased, he made investments in real estate, and at his death owned some fine property, including a business house at No. 108 West State Street and another at No 501 West State Street, which is now owned by his widow. She manages the property which he left, and in its care shows excellent executive and business ability. In politics, Mr. Groneman was a supporter of Republican principles, held membership with the Lutheran Church, and was a charter member of the Germania Society. He was recognized as one of the leading German citizens, public-spirited and progressive, and was held in high esteem for his sterling worth and the many excellencies of his character.

OWARD O. HILTON, editor-in-chief of the Rockford Republican, has occupied that position since its first issue, April 10, 1890.

Possessing natural newspaper ability and tact, he has made his calling a success. He is a stanch Republican in politics and has figured prominently in party conventions and on the stump.

Born near Atchison, Kan., about twenty-eight years ago, Mr. Hilton is a young man whose ability is attested by his present position as editor-inchief of an influential paper like the Republican, with two editions daily and semi-weekly and weekly editions, in a city like Rockford. He was educated in the public schools of his native city and of Chicago and at the Lincoln University, at Lincoln, this State, at which latter place he was engaged in his first newspaper work, on the Lincoln Times. He was later city editor of the Grand Island (Neb.) Independent, and afterward held a like position on the Lincoln Journal, this State, and again with the Bloomington Leader. Coming to Rockford in 1881, he was engaged on the Register staff until the Republican was founded.

Our subject comes of good old New England stock on his father's side, the latter being a native of the Pine Tree State, who went West during the early days and became one of the leading business men of Atchison, Kan. His death occurred there in the prime of life, when our subject was but seven years of age. The maiden name of his mother was Julia M. Mannen, a native of McLean County, Ill. She was born of Southern parents, and now lives at Effingham, Kan.

Howard O. Hilton and Miss Etta Leslie, of Chieago, were married in that city in 1888. The lady was born in Logan County and was educated in the public schools at Lincoln and Bloomington. She is the mother of two daughters: Leslie L. and Helen. She is a member of the Court Street Methodist Church.

ARL E. CARLSON is but a late resident of Rockford, yet is a well-known real-estate, loan and insurance agent of the city. He was born in the Province of Halland, Sweden, July 24, 1858, and is the only surviving child of Carl and Fredericka (Hard) Carlson. His mother is descended from a titled family. His father, who was born October 16, 1822, is a contractor and builder. Both are yet living, the mother being seventy-five years of age. They are prominent members of the Swedish Lutheran Church.

Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native land, where he learned the trade of a machinist, there following it until his emigration to the United States. After attaining his majority, he sailed for New York City, and thence went to Pennsylvania, afterward coming to Rockford, where his brother, Prof. M. E. Carlson, was living. The latter was a graduate of a musical conservatory in his native country and served for five years as a Professor in the Royal Conservatory. On coming to this country, he took charge of the musical department in the Gustavus Adolphus College, of St. Peter, Minn., which position he held until 1889, when he came to Rockford. His death occurred on the 4th of August of the following year. His wife had died some years previous, leaving one son, Carl G. M. Carlson, who has been adopted by our subject.

C. E. Carlson was married in the land of his nativity to Christina Anderson, who spent her maidenhood days in Sweden, where her mother is yet living at the age of sixty-seven years. Her father, Andrew Anderson, is deceased. She has one sister in this country, Mrs. Anna Fostberg, who is living in Manistee, Mich. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Carlson have been born three children: Emma J., Clara L. and Annett P. The parents are both members of the Swedish Methodist Church, in which he holds office and is also Superintendent of the Sunday-school. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles.

It was in 1885 that Mr. Carlson came to Rockford. He had previously resided for a short time in Sheffield, Pa. On coming to this city, he engaged in business as a contractor and builder, being a practical architect, but has later given his attention to the real-estate, loan and insurance business. He has a commodious and fine office over the American Exchange Bank, on Seventh Street. For four years he has been engaged in this line and has built up an excellent business, having since coming to Rockford made a handsome property, worth about $40,000. He also owns an interest in the Rock River Subdivision, containing one hundred and twenty acres of platted ground, on which will be built the Rock River Planing Mill. The company has a capital stock of $50,000 and Mr. Carlson has been its Treasurer from its organization. He also owns stock in the Rockford Desk and Furniture Company, Star Furniture Company, Diamond Furniture Company, West End Furniture Company, Skandia Shoe Company, Rockford Paint Manufacturing Company, and others, and has been Director in a number of these enterprises. Those who know Mr. Carlson esteem him highly for his sterling worth, and he has a wide circle of acquaintances. He has steadily worked his way upward, and his own efforts have been the stepping-stones by which he has arisen to the enviable position which he to-day occupies.

The attention of the reader is invited to the accompanying portrait of Mr. Carlson.

AMUEL COOK. The credit for a large share of the enterprise which helps to make Harrison Township one of the most progressive of any in the county, is due to the gentleman whose name heads this sketch. He is full of push and energy, and is progressive and advanced in his ideas. Mr. Cook was born in Zora, Oxford County, Canada, on the 23d of November, 1844, and his father, James Cook, also a native of Canada, was born in Niagara County, seven miles from the Falls, whose mighty roaring could easily be heard at that distance, on the 27th December, 1812. The grandfather, Daniel Cook, was a native of New York, and a farmer all his life, as was his father before him. The latter was a Revolutionary soldier, and was probably slain in action. Daniel went to Canada when a young man, married there, and raised a family of nine children, six daughters and three sons. He remained there until about seventy-three years of age, when he and his wife came to the States. Their eldest son, Joel Cook, came to Winnebago County, Ill., from Canada, about 1850, and purchased a farm in this township. A few years later, he was joined by his aged parents, and with them moved to Boscobel, Wis., where they passed away within two months of each other, when about eighty-four years of age.

James Cook, the father of our subject, was the third son and the third child in order of birth of the nine children born to his parents. He married Sarah Hill, of Canada, daughter of Amos and Sarah (Phillips) Hill, both natives of New Brunswick where this daughter was born. Mr. and Mrs. Cook purchased a farm in Canada, and resided on this for about ten years, five of their children being born there. Subsequently, they sold this property and moved to Harrison, Winnebago County, Ill., purchasing one hundred and thirtyfive acres on section 20, at $16 per acre. There were good improvements on this place for the times, and the stone house on it at that time is part of Mr. Cook's present dwelling. There was also a frame barn, 30x10 feet, on this farm. and Mrs. Cook brought with them five children: Samuel (our subject); Daniel, probably a resident of Minnesota; Amos, an invalid for the last three years, resides in Durand; Isaac, a farmer near the village of Harrison, and Elizabeth, who died in Harrison, on the 11th of February, 1870, when sixteen years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Cook have had two children since coming to this State: Hannah L., who married William S. King, of Chicago, and Phobe A., who died on the 11th of February, 1878, at the same hour her sister Elizabeth passed away eight years before. The father of these children received his final summons on the 29th of October, 1884, when nearly seventy-two years of age, and his wife survived him about six years, dying on the old home-place June 17, 1890, when nearly seventy years of age. This most exemplary and worthy couple started in life empty-handed, but they accumulated a comfortable fortune, and passed their last days in ease and plenty.

The subject of this notice remained under the parrental roof until after the death of his parents, and since then he has bought out the other heirs. He has no hobby as a farmer, except in raising mules, and of these he has raised from six to twelve each year since 1875. He has not raised as many mules as S. K. Blodgett, but no man in this part of Illinois has made this business so much of a success as has Mr. Cook. He not only breeds and raises large, fine mules, but he matches and breaks He owns his own jacks, the same costing from $600 to $1,500 each, and he has sold several teams for $400. He grows the cereals, corn, oats, wheat and rye, and bales his hay, sometimes shipping it. All his land is fertile and productive, and near his house he has twenty acres of fine secondgrowth timber. Mr. Cook rebuilt and added to his barn in 1885, making it 40x57 feet, and other outbuildings, erected before and since, make the place look like a small village from a distance. He grinds his own and neighbors' feed with the wind from his wind mill which he put in in June, 1891. His farm is well watered.

Mr. Cook has been a Republican, but has broken ranks, and is now a freeman, politically. His brother Daniel was the first to volunteer in the army, going out when sixteen years of age, August, 1862, in Company B, Twenty-second Wisconsin Infantry, from Beloit; next, Amos, at seventeen years of age, volunteered from Harrison, June, 1864, in Company E, One Hundred and Forty-first Illinois, and in February, 1865, our subject went out in Company L, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, under Capt. Cole. Samuel was discharged in June, 1865. His brother Daniel served until April, 1863, when he was taken prisoner near Franklin, Tenn., and confined in Libby Prison thirty days. He was then paroled, and later discharged for disability. However, in 1864, he again entered the army for one hundred days, and was discharged as Corporal at the end of that time, Amos was in the one-hundred-day service and came home without a wound, although his present infirmity is no doubt the result of exposure and hardship during that time. The subject of this sketch is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R. He is still in the rank and file of single blessedness.

TOGE WILLIAM R. WELD, a prominent attorney, Justice of the Peace, and insurance and loan agent of Rockford, has made his home in this city since 1872, and has been a resident of the county for nearly half a century. With its history be has been connected since that early day, has done much for its upbuilding and progress, and has aided largely in its development.

The Judge was born in Le Roy, Genesee County, N. Y., in 1820, and is of English descent, the family being founded in this country during early Colonial days by Presbyterian missionaries from England, who are referred to in the history of New England, by Bancroft, and also by Bryant. It was also a prominent family of England, one branch thereof being Catholic, as indicated by the fact that Cardinal Weld, an eminent Catholic scholar and prelate, was of the same descent. Washington Weld, father of our subject, removed from Massachusetts to Le Roy, Genesee County, N. Y., in 1808, when Le Roy was a mere hamlet in the wilderness. He made the journey on foot, carrying his worldly possessions in a bundle on his back, and began the development and improvement of a home from land which he had obtained from the Government. He there resided until his death in 1851, at the age of seventy-three years. He was long an Elder in the Presbyterian Church.

In regard to politics, the father was a stanch Democrat, and having served as Justice of the Peace, was known as Squire Weld throughout the community. He married Elizabeth Strickland, who survived him some years and died in Le Roy, N. Y., at the age of seventy-seven. She was a member of the Baptist Church, and was a noble Christian woman. Our subject is the youngest in the family of five sons and one daughter, all of whom were married and reared families, and are now deceased, with the exception of the Judge. One brother, Washington, Jr., was a member of the Michigan State Legislature for some years.

Judge Weld was reared in Le Roy, N. Y., and was graduated from Brown's University, of Providence, R. I., in the Class of '42. He afterward studied law at the office of Hascall & Barton, of Le Roy, N. Y., and was admitted to the Bar in 1844. In that year, he came West, but did not make a permanent location until June, 1845, when he opened his first office in Geneva, Wis., where he engaged in legal practice for four years, after which he came to Illinois, settling in Rockton. He was an attorney at that place until 1872, when he came to Rockford. For some time he was connected with the hardware trade, and was Deputy Postmaster of Rockton for eight years, under Presidents Polk and Buchanan. He was also Township Clerk for some years.

Ere leaving the East, the Judge was married in Livingston County, N. Y., in January, 1815, to Mary W. Smith, who was born in Lima, N. Y., and for some years before her marriage was there engaged as a teacher in the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary teaching music. Their union has been blessed with five children: W. I., who married Florence Hasney, of Momenee, III., and handles the insurance business in his father's office; Emma L.. one of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, at the convent of South Bend, Ind.; Lizzie, who was graduated from the Sisters' school and the Rockford Conservatory, is now engaged in teaching music; Charles F. is a boot and shoe merchant and extensive real-estate dealer of Oakland, Cal.; F. J., a physician and surgeon of Rockford, wedded Mary Murtagh, formerly a successful teacher of this city.

From the year 1847 to 1883, Judge Weld was an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, serving in various official positions of the Subordinate and Grand Lodges of the State of Illinois, and, as Deputy Grand Master, instituting most of the Independent Order of Odd Fellow Lodges in this county. During most of the same period, he was also an active member of the Masonie order, serving about twelve years as Master of a Subordinate Lodge; also in official positions, both in Chapter and Commandery. He served as Justice of the Peace, and Associate Justice of this county, from 1856 until 1864. In 1872, he came to Rockford and established a law and insurance office, and in 1877 became Justice of the Peace, which office he has since filled. He is one of the prominent residents of this city, whose upright life has made him highly esteemed, and is an honored pioneer, who, for nearly half a century, has been connected with the history of this community. The Judge and his family are all members of the Catholic Church.

AMES M. GREEN, one of the enterprising and progressive farmers of Winnebago County, Cherry Valley Township, was born May 25, 1838, at Berry's Ferry, on the historic banks of the Shenandoah River, in Clarke County, Va. His parents were William II. and Eliza (Reiley) Green, the former born in 1792, and the latter in 1801. The father died February 25, 1838, three months before the birth of our subject. In the family were three sons and a daughter: our subject, William II., Andrew J., and Edna J., wife of John Blough, residents of Kirkland, III.

The maternal grandfather of our subject, John Reiley, was a native of Virginia and his ancestors for some generations were Virginians. He was a private soldier in Capt. Richardson's Company in the War of 1812, and participated in the battle of Lundy's Lane.

Our subject was eighteen years of age when his mother, then the wife of Abraham Shipe, removed with their family of twelve children to Athens County in the spring of 1856. They made the journey of three hundred miles by team, and on reaching their destination purchased one hundred and thirty acres of land along the Big Hocking River, where they lived for three years. On selling, they removed to Washington County and located in the small village of Belpreville. There Mr. Shipe opened a wagon and blacksmith shop and did business until the close of the war in the spring of 1866. Five sons of the family had aided their country in the struggle to preserve the Union. When the war was over, they came to Illinois and Mr. Shipe purchased sixty acres of land in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County. His death occurred in November, 1878. His widow is still living at her home in Flora, Boone County, and, although seventy-five years of age, is remarkably well preserved.

Mr. Green was married, November 29, 1871, to Miss Flora J. Campfield, of New Milford, daughter of William O. and Henrietta (Sanford) Campfield, who came from Nunda, Livingston County, N. Y., to Milford in 1844. They bought a farm, upon which the death of the father occurred in January, 1856. His wife survived him twenty-two years and died in January, 1878, at the age of sixty-three years. They left two sons and three daughters, all of whom are yet living. Mr. and Mrs. Green have four sons: Arthur C., Claude B. and Clarence E., twins, and Leroy M. The eldest is sixteen years of age and the youngest ten.

During the late war, Mr. Green enlisted in Washington County, Ohio, in April, 1861, for three months, and when that term had expired joined the Thirty-ninth Ohio Infantry, in which he served three years, most of the time as Orderly-Sergeant. In August, 1864, he was mustered out at Cincinnati, Ohio, after which he helped to recruit a company which left Columbus and went to Nashville, where it joined the One Hundred and Seventy-ninth regiment. Mr. Green remained with that company until the close of the war and was mustered out at Nashville in June, 1865, holding the rank of Second Lieutenant at the time of his discharge. He was wounded in the ankle and thigh at Corinth.

Soon after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Green rented the farm on which they reside and four years later purchased it. He now owns one hundred and four acres in Cherry Valley and twenty acres in Guilford Township, and successfully carries on general farming. Socially, he is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and he and his wife are faithful members of the Christian Church of Rockford. In polities, he is a stalwart Republican, and has served as Road Commissioner for six years, but has never been an office-secker. He was a faithful soldier during the late war and is now a valued citizen.

EORGE L. WINN, M. D., of Rockford, has been engaged in the practice of the medical profession in this city since 1882. On the 21st of February of that year, he opened an office at No. 435 West State Street, and has since been a well-known and leading physician of the community. In the ten years which have since passed, his practice has constantly increased, until it has now assumed large proportions. He is a close student of his profession and by his merit and ability has won the position which he to-day occupies.

The Doctor was born in Oswego County, N. Y., March 10, 1851, and is descended from an old family of the Mohawk Valley. His grandfather, Joseph Winn, was a life-long farmer of that valley and died at the age of ninety years. The parents of our subject, Morris and Nancy (Simmons) Winn, were born in that locality. They afterward removed to Oswego County, where Mr. Winn engaged in the lumber business for about eighteen years, after which he became a resident of Syracuse, where he established a cooper shop, and manufactured barrels for three years. He then came with his family to Wisconsin, where he engaged in farming for some time, after which he removed to Rockford. Mrs. Winn died in this city in 1889, when sixty years of age. She was a member of the Methodist Church and lived a consistent Christian life. Mr. Winn is now living retired, making his home with his son, Charles S., in Rockford. He was born in 1818, and, though now seventy-four years of age, is yet hale and hearty. Since the organization of the Republican party, he has been one of its stanch supporters, and is a member of the Methodist Church.

Our subject is one of a family of four children, three sons and a daughter. At the age of twelve years, he accompanied his parents to Wisconsin, and subsequently came with them to Illinois and became a student in the State University of Champaign, Ill. Having determined to engage in the practice of medicine, he began that study in the office of Dr. D. C. Green, of Woodstock, Ill.; he afterward spent one year in the medical department of the Michigan State University of Ann Arbor. He was graduated from the medical department of the Northwestern University of Chieago in the Class of '76, after which he entered upon the practice of his profession in Walworth County, Wis., where he spent five years. He then spent one year in Bellevue and other hospitals of New York City, after which he came to Rockford, as before stated.

In Walworth County, Wis., Dr. Winn wedded Miss Kate Dickson, who was born in that county and is a daughter of Dr. John Dickson, an old physician of Walworth County, who died in December, 1875. He was a prominent practitioner and had served as President of the Wisconsin State Medical Society. He was a native of Pennsylvania, and after graduating from Allegheny College of that State, emigrated at once to Wisconsin, establishing practice at Allen's Grove. His wife is still living at that place and is fifty-seven years of age. The wife of our subject was carefully reared in her native county and for some years engaged in teaching. By her marriage she became the mother of two children, Josephine and Marjorie, but both are now deceased. The Doctor is a member of the Odd Fellows' Society, belonging to the Encampment and Canton lodges of Rockford, and is a supporter of Republican principles. He is an active, progressive and ambitious young man and will no doubt win much success in the line of his profession. Of a genial nature, he makes friends wherever he goes.

ENRY RICHINGS, M. D. This highly esteemed physician of Rockford was born in what is now Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, Ill., on the 15th of May, 1842, and is the son of the late Dr. Charles H. Richings, who was born in Atherstone, Warwiekshire, England, February 26, 1815. Our subject is following closely in the steps of his distinguished father, and is recognized as one of the leading men in his profession in Rockford, and indeed in the county of Winnebago.

Dr. Charles II. Richings enjoyed exceptional advantages in an educational way in his boyhood, and his associations were of the best. When he left school, he joined, as a medical cadet, his uncle, who was a surgeon in the French army then occupying Brussels, and here he remained until he came to America, at the age of twenty-three; he traveled in a party of seventeen from Buffalo to Chicago, and came on to Winnebago County, reaching here July 27, 1836, having walked the whole distance from Chicago.

When Dr. Richings located his half-section about twelve miles west of what is now the city of Rockford, his was the nearest house to the site of this city on the west. Here he at once erected a log house of goodly proportions and comforts and devoted himself to agricultural pursuits and stockraising. The year following, Dr. Richings, the elder, returned to England for his bride, and upon the return of the young couple settled down to the stern realities of pioneer life.

It was in 1855, when Rockford had grown to be a pleasant village, that the Doctor removed hither and made his home within its boundaries during the remainder of his days. He early proved himself a physician of ability and skill, but as he was ambitious to keep up with the times, he pursued a regular course of medical study at Rush Medical College, Chicago, and received therefrom the degree of M. D. During the first five years of his settlement in the county, he had devoted his time to farming and stock-raising, but after that, until within two years of his death, he engaged in an active and extensive practice of medicine and surgery. His interest in the formation of the Winnebago County Medical Society was recognized by its members, and he was for some time its President. He was a man of strict integrity, exacting with himself and others in business, but always just, and delighted in acts of charity which were unknown to the community.

Dr. Charles H. Richings was baptized and reared in the Episcopal Church, but in his later years he did not recognize church relations as regards himself, yet strove ever to embody his religion in living the Golden Rule. In 1875, he visited his old home in England, and on his return experienced an illness on shipboard which was the beginning of the end. He was again taken very sick on Thanksgiving Day, 1882, and suffered much at various times, going at one time to New York for treatment, but with no good result. An operation which was performed with a hope of saving his life was in vain, and he died August 12, 1889, leaving a widow and the son whose name has been placed at the head of this sketch. While he was not an enlisted surgeon during the Civil War, it was understood by Gov. Yates that his services were to be commanded whenever necessary, and he was called as surgeon to various battlefields, notably those of Ft. Donelson, Pittsburg Landing and Pea Ridge. He was a very active member of the Masonie fraternity and received most notable degrees in the order.

The mother of our subject still lives and resides in Rockford, and the Doctor is her only child. He received his early edeation in the district school and later attended the public school of Rockford, after which he took a scientific course at Beloit College. He commenced the study of medicine with his father and in 1860 entered the medical department of the University of Michigan. Attending there for the period of one year, he entered the medical department of the University of New York, from which he was graduated in the Class of '63; then receiving the appointment of Sergeant in the United States army, served until the close of the war. He commenced his practice in Rockford, but after eight years went to Washington, D. C., where, during seven years, he built up an extensive practice. But as his interests were largely in Rockford, in 1879 he returned here and has pursued his profession actively since that time. He was married, in 1869, to Miss Maria Cammaun, of Rockford. The Doctor and his wife have one child, Mary H.

HARLES W. SHIRLEY. This gentleman, who is now living retired from active work of any kind, formerly owned an excellent tract of land of ninety-one acres, one-half mile from Rockford, to the cultivation of which he gave his personal attention. He has, however, platted the greater part of it into city lots, which he has disposed of at a handsome advance. He was born in La Porte County, Ind., August 17, 1835, while his father, Lewis Shirley, was born in Pennsylvania. As far as is known, the grandfather of our subject was also a native of the Keystone State, where he spent his entire life.

Lewis Shirley was reared to man's estate in his native town, and when attaining mature years removed to Ohio and resided for a time on the Muskingum River. He later went to Indiana, where he was one of the pioneers in La Porte County, and, entering from the Government a large tract of timber and prairie land, there made his home until 1835, which was the date of his advent into Illinois. He was accompanied hither by his wife and a family of six children, making the journey with teams. Mr. Shirley settled in what s now Cherry Valley Township, at a time when Northern Illinois was owned by the Government, and the surveys of that early day had not been completed. The father made a claim to a tract of land, and later, when the land came into market, went to the land office in Dixon and entered his tract.

The elder Mr. Shirley erected on his new place a double log house in which he established his family, and industriously commenced the work of clearing and improving his farm. He was very successful in his undertaking and added from time to time to his acreage until his estate included twelve hundred acres. He erected a saw and flouring mill, which he operated in addition to farming and which netted him a handsome income. He continued a resident of the above-named farm until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Julia Keith, a native of Ohio, who departed this life on the home farm in Cherry Valley Township. Her parents came to Winnebago County and located on the creek which was named after the father, and which extended through Rockford Township.

Charles W. Shirley was an infant when his parents came to Illinois, and, being reared to manhood in a new country, the hardships and privations which they were called upon to endure have made lasting impression upon his mind. There were no railroads in this vicinity for years, and while an inmate of the parental household he often hauled grain to Chicago, which was seventy-five miles dis-After reaching his twenty-first year, he worked for his father one season, and then, employing a good carpenter at $1 per day, built a house on the land which he purchased from his father, in Boone County, and in the spring of 1857 moved into the dwelling before it was lathed or plastered. He was engaged in farming there for two years, when, renting his estate, he went to California via New York and the Isthmus of Panama. Going into the mines in Placer County, Mr. Shirley was thus engaged for sixteen months, at the end of which time he returned home via the same route and commenced farming in Boone County. In 1868, he sold the farm and purchased land in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, where he was employed as an agriculturist until 1883. Then coming to Rockford, he became the proprietor of a good home in the city and later bought a farm of ninety-one acres, located one-half mile from Rockford. As before stated, he has platted this into lots and sold.

Miss Matilda A. Ream was married to our subject in 1856. She was a native of Thompson Township, Seneca County, Ohio, and was the daughter of Samuel and Sarah Ream, natives of Philadelphia, and later pioneers of Seneca County. The two children comprising the household of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley are Lafayette B. and Jessie C. The son married Katie Pratt and is the father of two children: Nettie and Dayton. Jessie became the wife of Frank L. Lake and has one child, Francis Almeda. Our subject and his wife are members of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church, and in polities Mr. Shirley votes the Republican ticket.

R. EDGAR T. BILLMYER, physician and surgeon, of Cherry Valley, Winnebago County, was born in Carroll County, Md., in 1832, and is a son of John and Harriet (McFarland) Billmyer, both of whom were natives of the same State. His father was a boot and shoe manufacturer and followed that business throughout his entire life. His first wife died in 1842, at the age of thirty-two years, leaving three sons and a daughter, and he afterward wedded Margaret Blacksten, by whom he had a number of children, but only two sons and two daughters are living. The Doctor is the only survivor of the first family, Eleanor, William and Joseph C, having all passed away.

The Doctor's father tried to make our subject learn the shoemaker's trade, but gave it up after attempting it for three autumns. He would find euclid, trigonometry and similar books on his bench, and, seeing that the son had an ambition to become a civil engineer, the father gave him a good common-school education and abandoned the attempt to teach him shoemaking. At the age of eighteen, the Doctor began teaching school, and after three years went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he attended the celebrated Physio-Medical College under Alva Curtis, graduating on the 16th of February, 1855. With his diploma in his possession, he came to Cherry Valley and has since engaged in practice. In 1858, he bought one hundred acres of land in this township and lived as a farmer and physician until 1861, when he sold his land at a good advance. Since that time he has engaged in the practice of medicine and in the raising of blooded horses. He has bred and owned some of blooded horses in this part of the country, including "Dr. Sheperd," with a record of 2:29½; "Delight," with a similar record in pacing; and "Glidess," with a record of 2:26½. He sold the first-named for $1,500, the second for $1,450 and the last for $1,000 when twenty-four years old. He now has in his possession some five blooded horses of his own and has in his care some belonging to other parties, being kept for breeding to his fine stallions.

June 2, 1858, the Doctor was married to Miss Mary A. Mittler, whose death occurred February 7, 1884. He was born and reared as a Democrat but east his first Presidential vote for John C. Fremont and has since been an ardent Republican. Throughout this community, he is widely and favorably known and has the high regard of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

ARSHALL H. REGAN, deceased, was one of the pioneer settlers of Winnebago County, and a man of exemplary habits and character. He located in Rockford in 1842, was a pioneer lumberman, and for many years was associated in business with Seely Perry. In connection with his lumber business, he was also a contractor and builder, and was regarded as one of the thrifty, enterprising business men of the place. He was a large contractor of both public and private buildings, and by his industry and good business acumen accumulated a handsome competence. At the time of his death, which occurred at his fine residence on East State Street, Rockford, in 1875, he was the owner of a considerable fortune. He had large interests in Wisconsin, especially in a large sawmill which he had established first on his own account, but later owned in partnership, and was well known for his push and energy. He was a good, reliable citizen.

In politics, Mr. Regan advocated the principles of the Democratic party. He was a liberal contributor to all worthy enterprises, especially those relating to churches and schools, and a willing hand was always extended to the needy and afflicted. He was born in Rochester, N. Y., and was partly reared in that State, and partly in Canada. He was still single when he came to Rockford, and here he was married to Miss Louisa Dewey, a native of the East. She died when thirty-seven years of age, having had six children, three of whom are now living: Emma, wife of O. A. Richardson (see sketch); George and William, the two sons now residing in Kansas.

Mr. Regan's second marriage was in Troy, N. Y., to Miss Adelaide Stewart, a native of Vermont. She was the daughter of Lyman Stewart, a Vermonter, who died when eighty-three years of age, and who was a prominent and successful farmer. Mrs. Stewart, whose maiden name was Orpha Kelsey, was also a native of Vermont, and died when she was sixty-four years of age. Both held membership in the Baptist Church. Mrs. Regan reeeived a thorough education in Troy, N. Y., and since the death of her husband has resided at her home at No. 815 North Court Street. She is a lady possessed of more than ordinary intelligence and has a host of warm friends. Her marriage resulted in the birth of two children: Frank S., a partner with G. O. Williams, of the Rockford Abstract Company, located at No. 313 West State Street, is a promising young man, and Mamie S., a refined and cultured young lady, is at home.

ARON MARCELLUS. The gentleman whose portrait adorns the opposite page was well known to the residents of Winnebago County, and was respected alike for his straightforward and honorable career and for his noble, Christian qualities of mind and heart. He was originally from the Empire State, born in Montgomery County, on March 13, 1829, and there he grew to manhood and learned his trade, that of a machinist.

The parents of our subject, A. and Mary (Manny) Marcellus, were also natives of the State of New York, but their ancestors were originally from Holland. The father was engaged as a mechanic and boat manufacturer, and died when past middle life. He and his wife were the parents of thirteen children, Aaron being among the elder members of the family. The latter was married in his native county to Miss Catherine Chalmers, who was born in Upper Canada, October 28, 1832. Her parents, James and Helen (Dixon) Chalmers, were natives of Scotland, and came to America in 1828 or 1829, after the birth of their first child, and lived for a number of years in Canada. Afterwards, about 1833, they removed to Lockport, N. Y., and the father became overseer of the locks on the Erie Canal, holding that position for many years. Later, Mr. Chalmers settled in Amsterdam, of that State, and there passed the remainder of his days, his death occurring in 1883. He was by trade a stone cutter and was a skilled workman. His first wife died in Amsterdam, N. Y., when a comparatively young woman, and his second marriage was to Miss Mary Burns, a native of Scotland. The latter died at Amsterdam, N. Y., in 1888, when eighty-three years of age. She was a member of the Baptist Church for more than fifty years and was in every sense a true Christian. Mr. Chalmers and his first wife were also active members of the same church.

Mrs. Marcellus was the second of five children born to her parents and was but seven years of age at the time of her mother's death. She was reared and educated principally in Amsterdam, N. Y., and was there married to Mr. Marcellus. In 1853, this young couple came to Rockford, and Mr. Marcellus, being a practical machinist, was engaged for some time with the J. P. Manny Reaper Company. Later he established for F. H. Manny the Rockford Bolt Works. A number of years after this, he and L. B. Wilkins became sole proprietors of the business and he was thus engaged at the time of his death, which occurred at his residence, No. 304 North Main Street, on October 5, 1876. He was a quiet, unassuming man, and those who knew him best loved and appreciated him most.

After her husband's death, Mrs. Marcellus disposed of her interest in the bolt works. Her beautiful home on Main Street is filled with all the comforts and conveniences of life and here she expects to pass the remainder of her days. She is the mother of one son, William II., a skilled machinist, who is now engaged in the machine department of the Rockford Watch Company. Mrs. Marcellus has an adopted daughter, Josephine, and a niece, Corrinne, both of whom make their home with her. All attend the Christian Union Church.

R. K. A. NORDERLING, the leading Swedish physician and surgeon of Rockford, was born on the 23d of February, 1857, in Greena, Sweden, and is a son of Gust A. Norderling, who died in his native land in middle life. He was a prominent resident of Greena, where his wife is still living at an advanced age. Three of the brothers of our subject had graduated from the high schools with the degree of A. B., and two are now in the postal service. One brother, Henry, is in business in Rantoul, Ill.

The Doctor spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native land and graduated from a college of pharmacy in Sweden in the Class of '75. He then secured a position as drug clerk and was thus employed until his emigration to the United States. After his arrival in this country, he joined an unele, Gust Asholtz, who had come to this country about half a century before and settled in the South. He became the owner of a plantation, and married a Southern lady who owned a number of slaves. He afterward entered the Southern army, and was captured and held in a Northern prison until peace was declared, when he returned to his home, but most of his property was gone. He was one of the prominent citizens of Montgomery, Ala., and died recently at quite an advanced age.

On coming to Rockford, Dr. Norderling engaged in the drug business for some time, and while thus employed, prepared himself to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of Chicago, in which he became a student in 1884. After pursuing a three-years' course, he was graduated in the Class of '87, receiving his diploma on his thirtieth birthday. He then came to Rockford and opened an office, continuing practice for two years, when he made a trip to the Old World and took a special course of medical study in the schools of Paris, Vienna, and Stockholm, Sweden. After a year spent in Europe, he returned to the United States and has since been successfully engaged in practice in this city. The excellent course of instruction which he has received is shown in his work, and he enjoys a well-deserved reputation for skill and ability. The Doctor is not only well versed in his profession, but is a highly educated man in other directions. In the colleges of his native land he studied Latin, Greek and French, and is conversant with those languages, as well as the Swedish and English tongues. His library is very large and contains many of the works of the best-known anthors.

In Paxton, Ill., the Doctor led to the marriage altar Miss Lindia Nelson, who was born in Ithaca, Ind., July 1, 1859, and when a young lady came with her parents to Illinois. Her father, John Nelson, made a fortune as a merchant, and he and his wife are now living retired. They are both natives of Sweden. The Doctor and his wife are among the leading Swedish people of this city, rank high in social circles and have many acquaintances and warm friends in the community. In polities, he is a Republican. A well-informed and cultured man, he has traveled extensively, seen much of the world and is a pleasant and genial eompanion. He ranks deservedly high among his professional brethren, and the liberal patronage which he receives is a just tribute to his merit.

ARCELLUS G. LEONARD, one of the early settlers of Belvidere, was born in Gloversville, Fulton County, N. Y., May 20, 1824. His grandfather, Josiah Leonard, was a native of Massachusetts, and on removing to the Empire State, located in Kingsboro, Montgomery County, where he purchased a large tract of land and engaged in farming throughout the remainder of his life.

Daniel Leonard, father of our subject, was born in the Bay State, and was one of the early glove and mitten manufacturers of Gloversville, N. Y., and one of the originators of the business there. He carried on operations at that place for some time, and afterward removed to St. Johnsville, where he engaged in milling, and spent the last years of his life at Gloversville. He wedded Mary Potter, a native of Connecticut, who died while visiting in Fulton, Ill. He had been previously married and had three children: Margaret, Horace and Frederick. Seven children were born of the second union: Edward, Polly, Ehzabeth, Josiah, Anna, Daniel and Marcellus G.

Our subject acquired his early education in the public schools of his native town. When he was a lad of ten years, his parents removed to St. Johnsville, N. Y., where he attended school quite steadily until seventeen years of age, when he entered the military school in Oswego, and, on completing a course there, engaged in teaching in Oswego County until 1846, which year witnessed his emigration to Illinois. He chose as the scene of his future labors the town of Belvidere, then a small place of about one thousand inhabitants. The surrounding country was but little improved, and he secured forty acres of Government land in Boone County. There were no railroads here, and all goods were hauled from Chicago, where the farmers marketed all their produce. Mr. Leonard embarked in the mercantile business in Belvidere, keeping a general store, and continued operations in that line for five years, when he turned his attention to dealing in real estate and grain, the insurance business and banking. During the war, he also established a glove and mitten factory, which he operated in addition to his other business interests for some years. For forty years, he has been engaged in buying and shipping grain, and, in addition to this, for the past few years has dealt in

An important event in the life of Mr. Leonard occurred September 27, 1847, when he was joined in wedlock with Mary Root, a native of Burlington, Vt., and a daughter of Silas Root. They became the parents of two children, but both are now deceased. Mary Gertrude died on the 10th of October, 1864; and Jessie died two days later. The mother was also called to her final rest July 22, 1886. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church, to which Mr. Leonard also belongs. In polities, he is a Republican and has served as a member of the Common Council. From an humble position he has worked his way upward to one of affluence, and has now a good business which yields him a comfortable competence.

ENJAMIN F. ANDERSON has derived a comfortable income from his farming operations, which he carries on successfully in this section. His birth occurred September 19, 1843, in Warren County, N. J., where also his father, Henry, and grandfather. Daniel Anderson, were born. The great-grandfather of our subject, Jacob Anderson, was a Captain in the Revolutionary War, and spent his entire life in New Jersey, of which State he was a native.

Daniel Anderson was a farmer in Hunterdon County, where he spent his entire life. The father of our subject learned the trade of a blacksmith which he followed in Warren County for a time, and then removing to Hunterdon County prosecuted his trade in a place called Union. Later, removing to Morris County, he purchased a farm near the locality known as Drakestown, and was engaged in cultivating his place until his death in 1869. His wife prior to her marriage was Margaret Fritts; she was born in Hunterdon County and died on the home farm about 1862. Mrs. Anderson was a daughter of Benjamin Fritts and bore her husband seven children.

The original of this sketch was five years old when his parents removed to Morris County, where he was reared and where he resided until attaining his majority. He then began life for himself by working out on farms by the month, and in 1871 came to Illinois, where he was similarly employed for the succeeding five years. In company with his father-in-law, he then purchased a farm, which is his present property, and for five years they were engaged in its cultivation, when our subject purchased the entire amount, which includes two hundred acres.

Benjamin F. Anderson was united in marriage, June 26, 1876, to Caroline Bunn, a native of Hunterdon County, N. J. The lady is the daughter of John E. Bunn, while her grandfather bore the name of Jacob. The latter-named gentleman was also a native of New Jersey. The grandfather of Mrs. Anderson spent his entire life in New Jersey, where her father was also married and made his home until 1856, when he came to Illinois and located in the vicinity of Byron, Ogle County. In 1867, he came to Winnebago County, and in 1876. as before stated, purchased a farm in company with his son-in-law. On disposing of his interest in the estate, he removed to Byron, where his death occurred in 1889. The maiden name of his wife was Sarah Conover, the daughter of Wilham and Jane (Petty) Conover. Our subject and his wife have two children: Henry and Herbert. Mrs. Anderson is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and, in politics, her husband is a Republican.

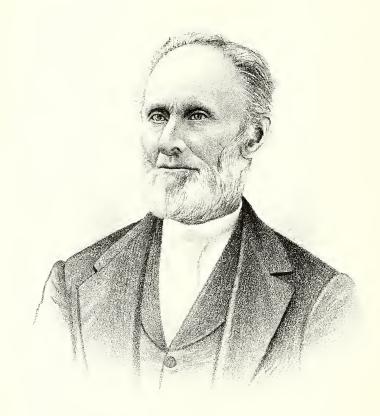

ASON J. LOVEJOY, who was engaged in general farming on sections 8 and 9, Harlem Township, is numbered among the early settlers of Winnebago County, and is well worthy of representation in this volume. He was born in New York City, August 8, 1818. His grandfather, Joshua Lovejoy, was a New England farmer, who reared four sons and several daughters and died in Sanbornton, N. H., at an advanced age. His wife survived him some years and spent her last days on the old homestead in New Hampshire.

Andrew Lovejoy, father of our subject, was born in Andover, Mass., June 18, 1772, and married Mary Taylor, who was born in Sanbornton, N. H., April 17, 1783, and was a daughter of Nason and Sarah Taylor. Her father died at the age of ninety years, and her mother when about eighty years of age. They reared two sons and several daughters. He was a Royal Arch Mason, a well-educated man and was Deacon in the Presbyterian Church. Andrew Lovejoy engaged in general merchandising in New Hampshire until our subject was nine years of age, when he removed with his family to Shipton, Lower Canada, where he ran a branch store. He also manufactured lumber and pearl ash and there did business for twelve years, when he took a trip to New York and then with his son came to Rockford, Ill., where they arrived February 12, 1837. They first settled on a claim of one hundred and sixty acres in Harlem Township, upon which our subject's son now resides. They built a log eabin and by the following spring were ready for the reception of the family, who then joined them. The mother died in Harlem Township, October, 1, 1840, at the age of fifty-seven years. Mr. Lovejoy passed away, April 15, 1856, having survived his wife sixteen years. He was a well-known and prominent citizen of this community. They had a family of nine children, all of whom grew to mature years and became heads of families: Marcia, born in New Hampshire in 1802; Hannah, March 18, 1804; Lucia, March 21, 1806; Andrew J., March 1, 1810; Charles Henry, March 5, 1812; Mary, April 9, 1814; Sarah Ann, in Boston, Mass., December 25, 1815; Nason J., in New York in 1818; Sophia Hill, in Sanbornton, N. H., May 25, 1823. Only two are now living, our subject and Mary, widow of T. A. Perkins, who for many years was a physician of Tazewell County, Ill.

Mr. Lovejov of this sketch came with his father to this county when a young man of nineteen years and has since been identified with the history of this community. He was married in Tazewell County, March 17, 1815, to Harriet E. Platt, a native of Connecticut, who in 1835 came West with her parents. She died in Harlem, June 22, 1866, at the age of forty-one years. Five sons and four daughters were born of their union, of whom six survive their mother. Andrew James, born December 5, 1815; Leslie Augustus, December 2, 1847; Mary, March 3, 1850; Nathan Taylor, April 28, 1852; Emily Annette, May 5, 1853; and Henry Stillman, April 4, 1865. Mr. Lovejov was again married, in Harlem Township, September 24, 1867, his second union being with Miss Louise R. Wood, a native of Maine, and a daughter of John and Mary (Patton) Wood, who removed from Maine to Roscoe in the summer of 1850. Their family of eleven children have all passed away except

yours Fruly D. Mr. D. O'Farrell

Mrs. Lovejoy and her brother, G. A. Wood, of Roscoe.

Mr. Lovejoy has served his Township as Supervisor for three terms and was Township Treasurer for eighteen years. His long continued service shows the confidence reposed in him by his fellow-citizens and his faithfulness to that trust. In politics, he was formerly a supporter of Republican principles but now votes with the Prohibition party. He is a member of the Methodist Church and has lived an upright life, winning the high esteem of all with whom he has been brought in contact.

EV. DAVID McDONALD O'FARRELL, now residing in Winnebago, was born December 15, 1809, in Pompey, Onondaga County, N. Y. William O'Farrell, his father, was a native of the same State, and, being left an orphan when an infant, was adopted into the family of a lady who bore the name of McDonald. She later married a Mr. Parmalee, residing near Rome, N. Y.

The father of our subject learned the trade of a shoemaker, and after his marriage resided for a few years in Pompey, and later removed to Spafford. There he purchased one hundred acres of heavily-timbered land, from which he cleared a farm, and there resided until his decease, December, 1863, when in his seventy-eighth year. The mother of our subject in those early days carded and spun wool and flax, and thus dressed her children in homespun material. She bore the maiden name of Dina Turbush, and was born in Dutchess County. She was the mother of ten children, and departed this life on the home farm in the town of Spafford.

The brothers and sisters of our subject were named respectively: Jeremiah, Francis A., William Mc., John W., Elihue, Maria, Catherine, Cornelia and Henry T. David, of this sketch, received his education in the pioneer schools of Onondaga County, and assisted the father in performing the farm duties until sixteen years old, when he commenced to learn the trade of a carriage-maker in Preble, Cortland County, completing his apprenticeship at Amber, Onondaga County. He did "jour" work for a time, and when twenty-two years of age attended school during the winter months, and, later took a year's course at the Cazenovia Seminary. He abandoned his studies for six months on account of ill-health, and on again resuming them entered Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, where he remained for nine months.

Mr. O'Farrell was then engaged in teaching and in working at his trade until 1836, when he joined the Oneida Annual Conference. He was licensed as a local preacher while at the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, was ordained Deacon in 1838, at Ithaca, and Elder, in 1840, at Cazenovia. He preached in different places in New York State for lifteen years, but on account of ill-health was compelled to abandon the ministry and purchase a farm of fifteen aeres, adjoining his father's estate in the town of Spafford, and there engage in farming. To this he added from time to time until in 1863 he had seventy-eight acres.

In the year above named, Rev. David O'Farrell disposed of his interests in the Empire State, and, coming to Illinois, purchased his present home in Winnebago County. September 4, 1836, he was married to Adeline Whitney, whose birth occurred in New York, January 11, 1812. She was a daughter of William and Clarinda (French) Whitney, and departed this life July 2, 1879. Our subject is the father of three children by this marriage: Adeline E., the wife of Menzes Stebbins; William M. and Noah P. He has also thirteen grandchildren living. The second marriage of our subject occurred in 1880, at which time Eunice J. (Shedd) Hudson became his wife. She was born in Sardinia, Erie County, N. Y., August 14, 1826, and was a daughter of Andrew W. and Emily (Harris) Shedd, and the widow of Richmond L. Hudson.

Mrs. O'Farrell's father was a native of Vermont, and when a young man removed to Eric County, N. Y., where he bought a tract of timber-land from the Holland Purchase Company. There he cleared a farm in the wilderness, erected a good set of frame buildings and resided until his decease, in 1882, at the advanced age of ninety-two years. His wife, who was a native of the Empire State, died two years previously, when in her eighty-second year. Mrs. O'Farrell was first married, in 1850, to Richmond Hudson, immediately after which she came to Winnebago County, where Mr. Hudson had purchased property in 1842. He was also the owner of land at Westfield Corners, but on selling that property purchased a farm about one-half mile southwest of the village, where he was engaged in farming until his death in 1863. The son born of this marriage, Frederick Hudson, is a graduate of the Cleveland (Ohio) Medical College, and is engaged in the practice of his profession at Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

On an accompanying page is a portrait of Rev. Mr. O'Farrell. He is a man of broad intelligence, and maintains a deep interest in the welfare of the community. While residing in Spafford, N. Y., he was elected Justice of the Peace three times, the last time being chosen by the unanimous vote of the people. He was for many years an adherent of the Republican party, but is now a stanch Prohibitionist.

LAUDIUS B. RICHARDSON, a retired farmer residing at No. 308 South Winnebago Street, Rockford, was for twenty-four years the occupant of a finely improved farm on section 16, Rockton Township, and was known as one of the progressive agriculturists of Winnebago County. He was born in St. Lawrenee County, N. Y., December 24, 1833, and is the son of William and Sabina (Parker) Richardson. His father, who was born in Massachusetts in 1780, was reared to the vocation of a farmer and in his early manhood removed from the Bay State to New York, where he purchased one hundred acres of timber land. He was three times married, his third wife being the mother of Claudius B.

In 1855, the Richardson family started on the Westward journey from the Empire State, coming from Ogdensburg to Racine on a steam propeller, and thence proceeding by stage to Rockton. The father purchased two farms in Winnebago County, one consisting of eighty acres in Rockton Township, and the other comprising one hundred and sixty acres in Shirland Township. He settled on the Rockton farm and later sold the other place and bought a home in the village of Rockton, where he died in the prime of life. His widow survived until 1889, and attained to the advanced age of eightysix years. Their children were: Henry, Claudius B. Amanda and Oscar.

The oldest child, Henry, had a passion for adventure and when about sixteen ran away from home, shipping on board a revenue cutter, where he remained two years. Soon after his honorable discharge, he shipped as a sailor and was before the mast a number of years but was afterward promoted from time to time until he was Captain. During one of his voyages, he sailed to China, returning via Cape Horn, and in 1851 crossed the plains to California. He was a man whose travels extended to almost every portion of the habitable earth, and his fund of information was inexhaustible. His death occurred in Chicago in 1864.

Claudius B. Richardson was also fond of travel and made five trips to California, going across the plains and returning via the Isthmus of Panama. His first journey to the Pacific coast was made in 1859, and the last trip in 1861, while the longest sojourn there was eighteen months. His marriage, on New Year's Day, 1864, united him with Emroy Gray, daughter of James L. and Sarah I. (Mitchell) Gray, Mrs. Richardson was born in Vermont, whence she accompanied her parents to Rockton in September, 1852, at the age of nine years. She was one of three children, her sister, Gertrude D., dying in infancy, and her brother, Henry M., dying in Fayetteville, Ark., as the result of a wound received while in the service. He enlisted in Company E, Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, at Mendota, Ill., and served first as a private and afterward as an Orderly, until the battle of Prairie Grove, Ark., where he was mortally wounded. He was an only son, honest and upright, and the pride of his parents who deeply mourned his death. Soon after his decease, his mother died, at the age of fifty-four years.

Mr. Gray afterward married again, his wife being Frances A. Locke, who still resides in Rockford. His death occurred in May 1888, at the age of seventy-two years, and his large property was willed to his only daughter, who is administratrix. Mrs. Richardson is a quiet, true and talented lady, and prior to her marriage engaged for a time in teaching. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has decided opinions on all the important questions of the age. She is firm in her support of Prohibition and will not rent out any of her stores either in Rockton or Rockford for the use of the liquor traffic, even though she might thereby receive large rentals.

Since their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson have resided mostly on their farm in Rockton Township, although they kept a hotel in Rockton for one year. A short time since they located in Rockford, where they expect to spend their remaining years. They have three children: Henry Gray; Nellie, the wife of Edgar Austin, of Shirland Township, and Sarah, who married William Sears, of Rockford. Mr. Richardson owns a farm of three hundred and twenty acres in Buena Vista County, lowa, upon which he bas expended considerable money and has made many valuable improvements. He still owns the Rockton Township farm of two hundred and sixty-three acres, and his large possessions represent his labor and judgment in business transactions through many years. While he has gained material success, he has never stooped to deceit in order to enlarge his fortune, but has been so upright, so conscientious and so honorable in the accumulation of a competency, and so generous in its distribution, that he has won a warm place in the confidence of his fellowmen.

OL. A. LUNDEN, brick mason of Rockford, is a thorough-going, persevering and enterprising business man, and is eminently deserving of all business success. He has been a resident of Rockford since the year 1870, has followed his trade as brick and mason mechanic from that time up to the present, and by his honorable and reliable business methods has been unusually successful. He owns a most beautiful residence at No. 1410 Charles Street, and this bears every evidence of the taste and culture of its inmates.

Mr. Lunden is a Director and stockholder in the Palace Folding Bed Company, is also interested in other enterprises of the city, and takes an active part in all movements for the growth and prosperity of this thriving city. Like the majority of the residents of Rockford, Mr. Lunden is a Swede, and has inherited all the sturdy traits of character of that class of people. He was born in Elsboro Lan, Wester Gothland Province, on January 12, 1853, and his early life was passed in much the usual manner of boys of that country, in getting a good practical education and learning a trade. Mr. Lunden seemed to have a natural talent for brick and mason contracting and was three years in perfecting himself in this line of business. Many of his countrymen had crossed the ocean to America. and young Lunden was filled with a desire to make his future home in this country. He has since been joined by his sister Mina, who is now the wife of Mr. Lindquist, of Rockford, but our subject was the first of his kinsmen to settle here.

The father of our subject, John Peterson, has always followed agricultural pursuits in his native country and is prosperous and contented. He is now seventy-six years of age and is a devout member of the Lutheran Church. His wife received her final summons in Sweden in 1869, when about middle age. She was also a member of the Lutheran Church. Five children were the fruit of this union and all are living and fairly prosperous.

Anna J. Peterson was the maiden name of the lady whom our subject wedded in Rockford, and she is also a native of Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, born December 15, 1852. She attained her growth and received a good practical education in her native country, where she remained until coming to the United States, in 1873. She was one of five children born to Peter and Margaretta (Larson) Larson, the parents natives of Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, where the father is still living. He is an aged man, having passed the seventieth milestone, but he holds his years very well. His wife died there a number of years ago. Both were prominent Lutherans in their religious belief. Mrs. Lunden was the only one of the family to come to the States. She and her husband, our subject, are also members of the Lutheran Church. He is a Republican in polities. They are the parents of five children: Oscar E., Alga, Alexes, Victor H., and Bertha.

ILLIAM G. WOODRUFF is a fair specimen of a successful farmer who has gained a competence by zealous and well-directed efforts, and at the present time is living retired in the village of Pecatonica. He has one of the most beautiful homes in the place, where his excellent business traits and well-trained mind have placed him in the front ranks of its best citizens. He was born in New Marlboro, Mass., September 2, 1819, and is a son of John L., Jr., and Hannah (Sanford) Woodruff.

The paternal grandfather of our subject, John L. Woodcuff, Sr., was born in Watertown, Conn., and spent his last days in Massachusetts. The Sanfords were also natives of the Nutmeg State. One of that name, Elisha Sanford, participated in the War of 1812, and was a pensioner of the Government. Grandmother Sanford in her maidenhood was Hannah Treat, a native of England.

He of whom we write was the youngest in a family of ten children, and when thirteen years of age left home and engaged to work on a farm for $3.50 per month. Two years later, he returned home and assisted his father in operating the estate until nineteen years of age; at the end of that time he embarked on a steamboat as deck hand for a year and later worked in a sawmill for $13 per month.

In 1840, he of whom we write came to Illinois, and, locating in Carroll County, worked by the month until his marriage, March 8, 1842, to Miss Mary C. Tucker. The lady was born April 30, 1821, in Newfield, Tompkins County, N. Y., and is the daughter of Calvin and Mercy A. (Rice) Tucker, the former of whom was born in Ilalifax, Vt., February 21, 1792. He came to Carroll County, Ill., in 1840, and, purchasing a home near Elkhorn Grove, was Postmaster there for fifteen years, in addition to the duties of which office he carried on his trade of a blacksmith until 1860. His decease occurred on the old farm February 16, 1882, and he left a family of eight children, five of whom are yet living. So far as is known, the Tuckers were all agriculturists.

The mother of Mrs. Woodruff was born in Providence, R. I., November 15, 1798, and was the daughter of Wanton Rice, who was Captain in the War of 1812. She died October 8, 1878, and her father passed away in his eightieth year. The maternal grandmother of our subject was Mercy Garner and many of her uncles were seafaring men. The father of our subject was born December 1, 1789, in Waterbury, N. Y., and his wife had her birth October 25, of the same year. They were married November 22, 1801, and died respectively in 1873, and 1871.

The four children born to Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff are Harriet E., whose birth occurred March 22, 1843, and who died March 11, 1856; Frances A., who was born December 24, 1845, died August 8, 1871; Emily C., born April 9, 1850, remains at home, and a babe whose decease occurred July 9, 1852 After his marriage, Mr. Woodrnff continued to reside in Carroll County, where he operated rented land for three years. In 1846, he went to Boone County, where he remained for six months, and selling out his small farm there removed to Stephenson County, where he entered a tract of forty acres from the Government, to which he added one hundred and thirty acres and there resided until 1881, a period of thirty-five years. Mr. Woodruff, disposing of that property, purchased his present home in Pecatomica, where he has since lived retired.

During the early days in this county our subject remembers having driven hogs to the Galena market, which he sold for ten shillings per hundred pounds, and then had to pay for half of dressing. He sold wheat from thirty-seven cents to ninety-eight cents a bushel in Chicago, after having hauled it a distance of one hundred and twenty miles. He had the misfortune to lose his first team of horses by drowning and had not a dollar with which to purchase another. He was given credit for an outfit, however, and was soon enabled to pay for it. He did the most of his trading at Savanna in the early days, and often drove ten or fifteen miles before seeing a house. He purchased his first new wagon by paying onehalf eash and the balance in corn at twelve cents a bushel.

Mr. Woodruff upholds the policy of the Republican party, having east his first vote for William Henry Harrison. He is a member in good standing of the Congregational Church, while his good wife is a communicant of the Baptist denomination. Personally, Mr. Woodruff is looked upon as one of the leading men of the township. He is progressive, liberal and public-spirited and his eareer is indicative of the esteem and confidence with which he is regarded by his fellow-citizens.

On March 8, 1892, Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff celebrated their golden wedding. All the children were in attendance, in addition to many friends and acquaintances. They were the recipients of many useful presents.

OHN F. PETTENGILL. A high place among the farmers of Winnebago County must be accorded to the gentleman whose portrait accompanies this sketch, and who has made a fortune by hard labor, prudent economy and business shrewdness. He is at present occupying a fine homestead in Durand Township and has always managed his affairs in a thoroughly business-like manner, evincing remarkable discernment and discretion.

A native of Massachusetts, and the son of James and Betsey (Averill) Pettengill, our subject was born in Boxford, February 23, 1813. His parents, who were well-to-do, were natives respectively of New Hampshire and Massachusetts. Two brothers originally came from England in an early day and settled in Maine, one of whom. Enoch, had a large family of sons, from whom the Pettengills in the United States are descended.

The father of our subject was a farmer, and in an early day moved to Ohio, where he was taken sick, and, becoming very much discouraged, decided to return to his native State. Being very poor, he was only enabled to get as far as Buffalo, which was then a small place, and there remained for several years. Finally reaching home, he recuperated his health, and later, coming to Illinois, spent the remainder of his life at the home of our subject. His wife also met her death in this State while residing with a daughter.

Six children comprised the parental family: James, who was born December 21, 1811, died while en route across the plains to California; our subject was the second in order of birth; Eliza Ann, who was born November 30, 1811, married John A. Johnson and died in this township; Warren, who was born December 28, 1816, was a sailor and died in early life; George A., who was born Angust 19, 1820, died in Durand in March, 1890; Ruby Foster, who was born August 1, 1828, is now Mrs. Charles Harvey, of Duluth, Minn.

John F. Pettengill was quite young when the family removed to Ohio. He spent the years from eight to seventeen in Buffalo, and when returning to Massachusetts was engaged as a contractor and builder. In March, 1837, he came to Illinois, and, stopping for a time in Chicago, worked on the construction of the canal at Joliet. where he had charge of a number of teams. In May of the above year, he came to Winnebago County and purchased a claim on section 15, Durand Township, for which he paid $100. After putting up hay for his cattle, he went to Fox River and was employed in working by the month for a time. The following year he broke land on his own purchase and was also occupied in that kind of work for other parties. For the next three seasons, he was engaged in teaming in the lead regions with four yoke of cattle, during which time he made about $50 per month.

Our subject gives his entire attention to farming pursuits and is now the possessor of four hundred broad acres, all of which he has placed under excellent tillage. In addition to his farm property, he owns several houses and lots in Durand, the rental of which brings him in a handsome income. His dwelling is a very large structure, having been built for an hotel and stores. It was erected at a cost of $10,000, and occupies a front rank in the list of Winnebago County's rural homes.

For the past forty years, Mr. Pettengill has acted as a local preacher of the Methodist Church. With his estimable wife, he is honored and respected, not only for what he is but for what he has done to promote the growth of the county and establish its material prosperity. In early life a Whig, he now votes with the Prohibition party, and in local affairs has been the incumbent of various positions, among which is that of Supervisor.

The lady to whom our subject was married in January, 1842, was Miss Maria Judd; she departed this life in February, 1870. September 15, 1873, Mr. Pettengill was united to Katie, daughter of the Rev. S. and Mary Ann (Jewel) Helsby, natives of Maryland, where the mother died. Mrs. Pettengill was born January 2, 1838, in Baltimore, that State. After the death of her mother, her father married Sarah Ann Ridgeway. In 1859, he came West, and died January 25, 1892, in Galena, Ill.

TISHA A. COOK. Every community is bound to have among her citizens a few men of recognized influence and ability, who by their systematic and careful, thorough manner of work attain to a success which is justly deserved. Among this class is Elisha A. Cook, a man esteemed to be a prominent and substantial, as well as progressive, farmer of Bonus Township. He was born in the town of Lawrence, Otsego County, N. Y., March 30, 1811, and his parents, Chauncey and Lovina (Andrews) Cook, were natives of the Excelsior State also. The parents passed their lives in their native State and died in Otsego County, the father when about sixty-one years of age, and the mother at the age of thirty years. Our subject's paternal grandparents, Holden and Ruth (Joslyn) Cook, were originally from Rhode Island, but died in Otsego County, N. Y., at the age of sixty-five and seventy-seven years, respectively. They were the parents of eight children. all now deceased. Holden Cook was a son of Samuel Cook, also a native of Rhode Island, but who received his final summons in New York State. The maternal grandparents of our subject. Eleazor and Daphnae (Goodale) Andrews, were natives of Vermont, but died in Onondaga County, N. Y., when quite aged, the father at about ninety-three years.

The subject of this sketch remained with his parents until twenty years of age, and then enlisted at Albany, N. Y., August 8, 1861, in Company B, Forty-fourth New York Regiment, and served until November, 1862. He was wounded at Malvern Hill and was on the battle field for a week. Afterward he was in Libby Prison, and after getting out he was for four months in the hospital. He participated in the following battles: Siege of Yorktown, Hanover Court House, Gaines' Mills, Malvern Hill, and in many skirmishes. He was mustered out at Philadelphia for disability on the 26th of November, 1862, and returned to his home in New York State. On the 20th of February, 1864, he came to Boone County, Ill., and as his means were limited he worked by the month for three years.

On the 18th of February, 1866, Mr. Cook was united in marriage with Miss Sarah J. Hoppen, a native of Holman, Dearborn County, Ind., born May 18, 1846. Her parents, Reuben and Martha M. (Givan) Hoppen, are natives of Prospect, New Haven County, Conn., and Maryland, and now reside near our subject in Bonus Township. Mrs. Cook's mother was the daughter of Joshua Givan, who was also a native of Maryland, but who died in Dearborn County, Ind.

After his marriage, our subject worked by the month for a year and then, having accumulated sufficient means, he purchased his present farm of one hundred aeres, which had some improvements on it. A poor man at the outset, Mr. Cook has worked his way up until he is now in the enjoyment of a comfortable competency. He has ever taken a deep interest in all public enterprises, and, in politics, is a supporter of Republican principles, casting his first Presidential vote for Grant. He has held a number of local offices in the country, and for years has been a member of the School Board. Socially, he is a member of Hurlburt Post, G. A. R., of Belvidere. Mr. Cook is of English ancestry, and many of his ancestors were professional men. One of hls uncles was a Colonel in the Civil War, and a cousin held the rank of Captain. Grandfather Holden Cook was in the War of 1812, and the ancestors farther back were in the Revolutionary War.

ICHARD N. MOFFATT. Perhaps there are no more enterprising residents of Winnebago County than those who, like our sub-(9) ject, one of the first-class farmers of Shirland Township, are natives of this county. The father of our subject, George M. Moffatt, was born in England, December 11, 1819, and was brought by his parents to Canada when an infant, they locating near Kingston, Canada. At the age of twentyeight, he and his wife came to Winnebago County. The grandfather of our subject, Richard Moffatt, was a farmer in Canada, where his decease occurred at an advanced age. His wife bore the name of Charlotte Wood and reared eleven children. One of the sons, Peter, who was six feet and two inches in height and a good swimmer, was drowned when a young man.

The mother of our subject was, prior to her marriage, Lydia M. Hicks, born July 13, 1826, a native of Canada, where she met and married Mr. Moffatt at the age of eighteen years. July 6, 1846, they came to Owen Township, Winnebago County, where they entered a claim of Government land in company with Mrs. Moffatt's father. They occupied that property for the succeeding four or five years, when, by the rascality of one Dr. Kellogg, they were compelled to leave their home. Mr. Moffatt then rented land for six years and then again occupied a home with his father-in-law, who died in the spring of 1865. The mother of Mrs. Moffatt passed away April 12, 1859, leaving two children. Her sister Zilpha Mahala, the wife of Henry Harndon, now resides in Nebraska.

Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt lost an infant son in Canada, and since residing in Illinois have laid away Sylvester II., who died aged two years and three months, and Alfred L., who was drowned in the Pecatonica River, July 11, 1886, in his sixteenth year. He was a bright and promising young man and his death was a severe blow to the family. The children living are Richard N., George E., Lydia B. and Manford M. Mrs. George Moffatt mother of our subject, departed this life, April 27, 1888, aged sixty-one years, nine months and fourteen days. The family are descendants of wealthy ancestors in England.

The original of this sketch resided with his parents until thirty-four years of age, and January 16, 1881, was married to Miss Maurilla J., daughter of Jonathan and Hannah P. (Vadakin) Todd, natives of New Jersey and Pennsylvania, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Todd emigrated from New Jersey to this State in 1855, when Mrs. Moffatt was six months old. The father died in Harrison Township, this county, in April, 1871, leaving his widow with four children: Milton L. George R., Damel D. and Mrs. Moffatt. Mrs. Todd is still living at the age of seventy-two years; she comes of a long-lived race, her mother, who still survives, being ninety-four years of age, and many of the latter's sisters are in the nineties.

ILLIAM C. GORDON, a resident farmer of Guilford Township, Winnebago County, owns and operates a fine farm conveniently and pleasantly situated on section 30, within half a mile of Rockford. He is a native of Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred in Clearfield County, November 13, 1828. His father, Patrick Gordon, was born in Ireland, of Scottish parentage, was reared in the Emerald Isle, and when a young man went to England, whence he came to America. He was married in Centre County, Pa., to Elizabeth Cook, who was born in Lancaster County. They afterward removed to Clearfield County, where Mr. Gordon purchased a farm of one hundred and seven acres, and there resided until 1846, when he eame to Illinois, locating in Monroe Township, Ogle County, where he secured a tract of Government land. His death occurred in November of the same year. His wife long survived him and died in Ogle County at a ripe old age. With one exception, all of her nine children grew to mature years. They were as follows: Thomas, William C., Arthur, Margaret, John, James, George and May.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who was reared in his native county, and with his parents he came to Illinois. The journey was made by team and canal to Pittsburg, and thence down the Ohio and up the Mississippi Rivers. He here began working by the month, following that occupation until early in 1852, when he made preparations to go to California. He made the journey with James Riddle and his wife, leaving Peru, III., in April of that year. They crossed the plains and at length arrived at their destination. The only white people living between the Missouri River and California were the missionaries and soldiers, and the Mormons, at Salt Lake City. Mr. Gordon engaged in mining for a time, and was then employed at $4 per day. Later, he received $75 per month and his board. He remained in California until 1854, when he started for home, making the journey by way of the Isthmus of Panama and New York.

During his absence, Mr. Gordon had sent money home and purchased the interest of the other heirs in the eighty acres of land which his father had secured in Ogle County. On his return, he did not at once locate thereon, but worked by the month until 1857, when he built upon his land and there resided until 1864. In that year he sold out and purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land in Spring Township, upon which he made his home for a period of two years. He then again sold his land, and returned to Ogle County, purchasing a farm of two hundred acres on the line of De Kalb County. That property he still owns. but in 1883 he rented it, and made purchase of seventy-nine acres in Guilford Township. This is yet his property and is a well-improved farm with good buildings and other such accessories. Leaving his son-in-law in charge of it, in 1888 he purchased and removed to his present farm, comprising twenty-eight and one-half acres of land within a half mile of the city of Rockfor'.

In 1864 Mr. Gordon wedded Mary (Foulk) Steele, who was born in Cumberland County, Pa., and is a daughter of Peter and Susan (Schowalter)

Foulk, the former a native of Berks County and the latter of Lancaster County, Pa. After his marriage, Mr. Foulk settled in Cumberland County, whence he afterward removed to Perry County, and in 1851 he emigrated to Illinois. For some time he was a resident of Stephenson County, and then purchased a farm on the dividing line between Ogle and De Kalb Counties, where he resided for a few years. On selling out, he became a resident of Black Hawk County, Iowa, where he purchased land and engaged in agricultural pursuits for some years. During his remaining days he lived a retired life in Waterloo, Iowa, his death occurring in 1887. His wife was called to her final rest in 1888. Their daughter Mary first became the wife of Cadwallarder Steele, who died in 1854, leaving one son, Frank P., now a resident of De Kalb County. Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon have one daughter, Minnie J., wife of N. P. Wilson, a resident of Guilford Township. They have also lost three children: one who died in infancy; Emma, who died at the age of three years; and Ida May, who died at the age of seventeen. Mrs. Gordon is a member of the First Christian Church of Rockford. Mr. Gordon is a public-spirited and progressive citizen of this community and a self-made man who deserves great credit for his success in life.

ABEZ D. HART, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits on sections 7, 8 and 18, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, claims New York as the State of his nativity. He wai born in Ontario County, November 28, 1834, and traces his ancestry back to Deacon Stephen Hart, of Braintree, England, who came to America in 1632, locating in Cambridge, Mass., whence he removed to Connecticut. He was one of the fifty-four first settlers of Cambridge, Mass., became one of the proprietors of Hartford, and one of the eighty-four proprietors of Farmington. In 1647, he became one of the Deputies of the General Court of Connecticut, and served fifteen consecu-In 1653, he was appointed for the tive sessions. town of Farmington to assist the Constables to impress men into the army then being raised. He was the first Deacon of the church of Farmington, and died in March, 1682. His descendants in regular order were: John Hart, Capt. John Hart, Isaac Hart, Job Hart and Jabez, the grandfather of our subject.

Jabez Hart was born in Kensington, Conn., in 1756, and there married Jemima Brace. In 1785, he removed to Victor, Ontario County, N. Y., becoming one of the first settlers of that locality. He purchased a tract of timber land a mile square and eleared a farm, the family enduring all the hardships and privations of pioneer life, such as grinding their corn in a coffee-mill, etc. The grandparents both died on that farm. Their children were Harvey, Tryphena, Theodocia, John, Demas, Cyrus, George, Eunice and Frederick.

Frederick Hart was the father of our subject. He was born in Ontario County, N. Y., August 6, 1802, was there reared and educated, and, for a few years engaged in the manufacture of fanningmills. He purchased two different farms in Victor Township, and there resided until 1854, when he emigrated to Illinois and settled in Guilford Township, purchasing a farm on section 5, where he made his home until called to his final rest in 1864. His wife bore the maiden name of Sylvia Rowley, and was born in the town of Victor, in 1800, her parents being early settlers of that locality. She died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Collins. The children of the family were Sophia, Augustus, Melvina, Jabez and Eliza.

The subject of this sketch spent the days of his boyhood and youth in the county of his nativity, and acquired his education in its public schools. With his parents he came to Illinois in 1854, and engaged in teaching school during the winter season for some time, while in the summer months he followed farming. In 1857, he was united in marriage with Charlotte McIntire, and immediately thereafter took charge of the home farm, to the development and improvement of which he devoted his energies. He has owned several farms in the vicinity of Rockford, III., and has been quite extensively interested in dealing in Iowa land and in stock-raising. In 1866, he settled upon the farm which is yet his home. It is an arable tract of land, under a high state of cultivation, and well improved with good buildings and all the accessories of a model farm. The home, which is situated on an eminence, commands an extended view of the Rock River Valley.

Four children have been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Hart, two sons and two daughters: Belle C., Albert E., Fred A. and Jennie May. Belle and Fred are both members of the Methodist Church. Mr. Hart holds membership with Harmony Grange No. 557, and Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles, but has never sought or desired public office, preferring to devote his entire attention to his business, which he has followed with signal success.

RS. AUGUSTA HARDY, daughter of John J. Crill, was born on her father's farm in Monroe Township, Ogle County, Ill., and, after acquiring her education in the public schools, received a teacher's certificate. Had she been in poor circumstances and obliged to earn her own livelihood, she would doubtless have followed that profession, but was not called upon to do so. Seventeen years ago, at her home in Monroe Township, she gave her hand in marriage to Henry Hardy. He is a native of the Empire State, and was only about seven years of age when, with his parents, he came to Winnebago County, III., the days of his boyhood and youth being spent in the vicinity of Rockford, and his education being acquired in the common schools.

Henry Hardy's parents, John and Margaret (Smith) Hardy, are both deceased. They were natives of the Empire State, and the father followed farming as his chosen occupation. He was a very successful agriculturist, and continued to engage in that pursuit in this county for many years, but later went to Michigan, where he died. He was then advanced in life. His wife had died some years previous in this county in the faith of the Methodist Church, of which she was a member. Mr. and Mrs. Hardy were excellent people, and will be remembered by many of their old friends and acquaintances in this community. Their family numbered eight children.

Henry Hardy for some years has been engaged in business in Rockford, and is regarded as one of the wide-awake, enterprising and progressive citizens. He and his wife own some valuable property, and are in comfortable circumstances. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles, and himself and wife attend the First Congregational Church. They have one daughter, M. Blanche, who was educated in the Rockford city schools, and is an accomplished young lady, yet at home.

HARLES A. WORKS, Prosecuting Attorney for Winnebago County, residing at Rockford, was born in Guilford Township, Winnebago County, this State, May 4, 1848. His father, Charles, one of the pioneers of this county, was born in Westmoreland, Cheshire County, N. H., November 24, 1803. His grandfather, Aaron, was a New England farmer, and spent his last years in Westmoreland. After receiving a common-school education in his native village, the father of our subject removed to New York State, where he engaged in teaching and made his home until 1834.

Coming to Illinois during that year, Mr. Works, Sr., located in Ottawa and resided there until February, 1836, when he came to Winnebago County. At that time, two or three families occupied the present site of Rockford, and the surrounding country was but sparsely settled, the county itself not having been organized nor any land surveys completed. He made a claim to a tract of Government land in what is now Guilford Township and erected a log house, in which the subject of our sketch was born. In 1863, after having spent a lifetime in the occupation of farming, he came to Rockford and lived retired until he passed away in 1881. His fellow-citizens recognized his fitness for positions of trust and he was frequently called upon to occupy official posts of honor. In 1868, he was elected Justice of the Peace and held the office until his death. He was the first Supervisor of Guilford Township, also served as Collector and Assessor and for four years as County Treasurer. In his political belief, he was a firm Republican and was one of the voters at the first election ever held in Winnebago County.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Jeanette Sanford and she was born in Vermont. She was the mother of three children: Charles A., Mary H. and Laura J. The son, who is the subject of this notice, received his education in the public schools of the district and was graduated from the East Side High School in 1868. Afterward he entered Beloit College, where he completed his literary education in the Class of '73.

Upon starting out in business, Mr. Works accepted the position of clerk in the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court at Ottawa, where he remained until 1875. In September of that year, he was elected Superintendent of Schools in the city of La Salle and occupied that position two years, when he entered the office of the Circuit Clerk at Ottawa and served as Deputy Clerk until the spring of 1878. During the entire period of his residence in La Salle County, he devoted his leisure hours to the study of law, and was admitted to practice at the Bar of Illinois in 1878. About the same time, he received an appointment to a position with the United States Superintendent of Indian Affairs stationed at Yankton, Dak.

During the latter part of 1878, Mr. Works returned to Rockford, and in January of the following year opened an office for the practice of law, since which time he has been engaged actively as an attorney and counselor-at-law. He was elected States Attorney in 1880 and has served ever since (1892) with universal satisfaction and honor to himself. A Republican politically, he cast his first vote for Gen. Grant, and has always upheld the principles of the party of his choice. In 1888, he was a delegate to the Republican National Convention. He was instructed for Gresham, voting for him first and for President Harrison afterward. Sccially, he is a member of Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M., Winnebago Chapter No. 24, R. A. M. and Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T., Freeport Consistory, and attained the Thirty-third Degree in Boston, in September, 1891.

In November, 1880, the marriage of Mr. Works to Miss Eva Enoch took place, and they are the parents of three children: Marion S., Mabel J. and Helen C. They are members of the Westminister Presbyterian Church, and liberal supporters of religious and benevolent enterprises. Mrs. Works was born in Guilford Township, Winnebago County, 1ll., November 24, 1853. Her grandparents, Henry and Mary Enoch, were natives respectively of Pennsylvania and Maryland, and the former erected the first building in Guilford Township, it being a log cabin.

Hon. Abraham I. Enoch, father of Mrs. Works, was born in Dayton, Ohio, and in September, 1835, accompanied his parents thence to Winnebago County. The family was one of the first to settle in the township, and the mother was a charter member of the first Methodist Episcopal Church organized in the county. Abraham I. Enoch engaged in farming in Guilford Township until 1867, when he removed to Rockford and was associated with James B. Skinner and C. C. Briggs in the manufacture of agricultural implements until his death in 1883, April 30. He served two terms in the Illinois State Legislature, and held many other positions of trust during his life. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Works was Catherine J. Davis, and she was born near London, Canada, the daughter of Thaddeus and Catherine Davis. She is still living and makes her home in Rockford.

SAAC A. CORNELL. Among the progressive farmers and stockraisers of Boone County, we are pleased to present a sketch of the gentleman whose name appears at the head of this paragraph, and whose pleasant home and excellent farm are to be found in Manchester Township, where he has resided for the past thirty-eight years. His father, Amos Cornell, Jr., was born in Vermont, March 25, 1807, and was brought to Hamilton County, N. Y., when an infant, by his parents, Amos and Rhoda Cornell, the former a native of Vermont, born February 3, 1779, and the latter of the same State, born April 9, 1781. Amos Cornell, Sr., was a farmer, and after coming to New York State, settled in the wilderness on one hundred and forty-five acres of land, the same being in three counties, Hamilton, Fulton and Saratoga. He creeted a rude log house on the Saratoga corner of his farm, and there he and his thrifty and economical wife resided many years, and reared their three children. When quite advanced in years, they removed to an adjacent village, named Northville, and there Mr. Cornell passed away when seventy-seven years of age.

Amos Cornell, Jr., father of our subject, selected his wife in the person of Miss Hannah S. Aylesworth, of Rhode Island, and four living children blessed this union. They buried one son, John A., who was drowned in a small pond near the house, when but twenty months old. This was a crushing blow to the bereaved parents. The children who grew to adult years were as follows: Martha A., deceased; Isaac A., our subject; Laura M., now Mrs. Halsey G. Clark, of Rockford; and Lottie A., deceased. The father of these children died at the early age of thirty-seven years, and the mother received her final summons in Northville, April 3, 1864, when fifty-five years of age.

Isaac A. Cornell, our subject, was born in Hamilton County, N. Y., in 1830, and when twenty-four years of age, he was filled with a desire to try his fortune in the Far West. In 1854, he came to Boone County, Ill., and in June of that year purchased one hundred and thirty acres at $12 per acre, part of his present fine farm. In the pleasant month of June, 1859, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Cady, a native of Steuben County, N. Y., who was brought to Manchester Township when four years of age, by her father, Alvah Cady, one of the first settlers of Manchester Township (see sketch of Dewitt C. Cady). After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Cornell settled at once on their present farm, and went vigorously to work to make improvements, and get a comfortable home. They now have four hundred and ten acres of good, productive land, for which they paid from $12 to $45 per acre, and Mr. Cornell is engaged in general farming. He has worked hard all his life until within the last five years, and has been unusually prosperous. When first starting, he received a gift of $600 from his mother, and since then he has inherited $1,100, but the most of his wealth has been accumulated by years of hard work on the part of himself and wife. Although they met with some reverses and discouragements, as the best of farmers do, they still persevered, and can now enjoy the fruits of their labor.

Our subject and his wife lost one infant son, Charles, in 1862, and they now have four living children, a daughter and three sons: Amos E., engaged in agricultural pursuits on one of Mr. Cornell's farms, married Miss Mary Roth, a neighbor's daughter: Alvah A, earries on Mr. Cornell's farm, and married Miss Eva Johnson, of this township, and has one daughter three years old; Alice M., now Mrs. Clarence Adams, resides in Beloit, Wis., and has one son; and Charles A., a young man at home, and a sturdy son of the soil. Mr. Cornell has voted with the Republicans generally, but is not a strict partisan, and will vote for a good Democrat. He is a member of but one secret society, the Anti-Horse Thief organization, started in 1858, and he has been its Secretary for many years. This society has proved a fine thing in the neighborhood.

HARLES II. HOPKINS, another prominent farmer, whose time thus far has been spent in furthering the agricultural interests of the county, is a native of Eric County, N. Y., born in 1835. His father, Cyrus II. Hopkins, was a native of Massachusetts, as was also Grandfather Hopkins, who passed his entire life in that State, engaged in agricultural pursuits, dying when in the prime of life. His family consisted of five sons and one daughter, and his widow was long known as the Widow Ransom, having married again.

Cyrus Hopkins was born in the year 1782, but removed from the old Bay State to Eric County, N. Y., in 1801, and was there engaged in opening up a road from Batavia to Buffalo. While on his way to New York State, he stopped at an hotel in Vermont, and there met two sisters (twins) with whom he became deeply enamored. The admiration seemed mutual all around, but Mr. Hopkins found himself in a dilemma, for he could not tell one from the other, so striking was the resemblance. However, he was not the one to get discouraged over this novel situation, and, as he was determined to marry one of the young ladies, he selected Charlotte, and their nuptials were celebrated on the 3d of March, 1811. The other sister was named Loretta. This happy union resulted in the birth of twelve children, six sons and six daughters. Mrs. Hopkins' father, Mr. Bissell, was the proprietor of an hotel in Randolph, Vt., in connection with which he also carried on agricultural pursuits.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins settled in Eric County, about eighteen miles East of Buffalo, on a timber tract, where they continued to reside until 1855, except for about seven years, when they resided twenty-three miles west of Buffalo. At the abovementioned date, seeing a better opening for them in the West, they sold out, and with their four youngest children, having buried one in New York State, they came to Roscoe Township, Winnebago County, Ill. They reared to adult years the following children: Cyrus B., Henry L., Loretta M., Charlotte S., Dorothy A., Eliza A., John O., William W., Sarah B., Nelson F., Charles H. and Jane W. Of these the following are now deceased: Sarah B., Dorothy A., Loretta M. and Cyrus B. Those now living are married and the heads of families. Mr. Hopkins' son William came to Winnebago County in 1854, one year prior to his father's settlement here, and located in Beloit, where he followed the carpenter's trade.

Mr. Hopkins purchased of Dewey Brown seventy-one acres on section 3, where our subject is now living, and paid $28 per acre for this. On it was a fair house and barn, and here Mr. Hopkins and the partner of his joys and sorrows, his estimable wife, passed the closing scenes of their lives, he dying September 6, 1863, when eighty-one years of age, and his wife on the 16th of March, 1885, when ninety-four years of age. Mrs. Hopkins was a frail and very delicate woman all her life, but preserved her mental faculties up to the last. Mr. Hopkins was an active participant in the War of 1812, and was in the Quartermaster's department. His brother Timothy was a General in that war, and both came out unseathed.

Gus, Lendstrom

Charles II. Hopkins, the subject of this sketch, has been a life-long farmer, and has resided on the old homstead in Roscoe Township since 1855, except for two years, 1870 and 1871, when he visited relatives in Eric County and Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1876, he was married to Miss Emma L. Lund, who was left an orphan when six or seven years of age. She was adopted by the parents of our subject and was reared as one of the family. This union has proved a most happy one, and all their children, three in number, are living: Clara M., born in 1878; Nellie J., in 1881; and Isadore, in 1885. These children are attending school at Beloit. The eldest, Clara, has marked taste and talent for art, and both she and her sister Nellie are apt musical scholars. Mr. Hopkins' business is farming in a general way, but his stock is mostly sheep, of which he prefers and raises the medium grade. He is in no sense a politician, nor an ultra partisan, but votes with the Republican party.

US LENDSTROM. The brick and stone mason trade is of primary significance, and I foremost among those engaged in it in Rockford is Mr. Lendstrom, a contractor and firstclass workman. This gentleman, whose portrait is shown on the opposite page, first came to this city in 1867, but afterward, in 1869, went to Topeka, Kan., where he resided for four years. From there he went to Kansas City, and one year later to Chicago, where he resided for fourteen years. In the meantime, in 1882, he removed his family to Rockford, and since 1887 he has made his permanent home in this city. He has been very successful in his business enterprises, and besides owning a good home at No. 727 North First Street, owns three lots in the North End, with a fine brick residence on one.

Mr. Lendstrom was born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, March 6, 1841, and was the first of the family to come to the United States. He commenced learning his trade in Stockholm, but finished in New York City. He has been a very progressive and skillful workman, and the thorough training he received in Stockholm, and the special training he gained in the Empire City, are apparent in his work. His parents, Lawrence and Maria C. (Dolberg) Lendstrom, were natives of Sweden, the father born in 1808, and the mother in 1803. They were prominently identified with the Lutheran Church, and died in their native country. They had another son beside our subject residing in the States, William Lendstrom, a grocer at Austin, Tex.

Gus Lendstrom selected his wife in the person of Miss Henrietta Haltgren, and their nuptials were celebrated in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, where her birth occurred December 1, 1843. Her parents, Henry and Gustava (Strembach) Haltgren, came to the United States in 1871, and settled in Chicago. They were the parents of five children, one deceased, and three now living in Rockford. The father died when sixty-four years of age, and the mother when sixty. Both held membership in the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Lendstrom and his wife became the parents of ten children, two deceased: John and Hickla. Those living are as follows: Charles R., a grocer of Rockford, who married Miss Cartensa Lundstrom; Anna, who became the wife of Frank Lundstrom, of the firm of Larson & Lundstrom, on North Madison Street; Jennie, a clerk at Hills & Olson's dry-goods store; Lawrence H., a brick-mason; Oscar G., who is employed in Wilkins' Factory; Laura, Nina and Matthew, who are at home. Mr. Lendstrom and family are members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church.

At RENCE McDONALD. It affords the biographical writer pleasure to be able to record in this volume the main incidents in the life of Mr. McDonald, who has been Justice of the Peace in Seward Township, Winnebago County, for the past twenty-seven years. He has also held the office of Assessor for nine years, School Director for fifteen years, and Township Trustee for nine years. He was elected to the State Legislature in 1881-82, during which time he served on many important committees. He is a member of the Agricultural Board, and is now the oldest officer in that body, having served in all the chairs. He is also Vice-president of the Old Settlers' Society of Seward, which he has served on various occasions as Historian.

January 6, 1833, our subject was born in County Meath, Ireland, his parents being Patrick and Julia McDonald, natives of the above-named county. The father was a shepherd and stock-dealer, and died in his native place when seventy-seven years of age. Our subject was one in a family of eleven children, and in 1854, in company with his mother and a niece, emigrated to the United States, and located in New Jersey, where Mrs. McDonald passed away in 1866, when eighty-four years of age.

The original of this sketch, in 1855, landed in Winnebago County with but $1 in his pocket. He immediately went to work for ex-Gov. Bebb, by whom he was employed for several years, and at the end of that time purchased his present property and established a home of his own. September 1, 1867, he was married to Miss Mary, daughter of David and Elizabeth L. Williams, who was born May 24, 1846, in this county. Her father was a native of Maesear, Carmarthenshire, South Wales, and was the son of George and Mary (Jones) Williams, also natives of Wales. The father of Mrs. McDonald came to Rockford, this State. in 1810, and in 1877 returned to Wales, where his death occurred when seventy-three years old. His wife, the mother of Mrs. McDonald, still resides on the old home in Wales; she was the mother of four children, two of whom are deceased.

Mr. McDonald is the proprietor of a magnificent estate of eight hundred and sixteen acres, all of which are cultivated and well stocked. He is shrewd, careful and persistent in his operations, and displays great vigor in his undertakings, but with all is modest and conscientious in his dealings. Of his family of thirteen children, two are deceased. Those living are as follows: Elizabeth A., Edward, John, Julia F., Mary, Charlotte, Emily, Patrick, David, Laurence, Jr., and Margaret. Those deceased are Katie and Rose.

Mr. McDonald had several nephews who were soldiers in the late war, they being sons of a sister who resided in New Jersey. He has voted the Republican ticket from the organization of the party, with the exception of twelve years when he voted the Democratic ticket for Greeley, Tilden and Hancock. He has ever been active in political work, as his continuance for so many years in office would indicate. He has the ready speech and quick intelligence of the race from which he descends, is respected as his good qualities deserve, and like other members of his family, is a devont member of the Catholic Church.

ON. SEELY PERRY. Among the residents of Rockford who have devoted themselves untiringly to the development of the business resources of this place, we find the name of Mr. Perry, who is President of the Rockford Lumber and Fuel Company, one of the important industries of Winnebago County. He is truly honored by his neighbors, and his long life of industry, usefulness and integrity has given him a hold on the community which all might well desire to share. He is an old settler in Rockford and is seventy years of age, having been born in Stockbridge, Berkshire County, Mass., August 22, 1822, and it is universally conceded that he has not an enemy in the world.

The father of our subject, Ezra Perry, was also born in Stockbridge, in 1793. His father, Peter Perry, was a native of Rhode Island, where the great-grandfather of our subject, also named Peter Perry, was born. The latter-named gentleman was of Welsh ancestry and spent his entire life in his native State, where he carried on the occupation of a farmer. Grandfather Perry removed from Rhode Island to Berkshire County, Mass., where he was among the early settlers of Stockbridge, locating midway between the present sites of Glendale and Housatonic. There he cleared a farm in the wilderness and resided until his death. The maiden name of his wife, the grandmother of our subject, was Lydia Wilmarth.

The father of him of whom we write was reared to agricultural pursuits and remained a resident of Stockbridge until 1836, at which time he removed to Monroe County, N. Y., where he purchased a farm in the town of Riga. There he made his home until 1851, at the expiration of which time he came to Rockford, making this city his home until his decease, which occurred in 1875. He was married to Miss Anna Ball, who was born in Salisbury, Conn., and reared to womanhood in Vermont. She became the mother of seven children, and departed this life in 1877 in Rockford. Seely Perry of this sketch received his early education in the public schools of Stockbridge, where he made the best of his opportunities, and is to-day an intelligent and well-read gentleman. After his parents removed to New York, he attended the Oneida Institute, and in 1841 entered the Oberlin University at Oberlin, Ohio. He was a student there for a twelvemonth and then entered Union College at Schenectady, N. Y., from which institution he was graduated in the Class of '45.

In the fall of the above-named year, Mr. Perry came west to Kentucky by the most convenient route at that time, which was via the railroad to Buffalo, thence on board a steamer to Toledo, from which city he traveled on the Toledo and Manince Canal to Cincinnati, thence by steamer to Louisville, and by stage to Springfield, Ky., where for four years he was engaged in teaching a private school. In 1849, our subject came to the Prairie State, and, locating in Winnebago County, engaged as a teacher at Rockton for two years. Later, he came to Rockford, where he followed that profession for a year, at the end of which time he engaged in the lumber business, in which he has actively continued the greater portion of the time since. He is one of the most prominent men of the city and has aided greatly in its upbuilding, being energetic, affable and kind-hearted.

The first marriage of Mr. Perry occurred in 1846, at which time Miss Elizabeth Benedict became his wife. That lady was born in Verona, Oneida County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Lewis Benedict. She departed this life in 1874, and Mr. Perry was again married, March, 16, 1876, this time to Marie Thompson, the daughter of James and Sarah Thompson, who was born in the Dominion. Mr. Perry by his first marriage became the father of two children, Lewis Seely, and Eva, the latter of whom is the wife of Philip Moore. One daughter was born by the second union who bears the name of Marie.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry are both members in very good standing of the First Congregational Church, where they are liberal contributors and active workers. Our subject has always been a Demoerat, one who does not swerve from the views and principles promulgated by that organization. He has served his fellow-townsmen in many important offices and his interest in school matters caused him to be placed on the Board of Education, which he served as its President for a number of years. For three terms he was Alderman of Rockford and one term discharged the duties of the responsible office of Mayor. Socially, he is a member of Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M., and is identified with Winnebago Chapter No. 21, R. A. M. He is also connected with Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T. He was one of the organizers of the Rockford Lumber and Fuel Company and by his energy and perseverance, united with economy and good business qualifications, he has secured a competency which enables him to live in the enjoyment of the comfort which wealth affords.

ILLIAM C. LAWSHE. In Le Roy Township, Boone County, may be seen a beautiful farm, adorned with a comfortable residence and first-class farm buildings, which is the property of Mr. Lawshe, who is living retired from active work of any kind at his home in Sharon. Wis. He was born in Union County, Pa., June 7, 1832, and is the son of Abram Lawshe, whose burth occurred in the same State and county, m 1806. The father was a blacksmith, which trade he followed his entire life. In 1837, he moved with a horse team to Franklin County, Ohio, where he was ranked among the well-to-do citizens.

The lady who became the mother of our subject prior to her marriage was Hannah Parks, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Parks. On emigrating to Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Lawshe were accompanied by four children. They resided in the Buckeye State for twelve years, where their son Theodore was born, and died when eight years of age. In the spring of 1849, the father disposed of his property and again came West, this time locating in Boone County, after twenty-one days' travel. The first land of which he became the owner was eighty acres on section 8, Le Roy Township, where he erected a shop and followed his trade in addition to his farm operations.

Our subject aided his father in the shop in the summer months and attended school in the winter season. About twenty years after locating here, the father sold his farm, making on the transaction $2,800, and moved to Sharon, Wis., where he purchased a home and resided with his wife until their death, the father passing away in 1871, and the mother two years later. They were the parents of the following-named children: William C., our subject; Mary, Mrs. Isaac Cramer, now deceased; Eleanor, the widow of the Rev. W. D. Skelton; and Cherokee, Mrs. H. B. Crofts, of lowa.

William C. Lawshe was married in this county, in the spring of 1868, to Sarah, daughter of John and Julia (Greene) Winkler, natives of Pennsylvania, who came to Illinois in an early day. They were farmers, and reared a family of nine children.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawshe made their first home on twenty acres of land on section 16, for which our subject paid $15 per acre. Four years later, he sold at a handsome advance, and bought sixty acres on section 14 at $24 per acre. They farmed there for thirteen years, during which time they added forty acres to their estate, which is included in their present farm. In 1879, Mr. Lawshe sold his sixty acres and became the owner of two hundred adjoining his forty-acre tract, which cost $40 an acre, and is now valued at $70. In 1890, he erected a large barn on his place, which has a gambrel roof and is 44x61 feet in dimensions, with twenty-four foot posts.

Mr. Lawshe retired from busy life in August, 1891, and, moving to Sharon, erected a comfortable home where he lives with his two youngest children and wife. They have buried one daughter, Marba, who died when twelve years of age, those living being Fuller A., Isaac G., William W., Mary

C., and Charley F. Mr. Lawshe has been Assessor and Township Treasurer, also Town Clerk. In polities, he was first a Whig, later a Republican, and in 1882 joined the Prohibitionists, on which ticket he ran for the Legislature and was only defeated by a small majority. Mr. and Mrs. Lawshe have been the architects of their own fortunes, as they started even with the world, and by toil and economy have gained a comfortable competency.

TTO A. BECKSTRAND, who is engaged in general farming on section 9, Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, was born on the 14th of March, 1852, in Sweden. His parents are both now deceased. His father, P. M. Peterson, was a Swedish farmer, and died in 1872, at the age of sixty-seven years. His wife died in 1863, when lifty years of age. They were members of the Lutheran Church, and lived consistent Christian lives. Their family numbered nine children, seven of whom are now living, the following being residents of this country: A. W., of Minneapolis; Mrs. A. S. Gronquist, of Chicago; and Mrs. S. I. Johnson, of Rockford.

Mr. Beckstrand, whose name heads this record, spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his parents' home, but at the age of eighteen determined to seek his fortune in America, and bidding good-bye to friends and native land, sailed for New York City. On reaching this country, he came at once to Rockford, where his brother, A. W., was then living. Some years later, our subject was united in marriage in that city to Miss Anna A. Carlson, a native of Sweden. Her father was a Lutheran minister, and died in middle life in his native land. Her mother is still living. Mrs. Beckstrand is the only member of her family that has located in this country. She crossed the Atlantic in 1876, came to Rockford, and has since been a resident of Winnebago County. She is an intelligent and cultured lady, and has proved a good wife and mother. Two children have been born unto this worthy couple, a son and daughter, Celia V. and Otto G.

Since coming to this county in 1870, Mr. Beck-strand has continuously engaged in farming, with the exception of two years spent in the employ of the Forest City Furniture Company. He worked as a farm hand near Rockford for a year, but for the past eleven years has owned and operated his present farm, comprising forty-two acres of arable land on section 9, Cherry Valley Township. He has his farm well-improved, and under a high state of cultivation, and is a well-known agriculturist of this community, who has led a busy and upright life, well deserving the high regard in which he is held. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles.

RICE LEWIS, deceased, was a prominent citizen of New Milford Township, Winnebago County, and his portrait and biography add value to this volume. He was born in Steuben, Oneida County, N. Y., and was a son of William Lewis, of Utica, N. Y., who made a fine farm in Stenben Township, Oncida County, where he was a prominent citizen. He served as Justice of the Peace many years, was Supervisor, and represented his district in the State Legislature. He married Janette Williams, a native of Wales, who came with her parents to this country when a child. In politics, he was a stanch Republican, a warm admirer of Roscoe Conkling, whom he considered a most able statesman, and during the late Rebellion was active in recruiting soldiers for the war. He was twice married, and had six children.

Our subject was reared to manhood on a farm in Oneida County, N. Y., and on the 15th of June, 1870, married Miss S. L. Ilizer, of that county, a daughter of Adam and Lucy W. Ilizer, both of whom were natives of Herkimer County, N. Y., and the parents of five children, two sons and three daughters: Mary A., Harriet, Charles W., Silas H. and Sarah L. In May, 1871, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis came West to Rockford, Ill., and after a year spent in that city, went to Flagg Station, Ogle County, where our subject engaged in buying and shipping grain for three years.

In December, 1874, Mr. Lewis purchased a farm of two hundred and seventy-one acres. land was arable, but without buildings. He creeted a pleasant residence on a hillside, in the midst of a beautiful oak grove, and devoted his energies to farming until his death. He made a specialty of dairying and raising stock, and was very successful in his undertakings, being an industrious and enterprising man, possessed of good business ability. For about a year prior to his death, his health was impaired, but on the morning of April 22, 1891, he had been around attending to his affairs, and lay down to rest, when he soon dropped off into that sleep from which there is no awakening. He was an active member of the Methodist Church. and belonged to the New Milford Lodge of Modern Woodmen, of which he was a charter member and at the time of his death was Head Counsel. He was highly respected by all who knew him, and his death proved a loss to the community as well as to his immediate family.

Mrs. Lewis has a family of six sons and a daughter: William A., Charles S., Elias, Price, Harriet, Matthew Simpson and John A. Elias is attending the High School of Rockford, from which William was graduated in 1892, and the family is one of which the mother may well be proud. She lost one son. Ralph, who died in November, 1887, at the age of two years. Mrs. Lewis and her family are in comfortable circumstances, and with the aid of her sons she manages the home farm. She is an active and faithful member of the Methodist Church, and a lady whose many excellences of character have endeared her to all with whom she has come in contact.

RS. ELIZABETH KINYON, of Belvidere, is a native of Stark County, Ohio. She was born in Massillon, November 16, 1835. Her father, Thomas Marshall, and her grandfather, Daniel Clarkson Marshall, were both natives of London, England. The latter married Sarah Lincoin, and they spent their entire lives in London. Thomas was the only one of the family who came to America. He was reared and educated in London, and sailed for the United States in 1813, landing in New York on the 11th of June. He went to Ohio a few weeks later, making the trip on horseback, and there engaged in teaming, making his home in Stark County until his death. He wedded Isabel Greenwood, a native of Liverpool, England, and a daughter of John Henry and Mary (Martin) Greenwood, who emigrated with their family to America in 1813, and spent the remainder of their days in Ohio. Mrs. Marshall died at her home in Belvidere in 1880, having long survived her husband.

Under the parental roof Mrs. Kinyon spent the days of her girlhood, and in 1855 gave her hand in marriage to Thomas Hannah, who was born near Montreal, Canada, and was a son of Thomas and Sarah (Swail) Hannah. He was reared in Canada, and when a young man went to Ohio, where he engaged in farming until 1855, when he came with his wife to Boone County and Dought a tract of land in Flora Township, where he engaged in farming until 1862. In August of that year, he enlisted in Company G, Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, and participated in many important battles with his regiment. He continued to serve until the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged, October 22, 1865, and his death occurred one month after his return.

Mrs. Hannah was again married, 1872, this time to Job Kinyon, who was born in Huntington, Vt., and was a son of Sylvester and Mary Kinyon, and is numbered among the settlers of Boone County of 1814. They have three children: Margaret E., Robert H. and Marshall C. Thomas, the younger son, wedded Louise Bennett, a native of Belvidere, and a daughter of Samuel and Louise (Hipley) Bennett. Mrs. Kinyon is a most estimable lady, held in high regard by all who know her, and her friends throughout the community are many.

sketch was born January 12, 1834, in Morgan County, Ohio, and at the present time resides on section 17, Flora Township, Boone County. His father, James Farley, was born November 30, 1804, in Marshall County (the Panhandle district), W. Va., while his father, Andrew Farley, was a native of York County, Pa., his birth occurring in 1749. The great-grandparents, Thomas and Jennie (Finley) Farley, emigrated from the North of Ireland from the vicinity of the Boyne, the former having taken part in the battle and siege of that place in behalf of the Protestants.

Andrew Farley, the grandfather, was a man of influence and wealth, and took an active part in expelling the Indians from the western part of Pennsylvania and Ohio. During that period, from some unknown cause, he lost his property, and thus his family of three daughters and four sons were thrown upon their own resources and the charities of the world at the time of his decease in 1813. Thomas, one of the sons, who now makes his home in Pittsburg, Pa., at the age of ninety-one years, pursued the cabinetmaker's trade for a number of years, or until his ambition led him into politics. He was the incumbent of the offices of Clerk of the Court, Sheriff, Postmaster, etc., on the Democratic side, and was an able stump speaker; his sons and sons-in-law arc in the employ of the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago Railroad Company, holding the respective positions of Auditor, Clerk, Division Superintendent and Civil Engineer, one of his sons having been Auditor for twenty-live years.

James Farley, the second son of Andrew, and the father of our subject, learned the trade of a brick-maker, which he followed successfully until twenty-four years of age, pursuing the calling in Pittsburg and Washington, Pa., where he spent the most of his youth and early manhood. At the age of twenty-four, he emigrated to Eastern Ohio, where he was first engaged in farming, and later in selling goods and operating a mill, until October 20, 1853, when he removed to Cherry Valley. In that vicinity, he earried on his farm, and was engaged in mercantile pursuits for some twenty years, or until he retired from active business.

James Farley's surroundings during his early youth and manhood were unfavorable, but the foundations of true and noble manhood were so laid in his nature as not to be removed by adverse He borrowed copies of Plutarch's surroundings. Lives, Pope's Translation of Homer's Hiad, the poems of Burns, and the lives of Franklin and Washington, and, as opportunity offered, read these standard and useful works in connection with his Bible. Being possessed of a political turn of mind and fine retentive memory, he made these few volumes do the service of a good library. He, in opposition to his brother, was a Whig, casting his first vote for Henry Clay, and, on the organization of the Republican party, voted for its candidates, although his sympathies were with the Prohibitionists. He joined the Christian Church when young and had the pleasure of seeing his family and many of his friends become identified with that church. He died at the home of his son in Flora, January 27, 1890, aged eighty-five years and three months.

Joseph, the third son of Andrew Farley, died at Barnesville, Ohio, in 1840. David, the fourth son, was drowned at Beverly, Ohio, July 4, 1840. Hannah Craig, the eldest daughter, who was the mother of six sons and three daughters, died in 1854, at Claysville, Pa. One of her sons is an attorneyat-law at Keokuk, Iowa; one, now deceased, was President of Jefferson College, Pa.; another is now a Member of Congress; one died while teaching in the South; the youngest is a merchant in Claysville, Pa., while the remaining son is farming at Reserve, Kan. Sarah, the second daughter, died in 1883, at Marietta, Ohio, in the vicinity of which her large family of descendants now reside. Drusilla, the youngest, died near Beverly, Ohio, in 1882. The average age of the five older members of James Farley's family was eighty-one and a quarter years.

The grandmother of Thomas Farley bore the maiden name of Hannah Templeton. Her ancestors emigrated from Scotland and located at Oldtown, Md. Mrs. Farley died near Wheeling, W. Va., in 1825. Thomas Taylor, the maternal grandfather, was born at Wigan, near Manchester, England, April 21, 1766. His wife, Margaret Nevel, was born December 23, 1771, and was married January 1, 1793. She became the mother of ten children, as follows: John, born in 1791; Mary, in 1796; Betsey, in 1798; Mary, in 1800; Ellen, the mother of Thomas Farley, in 1802; Thomas, in 1804; Ann, in 1807; Peter, in 1809; James L., in 1810; and Sarah, in 1818.

Thomas Taylor early showed indications of unusual musical talent and compiled a musical work. He was a tradesman, or merchant, in England, until attaining his forty-ninth year, when, with his family, he emigrated to America, setting sail from Liverpool on Easter Sunday, and landing in Philadel. phia eleven weeks later. They crossed the Alleghany mountains with teams to Pittsburg, at which place they took passage down the Ohio River upon keel-boats, landing at Marietta, Ohio. Going back into the almost unbroken forest about fifteen miles, Mr. Taylor established a home, erecting a log house which later gave way to a brick dwelling. For thirty-eight years this spot was their home, or until their decease in 1852, their deaths occurring only about ten days apart.

In 1818, eight of the family were married and located within a radius of six miles of the old homestead. The youngest one died at the age of forty-nine. The average of the ages of the ten was seventy-one years, four of the number having lived to be over eighty years of age.

Peter Taylor went to Kentucky to prepare himself to be a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which State he remained until his decease, which occurred near Ghent, on the Ohio River, in 1867. Two of the family are still living: James L., of Flora, and Ann Baeon, of Sioux City, Iowa. Of their grandchildren, fifty-seven grew to manhood and womanhood, forty of whom are living, whose average ages are about forty-nine years

The children comprised in the family of James and Ellen Taylor Farley were Hannah, who was born in 1828, and married William Kirkland; Sarah, who was born in 1830, became the wife of Philip Heckman; Elizabeth, who was born in 1832, married B. B. Hovey; Thomas, born in 1831; Mary Carpenter, now deceased, born in 1836; Lucy, born in 1854, married Austin G. Sprague, who was killed in 1863, in a charge on Champion Hill, in the war of the Rebellion. Mrs. Sprague was married again to John Brooks. Maria L., who was born in 1840, is now Mrs. Keith; Beccie, now Mrs. Dunwell, and Nellie (twins), were born in 1813. The latter became the wife of Capt. J. W. Hicks, of the regular army, who died of yellow fever in Louisiana, in 1867. Three years later, Mrs. Hicks was married to Edwin Thomas Ironmaster, at Portland, Me., who died in 1872, and in 1881 his widow became the wife of David Eckert, of Topeka, Kan. Carrie, the youngest of the family, who was born in 1849, is now Mrs. E. T. Frowe. Thirty-seven grandchildren are living, five of whom are attorneys-at law, three physicians, nine students, five farmers, or farmers' wives, three clerks, two merchants, and one engineer. Ellen Taylor Farley, the mother of Thomas Farley, died in Cherry Valley, October 25, 1880, aged seventy-eight years. The average of the ages of the nine now living of the family is fifty-five years.

The subject of this sketch was married, December 25, 1859, to Lottie E. Sprague, of Washington County, Ohio, whose distant ancestors, Jonathan and Joshua Sprague, were among the first colonists of New England. Mr. and Mrs. Farley were the parents of two daughters: Euretta II., born November 10, 1860, died in February, 1886, and Marietta, who was born in February, 1862, and died January 10, 1863. The wife and mother departed this life July 23, 1865.

The lady whom Mr. Farley chose as his second wife was Mrs. Jennie P. (Haydon) Houghton, their marriage being celebrated September 3, 1868, at Galva, this State. She died November 5, 1880, Her ancestor on the paternal side. Houghton, is a graduate of Cambridge University, and for a number of years was Professor of Natural Science in the Englewood High School; Eunice and Eugenia, her twin daughters, born in Cherry Valley May 13, 1870, are students of Hillsdale College. These two daughters are the only children Mr. Farley has living. In addition to her fine natural abilities, Mrs. Farley had considerable training in music and other accomplishments.

ANIEL RYAN. In the annals of Seward Township. Winnebago County, the name of this gentleman occupies an honorable place as one of its efficient pioneers, who has given practical aid in making it one of the finest farming regions in this section of the county. By steady toil and excellent management, he has acquired a valuable property since coming to Illinois, and has a large tract of two hundred acres, all lying in one body, besides ten acres in Ogle County, his entire acreage being under the best of cultivation and exceedingly well improved.

Like many of the prominent residents of Winnebago County, our subject was born in County Kilkenny, Ireland, November 28, 1829, and is a son of Thomas and Julia Ryan, who were born, reared and died in their native Ireland. Daniel remained at home until 1847, when, desiring to see something of the New World, he emigrated to the United States, and for seven years worked by the month on farms in New York State. At the end of that time, he came to Winnebago County, with whose interests he has been identified ever since.

The lady to whom our subject was married June 22, 1862, was Miss Mary Flynn, a native of Westmeath, Ireland, where her birth occurred March 17, 1831. She was the daughter of Laurence and Kate Flynn, also natives of the Emerald Isle, who came to America in 1817, and died soon after in Canada. Mrs. Ryan is the only survivor of the parental family of thirteen children, all of whom died in Canada. Mr. Ryan is the only survivor in a family of ten children.

Your Franky George, Towelf

To our subject and his wife have been born nine children, six of whom are living: Daniel is married and has four children; Kate, Mrs. Markan, is the mother of five children; Elizabeth, who married William Leary and has a family of six children; Julia, the wife of George Koch, has two children; William, who married Ella Hudson, is the father of one son, and Mary, who married Fred Blair, also has one child. Mr. and Mrs. Ryan have an adopted son named Joseph.

A Democrat in politics, Mr. Ryan cast his first Presidential vote for President Pierce, having taken out his naturalization papers one week after landing in this country. He is one of the most prominent men in the county and devotes his entire time and attention to carrying on his splendid estate.

tleman is numbered among the early settlers of Boone County, having located one and one-half miles west of Belvidere, June 2, 1838. The country at that time presented a widely different appearance from that of to-day, and with his neighbors he bore the usual toils and hardships of pioneer life, meanwhile gaining for himself a good record, morally, socially and financially. He has been a resident of the city of Rockford since 1867, enjoying the competence which his unflagging industry has won, together with the esteem and confidence of those around him.

He of whom we write was born in Goole, Yorkshire, England, Jane 2, 1821. His father, William Powell, was born October 23, 1782, in the same shire, where he was reared on a farm and for a number of years was overseer of a large estate near Goole. In 1831, he came to America, accompanied by his wife and six children, and landed at Quebec after an ocean voyage of six weeks and four days. He went immediately to Dunham Township, lifty-four miles east of Montreal, where for three years he rented a tract of land, which he later purchased and resided upon until 1838, the year of his advent into Illinois. The journey was made overland with two teams as far as Cleveland, where they embarked on a vessel which conveyed them to Detroit, whence they came by teams to Belvidere, at that time a mere hamlet.

Joseph and William Powell, two brothers of our subject, preceded the family to this section, where they purchased claims near Belvidere, upon one of which the father settled. A log house was erected, into which they moved, and when the land came into market it was entered at the Government landoffice at Galena. The elder Mr. Powell and his two sons became the possessors of four hundred and eighty acres, upon which they erected a good brick house, where the father resided for a number of years. Later removing to Belvidere, his decease occurred there in 1855. The maiden name of his wife was Jane Spacey, also a native of England, where her birth occurred October 1, 1788. She was the daughter of James Spacey, and died June 25, 1873, aged eighty-four years.

Six of the seven children born to our subject's parents were reared to manhood, all of them sons. and named Joseph, James, William, John, Samuel and George respectively. The last-named was a lad of seven years when he emigrated to America with his parents, and fourteen years old when he became a resident of Boone County, this State. He obtained his primary education in the pioneer schools, and later attended the academy, and also a select school. When quite young, he commenced to assist in the farm work, and as there were no railroads in the county until 1852, after locating here it was often his duty to drive the team to Chicago to market wheat. He resided on the home farm till twenty-six years of age, and during the last six years of his stay there, worked the farm on shares.

George Powell and Elizabeth Quackenboss, a native of Dunham, Province of Quebec, Canada, were united in marriage in 1850. They then located on the farm just across the street from the old home, upon which they resided until 1867, when they removed to Rockford. The daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Powell, Ella, is now Mrs. Harry Allen, and the mother of one son, George. Mrs. Powell's father, Conrad Quackenboss, was a native of Lower Canada, and resided on a farm near Dunham until 1815, when, with his wife and four children, he came to Illinois. Locating in Boone County, he purchased land two and one-half miles from Belvidere, which was his home at the time of his decease in 1847. The maiden name of his wife was Jane McIntosh, whose birth occurred near Bedford, Province of Quebec. She was a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Astletine) McIntosh, and is at the present time residing with Mrs. Powell, at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. On another page may be found a portrait of Mr. Powell.

RS. LAVINIA LAKE has lived in Winnebago County longer than any other woman residing in its borders at the present time. She was born in Somersetshire, England, on the 10th of April, 1806, and is a daughter of John and Jane (Williams) Atkins. Her parents were also natives of Somersetshire, and there spent their entire lives, the father engaging in the butchering business and in farming.

Mrs. Lake resided with her parents until twelve years of age, when she went to live with her grandmother, Mrs. Atkins, and there remained until twenty-five years of age, when she gave her hand in marriage to Thomas Lake, who was born at Blackford Farm, Somersetshire, England, July 4, 1806, and was a son of William and Elizabeth Lake. In May, 1832, the young couple sailed from Bristol to New York as passengers on board the vessel "Charlotte," which dropped anchor in the American harbor after a voyage of seven weeks and three days. Cholera at that time raged in New York City, so Mr. and Mrs. Lake went up the river to Troy, where he worked for a short time, when cholera there broke out and they left for Buffalo. As the inhabitants of that city were very much afraid of the disease, they embarked on a schooner bound for Cleveland, where again they found the same dread of the disease. However, they were finally permitted to land, but Mr. Lake could not secure employment in Cleveland. He then went into the country about fifteen miles distant and engaged to work as a farm hand. In the fall of the same year, he entered the employ of a carpenter, who was to pay him $10 per month. The following summer, he went to Cleveland, where he again worked at the earpenter's trade. It was his intention to secure a farm on coming to America and engage in agricultural pursuits, so with this end in view he bought a tract of timber land a few miles from the city, hiring ten cleared acres. He then worked a half day himself but in that time was convinced that he was not suited for such arduous employment.

In 1835, Mr. Lake sold his property, and in the fall of that year started for Chicago, where he arrived in October. At that time, Chicago was but a village, and the surrounding country was sparsely settled, in fact, some of the land was still owned by the Government. Mr. Lake there worked at his trade until February of the following year, when with his family he started for Rockford, accompanied by an old acquaintance, Mr. Toogood, and his family. They were to make the journey by teams. On arriving at the Kishwankee River, owing to the thinness of the ice they could not cross, so took possession of a vacant log cabin, where they spent two weeks. They then pushed on to Rockford, where Mr. Lake made a claim now included in the township of Rockford. In a log cabin which he built, himself and wife began life on the Western frontier in true pioncer style. He engaged in earpenter work for some time and assisted in building the first frame house in Rockford. A few years later, he purchased a farm in Guilford Township and there made his home until his death, which occurred in 1886. He was a very successful farmer and improved a beautiful and valuable home. The residence is a story and a-half brick house, which sits well back from the road and is surrounded by a grove of trees, including maple and shrub cedars.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Lake were born two children who are yet living: Robert W., now a resident of Plymouth County, Iowa and Eliza J., who resides with her mother. Mrs. Lake is still living on the old homestead and is a most estimable lady. She has a wide acquaintance throughout this community and is held in high regard by all who know her. Her long residence in the county well entitles her to a representation in this volume and it is with pleasure that we record her sketch.

NDREW G. LOWRY, retired, is one of the pioneers of this county and one of its most substantial citizens. He was born in Warren County, Pa., on the 17th of May, 1827, and was five years of age when his parents removed to Lake County, Ohio, where he received his education and grew to manhood. He became familiar with the arduous duties of the farm at an early age, but when about twenty-one years old went to Mercer County, Pa., and was engaged in the coal business for a few years. Selling out to a brother, he left Pennsylvania and came to Rockford, Ill.. where he has been a resident since 1852.

Mr. Lowry began business in this city as a buyer of grain and produce, which he continued until his retirement. He was also engaged in business in Milwaukee, Wis., as a grain dealer and was fairly prosperous in all his transactions. He has a pleasant home at the corner of Peach and West Streets, and is well known throughout Winnebago County as an honorable, upright citizen, who has many warm friends.

Morrow Lowry, father of our subject, was born in the North of Ireland, of Scotch parentage. He was but seven years of age when his parents, in the latter part of the last century, came to America and made a settlement in or near Eric, Pa. The members of this family became the owners of large tracts of valuable land in the Keystone State, and over this was great litigation, costing the family many thousands of dollars.

After living in Ohio for some time, Morrow Lowry returned to Pennsylvania where he passed the closing scenes of his life. He was a Presbyterian in his religious belief and a Democrat in polities. His wife survived him two years and died when seventy-seven years of age. She was formerly a Miss Mary Gibson, of American parentage, and a native of Pennsylvania, where she passed her early life. Three children were the result of this marriage, Andrew G. being the eldest. Alexander, the second son, lost his life at the first battle of Bull Run, fighting for his country, and Israel H. is a grain commission merchant of Milwaukee. Morrow Lowry was the father of ten children by his first marriage, all of whom lived to grow to manhood and womanhood, but all are now deceased.

Andrew G. Lowry, after coming to Rockford, married Miss Eliza Bingham, a native of Bradford County, Pa., in which State she was reared and educated. Her father died in the prime of life and his widow afterward came to Hlinois with her three children and died when full of years. She left three daughters, Mrs. Lowry, wife of our subject, being the youngest.

Three children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Lowry: Hugh L. in the employ of  $\Lambda$ . Ashton's dry-goods house of Rockford; Walter B., a banker of Kirkland, Ill., now married to Miss Nellie French, of Rockford, and Mary E., at home, and a graduate of Rockford College.

OBERT ROSS. The venerable and highly-esteemed citizen of Rockford whose life sketch is presented to the readers of this volume is a native of Scotland, born in Dyke, Murrayshire, April 28, 1815. His father, William, died in that shire when seventy-nine years old, and his grandfather. Alexander, was a native of Rothshire. For generations, the family has been devoted to agricultural pursuits and Robert was reared to rural life, early learning to till the soil and harvest the grain. In 1836, he came to America, and remembers well the ruins of the great fire of December, 1835, at New York.

The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Christine McDonald, reared nine children, four sons and five daughters, all of whom have passed away except our subject and his sister Jane. After Mr. Ross came to the United States, he served three years at his trade of a stone mason, since which his attention has been devoted exclusively to the business. Since 1846, he has been actively engaged as contractor and Superintendent of bridge building, and is probably the oldest inspector of bridges in the country, his reputation having extended throughout the nation. In Rockford, he is particularly known as the builder of the three bridges across Rock River, and he received calls to every part of the United States to creet bridges.

In February, 1815, occurred the marriage of Mr. Ross and Catherine, a daughter of George and Effic Briney, natives respectively of Scotland and New York. They have one son, William George, who is married and resides with his family near the parental home in Rockford. Notwithstanding his advanced years, Mr. Ross is in robust health, and his wife is also as keen and sprightly as in days long gone by. Their friends unite in wishing for them many years of continued happiness and comfort.

The following are some of the bridges and water works on which Mr. Ross has been engaged during construction: 1839-40, Superintendent of Masonry, Boston & Albany Railroad bridges in Green Mountains; 1841, Superintendent of Masonry, bridge over Quinebaug River, Norwich, Conn.; high bridge over Harlem River, N. Y.; bridge over Connecticut River for Hartford & New Haven Railroad; 1846-47, Superintendent of Masonry, bridge over Richelieu River, near Montreal, Canada; 1847-48, bridge over Connecticut River for Hartford & Willimantic Railroad; 1854, five bridges over Harlem Flats, Fourth Avenue, N. Y.: 1855, railroad bridge over Harlem River at North Haven, N. Y.; railroad bridge over Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace, Md.; 1855-56, bridges and aqueducts for United States Armory Buildings, Springfield, Mass.; 1858, Brooklyn, N. Y., Waterworks; 1859, bridge No. 7, Central Park, N. Y.; 1860, bridge over Connecticut River at Northampton and Amherst, Mass. During war, Springtown, N. J., and Elizabeth, N. J., for Jersey Central Railroad; 1865, New Haven, Conn.: 1866. Windsor, Conn.; 1867, Quincy, Ill., over Mississippi River; 1868-69, St. Louis, Mo., Waterworks; 1870. Hannibal, Mo., railroad bridge over Mississippi River; 1871, St. Joseph, Mo., railroad bridge over Mississippi River; 1873, Louisiana, Mo., railroad bridge over Mississippi River; 1876, Boston Waterworks; bridge over Missouri River at Glasgow, Mo., and another at Plattsmouth, Neb.; 1881-82, railroad bridge over Missouri River at Bismarck, Dak.; 1883, railroad bridge over Missouri River at Blair, Neb.; over the Blue River at Beatrice, Neb., and another at Blue Springs, Neb.; railroad bridge for Union Pacific at Papillion, Neb.; 1883-84, railroad bridge over Mississippi River at Minneapolis, Minn., for the Northern Pacific Railroad, and two other bridges for the same road, twenty-five or thirty miles from Minneapolis; 1886-87, railroad and passenger bridge over Missouri River at Omaha, Neb. Also three bridges at Rockford, and many others involving a vast expenditure of money and enormous responsibility.

NDREW BOWER, a retired farmer residing at No. 1011 Charles Street, Rockford, Ill., where he owns a good home, is another of the many prominent citizens of the county who is of foreign birth. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, on the 5th of December, 1835, and his parents, Frederick and Regina Bower, were natives of the same city in which they passed their entire lives. Their deaths occurred almost at the same time and they were buried in the same grave, both when about seventy years of age. They were Protestants in their religious belief. Andrew Bower was but seventeen years of age when he left his native country, and, with his brother Michael, crossed the ocean to America. They landed in New York City in February, 1852, after a voyage of forty-seven days, and there Andrew remained for four years. He then went to Cook County, Ill., and in the year 1856 removed to Winnebago County, where, by industry and economy, he accumulated a handsome property. He was still a single gentleman, and in 1861 he was married to Miss Sarah Sheer, a native of York County, Pa., born March 25, 1837, and the daughter of Peter and Catherine (Hass) Sheer, also natives of that county and of German descent,

There both passed the closing scenes of their lives, the father dying at the age of seventy-six and the mother at the age of eighty-four years. Mr. Sheer was a blacksmith by trade. He was a member of the Lutheran and she of the Congregational Church. After his marriage, Mr. Bower purchased a good farm, began making improvements, and soon became well known for his thrift and energy. He is the owner of four hundred and twenty acres of excellent farming land, and his buildings are all substantial and commodious. He remained on this until 1891 and then removed to Rockford, leaving the farm to be managed by his son. Mrs. Bower was one of twelve children born to her parents, and six are still living. She remained under the parental roof until 1855, when she came to this State and county and was married, in Cherry Valley Township, to Mr. Bower. The fruits of this union were three children; Sadie who died when eighteen years of age; Lizzie, wife of C. J. Ratliff, is now residing on a farm in New Milford, this county, and Eugene N. has the management of his father's farm in Cherry Valley. He married Miss Jessie Clark. Mr. and Mrs. Bower are classed among the wealthy and much esteemed citizens of the county, and all they have accumulated is the result of their own efforts. Mr. Bower has held a number of the township offices and discharged the duties of the same in a very satisfactory manner. He is a stockholder in the Forest City National Bank, also a stockholder in the Star Furniture Company, and Middle Furniture Company, and owns much valuable property in Rockford.

ESSE BUCKBEE, deceased, was one of the early settlers of Winnebago County of 1845. He was born in Orange County, N. Y., in 1796, and was a son of Russell Buckbee, a Revolutionary soldier, who was born in the Empire State and resided in Monroe Township, near Sugar Loaf, Orange County, N. Y., until his death when about sixty years of age. The family is of English descent, being founded by an English baker, who, on coming to this country, located in New York City. The mother of our subject was in her maidenhood Elizabeth Mapes. She was also born in New York and died at the age of ninety years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Buckbee were members of the Methodist Church.

Jesse Buckbee was married in the county of his nativity to Miss Mary Secor, who was reared and educated in Orange County. She was born of French parentage. Two of her brothers, James and Abraham, were soldiers in the War of 1812. Her father was a prominent landholder at Highland Mills, Orange County, N. Y. who owned much property and a number of slaves.

In 1845, with his family, Jesse Buckbee came to Illinois, locating in this county. He made purchase of three hundred acres of land and, with the exception of forty acres, the entire amount is now within the city limits, and much of it has been laid out in lots and built up. He was not long permitted to enjoy his new home, for his death occurred in October, 1846. His wife survived him some years and died at the home of her son in Rockford, in March, 1875, at the advanced age of eighty-four years.

Unto this worthy couple were born ten children, but six are now deceased. The living are Eleanor W., who is now the wife of John Ames, a farmer of Dane County, Wis., by whom she has had ten sons; Francis A., a Justice of the Peace residing at Lake Geneva, married Jennie Palmer; Charles W., who is unmarried, resides with his younger brother in Rockford, they being interested together in business. Theodore E. completes the family. He resides at No. 1107 Kishwankee Street, and is a farmer He and his brother were the original proprietors of the first and second Buckbee's Addition to Rockford. So rapidly did their property increase in value that they both have become wealthy men and are prominent citizens of the community. Miss Catherine E. Allengton became the wife of Theodore E. Buckbee. She was born and reared in Chemung County, N. Y., and educated at Lima, that State, after which she engaged in teaching for some years. Her father, the Rev. Jacob Allington, was a prominent lumberman and landholder and also a Methodist minister. He died in Chemung County, N. Y., and his wife, whose maiden name was Catherine E. Westbrook, was also called to her final rest while living in that county.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Theodore E. Buckbee have been born two sons: Hiram W., who is proprietor of the Forest City Greenhouses, located on Kishwaukee Street, and also owns a large seed store on South Main Street, wedded May Brown, and they reside with her mother, Mrs. Judge William Brown. John T., who is living at home, is the overseer of his brother's seed store and is a young man of excellent business and executive ability. Mrs. Theodore E. Buckbee is a member of the Method-lst Church. The Buckbee family is well worthy of representation in this volume, for its members have long been connected with the history of the county, and are numbered among the valued and leading citizens.

ENRY GRAHAM. The gentleman who is following farming pursuits on section 32, Rockton Township, is not only well and favorably known in the community where he resides, but enjoys an enviable reputation throughout Winnebago County. He is a native of Pennsylvania, born in Northumberland County, on the Susquehanna River, December 20, 1823, The farm where he first opened his eyes to the light had been purchased by his grandfather, Henry Graham, soon after the close of the Revolutionary War, in which he had served for seven years. At the the time of its settlement, it comprised two hundred acres of wild timber land, as yet unsurveyed by the Government and outside the settled portion of the State. He had been attracted thither by the excellent soil on the bottoms of Warrior Run, or Creek River, near the Susquehanna.

One John Shannon, who had been Grandfather Graham's contrade during those seven long years of hardship and war, took a claim adjoining his, and these two brave soldiers of the Revolution, with commendable and undaunted courage, set about the battle of civil life with a determination to conquer the wilderness and gain an honest independence. In that effort, as in the war, success crowned their exertions, and they made good homes for their families, whom they surrounded with the comforts of life.

The fourth among the seven children in the family of Grandfather Graham was Matthew, who was born on the Pennsylvania homestead in 1796. In his early manhood, he was married to Miss Martha Shannon, a lady of Irish descent, who was probably born in the North of Ireland, Her parents had been wealthy and had owned an estate on the Shannon River which was confiscated by the British Government. When our subject was fifteen years old, he accompanied his parents to Centre County, Pa., where they bought an improved farm five miles from Bellefonte.

In the above-named city, Henry Graham learned the trade of a plasterer, which has been his occupation during the most of his long and industrious life. When Henry Clay was the Presidential nominee, he would have voted for him as enthusiastically as he had already "carried the torch for Tippecanoe and sung the songs for Tyler, too," but he was six weeks under voting age. Before he had an opportunity to east his ballot, experience and observation had converted him to the cause of the Abolitionists, and he has ever since east his vote for the oppressed and for good morals. During his sojourn in the Southern States, where he worked at his trade, he saw "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in real life. He plastered an elegant residence on a large plantation in Mississippi, twenty miles east of Yazoo, where from three to five hundred slaves were worked. and between fifty and sixty little children were cared for by one old crippled nurse during the hours of field labor.

The first marriage of Mr. Graham took place in Janesville, Wis., in May, 1850, when Miss Melissa J. Shurtleff, of Beloit, became his wife. She died in 1856, of consumption, and her two children, a son and a daughter, died of the same disease when quite young. In 1858, Mr. Graham was united in marriage to Miss Ellen Foster, of Edwardsburg, Cass County, Mich. Her father, Andrew Foster, was born in Milton, Pa., and carried on farming operations there and at Edwardsburg until his death at the latter place, when eighty-three years old. The mother of Mrs. Graham bore the maiden name of Rachael McMichael and died at Edwardsburg, in April, 1885, at the age of about four-score years.

Mrs. Graham was the second among seven children, two sons and five daughters, all of whom are living, with the exception of one sister, Margaret Foster, formerly a teacher, who was drowned while going to her school one day. Mrs. Graham was born in Ohio, March 8, 1831. They reared eight children, one of whom, Matthew, died in July, 1890, when twenty-four years old, leaving a widow and one child. The survivors are as follows: Andrew F., born in December, 1858; Lizzie, in May, 1860; Margaret, in June, 1862; Rachael, in June, 1864; Jennie, in June, 1868; Harry, in December, 1870; and Lucy, in October, 1872.

From 1847 until 1852, Mr. Graham resided in Beloit, whence he removed to Winnebago County and settled on eighty acres, a part of his present large farm, trading his home in Beloit for this farm. He continued in the business of plastering and has plastered many of the best houses in Roscoe, his first job being the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1849, and he has undoubtedly done more and better work in that line than any man in the county. While in Beloit, he plastered the first Beloit College building, and well remembers the first public meeting he there attended, it being the services in connection with the laying of the corner-stone of that structure.

HESTER CLARK LEACH, one of the old and honored residents of Boone County, is the owner of a splendid estate in Caledonia Township which his enterprise and good judgment have brought to a good state of cultivation. He was born in Dorset, Bennington County, Vt., February 28, 1820. His father, Joseph Leach, was born in Canterbury, Conn., where also his father, Elisha Leach, was born The great-grandfather of Mr. Leach was a native of Connecticut and of English ancestry.

Grandfather Elisha Leach moved to Pawlet soon after the Revolutionary War, where he purchased timber land and spent his entire life. The maiden name of his wife was Lucy Cady, a native of Canterbury, Conn., who survived her husband and after her second marriage died at the home of her son in Dorset, Vt. The father of our subject learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, and after his marriage located in Dorset, where he purchased a farm and resided until 1836. He then disposed of his property and removed to Genesee County, N. Y., locating in the town of Stafford, where he bought property of the Holland Land Company and resided until 1852, the date of his removal to Michigan. The elder Mr. Leach located in Calhoun County, which was his abidingplace until his death. Our subject's mother, who bore the maiden name of Clara Clark, was born in Canterbury, Conn., and was the daughter of Elisha and Clara (Starkweather) Clark. She reared a family of eleven children and departed this life at the home of a daughter in Albion, Mich.

Chester C. Leach was sixteen years of age when his parents removed to New York, where he entered the employ of the New York Central Railroad Company, with whom he remained for six years, and then commenced to learn the trade of a stone mason, being employed in the public works of the Empire State until 1815. Mr. Leach then decided to try his fortune in the West and, coming to Illinois in that year, located in this county at a time when the land was owned by the Government. He rented property, and as there were no railroads in the vicinity for some time, he marketed his farm produce at Chicago, which trip consumed a week's time.

In 1852, he of whom we write engaged as foreman and contractor in the construction department of the Northwestern Railroad Company, and three years later located upon the farm which he now owns and occupies. In 1860, he went to Pike's Peak, and returning eight months later, again engaged in the peaceful pursuits of agriculture. He is the proprietor of two hundred and sixty acres of choice land in Caledonia and Belvidere Townships, which, being intelligently cultivated, bring him in bandsome returns.

April 22, 1848, Miss Cynthia, daughter of Joseph Smith, became the wife of our subject. She was born in Greene, Chenango County, N. Y., of which State her father, as far as is known, was also a native. Mr. Smith came to Illinois in 1839, accompanied by his wife and six children, and formed one of the early settlers of Belvidere Township. He improved a tract of Government land, upon which he spent his last years. The maiden name of his wife was Hannah Barker, a native of Connecticut.

To our subject and his wife have been born three children, one of whom is living, namely, Francis M., who married Susan Fuller; he is the father of three children; Vernon S., Grace N., and Norman. Fred G. died when twenty-four years of age, and Grant when in his seventeenth year. Mr. Leach for the past thirteen years has had charge of the county poor. He has been a member of the Republican party since its formation, and enjoys the full confidence and respect of the people of his community.

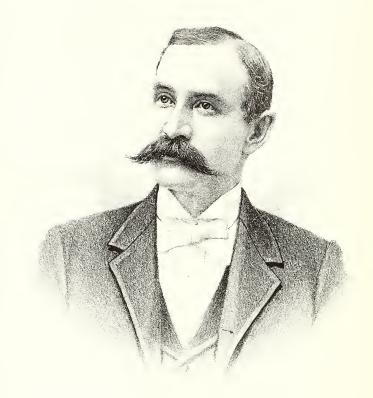

OBERT II. TINKER. The business interests of Rockford are well represented in our subject, who for many years has been prominently connected with the history of this city, its development and its upbuilding. His life record is as follows: He was born at Honolulu, in the Sandwich Islands, in 1837, while his father, the Rev. Reuben Tinker, was there located as a missionary. The latter came of a good New England family of the Puritan stock and was a man of more than ordinary ability, a prominent Presbyterian elergyman of the Empire State. He was sent by the American Board of Missions to the Sandwich Islands, and spent ten years in active work among the people there. He then returned to America and contined his labors in Chautauqua County, N. Y., as a minister of the Gospel until his death, which occurred in 1854. He was an original sermonizer, and known as such throughout the entire State. He married a refined lady of Massachusetts, Miss Mary T. Wood, who proved an able assistant in his life work as a minister and missionary. She is still living in Westfield, N. Y., at the age of eighty-three, and her mental faculties are yet unimpaired.

With his parents, Robert II. Tinker returned to this country, and since 1856 has resided in Rockford, a leading and influential citizen of the county. He was married in this city, in 1870, to Mrs. Mary Manny, widow of John II. Manny, one of the leading inventors and manufacturers of this city. Mrs. Tinker was in her maidenhood Miss Mary Dorr. She was born, reared and educated in the East and came to Rockford with her first husband. Since that time, she has been one of the prominent ladies of this city, ranking high in social circles. Many public interests have received her aid and, among other causes, she has given liberally to the building of churches.

What Mr. Tinker has done for Rockford can hardly be estimated in words, but we will mention a few of the interests with which he is connected. He is President of the Rockford Water-power Company and a large owner in the Power Supplying houses and machinery. One has to walk over the grounds known in this city as "The Power" to gain any idea of the magnitude of this enterprise and the important part it has played in the upbuilding of this thriving manufacturing center. Mr. Tinker is also President of the Rockford Bolt Works and of the Rockford Oatmeal Company, and is a stockholder and Director in many other corporations. When a live man is wanted to take charge of any new enterprise, Mr. Tinker at once comes to mind, for it is well known that he took the laboring oar in bringing the second railroad to the city after a struggle of several years. He is not only energetic and industrious, but is far-sighted as well, and his sagacity and enterprise have made his business career a most successful one.

Mr. Tinker has taken some part in local politics and in 1875 was elected Mayor of Rockford, which position he held for one term. He possesses much taste for landscape gardening and, owing to this fact, was recently chosen to plot the addition to the West Side Cemetery, of which he is one of the trustees, and his talent in this direction, and his willingness to bestow it without thought of remuneration on public and private grounds, have given the city of his adoption a name for its beauty and finish. His skill in this direction has found ample scope in the grounds of his pleasant home, "Swiss Cottage," which is located on the south bank of Kent Creek, overlooking the Illinois Central Railroad. It is, perhaps, the most picturesque home in the State, and has frequently been used to embellish pictorial works. A genial, cultured, modest gentleman, whose upright life has won him many friends. Mr. Tinker is well deserving of representation in his county's history, and we feel that this work would be incomplete were the record of his life omitted.

O. UGARPH is a gentleman whose long experience and natural aptitude for business have met with assured success and permanent prosperity. He is now a stockholder and Director of the Union Furniture Company, the Chair and Furniture Company, the Skandia Plow Company, the Mantel and Furniture Company, the Royal Sewing Machine Company, the Rockford Folding Bed Company, and numerous other enterprises. He is a courteous and obliging gentleman, whose reputation for sterling integrity and personal worth is too well known in this city to require mention. He came to Rockford in 1869, and for a number of years was connected as stockholder and cabinet-maker with the Union Furniture Company. He later became a commercial traveler for that company and for the Chair and Furniture Company. In 1883, he purchased a stock of goods in Clinton, Iowa, and continued the business until 1888, when he sold out to Sutten & Son. Since his return to Rockford, Mr. Ugarph has erected a very handsome residence at No 1008 Second Avenue.

Mr. Ugarph was born in Sweden, in 1852, and received his scholastic advantages in the public schools of that country. Miss Olga L. Ekstein, who was wedded to him m Rockford, October 22, 1890, was born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, and was eleven years of age when her parents emigrated to America (1878) .Mr. and Mrs. Ugarph, of this sketch, are prominent young people of Rockford and are very ardent believers in the capabilities of their adopted country.

In connection with this sketch we are pleased to present a lithographic portrait of Mr. Ugarph, POOLPH PETERSON, a successful tailor and skillful workman, is now in the employ of Marsales & Holmin, of Rockford, and is one of that firm's most competent men. He has had many years' experience in tailoring and has earned a well-deserved reputation for excellence of workmanship, artistic skill and finish. For some years he was with Mr. Atkinson, the merchant tailor on West State Street, and afterwards was a promoter, stockholder, Director, and part of the time President of the Merchant Tailoring Company. This company carried on business for three years and was then succeeded by Marsales & Holmin, in whose employ Mr. Peterson has been ever since. He has met with substantial results in his business enterprises and now owns a pleasant and commodious residence at No. 405 South First Street.

His birth occurred in Jonkoping, Sweden, February 24, 1817, and there he spent his boyhood and school days. He was reared to his trade and became a journeyman. In the spring of 1868, he came to the United States and the same year saw him domiciled at Rockford. He was the first of the family to set foot on American soil, but the following year he was joined by his parents, Nils and Christina (Larson) Peterson, and other members of the family. The parents are both living, are residents of Rockford, and are members of the Lutheran Mission Swedish Church, Both have now passed the allotted age of man, three-score years and ten, but still enjoy comparatively good health. Beside our subject, they have two children in Rockford, Gustaf, and Mrs. Maris Munthe (see sketch). The former is a cutter for the Rockford Clothing Company. He married Miss Selma Samuelson and they reside on First Avenue.

. Adolph Peterson was married in Rockford to Miss Hedveg Linstrom, a native of Sweden who came to the United States in 1869 with the parents of Mr. Peterson, and was later joined by a sister, Mary, who is now Mrs. Hollemberg. Mrs. Peterson's parents never came to the United States. The father, Peter Linstrom, died in his native country a number of years ago, but the mother is still living at the age of seventy-five, and is a resident of Jonkoping.

The fruits of Mr. Peterson's marriage are four children: G. Edwin, in the Rockford Watch Factory; Ellen A., at home; Nellie V., at home, and F. Raymond, also at home. Socially, Mr. Peterson is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Modern Woodmen, and, politically, he advocates the principles of the Republican party.

LBERT HULETT. This county is famous for the richness of its soil, and for its many farms that are scarcely exceeded in production and in the value of their improvements by those of any other section of our fair land, and this gentleman is represented as the fortunate owner of a splendid estate in Owen Township, that compares favorably with any in its locality.

Born in the town of Veteran, Chemung County, N. Y., August 14, 1833, our subject is a son of John M. Hulett, one of the pioneers of this county, whose birth occurred in Rutland County, Vt., in 1802. John Hulett, his father, came from his native England to America when a young man and engaged in farming in Rutland County, Vt. From there he removed to Chemung County, N. Y., and, purchasing a farm in Veteran, there spent the remainder of his life.

John M. Hulett, the father of our subject, after reaching his majority, removed from his native State to New York where he rented land near Rochester, and was engaged in market gardening for two years in company with his brother. He later removed to Chemung County, where he met and married, in June, 1832, Lucinda Jay. There the elder Mr. Hulett bought a farm of eighty aeres, upon which he resided until September of the following year, when he made his home in Chautauqua County, becoming the owner of a tract of land, twenty acres of which were improved. There the family resided until 1837, when, disposing of his estate, the father, accompanied by his wife and two children, made the overland journey to Ohio. After spending two months in Birmingham, he went to Indiana and purchased a tract of land in Elkhart County. In 1842, he made another removal, this time coming to Illinois, and locating in what is now Rockton Township, Winnebago County, when the country round about was sparsely settled and wild game of all kinds was plentiful. Mr. Hulett purchased a tract of land, located on section 35, and as there were no buildings on the place, lived on an adjoining farm until the place was made habitable. After a few years' residence thereon, he disposed of his property and for the succeeding five or six years was the owner of a farmer in Owen Township, which he also sold later and bought the farm where his son, L. T. Hulett, now lives. There he departed this life, April 13, 1881.

The mother of our subject was born in Lansing, Tioga County, N. Y., August 9, 1812, and was the daughter of Joshua Jay, a native of New Jersey, who later removed to New York, where he was one of the pioneers of the above-named county. He was a blacksmith by trade, which occupation he pursued while the farm in the town of Lansing was operated by his son. Some years later, Mr. Jay removed to Veteran and erected a log house and shop on a tract of timber land, which he brought to a good state of cultivation, and built thereon a sawmill. After the death of his wife, Mr. Jay removed to Ohio, and departed this life at the home of his son in Birmingham.

The mother of our subject, who is still residing on the old home with her son Luke, reared six children: Albert, Gray, Martha, Luke, Zacharia T, and Mary. Albert of this sketch was an infant when his parents moved to Indiana, and in his eighth year when they came to Winnelago County. He attended the pioneer schools in Rockton and assisted his father in the farm duties, remaining at home until reaching his seventeenth year. He then commenced to learn the trade of a carpenter and joiner, and after serving an apprenticeship of three years, bought his time of his father and rented land of Hiram Lake for one year. He then became the proprietor of eighty acres in Owen Township, which is now included in his present farm, his estate comprising two hundred acres on section 12 in one body.

The lady to whom our subject was married, May 1, 1856, was Rachael Ann Lake. She was born May 1, 1840, in the Province of Ontario, Canada, her father being Hiram Lake. She was an only sister of Mrs. George Gleasman (whose sketch will be found on another page of this work) and died November 25, 1876. The second marriage of our subject occurred October 17, 1889, at which time Mary M. Feakins became his wife; she is a native of Schoharie County, N. Y., and the daughter of George and Mary (Stockney) Feakins, natives of England. The father was a miller and followed that business in New York State until coming to Illinois in 1855 at which time he opened up that line of work in Belvidere, Rockford and Rockton, He died at the latter-named place, where the mother of Mrs. Hulett now lives.

Of the present marriage of our subject one son has been born, Paul M., and by the former union the following-named four children: Marston W., Mary Lorena, Mattie E. and John M. Mr. Hulett east his first vote for Abraham Lineoln and has since voted the straight Republican ticket. He has represented Owen Township five terms on the County Board of Supervisors and is held in high repute by all who know him.

ILES R. GOSS. The beautiful residence on the corner of West and Elm Streets, Rockford, is the home of Mr. Goss, whose successful career as a business man fairly entitles him to the esteem of his associates and the confidence of the community. He has resided in Rockford since 1866, and during twelve years of the period was engaged as a dealer in grain, but has been retired from active business cares for some years.

Coming to Illinois in 1856, Mr. Goss located on one hundred and sixty acres of land which he had purchased prior to removing hither. He improved a farm now occupied by the present site of the village of Florence, erected the first grain elevator in the village and other buildings, which materially contributed to the value of his property. For some time he engaged as a real-estate dealer, and by judicious management accumulated a comfortable property. After coming to this county, he purchased a farm of three hundred acres in Winnebago Township, which he still owns.

Mr. Goss was born in Fulton Township, Schoharic County, N. Y., June 1, 1820, and made his home in his native place until he removed to Illinois in 1856, meanwhile becoming familiar with every detail of farm life. His father, Robert Goss, was a native of New York State, living and dying on a farm in the township of Fulton, and his death occurring at the age of sixty-four years. The grandfather of our subject, Col. John Goss, was born in the Empire State and probably gained his title through his service in the War of 1812. He followed agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred near Rochester at an advanced age. His wife was a lady of Irish birth and parentage, and died in the Empire State when quite old.

The mother of our subject was known in maidenhood as Mary Kirkland, and was born and reared in Fulton Township, Schoharie Coun'y, of which her parents were early settlers. She died at the advanced age of eighty-three years. With her husband, she was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, where he served as Classleader and Steward. Our subject is the third child among eight, all of whom grew to mature years, and five are yet living. Two brothers became Methodist ministers of considerable prominence; one of these still survives, and is the pastor of the church at Newburg, N. Y.

When twenty-seven years old, Mr. Goss was married to Elizabeth A. Wood, who was born in Schoharic County, N. Y., the daughter of James A. and Catherine (Lamont) Wood, natives of New York State. Mrs. Wood died in 1851, and her husband afterward came to Illinois and spent his last years in Rockford, dying at the home of Mrs. Goss in September, 1888, at the age of almost ninety years. He was a man of splendid information and great ability, and had served as President of the College at Charlotte, and represented his district in the State Legislature. His polities first brought him into sympathy with the Democrats, but after coming to Illinois be became an active Republican.

Mr. and Mrs. Goss are the parents of one child, Catherine A., wife of Thomas Hamlyn, a native of Devonshire, England. He came when five years old to America with his parents, Thomas and Susan (Pengilly) Hamlyn, making settlement at London, Ontario, where the father died on his farm. The mother still resides on the old homestead. In 1868, Mr. Hamlyn came to the States and has since been a resident of Rockford. In their religious connections, Mr. and Mrs. Goss are identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, politically, Mr. Goss is a Republican, with Prohibition proclivities.

F. HENRY is the junior member and city partner and manager of the Golden Eagle Clothing Store, located on the corner of West State and Main Streets in Rockford, This firm does a most extensive business as dealers in gents' furnishing goods and children's clothing, and has no superior outside of Chicago in Illinois, Mr. Sterns, a prominent business man of Chicago, is the non-resident partner, and the business is represented by the firm title of C. F. Henry & Co. They occupy a three-story building, 80x50 feet, well arranged, ventilated and lighted, and well filled with a complete stock of all kinds of goods in their line. The ground floor is occupied by men's clothing and gents' furnishing goods, and the upper story is the children's department, which is unsurpassed in this city.

It will be interesting to know something of the resident proprietor of the Golden Eagle Clothing Store. He was born in the old shady town of Plymouth, Mass, not far from that rock on which the Pilgrim Fathers are said to have first set foot on coming to America. He was often lulled to sleep by the roar of the ocean, and on the beach many happy hours of his childhood were passed.

His parents were both natives of Germany, coming to this country after their marriage. For a time they resided in Massachusetts and then emigrated to Rockford, Ill., where the death of Mr. Henry, Sr., occurred, December 25, 1883, at an advanced age. His wife is still living in this city at the age of seventy-six years. Like her husband, she has been a life-long member of the Lutheran Church.

C. F. Henry was a small lad when he came to this city, where almost his entire life has been passed. His connection with the clothing trade began at the age of ten years, when he secured a position in a store. Of course he began at the bottom, but when quite young he determined to some day go into business for himself, and with this resolution to be carried out he labored industriously and lived economically, until when he had arrived at man's estate he had accumulated enough capital to carry out his long-cherished desire, and so looked about him for a favorable opening for business. He had become a good salesman, and in 1863 he opened a store. In 1879, he became the manager and leading partner of the Golden Eagle Clothing House, which, as the result of his energy and good judgment, has had a continuous run of prosperity.

Mr. Henry was married in Rockford to an accomplished young lady, Miss Fannie S. Skinner, one of this city's fair daughters. Her father, James B. Skinner, is prominently known in this locality as the inventor of the first gang plow and President of the J. B. Skinner Plow Company, of Rockford. His death occurred in 1874, since which time Mrs. Skinner has become the wife of David Heyt, a wealthy citizen and honored early settler of Winnebago County, still residing in Rockford. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Henry have been born two interesting children: Rupert J. and Charlotte A.

To the clothing business alone Mr. Henry has not confined his attention, but, realizing the benefit of various enterprises, he has done what he could for the introduction of such to the city and for their growth and improvement. At the present time he is a stockholder in thirteen different institutions. He has also done much for the upbuilding of Rockford, having creeted a large two-story brick building with basement on North Main Street, divided into six storerooms, besides a large livery stable three stories high. In politics, he is a Republican, and is a prominent Knight Templar Mason, belonging to Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T., of Rockford, the Consistory of Freeport, III., and the Medina Order of Chicago. He is also an Odd Fellow and Knight of Pythias, has taken both degrees of the Elks and is connected with other insurance orders. In addition to this, he is a charter member of the Rockford Commercial Club, the leading club of the city. What Mr. Henry has done for Rockford cannot be estimated in words, and to say that he has been a most valued eitizen seems but poor praise; but though words eannot requite him, his fellow-townsmen appreciate his worth, as is evinced by the manner in which they speak of him, and the high regard in which he is held.

SHER E. JENNER is numbered among the foremost citizens of Belvidere and has been prominently connected with its leading interests for many years, both officially and in a business way. He was born in Moriali, Essex County, N. Y., April 10, 1818. His grandfather, Stephen Jenner, was a New England farmer and spent his last years in the Green Mountain State, where his son, Stephen, Jr., the father of our subject, was born, his birth occurring in Pittsford, Rutland County. He learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, and was united in marriage with Betsy E. Mather, a native of Connecticut, and a daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Woodruff) Mather. Immediately after his marriage, Mr. Jenner removed to New York, becoming an early settler of Moriah, and there he followed his trade until 1831, when he came to the West by way of the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes. He settled in Ashville, engaged in earpentering there until 1839, when he located in Belvidere. He and his wife both spent their last days in this eity.

Our subject was a lad of thirteen years when, with his parents, he removed to Chautauqua, N. Y.

On his fourteenth birthday, he became a jeweler's apprentice in Jamestown, serving a term of six years, after which he came to Belvidere, Ill., in 1838, making the journey by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and thence on foot to Belvidere. The city was then a mere hamlet, containing nine houses, while two others were in process of erection. All the surrounding country was owned by the Government and the land was in its primitive condition. At Belvidere, Mr. Jenner started the first jewelry and watch-repairing establishment between Chicago and Galena. At that time there were no railroads here and the people from the surrounding counties used to haul their produets to Chicago, and on their way would bring Mr. Jenner work. He continued in the jewelry business until 1856, when, on account of ill-health, he was forced to discontinue it. In 1818, he had added a stock of hardware, and continued to carry on trade in that line until the war,

In 1840, Mr. Jenner wedded Mary J. Cook, a native of Pembroke, Genesee County, N. Y., and a daughter of Benjamin Cook. Her death occurred in 1851. In 1856, Mr. Jenner wedded Emmaroy E. Lyon, a native of Chittenden County, Vt., and a daughter of George and Elizabeth (Root) Lyon. By the first marriage were born two sons: Charles J., now the Sheriff of Chautauqua County, N. Y., and George C., a resident of Jamestown. By the second marriage there is one daughter yet living: Kittie II., wife of William II. Williams, a resident of Cheago. One daughter, Nellie A., died at the age of twenty-one years.

In polities, Mr. Jenner was formerly a Whig, but has been a Republican since the organization of the party. He has been called upon to fill various official positions. In fact, since his retirement from business, he has given his entire time to public life. He has served as Village and City Clerk since 1857, as Town Clerk since 1860, as Justice of the Peace since 1861, was School Commissioner two terms, was Deputy Sheriff, Deputy Circuit Clerk, Deputy Postmaster, and has been County Treasurer for ten years. The many offices which he has been called upon to fill indicate his popularity and the high regard in which he is held, while his long-continued service in the various positions attests his efficiency and faithful performance of duty. He is one of the well-known and influential citizens of the community and well deserves representation in this volume. In addition to this biographical sketch, his portrait is presented on an accompanying page.

ORENZO S. FYLER. In tracing the general ealogy of the Fyler family in America, we find that Walter Fyler, an Englishman, who came here as early as 1636, was the first to settle in this country. He located at Dorchester, Mass, was a man of wealth and influence, and lived to a good old age. In fact, the Fyler family has ever been noted for its longevity.

The subject of this sketch, who is of the eighth generation following Walter Fyler, was born in Sullivan, N. Y., June 1, 1818, and his father, Erastus Fyler, and his grandfather, Silas Fyler, were natives of Torrington, Litchfield County, Conn., and both successful agriculturists all their Erastus Fyler was born on the 2d of October, 1789, and in 1810 moved to Madison County, N. Y., where he bought a small tract of timber land with some improvements. A year later, he was joined by his parents, who passed their last days in the county, both dying in August, 1812, within three weeks of each other, and when about sixty-two years of age. They left three sons and one daughter: Lucy, Silas, Shayler and Erastus, all of whom are now deceased. Lucy became the wife of Orange Soper and died in Madison County, N. Y., in 1874, when ninety-four years of age. She was the last of these children. Her mother, and the grandmother of our subject, was formerly Miss Lucy Drake, of Torrington, Conn., and her father, Moses Drake, was of the same place. Erastus Fyler married Miss Abigail Smith, of Massachusetts, who was the daughter of Jonathan and Hannah (Ellis) Smith, both natives of the old Bay State. To this union were born tive children, a son and four daughters: Lorenzo S., Harriet, Lucy, Hannah M. and Eliza F. The father of these children died in Oswego County, N. Y., in 1856, when sixty-seven years of age, and the mother died in the same place, in 1860, when sixty-five years of age.

Lorenzo S. Fyler and his sister, Eliza F., now Mrs. Reuben W. Slayton, of Tully, N. Y., are the only survivors of this family. The former was but four years of age when his parents removed to Parish, N. Y., and he was early trained to the duties of the farm. In connection with farming be also taught school for fifteen winter terms, or until 1856, when he exchanged his farm for a stock of merchandise and followed storekeeping until 1861. From there he moved to Roscoe, Ill., and embarked in the wholesale Yankee-notion trade, running one and two wagons in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin until 1877. He then sold out the business, and on the 1st of May, 1879, he opened a drug and grocery store in Roscoe. This he carries on very successfully at the present time. He took his daughter, Mary F., as an equal partner in the business on the 1st of May, 1890, under the firm title of L. S. Fyler & Co.

Before leaving New York State, Mr. Fyler held the office of Justice of the Peace several terms, was Superintendent of Schools, and held other responsible positions in a very creditable and satisfactory manner. Upon removing West, he went out of politics and gave his entire attention to domestic duties and his business enterprises. His first Presidential vote was cast for William H. Harrison in 1840, and since then every Presidential vote has cast has been for a Whig or Republican nominee. He has voted for all, with the exception of Rutherford B. Hayes, being at that time absent in a distant part of the State on business.

On the 12th of September, 1841, Mr. Fyler wedded Miss Cordelia Wiltse, who was born in Hannibal, N. Y., January 21, 1822, and who passed away in Roscoe, Ill., on the 22d of May, 1864. The result of this union was the birth of four children, three sons and one daughter: Edwin W., born November 5, 1813, now of Dorchester, Mass.; Warren E., born March 26, 1846, now of Durand, Ill.; Dewitt C., born March 8, 1850, now of Shellrock, Iowa, and Mary F., born November 27, 1862, now of Roscoe, Ill. On the 1st of March, 1865, Mr. Fyler married Miss Kate Wiltse, a consin of his first wife and a native of Hannibal, N. Y., born August 24, 1832. She has filled the place of an own mother to his children and made a pleasant home, around which their memories will gather in pleasurable reminiscences in the years to come.

When fourteen years of age, the original of this sketch united with the Free-will Baptist Church, of which his parents had been members and the father a Deacon for many years, thus early evincing a religious turn of mind. Subsequently, he be came firmly established in the belief of the final salvation of all mankind from sin and misery, and that in the fullness of time all humanity would be better for having had an existence, as the All-Wise God intended for them at creation, and that all souls will eternally progress towards divinity. After settling in Roscoe, in order to enjoy a church home with its privileges and associations, he has attiliated with the Congregational society of his town and contributed liberally to its support and welfare.

OSEPH B. ATWOOD, residing on his extensive farm in Roscoe Township, section 6, Winnebago County, Ill., near where he was born in February, 1840, is a son of Patten Atwood, who was born in Alexander, Grafton County, N. H., on the 11th of January, 1805. The elder Mr. Atwood was trained to the duties of farm life in boyhood and when eleven years of age went to Canada with his parents. His father, Joseph Atwood, was also a native of the Granite State and in 1816 moved to Canada, where he subsequently died, when in the prime of life. He met with an accident that resulted in his death. His wife survived him a number of years but died in that country. After the death of the father, the family was left with limited means, but Patten, who at an early age showed marked ability as a manager, assumed the responsibility of looking after affairs and assisted his mother in rearing the younger children. He was married in Canada to Miss Anna Brooks, a Canadian, whose parents were born in Nova Scotia. In December, 1839, Mr. and Mrs. Atwood, with their eight children, emigrated to Harlem, Ill., and bought one hundred and twenty acres of Government land, on which they settled and which is now known as the Peter Mabie farm. This tand was in a state of nature and they paid $1.25 per acre for it. The journey from Canada to Harlem was made with ox-teams and they were six weeks on the way. They first moved into a house with one Mr. Mead, and there remained until spring. Mr. Atwood in the meantime erecting a good log house on his land. He had but $30 left after paying for his farm, but he possessed a great amount of energy and perseverance and began at once to clear his land. He lived on this claim but one year and then traded for one hundred and ten acres now in Owen Township, where he has resided since. This farm had some improvements and he paid some difference. To the original tract he added from year to year until he owned six hundred acres, but he gave each of his children a start, and now has about two hundred acres with excellent buildings, etc. Mrs. Atwood died at their home in Owen Township July 30, 1890, when eighty-two years of age. She bore her husband fifteen children, six sons and nine daughters, all now living except one, a daughter, who died in early childhood. Of these children, the eldest is sixty-five years of age and the youngest over forty. They are named as follows: Sally, Henry B., Eliza, Lydia, William, Candace. Anna, Mary, Joseph B., Irene, Patten B., Harriet, John and Philip, the youngest, at home. All are married.

In 1864, Joseph B. Atwood, the subject of this sketch, left the parental roof and went to his farm of one hundred and eighteen acres in the southwest part of Roscoe Township, boarding with a tenant in his house. Seven years later, he bought one hundred and sixty-five acres where he now lives, on which was a house, and paid $60 per acre for this. On the 5th of September, 1877, he was married in Rockton Township, at the home of Fred Gleasman, to Miss Lizzie II. Gleasman, daughter of Godfrey and Henrietta (Schmenger) Gleasman, both natives of Germany, who came to this country in 1837. Mr. Gleasman and his brother George enlisted from Oneida County in the Civil War and both were killed at the battle of Antietam. In speaking of the Gleasmans as soldiers, Capt. Brendel, of F tica, N.Y., said that if he had a regiment of such men as the two Gleasmans he could march into the mouth of helt. These men were both over fifty and exempt, but they were patriotic and loyal to the Union. Mrs. Atwood's mother and her children came to Rockton, just over the line from Roscoe, in the spring of 1858 and first settled on rented land. She died in Rockton, September 27, 1886, when seventy-six years of age, leaving four sons and three daughters, having buried her youngest son, John, when twenty-seven years of age. He died August 12, 1878.

Mr. and Mrs. Atwood have buried one son, Joseph L., an infant, who died October 30, 1886, and two daughters, Alice II., who died December 30, 1888, a bright little girl of about four and one half years, and Hazel L., who was born March 23, 1890, and died March 10, 1892. The children now living are John Roy, born February 11, 1879, and George G., January 1, 1882. The sons are attending the district school. Mr. Atwood is quite an extensive farmer and owns about one thousand acres within five miles of his home farm. He has an excellent house, admirably presided over by his thrifty and intelligent wife, and his barns and outbuildings all show their owner to be a man of progress and enterprise. Mrs. Atwood is a member of the Methodist Church, and her husband affiliates with the Republican party in politics, OBERT SMITH is one of the leading and influential farmers of Harlem Township, and one of the representatives of the piomer families of Winnebago County. His home is situated on section 26, and he owns and operates three hundred and sixty acres of valuable land, which is well tilled and yields him a golden tribute for the care and labor which he bestows upon it. It is well improved with good buildings and has all the accessories of a model farm.

Mr. Smith was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, August 22, 1821. His grandfather, Daniel Smith, was born in Ayrshire, whence he removed to Argyleshire, locating upon a tract of wild land and residing in a sod house for many years. He there improved a good farm and made his home until his death. Only two of his children ever came to America, Daniel and Janet. The latter became Mrs. Brown and settled in Cincinnati, Ohio. The former is the father of our subject. He was born in Argyleshire, February 11, 1791, was reared to agricultural pursuits and after attaining to man's estate rented land and engaged in farming. He wedded Mary Montgomery, who was born in Kintyre, January 12, 1795, and was a daughter of Robert Montgomery. They became the parents of nine children: Flora, Robert, John, Daniel, Alexander, Archibald, Jane, William and Mary Agnes, The parents with their family emigrated to America in 1812, sailing on the vessel "Gleaner" from Campbelltown, the first ocean vessel which ever left that port. They weighed anchor on the 4th of June and reached New York on the 4th of July. They came at once to Winnebago County, making the journey by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and settled in Harlem Township. Mr. Smith bought the land on which our subject now resides. Upon the place was a log cabin and a large log building which had been used as a distillery. Mr. Smith and his brother-in-law, James Montgomery, bought the farm at $5 per acre, and at once began its development and cultivation. The trials of pioneer life were not escaped by them, they bearing the usual experiences of frontier families. Mr. Smith died on the old homestead August 20, 1845, and his wife there passed away May 31, 1872. They were highly respected people and had many friends in this community.

The subject of this sketch acquired his education in his native land, and at the age of seventeen accompanied his parents on their emigration to America. On his father's death, the care of the home farm devolved upon him and to its cultivation and improvement he has since devoted his energies, and in the undertaking has met with signal success.

In 1855, Mr. Smith wedded Agnes Greenlees, who was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, and is a daughter of William and Martha (Harvey) Greenlees. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been born five children: Mary J., Martha, Agnes, wife of William Brown, William G. and Danie' Andrew. The parents and their daughters are members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, and are people widely and favorably known in this community. In politics, Mr. Smith is a stanch Republican, having supported that party since its organization.

ZRA MAY, a well-known citizen of Belvidere, whose portrait accompanies this sketch, is one of the most extensive land owners of Northern Illinois. He has always been interested in agricultural pursuits and now has a farm which is operated under his personal supervision. His other farms are rented and yield to him a handsome income.

Mr. May was born in Phillipsburg, fifty miles from Montreal, Canada, November 6, 1813, and is of English descent. His grandfather, Ezra May, Sr., was born in England, and came to America in Colonial days, settling in Goshen, Mass., where he spent the remainder of his life engaged in farming. His youngest child, Calvin May, was the father of our subject. He was born and reared in Goshen and in early life turned his attention to the study of medicine, graduating from Yale College, He afterwards went to Phillipsburg, Canada, becoming one of its pioneer settlers. His practice extended over a radius of eighty miles, and he used to make his rounds on horseback. He became well known as a prominent citizen, and his death. which occurred in 1828, was widely mourned. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Hyatt, spent her last days in Cherry Valley, Ill.

Our subject was one of eleven children. His boyhood and youth were spent in Phillipsburg, his early days being passed upon a farm, and later he was employed on Government work. He continued to reside in Canada until 1836, when, in company with two other young men, he went to Michigan City, where he was employed by the Government to buy machinery for six months. In the month of May, 1839, he came to Illinois and located in Winnebago County. He purchased a squatter's claim to a tract of Government land in what is now Cherry Valley Township, and when the land came into market entered it at the land office in Galena. Upon it he built a log cabin and on his marriage, himself and wife commenced housekeeping in that humble abode. He was joined in wedlock on Bonus Prairie, February 21, 1840, with Lovisa May, a native of the Empire State.

After residing upon his farm in Winnebago County for seven years, Mr. May came to Belvidere and engaged in the dry-goods business. He has been prominently identified with the best interests of this county from that time until the present. He continued in the dry-goods business for some years, and later purchased a flouring mill which he operated for some time. He is now engaged in banking and in 1890 was elected President of the Second National Bank of this city. Mr. May possesses excellent business ability, is sagacious and far-sighted and his enterprise and good management have won him a handsome property.

Eight children have been born unto our subject and his wife, five of whom are yet living: Mrs. Ella M. Olney, Mrs. Florence L. Smith, Mrs. Clara II. Greenslit, Calvin D., a banker of Clinton, Iowa, and Stephen Douglas, a lawyer of Chicago.

Mr. May has filled various public offices of honor and trust. He has served both as a member of the City Board and of the County Board of Supervisors and his duties have ever been discharged with promptness and fidelity. He may well be termed a self-made man, for to his own efforts alone is due the credit of his excellent success. His upright life has won him the confidence of all, and in many respects his career is well worthy of emulation.

UGH BROWN is a well-known agriculturist of Winnebago County, residing on section 3, Guilford Township. He was born on a farm a mile from the village of South End, Argyleshire, Scotland, September 28, 1835. His paternal grandfather, Edward Brown, a native of the same county, followed farming throughout his entire life, and died at the advanced age of ninety-six years. James Brown, the father of our subject, also spent his entire life in Argyleshire, and was engaged in agricultural pursuits through much of his life. His last years, however, were spent in the village of South End, where he died in 1859. His wife, whose maiden name was Margaret Andrews, was born in Argyleshire, and there died in 1816. In their family were nine children, and by the second marriage of the father four children were born.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who spent his boyhood days in the usual manner of farmer lads and gave his father the benefit of his assistance until 1854, when, having determined to try his fortune in America, he sailed from Glasgow in July of that year, landing in New York sixteen days later. He came directly to the Scotch settlement in Winnebago County, and began working as a farm hand at $13 per month. In 1855, in connection with his brother, he rented a farm in Boone County. Three years later, he came to this county, where he rented land for two years, when, in connection with his brother James, he purchased the Dennis farm, which they cultivated for ten years in partnership. Our subject then bought an eighty-acre tract of land, and as he also owns forty acres of the Dennis place, his landed possessions now aggregate one hundred and twenty acres, which pay to him a golden tribute in return for his care and cultivation. His farm is well improved and is one of the valuable places of the neighborhood.

On the 28th of April, 1870, Mr. Brown was united in marriage with Miss Jane Picken, who was born in Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill., and is a daughter of George Picken, a native of Argyleshire, Scotland. His father, Archie Picken. spent his entire life in Scotland. The father of Mrs. Brown was married in his native land to Jane Brown a native of Argyleshire, and a daughter of Charles Brown, who came to America when quite well advanced in years, and after spending a short time in Cincinnati, became a resident of Winnebago County, where his last days were passed. Mr. and Mrs. Picken crossed the broad Atlantic in 1840, and became pioneer settlers of what is now Caledonia Township, Boone County, where the father purchased land of the Government and developed a farm, upon which he resided until his death, November 20, 1875, at the age of sixtynine years. His wife is still living on the old homestead, and has reached the age of four-score years.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Brown have been born two daughters, Maggie and Mary J. The parents are both members of the Willow Creek Church, and are most estimable people. Mr. Brown is numbered among the early settlers of this community, having long been identified with the history of the county. He is also a self-made man, for he came to America empty-handed, and has steadily worked his way upward until he is now one of the well-to-do citizens of this community.

Which introduces this sketch is one well known in Winnebago County, having been borne by a gentleman who was acknowledged to be an excellent representative of a self-made man and intelligent agriculturist. He was born June 1, 1817, in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and was a son of John and Nancy Jones, the former of whom came from England and located in Canada, where he made his home until coming to Rockford. His decease occurred when eighty-two years of age. Our subject entered the tract on which his widow resides from the Government in 1847, and placed the entire amount under most excellent cultivation.

The lady to whom our subject was married was Mrs. Mary Carson, the widow of John Carson. One child, a son, was born of that union, his birth taking place November 6, 1841, in the Dominion of Canada. He was married in 1872 to Miss Matha Mathewson, who was born in Tolland, Conn., November 24, 1850. To them have been born ten sons and one daughter, namely: Clyde W., Bertram W., George R., Edlie M., Clarence F., Howard L., Earl N., Ellis D., Kenneth C., Stanley A. and Glenn J. The daughter-m-law of Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Carson, was the daughter of Dearborn and Lavancia Mathewson, natives respectively of Rhode Island and Connecticut. The father died in Iowa when seventy-three years of age, but the mother, who is seventy-four years of age, still lives and makes her home near Marion, lowa.

Albert T. Carson, bugler during the late war, enlisted in September, 1861, for three years, or during the war, in Company K, First Illinois Cavalry. At the expiration of eighteen months, he was discharged, and re-enlisted in 1864, and during that time participated in many skirmishes. His last enlistment was with Company M, Eighth Illinois Cavalry. He was never wounded or captured, which is indeed quite remarkable for one who took such an active part in numerous hardfought battles. He is a carpenter by trade.

Mrs. Jones was born August 3, 1822, in Ontario. Canada, and was a daughter of George and Elizabeth Taylor, of England. Her parents emigrated to Canada, where they spent the remainder of their lives, the father dying when seventy-four years of age and the mother in her seventy-eighth year. Mrs. Jones remained at home until twenty-nine years of age, and then, coming to Illinois to visit her sister, she met our subject and was married to him October 17, 1852. She is an able housewife, a kind neighbor, and wins the regard of those about her.

YLVESTER BURR WILKINS. This gentleman who has for many years been one of the leading citizens of Rockford, was born on a farm in Chenango County, N. Y., in 1833, and is descended from an old and respected New England family. His edution was acquired in the public schools, and he remained upon the farm until he had attained his majority, when he started out for himself, his father giving him $2.50. His first business venture on his own account was in manufacturing wagon supplies in Binghamton, N. Y.

Afterward Mr. Wilkins went to Milton, Pa., where he was engaged in the manufacture of spokes and hubs for several years. Meanwhile he invented a machine for making wheel spokes, one half interest in which he sold for $1,000, it being the first $1,000 which he could call his own. While living in Milton, he was also in the lumbering business a few years and in building canal boats.

In 1861. Mr. Wilkins was united in marriage with Miss Jane Goodlander, of Milton. They are the parents of George L., Mary R. and Ruth Wilkins. After spending twelve years in Milton, in 1869 he removed his family to Rockford where he has since been identified with the interests of that city, its growth and rebuilding. He was one of the promoters of the Rockford Bolt Works, an industry of much consequence to the city, to which he gave his personal attention for some years, having been President of the company since its organization. He was also the promoter and principal owner of the S. B. Wilkins Company, which began the manufacture of seamless hosiery on a small seale in 1881. This enterprise prospered and was incorporated in 1885 under the name of the S. B. Wilkins Company. Mr. Wilkins became the President and has continued to hold that important relation to this company, whose production has become widely known throughout the West and Northwest as "Rockford Hosiery."

In connection with his other duties in this concern, Mr. Wilkins spent much of his time in the invention and improvement of the special machinery which is used alone by this company. Recently, this machinery and the patents of the S. B. Wilkins' Company passed into the ownership of a new company, incorporated under the laws of Illinois and called the "Chicago-Rockford Hosiery Company." Of this company, Mr. Wilkins has also become the President and is one of its largest stockholders. Its principal office is now in Chicago, and its factories at Rockford, Ill., and Kenosha, Wis. He has also been connected with other enterprises, and has given liberally of his means to the support of any interest calculated to prove of public benefit. He was one of the building committee of Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and recently built the beautiful Wilkins Flats on North Church Street. His home is a fine residence on North Main Street.

Mr. Wilkins is free from political ambitions but consented at the solicitation of many, and the suffrage of a large majority, to serve as Mayor for two terms. Like most men of inventive mind, he is quiet and unassuming, not willing to claim much credit for himself when it is really due, and at all times giving to others their full share. He has the confidence and esteem of all with whom he comes in contact in business relations, and he and his family rank high in social circles.

ICHARD MERRILL. The family of which the subject of this sketch is a worthy representative is one well known to the people of Boone County, and one which has been identified with the interests of the same from pioneer days. Richard Merrill, who is one of the prosperous agriculturists and much esteemed citizens of Boone County, is a brother of Thomas Merrill (see sketch for further particulars of the family).

Like many of the substantial and prosperous citizens of the county, our subject is a native of New York State, born in Herkimer County, in the town of Litchfield, July 27, 1841, and when about four years of age was brought by his parents, Asel and Auretta (Smith) Merrill, to Illinois. Here he finished his growth and received his education. Like his father, he selected agricultural pursuits as his occupation in life, and as he became thoroughly familiar with the duties of the farm at an early age, he has been unusually successful in his calling.

On November 27, 1883, he was wedded to Miss Alice II. Hare, who was born in Schoharie County, N. Y., April 13, 1859, and is a daughter of Chauncey S. and Harriet A. (Church) Hare, both natives of the Empire State. The father is a blacksmith by trade and is still a resident of his native State. His wife was born in New Berlin, N. Y., and died in Washington Mills, of that State, when forty-one years of age. They were the parents of five children all now living, but two. Mrs. Merrill's maternal grandparents were natives of New York, in which State they passed their entire lives, he dying when about middle age, and she when about eighty-two. Mrs. Merrill came to Hilinois about 1882, and was here married to Mr. Merrill.

Three children are the result of our subject's marriage: Fred C., born at his grandfather's old home on July 2, 1885, and Nathan II., also born on the old homestead, January 26, 1887, and Paul A., born May 24, 1892. Mr. Merrill has resided on that fine old place nearly all his life, but in the year 1891 he removed to Belvidere and is practically retired. However, as he has rented his farm, he still has considerable to keep him busy. The farm is about three miles from the city and is the original piece of land his father bought from the Government. Our subject remembers some of the experiences of pioneer days and delights to relate them. He remembers his mother taking a load of wheat to market to get some jeans to make up in clothing for the boys, but one load did not bring enough to pay for the goods and the father had to take in a second load the following day. Mr. Merrill is a Democrat in his political affiliations, and his first Presidential vote was east for G. B. Mc-Clellan. Socially, he is a member of the Knights of the Globe. On all subjects of importance he has decided opinions, which carry weight among his fellow-citizens.

ANIEL KINSON, an enterprising farmer of New Milford Township, Winnebago County, is a native of the Green Mountain State, born August 21, 1827. The grandparents were farming people of Vermont, and had a family of eight children, the youngest of whom, John Kinson, was the father of our subject. He was born in New Hampshire in 1803, and married Melinda Lamphere, by whom he had three children, Lewis, Daniel and Cynthia Sophia, all of whom were born in Vermont. With his family, he removed to Essex County, N. Y., where he worked in a glass factory, and was afterwards employed in Boston. he went to Lower Canada, where he engaged in farming for ten years, and in 1844 we find him residing near Keeseville, N. Y., where he and his sons chopped wood at thirty-seven and a half cents per cord for a year, each averaging two cords per day. With the money thus earned, they went to Milwaukee, and for three months resided in Whitewater, Wis. Mr. Kinson then went to Belvidere on foot, and was so well pleased with this locality that he hired a team and brought his family to Illinois. For three years he resided upon a rented farm, and then made a claim of one hundred and sixty acres, on which our subject now resides. In the fall of 1849, he removed his family to his own farm, and we can imagine the happiness with which they took possession of their own home, after so many years of hard labor. From that time forward, prosperity attended their efforts, and they became well-to-do. Mr. Kinson died in New Milford, December 28, 1891, at the age of eighty-eight years, and four months, and his wife passed away September 7, 1889, when about eighty-eight years of age.

Our subject had shared in all the experiences of the family, and in those earlier years labored hard to support himself and aid his parents in securing a home. He was married in his own home, May 23, 1855, to Miss Joanna Baxter, who was born in Tompkins County, N. Y., May 29, 1833, and is a daughter of John and Maria (Horton) Baxter, who removed from New York on the 23d of September, 1843, and by the canal and Lakes came to Illinois, accompanied by their family of six children. They soon settled on twenty acres of land, southeast of New Milford, and the log eabin which Mr. Baxter built in 1849 was their home for fifteen years, when it was then replaced by a frame residence. Mr. Baxter died at the home of his daughter, November 30, 1869, at the age of seventy-nine years, leaving a widow and eight children, seven sons and a daughter. They had lost one daughter, Rosetta Ann, who died at the age of two years. The death of the mother occurred on Thanksgiving Day, November 28, 1888, at the age of seventynine years. They were highly respected people in this community and made many warm friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Kinson have lost two sons: Irvin Eugene, who died August 28, 1858, at the age of two years; and Fred H., who died August 21, 1871, when about fifteen months old. Their living ehildren are Clara H., who was born September 20, 1858; Ella T., June 8, 1860; Asa H., January 17, 1862; John L., June 18, 1864; Lourena M., March 11, 1866; Hattie R., October 24, 1872; Ora A., September 2, 1875. All of the children have left the parental roof except the two youngest. Hattie has been deaf since her third year, the misfortune being caused by scarlet fever. All have received good educational advantages, and John is a teacher in the Roekford Business College. Asa II. was married, January 1, 1885, to Lourane Graham, and is farming in lowa; John L. married Eva Eastman, March 6, 1885; Clara is the wife of Frank Fitzgerald; Ella L. is the wife of Albert S. McAvoy, and Lourena is the wife of Gilbert Thompson, of Iowa.

Mr. Kinson of this sketch owns two hundred acres of land in the home farm, besides an additional thirty-acre tract, thirteen acres of which are covered with a fine growth of timber. He has also bought two farms of one hundred and sixty acres each for his sons in Iowa. In politics, he is a Republican, and himself and wife are members of the Methodist Church of New Milford.

ORNELIUS II. BEAMER is a native of the Empire State. He was born in Wheeler, Steuben County, June 10, 1814, and was a son of Philip and Nancy (Dixon) Beamer, the former a native of Holland, and the latter of Seotland. When young, they came to this country, and were married in New York. They passed away in Ottawa, Ill., the father dying at the advanced age of ninety years, his wife at the age of seventy-eight. They had twelve children, all of whom grew to mature years. One brother, Thomas, was slain in the siege of Vicksburg, and Rosilla, a teacher, took cold while going to her school, and died of consumption at the age of twenty-two.

Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth upon his father's farm, and on the 11th of November, 1837, arrived in Chicago, Ill., then a small village. He refused to buy a half-section of land near where the court house now stands, but instead purchased a horse for $35 and rode to Belvidere. Since that time he has been a resident of this locality. Ere leaving the East, he was married in North Cohocton, August 16, 1836, to Sarah Walters, who was born in that place, and was of German descent. She died on the 20th of May, 1849, leaving four sons and two daughters. One son, Albert, died quite young, and was buried by his mother in Belvidere; Barbara became the wife of Caleb Lewis, and died leaving six children; and B. F. Beamer. Sarah Beamer died in Cairo, Ill. Mr. Beamer was again married, this time to Lois Hartley, a native of England, who died April 11, 1890, leaving one son, Hartley, who is living in Illinois.

Mr. Beamer has had a varied and rather adventurous life. He was a stage-driver for a number of years, also followed farming, and was a dealer in horses, but, as he is now well advanced in years, he has laid aside all business cares, and is living a retired life in Pontiae, Ill. His son, Alva R. Beamer, was only twelve years of age when his mother died. He then went to live with George Lemons, in Boone County, with whom he remained until seventeen years of age, after which he resided with George M. Crane, of Cherry Valley Township, until he rented land and began farming for himself. He was married, January 22, 1863, to Mary C. Doolittle, of Harlem, Ill., a daughter of Henry and Catherine (Stedman) Doolittle, both of whom were natives of New England, and emigrated to Illinois in 1837. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Beamer were born three children: Minnie L., wife of Archie L. Rummelhart, of Harlem Township; Etta M. and Herbert E., both at home. The children have received good educational advantages.

Mr. Beamer is a friend to all that can benefit or improve the community. In politics, he is a Republican, and has served as School Director. He has followed general farming throughout his entire life, and is now a successful and enterprising agriculturist.

NDREW PHINNEY, an honored veteran of the late war, and now a successful grocer of Rockford, doing business at No. 206 Horsman Street, was born in Elbridge, Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1836, and when quite young went to Bradford County, Pa., with his parents, William and Mary Phinney. They were both natives of the Emerald Isle, and immediately after their marriage came to this country. Mrs. Phinney died in Pennsylvania. Mr. Phinney was there again married, and again lost his wife in that State, after which he emigrated to Jonesville, Mich., where his death occurred in September, 1891, at the age of seventy-six years.

Our subject was the first of the family to come to the West. He located in Illinois, in 1856, and, after a year spent in Belvidere, came to Rockford, where he has since resided. In 1862, however, he left his home and joined Company A, of the Ninetieth Illinois Infantry, going to the South with his regiment. After the battle of Mission Ridge, he was commissioned First Lieutenant. At the battle of Atlanta, July 22, 1864, he was captured by the enemy, and held a prisoner of war until March, 1865, when he was exchanged. Subsequently, he had charge of his company in St. Louis, where they did service until honorably discharged after the expiration of their three-years' term. Phinney has a war record of which he may well be proud. He saw much hard service, but was never wounded, although he nearly lost his life from exposure and hardship. His meritorious conduct on the field of battle won him deserved promotion. Other members of the Phinney family also followed the old flag. His brother Michael, now of Jonesville, Mich., was a member of the Army of the Potomac and during his service was wounded. Two other brothers, John and William, both laid down their lives on the altar of their country, and the father also followed the old flag through many battles to victory.

On his return from the war, Andrew Phinney began business as a merchant, in 1865, and has since been selling groceries in this city. For a time he was in partnership with William Lyons, but is now alone in business. He has been at his present location since 1888, and there a full and complete stock of groceries is ready to supply the wants of the public. The proprietor is recognized as an enterprising and industrious business man, who by his own efforts has worked up an excellent trade, and is now enjoying a liberal and well-carned patronage.

Mr. Phinney was married in Rockford, in 1865, the lady of his choice being Miss Mary Ryan, a native of Dublin, Ireland, who, when quite young, came to this country with her parents, both of whom died in Rockford some years since. Unto our subject and his wife, have been born the following children: Frank; Lillie, deceased, who was the wife of James O'Conner, who is a contractor; Josephine, a book-keeper in her father's employ; Dollie, who is engaged in teaching school; and Ida and Belle, who are students in the High School of this city. The parents are both members of the Catholic Church, and socially, Mr. Phinney is a member of Nevius Post No. I, G. A. R. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles.

SEORGE W. CARMAN, who engages in farming on section 34, Guilford Township, I is a representative of one of the pioneer families of Winnebago County, and is descended from an early New England family. His greatgrandparents were John and Anna Carman. The former was born March 25, 1751. His grandparents were Jacob and Sarah (Haines) Carman. both natives of New Jersey. They had a family of two sons and four daughters who grew to mature years, but all have now passed away. They were: Hannah, who was born February 5, 1772; Ann, March 24, 1774; Ruth, January 27, 1776; Hannah, November 30, 1778; Jacob, March 6, 1781; Elizabeth, December 3, 1782; John J., September 24, 1785; Joseph H., April 20, 1789; and Mary C., January 10, 1792.

The father of our subject, John J. Carman, was a native of Pemberton, N. J., and in Canada, in 1716, married Mary Fisher, also a native of that State. His uncle, John Haines, after a long life spent in New Jersey, passed away at the advanced age of one hundred and lifteen years.

Unto the parents of our subject were born twelve children, eight sons and four daughters: John, Jr., born January 26, 1817; William W., August 17, 1818; Henry, who was born November 15, 1819, died at the age of eight months; Mary Ann, born February 19, 1821; Chauncey C., November 15, 1822; Henry F., July II, 1824;

Elizabeth, born March 20, 1826, died at the age of nine years; George W., born January 1, 1828; Philip J., April 22, 1830; Alpheus W., December 18, 1832; Elizabeth, March 15, 1836; and Sarah, September 20, 1838. Of this family, seven are yet living, and their aggregate age is four hundred and thirty-four years. They were all born in Canada and, with the parents, came to Illinois in 1840, settling on the old homestead on the 19th of June. The oldest son, John, Jr., had come here two years previous and purchased a claim of one hundred and sixty acres for his father. He died on the 13th of March, 1845. Chauncey and Alpheus were volunteers in the late war, serving as privates throughout the struggle. The father of the family died December 29, 1870, at the age of eighty-five years, and his wife passed away September 29, 1878, at the age of eighty-two.

George Carman, whose name heads this record, was born near Brockville, Canada, January 4, 1828, and with the family came to Illinois when a lad of twelve summers. In the usual manner of farmer lads, he was reared to manhood and has since engaged in agricultural pursuits. He occupies the old homestead in connection with William W., and Sarah and Philip reside upon an adjoining farm. The sons are among the leading agriculturists of Guilford Township and, following the example of their father, vote with the Republican party.

IMON PETER BEST. Among the well-regulated homes of Durand Township, Winnebago County, none have about them an air of greater comfort and content than that which has been built up by the joint efforts of Mr. Best and his estimable wife. Their pleasant home is located on section 20, and is improved with all the appurtenances required by the progressive and industrious agriculturist.

Our subject dates his residence in this county from the spring of 1855, at which time the family settled in Durand Township. He was born in Northampton County, Pa., April 13, 1841, and is a son of Jacob N. and Susannah (Unagest) Best.

who also hailed from the Keystone State. The ancestors of our subject came from Germany about two hundred years ago and for several generations resided in Pennsylvania.

Nicholas Best, the grandfather of our subject, died in 1801, when twenty-eight years old. The father of him of whom we write was a farmer, and in early life worked at the trades of a shoemaker and blacksmith. The parental family numbered three children, his brother and sister being Nicholas and Polly. Jacob N. Best came to Illinois in 1855, and located on the southwest quarter of section 20, Durand Township, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land which bore some improvements. There he resided until his death, which occurred February 20, 1885, at the advanced age of eighty-six years. His good wife, who survived him until August 9, 1891, passed away in her ninety-second year. They were the parents of eleven children, one of whom died in infancy. Those living are: William, Sarah (Mrs. Unagest), Rosanna (Mrs. Glasser), Reuben, Anna Maria (now the widow of A. Gold, and formerly Mrs. G. Nolf); Sophia (the wife of Jacob L. Weaver), Rebecca (who married Joseph Richard), Elizabeth (now Mrs. Adam Rheinges, and formerly married to Thomas Jenewinie), Lovina (Mrs. A. Baker), and our subject, who is the youngest of the family.

Simon P. Best was reared to farm pursuits and received a fair education in the schools of his neighborhood. The date of his marriage to Elizabeth H., daughter of Jonathan and Lydia J. Matter, was February 13, 1868. Mrs. Best was born in Stephenson County, this State, March 21, 1817, and, with her husband, removed in 1880 to their present home. Our subject, who is the owner of three hundred and sixty acres of finely cultivated land, has been a resident of section 20 since 1855.

The nine children born to our subject and his wife bear the respective names of Fernando, Arthur J., Jacob E., Wallace V., Signora, Sylva D., Osear L., Arvilla M. and Susan P. In his political relations, Mr. Best usually votes the Republican ticket, but leans strongly toward Prohibition and reform principles. He is a member of the Evangelical Association and is active in all good works. His father belonged to a company of militia in Pennsylvania. He of whom we write, in addition to raising cereals, devotes a great deal of time and attention to the breeding of Short-horn cattle and Norman horses.

SCAR J. WIGELL, representing the world-renowned Steinway piano house of Lyon, Potter & Co., Chicago, has one of the finest and best-equipped music stores in the State, outside of Chicago, at No. 212 West State Street, Rockford. He is one of the wide-awake, thorough-going young business men of the place. Rockford is his birthplace and he was born July 25, 1867. In education, he received the best that Rockford afforded. It was very evident in his early youth that he inherited the musical abilities of his parents. When but fifteen years of age, he took thorough instruction in piano-tuning, and in that work he has an enviable reputation as an expert.

During the winter of 1889–90, George W. Lyon, of Chicago (who for twenty-eight years was senior partner of the firm of Lyon & Healy), recognizing the ability of Mr. Wigell, engaged him as tuner and salesman for the magnificent new store of Lyon, Potter & Co., who opened their doors to the public January 15, 1890. During his first year with this house, Mr. Wigell gave up piano-tuning and devoted all his time to sales, in which he has met with deserved success. As a dealer, his upright and honorable conduct in all transactions has aided him materially in building up the large business he now controls.

October 18, 1887, O. J. Wigell was united in marriage to Miss Eva M., the eldest daughter of Rev. G. R. Vanhorn, of Rockford, of whom see sketch elsewhere in this volume. She was born in Minooka, Ill., November 9, 1868, and supplemented the education she received in the city schools of Rockford by a course in the seminary at Aurora, Ill. She is an accomplished and intelligent young lady and is very much devoted to art. To Mr. and Mrs. Wigell have been born two bright little boys: Garrett O. and Lawrence L. They are happily situated in a pleasant home on the East Side. In religion, both are active members of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church.

The father of our subject, the late John Wigell, was born in Sweden. There during his early life he became a devoted and thorough student in music, graduating with highest honors on piano, organ and violin at the conservatory in Stockholm. In his early manhood he came to America, where for a number of years he held a responsible position in one of the largest piano factories in New York. Early in the '60s, he came to Rockford, where he won the respect and admiration of all, especially of the musical fraternity, by his skill and practical knowledge. He manufactured a great many organs in Rockford, which have stood the test these many years.

Mr. Wigell had plans drawn for a large piano factory to be erected here, but these plans were never consummated, as he was stricken down with typhoid-pneumonia and died November 18, 1871, when only twenty-nine years old, leaving a widow and one son, Oscar J. His wife, to whom he was married in 1866, was Miss Clara Johnson, a native of Sweden, whence she came to America with her parents when but two years of age. To them were born two sons: Oscar J. and Lawrence Edward, the latter dying September 28, 1871, when but two years old. In 1874, Mrs. Clara Wigell was united in marriage with O. W. Haegg, of whom see sketch.

OSIAH MANNING is the owner of one of the fine farms of Winnebago County, located on section 25, Guilford Township.

His life record is as follows: He was born in Westminister, Middlesex County, Canada, on a farm near the suburbs of London, April 19, 1833. His grandfather was a resident farmer of the Empire State and removed to Canada, spending his last days in the Province of Quebec.

The father of our subject, Joseph J. Manning, was born in the Province of Quebec, and at the age of twenty-three removed to Middlesex County, then a sparsely-settled region, where he bought a tract of timber land from the Government. In the midst of the wilderness he cleared and improved a farm, upon which he made his home until the spring of 1814, when he came to Winnebago County, Ill. The year previous, he had visited in this locality and purchased one hundred and ninety-four acres of land for $950; upon it were a log cabin, a small frame house and a barn, and thirty acres had been placed under the plow. Accompanied by his wife and eight children, he came in 1844 and located upon this farm, which he greatly developed and improved. He made it his home until his death, which occurred on the 8th of June, 1850 or 1851.

Mrs. Manning bore the maiden name of Catherine Louisa Swart. She was born in Schoharie County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Bartholomew and Elizabeth (Lawyer) Swart. The former was born of Dutch parentage, and removed from the Empire State to Canada, settling in Middlesex County, where he cleared and developed a farm, upon which he spent his remaining days. The death of Mrs. Manning occurred on the 6th of March, 1890, in the seventy-sixth year of her age. She was the mother of nine children: Charles F., Josiah, Julia M., Levi, Jacob B., Rosswell A., Joseph J., Leonard and Eli. Josiah, Leonard and Eli are the only ones now living. The last two are residents of Chariton, Lucas County, Iowa.

The subject of this sketch was a lad of eleven summers when he came to Illinois with his parents; since that time he has been a resident of Guilford Township. As soon as old enough, he began to assist in the labors of the farm and aided in the arduous task of developing the wild land. Three years after his father's death, he purchased the interest of the other heirs in the homestead and now owns and operates two hundred and sixty acres of highly improved land, constituting one of the best farms in this locality. The rich and fertile fields indicate the thrift of the owner, and the good buildings there seen stand as monuments to his enterprise. In this direction his farm will compare with any in the county. In connection with general farming, he also engages in raising fine stock, making a specialty of standard-bred horses, and upon his land has a race-course.

In 1858, Mr. Manning was united in marriage with Julia A. Hale, who was born in Newport, Herkimer County, N. Y., and is a daughter of Alfred E. and Julia A. (Post) Hale. Their union has been blessed with a daughter, Eleanor, now the wife of Fred D. King, by whom she has had two children, Edna, and one son who died when four and one-half years old. In politics, Mr. Manning is a stalwart Republican, and has served eight terms as a member of the Board of Supervisors, which fact indicates his efficiency and faithful discharge of duty. He is a straightforward, upright business man and is well known throughout Guilford Township, and is one of its leading citizens.

In this connection a portrait of Mr. Manning is presented to our readers.

ESLEY D. CLARK, a baker of Rockford, doing business at No. 107 Kishwaukee Street, is a native of Rockford, Kent County, Mich., born in December, 1850. The family was founded in New England, prior to the Revolutionary War, and was represented in that struggle. The grandfather of our subject, Ezra Clark, was a native of Vermont and removed to New York, spending the remainder of his life in Eric County, where he engaged in the butchering business. In politics, he was a Whig and a stalwart Abolitionist, and his home was a station on the famous Underground Railroad. He died at the age of seventy years.

E. P. Clark, father of our subject, was born in the Green Mountain State, where he grew to manhood and became a farmer. In New York, he married Miss Julia I. Dennison, a native of Norwich, N. Y. Her parents were natives of Connecticut. On emigrating to Michigan, Mr. and Mrs. Clark settled in the midst of a forest in Kent County, and, procuring land from the Government, began the development of a farm. His death occurred in 1857, at the early age of thirty-three years. He was a stanch Abolitionist, and died believing that the slaves would be free. His wife yet survives, and although seventy years of age, is still enjoying good health. She is now visiting in California, but makes her home with our subject. She is a member of the Christian Church. Her father, Dudley Dennison, was a native of Connecticut, and after his marriage removed to the Empire State, where he engaged in blacksmithing, also manufactured axes and hoes, and was the owner of a large farm. He died in Eric County at the age of seventy, and his wife was also well addanced in years. He participated in the War of 1812, and took part in the battle of Stonington. The only members of the Clark family now living are our subject and his brother O. E., who married Vera M. Hyde, a native of Michigan, and who is now superintendent of an electric plant in Napa, Cal.

Wesley D. Clark, whose name heads this record, was only five years old when his father died, and at the age of fourteen he came to Rockford, where he has since resided. In this city, he married Miss Eunice L. Keig, who was born in Rockford, and is a daughter of Edward and Margaret Keig, who were born on the Isle of Man, and, after their marriage, came to the United States. Since that time they have made their home in Rockford, being numbered among its honored early settlers. They are members of the Methodist Church, and are both past seventy years of age. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Clark is blessed with two children: Belle M. and William A. In politics, Mr. Clark is a Republican, and for the past six years has served as Alderman of the Sixth Ward, proving a faithful and efficient officer. He is a member of the Masonic order, the Knights of Pythias, the United Workmen Lodge and the Odd Fellows' fraternity, and in the latter has filled all the offices and represented the Encampment at the Grand Lodge. His wife is a member of the Methodist Church. They are numbered among Rockford's citizens, and by all who know them are held in high regard.

On coming to this city, Mr. Clark began business with Adam McClure, now deceased, during which time he became thoroughly familiar with the bakery business. The partnership was then dissolved, and for two and a half years he was associated with Joseph Basford, after which he was with the Steam Bakery Company for two years. He then began business for himself, and, buying out C. O. Asproth, now has a general and fancy bakery, and is doing an excellent business, of which he is deserving. Since coming to Rockford he has given a helping hand to every enterprise calculated to benefit the community and promote the general welfare, and is numbered among its valued and leading citizens.

YLVESTER SCOTT. Among the prominent and leading pioneers of Winnebago County who are selected for representation in this biographical work, we take pleasure in presenting this worthy subject. He is at present residing in Rockford, where he is respected by all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

Sylvester Scott was born in Machias, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., December 9, 1828. lle is the son of Reuben C. Scott, a native of Connecticut, where his father, who also bore the name of Reuben, was born. The latter-named gentleman removed from his native State to Pennsylvania and later to Cattarangus County, N. Y. The father of our subject accompanied him on these various removals, and on locating in the last-named county, purchased a tract of land in Machias, where he resided until 1837, when, with his wife and family of three small children, he came to this State, making the journey overland with teams, via Canada. Mr. Scott, on making his home in this county, located in what is now Guilford Township, where he entered a tract of land from the Government, He erected a log cabin for his family, into which they moved on the 14th of January. They made that rude structure their home for the succeeding five years, when Mr. Scott purchased eighty acres of land in another portion of Guilford Township, where he erected a brick house and resided until his death, which occurred in 1845.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Anna Johnson. She was born in Cape May County, N. J., and was a daughter of David Johnson, also a native of that place, where his birth occurred in 1777. His father, the great-grandfather of our subject, was the owner of a large estate near Dennis Creek Landing, which was operated by slave labor. The grandfather of our subject bought and educated slaves and gave them their freedom. David Johnson removed to Pennsylvania, and, locating on the Schoharie River, conducted a large lumber business. This proving a failure, he went to Cattaraugus County, N. Y., and entered a tract of land in the town of Machias, where he resided until 1837. Desiring to see something of the Western country, he came to Winnebago County, making settlement on a tract of Government land in Guilford Township. He erected a log house on his purchase, where he made his home until his death, in 1855. His wife bore the maiden name of Mary Young. She was also a native of Cape May County, N. J., and died on the home farm in this county in 1860, after having attained to the advanced age of ninety-five years.

The mother of our subject survived her husband many years, and continued to reside on the home farm. She became the mother of four children, namely: Sylvester; Daniel, who resides on his grandfather's estate in Guilford Township; Mary E., who married D. C. Dean, and makes her home in Denver, and Elvira, Mrs. Daniel Clay. Mr. Clay was a member of the Seventy-fourth Illinois Volunteers, and died in Denver, in 1886.

Sylvester Scott, of this sketch, was nine years of age when he accompanied his parents on their removal to this State, and the hardships and privations of life in this then unsettled region have made a lasting impression upon his mind. The country was then little more than a wilderness, there being no railroad, and Chicago, which was ninety miles distant, was the nearest market and depot for supplies. The family did not suffer for fresh meat, however, as deer and other animals were numerous. On one occasion he remembers seeing his mother shoot and kill a deer which was very near the cabin. He resided with his mother until attaining his majority, when he removed to his Grandfather Johnson's homestead. The old log cabin which they occupied upon the place soon gave way to a modern brick residence, in which they made their home until 1874. At that date, the homestead being sold to his brother, our subject came to Rockford and purchased a farm.

where he engaged in market gardening for seventeen years, in which business he was very successful. In the fall of 1891, he disposed of his property and purchased upon the west side of the river, upon Montague Street, in South Rockford, a twenty-acre tract, within the city limits.

In 1850, the original of this sketch was united in marriage to Miss Alzina, daughter of Solomon and Charity Arvilla (Chaffee) Greeley, natives of New England, who came to Illinois in 1838, and located in Winnebago County. They made this place their home for two years, when they removed to Caledonia, Boone County, and later to Green County, Wis., and here the mother died in 1849. After remaining in the last-named place for some time, the father made his home in Floyd County, Iowa, and from there went to Worth County, where his decease occurred, in 1874.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott have had born to them six children; Henry W. married Cora A. Searles, of Rockford; Lydia A. became the wife of John D. Hardy; and Ella, the wife of Ira Purdy, all of Guilford Township. Sophronia E. and Ida E. died when small children, nearly forty years ago; Emma, the youngest daughter, passed to the spirit land in 1871, agod nineteen years.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott are members of Dr. Kerr's Church, the Christian Union. In politics (although liberal and a Spiritualist for forty years), Mr. Scott has been a strong Republican.

AMES CORLETT (deceased), a prominent agriculturist of Guilford Township, this county, and a self-made man in every sense of that much-abused term, died at his home in that township on December 21, 1885. He came to Winnebago County in the year 1844, with but fifty cents in money, began working by the day, and thus accumulated sufficient means to enable him to purchase an unbroken tract of land in Guilford Township. He went in debt for an ox-team, erected a log cabin in the wilderness, and, thus equipped, began his struggle for a livelihood. Although he met with many ups and downs, he continued to persevere and by his industry and good management soon became the owner of six hundred acres of land, all of which he improved. He was a progressive farmer, a successful stockraiser, and an excellent citizen and neighbor. At his death, he left property valued at from $75,000 to $80,000. He always attended strictly to business, and this, no doubt, was in a great measure the secret of his success. In politics, he attiliated with the Republican party, and in religion, he was a Methodist.

Mr. Corlett was born on the Isle of Man and was a posthumous child, his birth having occurred after his father's death. The latter was a sea-captain, and a few months after his marriage went to sea. The vessel was lost and he was never heard from afterwards. James was but three years of age when he was brought to this country by his mother, who located near Plainville, Ohio. There he remained until nineteen years of age, when alone, and with very little money, he came to Rockford, Ill. His mother had married the second time and had passed the closing scenes of her life in Geauga County, Ohio. By her second husband (who is also deceased), she became the mother of six children.

James Corlett was first married in Winnebago County to Miss Mary Van Alastine, who was born in the Empire State, and who, when a young woman, came to Illinois. She died in Guilford Township when thirty-four years of age, and left four children, three now living: William E., a farmer of New Milford Township; Francis L., a farmer of New Milford Township; Francis L., a farmer of New Milford Township, and Mary A., wife of C. C. Sanders, who resides on South First Street, Rockford. The one deceased was Nelson A.

Mr. Corlett's second union occurred in this county, and united him to Miss Emma G. Wood, a a native of Genesee County, N. Y., born near Batavia, in 1843. She was nine years of age when she came with her parents, Nathan and Adelia (Sargent) Wood, to Boone County, Ill. They settled on a farm in that county, tirst near Manchester, but later removed to Bonus and thence to Belvidere, where the father died when forty-eight years of age. He was a successful blacksmith and followed his trade for many years. Mr. Wood was born in Cattaraugus

Limithy Lewis

County, N. Y., and there learned his trade. After his marriage to Miss Sargent, and after the birth of three children, he removed with his family to Boone County, Ill., and there Mrs. Wood's death occurred on March 13, 1891, when nearly sixty-eight years of age. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and her husband also held membership in that church. He was a Republican in politics. They were the parents of eight children, six of whom lived to be grown and five are now living. All but Mrs. Corlett are residing in Michigan.

To Mr. and Mrs. Corlett were born nine children, two deceased: Sherman, who died at the age of two years, and Alice E., who died when nineteen years of age. Those living are Ida, wife of G. J. Thornton (see sketch); W. Mortimer, a farmer on the old homestead, married Miss Olive Ritchie and has one child, Faith; Fannie M., at home, a clerk in Mr. Stevens' store in Rockford; Georgiana M.; J. Ernest, and Mabel F., all at home. Mrs. Corlett is a pleasant, agreeable lady, and resides in a comfortable home at No. 412 Whitman Street, Rockford.

in Belvidere, well deserves representation in this volume, for he is one of the oldest citizens of Boone County, and one of its honored early settlers. His portrait and life sketch will therefore possess peculiar interest for the reader. His grandfather and father both bore the name of Timothy. The former was born in Massachusetts, and spent his last days in Sunderland, Bennington County, Vt. The latter was a native of Ashfield Mass., and married Mollie Bradley, a native of Sunderland, Vt., and a daughter of Stephen Bradley.

After his marriage, our subject's father removed to Essex, Chittenden County, where he purchased a tract of timber-land from the Government, upon which he resided until 1808, when he bought a farm in Sunderland. His home and most of the effects were burned a few years later. He soon rebuilt, and resided upon that farm for a number of years, when he went to Wyoming, N. Y., and spent some time with his sons. He then came to Belvidere, and resided with our subject until his death, which occurred at the advanced age of ninetythree years. His wife died in Essex, Vt., about 1806.

Our subject spent his early childhood days in Sunderland, and at the age of twelve years started out in life for himself, working by the month as a farm hand. He made his home in Arlington until eighteen years of age, when, with all his possessions in a pack on his back, and about $7 in his pocket, he started on foot for Le Roy, Genesee County, in the vicinity of which his uncle and brother were hving. He there resided for two years, when he removed to China, now Areade, Wyoming County, where he bought a farm. After residing there for a short time, he sold and bought another farm two miles from the village of Areade.

Upon it was a hotel, and in connection with agricultural pursuits, he carried on hotel-keeping until 1841, when, on account of ill-health, he sold, and for the following three years was unable to engage in business. In 1811, he concluded to try a change of climate, and on the Fourth of July of that year started with a team to Buffalo, thence by the Lakes to Racine, Wis., and with a team completed his journey to Belvidere. Here his health at once began to improve, and he soon began work at his trade. He also purchased twenty acres of land on the Rockford road, about one mile from this city, and built a nice home, which he traded a few years later for three hundred acres of land on the same road, two and a half miles west of Belvidere. About 1858, he settled upon this farm, which he made his home until 1889, when he came to Belvidere and built the residence which he now occupies.

For more than fifty years Mr. Lewis has found a faithful helpmate in his wife. He was joined in wedlock, in 1829, with Mary Olmstead, a native of New York. Her death occurred in that State, and on the 21st of September, 1840, he married Almira Smalley, who was born in the town of Ovid, Seneea County, N. Y., August 12, 1815, and is a daughter of Lewis and Susanna (Martin) Smalley, both of whom were natives of New Jersey. They removed to Ovid, N. Y., becoming pioneer settlers of that locality, and in 1825 took up their residence in Friendship, Allegany County, N. Y., where they made their home until called to their final rest.

By his first marriage, Mr. Lewis has two sons yet living, L. L. and La Fayette. By the second union there are two children: Mary E. and Arthur. Our subject and his wife are now well advanced in years, but in their old age they can look back over a well-spent life, for which they need feel no regret. They have the highest regard of all with whom they have come in contact, and their friends throughout the community are many. Mr. Lewis is a self-made man. From a very early age he was dependent upon his own resources, and the success that he has achieved is due entirely to his own efforts.

DWARD M. HOLMES, a self-made man, now Secretary and Treasurer of the Palmer A Hardware Company, has been a resident of this city throughout almost his entire life. He elaims Rockford as his birthplace, having been born in 1847. The Holmes family is one of the old New England families of sterling worth. His father, Hollis H. Holmes, was a native of Danbury, Conn., and a son of Granville Holmes, who spent his entire life in that State, dying at an advanced age. The father of our subject was reared to manhood upon a farm, and in his youth also learned the trade of a shoemaker, which he followed for a number of years in Connecticut. Subsequently, he removed to St. Thomas, Canada, where he did business as a leather dealer for some years. It was in 1839 that he came to Rockford with his family, consisting of his wife and only son. After a long and tedious journey by team, he reached Rockford, then a small town, and established a boot and shoe store, the first exclusive business of the kind in the place. Owing to failing health, he afterwards sold out and bought of Charles Oliver, the well-known bandit of the prairie, a farm consisting of one hundred and forty acres, lying near the city limits on the east, and which is now known as the Highlands. He paid $12 per acre, but the property is now very valuable, and within a short time will be embraced within Rockford's suburbs. There Mr. Holmes engaged in fruit growing and the nursery business until his death, which occurred August 12, 1859, at the age of fifty years. He was a Republican in politics, and a most worthy citizen.

Hollis Holmes' wife, the mother of our subject, was in her maidenhood Miss Sarah Moore, a native of the Province of Ontario, Canada, where their marriage was celebrated. She survived her husband some years, and died in 1885 at the advanced age of seventy-one. She was a member of the Methodist Church, and lived a consistent Christian life. In the family were three sons, all yet living,

Our subject acquired his education in the city schools of Rockford, and began his business career as clerk in a hardware store in 1865. With that business he has been connected continuously since. He proved himself an excellent salesman, and served as such until 1881, when he was admitted to partnership in the Palmer Hardware Company, of which he is now Secretary and Treasurer. He has led a busy and useful life, devoted to the interests of the work in which he is engaged, and by his own efforts has acquired a good property, being, as before stated, a self-made man.

In Delavan, Wis., Mr. Holmes married Miss Ruth Sturtevant, a native of the Empire State. In an early day she removed to Delavan with her parents, Z. B. and Jane (Story) Sturtevant. After locating in Wisconsin, her father carried on business as a mason and contractor of Delavan until his death, which occurred at the ripe old age of eighty-six years. His widow still survives him, and makes her home with her son, Edwin Sturtevant, a well-known contractor of Chicago. She is a member of the Congregational Church, and has attained the age of three-score years and ten.

Mrs. Holmes spent the days of her maidenhood under the parental roof, and for a number of years engaged in teaching, being employed in the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Jacksonville, Ill., and also in the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Delavan, Wis. She was a member of the First Congregational Church, and a true and noble woman. She died December 12, 1886, at the birth of her daughter, Ruth S., who is now a bright lass of five summers.

In his political athiliations, Mr. Holmes is a Democrat, and twice served as Alderman of the First Ward, but has never given his attention to office-seeking, preferring to devote his entire time to his business, which he has followed with signal success. By his industry, perseverance and good management, he has worked his way upward, and is now in comfortable circumstances, and connected with one of the leading business houses of the city.

EORGE M. BLAKE, attorney-at-law in Rockford, and who is also extensively interested in banking, real estate and other interests, is a native of New York State. In 1704 the Test Act of Queen Anne, and the Antrim evictions in the years following, drove many thousands of the sturdy Presbyterian Scotch-Irish from Ulster to America. Of these were Mr. Blake's ancestors, who came to New England in 1718, there to begin life anew.

Our subject's grandfather, Zara Blake, was born at Litchfield, Conn., November 12, 1782. About the year 1800, he removed to New York State, and at Herkimer married, in 1803, Esther Ethridge. This lady was born at Stonington Conn., August 10, 1783, and was a daughter of Thomas and Anne (Cleveland) Ethridge. Thomas Ethridge was also born at Stonington, on June 30, 1746, and his father was Nathaniel Ethridge. The Ethridges originally were of English Quaker stock. Soon after his marriage, Grandfather Blake removed to Western New York, residing first at Livonia, then at Dansville, Livingston County. He was engaged in the lumber and cattle business until his death, September 17, 1839, his wife having died in 1833.

The father of our subject was Zarah H. Blake, and was born at Livonia, N. Y., October 23, 1821, and received a good common-school education. He taught school for a time, then took up the study of medicine, graduating in the first class sent forth by the Buffalo Medical College. Returning to Dansville, he practiced medicine there until his death, September 8, 1888. Dr. Blake was Examining Surgeon for his district all through the war of the Rebellion. He had a high reputation as an operating surgeon and a fine business man, and accumulated a handsome property. He was a wellknown Republican politician in his day and held a number of honorary positions in medical and other societies, but he was a man who permitted nothing to interfere with his professional business and he refused anything that might conflict therewith. In 1849, he married one of his former pupils, Lovisa Dorr, who was born in Dansville and was the daughter of Samuel Griswold and Selima (Phelps) Dorr. The Dorrs were originally Huguenots whom religious persecutions drove to England; thence they came to New England, and took a leading part in all the movements of the times. By intermarriage and descent, they are connected with much of the best blood of New England, such as the Griswolds, of New Hampshire, Waites, of Connecticut, Walworths, Tremaines, etc. Samuel G. Dorr was born at Chatham, Columbia County, N. Y., and was the son of Matthew Dorr; they were woolen and flour manufacturers and a wealthy family. Dr. Blake and his wife were the parents of two children who grew to maturity: George M., and Josephine D.

George M. Blake was born at Dansville, November 1, 1852, and attended the local schools until 1869, when he entered the classical school of Williston Seminary, at Easthampton, Mass., to prepare for college. Owing to his father being involved in several large business law suits at this time, he gave up going to college and did not complete his course at Williston, but in 1871 took up the study of law. The lawsuits, however, came to a happy end, and, at his father's earnest solicitation, he began reading medicine with him, with a view to succeeding to his fine practice. He thus assisted his father, graduating in medicine at Buffalo in 1874, and continuing with his father until 1877, when his dislike for medicine could no longer be repressed, and he abandoned it completely, returning to law.

In 1879, he graduated from the law department of the Michigan University, ranking third in a class of one hundred and ninety-seven, and, settling in Rockford, Ill., began the active practice of law.

In October of the same year, he married Carrie Gilman Brown, who was born at Horicon, Wis. She is the daughter of Chauncey and Ann M. (Smith) Brown, of New Hampshire, and of Yankee descent. To them has been born one son, Chauncey Ethridge. Mr. and Mrs. Blake are identified with the Second Congregational Church of Rockford. In politics, he is a Republican, and has served two years as City Attorney. He is a Mason and a Knight Templar and belongs to the Odd Fellows. He is President of the First National Bank of Canton, S. Dak., and of the Fidelity Building and Savings Association of Rockford, and is connected with other business enterprises.

ILLIAM GENT, now deceased, is numberedamong the early settlers of Rockford and for many years was one of its leading and well-known business men. He was a native of Staffordshire, England, and descended from a prominent family of that community, who had settled in Staffordshire, coming from Normandy. His maternal grandfather was the overseer of the carpenter work on the Earl of Shrewsbury's estate, and it is probably from him that our subject got much of his inventive genius. William Gent, Sr., the father, was also a native of Staffordshire, and was educated as a drill-master. He died in middle life, when our subject was only four years of age. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Bull, left England in 1856, fourteen years after the death of her husband, and came to the United States, settling in Ironton, Ohio, where she spent one year, when in 1857, with her four children, she came to Rockford, Ill. Her death occurred in this city on the 6th of March, 1886, at the age of seventy-five years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gent were members of the Church of England.

Our subject was nineteen years of age when he came to Rockford. In this city, he married Miss Mary Taylor, who was educated in Mt. Morris Seminary and spent her maidenhood days in Rockford. Her father, James Taylor, was a native of Vermont, but was reared in New Hampshire and afterward removed to Rochester, N. Y. His father died when he was a lad of ten years, and from that time he made his own way in the world. He came to Illinois when Rockford contained only two houses, and ran the first ferry boat on the river at this point. He also became a farmer but lived in the city most of the time, his land lying near the town. It is now all within the corporation limits. His death occurred in 1879, at the age of seventyfive years. He was a man of prominence in Rockford and was widely known. Before the war, he was a stanch Abolitionist and later became a stalwart Republican. In his religious belief, he was a Methodist, belonging to the Centennial Church. In this city, he married Miss Jane Sovereign, a native of Canada and a daughter of John Sovereign, a pioneer of Rockford, who came to this State in wagons through a new and unbroken country. The latter died in California at the home of his son George, at the age of seventy-three. Mrs. Taylor died at the age of forty-three. She was a member of the Methodist Church, coming of an old family of that denomination, several of her father's brothers being Methodist ministers.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Gent were born nine children, but one died unnamed and Allen and Sidney also died in infancy. Florence E., who was educated in Rockford and at Whitewater, Wis., is now engaged in teaching; William, an electrician, is employed in the electric works of St. Louis; Arthur, Charles, Emily M. and Rufus are all at home.

All his life long, Mr. Gent was known as a man of wonderful genius and a great inventor. For a time he was associated with John Nelson, the great knutting machine inventor, now deceased, and later he became connected with the J. P. Manny Manufacturing Company. Subsequently, he built a shop of his own, engaging in business for himself. His inventions of various kinds have become well known and many have been brought into general use, notably the machine for making barb wire, which is now in use in the Elwood & Haish Barb Wire Factories, of De Kalb, Ill. Another is his lightning staple machine. He would work out in his mind a plan, then put on paper his draft, and when the machinery was made it would go like clockwork. He was not a day-dreamer but a practical inventor, but like many other inventors he never got the full credit and benefit of what he did. He won the respect and regard of all who knew him and his loss was not only to his family but to the county and community as well.

OHN P. JONES. The world expresses its approbation when it says "Here is a self-made man." The foregoing is necessary to the complete understanding and appreciation of the subject of this sketch, whose portrait appears on the opposite page. Mr. Jones, who has been a prominent lawyer of Rockford, in addition to the duties of which business he superintended the operations of his fine farm, is now living retired from active life, enjoying the fruits of his early industry.

The original of this sketch was born in Chester, Warren County, N. Y., and is the son of Lindall J. W. Jones, whose birth occurred in Petersburg, Rensselaer County, N. Y., where also his father was born, of Welsh ancestry. The latter-named gentleman was a farmer by occupation and spent his entire life in his native State. The father of our subject was reared and educated in Rensselacr County, where he resided until after his marriage, removing thence to Warren County, and becoming one of the early settlers of the town of Chester. He continued to make that place his home for a short time, then purchased a portion of the Van Rensselaer tract, which was partially improved. At the time of his location in that part of the county, there were neither railroads, canals nor convenient markets, and the people lived mostly off the products of their farms. As wild game was plentiful, they were always supplied with the choicest meats, as well as the finest fish. The elder Mr. Jones carded flax, which his wife would spin and weave, thus dressing her children in homespun material.

Lindall J. W. Jones cleared the greater portion of his farm, erecting thereon a good class of farm buildings and making that place his home for nearly twenty years, at which time he disposed of his estate and removed to Petersburg, where he purchased a home and resided until his decease. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Mary White; her father, Aaron White, was a native of Massachusetts, whence he removed to New York and spent his last years in Renselaer County. His wife, the grandmother of our subject, was Betsey Bigelow, a native of Douglas, Mass. Her mother died at the advanced age of one hundred and three years, while the grandmother of Mr. Jones reached the good old age of ninety years, departing this life in Berlin, Rensselaer County, N. Y. His mother was ninety-five years old at her death.

John P. Jones, of this sketch, deciding to follow the profession of law, at the age of twenty-one became a student at the State and National Law School, at Ballston Spa, Saratoga County, N. Y., baving studied previous to this, however, in the office of Martin & Townsend, at Troy, N. Y. Being graduated at the age of twenty-five, he commenced the practice of his profession in Troy, where he remained for two years, at the expiration of which time he went to Hoosick Corners and was there similarly engaged until 1866. He then came to Belvidere, Boone County, HL, where he became the proprietor of an estate of six hundred and sixty acres, which was then called the Newburg Farm, and which place has the following history:

The house on the above premises was erected fifty years ago by Benjamin F. Hoyt, who purchased the property of Col. Mahlon Sayers, when that portion of the county was known as Sayersville. The building was used as an hotel for a number of years and was a popular resort for persons traveling overland between Chicago and Galena. In those early days, the place was larger than either Rockford, Belvidere or Elgin, or any town between the Garden City and the lead mines. In a few years, the name of the place was changed to Cleveland and subsequently to Newburg, and while it first bore the latter name it saw its palmiest days. Among its flourishing industries may be mentioned a large gristmill, blacksmith shop, two grocery stores, dry-goods shop, tailor shop, carding mill, sawmill and distillery. Farmers for forty miles around were in the habit of going to Newburg to do their trading and to have their grist ground. At this time the people residing there aspired to make their town the county seat of the county, but cruel fate ordered it otherwise. After a heated contest between Newburg and Belvidere, the latter led by S. P. Doty and the former by Col. Mahlon Sayers, Belvidere won the day. In 1855, the property was purchased by our subject, who engaged in stock-raising and dairying, having as many as one hundred cows on his farm at one time, and during two years of the Civil War sold over $11,000 worth of cheese at twenty cents per pound.

Our subject has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Armenia, daughter of Peter and Comfort Brimmer, the marriage ceremony being performed February 22, 1851. To them were born a daughter and son. Mary A., who was born December 3, 1851, is now Mrs. C. W. Fisher and resides at Los Angeles, Cal. The son, J. P. B., was born June 6, 1854, married Elvira Howard, and now resides upon the Newburg farm above described, where, in addition to cultivating the soil, he is a breeder of thoroughbred Hereford and Short-horn eattle. Mrs. Armenia Jones departed this life December 8, 1886, and our subject in July of the following year was married to Kate Conklin, who was born in Cherry Valley and was the daughter of George Conklin. By the second marriage of Mr. Jones, one son was born, who bears the name of Martin Townsend.

He of whom we write resided on his farm in Boone County until 1870, at which time he came to Rockford, and for three years engaged in the practice of law. He then removed to Cherry Vallev Township, where he resided until 1891, when he returned to this city and is living retired from business of any kind. He is the possessor of considerable real estate in this locality, still owning two farms in Boone County, and an excellentlyeultivated tract in Guilford Township. He has made profitable investments, by which he has secured a handsome competence, and now ranks among the wealthy and prominent residents of Winnebago County. In his social and public life, he is one who is capable of forming his own opinions and resolutely adhering to them. He is widely known for his integrity, honesty and uprightness, always contributing liberally to every good cause and ever striving to suppress evil. With his good wife, he is an influential member of the Court Street Methodist Church, and, in politics, is a strong Prohibitionist.

APT. M. L. BRUNER. This honorable gentleman, who is a resident of Rockford, was born in Gossfield Township, Essex County, Canada, April 16, 1839. He is a son of Philip Bruner, a native of the same county, while his grandfather, Adam Bruner, hailed from Pennsylvania and removed in an early day to Essex County, where he cleared a farm and resided until his decease.

The father of our subject grew to man's estate in his native county, where he was married. He located about six miles from the old homestead in Gossfield Township, and continued to make that place his home until 1849, when, with his family, which included his wife and nine children, he emigrated to Illinois, making the journey with teams, which consumed fourteen days. Locating in Winnebago County, he purchased a tract of eighty acres, mostly timber land, in Harlem Township, besides farming land in the same township. There was a log cabin on his timbered land which he removed to his farm and resided in for about six years. In 1868, he sold that purchase and bought a farm two and a half miles from Caledonia and and was there actively engaged in farming until his death.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Mary A. Munger. She was born in Essex County, Canada, and was a daughter of Joseph Munger, a native of Pennsylvania. He was a wagon-maker by trade, and, on removing from his native State, located in the above-named county in Canada, where he was one of the pioneers of Colchester Township. There he prosecuted his trade, in addition to which he carried on farming and continued to reside until 1855, when he removed to lowa and located in Black Hawk County, where he spent his last days. The maternal grandmother of our subject was Sarah (Geity) Munger and was also a native of Pennsylvania. Her father, was Simeon Geity. The grandmother died in Harlem Township and Mrs. Bruner passed her last days on the home farm in Caledonia Township.

The children included in the parental family bore the following names: Joseph, William, Julia, Maleom, Augustus, Melinda, Orlando, Anderson, Myron, Franklin and Walter. William met his death by an accident when ten years of age; Walter departed this life at the age of twentyeight years. Our subject, when ten years of age, accompanied his parents on their removal to this State. At that early day the country bore little resemblance to its present prosperous condition, there being no railroads in this locality, and Chicago being their nearest market. He attended the district school and assisted his father in performing the duties on the farm, continuing to be so employed until 1861. In September of that year, he enlisted in Company C, Eighteenth Wisconsin Infantry, which company he assisted in raising, and upon its organization was transferred to Company K, entering the service in October, 1862, as Second Sergeant. For meritorious conduct, he was soon promoted to be Second Lieutenant and in March, 1863, was made Captain of his company. His first battle was that of Shiloh, and in the lirst day's fight his regiment was cut to pieces and disorganized, by ten o'clock, A. M., all on the line of fire being either killed or wounded. Two hundred and eleven men and eleven officers were taken prisoners, and on the second day of the conflict Mr. Bruner was placed in command of the Sixth Regiment, which numbered sixty-two men and was held in reserve. At noon, he turned the command over to a Second Lieutenant and later joined the skirmish line on the left, forcing his way through to the camp from which the rebels had driven them on Sunday. There he alone captured two prisoners, and after turning them over to the proper authorities, gave his attention to caring for his wounded comrades. He later participated in the battles of luka and Corinth, during the latternamed conflict being on detached duty for a time. Soon thereafter, he joined the Fifth Michigan, of which company he was placed in command, and after the battle of Corinth went in pursuit of the enemy. With his company, Mr. Bruner spent the winter at Young's Point, and in 1863 fought in the battles of Jackson (Miss.) Champion Hills, Black River and the siege and capture of Vicksburg. At the end of that time, he obtained leave of absence, and on returning home was confined to his bed for two months with typhoid-malarial fever. When able to again endure the hardships of life in the army, Mr. Bruner joined his regiment at Memphis and marched with the command to Chattanooga and engaged in the battle of Missionary Ridge. His regiment was the first of Sherman's command to cross the Tennessee River, crossing at two o'clock in the morning, and before daylight had thrown up two lines of breastworks, and a third before ten A. M. In the fall of that year, the command went to Alabama, where they spent the winter, and in the spring sojourned at Whitesbury, on the Tennessee River, where they remained until June. During that time, they destroyed the salt works on the above-named river, and in the latter part of June marched to Chattanooga, where our subject celebrated the 4th of July by riding a mule to the top of Lookout Mountain.

The next important battle in which our subject engaged was Altoona Pass. At three A. M. on the day of that conflict, he was ordered to take command of three companies to protect the left wing. They there remained until 2 P. M., without orders, when they concluded to repair to the fort. Upon the arrival of our subject there, Capt. Rafferty, of Col. Rouett's staff, asked him if he thought they would have to surrender .Capt. Bruner answered, "No, not as long as there are men and ammunition left," He remained with his company until the close of that battle, when he returned home on a furlough. Rejoining his regiment at Nashville, Tenn., he accompanied them, via the Cumberland and Ohio Rivers, to Cincinnati, from there by railroad to Baltimore, and then by steamer to Newburn, N. C. Soon after landing, the regiment participated in the battle of Wise's Fork, then joining Sherman's forces, marched with them to Raleigh and finally to Washington, where they participated in the Grand Review.

At the close of hostilities, Mr. Bruner, on the 18th of August, 1865, returned home by way of Louisville, Ky. He then entered Beloit College, where he prosecuted his studies until 1867. At the expiration of that time, he purchased eighty acres of land from his father and one hundred acres of other parties, and, with the exception of teaching three terms of winter school, devoted his entire time and attention to cultivating the soil for thirteen years. Then disposing of his estate, our subject engaged as a commercial traveler, representing H. W. Pierce, with whom he was connected for six years. For a twelvemonth, he traveled in the interests of the Rockford Mitten and Hosiery Company, and a like period for P. P. Argersinger, of Johnstown. Mr. Bruner then established a carriage repository on North Madison Street, where he has conducted a successful business since that time.

April 23, 1867, Miss Sophronia Adelaide Swezey became the wife of our subject. Mrs. Bruner was a native of New York State and departed this life in 1878. Our subject was a second time married. August 3, 1884, this time to Emeline (Goodhoe) Barnes, widow of William Barnes. Capt. Bruner is the father of three children by his first marriage, viz: Elmer Howard, Augustus Harlin and Rhoda Adelia. The present wife of our subject became the mother of two children by her first marriage, Lutie and June. In social matters, the original of this sketch is a member of Rockford Lodge No. 120, A. F. & A. M., Nevius Post No. 1, G. A.R. Mr. and Mrs. Bruner are members in good standing of the Congregational Church.

OBERT K. WELSH, City Attorney of Rockford, was born November 18, 1863, in Waukesha County, Wis. His father, Thomas Welsh, was a native of Glasgow, Scotland, where also the grandfather, who bore the name of James, was born. The latter-named gentleman was a stonecutter by trade, which occupation he followed in his native land until 1841, the date of his coming to America. He was accompanied on the journey by his wife and three children, and after a voyage of seven weeks on the ocean landed in New York. Going to Delhi, Delaware County, that State, the grandfather of our subject rented a dairy farm for seven years, and in 1848 moved to Wisconsin, going by canal and Lakes to Milwankee, and then by teams to Wankesha County, where he purchased a tract of heavily-timbered land. Only a few acres of this expanse were cultivated and improved, but a log house had been erected. Mr. Welsh at once set about the work of redeeming the tract from its original wildness, and made that place his home until his death. His wife, Cynthia Welsh, died from the result of an attack of cholera soon after her arrival in Wisconsin.

James Welsh's family of three children bore the names of James, Elizabeth and Thomas. The father of our subject was seventeen years of age when he came to America with his parents, where he was reared to agricultural pursuits. When attaining mature years, he bought the interest of his brother and sister in his father's estate and resided on the home farm until 1877, at which time he sold and purchased another tract in the same county, which is his present place of residence. The mother of our subject prior to her marriage was Miss Janet Watson. She also was born in Scotland, in the city of Edinboro, and was the daughter of Andrew and Catherine (Rogers) Watson. Her father spent his entire life in his native land, and after his decease the mother and five children emigrated to America, making the trip to Waukesha County in 1847.

The household of which our subject was a member included four children: Catherine E., Robert K., James A. and Ruth I. Robert was given a good education, attending the district school in early life, which was supplemented by a course of study at the Waukesha High School, from which he was graduated in the Class of '82. Our subject then entered Beloit College and finished a course of study there in 1887, when, at once coming to Rockford, he accepted the position of first assistant in the High School. Being desirous of becoming a lawyer, he made good use of all his spare time in the study of that profession, reading in the office of Charles A. Works. So industrious was he, that in May, 1890, he was admitted to the Bar, and in September of that year opened an office in Rockford, where he has been engaged in active and successful practice since 1889.

In July, 1889, Robert K. Welsh and Miss Minerva E. Prouty were united in narriage. The lady was born in Richland County, Wis., and by her union with our subject has become the mother of two children, sons, Carlton K. and Frank A. A Republican in politics, Mr. Welsh never fails to vote the straight ticket at the polls, and in 1891 was elected City Attorney of Rockford, in which responsible position he gives entire satisfaction. In social matters, he is a member of Guinevere Lodge, K. of P.; of the Royal League, Royal Arcanum and Knights of the Globe. He is a gentleman who has won a high position among his fellow-men and is entitled to and possesses the confidence of his neighbors and friends.

IRAM BURTON. Nothing is of deeper interest to the student of human nature and human events than to trace the career of one who has fought his way to a position of prominence and financial success by dint of his own pluck, prudence and perseverance. Such a study do we find in the life of him whose name appears at the head of this paragraph.

The splendid farm of Mr. Burton, which is located on section 22, Bonus Township, Boone County, is well worthy of a visit from any one who admires a finely-tilled farm. This gentleman is a native of Vermont and was born September 19, 1821. His parents, Stephen and Hannah Burton, were also natives of the Green Mountain State and departed this life in New York at the respective ages of sixty-two and seventy-six years. He of whom we write had ten brothers and sisters, four of whom are yet living.

When reaching his majority, our subject worked out by the month for a time, and July 17, 1853, was married to Miss Minerva Paine, whose birth occurred May 29, 1825, in New York. Her parents, Daniel and Mahala (Sweet) Paine, were also natives of that State and emigrated to this county in 1856, where they died when about eighty-three years of age. Mrs. Burton was one in a family of five children, four of whom are living and are scattered over the Western States.

Of the six children born to our subject and his wife, four are now living, namely: Pluma, born December 30, 1854, in New York, married M. G. Gurney, and is the mother of five children; Daniel R., who was born January 6, 1855, is residing near Olympia, Wash., where he is engaged in the culture of fruit; Flora M., who was born November 14, 1859, married M. Brown, a farmer of this county, by whom she has three children; Hermus, who was born February 26, 1865, resides at home and operates the old home farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton are active and influential members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in polities our subject easts a Republican vote. He is engaged in mixed husbandry and ranks among the foremost farmers in the county. He has resided on his present farm since March, 1856, and is the owner of two estates, comprising two hundred and fifty acres, all of which is under cultivation, with the exception of a tract of eighteen acres of timber. He has recently repaired his farm buildings so that they now rank among the best of the kind in the county. Mr. Burton possesses exceptional character and has displayed considerable ability in this particular line and has overcome many disadvantages. He is a typical Vermonter and well-to-do agriculturist.

OBERT NICOL, who is living a retired life at No. 909 Rockton Avenue, in Rockford, was born in Sterlingshire, Scotland, April 7, 1820, and comes of an old Scotch family that has flourished in Sterlingshire for many generations, the occupation of most of its members, being that of farming. His father, John Nicol, lived and died in that country, dying at the age of sixty-three. His wife survived him some time and was called to her final rest at the advanced age of ninety-two. The family were always Presbyterians. Our subject was the eldest of their family which numbered five sons and a daughter; he and two brothers, Thomas and Andrew, are yet living, the last-named being a resident of Washington County Pa., where he has engaged in farming for thirty-five years. Thomas follows the same pursuit in the county of his nativity. No others ever came to America except those just mentioned.

Robert Nicol, whose name heads this sketch, spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native land, and after he had attained to man's estate was married, in his native county, on the 17th of January, 1842, to Miss Mary McCoulgan. She was born and reared near the home of her husband and came from a good Scotch family that had lived in the Lowlands since the days of persecution. Her parents, Robert and Elizabeth (McMullen) McCoullgan, came to this country and settled in the Province of Ontario, Canada, where they spent their remaining lives. They died in the faith of the Presbyterian Church, when well advanced in years.

The year 1863 witnessed the arrival of Mr. Nicol and his wife in Canada. For three years they lived in the Province of Ontario, and thence came to Rockford, where they have made their home since the 17th of July, 1866. Our subject became connected with the machine shops of Emerson and Thompson, manufacturers of this city, and was thus engaged until he retired from active business life. He is now enjoying the rest which he has so truly earned and richly deserves. He has ever taken an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the community and has aided in the advancement of those enterprises calculated to promote the general welfare. He has supported the Republican party in politics, and he and his wife are prominent members and active workers in the Presbyterian Church. This worthy couple have traveled life's journey together for half a century, sharing with each other in its joys and sorrows, adversity and prosperity, and now in their declining years they are surrounded by many friends whom they have won by their upright lives.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicol are the parents of seven children: John, a photographer of Monmouth, Ill.; Robert, who is married and resides in Chicago, Edward, who is married, also makes his home there and is employed as a commercial traveler for a tack factory of that city; James, a traveling salesman for Phelix, Marsh and Co., of Chicago; Hugh, manager for the Illinois and Iowa Base Ball League, and a resident of Rockford; and Elizabeth, wife of Joseph E. Turner, a butter merchant, also of Rockford.

ERNHARD FISCHER, now living a retired life, was born in Saxony, Germany, on the 24th of September, 1831, and is a son of William Fischer, also a native of that country. He was a lumber merchant, carrying on a business which was established by his father and is yet run by his two sons. Mr. Fischer died at the age of sixty-five years. His wife, whose maiden name was Dora Heimel, was born in the same town as her husband, and died at the age of sixty-four. In religious belief, they were Lutherans. They had a family of six sons: George, who recently died in New York and left a property worth $100,000; George Louis, a wealthy brewer of South Rockford; and Gearhard and Sigmond, who are extensively engaged in the lumber business in Germany, and are also very wealthy. One of these latter came to this country, and here gained many ideas concerning their business, which have materially aided in its growth.

Our subject remained in his native land until twenty years of age, when he determined to try his fortune in America, and crossed the Atlantic. He first came to Rockford in 1854. Five years later, he went to New York City, and thence by way of the Isthmus to San Francisco, Cal., on a mining expedition. This was not very successful. and in 1861 he went to Virginia City, near which silver mines were said to be located. He was afterward in Dayton, Nev., where for some time he successfully carried on a saloon. From here, in 1866, he went to Reynolds City, Mont., and opened the first brewery in that section. After some months, he sold out and went down the Missouri River to St. Joseph, thence to Grand Rapids, Wis., thence to Milwankee, and across the Lake to New Haven, Mich., and by the Grand Trunk line to Canada and on to New York, where he remained until the spring of 1867. He then again came to Rockford and established a saloon, carrying on a successful business for some years, or until his retirement in 1891. Since that time, he has made a trip to the Old Country and spent about a year in the Fatherland.

Mr. Fischer was married, in this city, to Miss Louisa Bringle, who was born in Buffalo, N. Y., and is a daughter of Leopold Bringle, who was born near Strausberg, Germany, and at the age of twenty-six emigrated to the United States, and was married in Eden, N. Y. His wife was born in the same locality as her husband, and at the age of thirteen came to this country with her parents, who spent their last days in Eden, N. Y. After the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Bringle, they began keeping hotel in Buffalo, and later went to Springville, Erie County. After some years they came to Rockford, and subsequently removed to Chicago, where Mr. Bringle died, August 12, 1889, at the age of seventy-three years. He was a Catholic in religion, and a Democrat in polities. His wife is still living with Mrs. Fischer at the age of sixtynine years. In their family were ten children and, with one exception, all are yet living.

Mr. and Mrs. Fischer have many friends in Rockford, where they have so long resided. He is a member of Kent Lodge No. 169, I. O. O. F., and also of the Encampment Order of this city. He gives his entire attention to the management of his property, which includes his comfortable home, a brick residence situated at No. 208 North Church Street, together with four fine houses in the same block, and two good business houses, a frame and brick, on West State Street.

RED H. MAXWELL, one of the prominent and well-known farmers of New Milford Township, who has also served as Justice of the Peace for many years, claims Massachusetts as the State of his nativity. He was born on the 12th of January, 1824, in Franklin County, and is a son of Luther and Elizabeth (Baldwin) Maxwell, also natives of Massachusetts, the former born March 17, 1797, and the latter in July, 1796.

The founder of the family in America came from Ireland to Bedford, Mass., in 1733, on account of religious persecution. He was one of seven sons who died between the ages of sixty-seven and ninety-five years. He served in the French and Indian War, and saw the achievement of American independence. Having lost much of his fortune, he made a trip to the West Indies with a cargo of horses, hoping to sell at a profit, but died on the return trip, and was buried October 14, 1799.

The grandfather of our subject, Hugh Maxwell, a native of Massachusetts, was a wool-carder by trade and a farmer. He married Olive Newhall, and died February 23, 1849. His wife survived him many years, passing away at the age of eightythree. Luther Maxwell was one of five children. He bought one hundred acres of land in Massachusetts, which he added to the old homestead, and owned a half interest in an iron foundry, which, on coming to the West in June, 1846, he traded for seven hundred and twenty acres of land on sections 25, 26, 35 and 36, New Milford Township. Of this, four hundred acres were under the plow, and a good house and barn had been built. The mother of our subject died two months after their arrival here, of the prevailing malarial fever, at the age of forty-nine. Mr. Maxwell survived his wife some years, and died November 20, 1856, at the age of fifty-nine. He was a prominent and influential citizen of the community and one of its honored pioneers.

Our subject was a young man of twenty-two years when, with his parents, he came to the West. On the 29th of March, 1846, he was joined in wedlock with Miss Harriet M. Pierson, who was born October 14, 1828, in Shelburne, Vt., which town was founded by her great-grandfather, James Pierson, who was kidnapped when a child and brought from England to America in 1715. His son, Moses, was an active participant in the Revolutionary War. The parents of Mrs. Maxwell were Hiram and Maria (Holabird) Pierson, both natives of Vermont.

After their marriage, the young couple settled on his father's farm, where they have since resided. They lost an infant daughter, Ellen T., but have eight living children: Edwin L.; Elizabeth M., wife of Frank Marsh, of Rockford; Arthur II.; Walter B.; Hattie M., widow of John Beale, of Rockford; Fred B.; Beecher II.; and Charence Hugh. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell had liberal educations. The lady was a student in Beloit, and for two years engaged in teaching. They have also given their children good advantages. Fred B., who was graduated from Beloit College and is a post-graduate of Cornell Institute, was a teacher in the blind asylum of Janesville for two years and was selected from the Cornell Institute, of Ithaca, N. Y., to fill a vacancy in the University of Chapel Hill, N. C.

Mr. Maxwell was elected Justice of the Peace in 1857, and has held the office almost continuously since. He was also Town Clerk for a term of twenty years, serving as such when the town was organized. He was Supervisor during the war. On the 6th of August, 1847, he was one of three who organized the first Odd Fellows' lodge in the county, called Winnebago Lodge No. 31, I. O. O. F., and he was elected its first presiding officer. In 1875, he made a trip to New England, thinking that he might not live to go again, but his health was much improved, and, as his wife laughingly remarked, "he now makes a very good chore boy." The years rest lightly upon this worthy couple, who are recognized among the best citizens of the community, and are certainly deserving of representation in the history of their adopted county.

UST PETERSON, a member of the firm of Peterson & Benson, real-estate dealers of Rockford, does business at No. 601 Seventh Street, where he has a pleasant and comfortable office. This firm was established in August, 1891, and they do a general real-estate and loan business. They have interests in Stockholm Park and in Robinson's Addition, and have already secured a liberal patronage, of which they are well deserving. For some years previous to the forming of the partnership, our subject had deaft in real estate in a private way and thus experience fitted him for the work to which he now devotes his energies.

Our subject was born in Sweden, on the 3d of June, 1856, and is a son of Carl and Anna (Simonson) Peterson, who are yet residents of Rockford. They were among the founders of the Swedish Mission Church, of which they are still members. They have reached the ages of sixty-six and seventy years, respectively. The first of the family to come to this country was Mary, who is now the wife of Mr. Reble, a photographer of St. Peters, Minn. Our subject was the next to cross the Atlantic, and later the parents and the remainder of the family also sailed for the New World.

Mr. Peterson, whose name heads this sketch, spent his early boyhood days in his native land, but when sixteen years of age bid good-bye to his old home and started out to try his fortune in the New World. He landed at New York City and thence he went to Geneva, Ill., where his sister was formerly located. He has made his home in Rockford since 1872. For ten years after locating in this city, he was employed as a gardener by G. A. Sanford and with the money saved during that time he embarked in business on his own account. In connection with his real-estate business, he is ex-Director of the Star Furniture Manufacturing Company, ex-President of the Globe Manufacturing Company, and is interested in other leading enterprises of the city. His business career has been a successful one and he may well be termed a self-made man, for whatever he possesses has been acquired through his own efforts and he is now recognized as one of the well-to-do citizens of Rockford.

Mr. Peterson has been twice married; in this city he wedded Miss Tilla Lindblade, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, June 9, 1859, and when about four years old was brought to this country by her parents. She died of consumption at her home in Rockford in the fall of 1886, leaving two children: Earl and Grace.

For a second wife, Mr. Peterson chose Miss Hilda Lindstrom, who was born and reared in the city of Jonkoping, Sweden, her birth occurring January 11, 1859. Her parents are still residents of that country and are members of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Peterson was the first of her family to cross the Atlactic, the year 1882 witnessing her emigration. A daughter graces this union, Edith B. Our subject and his wife are members of the Mission Swedish Church, in the work of which they take an active part and in which he serves as Trustee. In politics, he is a Prohibitionist and his aid is given to every worthy enterprise calculated to promote the best interests of the city. His success in business is well deserved, for he has led a busy and useful life, deserving the confidence of all.

Aug Tycllgren

OGUST KJELLGREN, Superintendent and foreman of the painting department of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company, is one of the fifteen stockholders of this large factory, in which are employed several hundred men, about one hundred being in the department of which our subject has charge. He has held the position for five years and is a well-known Swedish business man of this city.

Mr. Kjellgren, whose portrait appears on the opposite page, was born in Wester Gothland, Sweden, on the 29th of December, 1839, and is the eldest of a family of three sons, whose parents were John and Anna (Johnson) Kjellgren. The former was born in 1812, the latter in 1810. They crossed the broad Atlantic to America in 1866, came to Rockford the same year and are still residents of this city. With the Swedish Zion Church, they hold membership. The brothers of our subject are Samuel, a house painter of this city, and Andrew, a cabinet-maker by trade, now President of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company.

Our subject spent his early boyhood days in the land of his nativity, and at length emigrated to the New World. He landed at New York City and thence came to Rockford, joining his parents here on the 25th of January, 1868. He afterward learned the painter's trade and has since followed that business, winning success in that line. For five y ars, he held the position of foreman in the painting department of the Union Furniture Company of Rockford, and since that time has been Superintendent and foreman of the painting department of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company. From a humble position, he has steadily worked his way upward and is now one of the well-to-do citizens of the community. In connection with his other interests, he is also a stock-holder in the Union Grocery Company, of this city; the Mantel and Furniture Company, and other local interests, and has done much toward insuring the success of these enterprises.

A marriage ceremony performed in Rockford united the destinies of Mr. Kjellgren and Miss Caroline C. Wetterlund, who was born in Sweden, January 26, 1847, and came to this country in 1868. Her parents, who were Swedish Lutherans, died in their native land. Unto our subject and his wife have been born ten children, but Anna O., Alma J., Anna C. and Arvid S., are now deceased. The living are Eric, a painter in his father's factory; Axel L., who also follows the same trade; Ellen M., Hildur, O. B., Oscar S. and Keneth F., who are still under the parental roof.

been engaged in blacksmithing in Rockford, and is now doing business at No128 North Madison Street. In the pursuit of that trade he has acquired quite a little fortune and is now well-to-do. His shop is 33x60 feet, and he employs two men to help him. On coming to Rockford, he did journeyman work for three years for Sam Church, and then embarked in business for himself. He came to this city from Detroit, Mich., where he completed his trade, having begun it in Canada.

Mr. Colby was born in the township of Richford, Tioga County, N. Y., and when a lad of ten years removed to the Province of Ontario, Canada, with his parents, Charles and Mary A. (Shaffer) Colby. The paternal grandfather of our subject, David Colby, was a native of Maine and of English descent. He married Miss Farrington, of the Pine Tree State, and a part of their family was reared in Maine, but in an early day they removed to Tioga County, N. Y., where they resided upon a farm throughout the remainder of their lives. They were among the pioneer settlers of that county and were highly respected people. In religious belief, it is thought they were Universalists, as was their son Charles, the father of our subject, On removing to Canada, the latter located on a farm at Chatham, where he is still living at the very advanced age of ninety-one years. He is still hale and hearty, the infirmities of age resting lightly upon him. His wife died at their home in Chatham at the age of sixty-five. She was born in the Mohawk Valley in New York, and was a daughter of Jacob Shaffer, a native of Schoharie County, N. Y., of German lineage. Jacob Shaffer was twice married, his first union being with Miss House, who became the mother of Mrs. Colby. She died in the Empire State, and he married Miss Cypher, of the same State, who died in Canada when well advanced in years. Mr. Shaffer was called to his final rest at the age of seventy-five.

Our subject is the eldest of five sons and three daughters; the latter are all now deceased, but the sons are yet living and are all married. It was in Chatham that T. I. Colby led to the marriage altar Miss Barbara McKay, who was born on Prince Edward Island in 1834, and came of an old Scotch family. Her parents were Donald and Huena (McKay) McKay, both natives of Scotland. They were married on Prince Edward Island, and afterwards removed to the Province of Ontario, where as farming people they resided for some time. Later, they removed to Ridgeway, Mich., where they spent their last days, both having reached the age of four-score years when called to their final home.

For many years Mr. and Mrs. Colby have lived and labored together, and their efforts have been blessed with prosperity. They now have a pleasant home at No. 403 North Third Street, which is the abode of hospitality and a favorite resort with their many friends. They attend the Centennial Methodist Church, of which Mrs. Colby is a member. Their union has been blessed by one son, Charles E., who possesses great natural artistic talent and is a successful artist. He married Lillian Baldwin, and they have a little daughter, Bessie, who is the joy of their home and the pet of her grandparents.

Mr. Colby exercises his right of franchise in support of the Republican party, but has never sought political preferment for himself. He is a member of Ellis Lodge No. 104, A. F. & A. M. His residence in Rockford covers a period of thirty-six years, during which time he has won a handsome competence, and also by his upright life has gained the respect and good-will of those with whom he has been brought in contact.

UGI'ST P. FLOBERG. One of the most popular, strong and flourishing financial

turers' National Bank, of which August P. Floberg is the able and efficient Cashier. He was a Director and stockholder from this bank's inception and was one of the originators of the same. He was also a promoter and is now President of the Rockford Desk and Furniture Factory, which employs one hundred and twenty-five men and has a capital of $100,000; and is Treasurer and a Director of the Mechanics' Furniture Company, which employs one hundred men and has a capital of $75,000. Mr. Floberg was also one of the chief organizers of the Rockford Manufacturing Company, which was formed in 1889 with a capital stock of $200,000 and one hundred employes, is Treasurer of the same, and is Director and Treasurer of the Globe Clothing Manufactory, Director and Treasurer of the Forest City Bit and Tool

Company, Director of the Rockford Cabinet Company, and is Treasurer and one of the founders of the Rockford Posten Publishing Company. He is also a member of the Peterson Land Association and is a Director in the Swedish Building and Loan Association.

Our subject was born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, born October 5, 1856, and came to this country with his mother in 1868. His father, Gustave Pherson, came of a well-known Swedish family and died when comparatively a young man. The mother came with her children to Rockford and is still living. She married John Breadberg, a cabinet-maker of this city, with the Standard Furniture Company, and is now about sixty years of age. She is a member of the Lutheran Church.

August P, Floberg was but eleven years of age when he came to Rockford and he received a good practical education in the schools of the city. Later, he accepted a position as office boy, and with the earnings thus saved, gave himself a good education in the Business College of Rockford. He was then book-keeper for different institutions and later was for seven years Secretary for the Central Furniture Company. He soon became familiar with his business and has developed into one of the most thorough-going, enterprising men of the city. He is a bank officer of marked executive ability and vast practical experience, and is possessed of those characteristics of energy, promptness and sobriety which ever secure success.

Miss Augusta Ekeberg, who became his wife in Rockford in 1880, was born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, and attained her growth and received her education there. She came to this country with her parents in 1870 and has since been a resident of this city. The father, Jonas Ekeberg, and the mother, whose maiden name was Christina Ekeberg, are now residing in Rockford, are quite aged, and are exemplary members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Ekeberg is a mechanic by trade.

The political sympathies of Mr. Floberg have brought him in line with the Republican party and in public movements he has ever taken a deep interest. He and Mrs. Floberg are identified with the First Lutheran Church and he was Trustee for six years and is the present Treasurer. Their marriage resulted in the birth of three children: Adelbert R., eight years of age; Frances E. and Mary L.

UARLES L. SUTHERLAND, M. D., now located at Rockford, enjoys a large practice in the town and surrounding country. He is quite young, possessed of abundant energy, and thoroughly skilled in his profession, having been graduated from the Chicago Medical College in March, 1883. He is a native of Janesville, Wis., his birth occurring November 26, 1858.

James Sutherland, the father of our subject, was born about 1821, in Ohio. His father, Thomas Sutherland, was born in Pennsylvania, and, removing to Ohio, became a pioneer farmer near Ashland. His wife, the grandmother of our subject, who bore the name of Jane Smith, also hailed from the Keystone State, and was the mother of a family of four sons and three daughters, only two of whom survive. The maiden name of our subject's mother was Elizabeth Withington; she was born near Ashland, Ohio, and was the daughter of Daniel Withington. Her father went to Wisconsin in 1848, and became a resident of Rock County. His wife, the mother of Mrs. Sutherland, was known prior to her marriage as Temperance Gray, and departed this life in Rock County, in 1871, her husband, whose demise occurred in 1884, surviying her a number of years. They reared a family of seven daughters and four sons, one of the former dying young.

Our subject was the sixth in order of birth of a family of seven children, and spent his boyhood and youth in attending school and in the bookstore with his father. The latter has been engaged in that line of business since 1848, with the exception of two years, when he carried on a thriving trade in grain. His store is one of the finest in the city, and besides carrying a full and complete stock of books, has a splendid stationery and wall paper department. He served two terms as State Senator, and was Mayor for two terms of Janesville, Wis.

After graduating in the Chicago College, as before stated, Dr. Sutherland began the practice of medicine at Birnamwood, Wis., where he remained only a twelvemonth, and then he went from there to Janesville, Wis., where he remained until December, 1885; he then came to his present field, which has been his permanent abiding-place since that time. He is a graduate of the Regular School of Medicine, and is building up a fine practice, both as a physician and surgeon.

In September, 1890, Miss Susan II. Thomas, who was born in Rockton Township, became the wife of our subject. Her father, William M. Thomas, who was born in Wayne County, Pa., in November. 1805, came to Illinois in 1838, in company with his wife and three children. Mr. Thomas located on one hundred and twenty acres of land on section 31, of this township, on which he erected a log house and established his family until able to erect a more comfortable dwelling. They were the parents of nine children, three of whom died in infancy. Mr. Thomas passed away in July, 1881, when seventy-six years of age. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Eliza Conklin, was born in 1811, and is still living, at the advanced age of eighty-one years. Two of her sons, John C. and Orvill P., were volunteers during the late war, in Company F, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. They participated in the battle of Stone River, Orvill never being absent from the regiment; he took part in all its engagements, with the exception of Lookout Mountain, when he was detailed on guard duty. John C. was confined in the hospital for about three months; he is now a farmer in Kansas, while his brother is cultivating the soil in Owen Township, this county.

The parents of Mrs. Sutherland celebrated their golden wedding. November 13, 1878, at their home on the old farm, where they had lived for forty years. This was a happy and enjoyable occasion, and was largely attended by friends from the surrounding townships, bringing testimonials of the high esteem in which this grand old couple were held, who were pioneers of this State, and had journeyed together for a half century. An excellent and lengthy poem, composed for the occasion by D. V. Waite, was read, and the entire occasion was one to live many years in pleasant memories.

SCAR BERGQUIST, Secretary and Treasurer of the Desk and Furniture Company, located on North Second Street, where the business was started in 1889, is a young man possessed of more than ordinary business acumen. This company manufactures all kinds of desks, making a specialty of ladies' desks, combination desks, book-cases, etc., and the greatest care is taken in the production of these goods, which, while being of attractive design and finish, also combine those qualities of strength and durability which make them extremely popular with dealers and customers. Under the able management of

A. P. Floberg, President; O. W. Haegg, Vice-president; and Mr. Bergquist, Secretary and Treasurer, the company has prospered, and is at the head of any establishment of the kind in the country. It employs a staff of experienced and competent traveling salesmen, and its affairs are managed upon progressive and reliable principles. About one hundred men are employed all the time.

Oscar Bergquist was born near the city of Carlstad, Sweden, on the 20th of October, 1863, to the union of Gustave and Mary (Swensen) Bergquist, both natives of that country. In 1869, the parents came to the United States, and subsequently settled in Rockford, Ill., where the father has been actively engaged as a painter, having followed that business all his life. He is at present Superintendent and Manager of the Rockford Manufacturing Company, also a stockholder in the same, as well as in the Skandia Plow Company of that city. Although about fifty-five years of age, he is energetic and enterprising, and one of the city's most prominent business men. His wife, who is still living, is about the same age, and both are members of the Lutheran Church. They have a good home at No. 904 Seventh Street. In politics, Mr. Bergquist is a stanch Republican.

Our subject, the second in order of birth of six children born to the above worthy couple, was but six years of age when he crossed the ocean with his parents, and he has been a resident of Rockford for about twenty-two years. He was educated in the city schools, and learned the painter's trade of his father as he grew up. He has followed that trade for thirteen years, and is a successful workman. For two years he was manager of the Rockford Paint Company. He is a live business man, well informed, and is at present a Director and stockholder in the Skandia Plow Company, Rockford Paint Company, and a stockholder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, and the Posten Publishing Company.

Mr. Bergquist was married to Miss Amanda A. Nygren, a native of Sweden, born January 7, 1865, and the daughter of N. P. and Anna (Magnusom) Nygren, natives also of that country. The family came to the States in 1868, and settled in Rockford, where the father's death occurred in 1885.

Af Jason

His widow is still living in this city, and is about sixty years of age. She is a member of the Lutheran Church, and her husband also held membership in that church. They were the parents of seven children, five daughters and two sons, and all but one are now living. Three are married.

Mr. and Mrs. Bergquist's union was blessed by the birth of two children, E. Wilhelmena and Emily M. In politics, Mr. Bergquist is independent, and, in religion, he and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church. They are well liked by all with whom they come in contact, and are worthy members of society.

LFRED G. LARSON, who is engaged in business as a stone and brick mason contractor at No. 308 Sixth Street, Rockford claims Sweden as the land of his nativity. He was born in Wester Gothland on the 5th of September, 1857, and there spent the days of his boyhood and youth. At the age of twenty-one, he determined to try his fortune in America, and in 1878 crossed the broad Atlantic, making his first location in Walnut, Ill. His father, John Larson, also came to this country and located in Walnut, Bureau County, on a farm, after having followed carpentering in Chicago for some time. His wife and family later joined him at Walnut, and the mother is still living there at the age of sixty-one The father died February 16, 1892, aged sixty-three years, lacking three days. A brother of our subject, Charles Larson, is a city police offieer of Rockford. He married Miss Nanna Levene, of Sweden.

Mr. Larson, whose portrait appears on the opposite page, spent three years in Bureau County, and then came to Rockford, where he has made his home since 1881. For more than ten years, he has been engaged in business as a contractor in stone and brick work and has built one hundred and fifty houses. He also owns a fine business blook at No. 409 Seventh Street, including three-story flats and storerooms, and also owns a dwelling on Fifth Avenue. Being an expert workman and thoroughly understanding his business, he has received a liberal patronage, which has made his undertaking a successful one. In connection with his other interests, he is a stockholder in the Rockford Globe Clothing Factory, owns an interest in the Excelsior Furniture Company, of this city, and is also stockholder in the Rockford Baking Company.

In Rockford, Mr. Larson was united in marriage with Miss Salma Peterson, who was born near the home of her husband in Sweden, May 17, 1862, and was reared and educated in her native province until the spring of 1879, when, with a brother, John Peterson, she came to this country. They were the first of the family to cross the Atlantic and have since been joined by two sisters. Mr. and Mrs. Larson hold membership with the First Lutheran Church. They have a little daughter, Laura, who was born on the 7th of September, 1890, and have lost two children, Arthur and Victoria, who died in early childhood.

Mr. Larson takes a considerable interest in political affairs and by his ballot supports the Republican party, of which he is a stanch advocate. He was elected to the office of Supervisor in 1892, and useful life, and the result of his efforts is seen in the handsome competence which he now possesses. He has taken an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the community, and was instrumental in organizing the Swedish singing society, known as the Sveassoner. Since its organization, on the 23d of January, 1890, he has been its President. For five years, he was also chorister of the First Lutheran Church.

OHN G. PENFIELD, a successful real-estate dealer and money loaner of Rockford, began business in this city soon after locating here in the spring of 1854. He was first a member of the firm of Spalding & Penfield, which connection was continued for some time, when a partnership was formed between our subject and his brother David S. They continued together for some time, and the latter was one of the well-to-do and prominent men of the city. He was also one of its honored early settlers, having here located in 1837. His death occurred in 1873. He was prominent in all local matters, and a Republican in politics. His widow, whose maiden name was Mary II. Hodges, and several children are yet living.

The subject of this sketch is a native of Rutland County, Vt. His father, Sturgis Penfield, was one of the leading citizens of that county, and was quite prosperous. He had been a farmer and brewer, and afterward carried on a gristmill and engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods. He died at an advanced age, in the faith of the Congregational Church. In politics, he was first a Whig, but later became a stanch Abolitionist, and was a strong temperance man, becoming prominent in all moral reforms. In Connecticut, his native State, he married Miss Laura Giddings, who was also born in that State, whence they removed to Rutland County, Vt., where they spent nearly their entire lives. Further mention of this worthy couple is made in the sketch of S. F. Penfield on another page of this work. The members of the family who are still living are: Mrs. Laura A. Harmon, who resides in Bennington, Vt.; Mrs. Betsy P. Manley and Mrs. Eleanor P. Lohrop, now residing in Pittsford, Rutland County; S. F. and John G., residents of Rockford; Catherine J., a resident of Bennington, Vt.; and Abel Ogden, who is living in Battle Creek, Mich.

The subject of this sketch acquired his education in the schools of his native county and in Burr Seminary, of Manchester, Vt. He grew to manhood under the parental roof, and began his business career in connection with his father, having charge of some of Mr. Penfield's manufactories, After attaining to man's estate, he was married in Rockford, to Miss Mary E. Crosby, who was born in Troy, Cheshare County, N. H., where she spent the days of her maidenhood, her education being finished in South Hadley Seminary. Her parents were Alpheus and Mary (Fox) Crosby, both natives of the Granite State. On coming to Illinois, they settled in Winnebago County, where the parents afterward died. He was born in New Hampshire in 1798, and was one of five sons and tive daughters, all of whom grew to mature years, though none are now living. The father of that family was Alpheus Crosby, Sr., who fought in the French and Indian War under his father, Josiah Crosby, commander of the company. The latter was a native of England, and came to America in an early day. The family were members of the Congregational Church, and figured quite prominently in the early history of the State. Alpheus Crosby, Sr., married Miss Elizabeth Gilmore, who came of an old New England family. The parents of Mrs. Penfield were married in the East, and Mr. Crosby followed his trade of blacksmithing in Troy, N. H., until his emigration with his family to Rockford. He became an influential and wealthy citizen of this place, and the family is one unusually well and favorably known. The father was a member of the First Congregational Church, as was also his wife, and took an active part in polities, supporting the Republican party. Public spirited and progressive, he also took a prominent part in everything pertaining to the welfare and advancement of the community.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Penfield have been born three children: Helen M., widow of Edwin M. Revell, a real-estate and loan agent, who died on the 16th of July, 1891; Fannie H., wife of Charles E. Sheldon, who is Secretary of the Rockford Insurance Company of this city; and Kate C. at home. They have all been well educated, and Miss Kate has been a student in Wellesly College, of Massachu setts.

Mr. Pentield has been connected with a number of business interests in Rockford, and is one of its most enterprising and leading citizens. He is a stockholder in the Watch Company, and is a Trustee in the Randolph Revell Land Association, which laid out Highland subdivision. He owns stock in several incorporated companies, and is a man of enterprise and spirit, who carries forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes. He, with his brother D. S. and Mr. E. Gregory, laid out the Gregory Addition. He and his brother D. S. laid out the Penfield subdivision of South Park, lot No. 11, in East Rockford. He also has an interest in Riverside Addition, which was laid out in 1890, one of the largest Additions in the city, which reaches from Rock River to the north limits.

ROF. P. R. WALKER. Not only in Rockford, where he resides, but also in Winnebago and Ogle Counties, and through the State of Illinois, this gentleman is known as a prominent educator, whose life has been spent in the advancement of humanity and progress along educational lines. In no way can his ability and profound knowledge be better illustrated than by mention of the various offices which he has held. He has been an instructor in many of the Institutes held in Northern Illinois, has occupied the principal offices in the State and local educational associations, and has been a Director in the National Teachers' Association for two years.

Born in Windham County, Conn., in July, 1835, and the son of Albert G. and Patience E. Walker (of whom see biography elsewhere in this volume), young Walker was surrounded with such opportunities as were common to the boys of sturdy old New England farmers back in the old Nutmeg State of fifty years ago. He received such practical training as was a source of much general value to him when he came in contact with a life's work that has required all his energies. Having received the rudiments of his education in the public schools, he taught his first school at the age of seventeen, in the county of his birth.

With the hope of improving his time and opportunities to the best advantage, Prof. Walker, with his father's family, came to Illinois in 1856, and settled in Ogle County. After teaching two years, he entered the State Normal University at Normal, Ill., graduating with high honors in 1861, and at once returned to his home, where he taught for one year in the district schools. His loyalty to the Union, and the spirit of his forefathers, caused him to throw aside his profession of a teacher and respond to the call of the Government for brave and gallant men to take up arms in defense of the old flag. He enlisted as a private in Company K, Ninety-second Illinois Infantry, Capt. Albert Woodcock, of Ogle County, and Col. Smith D. Atkins, of Freeport, commanding.

The history of the Ninety-second is one of interest, for it is known as one of Illinois' greatest and most valorous regiments throughout the entire war. After they were mustered into service in the early part of 1862, they advanced into the enemy's country, and fought with the Army of the Cumberland, doing good service in many hardfought battles. After the battle of Chattanooga, our subject was commissioned First Lieutenant, soon after his regiment was assigned to Gen. Killpatrick's cavalry division of Gen. Sherman's army, and was with it on the march to the sea. While at Ringgold, Ga., Capt. Scoville, of Company K, was taken prisoner, and Lieut. Walker assumed command of the company. He refused to accept the Captaincy out of respect for his captured leader, but retained command for a year or more, until his superior officer was released as a prisoner of war.

The regiment fought bravely at all the battles of the memorable campaign under Gen. Sherman, including the siege of Atlanta, the march to the sea, and from there to the North. For a short time, Lieut. Walker was in the hospital on account of siekness. He received a slight wound at the battle of Raleigh. With that exception, he was in active service until the close of the Rebellion, and was honorably discharged July 10, 1865, when he returned to his home in Ogle County.

Before his enlistment, Prof. Walker's worth as a teacher had been established, and upon his return home he was employed to return to the school which he taught prior to his enlistment. It was his constant aim to elevate the character of the schools of the county, and he accomplished much in that direction, many of his students to-day figuring prominently in places of trust and responsibility. Notable is the fact that while in that county Prof. Walker taught one school for eight years, and another for twelve years, his work always recommending him for a call to the same position.

When the School Board of Rockford commenced to look around for a Superintendent of ability, well versed in the system of public schools, and splendidly equipped as an educator and disciplinarian, they selected Prof. Walker to fill the honorable and laborious place. This was in July, 1884. Since that time he has labored continuously at his post, giving that satisfaction which can be given only by a man whose soul is in his work. His proficiency is best attested by the universal satisfaction he has given. He is a tireless worker, and has won his way through his unremitting exertions to a front rank among the foremost educators of the day. He was married, August 16, 1865, to Martha E. Webb, of Le Roy, Genesce County, N. Y. One daughter has blessed their home. Prof. Walker is a member of the State Board of Education, having recently been re-appointed for a term of six years. Socially, he is well known in Rockford, and is a member of the G. L. Nevius Post No. I, G. A. R. In political matters, he affiliates with the Republican party, and takes great interest in all the important issues of the day.

RS. MARIAM K. TAYLOR, born in New Hampshire, April 9, 1814, and Mrs. Sally Chamberlain, born in Franklin County, N. Y., April 11, 1822, are the daughters of Richard C. Hovey, who was originally from Grafton County, N. H. The father was one of two children, and was left fatherless when about two years of age. He was reared by adopted parents, and remained with them until twenty years of age, when he married Miss Abigail Kimball, a native of the same place, and began housekeeping at Hanover, N. H., near Dartmouth College. Six years later, they removed to New York, settled at Ft. Covington, Franklin County, and there Mr. Hovey was engaged in lumbering during the winter months and farming during the summer seasons until 1833. He then sold out and, with his wife and children, moved to Ohio, where he was engaged in lumbering and milling for some time.

Led by the promises of the Western prairies of Illinois, Mr. Hovey came to Boone County, where he took up three hundred and fifty acres of Government land. He erected a large log house and resided in this for many years, but subsequently a fine residence was built, in which he and his thrifty and industrious helpmate passed the closing scenes of their lives, the father dying when seventy-nine years of age, and the mother at the age of eighty-four years. The last-named was a daughter of Ezekiel and Mariam (Blake) Kimball, natives of New Hampshire, who spent their entire lives in that State, dying when quite aged. Mr. Hovey served as Postmaster, and was Justice of the Peace for thirty years.

Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Chamberlain are the sisters ters of Mrs. Nathan H. Wooster (see sketch), and are of a family of twelve children, ten of whom lived to be old people. Mrs. Taylor was married on the 21st of April, 1835, to John G. Taylor, and became the mother of four children, only one of whom is now living, Mrs. Esther Larkin, who has five children. Mrs. Taylor has about twentyfive great-grandchildren, the eldest of whom is tifteen years old. Mr. Taylor was born in New Hampshire, and died in Le Roy Township, Boone County, when fifty-seven years of age. He was a shoemaker by trade and came to this county about 1842. In connection with his shoemaking, he was also engaged in farming in this county and left a nice property at his death.

Mrs. Chamberlain was married to Joseph Chamberlain on the 23d of October, 1839, and became the mother of eleven children, all of whom grew to mature years, but only six are now living: Helen M. married and had five children, three of whom are now living; William W. was one of the first to answer his country's eall, enlisting in Company I, Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, and died in the army; Adelia married, and died in Nebraska, leaving three children, one of whom is now married and has a child; Eliza married and has four children; Leroy married and has five children; Harry D. married and has three children; and Horace married and has two children. Mr. Chamberlain was born in Delaware County, N. Y., and came to Boone County in 1832 or 1833, becoming one of the very first settlers. He was a carpenter by trade and built the first house in Rock-

your Toury G.M. Murch

ford, also the first mill in Beloit, Wis. Later in life, he took up three hundred and twenty acres of Government land, but only proved up on one hundred and sixty acres. At his death, which occurred when he was seventy-eight years of age, he left the fine farm on which he had resided for fifty-two years. He only followed his trade for five or six years after coming to this State, engaging in agricultural pursuits ustead.

Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Chamberlain have been members of the Christian Church for years, the former having professed religion at the age of eighteen years, and both are highly respected for their many estimable qualities of mind and heart. Both husbands were Republicans in their political views, and each held many of the different township offices.

EORGE W. MURCII, a dealer in clothing, gents' furnishing goods, boots, shoes, etc., of Belvidere, was born in Truxton, Cortland County, N. Y., January 19, 1830, and is a son of Martin and Polly (Keeler) Murch, the former a native of Dutchess County, N. Y., and the latter of Cortland, where their marriage was celebrated. They afterward removed to Onondaga County and there resided until 1861, when they came to Belvidere and spent their last days in the home of our subject.

Mr. Murch, whose portrait adorns the opposite page, was reared under the parental roof, no event of special importance occurring in his childhood. In 1849, he located in Putnam County, Ill., and was employed in a warchouse on the Illinois River until the winter season, when he engaged in teaching school. With three young men, in the spring of 1850, he started for California, walking to St. Joseph, Mo., where they joined others from Putnam County who had teams, and in this way they made the entire journey across the plains and mountains. At that time, there were no white settlers between St. Joseph and California, except the Mormons at Salt Lake.

After one hundred and sixteen days of travel, Mr. Murch arrived at Hangtown, where he engaged in mining for a time and was afterward employed as a vegetable gardener until the spring of 1852. He returned home by way of the 1sthmus of Panama, leaving San Francisco in September and thirty days later arriving in New York, whence he returned to Putnam County.

The same autumn, Mr. Murch rented half an interest in a sawmill, which he operated throughout the winter. In August of the following year, he came to Belvidere, where, in company with his brother, L. II., he opened a harness shop and carriage-trimming establishment. A few years later, they extended their business, purchasing a stock of ready-made clothing, gents' furnishing goods, boots, shoes, etc., and carried on the two stores, one on the north side and the other on the south side of the river.

In 1857, Mr. Murch secured as a companion and helpmate on life's journey Miss A. Lavantia Amsden, who was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., and is a daughter of Benjamin C. and Achsah (Nichols) Amsden. They have two children: Idell B. and Nettie B. The former is the wife of J. C. F. Dick, of La Grange, Ill., and they have two daughters: Jean Louise and Marjory Lavanch.

Mr. Murch and his brother continued partnership until 1871, when the connection was dissolved, our subject retaining the harness business. which he carried on until 1874. His brother going to Minnesota, he then closed out the harness business and took charge of the clothing store, of which he is now proprietor. He has worked up a good trade and is now enjoying a thriving business. He is fair and honest in all his dealings and his courteous treatment has won him a liberal patronage. He is one of the Directors of the People's Bank and a stockholder of the National Sewing Machine Company. He was chairman of the committee chosen by the citizens to investigate the June Manufacturing Company and take steps to secure the location of the plant here, which was finally accomplished, and he served as Director and Vice-president of that company.

Socially, Mr. Murch is a member of Big Thunder Lodge No. 28, L. O. O. F. In politics, he is a Democrat and has served as a member of the Village Board of Trustees and of the County Board of Supervisors. Himself and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he has been Trustee for a number of years and also one of the workers in the Sabbath school. He is one of the substantial citizens of Belvidere and a man of sterling worth, who by his upright life has won the confidence of all and gained many friends.

ILLIAM WELLS FAIRFIELD was born in Pittsfield, in 1805, and was the eldest son of Capt. Nathaniel and Martha (Wells) Fairfield. His paternal grandfather was a resident of Boston, Mass., until 1748, when, becoming impatient to seek his own fortune, he went with a friend to examine the settling lots of Pontoosuc and lands in that vicinity; before being satisfied with their exploration, they became short of provisions, and the elder man, Daniel Cadwell, returned to his home in Westfield for a fresh supply, leaving young Fairfield, then only eighteen years old, the only white person in the county. Indians were numerous and their voices he plainly heard upon all sides as he lay in a hollow log which served him as a lodging by night, and a hiding place by day. He purchased a tract of land at that time, and having made his clearing and built his log eabin, revisited his home, and returned in 1752 with his wife to their new home.

Mr. Fairfield and his wife had lived there but a short time when the Indians became hostile, and he sent his wife back to their former home on horse-back, with marked trees for her only guide, the distance being about forty miles. He then turned his oxen out to pasture by Pontoosue River, putting a large bell on one of them, and leaving the place to join in the fight of subduing the hostile Indians. After peace was restored, he returned to find the oxen unharmed and the bell tinkling a welcome upon his approach. That bell is still in the family of William W. Fairfield, and prized by them as an historic relic.

Nathaniel Fairfield had three sons born to him —John, Enoch and Nathaniel, all of whom were born and died in Pittsfield, Mass., the last named being the father of the subject of this narrative. His wife was Miss Martha Wells, of Wethersfield, Conn., and they had five children; the first, a daughter, died in her third year; the second child was William Wells Fairfield. His father was so rejoiced at the birth of a son, that he negotiated for a large tract of land to be deeded to him, which was done as soon as practicable, which was before the child was one month old. The next son lived to his twentieth year, when he was killed by a falling tree on the homestead at Pittsfield; the daughter, Almyra Jenett, became the wife of William Tefft, Jr., of Syracuse, N. Y., where she died in January, 1889, in the seventy-fifth year of her age; Ebenezer lived in Adrian, Mich., engaged in the practice of law, and was a candidate for Governor at the time of his death.

William W, remained with his father until the time of the death of the latter, which occurred in the year 1837, in the seventieth year of his age. He then felt that he must remain as a protector and stay to his mother; he was appointed executor of the estate, which was settled to the satisfaction of all concerned. After some years his health becoming impaired by rheumatism, he removed to Syracuse, N. Y., where he soon recovered from his affliction, and, being inclined to an active life, he invested in the manufacture of salt, buying a number of salt blocks. He continued in this business until about 1852, when owing to the saline moisture of the air, he contracted bronchitis, which was so severe that his physician ordered him to try a drier climate. He went to Wisconsin and was much benefited by the change. He there became interested in school lands, buying many hundred acres of those, also a large amount of farming land and wood land also; much of those lands he owned long after coming to Rockford. He was very successful in his ventures, and amassed a large fortune; he made many trips to and from the Northwest, visiting the most important points of the same, and came to love the country and people whom he met. Their freedom from artificiality was very attractive to him, he being a man of most unassuming manners, plain speech, and perfectly honest in his intentions.

It was during one of those visits that Mr. Fairfield met the lady who subsequently became his wife, Mrs. Eleanor G. Siegfried, a native of Philadelphia, Pa., who was like himself in quest of health, her's having failed during the sickness and death of her late husband, William Siegfried, also a native of the same place; they were married November 6, 1850, and he died August 25, 1851, of consumption. She contracted the same by long continued vigils at his bedside. He was only twenty-six years old at the time of his death, and left a loving wife to mourn his early death. She too was ordered by her physician to go to a drier climate, as the only hope held out for recovery, which, in the course of one year, seemed to gradually dawn upon the invalid. She returned to her home, and soon found herself liable to a recurrence of her trouble. She went again to the then Far West, and seemingly as before, regained comparative health, and as before, to be disappointed. In this way some years were spent, when in 1858 she met Mr. Fairfield, who obtained board at the house in which Mrs. Siegfried was stopping, and an attachment sprang from this acquaintance, which resulted in marriage, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Robert Patterson, D. D., of Chicago, on the 3d of July. 1862; they spent the intervening years until 1867 in travel, visiting the relatives of each at various times and places, and in looking over Mr. Fairfield's Western possessions in quest of a suitable location where they would be likely to enjoy plain and healthy living. They visited Rockford upon several occasions, each time being more pleased with the place and people.

In March, 1867, Mr. Fairfield came West, leaving his wife in Philadelphia with her friends. While there he purchased the Col. Marsh homestead of John Lake, who had bought it a short time previous. In April of the same year they came to Rockford, residing in the same place continuously, and Mr. Fairfield dying in the same house, March 14, 1891, in the eighty-sixth year of his age, esteemed by all who knew him. A good citizen in all that the word implies, upright in all his dealings, conscientious in all his deeds, his word was his law, and no one ever thought of his breaking either. He ever respected the Sabbath, and would allow nothing to occur, over which he had control, to mar its holy influence. He was prudent, but enterprising, and possessed of excellent judgment of men and matters generally, and made very few mistakes in business matters, until in 1877 he to some extent lost his sight, not being able to read or write ever again; from that time he met with many and heavy losses, being obliged to depend upon the opinion of others. Previous to this time he invested largely in railroad stock and bonds, both in New York and Wisconsin, principally in the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, holding stock in both the Milwaukee and New York Central at the time of his decease. He was ever liberal in causes which he deemed worthy, contributing to colleges, both East and West, but always in such a quiet way that the beneficiaries alone had knowledge of his purpose, and to his relatives he gave large sums. A goodly share of his means was invested in Rockford property, and was used in developing East Rockford especially.

From his earliest manhood Mr. Fairfield was a Democrat in principle and practice, as no man could gain his approval or his support until he was fully convinced that he was honest and capable. He was tendered official honors of much importance, both in his Eastern homes, as also in the West, but he declined them ever, having no taste in that direction. He enjoyed the acquaintance of many men prominent in literary, financial and political circles. He was a school mate of Oliver Wendell Holmes, a warm friend of Whittier. Ex-Senator Vilas has been his friend and legal adviser for many years. In religious matters he leaned toward Presbyterianism, although his people, as well as his wife, were Episcopalians. He formed a great liking for the present Rector of the Emanuel Episcopal Church of this city, the Dean of this diocese, the Rev. D. C. Peabody, who faithfully performed the duties of his divine office during Mr. Fairfield's sickness, ministering to him of spiritual things, and conducted the services at the funeral. Mr. Fairfield's death was caused by falling, which resulted in an impacted fracture of the hip joint. He had no disease, and was but recovering from the effects of a previous hurt when his spine was injured; that was in 1889; he suffered greatly from that, but as soon as he could. was impatient to see to his affairs, and although carnestly entreated not to venture out, he persisted in doing so, with the above result; he struck in the fall upon the stone coping in front of his grounds, was carried into the house, was tenderly placed upon his bed, from which he never arose, but suffered for five weeks most intensely, when death relieved him of his agony. His remains were deposited in the receiving vault until early in May, when Mrs. Fairfield, having partially recovered from a severe illness, incident to the great loss which she had sustained, felt it to be her duty to take the body to his birth-place, which she did, and laid the dear remains to rest in the family burial place in Pittsfield, Mass., where repose three generations bearing the name of Fairfield. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Newton, Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of Pittsfield.

A fine polished shaft of granite and marble was placed at his head, with an appropriate inscription, with date of birth and death, whilst a far finer monument of red sandstone is in course of erection in the city of his choice, which is to be known as the Fairfield Memorial and Parish House of Emanuel Episcopal Church, Mrs. Fairfield having been a member of the same for many years. She has the sympathy of all in her sad bereavement.

LEXANDER BLACK, who was one of the well-known citizens of Rockford for many years, was born in New Brunswick, at St. Johns, in March, 1810, and was a son of Dr. Daniel Black, a native of Paisley, Scotland, who came of a prominent and noble family of the Highlands. The Doctor was a fine scholar and well-known physician, also a prominent member of the Masonie order. When a young man, he emigrated to New Brunswick, opening an office in St. Johns, where he wedded Miss Mary McCartney, by whom he had eleven children. The Doctor was drowned while crossing the St. Johns River on skates, at the age of fifty-four years. In 1825, his widow removed with her family to Canada, where she married George Calvert and spent the remainder of her days.

Our subject was reared in Toronto and in 1849, during the gold excitement, went to California by way of Cape Horn, on a sailing-vessel, where he made about $5,000. He then returned to Toronto by water, and after spending some time with his family in Canada, went back to the gold diggings in California, but found that the mine was then exhausted. He afterwards went to Australia, where he spent about a year and a half, returning with about $20,000. It was in 1851 that he came with his family to Illinois and purchased land in what is known as the Big Bottoms, in Guilford Township, Winnebago County, where he engaged extensively in farming and stock-raising and in importing horses. For some years he was owner of "Royal George," one of the finest horses ever brought to the county. His farm comprised two hundred acres of good land in Guilford Township, and he also owned property in Rockford. He spent the last fifteen years of his life in the city, living in retirement.

While in his native land, Alexander Black participated in the McKenzie Rebellion, of which he was one of the leaders. He had many narrow escapes, and finally had to flee to the United States, for a price was placed on his head. In polities, he was a stalwart Republican, and was a member of the Methodist Church. He lived an honorable, upright life, true to every trust reposed in him, and when called to his final rest many friends mourned his loss. He passed away at home in Rockford, October 30, 1883.

Mr. Black was twice married. His first wife died young, leaving a child who died in infancy. He then married Mrs. Orpha (Smith)Black, also a native of Canada. Her first husband was Dr. D. N. Black, a brother of our subject. Shortly after his graduation from medical college and only a few months after his marriage, he died of cholera in Toronto, Canada. Unto Alex and Orpha Black were born seven children, six of whom are yet living. The mother was a true and faithful helpmate to her husband. She survived him about three years and died on the 3d of February, 1887, at the age of seventy-seven.

Mrs. Mary McDonald, a daughter of this worthy couple, is now living at No. 209 North Second.

Street. She is a worthy lady and a member of the Methodist Church. Her husband, Dr. James L. McDonald, died in Pittsburg, April 9, 1891, of la grippe. He was reared in that city and graduated in the Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio, after which he made his home in Pittsburg. Throughout the Rebellion he served as a member of a Pennsylvania regiment. By a former marriage the Doctor had two children: Rachel, wife of Dr. Sour, of Milwaukee; and Jennie, wife of Ernest Godfry, of Chicago. By her former marriage, Mrs. McDonald has two children: Louis Nicholas, who married Lydia Nelson and resides in Rockford, and Eliza, now the wife of T. O. Largent, proprietor of a river boat, "The Queen." They reside in Rockford and have two children, May and Lee.

UCIUS M. WEST. It is a pleasure to incorporate in this volume a sketch of the life and labors of Mr. L. M. West, who is so well and widely known. He is mentioned as one of the most successful business men in the county, and is held in high regard for his financial ability and for the many pleasing traits of character which he possesses.

Mr. West's modesty forbids his stating to us all we desire to know of his long, busy life. We therefore leave this history to be traced by an old acquaintance of Mr. West, who has known his life and habits and can do it justice as we can not.

Mr. West suffered at two distinct periods of his life the loss of all his possessions by destructive fires in the East. He came to Rockford in 1858 a poor man and opened a very small retail store in rubber goods.

The Pike's Peak gold excitement, the Campaign of 1860, and the opening of the Civil War made business for Mr. West which he was not slow to improve. Having knowledge of the manufacture of rubber garments, etc., he solicited orders for rubber suits and camp blankets for miners, for wide-awake suits for the campaign, which he made by the thousands, and for camp blankets and outfits for soldiers.

For two or three years, our subject worked nights from 12 to 3 o'clock manufacturing, and ran the store through the day. In 1862, he bought a saloon property where M. M. Carpenter's shoe store now stands, on West State Street, and built that store, which was was then one of the best store buildings on the block. He now added leather boots and shoes to his rubber stock. This retail business he pursued, all told, for twelve years, after which he commenced a jobbing trade in his celebrated Enamel Carriage Top Dressing, which he had manufactured in a small way for several years.

Mr. West has spent a small fortune in advertising his business, until he is now selling his goods in every important town and city in the United States and many parts of Europe. He has done much to advertise his own city, having sent out for some years into every part of this country as many as five hundred thousand business circulars annually, besides advertising in many American and foreign periodicals. Beside this, he traveled throughout thirty States of the Union, from three thousand to six thousand miles every year, for fifteen years, to solicit and establish trade in his goods.

In this way, Rockford has been advertised world wide, until Mr. West's products have become standard goods of the two continents. Such an enterprise has been an important factor in helping to make Rockford what it is. No small amount of money through this channel has come to Rockford for the past twenty-five or thirty years. A moderate estimate would be several hundred thousand dollars.

Besides this business, Mr. West has owned and handled considerable real estate, having owned acre land in Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Ohio, and lots in Chicago, and not a few houses and lots in Rockford. In 1885, he put his manufacturing business into the L. M. West Manufacturing Co., with a capital stock of $40,000, himself and family retaining most of the stock. The officers elected were: L. M. West, President; E. S. West, Vice-President; L. J. West, Superintendent; H. H. West, Secretary. All these officers now hold their positions in the company except his youngest son, L. J., who is now engaged in the real-estate business.

Benjamin West, grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was born September 17, 1752. Although a young man, he did good service in the War of the Revolution. Elijah West, father of Mr. L. M. West, was born July 2, 1785, and went through the War of 1812. Both Benjamin and Elijah were born and reared in Columbia County, N. Y., and were of sturdy Scotch descent. The mother of the subject of this sketch was born in Hatfield, Conn., December 9, 1890. Her maiden name was Sally Smith Wate.

Our subject was born June 19, 1820, at Vernon Center, Oncida County, N. Y. He had his early religious training for twelve years in the Presbyterian Church of that place, of which his parents were members. He lived in this and the adjoining town of Verona eighteen years. Sixteen years of this time were mostly devoted to school. Many and vivid are the scenes of the old school days of nearly two generations ago.

Mr. West entered upon mercantile life in the spring of 1837, jobbing goods in towns and cities throughout the State of New York, with a pair of heavy horses, as was the custom in those days, before railroads were so common and when the Eric Canal was a small ditch, and the New York Central Railroad, single track, was in its infancy, runing on 6x10-inch timbers, running lengthwise across the ties, with wagon tire iron, two and one-half inches wide, for the wheels to run on—a big thing in these days.

On the 22d of May, 1842, Mr. West was united in marriage with Miss Sarah A. Sturtevant, of the town of Verona, Oneida County, N. Y. This has proved a most happy union, the result of which is three highly-respected, young business men: Hamilton H., Elliot S. and L. Judson, all married and well settled in business in Rockford. They are sons of whose usefulness, culture and refinement, any parents could justly be proud.

Mr. West, in speaking of his conversion to the Christian religion in 1837, at which time he united with the Baptist Church in Vernon Center, N. Y., his native town, says: "The Lord took me into business partnership with Him that same year, and we have worked together harmoniously ever since. No partner like Him. He furnishes all the capital and skill, is a good Director, and safe Counselor." Mr. West expresses unbounded faith in the Holy Scriptures as the inspired word of God given to man as his guide in this life and to the life to come, through the Divine Christ, as therein revealed.

Being naturally averse to public political office, he has never sought or accepted such position but has devoted himself to moral and religious lines of work. He has been a life-long Anti-slavery, Prohibition Republican, always holding up these principles in his party with strong faith in the ultimate triumph of the Temperance cause, as on the question of human slavery. Church and Sunday-school mission work, combined with diligent attention to secular business, has always been his ambition. Mr. West attributes his success in business life to this combination. He says his business partner has earried him through all the great financial crises from 1837 to the present without a break; although the stones were sometimes set so close that they ground pretty fine, yet he never lost faith in Divine Providence and hard work,

Mr. West spent twelve years in New Haven County, Conn., where he was engaged with the Goodyear Rubber Company three years, superintending the manufacture of rubber clothing and other fabrics, and nine years he superintended the vulcansing, finishing, packing and shipping departments with a large force of men. Product, three hundred and lifty thousand pairs of boots and shoes annually. Regular working time, twelve hours per day all through the twelve years.

In this manufacturing district, Naugatuck, Conn., was a large field for mission work, personal religious work and family visiting. Here their house was opened every week for seven years for religious meetings for the operatives, always well attended and many times crowded.

In 1854, Mr. West was chosen Deacon in the Baptist Church of Waterbury, Conn., of which church his wife and himself were members. In 1858, he moved his family to Rockford. The following year, they took up their abode on the corner of South Madison and Walnut Streets, where they still reside. Mr. West united with the Second, now called the State Street, Baptist Church. The same year, he was chosen Chairman of the building committee, for the erection of their first house of worship, a chapel on the corner of State and Fifth Streets. The following year, he was chosen Deacon of the church, in which office he has served to the present time. In 1860, he was elected Treasurer of the society, to which office he was chosen for ten consecutive years, which in those days, in a young church and during the building of their present large and commodious house of worship on the corner of Third and State Streets, meant work. The laborious duties then were to solicit subscriptions and collect them and pay all bills. A few words taken from the auditing committee report will not be amiss here. To crect this church edifice within the prescribed limit of cost, nine contracts for different parts of the building were necessary. They say: "We, the undersigned committee, appointed to audit the accounts of the Treasurer of the State Street Baptist Church and society, in tracing the details of the accounts have been enabled to understand, and appreciate Mr. West's formable difficulties, which have been bravely met, and the energy which characterized his efforts, and his liberality in laboring for the interests of the church and society."

In 1861, Mr. West was elected President of the Young Men's Christian Association, then struggling with depletion from the call for scores of young men to enlist in the war for the Union. In 1862, he organized the first Sunday-school ever convened in Caledonia, fourteen miles north of this city, and met with and conducted this school fifty-one Sundays in the twelve months. There has been a flourishing school in that place ever since. Aside from this year's work in Caledonia, Mr. West was not a month without a Bible class in his own church for thirty years.

In November, 1875, Mr. West apppointed the first religious meeting ever held in Woodruff's Addition, a Tuesday evening prayer meeting, and also organized a mission Sunday-school, both of which he sustained weekly for three and one half years, furnishing the building for use, until failing health prevented. He was five years Treasurer of the Winnebago County Bible Society. He is a life member of the Baptist Home Mission, Foreign Mission, and Education Societies. He is also a life member and life Director of the American Bible-Society. In his gifts for Christian work, he is said to be liberal to a fault. These are a few of the thousands of little things which we are glad to note, that go toward making a useful and happy life.

It will be seen that Mr. West's life has not been unsettled and roving. He spent twenty-seven years in his native State, twelve years in New Haven County, Conn., and thirty-three years in Rockford. Thus considerably more than half of his business life has been spent on the site of his present beautiful, commodious home, erected by himself about ten years ago, where, with the loving companion of his youth, with three sons and their families and a host of old and young friends, they have just celebrated their fiftieth marriage anniversary, or golden wedding, and long may they live to bless the world.

AMES G. MANLOVE, deceased, was born in Dover, Del., December 15, 1812, and died at his home in Rockford, November 6, 1891, at the age of seventy-eight. His parents and grandparents were also natives of Delaware, but the family is of Welsh descent, having been founded in America, prior to the Revolutionary War, by emigrants from Wales. John Manlove, father of our subject, grew to manhood in his native city. Dover, and there spent his entire life, a respected and valued citizen. For thirty years he engaged in the banking business and was quite prominent in public affairs. He wedded Miss Mary A. Lafferty, and both he and his wife were leading members of the Methodist Church. His death occurred at the age of fifty-six. His wife survived him for some time, and died in Pennsylvania at an advanced age.

The subject of this sketch was the eldest of cleven children, but it is probable that none are now living. The days of his boyhood and youth were spent in his native State, after which he removed to Pennsylvania, and in Saltsburg, that State he formed a matrimonial alliance with Miss Juliet Sterett, who was born in Pennsylvania, August 10, 1817, her father and grandfather both spending their entire lives within its borders. The former, Andrew Sterett, was born in Franklin County and married Miss Elizabeth McPheron, whose father was a prominent Presbyterian clergyman of the Keystone State, where he lived and died. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth McCroskey, died in Franklin County. Both she and her husband were of Scotch descent. After his marriage, Andrew Sterett removed to Westmoreland County, Pa., where he engaged in the manufacture of salt. On the discovery of gold in California, he crossed the plains to that State, and there lost his health. Hoping to benefit it, he started for Australia but died on board the vessel, his remains being buried in the sea. He was then in middle life and his wife died at the age of forty-two years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sterett were members of the Presbyterian Church.

The month of May, 1851, witnessed the arrival of Mr. Manlove, our subject, in Rockford, where he resided for forty years. He had formerly spent seven years in La Fayette County, Wis., and, having studied law, was there admitted to the Bar and elected Justice of the Peace. On coming to Rockford, he opened a law office, and here began the practice of his chosen profession. Again, he was elected Justice of the Peace and Police Magistrate, serving as such for years, and was Alderman of the Fifth Ward for five years. In whatever position he was called upon to fill, he proved a capable officer, discharging his duties promptly and faithfully. In polities, he was a stalwart supporter of Republican principles, and was a warm friend of temperance. He lived to see the many changes which transformed Rockford from a village to a thriving and popular city and ever bore his share in its upbuilding and advancement. He was a prominent and influential man, a wellknown citizen, and was held in high esteem by all. He had been reared in the faith of the Methodist Church, but after locating in this city joined the Second Congregational Church, in which he was an active worker. He was a teacher and Superintendent of the Sunday-school for many years, and was also Clerk in the church. His life, well and worthily spent, might well serve as an example to others.

Mrs. Manlove is still living at the old home. She, too, is a faithful member of the Second Congregational Church, and, like her husband, delights in doing good. Her children have been reared in that way, and they, too, belong to the same church. Of the family, four sons and a daughter are yet living.

HARLES O. NELSON, of the firm of Nelson & Walgren, proprietors of a grocery and meat market, located at No. 602 Seventh Street, Rockford, is a native of Sweden. He was horn on the 22d of May, 1851, and is a son of Nels G. Pearson. His parents and the entire family came to this country, and his father is still living in Rockford, at the age of seventy years. His wife died about eight years ago, at the age of fifty-six years. She was a member of the Zion Lutheran Church, to which Mr. Pearson also belongs. Two daughters of the family are yet living: Mrs. Emily Nelson and Mrs. Hannah Jones, both residents of Rockford.

Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native country, and about the time he attained his majority, having determined to try his fortune in the New World, he sailed from Sweden to Quebec, Canada, and thence came to the United States, locating in Rockford, where he has since resided. This was in 1869, and he was the first of the family to cross the broad Atlantic. He learned the trade of a blacksmith and was employed as a journeyman for some time, after which he learned the cabinet-maker's trade and was engaged in the Rockford Central Furniture Company's works, where he remained for five years. In the meantime, he had become a stockholder of the company. Since 1887 he has devoted his entire attention to his present business, having charge of the meat market, while his partner attends to the grocery department. The double store which they occupy was built by them and is 40x50 feet. From the beginning, their trade has constantly increased, and by the exercise of good business ability and by their courteous treatment they have won a liberal patronage. Mr. Nelson is also a stockholder in the Skandia Plow Company, the Central Furniture Factory, the Skandia Brick Company and the Rockford Manufacturing Company. He began life empty-handed, having neither capital nor influential friends to aid him, but has made the most of his opportunities and has worked his way steadily upward, winning success and prosperity. He is now well-to-do and bids fair to obtain affluence. Himself and sisters are all members of the Zion Lutheran Church, and in his political affiliations Mr. Nelson is a Republican. As every true American citizen should do, he feels an interest in political affairs, but has never sought public office.

AUGUST JOHNSON is a stockholder, Director and Superintendent of the Central Furniture Company of Rockford, which was established in 1879, and now furnishes employment for one hundred and twenty-five men. It is one of the leading industries of the city, and much of its success is due to the untiring efforts and earnest work of our subject.

Mr. Johnson, whose portrait is herewith presented, is a native of Sweden, born September 18, 1860. His father, John Nelson, is yet living in that country, where throughout life he has followed agricultural pursuits. He has long been a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, to which his wife also belonged. Her death occurred in 1868, at the age of forty-five years. Two sons of the family have come to this country since the emigration of our subject: Gustaf, who is now deceased; and Mangnes, a cabinet-maker in the Central Furniture Factory of this city.

The early life of August Johnson was spent in the land of his birth and his education was acquired in the schools of his native Province. He there learned the trade of a cabinet-maker, serving an apprenticeship and thus becoming a skilled workman. In 1882, when twenty-two years of age, he bade good-bye to home and friends and sailed for the New World, since which time he has been a resident of Rockford. He chose as a companion and helpmate on life's journey Miss Helen B. Engbretson, their union being celebrated in this city. The lady was born in Norway, in August, 1860, and in 1868 came to this country with her parents, John and Ulricka Engbretson, who are now residents of Durand, Ill., and are well advanced in years. Her father is a mason by trade but has also followed the occupation of farming. Mrs. Johnson is an intelligent and cultured lady who has acquired the greater part of her education in this country.

By the union of our subject and his wife have been born two children: Glen R. and Wayne Leslie. The parents are both members of the First Congregational Church and are people of wide acquaintance in this community and prominent in the circles of society in which they move. In polities, Mr. Johnson has been a supporter of Republican principles since becoming an American citizen. It was a fortunate day for him when he determined to make his home in America, for he has here been blessed with prosperity and has worked his way upward to a prominent position and become well-to-do. He now owns a pleasant home at No. 701 Seminary Street, where with his family he resides, an esteemed citizen of the community.

OHN H. MANNY. The history of Winnebago County, and indeed of the State of Illinois, would not be complete without some record of John H. Manny, the inventor of the famous reaping and mowing machine, which, a quarter of a century ago, made his name a household word throughout the States, Mr. Manny was born in Amsterdam, N. Y.. November 28, 1825. He possessed a mechanical turn of mind, and at an early age made invention a study.

About fifty-five years ago, our subject accompanied his father to Illinois, and settled in Stephenson County, where, although his advantages were limited, he still continued to take delight in originating new ideas for invention, taking machinery apart, altering and improving, or adding new parts, as their utility seemed to require. He was industrious at school, and among the other pupils was noted for perseverance.

The attention of Mr. Manny was directed, about 1816, to the need of a reaper (a machine then comparatively unknown in this country), by the purchase by his father of a heading machine, which failed entirely to do the work designed. He and his father promptly set to work to alter and improve the machine to suit their wants, and to do this, found it necessary to almost completely make a new machine of it before it would do satisfactory work. They then patented their improvement, and commenced building heading machines for sale. Their machine was very successful as a header, but was so expensive to manufacture that it was beyond the means of the farmers to purchase, and the result was that they lost nearly all they had invested in the enterprise.

This failure, however, only spurred our subject to greater exertions, and he set about experimenting for a machine for cutting grain and grass. He was discouraged and laughed at, but he toiled on, overcoming one defect after another, until the machine could reap well and cut grass nicely, and then his triumph was complete. His means had been entirely exhausted in his experiments, but by the aid of friends he proceeded, the ensuing year, to build forty machines. Owing to a defect in the sickles, which had been procured of a manufacturer who claimed to be experienced in the business, these proved to be a disastrous failure. This was another test of Mr. Manny's perseverance under difficulties, which, to ordinary men, would have been hopelessly discouraging. He was left with an incubus of debt hanging over him, and, worse than this, the damaging reputation of his machines by their failure that year. These difficulties, however, only served to stimulate him to renewed effort, and he went patiently to work to retrieve the disaster. From the experience of the previous year, it was evident that to insure sucsess the sickle must be improved. No part of the machine is so essentially important to be just right as this, and upon it depends the success of the whole machine. In this crisis, a series of experiments was made for perfecting sickles, and a satisfactory result arrived at. He also succeeded in making arrangements to proceed with the manufacture of machines for 1852, and that year built eighty-four, adding such improvements as practical experience suggested. These were a perfect

In July of that year, the great reaper trial at Geneva, N. Y., was held. In this contest for supremacy, Mr. Manny's reaper eame in competition with eleven other machines. The result of that contest is well known to the public. We need not repeat it. The excellence of Mr. Manny's machine was more fully established, and henceforth the demand for his machine continued to increase, until at the time of his death he was at the head of the largest reaper business in the world.

In the spring of 1853, Mr. Manny was induced to remove to Rockford, and manufactured for the harvest of that year four hundred machines. The popularity of the machines still continued to increase, and the demand had now become so great, and the business so extensive, that it was deemed desirable to secure interested assistance in its management. Accordingly, in 1854, Messrs, Wait and Sylvester Talcott became associated with Mr. Manny in its management as partners, under the name of J. H. Manny & Co., and during this year upwards of one thousand machines were manufactured and sold. In 1855, Jesse Blinn and Ralph Emerson, Jr., were also added to the firm, and the firm's name changed to Manny & Co., the business also still continuing to increase. Mr. Manny's overtasked brain had by this time so worn upon his physical frame, that he was obliged to give up the business management to his partners. He, however, continued to make improvements on his machine, until twenty-three patents were issued to him-embracing thirty-three distinct claims.

In the year 1855, the competition between the McCormick and the Manny reapers had become fierce. McCormick commenced suit in the Federal Court at Chicago, to enjoin the successors of Manny from using what was called the "divider" or "shoe," which precedes the sickle, and parts the standing grain. The question was, who first invented the divider used by Manny? The Circuit Court dismissed McCormick's bill, and he carried the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, where the decision of the Circuit Court was affirmed, thus sustaining Mr. Manny's right as an inventor. The "clean swath" cut even in the field of lodged grain was a mute witness to the unflagging toil of John II. Manny, as well as to his genius.

This eelebrated suit involved as counsel such men as Reverdy Johnson and Edwin M. Stanton. In the first trial of the cause, Abraham Lincoln was employed, and afterward referred to his $1,000 retainer in the case as enabling him to stump the State of Illinois with Douglas, and which logically, it should be added, made him the most famous of all the Presidents.

The suit also exemplified the extreme heights to which a private property right will be carried in a Republic, where the parties involved have the means to carry on the contest. It was in this justly famous litigation, that Justice Daniel, in delivering a dissenting opinion, referring to the testimony of professionals said: "The reveries, they may often be called, of a class of men styled experts are often as skillful and effective in producing obscurity and error as in the clucidation of truth."

Early in the antumn of 1855, it was seen that Mr. Manny could not live long. That remorseless destroyer, consumption, had fixed its seal upon him. He was an untiring worker, far above his physical strength, which undoubtedly laid the foundation of his disease, which first began to show itself in 1852. To the very last moments of his life he was devoted to his great work; and his great ambition, after the commencement of his invention, seemed to be to place it in advance of all others in practical utility, and beyond all question of infringement.

On the 31st of January, 1856, Mr. Manny died, while yet in the full prime of life, scarce thirty years of age, just as his fame was becoming known on both sides of the Atlantic. Death, the great reaper, claimed him as a victim, and he peacefully passed to that "bourne whence no traveler returns,"

In his moral character, Mr. Manny led a spotless life, and his memory is cherished by all who enjoyed his personal acquaintance. Frank, openhearted, generous to a fault, and possessing the attributes of a true man, he was emphatically one of "nature's noblemen."

OHN A. WALGREN is another of Rockford's Swedish residents who has proved a valued citizen of this community. He was born in Sweden, October 11, 1860, and is a son of Andrew J. Walgren. In 1873, his parents with their family crossed the Atlantic to America, and the father is now living a retired life in the city of Rockford, being about sixty years of age. His wife, who is now sixty-three years of age, is in quite feeble health. Both are members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and Mr. Walgren is a Republican in politics. This worthy couple have a family of four children, all of whom are now living in Rockford. John A. is the eldest; Christina E. is the wife of F. A. Youngquist, of Rockford; August, who is connected with the Co-operative Furniture Company of this city, married Amanda Friberg, and Andrew G., the youngest, is employed in his brother John's store.

Our subject led to the marriage altar Miss Matilda I. Johnson, of Pecatonica, this county. The lady was there born and reared, and acquired a good education. She is highly respected among the young Swedish people of this city, her intelligence and worth fitting her for that position. Her father, Carl J. Johnson, enlisted for the late war and gave his life in defense of the old dag. His wife died in 1879, at the age of forty years.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Walgren have been born two children: Roy A. (deceased) and Rena A. In his political alliliations, Mr. Walgren is a Republican. Himself and wife are members of the First Lutheran Church of this city. He resided upon a farm in Pecatonica Township from 1873 until 1882, when he came to Rockford. For four years he engaged in the grocery business, before the firm of Nelson & Walgren was established in 1886. In this connection, he conducted a grocery and meat-market, the management of the whole concern being entirely under his control. The business increased to such an extent that the firm purchased the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Seventh Street, where they built a double store, forty feet front and fifty feet deep.

Recently, Mr. Walgren sold his interest in the grocery and meat business to his partner, and has opened a coal and wood yard in Rockford under the firm name of Walgren & Co., his office being at No. 802 Seventh Street, on the corner of Railroad Avenue. He has also been instrumental in organizing the Frontiden Publishing Company, with a capital of $10,000 and formed for the purpose of publishing a weekly journal in the Swedish language. He is a Director in the company, which is quite snecessful and rapidly growing in popularity. He is also a stockholder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, which has a capital of $200,000.

A wide-awake and enterprising young business man, Mr. Walgren is steadily working his way upward, and his career will undoubtedly be a prosperous one. The firm of which he is a member is already well and favorably known, having by their courteous treatment and fair dealing won a liberal patronage. Mr. Walgren takes an active interest in all that pertains to the growth and development of the city and is an ambitious and enterprising man who ranks high both in business and social circles.

OHN R. POST was born on the farm which is still his home, on section 35, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, June 1, 1812, and is a worthy representative of one of the pioneer families of this community. His father, Nathaniel Post, was born near Newport, Herkimer County, N. Y., May 21, 1810. The grandfather, Dan Post, was born in Saybrook, Conn., whence he removed to New York, becoming one of the first settlers of Herkimer County. He purchased a tract of timber land, and in the midst of the forest hewed out a farm. After many years spent in agricultural pursuits, he removed to Newport, where he lived retired until his death. He first married Marcey Pratt, who was born in Saybrook, Middlesex County, Conn., and died August 30, 1829. Mr. Post was afterwards again married, and his second wife reached the advanced age of one hundred and three years.

The father of our subject was reared in his native county, and learned the trade of a carpenter. In 1838, he removed to Ohio, and for one year engaged in earpentering in Painesville. The year 1839 witnessed his emigration to Winnebago County, Ill. He was accompanied by his family, and on the 29th of June they reached Newburg. He bought a claim of the Government, upon which was a log cabin, and during the first year built a more comfortable log house, in which our subject was born. In 1850, he erected a substantial frame residence. He bore all the experience of pioneer life, and was one of the prominent and influential citizens of this community in an early day. His death occurred November 11, 1888. He was quite a musician, and in the early days made considerable money with his violin. He married Eliza Rich, who was born near Newport, N. Y., January 31, 1816. This estimable lady died February 2, 1890, leaving two children: John R., of this sketch, and Erwin, a resident of Rockford.

Our subject acquired his education in the distict schools, and at Cherry Valley and Rockford, and is a well-informed man. On attaining his majority, he went East, visiting for a few mouths, and then accepted a situation as shipping clerk in a wholesale house in Chicago, but after a year returned home to take charge of the farm, upon which he has since resided. He now owns one hundred acres of the farm which his father entered from the Government, and also has another farm of one hundred and twenty-three acres in Guilford Township. Fruit and ornamental trees add to the value and beauty of the place, and the neat appearance of the farm indicates the thrift and enterprise of the owner.

Mr. Post was married May 31, 1866, to Ella G. Fish, who was born in Eric County, Pa., February 19, 1849, and is a daughter of Andrew and Miranda (Sherwood) Fish, natives of Washington County, N. Y. Their union has been blessed with two children: Minnie, who is a successful music teacher, and Frank. The musical talent of Nathaniel Post was inherited by his children, and in turn has been transmitted to his grandchildren. The Post family ranks high in social circles, and its members are truly deserving of the warm regard in which they are held. Mr. Post is a successful farmer, and is recognized as one of the progressive and valued citizens of the community.

HARLES J. JONES, a stockholder and Director in the Brown Brick Company, is one of the leading business men of Rockford, and prominent in public affairs. He was born in Sweden, November 15, 1849, and is a son of Pehrs Jonas, who spent his entire life in his native land, passing away at the age of about three-score years. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Christina Nelson, is still living, at the age of seventy, and is a member of the Lutheran Church, to which her husband also belonged. Their son Godfrey, an employe of the Skandia Furniture Company, and a daughter, Matilda, reside with our subject.

Mr. Jones was reared and educated in his native city, graduating from the High School, and in 1867 left his native land, coming alone to this country. He sailed from Liverpool, England, to New York, and after fifteen days upon the bosom of the Atlantic reached his destination, arriving in New York on the 16th of April of that year. He has since made a visit back to his native land but thinks no country under the shining sun is equal to America. He has not only found a pleasant home in this land but has here prospered, and is now a substantial citizen. His life has been a busy and useful one and he is recognized as one of the enterprising and progressive Swedish gentlemen of Rockford. As before stated, he is connected with the Brown Brick Company, and is President and Director of the Skandia Brick Company, a lessee of the Rockford Brick Company, also of the Exeelsior Furniture Company, and is Secretary and Director of the Rockford Tobacco and Snuff Company. He holds an interest in the Skandia Plow Company and the Skandia Brick Company.

In 1883, Mr. Jones was joined in wedlock in this eity to Miss Hannah C. Nelson, who was born in Kalmar, Sweden, September 4, 1858, and is a daughter of N. E. and Louisa (Pearson) Nelson, who were born, reared and married in the Province of Smoland. The year 1869 witnessed their emigration to America and :aw them located in Rockford, where the father, a well-to-do citizen, is now living retired at his pleasan home at No. 1006 Fourth Avenue. He has reached the age of three-score years and ten. His wife died at their home on Fourth Avenue, July 23, 1881, when about fifty-nine years of age. Their family numbered four sons and four daughters, but only one son and two daughters are now living.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones are the parents of three children: Ethel M., L. Eusebia and Ada F. The parents attend the Zion Lutheran Church. In politics, Mr. Jones is independent, and he is a sagacious and far-sighted business man, industrious and enterprising, and by the exercise of good business ability has won for himself a handsome property. He deserves all the more eredit in that he is entirely a self-made man, and as a prominent citizen of Roekford we take pleasure in presenting his portrait and biographical sketch.

OHN LOVESEE, an enterprising and industrious farmer of Roscoe Township, Winnebago County, residing on sections 34 and 35, was born in the city of Reading, Berkshire England, February 1, 1815. His grandfather, John Lovesce, spent his entire life there, and his father, William Lovesee, was born in the same locality. At the age of fifteen, he entered the army and served for twenty years, when he was honorably discharged. He then followed weaving in Berkshire until 1831, when he crossed the Atlantic and settled in Pittsford, Monroe County, N. Y. Five years later, he came to Winnebago County to join his children, making most of the journey on foot, and spent the remainder of his days in Roscoe Township. He married Ann Hanley, who was born near Dublin, Ireland, and was a daughter of John and Ann Hanley. Her death occurred in Berkshire England. Their six children were John. Ann, William, George, Henry and Joseph.

At the early age of cleven years, our subject began to learn the weaver's trade in London, and after serving a four-years' apprenticeship returned to his native county, where he resided until 1831. On the 13th of September of that year, he sailed for the New World, landing in New York on the 8th of November, after a stormy passage. He went to Pittsford, N. Y., and after a few months removed to Chautaugua County, where he resided until the 1st of November, 1835, when he started by way of the Lakes to Illinois. Landing at Detroit, he came to Winnebago County on foot and began boarding with Steven Mack, the first settler of the county. Chicago was a mere hamlet and Rockford contained two families, Kent and Haight, living in a log house on the west side, and Daniel Haight in a log cabin on the east side. The Government surveys were not yet complete and the work of civilization had hardly been begun. There were no mills or markets within fifty miles until Chicago became a trading point, when he hauled his wheat to that city, selling it as low as thirty-seven and a balf cents per bushel. He made a claim in what is now Rockton Township and afterwards in Roscoe Township. His farming implements were very crude. He harvested his grain with a cradle and his oxen tramped it out. In 1849, Mr. Lovesce sold that farm and purchased that upon which he now resides on section 35, Roscoe Township.

On the 29th of June, 1810, our subject married Miss Permelia, daughter of James and Hannah (Wilson) McCredy. She was born at Niagara Falls, Canada, April 29, 1821. Her father and grandparents were natives of Scotland and on coming to America settled at Niagara Falls. Her father learned the blacksmith's trade, which he there followed until 1823, when he emigrated Westward and settled on a tract of land which his wife had inherited. A part of that he cleared, but as he preferred blacksmithing to farming, he bought land near Aylmer and creeted a smithy, making his home in that locality until his death.

His wife was born in New Jersey and was a daughter of Cromwell and Hannah (Crane) Wilson, natives of the same State, and of English and German descent respectively. While hunting in the woods during the Revolutionary War, Cromwell Wilson was captured by the British and held for three months. Some time after the war, he removed to Canada, where he spent his last days. His wife died when Mrs. Lovesee was quite young and she was reared by her aunt, Mrs. John J. Rhodes, with whom she came to Winnebago County in 1839.

Unto our subject and wife were born two children who are yet living: Mary A., widow of Henry Schellenger, a resident of Rockford; and Edwin R., who graduated from two medical colleges of Chicago and is now practicing his profession in Geneva Lake, Wis. He first married Dorcas A, Lundy and after her death wedded Lizzie Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Lovesee are both members of the Methodist Church, and in politics he is a Republican, having supported that party since its organization. Among the most honorable pioneers of Winnebago County he is numbered and with one exception he has spent a longer time within its borders than any other resident. From a very early day he has been identified with its growth and upbuilding and has done much for its progress and advancement. He has the high regard of all with whom he has come in contact and is one of the prominent and influential citizens of the community.

AMUEL N. MEECH, who is engaged in farming in Guilford Township, Winnebago County, was born in the town of Bridgewater, Mass., December 6, 1811. His father, Asa Meech, was born April 7, 1775, and became a minister of the Presbyterian Church. He resided for a time in Bridgewater and later removed to Connecticut, being pastor of the church in Canterbury until 1820, when he went to Canada, and located at Hull. As that was a new country and the people in limited circumstances, he could not depend altogether upon his parishioners for support and so rented land for two years. He then secured four hundred acres of heavily-timbered land, upon which he erected a log house and afterwards a frame residence, managing his farm throughout the week and preaching on Sunday. He there resided until his death. For his second wife he married Maria DeWitt, who met her death the following spring after the family located in Canada. She was crossing a bridge with a wagon and oxen, and the water, which was very high, washed the wagon from the bridge and she and four children were drowned.

Our subject was a lad of nine years when his parents removed to Canada, where he acquired his education. When a young, man he went to visit a sister in Merrickville, where he remained for a time, operating a farm in her interest. He then bought land and engaged in its cultivation until 1857, when he sold out and came to Winnebago County, Ilh, where he first purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land. He has been very successful in his farming operations and is now the owner of one hundred and ninety-five acres, constituting a valuable farm.

Mr. Meech was married in Canada, November 26, 1835, to Eliza English, who died in Greenville, Canada, November 7, 1838. He was again married, March 7, 1839, his second union being with Anna Bolton, who was born in Merrickville, Canada, January 7, 1823. Her father, Richard Bolton, was born in County Wexford, Ireland, March 25, 1797, of English parentage, his father there owning a large estate. He emigrated to America with some neighbors when quite young and located in Canada, where he wedded Mary, daughter of Bemslee and Lois (Sherwood) Buel, natives of the United States. Her father was a pioneer of Canada and was the first to settle on the site of Brockville. He became an extensive land owner and spent his last years in Leeds County. His daughter was born in Elizabethtown, November 24, 1801, and inherited two hundred acres of land. Mr. Bolton located near Merrickville, where he secured a tract of Government land and cleared a farm.

By his first marriage, Mr. Meech had one son, Thomas E., who was born in Merrickville, Canada, September 16, 1836, and married Miss Hutchings. He resides in North Augusta, Canada, where he operates a cheese factory. By the second marriage, four children have been born : Richard, born January 2, 1810, wedded Alice Bently and is now living near Rockton; Martha A. M., born August 6, 1817, is the wife of Caleb E. Feakins, of New Richmond, Wis.; Mary E., born July 20, 1852, is the wife of Albert C. Carr, of Beloit. The parents have traveled life's journey together for fifty-three years. sharing with each other its joys and sorrows, pleasures and prosperity. Although well advanced in years, they are enjoying good health and their mental capacities are still unimpaired. They have a pleasant home and are surrounded by many warm friends.

ARVIN CLARK MAREAN, a well-known resident of Belvidere, who is numbered among the early settlers of the county, was born in Broome County, N. Y., June 8, 1827, and comes of an old New England family of French origin, founded by Dorman Marcan, who emigrated from Normandy, France, to America in 1636, and spent the remainder of his life in the Colony of Massachusetts. Little is known of the succeeding ancestors. In line of birth they were William, Thomas and Thomas. The lastnamed, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Boston, Mass., October 17, 1753, and there resided until his removal to Canaan, N. Y. In 1786, he went to Broome County, becoming one of its early settlers. He purchased a tract of timber land, and in that county made his home until his death. He married Esther Patterson, who was born in New York, January 10, 1756, and died on the old homestead in Maine Township.

The father of our subject, Henry Marean, was born in Columbia County, N. Y., November 21, 1777 and was reared in Broome County, where he married Chloe Delano, a native of Kent, Conn., and a daughter of Aaron Kent Delano, who was born in Tolland, Conn., November 13, 1756. His father, Sylvanius Delano, was born May 17, 1720, and was a descendant of Philip Delanoye, a native of Leyden, Holland, who came to America in the ship "Fortune," in 1621, and landed at Plymouth. He married Esther Duesbury, December 19, 1631, and died in 1651, at the age of seventy-nine years. Aaron Delano wedded Anna Slosson, who was born in Kent, Conn., in December, 1761. He spent his entire life in the Nutmeg State, and after his death his widow went to New York, spending her last days with the parents of our subject. Henry Marean and his wife began their domestic life upon a farm in the town of Maine, in a little log cabin, which in 1825 was replaced by a frame residence, in which Marvin was born, and which is now the property of his brother. The death of the father there occurred in 1855, and the mother was called to her final rest in 1858.

Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth on the old homestead, and after his marriage operated the farm for two years. In 1851, he wedded Olive Howard, who was born in the town of Union, Broome County, N.Y. Her grandfather, Nathan Howard, was born and reared in Connecticut, and when a young man went to New York, becoming one of the early settlers of Broome County. He married Clarissa Pomeroy, and their son, Nathan Howard, who was born in Broome County, September 11, 1805, became the father of Mrs. Marean. He learned the trade of a miller, which he followed for many years in the East. In 1869, he came to Belvidere, where his death occurred, March 7, 1873. He had wedded Roxie Councilman, who was born in Broome County, Sepember 4, 1809, and was a daughter of Philip and Betsy (Bundy) Councilman. Her death occurred in Belvidere, on the 2d of July, 1882.

The year 1854 witnessed the arrival of Mr. Marean and his wife in Boone County. He purchased land in Flora Township, upon which was a stone quarry that he operated for two years. He then successfully engaged in farming until 1868, when he sold his land and came to Belvidere, where he has since resided. He is a prominent and influential citizen of the community, who for seven years served as Notary Public, for eight years was Justice of the Peace of Flora Township, and for the past eleven years has held that office in Belvidere. In politics, he was first a Whig, but since the organization of the Republican party he has been one of its stalwart supporters, and has served as Chairman of the County Central Committee. He takes a deep interest in political affairs, doing all in his power for the upbuilding of the party, and is a well-informed man, both on political questions and otherwise.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcan have two children: Willie Marvin married Alice Wood, and they have three children, Llewellyn, Blanche and Olive; Harry, who was joined in wedlock with Hattie Fay, has a little son named Hollis.

OHN A. STENVALL. For over twenty years, Mr. Stenvall has been connected with the business interests of Rockford and during that time his reputation as an honorable, upright citizen and business man has remained untarnished. At the present time, he is connected with the Trahern Pump Works, and is one of the foremost men representing that concern. He has been a resident of this prosperous city since 1869 and is now pleasantly located at No. 709 South Third Street.

Claiming Sweden as his native land, his birth occurred in Wester Gottenburg on the 19th of October, 1851, and he was early trained to the duties of the farm. His father, John Anderson, passed his entire life in Sweden, where he tilled the soil until he received his final summons, when sixty years of age. He was a peaceful citizen and was a prominent member and worker in the State Church. The mother, left a widow, came with our subject to the United States and settled with him in Rockford, whither two sons-in-law had previonsly located. She died in this city in 1888, when seventy-four years of age. A kind wife and mother, a good neighbor and exemplary member of the Lutheran Church, she has gone to her reward. Her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Segar, and a brother, John P. Anderson, who is a tinner, are residents of Rockford, and another daughter, Mrs. Peter Anderson, is still a resident of Sweden.

John Stenvall selected as his companion in life Miss Helmena Holmquist, a native of Skorbes Lan,

D. E. Moulson

Sweden, born March 10, 1855, and their nuptials were celebrated in Rockford. The fruits of this union are Hilma L., Anna O., Elmer W., Oscar T. and Etna C., all at home. Mr. Stenvall is a Republican in his political views, and he and his wife hold membership in the First Lutheran Church, of which he has been Deacon for the past nine years.

The parents of Mrs. Stenvall, Peter and Carry (Johnson) Holmquist, are now residing in Rockford, and are in comfortable circumstances. They have been residents since 1868, in which year they came to the United States. Both are members of the First Lutheran Church. They were the parents of three children, but only Mrs. Stenvall is now living, the two brothers, Gus and John. both dying, the former after his marriage and after he became the father of one child, Frank A., and the latter when a young man.

RS. PAMELIA MOULTON, who resides in Belvidere, was born in Ascot, Canada, October 28, 1832. Her father, Cephas Gardner, was born in the town of Wentworth, N. II., October 9, 1800, and was a son of John Gardner, a native of Worcester County, Mass. The latter married Dolly, daughter of Ephraim Willard, of Sterling, Mass., removed to New Hampshire, and in 1806 went to Bennington County, Vt. His wife died in 1808, and two years later he married her sister Lois.

Cephas Gardner was eighteen years of age when he started out in life for himself. He walked to Sterling, Mass., one hundred miles, and there worked for his uncle on a farm at $8 per month. He next went to Francestown, N. H., where he spent the winter, and then returned to Sterling and apprenticed himself to his uncle, Manassah Willard, a chair manufacturer, who soon afterwards established a factory in Stanstead, Canada, Mr. Gardner being placed in charge of that business. When his term of apprenticeship had expired, he bought that factory and continued in business there until 1831, when he removed to Ascot and followed his trade at that place until 1837.

Although Mr. Gardner had been successful in business there and his social surroundings were pleasant, yet he longed to return to the United States, where he could rear his children under the republican form of government, so in 1836 he visited Boone County and purchased a claim, now included in the city of Belvidere. The next year he brought his wife and three children, and the family moved into a log cabin, where they remained until a frame house could be built. When the land came into market, he entered large tracts and was extensively engaged in farming and also carried on merchandising. He resided here until his death, which occurred January 26, 1884.

On the 25th of March, 1821, Mr. Gardner had married Pamelia Bodwell, who was born in Canada, July 12, 1806, and was a daughter of Eliphalet and Betsy Bodwell, natives of Vermont. She died May 9, 1862, leaving four children: Emeline, Jane, Pamelia and Mary A. The first-named was born March 17, 1828, and married Hon. Lucius Walker, a native of Vermont, who came to Illinois about 1838, and in 1852 went to Minnesota, becoming one of the early settlers of St. Anthony's Falls. For a while he was engaged in the drygoods business, and at the time of his death was Government agent at the Chippewa Indian reservation. He served in the Minnesota Legislature and a prominent man of that State.

Jane, the next daughter, was born in Canada, November 8, 1829, and became the wife of Hon. Robert Waterman, who was born in Herkimer County, N. Y., in 1826, and came to Illinois with his parents at the age of twelve. For a time he was employed as a clerk for his brothers, James and Charles, at Newburg, and later for Alex Neely of Belvidere. When a young man, he engaged in business on his own account. In 1850, he went to California, and returned after an absence of twenty months, locating in Wilmington, Ill., where he engaged in business for several years. In 1873, he returned to California with his family, and made his home in San Bernardino until 1887, when he went to Sacramento. Four years later, he removed to San Diego, where he resided until his death, April 12, 1891. He was elected Lieutenant-Governor of California in the fall of 1886, and held the office of Governor a few months on the death of his chief.

Pamelia, the third daughter, was four years old when she came to Illinois with her parents. She was married, November 6, 1850, to Dorwin E. Moulton, who was born in Ascot, Canada, February 17, 1822, and came to this State in 1840. He loeated in Rockford and three years later went to Shullsburgh, Wis., engaging there in merchandising until 1851, when he went to Minnesota, and located at St. Anthony's Falls. At that time, the Government mill and one dwelling were the only buildings on the west bank of the river, where the city of Minneapolis now stands. He engaged in the mercantile business and after residing there for eleven years came to Belvidere, where he again engaged in merchandising for a number of years, being associated a portion of the time with his son-in-law, J. W. Darneille. The last years of his life he lived retired at his pleasant home on East Lincoln Avenue, where he passed away January 25, 1892. He was a worthy citizen, held in high regard by all who knew him, and his portrait will be found on another page. Mr. and Mrs. Moulton had one daughter, Belle, who was born September 1, 1852, in St. Anthony's Falls, Minn., married J. W. Darneille, and died November 22, 1876, leaving one child, Mabel G., born May 27, 1874, who makes her home with her grandmother, Mrs. Moulton. Mrs. Moulton is one of the estimable ladies of this community, where she has so long made her home.

ORENZO W. KING, who is engaged in the drug business in Cherry Valley, is a member of the firm of King Bros., his partner being his brother Oscar. They established business here in 1888, and have since enjoyed a good trade, which is constantly increasing and has already assumed excellent proportions. They well deserve a liberal patronage for they are business men of straightforward and honorable principles and are industrious and enterprising.

Our subject was born in Maine, N. Y., in 1835, and is a son of Harlo and Julia (Hovey) King, both natives of the Empire State. In their family were six sons and one daughter: Leander, Jewett;

Irving, deceased; Oscar, Origen, Lorenzo, and Lucy Thankful, also deceased. The father of this family died in Maine, N. Y., in the prime of life, leaving his widow with her family to support. His property was encumbered and his creditors took it all. Oscar and Origen were the first of the family to come to Illinois, settling in Belvidere and Cherry Valley in the spring of 1853. In 1855, the mother and other children joined them, the family locating in Belvidere. Mrs. King died at the home of her son Origen in 1863, at the age of sixty-seven years.

The early life of our subject passed uneventfully until the autumn of 1861, when, at the age of twenty-six years, he enlisted in the Ninth Illinois Cavalry and in the following January went from Chicago to the front. He did service in the Southwest, in Missouri and Arkansas, but on account of physical disability was discharged after two years. Since that time, he has never fully regained his health but prior to the war was considered the most robust one of the family. Shortly after his return, he was married in Belvidere, April 29, 1863, to Nellie R. Howard, of Maine, N. Y., a daughter of Nathan and Roxie (Councilman) Howard, also natives of Maine, N. Y. Her father was a miller and died in Belvidere, March 7, 1873, at the age of sixty-two years. The mother died at the home of Mrs. King, July 2, 1882, at the age of seventy-three years. Their family numbered six sons and two daughters, the wife of our subject being the sixth in order of birth.

From 1862 until 1866, Mr. King engaged in clerking in a grocery store for L. D. Collins, after which he embarked in the grocery business for himself. His wife opened a millinery and faneygoods store and for twelve years did an excellent business in that line. Mr. King sold his stock of groceries in 1868 and in 1875 opened a drug store in Fielding, where he carried on operations until 1888, when he came to Cherry Valley and has since been engaged in business, as before stated.

Our subject and his wife have a pleasant home which has been their property since 1890. They have only one daughter, Lorena May, who was born February 29, 1884, and is now a bright little maiden of eight summers. She seems to possess considerable elocutionary and musical talent and is the light and joy of her parents' home. In politics, Mr. King is a stalwart Republican. He and his wife rank high in social circles and are held in high esteem throughout this community.

of Winnebago County, was born on the old homestead in Owen Township, September 18, 1850. His father, Patten Atwood, was born in Alexander, Grafton County, N. H., January 11, 1805, where also his father, Joseph Atwood, was born. The great-grandfather of our subject, John Atwood, was likewise a native of New England, of English ancestry. He located on a farm in Hampstead soon after he attained his majority, and resided there until his death, after having reached the advanced age of one hundred years.

The grandfather of our subject was reared in his native town, and after his marriage located in Alexander, Grafton County, where he was one of the pioneers. He secured a tract of heavily timbered Government land, which he cleared and resided upon until 1816, then started for the Territory of Michigan, making the trip overland with three horses, a wagon and buggy. The roads being very bad in Canada, Mr. Atwood's wagon broke down, and he was obliged to tarry there for a time, and as during the winter his horses died, the had no means of getting out of the country. The following April he was injured while assisting in raising a barn, and died about a year later.

Polly Powers was the maiden name of our subject's grandmother; she departed this life at the home of her son Patten, fourteen miles from St. Thomas. The father of our subject was one of a family of six children, and was about eleven years of age when his parents went to Canada, and settled at Malahide, where they resided for some years. After his marriage, he settled on a farm fourteen miles from St. Thomas, and four years later removed to Eckford, Middlesex County, where he erected a gristmill, which he operated until 1839. In the above-named year, the father of our subject, with his wife and eight children, came to Illinois, the journey being made with ox-teams, and consuming six weeks. Locating in Winnebago County, the elder Mr. Atwood secured a tract of Government land m what is now Harlem Township, and there erected a log house and made his home for a twelvemonth, when he traded for the place which is now his home on section 12, Owen Township. He is the oldest man and the oldest resident of the above-named township, and is widely and favorably known throughout the county. He is an interesting conversationalist and a great reader, being thoroughly posted on the Scriptures, making a practice of reading the Bible through each year. With his wife, he is a member of the Baptist Church, with which denomination he has been connected for many years. Mr. Atwood was residing in Canada during the Patriot War, being at that time engaged in operating a gristmill. Feeling that he would not make a good British subject, he accordingly came to the United States, and is now one of the prominent residents of Winnebago County.

February 14, 1826, Miss Anna Brooks, who was born near St. Thomas, Canada, March 20, 1808, became the wife of our subject's father. She was the daughter of William Brooks, a native of New Jersey, and died after sixty-four years of married life, July 30, 1890. She reared a family of fourteen children, all of whom are now living, the eldest being in his sixty-fifth year. They are named, respectively: Sally, Henry, Eliza, Lydia, William, Candace, Anna, Mary, Joseph, Irena, Patten, Harriet, John and Philip. One daughter, Susannah, died when three years of age.

Philip Atwood attended the common schools of his native town, and resided with his parents until attaining mature years. His marriage occurred November 27, 1873, at which time Eliza Anna Curry became his wife. She was born in the town of Mosa, Middlesex County, Canada, and was the daughter of James Curry, who, as far as is known, was also a native of that country, where he spent his entire life in farming. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Atwood was Lydia Siddle; she was a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Brooks) Siddle. She now makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Atwood. Three children have been born to our subject and his wife: Willis, Melvin, and Ethridge, deceased. They have a large circle of friends in their community, and are devoted members of the Baptist Church.

ON. ABRAM II. VAN WIE, a retired capitalist residing at No. 1307 South Main Street, in Rockford, came West in 1845 and located on timber land in the township of Lyndon, Sheboygan County, Wis. IIis resources of industry and energy were inexhaustible, but his financial capital was exceedingly limited, consisting, at the time of his arrival in Wisconsin, of $5. Among the Indians, and surrounded on every hand by the wild animals of the forests, he located and commenced to clear a farm, but six weeks later a heavy blow came to him in the death of his devoted wife.

Amid hardships innumerable and obstacles neither few nor small, he worked his way to a prominent position among the successful farmers of Sheboygan County. His fellow-citizens called him to fill various positions of trust and honor and he served as a member of the State Legislature. He was President of the County Agricultural Society, which he aided in organizing, and which under his capable management was for years one of the most successful institutions of the State. He won the first premium for the best plowing done in the county and carried off many prizes at the fairs.

In the fall of 1866, Mr. Van Wie sold his interests in Wisconsin and during the spring of the following year came to Rockford, purchasing twenty acres within the city limits, which he recently sold at a great advance on the original cost. Since he located in Winnelbago County, he has made considerable money in different ways and is now one of the most prosperous citizens of the place. He has served as President, Vice-President and Director of the Winnebago County Agricultural Society, and still takes an active interest in its welfare. He was for a time President of the Burial Case Company, of Rockford, and has interest as a stockholder in other institutions, including the watch factory.

While engaging as a farmer in Wisconsin, Mr. Van Wie was one of the most practical and successful agriculturists in the State, and since he has been a resident of Rockford he conducted for a number of years a garden, in which he raised choice vegetables. An extensive traveler and a close observer of men and things, he has gained a valuable fund of information, and recently returned from an extensive tour through the Rockies, whither he went in search of health. In his political affiliations, he is a firm Republican, and religiously, with his wife, is identified with the Second Congregational Church.

The ancestors of Mr. Van Wie were originally from Holland and resided in New York State for many years. His grandfather, Abraham Van Wie, passed his entire life in the State of New York, where he died in his old age, at the home of his son, Garrett, in Cayuga County, N. Y. The lastnamed learned the trade of a shoemaker and tanner, which he followed in Eastern New York until he was fifty years old, and then removed to Cayuga County, the same State. His wife was formerly Rebecea Haver, and was a native of the Empire State and a daughter of Abram Haver, who came of Holland-Dutch stock.

Our subject was born in 1ra Township, Cayuga County, N. Y., April 22, 1816, and was reared and educated on a farm there, making it his home until he was thirty-two years old. He then removed to Wisconsin with his wife and child, and two relatives of his wife, making the trip overland and locating in Sheboygan County, Wis., where, as above stated, his wife died some few weeks later. Her maiden name was Lydia Osborn and she was born and reared in Cayuga County, N. Y. At her decease, she left one child, Edgar A., now Secretary and Treasurer of the Rockford Electric Works. He served four years in the Rebellion and afterward married Miss Filura Brady. The second marriage of Mr. Van Wie took place in Wisconsın and united him with Miss Minerva Swarts, of New York State, who came to Rockford and died here, leaving one child, Mary J., wife of E. L. Ranney, a ranchman in Landers, Wyo., and the owner of a fine three hundred-acre farm. Near Syracuse, N. Y., Mr. Van Wie was united in marriage with Miss Emily E. Partridge, whose home was in the Empire State. She is a lady of many pleasant attributes of character and disposition, and occupies a high place in the regard of the people of Rockford. Both Mr. Van Wie and his wife are benevolent and generous, giving liberally of their means to the promotion of enterprises calculated to benefit others and uplift humanity.

HESTER C. BRIGGS. This former prominent citizen of Rockford was born in Dover, Vt., September 6, 1817, the son of Calvin and Luey (Washburne) Briggs, and died in Rockford January 24, 1892. In the city of his birth he grew to manhood, and early in life became interested in those matters that were of general interest among the people. In his youth he commenced to fight the liquor traffic, and never afterward faltered in what he regarded as his duty to mankind.

After receiving an excellent education at Dartmouth College, from which famous institution he was graduated, Mr. Briggs established and carried on the Green Mountain Freeman, a paper which did an immense good in the cause of anti-slavery, and which is still in existence, although the cause it first advocated no longer needs its active help. In every way possible, Mr. Briggs urged the abolishment of slavery, and was a conductor of an underground railroad for the freeing of slaves, having charge of one of the leading "depots" in New England. With his own money, he purchased one slave, in order that he might secure his freedom, and found great pleasure in afterward recounting his thrilling experiences in the days of slavery. Especially was he pleased to tell how the man whom he bought out of slavery rose from his degraded condition to one of honor and influence, and has for thirty years or more been one of the under clerks in the State Treasury at Boston. When old age came to him, he was as enthusiastic in the eause of temperance as in years gone by he had been foremost in the cause of anti-slavery, and he enjoyed the personal friendship of many men who have been influential factors in creating a sentiment among the people against the liquor traffic. He edited the Burlington (Vt.) Gazette for four years, and also edited other papers for some years.

In Montpelier, Vt., Mr. Briggs was married to Miss Emcline M. Peck, an estimable woman who during their long married life was the devoted companion and cheerful helpmate of her husband. They became the parents of five children. James and one unnamed died in infancy, and Emma when a small child. Charles E. married Anna Loree, of Vinton, Iowa, and makes his home in Rockford, Ill.; George S. married Miss Mary Taggart, and is connected with Waverly & Co., of Rockford. Mr. and Mrs. Briggs reared an adopted daughter, Lizzie M., who died after her marriage to D. 11. Ferguson, of Rockford.

In 1853, Mr. Briggs removed from Vermont to Illinois, where he located in Rockford, and soon afterward became President of the firm of Briggs, Spafford & Penfield, bankers. He continued at the head of the private bank for ten years, until the business was merged into the Third National Bank, which is now in operation. Later, Mr. Briggs became financial manager for the company that was organized to build twenty-eight miles of the Kenosha Railroad, of which he was one of the prominent supporters through the hardships attending the financial crisis of 1857, and until the road was completed in 1859.

For some years afterward, Mr. Briggs was engaged very extensively as a real-estate dealer, and was the owner of eight improved farms in the vicinity of Rockford, besides much valuable city property. In his business affairs he had times of depression and also of prosperity, but never lost courage, no matter what obstacles opposed his progress. In 1868, he became connected with the firm of Briggs, Mead & Skinner, dealers in agricultural implements, and continued in that capacity for several years, the business being conducted under the name of the Briggs, Enoch & Skinner Manufacturing Company, and after Mr. Skinner's death the firm was Briggs & Enoch until 1880, when it was organized as a stock company, under the name of the Rockford Plow Company. Mr. Briggs sold out his interest in 1886, and afterward devoted his attention to the insurance business, representing a number of the leading companies.

Mr. Briggs was a Republican in politics and a strong temperance man both in example and precept. He had firm convictions and the courage to stand true to them, even under great opposition and bitter enmity. His estimable wife, who survives him, has a host of friends in the community, and is of such hospitable nature as to win the esteem of all whom she entertains beneath her roof.

OHN RALSTON, who is engaged in general farming on section 25, Harlem Township, Winnebago County, is of Scottish birth. He was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland. in October, 1828, and there his grandfather, John Ralston, spent his entire life. The father of our subject, Gavin Ralston, was born in the same county, and learned the trade of a tailor, but devoted the greater part of his time to farming. At length he determined to try his fortune in America, and sailed from Greenwich in the spring of 1841, landing at New York after a voyage of seven weeks. He came directly to Illinois, locating in Boone County, where he obtained Government land, located in what is now Caledonia Township. There was much land to be obtained at $1.25 per acre, but as his means were very limited, he could only rent a farm. However, he was very industrious, and with the aid of his sons, in the course of time he was enabled to enter a tract of Government land and begin farming for himself. He erected a log cabin which the family occupied some years, but it was afterward replaced by a more modern and commodious residence. He also made other good improvements and at the time of his death owned a fine farm. His wife, whose maiden name was Jane Montgomery, was also a native of Argyleshire, and, like her husband, died on the old homestead in Boone County. They were the parents of six children, who grew to mature years, all sons: Robert, John, Gavin, David. Alexander and William.

The subject of this sketch was a lad of thirteen summers when, with his parents, he left the old home in Scotland and crossed the broad Atlantic to America. He was reared to manhood in Boone County, amid the wild scenes of frontier life, and lessons of industry and economy were instilled into his mind when a youth. At a very early age, he began aiding his father in the arduous task of developing a farm, and the other sons did likewise, so that the family prospered, and as soon as the first farm was paid for, the father purchased other land and subsequently divided with his sons. Mr. Ralston obtained his share of the land, so that at the time of his marriage he had a home to which to bring his bride. He now owns and occupies a good farm on section 25, Harlem Township, where well-tilled fields and all the necessary improvements attest the fact that the owner is a man of thrift and enterprise.

In June, 1858, Mr. Ralston was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Miss Jane, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Andrews) Ralston. The lady is a native of Argyleshire, Scotland, and by her marriage has become the mother of four children: Gavin, William, John and Elizabeth. The parents and family are all members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church. The Ralston household is the abode of hospitality and its representatives rank high in social circles in this community. In his business career, Mr. Ralston has met with excellent success; such as comes to an energetic and industrious man, and is now numbered among the substantial farmers of Winnebago County.

ANIEL S. RICHARDS, who is one of the pioneers of Winnebago County of 1838, is a native of Livingston County, N. Y., his natal day being November 21, 1844. Our subject is the son of Daniel and Clara (Luch) Richards, natives of Litchfield, Conn. His grandfather, Daniel Richards, hailed from England, and, on coming to the United States when a young man, located in Connecticut, where he was married and reared a family of three sons and two daughters. He was a patriot in the Revolutionary War, holding the rank of a commissioned officer.

The father of our subject commanded a company of militiamen just at the close of the War of 1812, but did not participate in any active engagement. He removed from Connecticut to Rochester, N. Y., but soon thereafter settled near Lima, on a farm which is included in the present site of that city, and on which is located the Lima Seminary. He lived to attain the age of sixty-six years, and was preceded to the better land by his wife. They were the parents of nine children, and Mr. Richards by his union with his second wife, Mrs. Hannah Chapman, became the father of three children.

Our subject was three years of age at the death of his mother, and, being reared on the home farm, was given a good education in the district schools which he attended until reaching his sixteenth year. In the town of Wethersfield, Wyoming County, he was married to Matilda Tyler, who died within six months after her marriage. Mr. Richards then disposed of his property, and, coming to Illinois, made claim to a tract of land on Sugar River Bottoms, near Durand. Later, returning to New York, he was married to Charlotte Warren, and in 1841 again took up his abode in the Prairie State, making his home on the claim which he had entered in 1838. This he improved and resided upon for five years, when he removed to another farm, and later, in company with his brother, Benjamin F., became interested in the manufacture of lime. This connection lasted until 1855, when our subject removed from Pecatonica. where he bought a small tract of land, and continued in the lime business for the two following years. At the end of that time, he came to Durand and engaged in farming, at the same time operating a threshing-machine in the fall of each year, which he owned. Mr. Richards has since resided in Wyoming County, with the exception of the time spent with his children in Iowa.

To our subject and his wife have been born six children, viz.: Jane, Janet, Belle, Dora, Minnie, and Lonisa. In his political relations, he was first a Democrat, then a Free Soiler, next a Republican, and is now a Prohibitionist. He has never been the incumbent of any public office, preferring to give his time to his private interests, and even when elected Justice of the Peace, refused to qualify. In religious matters, he is a member of the United Brethren Church, with which body he became connected in 1844, and has since acted as a local preacher. He is a well-preserved old gentleman, and bears the good-will and respect of all who know him.

AVID CARLSON. A representative local enterprise is that of Carlson & Nygren, contractors, earpenters and builders of Rockford, where the firm is doing a very successful business. Our subject was originally from Kalmar Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, born December 15, 1856, and as he grew to manhood learned his trade in his native country. While still single, he came to the States and very soon located in Rockford, where he has won an enviable reputation as a contractor and builder. He has erected many of the finest buildings in Rockford, and is a skillful and reliable workman, He has a new residence at No. 709 Second Avenue. which is one of the many nice Swedish homes in the city, and although only a resident of Rockford since 1880, he has many warm friends. For about three years after coming to Rockford, Mr. Carlson was in the furniture factory, and later embarked in the carpenter and contracting business.

He was married in Rockford to Miss Mary A. Benson, also a native of Sweden, born February 16, 1866, and who was two years of age when she was brought by her parents to the United States. The fruits of this union are two children, Elsie V. and Roland D. Mr. and Mrs. Carlson are energetic, enterprising young people and are well liked in the community. Both are members of the Swedish Zion Lutheran Church and he is a Trustee of the same. In politics, he is identified with the Republican party. He is a stockholder and Director in the Excelsor Furniture Company and a stockholder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Carlson's father, Carl Johnson, and his stepmother, Ann (Danielson) Johnson, now reside in Kalmar Lan, Sweden, and are well along in years. The father is a carpenter and operates a sawmill in his native country. Our subject's mother died when comparatively a young woman. She was the mother of seven children, of whom our subject is fourth in order of birth. All are members of the Lutheran Swedish Church.

Mrs. Carlson's parents, Jonas and Johanna (Peterson) Benson, came to this country in 1868, and settled in Rockford, where they have a comfortable home on Sixth Street. The father is sixty-six years of age and the mother is sixty-seven. The former is a wood mechanic and is now with the Skandia Plow Company. Both are members of the Zion Lutheran Churc's. Mrs. Carlson is the only child born of his union, although her mother, by a former marriage, had three children.

HLLIAM F. ACKERLY (deceased). New York State has given to Winnebago County, III., many estimable eitizens, but she has contributed none more highly respected, or, for conscientious discharge of duty in every relation of life, more worthy of respect and esteem than was the subject of this sketch. He was born in Delaware County, N. Y., on the 12th of September 1832, and his father, Jonathan Ackerly, was also a native of that county, and a millwright by trade. The elder Mr. Ackerly was married in Delaware County to Miss Charlotte Freeman but subsequently removed to Allegany County, N. The father was a skilled mechanic and a very successful business man. In the spring of 1856, he came to Winnebago County and engaged in the lumber business in Cherry Valley. Later he sold out and purchased two hundred and sixty-two acres of land in Guilford Township, and this he carried on in connection with his business as a contractor and builder. He was possessed of excellent business acumen, was well and favorably known all over the county, and his death, which occurred on the 22d of May, 1890, was the occasion of universal sorrow. He selected as his companion in life Miss Adaline M. Alexander, a native of Maryland Township, Delaware County, N. Y., and their nuptials were celebrated in Cattaraugus County of that State. Mrs. Ackerly was the daughter of Nelson and Polly (Bacon) Alexander, the father a native of New Hampshire and the mother of Connecticut. The father was of Scotch descent. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Alexander resided in Maryland for some time but finally moved to Cattaraugus County, N. Y., where Mr. Alexander, in connection with farming, followed the blacksmith . trade. He died April 5, 1892, in his eighty-fifth year. young mechanic, resides with his mother. Mr. Ackerly, the father of these children, was a Master Mason of Cherry Valley Lodge No. 173 and was a Knight Templar of Rockford Lodge No. 17. He took a deep interest in Masonic affairs and was buried with those honors.

ETER J. LILJEHOLM, a successful carver, designer and draughtsman, in the employ of the Rockford Folding Bed Company, of Rockford, is connected with this flourishing enterprise, and also with the Union Furniture Company, as stockholder and Director. He was born in Orebro City, Sweden, on the 10th of April, 1845. His father, John Johnson, spent his entire life in that land, where he followed the occupations of farming and cabinet-making, being a skilled mechanic. He passed away at the age of sixty years. His wife and all the children, with the exception of our subject, are still residents of Sweden. Mrs. Johnson is now more than fourscore years of age, and is a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, to which her husband also belonged.

Mr. Liljeholm, whose name heads this record, and whose portrait is shown on the opposite page, is the only member of his father's family who has become a permanent resident of the United States. The educational advantages which he received were those of the common schools. In his native city he was reared to manhood, and served an apprenticeship to the trade of cabinet-making, which he has followed more or less throughout his entire life. Since coming to this country, he has also learned the trade of designing. It was in 1870 that he bade good-bye to his old home and erossed the Atlantic. On board the same vessel on which he sailed was Miss Anna Lindstrom, who was born and reared in the same locality as our subject. Soon after their arrival in this county, they were married in Chicago, and the following year they became residents of this city.

Mrs. Lifjeholm is also the only one of her family residing in America. Her father, Eric Johnson, was a successful farmer of Sweden, where he died some years ago. His wife is also deceased, but the children are still living in the old home, and all are members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. The mother was well advanced in years when she died. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Liljcholm have been born seven children, six of whom are living: Minnie W., a young lady of about twenty sumers; Ida, a book-keeper in the employ of Gust Lindblade, a grocer of this city; Ilelma, Alice, Hattie and Wesley, who are still under the parental roof.

The parents hold membership with the Swedish Methodist Church, in which Mr. Liljeholm has served as Trustee, and in its upbuilding and advancement they take an active interest. He is also a warm advocate of temperance principles, and votes with the Prohibition party. His life has been well and worthily spent, and he has thereby gained the respect of all with whom he has come in contact. Since locating in this city, in 1871, he has been connected with its furniture interests, and has done some very fine work as a cabinetnet maker and designer, acquiring a competence through his industry and good judgment.

ATE L. COLBY. The Pecatonica News is a bright and newsy weekly, and has aided in no small way in promoting the interests of the village where it is published. It is a successful representative of the people of the place where it is located, and its value in the community cannot be estimated. Tireless in its defense of the right, and fearless in its denunciation of the evils of the age, it has won an enviable reputation among the best people of the county, and its popularity is proved by a constantly increasing subscription list.

The editor and publisher of this paper was born in Beloit, Wis., December 20, 1854, the son of Nathan D. and Sybil W. (Pearse) Colby. The father, who was born in Emden, Somerset County, Me., October 1, 1810, came west to Wisconsin July 12, 1817, where he followed the trade of a miller for a time, and later took contracts for moving buildings. He lived retired for some time prior to his decease, which occurred July 12, 1891. He was a brave defender of his country during times of peril; politically, was a Republican, and in the various county offices which he held was distinguished for efficiency and faithful discharge of duties. He was one of seven children born to Eben Colby, who was born and married in and was a life-long resident of Maine.

The mother of our subject, known in maidenhood as Sybil W. Pease, was born in South Norridgewock, Mc., September 11, 1818, and died in Beloit, Wis., December 17, 1884. Her marriage, which was solemnized in her native place in 1814, was blessed by the birth of five children, four sons and one daughter. She was a cheerful helpmate to her husband, whom she aided in all his enterprises and cheered with her sympathy. Obliged for years after her marriage to use the strictest economy in regulating the household expenses, it was in no small degree due to her frugality and management that prosperity afterward rewarded their efforts.

In his youth our subject learned the trade of a printer in a printing establishment at Beloit, Wis, and gained a good education in the schools of his native city. In 1870, he went to Milwaukee, where he became a compositor in the office of the Sentinel, but the following year removed to Davis, Ill., and took charge of a newspaper there. A few months after locating there, he purchased and removed the plant to Pecatonica, and in partnership with his brother, William A., established the News. In 1880, he bought his brother's interest, and has since conducted the paper with marked success.

September 15, 1880, Mr. Colby was married at Freeport, 111., to Miss Ella M. Smith, who was born in Stephenson County, this State, the daughter of Gilbert F. and Helen M. (Shaw) Smith. They are the parents of three children, namely: Gilbert F., born July 27, 1881; Claude A., July 19, 1883 and Smith W., May 15, 1887. The religious home of the family is in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Colby is a member of the Official Board. Politically, he is a Republican and has filled various positions of trust, serving as Township Clerk for five years, member of the Board of Education and President of the Republican Club.

In his social connections, he is identified with the A. W. Rawson Lodge, F. & A. M.; the Eureka Camp, M. W. A., Monitor Garrison No. 19, Knights of the Globe, and was formerly connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is chief of the Fire Department, President of the Electric Light plant, and otherwise identified with one of the most progressive measures for the upbuilding of the community.

W. REYNOLDS is numbered among the early settlers of Rockford. He first came to this city in 1840, but did not make a permanent location until ten years later. For the past forty-two years he has been one of the well-known citizens of Winnebago County. He claims New York as the State of his nativity and there resided until 1835, when, with his parents, he became a resident of Michigan. His educational advantages were limited, but nature had endowed him with a fund of common sense, and by experience and observation he has made up for the lack of those privileges of schooling which many receive. His home for six years was in La Fayette, Wis., where he went in 1817, and where he served as Sheriff. In 1840, he came to Illinois and was employed in the Galena mines until 1850, when he located permanently in Rockford.

The father of our subject, James Reynolds, as before stated, brought his family to the West in 1835. He was born near Elmira, N. Y., and was descended from a good New England family. He made farming his life work and was successful in his undertakings. In 1846, he left Wisconsin and settled in Dixon, Lee County, Ill., where both he and his wife spent their remaining days. The death of Mr. Reynolds occurred at the age of seventy-six years, and his wife passed away at the age of three-score years and ten.

The subject of this sketch was married in Mineral Point, Wis., to Miss Esther Grover, a native of Cattaraugus County, N. Y., who, when a maiden of seventeen summers, came to Illinois, and for a short time resided in Winnebago County. She then went to the home of her sister in Mineral Point, Wis., where she was afterward married. She has been a true and faithful helpmate to her husband, and their united efforts and labors have brought them a handsome competence. They now have one of the finest homes on North Court Street, and over this palatial residence Mrs. Reynolds presides as a kind hostess, ever ready to welcome her friends, who are many. In the family are two children.

On coming to Rockford, Mr. Reynolds established a livery stable and became a buyer and shipper of horses. His purchases were very large, and he shipped extensively to the South and Southwest, especially during the war. He ran a large livery stable from 1850 until 1867, thus acquiring a handsome competence, and while engaged in that business became acquainted with the leading horsemen of the country, many of whom he yet numbers among his warm friends. He is now practically living a retired life, but is yet a stockholder in many of the local enterprises of the city and is a stockholder and Director in the Second National Bank. He has taken an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of Rockford and its upbuilding and has been identified with its history. His life has been a successful one, and as the result of his industry and perseverance he has acquired considerable wealth. In politics, he has long been a Democrat but has never been an office-seeker. His acquaintance throughout the community is extensive and embraces the best people.

ENRY P. KIMBALL. From the date of his arrival in Rockford, in June, 1852, until his death, May 10, 1889, Mr. Kimball was closely identified with the progress of this city in various ways and was especially prominent as a horticulturist, having engaged in that occupation for seventeen years. He was Secretary of the County Agricultural Society, and contributed his ablest efforts to promote its interests, as well as the good of his fellow-citizens along social, educational and philanthropic lines.

The same fearless independence which ever characterized Mr. Kimball was displayed in his political preferences. He was in no sense of that word an office-seeker and at one time voted with the Republicans. He afterwards voted for Horace Greeley and became a Democrat. He was an upright, energetic man, a kind neighbor, an influential citizen, and true in every relation of life. Mr. Kimball died May 10, 1889, when sixty years of age.

Although a native of New Hampshire, Mr. Kimball was reared and educated in Maine and was a student in Colby University, of Maine, later graduating from Rochester (N. Y.) University. After completing his education, he became a teacher and was thus engaged in Maine for several years, meeting with success in that profession. In his young manhood he removed to the West, and in Winnebago County was married to Miss Ellen Haskell, a native of Massachusetts, who was quite young when her parents came to Illinois and located in Alton. She was nine years old when they settled in Rockford in 1838, and since that time she has made her home in this city. There are few citizens of Rockford who are not acquainted with her personally, or at least familiar with her name, for her long life here has made her well known, and her kindness of heart has won for her the respect of all.

The father of Mrs. Kimball was Dr. George Haskell, one of the first physicians of Rockford and a leader in every measure which was calculated for the benefit of the place. On account of ill health, he was compelled to relinquish his practice a few years after he came to this city, and afterward led an out-of-door life as much as possible. He was employed in different ways but devoted much of his time to horticulture and was a loving student of nature. His sympathy was given in behalf of progress and advancement, and his life was one of uprightness and honor.

In his native State, Dr. Haskell was married to Miss Eunice Edwards, who was born and reared in Acton, Mass., not far from the old town of Concord. She labored to assist her husband, whose faithful helpmate she remained until his death, since which time she has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Kimball. She has attained to the age of eighty-eight (1892) years, but retains full possession of her mental faculties and is hale and hearty. Religiously, she is a member of the Christian Union Church of this city.

The beautiful home of Mrs. Kimball, where she resides with her mother and son, is located at No. 305 Fisher Avenue and, both within and without, is one of the most attractive abodes in the city. Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Kimball has assumed charge of his business affairs, which she conducts with judgment and success. She is the mother of three sons, namely: Dr. Frank II., of whom see biography elsewhere in this volume; Willis M., Alderman representing the Fourth Ward and Teller in the Second National Bank, and Carl C., who is still with his mother and is highly educated. Willis married Miss Isa Mears and resides in a beautiful place at No. 307 Fisher Avenue.

ORENZO L. BUNT, D. S., is engaged in the practice of dentistry on East State Street in Rockford, and has prosecuted his profession in this city since the spring of 1877. He was associated with Dr. E. J. Johnson, one of the oldest dentists of the city, until October, 1879, when he opened an office of his own at No. 418 East State His rooms are pleasant, attractive and well arranged, and his work is satisfactory, as is proven by the liberal patronage he receives. He is a close student of his profession and keeps abreast with all its discoveries and improvements.

Dr. Bunt was born in the town of Wright, Schoharie County, N. Y., April 7, 1851, and is a son of George Bunt, who was born in the same county, of German parentage. He grew to manhood upon a farm and followed that occupation until he came to Illinois in 1853, when our subject was only two years old. He then turned his attention to the carpenter's trade, at which he worked until his death in Rockford, in 1887, at the age of sixty-five years. He was of a quiet and retiring disposition, but a worthy citizen and upright man who had many friends throughout the community. His widow is still living and makes her home with the Doctor. Her maiden name was Sarah A. Nashold, and she too was born in Schoharic County, of German lineage. She is a member of the Methodist Church, to which Mr. Bunt also belonged. They were the parents of three children: Anson, a packer and shipper for the John Barnes Manufacturing Company, of this city. He married Lizzic Carpenter, and they have one child. Frank. The sister, Delta, is the wife of W. A. McCaenmond, a prominent portrait painter of Chicago, by whom she has one son. Milford.

Our subject is the eldest of the three children. Almost his entire life has been spent in this city, where he was reared to manhood and acquired his primary education. He afterward entered the Michigan State University at Ann Arbor in the fall of 1873, completing his studies in 1874. He fitted himself for the practice of his chosen profession with Dr. M. H. Knapp, of Adrian, Mich., now a prominent dentist of Jackson, that State. He then came to Rockford and opened an office as before stated.

Dr. Bunt was married in this city to Miss Minnie Johnson, a native of Elmira, N. Y., who was reared by Dr. E. J. Johnson, of Rockford. She is a lady of many excellencies of character, held in high esteem by all who know her. They have two children: C. Leta, a daughter of twelve summers, and George L., a lad of four years.

The Doctor and his wife are members of the Centennial Methodist Church. They have a pleasant home at No. 206 North Fifth Street and are held in high regard by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The Doctor is a member of Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M.; Winnebago Chapter No. 21, R. A. M.: Adrian Commandery No. 21, K. T., and Oriental Consistory No. 1, of Chicago. Both he and his wife are past officers of the Eastern Star Order, and he is a past officer in Social Lodge No. 110, L.O.O.F.; Rockford Encampment No. 41; Eureka Canton, No. 6; Patriarch Militant and Anchor Rebecca Degree Lodge, No. 81. He is also a member and has been presiding officer of the Ancient Order of United Workmen; is a past officer of the Knights of Honor, past officer of the Sons of America, and is a charter member of the first order in this State, Camp Washington No. 61. He has taken much interest in civic societies and is an honored member in the various organizations to which he belongs. He also holds membership with the Dental Association of Northern Illinois.

ILLIAM R. MILLARD. This worthy and honorable gentleman, who is engaged in general farming on section 35, Le Roy Township, Boone County, makes a specialty of the dairy business. He was born in Columbia County, Pa., July 1, 1813, and is a son of Reese Millard, a native of Berks County, Pa. The father was a farmer, and removed to Columbia County when a youth with his parents.

The grandfather of our subject, Joseph Millard, was a miller by trade, and superintended the operations of his father's gristmill near Reading, Pa., where he was born. He was a Quaker, and never went beyond the boundaries of the Keystone State. The maiden name of his wife was Phoebe John, and to them were born a family of two sons and one daughter. The grandmother died when about sixty years of age, but her husband lived to attain his ninetieth year.

Reese Millard was married to Catherine, daughter of William Rittenhouse, who was a native of the same place where his birth occurred. To them were granted a family of seven children, all of whom, with one exception, grew to mature years, namely: William R., our subject; Joseph P, who died in March, 1889, in Kalamazoo, Mich., when about seventy-four years of age; Phebe (second), Anna R., Rebecca and Catherine. Phebe, the firstborn, died in her third year.

The original of this sketch and of the portrait found on the opposite page was reared on a farm, and started out to do for himself when twenty years of age. In 1832, he came overland to Michigan, but on the death of his father he returned home and remained until 1838. In the meantime, he had married Mary Moore, a native of Luzerne County, Pa., and in the fall of 1838 the young couple came to Illinois, stopping in Dixon until the spring of 1841. On locating in this county, Mr. Millard purchased eighty acres of Government land, and within a few years was able to add to his estate until he had two hundred and forty acres. He comes of a very wealthy family, and has made a success of his calling as an agriculturist.

To Mr. and Mrs. Millard were born six children, all of whom are living, namely: Frances Catherine, now Mrs. Philip Stall, of Le Roy; Doreas Elizabeth, who married D. H. Jones; Susan, the wife of Thomas Robins, a farmer in Le Roy; Clarinda R., Mrs. Hiram Day, of Caledonia; Emmor K., who married Hattie Livermore, of New York, and Mary M., Mrs. C. B. Winkapaugh. The wife and mother departed this life March 2, 1891, when nearly eighty-four years of age.

Our subject has served his fellow-citizens in many positions of trust and responsibility, and is well and favorably known throughout his community. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which his wife also belonged, and in which body they were active workers. In politics, he always votes with the Republican party. He visited his old home in Pennsylvania in the fall of 1891, spending some weeks with his two surviving sisters. He is one of the leading agriculturists of Boone County, a public-spirited and enterprising man, and warmly interested in the movement of public affairs and the progress of all good measures.

IIRISTIAN STIGMAN owns and operates one hundred and twenty-seven acres of land in Cherry Valley Township and is numbered among the early settlers of Winnebago County. He came here in the spring of 1852, and has since been identified with its history, has aided in its development and has watched with interest its growth and progress. The pioneers certainly deserve much credit and as one of them our subject should be mentioned in this volume.

Mr. Stigman was a native of Germany. He was born about ninety miles from Bremen in 1828, and is a son of Henry and Christina (Colemeyer) Stigman. His mother died when he was but an infant and his father died during his childhood. Our subject had but one brother and he died young. Christian then went to live with a maternal uncle and in the usual manner of farmer lads was reared to manhood. On attaining his majority, in accordance with the laws of the country, he entered the service, and for three years was in the army, serving as a private. The year succeeding his dismissal was spent in his native land, after which he emigrated to America, in the spring of 1852. He was accompanied by his wife and daughter, having been married at the age of twenty-one to Miss Caroline Kortie. After locating in this county, Mr. Stigman worked upon the construction of a railroad at $1.00 per day. Like most of his countrymen, he came to America empty-handed and has since acquired all of his property.

In 1854, cholera was epidemic and his wife fell a victim to the terrible scourge. She, with four others of the Kortie family, died within two weeks. Mr. Stigman was also attacked and his life was despaired of, but through good nursing and a strong constitution he recovered. He has since been a second time married, this union being with Christiana Possmeyer, of Germany, daughter of Henry and Augusta (Brown) Possmeyer. Her parents spent their entire lives in the Fatherland, the former dying in 1866, at the age of sixty-one, and the mother dying in 1867, at the same age. Their family numbered two sons and three daughters, but only two are now living: the wife of our subject, and William, who is living in Germany at the age of fifty-eight years. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Stigman have been born eight children, four sons and four daughters, but two are now deceased: Frank, who died in 1871 at the age of thirteen years, and Louis, who died in 1880 at the age of two and a half. The living are Anna : Julia, wife of Fred Hay, of Rockford : Lottie, Edward, Charles and Lillie.

Some time after locating in this county, Mr. Stigman in company with his two brothers-in-law purchased ninety acres of land and his third formed the nucleus of his present good farm of one hundred and twenty-seven acres. This land was mostly covered with timber which he himself cleared away, and then developed rich and fertile fields which now yield to him a good income. He has been very successful in his labors and the able assistance of his estimable wife has also been an important factor in his success. They are Lutherans in religious belief, and Mr. Stigman generally votes with the Republican party but has never taken an active part in political affairs.

OHN CLARK, who follows general farming on section 34, Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, first opened his eyes to the light of day in Scotland, in 1828. He is one of a family of eight sons and three daughters, the parents being Samuel and Margaret (Templeton) Clark. His father followed farming upon rented land and died in Scotland at the age of seventy-eight years, his wife passing away at the age of sixty-five years.

Under the parental roof our subject was reared to manhood, no event of special importance occurring during his childhood days. He came to this country in August, 1851, when twenty-three years of age, and in the vicinity of Cincinnati, Ohio, followed the occupation of farming upon rented land for some twenty years. As a companion and a helpmate on life's journey, he chose Miss Catherine Allison, a native of Scotland, and a daughter of James and Janet (Greenlees) 'Allison, Their union was celebrated in August, 1855, and has been blessed with a family of ten children, two sons and eight daughters: James; Margaret, wife of Isaac Turrell, Principal of one of the schools of Cincinnati, Ohio; Samuel; Jessie, wife of Hugh McEvoy, of Dallas, Tex.; Catherine, who is engaged in teaching in Dallas; Flora, wife of Abram Davis, a farmer; Agnes, Mary, Mattie and Ella. The family circle still remains unbroken, although some have left the parental roof, and there are also sixteen grandchildren. Of the two sons, one is a farmer in McPherson County, Kan., and the other is engaged in the real-estate business in Canton, Kan.

It was in the autumn of 1871 that Mr. Clark removed with his family to Illinois, coming through Chicago at the time the great fire was raging in that city. He settled in Winnebago County, purchasing a farm of one hundred and twenty acres at $24 per acre, and to this he has since added until now two hundred acres of valuable land pay tribute to his care and cultivation. He has laid eight hundred rods of tiling upon the place, has erected a good residence and large barns and is recognized as one of the successful agriculturists of this county. He deserves all the more eredit in that his prosperity is due entirely to his own efforts. In politics, he is a Democrat, and himself and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. During the twenty years of their residence in this county they have made many friends and are well and favorably known in this community.

RANCIS RUTGER was born in the Palatinate of Bavaria, Germany, in 1829. After receiving a common-school education, he chose teaching as his profession, and prepared himself for the work at Spiers on the Rhine. The troubles of 1848-49, in which he took part on the liberal side, compelled him to seek a home in another country, and he came to America in 1849. When the great Rebellion broke out, he enlisted in the Twelfth Illinois Infantry as a private in Company K. With his regiment he took part in the battle and siege of Ft. Donelson, and the battle of Shiloh, where he was wounded. His first promotion was to Second Lieutenant, and in the spring of 1863 he was promoted to be First Lieutenant for meritorious services rendered at Ft. Donelson and Pittsburg Landing.

In January, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted, and its members returned to their homes to recruit. In March of the same year, Lient. Rutger was detailed as Acting Adjutant of the regiment, which duties he performed at the opening of the Georgia campaign, taking part in all the engagements in which the Second Brigade and Second Division (to which the Twelfth belonged) participated. Among the number were the battles of Snake Creek Valley, Resaea, Altoona, Kenesaw Mountain, Nickajack Creek, Atlanta, and the heroic defense of Altoona Pass. While the regiment was stationed at Rome, Ga., in October, 1864, Licut. Rutger was honorably mustered out, and returned to his home in Belvidere in very poor health. His death occurred April 15, 1878.

The lady to whom our subject was married in 1871 was Miss Mary Case, a niece of John Case, This gentleman settled in Boone County as early as 1846, having been a resident of Skancateles. N. Y., until the Western fever seized him. He sold his effects, with the exception of a few articles, which he put within a large closed coach, and made the journey to Chicago in that vehicle, to which he hitched a fine span of horses. Upon reaching Chicago, he started out in search of a desirable location, and, entering Boone County just across the De Kalb County line, in the town of Spring, stopped at a log house which some "squatter" claimed. He bought his interest in the place, then returned to Chicago, where he made a purchase of Government land. Afterward he made several trips for the purpose of entering land, the deeds to which were mostly given under the administration of James K. Polk.

Upon the farm where he first located, John Case made his home until 1867, when he moved into a house he had purchased in Gilman's Addition to Belvidere. In January, 1868, he passed from earth at the age of eighty-four years, and his remains were laid to rest in the pleasant cemetery at Blood's Point, where he had expressed a desire to be buried. He was one of four brothers, the others being William, Ezekiel and Seth . The lastnamed, who was the father of Mrs. Rutger, was born in Massachusetts in 1800, and was of English descent. In 1834, with his family, he removed from the Bay State to Ohio, where he purchased a tract of timber land two miles from Elyria, Lorain County. Twelve years later, he went to Geauga County, and purchased land in Huntsburg, where he resided until 1848. At that time he removed to Michigan, where he bought a comfortable home in Clinton, Lenawee County. There he was bereaved by the death of his wife (whose maiden name was Mary Miller), and afterward spent his time in visiting his children, his death occurring at the home of Mrs. Rutger.

At the time of the removal to Ohio, Mrs. Rutger was quite young, and her early education was gained in the schools of Lorain County. Later, she attended the village school at Clinton, Mich., and subsequently was a student in the Westfield (Mass.) Academy. After completing her education, she began to teach, and was thus engaged until coming to Boone County to reside with her uncle. After his decease, she returned to Massachusetts, where she was married. She is connected with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

SAIAH HIGHBARGER is numbered among the industrious, thrifty members of the farming community of Seward Township, Winnebago County, where he has an excellent farm that is under good tillage, is provided with confortable buildings and yields a good income. Mr. Highbarger makes a specialty of breeding Short-horn cattle and has several pedigreed animals. He has been thus engaged for over twenty years and is so managing affairs that he is making a financial success of this branch of farming.

The birth of our subject took place in Shortsburg, Washington County, Md., August 10, 1835. He is the son of David and Leah Highbarger, also natives of Maryland, who emigrated to Ogle County, this State, in 1845; the father died on the old farm, and the mother, surviving him many years, passed away when eighty years of age. The maternal grandparents of our subject lived and died in Pennsylvania, while on the paternal side of the houses he is of Welsh and German descent.

He of whom we write when twenty-one years of age left the old home and engaged to break prairie by the month. Establishing a home of his own, he was married, in February, 1855, to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Henry and Mary Rhinehart, natives of the Keystone State, but who came hither from Maryland in 1816. Mr. Rhinehart was a Captain in the War of 1812 and drew a pension from the Government. His father, Henry Rhinehart, departed this life in Washington County, Md. Mrs. Highbarger had two brothers who participated in the late war.

The seven children who comprise the family of our subject and his wife bear the respective names of William F., Frances M., Martha, David II., Ann E., Mary E. and LeMina. Mr. Highbarger when taking up his present farm of two hundhed acres from the Government had only $25 to pay for the property. He borrowed the balance of the money and bought soldiers' warrants, with which he was enabled to get his land at seventy-five cents per acre.

A Republican in politics, our subject cast his first vote for Zachary Taylor. With his wife, he is a member of the Presbyterian Church, in which body he has been a Trustee ever since its organization in his neighborhood. He has been successful m worldly affairs and in gaining the esteem of his fellow-men, to whom his honesty and kindliness are well known.

ETER G. BOWMAN, a shipping clerk and one of the stockholders of the Forest City Knitting Company, was born in Sweden, January 6, 1838, and is a son of Andrew Peterson, who with his family crossed the Atlantic to America in 1852. They sailed from Gottenburg on the 19th of April and landed in New York the 30th of May. They came at once to St. Charles, Ill., and there the father died at the age of fortyfive years, only a few months after his arrival. His wife afterwards married a Mr. Bowman, a Swedish gentleman, who died while in the service during the War of the Rebellion. She then married Robert Welton, who is now deceased, and at this writing makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Long, of Rockford. Although now eighty years of age she is very well preserved.

On coming to the United States, our subject settled in Kane County, Ill., where he resided for some time. He first came to Rockford in 1865, but subsequently removed to Chicago, where he engaged in the grocery business until 1885. He then returned to Rockford and for some time was connected with Mr. Munthe in the real-estate business and yet owns an interest in an addition. He is now shipping clerk for the Forest City Knitting

John Nelson

Company, with which he has been connected since its organization and is also one of the stockholders.

While residing in Chicago, Mr. Bowman was united in marriage with Miss Sophia Floren, who was born and reared in the same province in Sweden as her husband. When a young lady, she crossed the broad Atlantic to America and made her home in Chicago until after marriage. She has been a true wife and helpmate to Mr. Bowman and by her efforts has aided him materially. They have two children, a son and daughter: Robert G., an enterprising young man, employed in the works of the Nelson Knitting Company; and Anna who is still at home. The family have a pleasant home, which is the old Sylvester Scott property on the east bank of Rock River. The household is the abode of hospitality and the members of the family rank high in the social circles in which they move. Mr. Bowman may well be called a self-made man for whatever success he has achieved in life is due entirely to his own efforts. By his industry and enterprise he has worked his way upward and has acquired a good property.

OHN NELSON was one of the most prominent citizens of Winnebago County. No man ever resided in Rockford that left behind him a memory more revered than that of our subject, and this work would be incomplete without his sketch and the accompanying portrait. He was born in West Gothland, Sweden, April 5, 1830, and at a very early age became a spinning-wheel maker. His father had died when our subject was quite young. His mother was left a poor widow, but she was a woman exceedingly intelligent, and possessed of much natural ability to penetrate the deep mysteries of complicated machinery, and this trait was inherited by her son.

When twenty-two years of age, John Nelson bade good-bye to his old home, and crossed the Atlantic from Gottenburg, arriving in New York City after a voyage of six weeks. He at once came Westward, and made his first home in St. Charles, Ill. While there, he married an intelligent, pleasant and a tractive young lady who had come over in the same ship with him Their friendly acquaintance formed on the vessel ripened into love, and on the 1th of November, 1851, John Nelson and Eva Christina Peterson were married. She was born in West Gothland, Sweden, May 6, 1831, and is a sister of Mrs. Andrew Long, of this city.

Our subject came to Rockford in 1852, and for a time was a designer and pattern and model maker. He did business in connection with Mr. Ghent, and later was in partnership with A. C. Johnson and Gust Hollem in the sash and door manufacturing business. After the war, Mr. Nelson was induced to go South, and in connection with Gustaf Burgland, of Water Valley, Miss., began business at that place, but, not liking the people or the climate, he soon returned to Rockford. His active brain, during all these years, was working out the plan of one of the most intricate machines that has ever been invented, the Nelson Knitting Machine, which has entirely revolutionized the knitting of hosiery. The machinery is so complete that hose are now made at about two cents per dozen pair. Just about the time he had completed his great discovery, he was called from this life, dying April 15, 1883. His death was mourned by all who knew him, for he was not only a great inventor, but was a most worthy citizen and honorable man. His concentration of thought was such that he found it almost impossible to sleep at night, and so his constitution, never very strong, was undermined. He was a natural born mechanic. and from his early boyhood his mind was tilled with ideas that gave promise of the rich fulfillment of his mature years. His life was spent as that of a true Christian, and we feel safe in saying that no death was more deeply regretted in Rockford than that of our subject's.

Mrs. Nelson still survives her husband. She was ever a true helpmate to him and a faithful and loving wife. Since his death, with the aid of her children, she has developed a splendid business from that started by her husband, and the success of the machine is indicated by the following incident: After President Grant had made his tour around the world, he came to Rockford and visited the shops of the Nelson Knitting Company. After looking over the machinery and secing the wonderful work, he holdly declared that after all his tour of the great world, including a visit to the large cities and factories, he had never seen anything to equal this. Then picking up a pair of the hose as they dropped from the machine, he walked away.

The Nelson family once numbered seven children, but two are now deceased. Alfred, who died at the age of thirty-three years, inherited his father's genius, and invented some necessary improvements, especially that for widening the leg of the hose as it is being knitted. known as a worthy and most promising young man. He left a wife of a year, who is now living in Colorado. Fritz died in childhood; William and Oscar are represented elsewhere in this work. Fritz is associated with his brothers in many of the enterprises with which the Nelson boys are connected, and John is a promising young man, also interested in business. Anna C., who completes the family, is an intelligent and entertaining young lady residing with her mother. Nelson family has done for Rockford cannot be estimated, for they have set in motion business industries whose good effect can only be measured by time.

OHN HUTCHINS, who is now living a retired life at No. 308 North Third Street, has been a resident of Rockford since 1855. He was born on the 1sle of Man in January, 1838, and is a son of Charles Hutchins, who was also born on the 1sle of Man, as was the grandfather, Isaac Hutchins. The latter there spent his entire life as a fisherman and farmer. The former is the only surviving child of his parents. He grew to manhood on his native isle and followed the business of cabinet-making and carpentering for many years. He is now eighty-six years of age but is still hale and hearty. He is over six feet in height and portly, and the infirmities of age rest lightly upon him. His wife is eighty-four years of age. In her maidenhood she was Jane Callin, and was also born on the Isle of Man. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins are members of the Methodist Church. Their family numbered six children, one of whom died in Africa of the African fever. The others are still living.

In his native land our subject acquired a common-school education and there remained until seventeen years of age, when he determined to try his fortune in the New World. He crossed the broad Atlantic in 1855, being the first of the family to come to the United States. Making his first location in Rockford, he here served an apprenticeship to the blacksmith's trade under Mr. Jockings. for whom he afterward worked one year, and then established a smithy at No. 510 East State Street, at the head of Kishwaukee Street, After two years he removed his shop and built the large brick block on East State Street, 44x84 feet. He has been very successful in his business eareer, and in connection with his trade has become a stockholder in the Rockford Burial Case Company and also in the Rockford Watch Case Company.

In Guilford Township, Mr. Hutchins was united in marriage with Miss Hannah Black, who was born in Palermo, Canada, April 5, 1843, and there resided until eighteen years of age, when she came to Illinois, locating in Guilford Township. She is a daughter of Alex and Orpha (Smith) Black, the former a native of New Brunswick and the latter of Canada. They were married in Palermo, Canada, and afterward came to Illinois, locating on a good farm in Guilford Township, which they made their home for some time and then removed to Rockford, where they spent their last days in retirement. Mr. Black died in 1883, when past the age of seventy years, and Mrs. Black died in 1887, at the age of seventy-seven years. They were members of the Methodist Church. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins have been born three children, but one died in infancy. Daniel, who graduated from the High School of Rockford, is now studying stenography and type-writing in a business college; and Charles, also a graduate of the High School, is pursuing a course of study in the Rockford Business College,

The parents of this family hold membership in the Methodist Church and give liberally to its support. They are well-known people in this community, and are held in high regard by their many friends and acquaintances. Mr. Hutchins has led a busy and useful life and is now enjoying the fruits of his former labor.

ETER FLEMING was born in Washington County, Ohio, December 25, 1817. His parents were Jesse and Eleanor (Collins) Fleming and his paternal grandmother, who came from Ireland to this country, died in the above-named county and State when eighty years of age. The father of our subject, it is thought, was also a native of the Buckeye State, where he carried on farming and departed this life in his seventy-eighth year. His mother was born near Baltimore, Md., and died on the old homestead in Ohio when seventy-two years of age. The parents were old pioneers of Ohio, and were highly respected throughout their community as people whose principles, intelligence, and habits afforded a worthy example to those about them.

He of whom we write assisted his father in carrying on the farm until fifteen years of age when he went to Newport, Ohio, and for two months was engaged in working out on farms. He then learned the cooper's trade which he prosecuted until his marriage, September 23, 1841, at which time Miss Betsey A. Lackey became his wife. Mrs. Fleming was born December 21, 1814, in Swanton, Franklin County, Vt., and was the daughter of Isaac and Hannah (Wright) Lackey. Her father was a native of Connecticut and spent his last days in Ohio, his death occurring at the advanced age of ninety-two years. The mother hailed from Massachusetts and also departed this life in Ohio, when in her seventy-eighth year. The Wright family were of English descent and were generally well-to-do farmers. Isaac Lackey was a patriot in the War of 1812. Mrs. Fleming is a descendant of the celebrated Peabody family, and on both sides of the house our subject comes of people who were noted for their longevity.

After his marriage our subject came to Durand, this county, and purchased land upon which he resided until February, 1891. At that time he sold out and bought his present home in Pecatonica village, where he ranks among the intelligent and progressive citizens. Mr. Fleming politically supported the principles of the Democratic party, as likewise did his father, but otherwise devoted his time and attention to his private affairs. He cast his first vote for President Polk.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming have had born to them eight children and adopted a son, Charlie Hill, who went to California and died at the age of twenty-two years. The eldest daughter, Adelaide, was born December 18, 1842, and is now Mrs. Edmund Derwent, Jr., and has two children: Marietta, who was born January 23, 1845, married Charles Reddington and is the mother of two sons and two daughters; Annette, whose birth occurred May 29, 1848. became the wife of H. B. Farewell, and had born to her two children, one of whom is deceased; Delight, who was born October 3, 1819, married John Frederick who died in Oakland, Cal., when forty-three years of age, leaving two sons; Alice, now Mrs. John C. Ross, was born August 6, 1851, and is the mother of two sons and two daughters. The remaining children of the family died when young. They have all been given good educations in the Rockford and Pecatonica schools and with one exception have been school teachers.

The family is now living retired in the village, where they have a pleasant and attractive home and are respected and useful members of the community.

ORMAN JUDD. This old pioneer of Winnebago County was born March 1, 1828, in Sandusky County, Ohio, and was the son of Jasen and Rebecca (Shaw) Judd, natives of the Empire State. The family moved to Ohio, where they resided until 1839, at which time they came to this county and located on a claim in Durand Township. The father disposed of the property a year later and took up another claim on section 23, which was his home at the time of his decease in 1863.

Mr. and Mrs. Jasen Judd had a family of six children: Nancy, Maria, Nelson, Norman, Laura and Emeline. Our subject was reared on the home farm and attended the district schools of that early day. He remained with his parents until attaining his majority, and on starting out in life for himself purchased forty acres of land, upon which he erected good buildings and made other modern improvements. Three years later, he removed to another farm, on which he resided for the following fourteen years. In the spring of 1883, he moved to the village of Durand and built the pleasant home which he now occupies. He is the owner of considerable farm lands, having in Clay County, Iowa, a tract of one hundred and forty-three acres.

Norman Judd and Miss Sarah B. Miller were united in marriage, August 14, 1856. The lady was born in Franklin County, Pa., September 23, 1829, and departed this life October 12, 1859, leaving one daughter and one son: Ellen L., who was born July 17, 1857, died October 3, 1885, after having become the wife of Andy Golley, of Rockford, Ill., and they had one child, Ella J.; Ansel Norman, the son, was born August 31, 1858, and died in infancy.

The lady whom our subject chose for his second wife was Mrs. Harriet L. Hart, nee Ely. Their marriage was celebrated December 21, 1860. Mrs. Judd was the daughter of Elisha and Charlotte (Chapman) Ely, natives of Connecticut; her birth occurred in Westbrook, that State, April 5, 1830. Her father removed to Madison County, N. Y., in 1835, the mother having died in Connecticut two years previously. Mr. Ely then married a sister of his first wife, Miss Electa Ann Chapman, and died in Madison County, in September, 1863. By his first union were born three children: Harriet L., Henry, and one who died in infancy. Of his second union five children were born: Henry E., a soldier during the late war in a New York regiment, died in the service; Charlotte M., Mrs. A. E. Van Tassel: Fannie E., who married David Bebee; Frederick A., a resident of Oregon City, and George C., who also makes his home in that place.

Mrs. Judd, while residing in New York, was married to L. D. Hart in 1851, by whom she became the mother of one daughter, Frances C., now the wife of Charles Crain, of Stockton, Kan. Mr. and Mrs. Crain have eight children: May Bell, George C., Bertha M., Hattie, John, Lottie, Nora and Norman. The only daughter born to our subject and his wife was Isabel J., who was born September 26, 1861; she was married to Frank Sheik, and died April 1, 1881.

Our subject for four years was a successful shoe merchant in Durand. He is now retired. In politics, he votes with the Republican party and has been Treasurer of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company. In religious matters, he is a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

USTIN COLTON. We are pleased to present to our readers the following account of the life of this gentleman, sketched by himself in fulfillment of a resolution passed by the Rockford Society of Early Settlers, about the year 1878, calling for personal reminiscences of every member, to be placed on the file of the society.

"Austin Colton was born in the town of Northampton, Hampshire County, Mass., January 30, 1817, and is a descendant of the sixth generation from George Colton, who came from the vicinity of Birmingham, England, about 1860. My progenitors from George Colton bore, in the following order, the ancient Scriptural names of Isaac, Benjamin, Aaron and Reuben, the latter being my father's name, and the list plainly denoting a patriarchal religious reverence, and why, in finding a name for me, the grand old Bible line should have been abandoned, I cannot divine, unless it was in special admiration of that untlinching champion of Calvinistic dogmas, Dr. Austin, who created a current of commotion in the Christian world about that time and toward whose doctrines my parents were somewhat inclined.

"My father, Reuben, like many others when struggling against severe pecuniary pressure, was seized with the notion that he could change, if not improve, his circumstances by emigration, and so, after finding his financial affairs considerably demoralized on the proclamation of peace with Great Britain, following the War of 1812, took up his line of march from his home in Hartford, Conn., to Northampton, Mass. This was then a long way to emigrate, and the Connectient River Valley was the only attractive region inviting the course of the emigrant. My father being a mirror-frame maker and gilder by trade, it was here that he again tried to lighten the burdens of life at his occupation, but with such a lack of proper materials and tools that I have heard my mother say he sometimes had to whittle out and joint even his best jobs with a pocket-knife.

"It was in the midst of such parental privations, and during that severe winter of 1816-17, that I first drew the breath of life. After rowing against the unseen tide of success until 1830, my father, in connection with a company of his neighbors, again conceived the idea that he could better himself and family by a removal to a Western home, which country was then designated as Ohio, Indiana and Southern Illinois (this northern part being then Indian Territory), famous for beauty and fertility. In 1830, he was sent out as an exploring agent for his neighbors. He worked his way in various modes through Northern Ohio and Indiana to St. Louis, and reported generally in favorable terms of the country he had passed. On returning a little further northward through the village of Niles, Mich., then about three years old, he was taken suddenly ill from fatigue and exposure, and there died, without being sufficiently conscious to disclose even his name or whence he came.

"The surprise and shock of this bereavement were the complete reversal of our family plans. I was then thirteen years of age and the eldest of three sons by the second wife of my father. At this period, my school days ceased and I had no further instruction in that line than what was gained by private application and experience. Instead of being directed Westward for farm life, I was dispatched Eastward lifty miles to Worcester, as an apprentice to the printing business, in the office of the Massachusetts Spy, a weekly patriotic paper established by Isaiah Thomas before the Revolution. It is yet prosperously published, being consequently more than a century old, and at that time my eldest half-brother was its managing printer and partner. Thus early separated from the enjoyments of home by the necessities of a livelihood, it was the last I fully experienced of the joy and independence of that institution until lodged in one of my own creation in this delightful prairie land.

"After serving a seven-years' apprenticeship, during the most of the early part of which I was a mere "hewer of wood and drawer of water" for my more elevated associates, I attained my majority and was honorably graduated. Spending about two years working as a journeyman printer in Worcester and the city of New York, being employed in the latter place for a time in Harper's book establishment, and finding my health, which had never been robust, was more and more giving way by long, steady indoor confinement, I resolved to shape my course Westward to Illinois for exemption from dubious Eastern prospects. Having no particular place selected as the end of my journey, I was drawn hitherward by a brother-in-law, whose glowing description of the place had aroused my eager desire to witness its beauties and resources. Mentioning my resolution to my friends, one of them, in deference to his views of its distance and possible desolation, ventured to remark that he did not suppose I "intended to go out there to live." To which I replied, "Certainly, or else to die," for in my then state of health, I considered the latter as probable as the former,

"I left friends and native State in April, 1839, for the Far West, as this region was then called, with all my earthly effects about my person or contained in a small, square, black trunk, among which might have been found two very useful as well as portable articles for pioneer duty, a helveless axe and a hoe, I also had about $100 in cash, the accumulated savings of my eight or nine years of Eastern toil. After a quick passage of thirty days, via New York City, North River, Eric Canal by boat to Detroit, thence across the State of Michigan by wagon and on foot to St. Joseph, and by schooner aeross Lake Michigan, I reached Chicago early in May, with the very economical reduction of about sixty per cent. of my capital. Tarrying there for two or three weeks in a plain wooden shanty called the Tremont House, and working in the interval on the Chicago American, under the editorship of Mr. Stewart, but afterward transformed into the present Journal, I found a teamster from Rockford, named Albert Sanford, who agreed to bring me here within the lapse of four days for $6, providing I would aid in lightening him over the measurcless sloughs.

"Embarking on the doubtful voyage, I arrived here, only to find that my brother was about fourteen miles down the river, nearly opposite the present town of Byron. That evening I started on my tramp for that point, procuring my gingerbread supper at the baking institution of our then bachelor settlers, Wyman & Houghton, located on Main Street, near the present Northwestern Railroad bridge. Between nine and ten o'clock that night, I arrived opposite my brother's cabin, and was charitably paddled across the river in a dugout by a settler named Norton. It was there on the fair banks of the Rock River that I first ensconsed myself amid the bliss and beauties of practical "squatter sovereignty" for a few weeks. So charmed was I by the attractions of the country that I resolved to settle thereabouts. By invitation of a resident, I next visited the region of the Pecatonica River and, finding in the vicinity of what is now called Elton a group of settlers of the New England stamp, I was induced to take up a claim there. I began to ply the pioneer's vocation of log-building, fencing and farming, following it about four years without being burdened with excessive protits.

"At that time, I received a call from the publisher of the Winnebago Forum (which had been issued weekly for about six months by J. A. Wight) to come down to Rockford and take charge of his subscribers, numbering two hundred. My health had become well established and I was beginning to feel willing to cope with almost any difficulty or antagonism. At this post, I battled for nearly cleven years, laboring for the advancement of the best local interests of our charming city and county, but with what success I leave others to determine.

"I might revert to many pleasing, as well as painful, reminiscences of those different departments of life during those years, but they are too numerous, and perhaps inappropriate to a personal sketch. Suffice it to say that that period (1843) witnessed our now model town with but the weak and irregular outlines of infancy, yet of growing strength, while our now first-class State was dragging her financial character and rich resources in the sluggish slough of debt and despond, with rank repudiation proclaimed by partisans. Those were also the days when to avow the superiority of railroads, water-wheels and steam engines for the swiftest and surcest developme ntof the material State, over the old-time notions of turnpike, plank roads, inland navigation and traffic on questionable streams, was to be esteemed little else than an impracticable theorist. Well do I remember that some years after this date, when, on such presumptions we were calmly awaiting the grave destiny of our town. some of the solid savants of its Government had undertaken to engineer a channel through the rocks forming the ford in Rock River, under where the present dam and railroad bridges now stand, at a cost of $1,500, the more rapidly to pour into our hands the mighty wealth of other lands, under which our then expected wharves were to be burdened.

"About 1853, finding the incessant claims upon my time and strength were again beginning to tell upon my health, and foreseeing that the demands and responsibilities of my position must increase with the growth of the town and county; and also fully realizing the thankless predicament of the dual publisher and printer, as well as pecuniarily considering that I had long enough "written for glory and printed on trust," I concluded to abdicate my place at the first suitable opportunity. This soon occurred, and near the close of that year I disposed of my establishment to E. W. Blaisdell, Jr., who soon after changed into the Republican the old time-tried Forum, which had increased from about two hundred to six hundred subscribers. It may not be amiss to notice that while the Forum was the first successful paper published in this town, it was not the first started here, it having been preceded by attempts on the Express, Star and Pilot, all of which yielded after a trial of a year or less. For a period of about two years, I rusticated and reflected, and also reached the second of the three eras in man's existence worth heeding, by finding and wedding, in May, 1856, my "better half," Harriet S. Fowler, only daughter of Royal Fowler, of Westfield, Mass. From this union there are now living three cherished sons and one daughter.

"From this time, I gradually promoted myself into the useful and invigorating, if not popular, calling of a farmer, and, having some wild acres lying uselessly outside the city limits, I set myself about the business of clearing the land, and for the last twenty years have humbly and obscurely yet cheerfully and healthfully followed up the pursuit until I have made or improved no less than six different farms since my residence in this county. This, if not having yielded more than the usual meagre money returns of such vocations, at least affords me the pleasurable pride of having been of some use to my fellow-men, according to the declaration of another that "He who causeth two blades of grass to grow where but one grew before, is a public benefactor."

"And now, having passed the three-score goal of life, and taking a retrospective glance over its variegated fields, fully realizing the rapid transition from that stage when myself and my now grayhaired brother settlers, were all a band of free acquaintances, strong in the impulses of youth or manhood's prime, in the noble endeavor to build up those institutions of public good now about us; when, on sight, the familiar term of greeting to me was "How do you do, boy?" to what it is now, threading our busy streets as a comparative stranger to the jostling multitudes, with perhaps the careless, as well as valueless, salutation from the later generation, or a careless loafer, of "How do you do, old man?" Conscious of fast nearing the most remote boundary of human life, when I reach the uttermost limit vouchsafed me, and yield my dust again to Mother Earth who gave it me, may I

"Go not like the quarry slave at night, Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed

By an unfaltering trust, approach my grave, Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.' "Craving no sculptured shaft of marble or granite to emblazon virtues I may never have possessed, I would rather prefer a thrifty tree or shrub for my monument, as a living emblem of my love of nature when on earth; and no worthier inscription, chiselled by grateful memory on the heart's tablet of future generations when basking amid the privileges and pleasures we, as pioneers, helped to plant, than that of "An Early Settler."

The biographer wishes to add a few lines to the above. Mrs. Colton, whose life has been devoted to her husband and children, and who is highly esteemed, was born and reared in Westfield, Mass., and is a daughter of Royal Fowler, a native of the old Bay State who belonged to a substantial and old family of New England people. Mr. Fowler died in Westfield, Mass., when more than eighty years of age. His wife was Miss Harriet Smith, who was descended from an old family of seafaring people in New Haven. Mrs. Colton was carefully reared and educated at the Westfield (Mass.) Academy, and has been closely identified with the social, religious and charitable institutions of Rockford and is revered for the goodness of heart which has characterized her life. She is the mother of eight children, four of whom died in infancy. The living are as follows: Albert L., who married Edith Pitney, of Rockford, and resides on one of his father's farms; A. Lincoln, who resides at home and is engaged in the grain and feed trade; Miriam M., an amiable and accomplished young lady, who is also at home; Royal F., a practical civil engineer, formerly a student in Cornell University, and now associated with the Rockford Construction Company. Mr. Colton is held in highest esteem for the aid he has given to the upbuilding of Rockford, and he and his family are numbered among the most prominent residents of the county.

DWIN J. SCHOOLCRAFT, propietor and editor of the Durand Weekly Clipper, is a native of this place, having been born July 11, 1867. He is a son of James Schoolcraft, who was born in St. Armand, Canada, November 9, 1816. He was reared a farmer, and February 1, 1865, on removing to Franklin, Vt., was married to Sarah A. Rogers, who was born in that place June 28, 1830. Soon after his marriage, the elder Mr. Schoolcraft came to Illinois and located in Durand Township. Here he resided until 1882, when he removed to the village, where his demise occurred September 30, 1889.

The original of this sketch received his primary education in the district schools, which was afterward supplemented by attendance at school in the village of Durand. In 1888, he engaged to learn the printer's trade by working in offices in Durand, and Beloit, Wis. April 10, 1890, he purchased a printing outfit and commenced publishing The Clipper at Durand. The paper is a six-column folio and finds its way into many homes throughout the county. It is a newsy, neatly printed sheet and, although its owner is quite young in the business, he is becoming well known throughout this section as a gentleman of ability who is destined to make his mark in the newspaper world.

The parents of Mr. Schooleraft were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and also belonged to the Independent Order of Good Temlars, and bore a part in every movement which would upbuild their community. The paternal grandparents of our subject were Peter and Mary Schooleraft, while on his mother's side they hore the respective names of John and Rebecca Rogers.

DWIN C. LAWRENCE, as a farmer of large experience, great capability, and prudence in the management of his affairs, is considered one of the most successful of the well-to-do agriculturists who are active in pushing forward the material interests of Boone County in general and of Bonus Township in particular.

Cuba, Allegany County, N. Y., was the native place of our subject, where his birth occurred October 23, 1826. He is the son of John and Lydia (Sweet) Lawrence, the former of whom was a son of Isaac Lawrence, a native of Massachusetts. The grandfather of our subject, and his brother John, participated in the battle of Bunker Hill, where the latter was killed. Isaac died in Pompey, N. Y., in his sixty-second year. His good wife also passed away in the Empire State, when seventy years of age.

John Lawrence, the father of our subject, was born in Middlesex County, Mass, and remained at home until nineteen years of age, at which time he was married, and, removing to Onondaga County. N. Y., lived there until 1822. Later, making his home in Allegany County, he followed the calling of a farmer, and was quite prominent in local affairs, having served as Constable at a time when men were imprisoned for debt. In the spring of 1837, in company with a son, the elder Mr. Lawrence came to Boone County, where they purchased land, erected a log house, and in the fall returned East, and brought his wife and five children to their new home.

He of whom we write is residing at the present time on the farm which was taken up from the Government as early as 1836. He had two brothers who came here at that time, who helped in clearing the home farm. The father, in 1839, built a new house to take the place of the log cabin, and having brought a few household goods with him, the family were made quite comfortable. He landed here with but fifty cents in cash, but, going to work with a will, soon had the satisfaction of seeing his land doubled and trebled in value.

While residing in New York, John Lawrence was greatly interested in politics, and on coming to Boone County served as Justice of the Peace for a number of years, and also held other responsible positions. He was an old-line Whig politically, and, on the organization of the Republican party, voted for Fremont. He died on the home farm when eighty-nine years of age, leaving a family of nine children, and an estate which comprised ninety-eight acres. Mrs. Lawrence owns two hundred and thirty acres of valuable land which is also included in the home property.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Lydia Sweet. She was born in Saratoga, N. Y., and departed this life on the old farm when eightysix years of age. She was the daughter of David and Deborah (Stafford) Sweet, also natives of the Empire State, where they lived and died. The lady to whom our subject was married on the 29th

Mours Resh JM Dormaid of October, 1856, was Miss Charlotte Hurd, a native of Vermont. She died in Bonus Township when twenty-seven years of age, and February 7, 1867, Mr. Lawrence was married to Sarah Jane Bennett, whose birth occurred April 12, 1838, in Groton, Mass. She is a sister of J. H. Bennett, whose sketch will appear on another page of this work. By her union with our subject have been born four children, viz.: John S., whose birth occurred September 25, 1868; Charlotte M., who was born December 7, 1869; Mary L., who was born February 8, 1873, and James B., who was born September 11, 1871. The children have all been given good educations, two of them being graduates of the Belvidere schools.

Mr. Lawrence has expended more than $2,500 in building his fine farm residence and accompanying outbuildings. In politics, he is a Republican, and held the office of School Director for a number of The father of our subject was a soldier in the War of 1812, and when mustered out was given a land warrant. The Lawrence family is of English descent, our subject being able to trace the record back to John Lawrence, who came over in the "Mayflower" in 1620. Mr. Lawrence has a high standing in the county as a thorough-going farmer and business man, and is greatly respected in the most cultured circles of this part of the county. His wife, who presides over his home, is sharing with him the esteem and regard of their neighbors.

OllN McDERMAID, a well-known manufacturer of Rockford, who for many years has been connected with the business interests of this city, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, and is a son of Malcolm and Betsy (McEachin) McDermaid, both of whom were natives of the same county, and there spent their early lives. After their children were all born and reared, they came to this country, locating in Otsego, N. Y., where the death of the father occurred at the age of sixty-five years. His wife is still living in the Empire State, at the age of seventy, and is an intelligent and active old lady. She has been a lifelong member of the Presbyterian Church, as was her husband.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, whose portrait is shown on the opposite page. At the early age of twelve years, he went to sea, and for many years followed a scafaring life. He rose from the position of an apprenticeboy to an able seaman, and worked on a trans-Atlantic merchant vessel from 1858 to 1865, except when he was in the army. In the spring of 1863, he enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Fourth New York Regiment, at Buffalo, and the following year was transferred to the naval service at Mitchell Station, Va., on the Rapidan River. He did service as a seaman on the Gulf Coast until September, 1865, when the ship was taken out of commission, and the soldiers discharged. The vessel "Otsego," on which he had first sailed, was blown up December 9, 1864, near the coast of South Carolina, and he was transferred to the United States ship "Mattabassett," on which he served until the close of the war. He had been made Captain of a gun as soon as he went on board the vessel "Otsego," and shortly afterward received promotion, being at the time of his discharge Captain of the foretop and drill-master.

After coming to this country, Mr. McDermaid was united in marriage to Miss Isabelle Ralston, who was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, and during her girlhood came to this country with her father, Andrew Ralston, who is now deceased. Her mother is now living in Caledonia Station, at an advanced age. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church, to which Mr. Ralston also belonged. Unto Mr. and Mrs. McDermaid have been born seven children: Lizzie, an intelligent young lady, acting as her father's secretary; William and Daniel, who are employed by their father; Robert, Mabel and Howard. The mother and her daughter Lizzie are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. McDermaid is an honored member of the Odd Fellows' society, with which he has been connected for a quarter of a century, and also belongs to  $\odot$ . L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R. In politics, he is independent, voting for the man regardless of party affiliations. He first came to Rockford in 1865, where he worked at his trade of cooper, and as a machinist for some time. It was in 1875 that he began the manufacture of churns, and for more than seventeen years he has now carried on business in that line. He patented the Boss Churn, and is now extensively engaged in its manufacture at Nos. 212 and 220 North Madison Street. He is also a stockholder in the Manufacturers' and Merchants' National Bank. Mr. McDermaid may well be called a self-made man, for since his thirteenth year he has been thrown upon his own resources, and whatever he has achieved in life is due entirely to his own efforts.

UGUST ZIMMERMAN is a dealer in wines and liquors, located at No. 821 South Main Street, Rockford, where he has carried on business since September, 1873. Since that time he has been actively engaged on his own account. He had located in Rockford in 1866, but for seven years was employed by others. A native of Saxony, Germany, he was born on the 7th of July, 1814, his parents being Moritz and Catherine (Scharffenberg) Zimmerman, who were also natives of the same province in Germany and came of good families in that land. The father lived a quiet, unassuming life and passed away at the age of eighty-live years. His wife died when past the age of three-score years and ten. Like her husband, she was a member of the Lutheran Church. In their family were seven children, of whom two sons are yet living, August, and a brother Casper Frederick, who still resides in the Fatherland, where he follows the trade of a carpenter and millwright.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who spent his boyhood days under the parental roof in his native land, and at the age of twenty-one bade good-bye to his old home, preparatory to sailing for America. He left Bremen on the 19th of March, 1866, and on the 17th of April landed in New York, whence he came at once to Rockford, arriving in this city seven days later. He was then a single man, but here chose a companion and helpmate on life's journey Miss Christiana Fischer, who was born in Germany, not far from the birthplace of her husband. She there grew to womanhood, acquiring a common-school education in her mother tongue, and, when a young lady, crossed the broad Atlantic, the first of the family to come to America. This was about 1867. Her father had died in Germany when little past middle life. Her mother afterwards came to this country and made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Zimmerman, until called to her final rest at the advanced age of eighty-six years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fischer were members of the Lutheran Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman also hold that religious belief, and our subject is President of the congregation. Their union has been blessed with two children; one died in infancy, and one daughter, Emma L., born on the 1st of March, 1877. Socially, Mr. Zimmerman is on Odd Fellow, belonging to the subordinate lodge, the camp and the canton. He also belongs to the E. F. W. Ellis Blue Lodge No. 633, A. F. & A. M. He has made his fortune by close application to business, industry and enterprise, and is now the owner of a fine two-story building, 71x21 feet, located on South Main Street, also his comfortable residence on Tenth Street. He takes an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of Rockford, its growth and the promotion of its leading industries, and has a wide acquaintance in this community where he has made his home for more than a quarter of a century.

ANIEL SMITH, one of the pioneers of Harlan Township, but now residing in Winnebago Township, was born in Kintyre, Scotland, in May, 1830, the third son of Daniel and Mary (Montgomery) Smith. His ancestors were from Ayrshire, and his grandfather was a furmer who resided on leased land belonging to the Duke of Argyle, spending his last years on that estate.

The father of our subject was born on the home farm in Kintyre, February 11, 1791, and was reared to agricultural pursuits, which he followed in his native land until 1842. Himself and his sister Janet were the only members of the family who came to America. In the year above-mentioned, a company of about one hundred was formed, who hired a vessel, which had formerly been used in the lumber traffic, and sailed from Campbellstown June 4, landing at New York on Independence Day following. They came direct to Illinois by the most expeditious route then known, via river, canal and Lakes to Chicago, and thence with team to Winnebago County. The father of our subject located in Harlem Township, and with his brother-in-law, James Montgomery, bought a tract of partially improved land, where he resided until his death, August 20, 1845.

Mary Montgomery, as the mother of our subject was known in maidenhood, was born in Kintyre, Scotland, January 12, 1795, the daughter of Robert Montgomery. She died on the old homestead May 31, 1872. Her son Daniel, our subject, was twelve years old when he accompanied his parents to America, and at the time of his settlement in Winnebago County it was sparsely settled and but little improved. Most of the people still lived in rude log houses, there were no railroads here, and Chicago was the nearest market and depot for supplies.

After remaining with his mother on the home farm until 1851, Mr. Smith located on a portion of the estate which he had inherited, and there resided until 1860. He then purchased a farm in Guilford Township, and during the twenty years in which he made it his home, was instrumental in bringing about many improvements in its buildings, cultivation and embellishments. In 1880, he sold the place and purchased the farm he now owns and cultivates. This is well improved and includes the northwest quarter of section 14, Winnebago Township, being a very valuable tract of land.

In 1860, Mr. Smith was united in marriage with Miss Agnes, daughter of James Smith, and a native of the same place in Scotland as her husband. Her grandfather, Hugh, lived and died in Kintyre, and her father, who was there born and married, emigrated to America in 1858, in company with his wife and cleven children, and bought a farm in Winnebago Township, where his closing years were quietly passed. The mother of Mrs. Smith, whose maiden name was Martha Johnson, was born in Kintyre and passed away at the old home in Winnebago Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith are the parents of six living children, whose names are respectively: James, Mary, Martha, Flora, Agnes and Robert. The religious membership of the family is in the First Presbyterian Church at Rockford, and in political matters Mr. Smith was a Republican until 1872, since which time he has been a firm adherent to Democratic principles.

TIDEON DEUEL, a native of the Empire State, has long made his home in Winnebago County, Ill. He was born in Washington County, N. Y., in 1820, and is a son of Job and Elizabeth (Ireland) Deuel, also natives of New York State, where they followed farming, as did their parents and grandparents before them. Job Deuel and Miss Ireland were married in Genesee County, N. Y., near Batavia, and the wife died there when about fifty years of age, leaving five children, three daughters and two sons, viz: Gideon, Mary, Clara, Eliza and Philip, all still living. The father sold his property, and bought one hundred and twenty acres in Alabama Township, Genesee County, on which he removed with his five children. He was again married, this time to Mrs. Sarah Holmes, who made a good wife and a kind mother to the little children depending on her, and who by her union with Mr. Deuel became the mother of one son, Wellington. This son is now the owner and occupant of the old homestead. The parents died in their native State, the father when eighty-four years of age, and the step-mother at the age of sixty-five years.

Our subject was reared to farm life, and, like the average country boy, received his education in the district schools. When twenty years of age, he came West to Winnebago County, and in the fall of 1840 began working for Darius Fish, in Cherry Valley, receiving $13 per month for his services, the same being considered very high wages at that time. Mr. Deuel remained in this section for two years, and then went to Laona Township, where he purchased a farm of one hundred and twenty acres, which had been improved to some extent, but on which were no buildings, and for this he paid $13 per acre. He paid out the ready money for this, having earned and saved it while working out. After this, he worked on the construction of the Illinois Central Railroad for Pearse, Keith & Clark, and continued this for two years. While at Bloomington, BL, and while engaged in this work, he married Miss Emma Bowen, whom he had met at Cherry Valley. She was born in New England, and came West with her parents when a child. They were farmers, and died in Ogle County, Ill., leaving three daughters.

Mr. Deuel and his bride went to Laona and settled on his farm, occupying at first a rude log honse, but they were contented and happy. To the original tract, Mr. Deuel added forty acres, but in 1862 he sold the entire farm at a considerable profit, and removed to Shirland Township. his present home, where he purchased a quartersection, paying $11 per acre for it. On this were two dilapidated log cabins, hardly tenantable, and no barn. This purchase was a trust deed, which was sold at public sale, and Mr. Deuel paying cash, $1,760, became the owner. He soon erected a comfortable frame house, which has been the abode of the family since, and is still in good condition. In 1875, our subject erected a good barn 30x50, with sixteen-foot posts. This farm had only about twenty acres cleared, it being a timber farm, but now the one hundred and thirty acres of rich, tillable land, give little indication that at one time they were covered with timber. All this has been cleared by his own hands, and it represents a great many days of hard work. Mr. Deuel now has two hundred and sixty acres of land in this county, worth from $40 to $50 per acre, and he is free of all debt. He has ever been public-spirited, and has contributed liberally to all worthy movements, assisting in building four churches and two parsonages, and aiding in all other enterprises.

The children who came to bless the union of Mr. and Mrs. Deuel are William, a farmer of Missouri; Mira, now Mrs. Levi Card, resides on a farm near by; Ira A., a carpenter; May, now Mrs. Benjamin Bennett, resides on a farm in Nebraska; Elmer, at home on the farm; and Eva, attending Rockford Academy. They lost two children in infancy. All the children have had good school advantages. Mr. Denel was called upon to part from his wife, the sharer of his joys and sorrows, on the 19th of November, 1891, when fifty-eight years of age. She was a member of the Congregational Church, and her husband has held membership in the same for years. Mr. Deuel has held a number of local offices in the township, having been Commissioner of Highways for nine years, and School Trustee several years. He has carried on the farm principally by himself, for he let his boys branch ont for themselves when they were quite young, and he has never kept a hired hand. He realizes that he has been abundantly blessed with health and strength, and probably no man in the county has worked harder in the past than he. Many a time in the past has he cradled five acres of grain per day, and although not by any means a large man, and now seventy-two years of age, he is still vigorous and active. He has been a Republiean in politics, and his first Presidential vote was cast for William Henry Harrison.

OHN GREENLEE, cashier of the People's Bank of Belvidere, was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, July 1, 1835. His father, John Greenlee, a pioneer Scotch settler of Winnebago County, was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, August 18, 1791, and was a son of George and Martha (Wilson) Greenlee. The grandparents spent their entire lives in Argyleshire. The father of our subject was reared to agricultural pursuits and in addition to farming followed the stone mason's trade a portion of the time. He married Helen Brown, a native of Kintyre, and a daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Ralston) Brown. In 1836, with his wife and six children, he came to America, sailing from Liverpool to New York, whence he came to Illinois. He found work as a stone mason on the acqueduct at Ottawa. His nephews, George and John Armour, then living in Ottawa, had previously visited Winnebago and Boone Counties and gave a glowing description of the country, so that in December of that year, Mr. Greenlee accompanied them thither and made a claim to Government land in what is now Harlem Township, Winnebago County. After a short time, he returned to Ottawa, and in the spring of 1837 brought his family to the new home, becoming the first permanent settler in the locality known as the Scotch Settlement of Winnebago and Boone Counties. The family first moved into a vacant shanty until Mr. Greenlee could build a log cabin on his own place. They experienced all the hardships and privations of pioneer life, such as come to those who locate on the frontier. The father was very poor when he first settled in this locality, but his industry and good management brought him success, and he increased his possessions until he was owner of three highly improved farms. He lived upon his first claim until 1870, when he came to Belvidere and spent the remainder of his life in retirement. He died December 30, 1882. His wife passed away in 1865. They were among the founders of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, in which Mr. Greenlee served as Ruling Elder for many years.

Our subject was one of eight children: Martha, Elizabeth, George, Charles, Jannett, John, Helen and Ann. He was only a year old when brought by his parents to Illinois, so that his earliest recollections are of the pioneer home. He received his early education in the public schools of Harlem Township and afterward attended a select school in Marengo. At a very early age, he began assisting his father in the labors of the farm and after attaining his majority came into possession of the old homestead, which he operated for two years, when he came to Belvidere and engaged in the hardware business with his brother Charles and his brother-in-law, James O. Gregory. He was afterward associated with his brother George and Robert Harvey, and continued in that line of business until 1889, when he sold out. Upon the organization of the People's Bank, he was elected Cashier, which position he has since held.

In 1864, Mr. Greenlee was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Elizabeth Brown, a native of Ohio, and a daughter of Edward and Elizabeth Brown, both of whom were born in Scotland. She died in 1870, in the faith of the Presbyterian Church, leaving two daughters: Helen and Elizabeth B. Mr. Greenlee has also been a life-long member of the Presbyterian Church, and since attaining his majority has been a stalwart Republican. He has filled various public offices of trust, has represented Belvidere on the County Board of Supervisors, and in 1886 was elected County Treasurer, serving one term. His official duties were ever promptly and faithfully discharged and won him the commendation of all concerned.

JILLIAM C. DE WOLF, Sk., who for many years was one of the successful agriculturists of Boone County, at present resides in Belvidere, where he bears the reputation of being one of its most public-spirited citizens. A native of Pennsylvania, he was born in Springfield, Eric County, February 8, 1830. His father, Hiram De Wolf, hailed from Rutland County, Vt., where his birth occurred January 3, 1798. The grandfather of our subject, Edgar De Wolf, was a native of New York State and of French parentage.

Edward De Wolf was a farmer by occupation and removed from Rutland to New York State, thence later to Pennsylvania, where he was identified with the farming interests of the town of Conneaut, Erie County, until his decease. His wife bore the maiden name of Sarah Colson and also died on the home farm in Eric County. The father of our subject was reared in the Green Mountain State and New York and when a young man went to Erie County. Pa., and purchased a tract of timber land in Springfield. There he erec'ed a house of logs, where the birth of our subject occurred, and a few years later built a more substantial and comfortable dwelling in which he was residing at the time of his death. July 6, 1872. The mother of our subject, who before her marriage was Miss Sibyl Coon, was born in New York State, in 1798, and died June 3, 1859.

He of whom we write was reared and educated in Springfield, and after attaining his nineteenth year taught school each winter for nineteen seasons. In 1852, he went to Pittsburg, and, taking a course in the Pittsburg Commercial College, was graduated therefrom and then resumed teaching. The following year, he came to Boone County and spent the summer, going in the fall of that year to Cass County, Mich., and, returning to this county the following year, located on eighty acres of land which he had purchased from his father, and which was located on section 11, Spring Township. He began cultivating the soil, and, in the fall of that year going to Cass County, Mich., taught school.

Our subject was married in Pennsylvania, in the spring of 1855, to Huldah J. Strong, and that same year returned and settled on the farm which was his home until 1866. Going back to the Keystone State, he made his home there until November, 1867, at which time he again took up his abode in this county and purchased forty acres of new land on section 13, Spring Township, which he farmed until 1881; then renting his estate, he went to Genoa, where he spent a twelvemonth, and later, going to Kingston Township, De Kalb County, made his home on one hundred and twenty acres of land, located on section 20, until 1888, which year found him again in Belvidere.

The five children born to Mr. and Mrs. De Wolf are Nancy E., who was born December 25, 1855, married Ernest L. Woodruff and resides in Rockford; Hiram S., born October 10, 1858, was drowned in Coon Creek, May 27, 1876; Frank L., born April 23, 1862, was graduated from the Genea High School, from the Chicago Veterinary College, and from the Kansas City Medical College, and is now engaged in practice in Kansas City; William C., Jr., born November 1, 1865, was graduated from the Genoa High School, after which he began the study of law and was admitted to the Bar in 1887; he is now engaged in practice with the Hon. Charles E. Fuller and was married, April 4, 1888, to Clara Moore. Nettie was born August 19, 1868, and is now Mrs. Frank Parker, of Kingston, De Kalb County, this State.

Mrs. De Wolf was born in Girard, Erie County, Pa., February 16, 1832, and is the daughter of Leonard Rufus Strong, who was born in Vermont, April 15, 1803. His father, also named Rufus, was born in the Green Mountain State, whence he removed to Girard, Pa., about 1828, and purchasing land, engaged in farming there until his death. The father of Mrs. De Wolf removed from Vermont to Girard in 1835 and purchasing a tract of timber land, cleared a farm from the wilderness, which he later sold and purchased other property, in this manner clearing and improving three farms in Girard Township. He spent his last days in the town of Conneaut, his demise occurring August 1, 1867.

The maiden name of Mrs. De Wolf's mother was Jane Silverthorn; she was born in Girard, Pa., May 15, 1810, and was the daughter of Abram and Jane (Hunter) Silverthorn, natives, respectively, of Vermont and Scotland, and the latter of whom is still living in Conneaut. In his political relations, our subject is a Republican and has been honored with the various township offices of Spring Township, Boone County.

ENJAMIN F. UPSON. Since casting in his lot with the citizens of Winnebago County almost fifty years ago, Mr. Upson has been prominently connected with its development and has witnessed its growth from a sparsely-settled and unimproved country to the home of thousands of prosperous and enterprising farmers and business men. During the summer months, he occupies his pleasant home at No. 710 Kilburn Avenue, Rockford, but usually spends the winter seasons in Florida, where he has extensive interests.

For two years after coming to Winnebago County, Mr. Upson operated a farm near the county line on the south, and then, in 1850, removed to a tract of land in Seward Township, where he built a beautiful home and improved a splendid farm. Failure of health caused his removal to Rockford, where he has since resided. With his son Jesse B., he became the owner of the business of E. H. Skinner & Company and conducted the same with success for a number of years, but recently sold out. For some years past, he has conducted a nursery and raised berries and small fruits extensively, both in Rockford and in Florida.

With the growth of Rockford Mr. Upson has been directly connected, and laid out ten acres in the northern part of the city on Horsman Street, known as Glenney & Upson's Addition, which has been platted into city lots. He is a stockholder in the Second National Bank, as well as financially interested in other institutions. In Florida, he is not only interested in nurseries, but also operates a sawmill and conducts a general mercantile business at DeLeon, where he owns valuable property.

Born in Mendham Township, Morris County, N. J., December 24, 1816, the early life of Mr. Upson was one of struggle against poverty, but his strong personality and persistence enabled him to overcome adverse fortune and crown his mature life with prosperity, honor and respect. In his youth, he learned the trade of a chairmaker, which he followed a short time. His father, Dr. Jesse Upson, a native of Connecticut, was for fifty years the most prominent physician in the township of Mendham, but came West to Indiana in 1838, and died the same year at Greenfield, aged eighty-two. He enlisted when only eighteen years old in the service of his country and served until the close of the Revolutionary War. His fellow-citizens ealled him to occupy many posts of honor, and he served as Justice of the Peace, and for ten years as a member of the State Assembly of New Jersey, and was influential in public matters. The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Mary Dayton, accompanied her husband to Indiana and survived him several years, dying in Greenfield when very old. She was the daughter of the well-known Judge Dayton, whose son, Senator Dayton, died while Minister at the Court of St. James.

The only surviving members of this family are our subject and his sister, Mrs. Mary D. Cory, of Lima, Ind., the latter being seventy-nine years old. Benjamin F. was married in Illinois to Miss Lucy Bacon, who was born and reared in Massachusetts and came to this State when twenty-five years old. The marriage was blessed by the birth of one son, Jesse B. The latter married Miss Mary Sibley, who was educated at Terre Haute, Ind., and is the mother of two children: Lent D. and Lucy II. The religious home of the family is in the Congregational Church, while the political affiliations of father and son are in sympathy with the principles of the Republican party. At an early day, Mr. Upson served as Justice of the Peace, and still retains in his possession a document bearing these words:

"To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Know YE, that Benjamin F. Upson, having been duly elected to the office of Justice of the Peace for the county of Winnebago, I. Augustus C. French, Governor of the State of Illinois, for and on behalf of the people of said State, do commission him Justice of the Peace for said county, and do authorize and empower him to execute and fulfill the duties of that office, according to law."

Jesse B. Upson is a young gentleman of superior education and has devoted especial attention to the study of the sciences. He is an acknowledged authority on the subject of conchology and has more than one hundred thousand shells of various specimens, including the finest collection of Northern Illinois. He is also a student of botany, and has given many other sciences careful study, having devoted twelve years to their research and gaining more than a local reputation in that direction. He is a member of the American Conchology Association, and other societies of a scientific and social character.

RED H. MOFFATT. Among the many enterprises necessary to complete the commercial resources of a town or city, none is of more importance than that of the grocer, as being one of the main factors in the furnishing of our food supplies. Prominent in this trade is the establishment of Mr. Moffatt, located at No. 131 West State Street, where he earries a full line of staple and fancy groceries, and where he has built up a most valuable trade. All goods are procured direct from first hands, and from the extended experience of the proprietor, this house is able to compete in all respects with contemporaries. By meeting his payments promptly and by his sharp trade in buying, which entitles him to jobber's prices, he is enabled to sell at the lowest prices. In connection with his retail trade he is prepared to do a wholesale trade in the fruit line.

Mr. Moffatt began his mercantile career in 1881, when twenty-one years of age, at No. 429 West State Street, known as the White Grocery Store, and was assisted in a pecuniary way by his kind and indulgent father, William Moffatt (see sketch). The general predictions were that he would fail, but there was never such a word in young Moffatt's calendar. The business is conducted with vigor and push, and patrons are accorded prompt and courteous service, while the stock is continually being replenished and kept choice and attractive. By his square dealing and honorable, upright conduct, he has made many friends, and although he met with many difficulties when first starting out, his friends stood by him, and at the end of a year he was able to move to a more desirable location, a few doors from his former establishment. Two years after he had started in business, he was entirely out of debt and in comparatively easy circumstances. In 1891, his business had increased to such an extent that he found it necessary to move the second time, when he located in a new building only a few doors from the original starting place and where he now has a flourishing trade. He is a gentleman possessing a full and complete knowledge of every detail of the trade, and customers have realized that at this house they may depend upon obtaining terms and inducements not readily to be duplicated elsewhere.

Our subject is a promoter of the Retail Grocers' Association, which was organized on the 11th of February, 1892, with Charles Burr President; George E. Olson, Vice-president; H. W. Burn, Treasurer; Albert Hollem, Financial Secretary, and Mr. Moffatt, Secretary. The object of the association is to keep up unity and good feeling among the grocerymen of the city. The leading merchants of the city are united in this muchneeded organization, and a better state of feeling exists among them. Mr. Moffatt is a young man, but he has great business acumen and is determined to make his business a grand success.

Our subject is a native of this city, born twentynine years ago, and he was thoroughly educated in the city schools, where he applied himself diligently to his books, with a determination that has characterized his movements ever since. He is the only son born to his parents and has always made the city of Rockford his home. He is public-spirited, takes a deep interest in all laudable movements, and is one of the promising young men of the city. No worthy enterprise is allowed to languish for want of support on his part, and he is a liberal contributor to churches, schools, etc. He is truly a progressive young man, and while he takes no active part in politics, his support is given to the Republican party. He is not in the least an office-seeker, but attends strictly to business and depends on honest and fair dealing. With his honesty, uprightness and fidelity to the interests of his patrons, he can not fail to succeed in whatever he undertakes.

The Register-Gazette gives the following notice of the marriage of our subject:

"Promptly at three o'clock this afternoon a quiet home wedding was solemnized at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. J. II. Morrill, at No. 1104 East State Street. It was the marriage of their daughter, Miss Nellie M. Morrill, to Fred H. Moffatt, and modesty and elegance characterized the nuptual event.

"This morning the house was turned over to Melcher, the florist, and in his usual artistic manner he trimmed the parlors with rare floral gems, making them present a very pretty appearance.

"At three o'clock, Mr. Moffatt and Miss Morrill stepped into the front partor, where they were met by dignified Dr. Kerr, who pronounced the words which united the young couple for life, the ring service being observed. The bridal couple were unattended, and the affair was pretty and unostentations all through. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the wedding party sat down to an elegant lunch and were offered many warm congratulations as they ate the choice edibles provided.

"Only the immediate relatives of the couple were present to witness the marriage, none of the many home friends of Miss Morrill or Mr. Moffatt being included in the guest list.

80 Thompson

"The bride was attired in a very handsome mode broadcloth traveling costume, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was indeed a lovely bride. Miss Morrill is so well known to social Rockford that little can be added that will be news to the general public. She is one of the most accomplished and talented musicians in the city and has delighted audiences with her selections upon many occasions. She is possessed of those qualities of mind and heart which win, as well as hold, warm friends. Her many admirers and pupils will be glad to learn that she does not intend to give up her music on account of her marriage, but will continue it as usual upon her return to Rockford.

*Everybody knows Fred Moffatt. He is one of the most enterprising and energetic young business men in the city, and has rapidly acquired a large trade. He has the best wishes of his hosts of friends.

"Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt left on the 4:29 o'clock train on the Central, this afternoon, for Chicago, to spend the honeymoon, and will be absent until the latter part of next week. Upon their return, they will for the present have rooms and board at the home of William Moffatt, at No. 902 North Court Street.

"Those present from out of town at the wedding were Miss Eloise Harford and Oscar Banghart, of Chicago, and Mrs. W. B. Dean, of Yankton, S. Dak., a sister of the bride."

TEPHEN O. THOMPSON. A high place

among the farmers of Winnebago County must be accorded to the gentleman whose portrait accompanies this sketch, and who has made a competence by hard labor, prudent economy and business shrewdness. He is at present residing in Owen Township, where he is the owner of a fine tract of two hundred and eighty acres of land.

A native of New Jersey, Mr. Thompson was born on the banks of the Delaware River, August 15, 1818. As far as is known, his father, Lewis Thompson, was also a native of that State, where he worked at the cooper's trade. About 1825, he moved to Hackettstown, where he purchased a farm, in addition to the cultivation of which he owned and operated a gristmill. He enigrated to Illinois in 1838, where he was numbered among the pioneers of Canton, Fulton County. He built a shop and carried on his trade there until his decease. His wife, whose maide:: name was Sarah Chitester, was a native of New Jersey, and departed this life in Canton.

The parental family included ten children, nine of whom grew to mature years, and were named respectively: James, Alfred, Stephen O., Lewis, Joseph, Henry, Edmund, William and John, Stephen O. was reared and educated in his native State and made the overland trip with his parents to Hlinois. There were no railroads in Fulton County for a number of years after their settlement, and the river towns were the principal depots for supplies. Our subject worked with his father, getting out staves and timber, and was employed in teaming until 1842. During that year, he came overland to Winnebago County, at a time when most of the surrounding country was owned by the Government.

On locating in this section, our subject purchased and entered land in what is now Owen Township. He was a single man at that time and made his home with a brother until his marriage, when he settled on the place of which he is a present occupant. November 29, 1845, he was united in marriage with Eliza Knapp. Mrs. Thompson was born in Ontario County, N. Y., August 17, 1818, and was the daughter of Stephen Abbott Knapp, a native of Branbury, Conn., and the son of Noah Knapp, also born in the Bay State, whence he later removed to New York, and died in Orleans County. Annis Abbott was the maiden name of his wife, and she, too, passed away in the abovenamed county. The father of Mrs Thompson was a resident of Connecticut until after his marriage, when he removed to the Empire State, and for a few years made his home in Orleans County. From the town of Barre he removed to Genesee County, and in 1810 came to Illinois, accompanied by his wife and their family of five children. Mr. Knapp located in what is now Harrison Township, where he purchased and improved a farm. He and his wife departed this life at the home of our subject. The maiden name of Mrs. Thompson's mother was Maria Fowler, and her birth occurred in Putnam County, N. Y.

The two children comprising the household of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are: Emily, who married Luke T. Hullett, and Dudley, who has been twice married. His first wife was Eva Cowan and his second, Mary C. Mutimer. He is the father of three children: Edward S., Carl J. and Fred M. Mrs. Thompson is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In his political views, Mr. Thompson yotes with the Republican party.

ILLIAM PINEGER, after a long life of usefulness, is now living retired in Belvidere. He is one of the well-known citizens of the community, and it is with pleasure that we present this record of his life to our readers. A native of Wiltshire, England, he was born January 26, 1835. His grandfather, William Pineger, was a farmer, and spent his entire life in Wiltshire. The father of our subject, who also bore the name of William, was reared upon a farm in Wiltshire, where he resided until 1849, when he crossed the broad Atlantic and came directly to Boone County, Ill. He spent one year in Garden Prairie, after which he removed to the town of Spring, purchasing an improved farm, upon which he made his home for some time. He is now living in Chicago, at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. His wife, Ann Wheatley, was born in Ashton. Keynes, England, and was a daughter of Thomas Wheatley, She died in Chicago, in 1878, The family numbers nine children: Henry, Ann, William, Thomas, Elizabeth, Amy, Jane, Caroline and Martha.

The first fourteen years of his life our subject spent in his native land, and then sailed for America with his parents. They reached New York after a voyage of thirty-five days and went by way of the Hudson River, the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes to Chicago, whence they came by team to Boone County. Mr. Pineger aided in the operation of his father's farm until 1869, when he was united in marriage with Anna E. Tripp, who was born in the town of Spring, Boone County, and is the daughter of Edwin and Betsy (Peters) Tripp, Her father was born in Somersetshire, England, February 12, 1812, and was a son of John Tripp, a farmer of that county. He was reared upon a farm until 1842, when, on the 1-lth of April, he wedded Miss Peters, a daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Lawrence) Peters, natives of Somersetshire. Her father was a farmer and dealer in live stock. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Tripp sailed for America, and after a voyage of six weeks landed at New York, whence they came direct to Boone County, Ill. They saw it in its pioneer days, and in those early years lived in true frontier style. Mr. Tripp improved a good farm of two hundred and twenty acres, upon which he made his home until 1880, when he rented his land and came to Belvidere, where he has since lived a retired life.

After his marriage, Mr. Pineger operated a rented farm for two years, and then purchased a part of the old homestead, upon which he resided until 1889. He was a successful farmer, industrions and enterprising, and the neat appearance of his place indicated his thrift and energy. Three years ago he rented his farm and came to Belvidere, where he built a pleasant and commodious residence on Pearl Street, where with his wife and daughter, Fannie A., their only child, he now resides, resting from all business cares.

Mr. and Mrs. Pineger were reared in the Episcopal faith; but the latter is now a member of the Presbyterian Church.

MOS B. LANNING. For many years, or since his location in this county, the reputation Mr. Lanning enjoys has been not only that of a most substantial and progressive farmer, but of an intelligent and thoroughly posted man in all public affairs. Although now in his seventy-sixth year, time has dealt leniently with him, and he is still in the enjoyment of comparatively good health, and takes as deep an interest in all public enterprises as in his more youthful days. He was originally from Yates County, N. Y., born March 10, 1816, and is the son of James B. and Sarah (Raplee) Lanning, both natives of New Jersey.

James B. Lanning's parents, Richard and Martha (Bigger) Lanning, were natives of New Jersey and Canada, respectively. They moved to New York State at an early day, and there received their final summons, both dying when about seventyfive years of age. They were the parents of four children. Mrs. Sarah (Raplee) Lanning's parents, Andrew and Catharine (Adams) Raplee, were natives of New Jersey, and died in Yates County, N. Y. On both sides they were honest, respected citizens, and farmers, so far as known. James B. Lanning with his wife and family moved to this county in June of the year 1842. He was one of the early settlers, and was prominently identified with the growth and development of Boone County until his death here, when seventy-seven years of age. His wife also died in this county when seventy-nine years of age. They were the parents of twelve children, three of whom are living at the present time. James B. Lanning and a brother were in the War of 1812, and in all probability some of the ancestors were in the Revolutionary War.

Amos B. Lanning remained with his parents until February 6, 1839, when his marriage with Miss Catherine Strond occurred at the home of the latter. She was born in Sussex County, N. J., on the 19th of July, 1818, and died in this county on the 8th of January, 1878. Her parents, Jacob and Maria (Probasco) Strond, were natives of New Jersey, and died in Steuben County, N. Y., when eighty and fifty years old, respectively. Jacob Strond was the son of Samuel and Catharine Strond, who were also of New Jersey nativity, and who died in Steuben County, N. Y., both when about ninety-eight years of age. As before mentioned, our subject came with his parents to Boone County, Ill., in the spring of 1842, and made all the journey by land, bringing his wife and household goods with teams. His father came by water. They were quite well off for pioncers when they landed here, and our subject took up forty acres of Government land, on which he has resided nearly ever since. His first house was a very primitive affair, but in that log cabin, with his thrifty and cheerful wife, he passed many bright and happy years.

Politically, Mr. Lanning was formerly an oldline Whig, but upon the formation of the Republican party he transferred his allegiance to it and has ever since been a consistent and faithful supporter of that organization. He voted first for W. H. Harrison, then for Fremont and ever since with the Republicans. Mr. Lanning has held a number of local offices and is a worthy member of the Baptist Church, having held membership in that church since a resident of New York State. To his marriage were born two children, as follows: Sarah J., born in Illinois on the 11th of December, 1817, married E. S. Bowers, and both are now deceased. They left one daughter, Jessie, who was born in this county on the 6th of October, 1871. This daughter married Arthur J. Cheever, and they have a little daughter, Christie S., who was born on the 13th of March, 1891, and who is the delight and comfort of Mr. Lanning's declining years. She is a bright, sweet, winsome little thing. Our subject's second child, Daniel R., was born in this county on the 7th of July, 1819, and died when thirteen years of age. Mr. Lanning's grandson-in-law, Arthur J. Cheever, was born in Wisconsin on the 8th of January, 1864, and is working on the farm for our subject.

ON. FREEMAN GRAHAM, of Reckford, was born in Simsbury, Hartford County, Conn., October 11, 1806. His boyhood days were passed in his native place, where he received a common school-education, and served an apprenticeship of seven years in making cotton and woolen machines, becoming a practical machinist. In 1854, he came West, entered the employ of Charles Walker, of Chicago, and took charge of his iron works in Beloit, Wis., where he remained two years.

Receiving an offer of a larger salary, Mr. Graham came to Rockford and entered the employ of Mr. Emerson. He became sole manager of the well-known firm of Emerson, Talcott & Co., manufacturers of farm implements, and in that responsible position was widely known as an enterprising and progressive business man. When the Rockford Cotton Mills were started under his direct supervision, he became part owner and retained his connection with that flourishing enterprise for many years. He also erected and owns the distillery now operated by his sons under the firm name of Graham Bros.

A man of thrift and large executive ability, Mr. Graham has aided in the upbuilding of Rockford and has always taken a deep interest in local affairs. While a resident of Connecticut, he served some years in the State Legislature and held the office of Justice of the Peace for many years. For five years he served efficiently and to the universal satisfaction as Alderman of the Fifth Ward, in which position he contributed effectively to the advancement of the city. An extensive traveler, as early as 1828 he went to South America, and spent one year in Yucatan, where he was interested in introducing a machine for dressing manila from the raw material into practical use, and he still has in his possession a certificate of grant from the Spanish authorities for his machine.

At the age of eighty-five years, Mr. Graham is quite active, retains the use of his intellectual and physical faculties, has never used eye glasses, and retains that sanguine and buoyant spirit characteristic of youth. On May 3, 1892, he celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of his marriage. The maiden name of his estimable and devoted wife was Julia Driggs, and she was born in Barkhamsted, Litchfield County, Conn., October 2, 1814, her ancestors being of Scotch origin. They have been the parents of seven children, the eldest of whom, Julia and Mary, died young. Byron is a distiller in Rockford, and he and his brother, Freeman, Jr., belong to the firm of Graham Bros. Cotton Mills Company. The former married Miss Mary Hight, of California, and the latter chose as his wife Miss Elizabeth Cammon. Julius, general manager of the firm of Graham Bros. Cotton Mills Company, married Miss Emily Brantenham. Julia is the wife of Henry Warner, who manages the paper and cotton mills at Rock Island, Ill. David, the youngest son, is manager of the distillery. Mr. and Mrs. Graham attend the Episcopal Church and are highly esteemed in the city, where they have resided for so many years.

The father of our subject, whose name was likewise Freeman, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and followed the business of a clothier until he died in middle age. Grandfather William Graham, who was of Scotch parentage, was a prominent physician of the Nutmeg State. The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Hannah May, was born in Connecticut, where she died at the age of eighty-four. Her father, John May, whose ancestors had been connected with the Colonial settlement of New England, attained to the great age of ninety-nine, at which time his death was caused by injuries received from falling down a flight of stairs. Our subject was the youngest, with one exception, of ten children, all of whom attained to mature years. One brother, Harvey, served through the War of 1812 as Sergeant. Of that large family our subject is the only survivor, the others having preceded him in death. Politically, Mr. Graham was originally a Whig, and subsequently became a Republican, and during the war was a stanch Union man.

ANIEL G. SPAULDING, Alderman of the Seventh Ward, is one of the prominent citizens of Rockford, where he occupies a pleasant home at No. 402 North Court Street. For many years he was one of the most successful and enterprising business men of the city, engaging as a grocer on West State Street until 1888, when he was succeeded in business by his son George D. and H. S. Crandall. He possesses a genial, companionable disposition, keen discrimination and the qualities of thrift which have contributed to his prosperity, and has taken an active part in everything which is conducive to the success of himself personally or of the city, having erceted and improved fourteen fine residences, including six brick flats that are conveniently located.

A native of New Hampshire, Mr. Spaulding was born in Aeworth, November 25, 1839, and is the son of Nehemiah and Betsy (Hayward) Spaulding. After receiving a common-school education in his native village, he removed, at the age of eighteen years, to the growing West and sought a home in the bustling town of Rockford. When the Civil War broke out and threatened to engulf the liberties of our people, he enlisted in the defense of the Union, August 9, 1862, as a member of Company I, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, Capt. Irvin and Col. Jason Marsh commanding. With his regiment he proceeded immediately to the front and joined the Army of the Cumberland, meeting the enemy at Perryville, Ky.

Afterward the regiment marched into the enemy's country and fought at the battles of Stone River and Lookout Mountain, in which Mr. Spaulding participated actively, as well as in many engagements of minor importance. After a valorous service of nearly three years, during which time he was promoted to be First Lieutenant, he was honorably dischurged, and going to Chicago, joined the United States troops in May, 1865, as First Lieutenant. Upon the Western plains, for nearly two years he did duty as a scout and suppressor of Indian outbreaks, after which he returned to Rockford in 1867.

By his first marriage, Mr. Spaulding had one son, George D., a progressive young gentleman who carries on a real-estate business.

January 1, 1872, at Rockford, occurred the marriage of Mr. Spaulding and Miss Sophia R. Rannie. Mrs. Spaulding was born in Scotland and was a small child when she came to the United States with her parents, who located in this part of Illinois and here died. She received her education in the schools of the city and is a lady of culture and unusual ability. The marriage has been blessed by the birth of one child, Lulu, who is at home with her parents.

A prominent Republican, Mr. Spaulding has served as Supervisor of his ward and is the present Alderman. With his wife, he holds membership in the Presbyterian Church and aids those projects which will promote the welfare of the community, morally, religiously or educationally.

Mrs. Spaulding is President of the Woman's Rehef Corps of this city and Vice-President of the State order, usually attending the State and national conventions of the order and aiding in its deliberations and decisions. In charitable work, she is foremost and is of a noble and devoted character, Socially, Mr. Spaulding is an influential member of G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., of Rockford; is a Master Mason, and an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having occupied all the chairs of Rockford Encampment, No. 44. He is now Vice-President of the Rockford Baking Company, a prominent concern established here in 1889, and of which he was one of the chief promoters. He is a stockholder in the Rockford National Bank, and has perhaps done as much toward advancing the various industries of Rockford as any other citizen.

EORGE TULLOCK, one of the enterprising farmers of Owen Township, Winnebago County, has demonstrated the fact that perseverance and zeal will prevail to conquer circumstances and gain a competence for him who exercises those qualities. He now owns a good farm on section 34, upon which will be found all the improvements which reflect credit upon his thrift and judgment. Mr. Tullock was born in the parish of Rothiemay, Banffshire, Scotland, July 4, 1815, and is a son of George and Isabella (Cran) Tullock. The father was born in Nairnshire, and the mother in Banffshire. George Tullock was a contractor and builder by trade, but in later life settled upon a small farm, where he spent his last years, dving at the advanced age of eighty-five; the mother departed this life when forty-two years of age.

The two children comprising the parental household were Ann, who married Alexander Clark, and now makes her home with our subject; and George, of this sketch. The latter was reared and educated in his native parish and commenced at the age of sixteen years to learn the shoemaker's trade, serving an apprenticeship of three years.

In 1839, he set sail for America, leaving Glasgow on the vessel "Horace," commanded by Capt. White, He landed on American soil in September of that year, the voyage consuming ten weeks, and he came directly to Illinois. He worked at his trade in Chicago for two weeks and then found employment on a farm twelve miles northwest of the city. Nine months later, he moved to Will County, where he worked at his trade until the spring of 1811, at which time he settled on a farm and remained until the fall of the year, when he again went to Chicago and engaged passage with a teamster for Rockford. The roads being in a very bad condition, they were enabled to travel only twelve miles the first day, and our subject, thinking he could make better time on foot, walked the rest of the distance.

On his arrival in Rockford, George Tullock entered the employ of Daniel Dow, and worked at his trade until 1815. In the meantime, having made claim to a tract of Government land on what is now section 26, Burritt Township, he removed upon it and commenced the work of its improvement and cultivation. There being no railroads in the vicinity, he hauled his produce to Chicago, one hundred miles away, which journey generally occupied a week. Mr. Tullock in 1862 sold the farm just mentioned and purchased the tract where he now resides on section 34, Owen Township.

The original of this sketch was married, October 3, 1815, to Mary A. Milne. She was born in Kineardineshire, Scotland, and was the daughter of James Milne. She departed this life October 27, 1890, after having become the mother of nine children, viz: Margaret, William, Emma, Alonzo, Volnev and George; those who are deceased are A. R.: Orlando, who died at the age of two years and eight months; and Henry A. when ten years and two months old. In his political views, Mr. Tullock votes the Republican ticket, and in religious matters is liberal. He served as Assessor of Burritt Township ten years, and of Owen Township twenty years. He has also been School Treasurer the same length of time. Our subject stands very high in the community, and is thoroughly honest and upright in all his dealings. A compliment was paid his character by a Baptist minister who had been a neighbor of Mr. Tullock's for many years, and who when making his will named him as one of the executors. When asked why he did so after he had pronounced Mr. Tullock an infidel, he replied that he knew him to be an honest man.

ETER JOHNSON is one of the most enterprising business men of Rockford that Sweden has furnished to this country. He is now Superintendent, a Director and a stockholder of the Excelsior Furniture Company, which position he has held for six years, and much of the success of that company is due to his untiring efforts. He was born in Skona, Sweden, September 11, 1844, and is a son of John Hanson, who is yet living at the age of seventy-three years. His wife, whose maiden name was Hannah Pearson, died in 1890, at the age of sixty-nine years. Like her husband, she was a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church. The first of the family to come to this country was a sister of our subject, now Mrs. Carrie Munson, of Byron, Ogle County, Ill., her husband, Nelson Munson, being a large farmer of that county. A brother, Nels Johnson, who came to America after our subject, is now married and is employed as a mechanic by the Excelsior Furniture Company.

Our subject spent his childhood days in the land of his birth, and there learned the trade of a general mechanic with his father, who followed that occupation as his life work. At length he determined to try his fortune in America, and sailed from Malmo to New York City, from whence he came at once to the West. In Rockford, he was joined in wedlock with Miss Mary C. Carlson, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, in February, 1860, and came to the United States in 1888. Her mother died in Sweden, where her father is still living at quite an advanced age. Throughout his entire hie he has followed the occupation of farming. Two sisters also reside in this country.

The union of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson has been blessed with two children: A. Clarence and Edith Hannah. The parents both hold membership with the First Lutheran Swedish Church, and are highly respected people, who have many friends throughout this community. Their home is a pleasant residence at No. 1013 Fifth Avenue, where they have resided for some time. In his political affiliations, Mr. Johnson is a supporter of Republican principles.

Since coming to Rockford, in 1876, he has been connected with the furniture factories of this city, first with the Central Furniture Factory, and afterwards with the Forest City Furniture Factory, being with the latter for eight years. His experience, therefore, well fitted him to accept the position which he occupies with the Excelsior Furniture Company. He is also a practical mechanic and cabinet-maker, and thus thoroughly understanding the business, is capable of superintending those engaged in that work. He has carved out his own fortune, and the result shows that it was no unskilled hand that did the work.

ALLIAM H. WORTHINGTON is Treasurer of the Republican at Rockford, whose first issue was made April 10, 1890. The scheme of setting on foot a first-class Republican paper was undertaken by our subject, in company with other well-known men of the city, it being incorporated with the following officers: H. H. Robinson, President; S. A. Johnson, Vice-President; Will J. Johnson, Secretary, and W. H. Worthington, Treasurer; with H. O. Hilton, Managing Editor, and C. D. Allyn, City Editor. The company is formed of well-known young business men of this section and its backers represent a large amount of capital. From the beginning, the paper has been issued morning and evening, semiweekly and weekly, and its wonderful growth has far exceeded the expectation of its promoters. Our subject is a native of Rockford, having been born here in 1854. He received a practical education in the common and High Schools of this city, and, having spent a great deal of his time in his father's drug store, became a student and graduated in pharmacy, giving his entire time and attention to compounding drugs until he connected himself with the enterprise to which he gives his best efforts. His life has been a busy one and while yet in his prime he has shown his ability to manage with great skill the affairs in which he is interested.

The history of our subject's family in this city is of a character worthy of some special mention. In 1838, William Worthington, his father, came to Rockford when a young man and was recognized as one of its prominent business men and good citizens from the very outset. In 1843, he became the proprietor of a drug store on East State Street, which is to-day in the possession of the family and which is not only regarded as the oldest drug house, but the oldest permanent business firm in the city. The senior Mr. Worthington managed the business for some years on his own account, and later associated with him his sons, when the firm became Worthington & Sons, and later W. 11. Worthington & Co. At the present time, it is known under the firm title of Worthington & Slaid, who do a thriving business at the old stand.

The death of William Worthington occurred in this city in 1886, and in his death Rockford lost an old settler, a worthy and upright citizen and a man loved by all who knew him. He lived to see the many changes that have been the means of making it what it is to-day—the leading inland city in the State. Mr. Worthington always took an active interest in everything that was calculated to benefit the city, and gave liberally of his income in the furtherance of all good measures. He was once in a position to become wealthy, but never clamored for more of this world's goods than just what was necessary to make him comfortable in life.

The father of our subject was born in Enfield, Conn., in 1819. Losing his parents when quite young, he grew up and was educated in Springfield, Mass., where the family were very prominent, many of its members being associated with leading enterprises in that city, one of the main streets bearing their name. Mr. Worthington was yet a young man when he came to Rockford where he met and married a worthy lady, who hore the name of Eliza Kellogg. She was born in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, June 14, 1823, and was brought to this community by her parents in her girlhood days where she completed her education. She is yet living, is smart and active and one of Rockford's recognized matrons and good Christian women. Like her husband, she has done everything to encourage that which is progressive and good.

William II. Worthington of this sketch after becoming permanently settled in business, saw the need of a true helpmate and was united in marriage with Miss Adelle Shaw, May 30, 1879. The lady was born in the Wolverine State in 1854 and was quite young when her parents became residents of Rockford, where she was given a good schooling and has since become one of the leading ladies in social and religious circles. Her father, C. A. Shaw, now deceased, was for many years a prominent merchant of this city, but at the time of his demise was retired from active life, his death occurring when sixty-five years of age. His wife, who was formerly Miss Charissa Stowell, died here when well advanced in years.

Our subject and his wife are members and active workers in the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church of Rockford.

AMUEL M. PEARSALL, a retired farmer living in Poplar Grove, was born in Greene, Chenango County, N.Y., December 24, 1832. His father, John Pearsall, was also a native of the Empire State, where he resided until 1839, and then with his wife and four children came to Illinois, and located in Boone County, at a time when all the land was owned by the Government, and deer and other wild animals were very numerous. Mr. Pearsall purchased a claim to a tract of land in what is now Belvidere Township, on which there was a log house. He improved the farm, and resided there until about two years before his decease, when he disposed of his estate and lived a retired life, dying in March, 1865.

The mother of our subject bone the maiden name of Clarinda Walker. She was born in Chenango County, N. Y., and is the daughter of Samuel Walker, and is one of a family of seventeen children, all born of the same parents, eight girls and nine boys. All lived to become the heads of families.

Our subject is one in a family of six children, four of whom are living, namely: Albert L., Samuel M., Martha and Mary. He of whom we write was a lad of seven years when he came to Illinois with his parents, and was thus old enough to remember the incidents of the long journey, and the pioneer life in this county. He attended the district schools when they were taught in the log school-house, furnished in the most primitive fashion.

Samuel M. Pearsall remained with his parents until seventeen years of age, when he went to Iowa, making the journey with a team. The first winter he operated a threshing-machine, then began to learn the carpenter trade at Independence. He followed that trade most of the time for seven years, then returned to Boone County and worked at his trade for two years. He was then married, September 26, 1859, to Annie Candy, and removed to a farm near Poplar Grove. Mrs. Pearsall was born in Brantford, London District, Province of Ontario, Canada, June 27, 1838, and was the daughter of William V. Candy, who was born in Somersetshire, England, and was the only member of his father's family who came to America, making his advent into the New World in 1835.

The father of Mrs. Pearsall, on locating in this country, was married at Albany, N. Y., January 28, 1836, to Elizabeth Clark, and in the spring of that year removed to Canada and located at Brantford, where he died two years later. The mother, who afterward married Robert Dymond, still resides in Caledonia Township. She was born in Somersetshire, England, in 1810

The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Pearsall, Charles Clark, was also a native of England, and came to America with his family in 1835. Spending that winter in Albany, he then removed to Brantford, Canada, where he purchased a farm which contained a sawmill. Mr. Clark operated the mill and superintended the improvement of Yours always M. Watson his farm until the time of his coming to Illinois, where he departed this life in Boone County. The lady to whom he was married was Elizabeth Porter.

To Mr. and Mrs. Pearsall have been born two children who are living, namely: Eva, who is now the wrife of W. E. Gorman, and resides in Poplar Grove, and Charles. James A., the second son, who was a conductor on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, was killed at Madison, Wis., May 6, 1883, when nineteen years of age. In his political relations, our subject is a Republican, and greatly respected in his community.

HLIAM WATSON. The gentleman whose life sketch and portrait are here presented, died at his home at No. 611 West State Street, in October, 1881. He had come to this county many years before, and was a well-known and influential citizen. His birth occurred in Trenton, N. J. His father was a native of Scotland, and resided both in Glasgow and Edinburg. Having served an apprenticeship as a silversmith, while yet a young man he came to this country and settled in Trenton, N. J., where he was married. His death occurred in the prime of life, after which his widow with her family removed to Rochester, N. Y.

In that city, our subject was reared to manhood, and acquired a good education. Indeed, he stood so high in his class, that he received a complimentary scholarship to the State Normal in Albany N. from which institution he afterward was graduated. He there engaged in teaching for some years in Western New York, after which he edited and published a mental arithmetic, at the request of the officers of the State Normal, who knew his ability as a mathematician. Throughout his life, love of study was one of his chief characteristics, and his large library contained the works of many of the best ancient and modern writers.

When a single man, Mr. Watson came West and in Flint, Mich., was joined in wedlock to Miss Lottie L. Goodrich, who was born, reared and educated in Potsdam, N. Y. Her father, Truxton A. Goodrich, was reared in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and was one of its prominent citizens. At the breaking out of the late war, his eldest son, David A., who was only sixteen years of age, determined to enter the service, and not wishing him to go alone, Mr. Goodrich joined him, and in 1861 they enlisted in Company F, Ninety-second New York Infantry. A few months later the son sickened. and died May 30, 1862, in a Southern hospital, when less than seventeen years of age. His father survived him only about six months, and while doing detached duty, died in October, 1862, at the age of forty-three years. He was also buried on Southern soil. The loss of husband and son was a sad blow to Mrs. Goodrich, who, after six years of sorrow, was called to join the loved ones gone before. She was fifty-two years of age at the time of her death. Both husband and wife were among the original members of the Congregational Church in Potsdam, N. Y.

Mrs. Watson, wife of our subject, was earefully reared and educated. She has a brother and sister still living: Daniel J., who married Alice Furman, resides on a farm in Hortonville, Vt., and they have three children: Henry B., Lotta and Fred; Mary M. is the wife of Joshua Curtis, a farmer residing near Flint, Mich., and they have two sons: Caleb and Fred. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Watson were born three children, but Edith K. and Alice M. died in childhood; Fannie is a student in the public schools.

The year following his arrival in Rockford, Mr. Watson established the Rockford Insurance Company, of which he was Secretary for some years and chief manager. He served as Mayor of the city for one term, but was never an office-seeker. In polities, he was a Republican, prominent in the circles of his party, and took a deep interest in its success. He was a self-made man, but though he was forced to start out in life empty-handed, he won success by his own efforts. He was publicspirited, and spent his money freely for the advancement of any cause calculated to upbnild the community. His many worthy characteristics won him the confidence and esteem of all, and in his death it was believed the county had lost one of her best citizens. He was a man of fine literary attainments, as the following lines attest. They were written after listening to a sermon in which the simile of the tunnel was used:

PASSING THROUGH THE TUNNEL.

As we steam toward the tunnel, Gentle banks on either side Swiftly rising, frown upon us And the fading landscape hide; And a sad and solemn stillness Gives a gloom to ev'ry face, As the train, a-thund'ring onward, Rushes in the narrow space.

In an instant all is darkness!
And we hold the list 'ning breath,
As the heart is leaping upward
To escape the threatened death;
While the darkness grows the darker,
And the gloomier is the roll,
And a thousand hideous fancies
Fiercely glare upon the soul!

Till a glimmer, seen before us, Swiftly opens into day, And the danger and the darkness Are forever fled away; And a fresher, sweeter prospect Spreads in beauty to the eye, With its smiling hills and valleys And its waters rippling by.

So is death to ev'ry Christian,
As he passes through the vale—
As the shadows darken round him,
And the glooms of death prevail;
How the sprit sadly lingers
With the passing joys of life,
And how Nature dreads the passage,
And the Soul the final strife.

First the darkness, then the glimmer, Then the glorious light is seen, And the heavenly land discloses, Dressed in one eternal green! All along the shining valley is the Tree of Life displayed! And the Stream of Life is sweetly Flowing on beneath the shade!

On the verge are hills of beauty,
With eternal cedars crowned.
And within, from choirs of angels,
Heavenly music floats around!
Christian brother, at the tunnel
Let no heaving sigh be given,
For if earth is lost in passing,
You shall win the joys of Heaven!

Generous and sympathetic, he was ever a friend to those suffering from misfortune. Did want stare them in the face, his hand was open to help them; did the burdens of life, or the weight of years bow down upon them, his presence came like a benediction, and by his countless kind acts he brought gleams of sunshine through their gloom, and warmed their hearts as they moved down the rugged hills toward the Sunset Land.

Mrs. Watson still makes her home at her pleasant residence on the corner of West State and West Streets. She is an intelligent lady, true and faithful, and in social circles ranks high. With the Second Congregational Church she holds membership, and her life has been in harmony with her profession. To the poor and needy she is a faithful friend, and the distressed never seek her aid in vain.

DWIN LANDER. Among the self-made men of Boone County none deserve greater credit than the subject of this notice, who is in possession of a comfortable amount of this world's goods, obtained by hard labor and good management, and is living retired on his estate on section 15, Spring Township. Like many of the prominent residents of this county, he is a native of England, having been born April 26, 1815, in Wiltshire.

Edwin Lander, of this sketch, determined to try his fortune in the New World, and, setting sail from Bristol in the vessel "Java," April 6, 1849, was eight weeks en route to this country. Landing in New York, he came direct to this country, where he purchased eighty acres of land. He later added to his possessions until he is now the owner of one hundred and fifty and one-half excellently improved acres.

Miss Mary Skitterey was united in marriage with our subject January 5, 1837. The lady was born in Somersetshire, England, September 14, 1812, and was the daughter of William and Ann Skiterey, both of whom died in their native England, the father when fifty-four years of age, and the mother in her sixty-seventh year. Mr. and Mrs.

Lander have four children living, as follows: William E., who was born in Somersetshire, October 22, 1837, is a farmer; Edward P., who also had his birth in England, February 2, 1813, is married and the father of three children; Eliza, who was born in Wiltshire, January 21, 1848, is residing at home; Susan A., born January 31, 1852, in this county, is the widow of W. H. Terry and the mother of four children. Another daughter of our subject, Mary, was married to Byron Johnson, and at her decease left four children.

He of whom we write was a son of William and Susan Lander, who lived and died in England at an advanced age. Our subject had a brother James, who came to America in 1816. His maternal grandfather was Edward Mathews, who followed the occupation of a farmer. Mr. Lander has four great-grandehildren, one of whom is nine years of age. He owns and occupies a pleasant home and, in company with his son William, was the first to agitate the subject and to build a creamery in this vicinity, which they have since sold.

A Republican in politics, Mr. Lander east his first vote for Fremont. He is at present living retired, his farm being managed by his son William, in whose hands the acres are made to blossom as the rose. This son has been Treasurer of the Board of Highway Commissioners, and has held many other positions of trust, in which he has served with credit to himself and benefit to the community.

RANK A. BAXTER, who is engaged in general farming on section 23, New Milford Township, is one of the representative citizens of Winnebago County, and a native citizen as well. He was born on the 15th of September, 1845, and is a son of John and Maria (Horton) Baxter, both of whom were natives of Ithaca, Tompkins County, N. Y. The father was a farmer and with his wife and seven children emigrated Westward, settling on twenty-one acres of land on section 30, New Milford Township.

Our subject was the fifth son and seventh child.

He left home at the age of fourteen years and began working as a farm hand at $6 per month, and for three months during the year worked for his board and schooling, for his father was poor and had a hard struggle to support the family. After working by the month for four years, he then began operating rented land and when twenty-four years of age purchased forty acres of land in New Milford Township, selling at a profit of $350. He then bought eighty acres in Cherry Valley Township, upon which he built a house. A year later. he seeured as a companion and helpmate on life's journey Miss Helen Conkling, of that township, a daughter of James and Theresa J. (Martin) Conkling. Her parents were natives of the Empire State and were among the pioneers of this county. By their union have been born one son and four daughters: Bert, born January 12, 1873; Myrtle, June 10, 1874; Emma, June 26, 1876; Effie, June 1, 1878, and Frankie, March 29, 1880.

Mr. and Mrs. Baxter resided in Cherry Valley Township for six years, when he sold his farm and removed to New Milford Township, purchasing one hundred and seventy-eight acres on section 25. He paid $32.50 per acre for forty acres and $26 per acre for the remaining amount. It was but slightly improved and he has since expended upon it $4,200 in buildings, has planted a good orchard, and set out many fine shade trees, which are now growing: The land is also under a high state of cultivation, and this farm is one of the attractive and desirable places in the township. Mr. Baxter next purchased one hundred and forty-four acres, called the Mill property, adjoining the village of New Milford, and in March, 1891, bought and removed to his present farm of one hundred and ninety-four acres adjoining the village on the West. During all these years, he has engaged in general farming and for the past five years has also engaged in shipping cattle and hogs to the Chicago Union Stock Yards.

Mr. and Mrs. Baxter are members of the Methodist Church of New Milford and are genial, social people who have many warm friends throughout the community. They have given their children good educational advantages and have a family of which they may well be proud. Bert is now attending the Rockford High School and Emma has fitted herself to enter the same school. In polities, Mr. Baxter is a Republican. He has never sought or desired public office and was much surprused when, in June, 1891, he received the appointment as Supervisor of his township to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Price Lewis. However, he will prove a faithful officer as he is true to every trust reposed in him. His business career has been a most prosperous one and for it he deserves great credit as it is the result of his own unaided efforts. He is a prominent and influential citizen of the community and is deservedly popular among his fellow-townsmen.

RS. VALLONIA II. SHEDD, M. D., has for twenty-one years engaged in the practice of medicine in Rockford. Of those women who have made a name and fortune for themselves in the practice of medicine, none are more deserving of mention than our subject, who is known throughout the State as a skillful physician. She has made her home in Rockford since 1857, and is both widely and favorably known.

Dr. Shedd was born in Warsaw, Wyoming

County, N. Y. Her grandfather, Edward Putnam, Sr., was a native of Vermont, and a kinsman of Gen. Putnam, of Revolutionary fame. He himself fought throughout the struggle for independence and lived to be ninety-two years of age. He married Rachel Reynolds, who was born in New England, of English descent, and reached the very advanced age of ninety-seven years. She was a prominent and well-educated woman, and her last days were spen' in the West, Edward Putnam, Jr., the father of the Doctor, was born in Grafton. Vt., and with his parents removed to Warsaw N. Y., in 1810. Two years later, he married Rachel Hutton, who died at the age of forty-six years, after the birth of nine children. Mr. Putnam was the first merchant of Warsaw, N. Y., and the marriage of him and his wife was the second celebrated in Wyoming County. He continued business for many years in that city, and was one of its prominent residents. He served as magistrate for many years, kept a hotel for many years, and was a leader of the people in all public matters. About two years prior to his death, he came to the West, and after residing for about eighteen months with his son in Wisconsin, came to Rockford. Six months later, he died at the home of his son Lucius, at the age of eighty-three years.

At the age of sixteen years, Dr. Shedd began teaching school, and for seven years followed that profession in her native State. In Warsaw, she gave her hand in marriage to David Shedd, a native of Vermont, who, when a young man, removed to New York. He was a molder by trade, and followed that business for some years after coming to Rockford in 1857. He was a quiet, unassuming man, upright in all the relations of life, and for his honesty and morality was highly esteemed. His death occurred in this city in September, 1881, at the age of seventy-one years.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Shedd were born four children: Henry C., a member of the firm of Putnam & Shedd, furniture dealers of Rockford; Julia, wife of Frank E. Trumbull, now a clerk in the Centennial Clothing Store, of Rockford, and an enterprising young man, who has spent his entire life in this city; Washington Irving, who died in childhood: and Helen Irene, deceased, who married Dr. T. A. Proctor, now of Rochester, N. Y.; she had been formerly married, and by her second union she left three daughters and a son.

By nature, Mrs. Shedd was fitted for the work in which she is now engaged, possessing natural ability in that direction She first began doctoring her own family, but soon neighbors and friends requested her services, and at length the calls made upon her she found to be more than she could attend to. When the law went into effect that a doctor's license should be required, she secured one without trouble, and has since been engaged in the active practice of medicine. Her work has been very successful, and she has never lost one out of all the febrile cases which she has attended. She is now making a specialty of chronic cases, but, owing to increasing age and failing health, she cannot now attend to so large a practice as was formerly hers. She has reached the age of seventy-six, but with the exception of her hearing, which is partially impaired, she is still as well preserved as many much younger ladies. Her reputation has extended all over the State, and with it she has gained many warm friends who esteem her highly for her sterling worth.

ON. D. EMMONS ADAMS. The gentleman whose portrait and life sketch are here presented to our readers, has been a resident of Winnebago County since July, 1846. Born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., February 23. 1818, he is a son of Hiel and Mary (Newton) Adams, also natives of the above-named State and county, where they resided on a farm. The father died in 1843 in his fifty-fourth year and the mother passed away five years later, aged fifty-six years.

Our subject was one of a family of eight children, his brothers and sisters being Ezra, who resides in Laona Township, this county; Hiel, who departed this life in Rensselaer County, N. Y., in 1890; Elijah, who makes his home at Brodhead, Wis.; Emma, who married D. Waterbury, and died in Wayne County, N. Y.; Mary M., Mrs. John Chaloner, who resides in Rensselaer County, N. Y.; Sadie A., the wife of James M. Rockwell, who lives in Pontiac, Mich., and Sarah, Mrs. Samuel R. Young, who resides in Delaware County, Iowa.

D. E. Adams was reared to manhood on his father's farm, and after obtaining his education in the common schools, taught in the neighborhood. In 1842, he was married to Palmyra Houghton, who was born April 23, 1813, in Rensselaer County, N. Y., and died eighteen months after her marriage. August 9, 1845, Mr. Adams was united in marriage with Miss Palmyra Bills, who was born in Berkshire County, Mass., July 20, 1821. Mr. Adams came to Illinois in 1846, and purchased one hundred and twenty acres of section 29, Laona Township, on which were a few acres broken and a very rude log cabin. He then returned to the Empire State, and, in the spring, brought his wife and child with him to the new home.

Until 1886, our subject gave his attention to agricultural pursuits, and at that time was the owner of an estate comprising five hundred acres. The tract upon which he resided included two hundred and eighty acres, the entire amount being under excellent cultivation and supplied with first-class farm buildings of every description. Selling out his property in the above-named year, he removed to Durand, where he now resides.

Starting out in life poor in this world's goods, the first employment secured by Mr. Adams was as a farm-hand at $8 per month. He saved enough of his earnings to bring him West, and in every department of work has since been successful, being classed at the present time among the wealthy citizens of Winnebago County. To himself and estimable wife have been born four children: Roscoe E. was born May 17, 1816, and December 17, 1872, was married to Adella Stewart; he departed this life in August, 1885. Mary A. was born August 20, 1848, and is the wife of Charles R. Stewart. of Diekinson County, Iowa. Elma A. was born March 8, 1851, and is now Mrs. Thurrow W. Webster, of Durand. Charlotte G. was born September 19, 1852, and is the wife of Warren E. Filer of this place.

Our subject cast his first vote for William Henry Harrison, in 1840, and since that time has voted the Republican ticket. He has served his fellow-townsmen as Assessor and Collector nine years, and for a period of twelve years was Supervisor. He represented his district in the State Legislature in the Twenty-seventh General Assembly, which was the first under the New Constitution and hence was very important. He has always been interested in local politics, and has frequently represented his party as a delegate to county, district and State conventions.

Second to no other public interest has been the deep concern felt by Mr. Adams toward the progress of educational matters. He was the tirst School Trustee elected in Laona, his duty being to oversee the surveying of land and appraise the value of school land given by the Government for educational purposes. While living in Rensselaer he was a member of the State militia. His first commission was that of Captain and he subsequently received promotion to Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel. In social matters, he is a charter member of Durand Lodge No. 302, A. F. & A. M., and is contributing liberally to the support of all schemes for the moral and material advancement of this township that meet with his approval.

EUBEN J. TOUSLEY. The superior accommodations offered by the Julien House has secured it a prominent place in the favor of the citizens of Belvidere and the traveling public. The hotel is a commodious building, containing fifty sleeping rooms, conveniently arranged and nicely furnished, and under the efficient management of Mr. Tousley has become known as one of the finest houses in Northern Illinois. Since he assumed its entire control, he has increased its accommodations by erecting an addition which is larger than the original building, and his capable supervision invariably secures the comfort and satisfaction of his guests.

Before giving in detail the principal events in the life of our subject, it will not be amiss to briefly mention his parentage. His grandfather, Reuben Tousley, was born in New England and for many years carried on an extensive trade with the West Indies, his occupation being that of a merchant. His death occurred at his home in Williamstown, Mass., of which place he was long a citizen. The father of our subject, Reuben Tousley, Jr., was born in Massachusetts, and was a small child when he was left fatherless. Soon afterward, his mother removed to Ellisburgh, Jefferson County, N. Y., and was there married a second time.

Coming West to Ohio at an early day, the father of our subject landed at Cleveland when it was a mere village. Thence he proceeded with a team to Medina County and, purchasing a tract of timber land, erected thereon a small house. A few years later, he removed to Streetsboro, Portage County, and there made his home until 1816, when he went to Wisconsin and secured a tract of Government land in Walworth County. The nearest market was at Milwankee, thirty miles distant, and Mr. Tousley suffered the usual privations incident to pioneer life. After residing on that place for a number of years, he sold and purchased an improved farm in Jefferson County, Wis.

where he lived until 1865. Afterward he resided for a time at Kenosha, Wis., but at the present time is making his home at Walker, Linn County, Iowa. His wife, the mother of our subject, bore the maiden name of Terzah Cook. She was born in Vermont and died in Jefferson County, Wis., in 1864.

In the pioneer home at Stone, Medina County, Ohio, the subject of this sketch was born November 28, 1831. In the public schools of Ohio he received his early education, which was advanced by attendance in the schools of Walworth County, Wis. At the age of eighteen, he commenced to teach, and in 1859 was clerk in the postoflice at Waukesha. His next position was with the Chicago & Milwaukee Railroad Company, with whom he remained for a few months and then accepted a position as commercial traveler.

In 1865, Mr. Tousley purchased the Julien House at Belvidere, and a year later resigned as commercial salesman in order to devote his entire attention to the hotel, of which, as above mentioned, he has made a complete success. With the exception of three weeks, he has been proprietor of the hotel continuously since his first connection therewith. A Republican in politics, he is stanch in his adherence to the party principles and is now serving his second term as Alderman. Socially, he is a member of Big Thunder Lodge No. 28, 1, O. O. F., Belvidere Lodge No. 60, F. & A. M., Kishwankee Council No. 883, Legion of Honor.

December 12, 1865, Miss D. Augusta, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth (Rogers) Traver, became the wife of our subject. She was born in Cortland Connty, N. Y., and belongs to one of the oldest families of the Empire State. Her father was born in Columbia County, N. Y., December 29, 1816, and when eight years old accompanied his parents to Yates County, that State, where he resided until eighteen. He then removed to Cortland County, and, when leaving home three years later, purchased a farm in that county and was there married, August 28, 1841, to Miss Elizabeth Rogers, who was born in Tompkins County, June 7, 1820.

After his marriage, Mr. Traver resided in Fulton County until 1857, when he sold his place and removed to Wisconsin. After sojourning in that State for five months, he proceeded farther West to McGregor, Iowa, where for one year he was engaged as railroad contractor. He again removed, making his home in Clermont, Iowa, and engaging in different pursuits until 1865, when he eame to Belvidere and in partnership with our subject purchased the Julien House. Ten years later, he sold his interest in the hotel and lived retired from business until his death, when sixty-five years old.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Tousley were John and Margaret (Rorabbacher) Traver. The former was born September 22, 1788, and died in Cortland County, N. Y., April 14, 1866. The latter departed this life at the home of our subject February 16, 1878, at the advanced age of ninety-five years. The first representatives of the Rorabbacher family in America came hither from Germany, bringing a large fortune with them, and became pioneers of Columbia County, N. Y., where one of their number was the founder of the iron works of Akron.

The mother of Mrs. Tousley was the daughter of Amos and Rachel (David) Rogers, the former a native of Connecticut who resided near Hartford nntil reaching mature years. Thence he accompanied his mother to Brattleboro, Vt., and from there went to Massachusetts. After his marriage in 1805, he resided in Berkshire County, Mass., until 1817, when he removed to New York and settled in Tompkins County. Later, he removed to Cortland County, where his death occurred March 14, 1855. He was the father of ten children, eight of whom grew to mature years, and six are now living, the youngest being sixty-eight years of age.

Amos Rogers, the grandfather of Mrs. Tonsley, was the son of Samuel Rogers, who died at Brattleboro, Vt., when forty years of age. The family traces its lineage to John Rogers, the martyr, who was burned at the stake, which relationship they prove by authentic genealogy. Rachel Davis, as the grandmother of Mrs. Tousley was known in maidenhood, was born in the Bay State October 8, 1782, and died in Cortland County, N. Y., when eighty-six years of age. She was the daughter of John and Mary (Niehols) Davis, natives respectively of England and Massachusetts.

Our subject and his excellent wife have two children: Herbert was married May 6, 1891, to Miss Helen L. Keeler, and is interested with his father in the Julien House; Reuben F. is engaged in the grain business and stock exchange at Rockford. The members of the family are well and favorably known in this city where they have resided for so many years.

ILLIAM MOFFATT, who has been engaged in general blacksmithing in Rockford since September, 1858, was born in Youngstown, Niagara County, N. Y., December 29, 1830, and until twelve years of ago was reared in Canada, after which he went to the Empire State, His father, Capt. William Moffatt, was a native of Northumberland, England, and was of pure English descent. When a mere boy, he went to sea and at the age of nineteen became master of a vessel, a sea and lake ship engaged in the merchant trade. He became well known all over the Lakes from Buffalo to Chicago. At length, he gave up a sailor's life and turned his attention to farming. He died near Niagara, Canada, at the age of seventy-four years. His wife, whose maiden name was Ann Hayes, was a native of Massachusetts, and also died near Niagara, at the age of forty-four years. Both were well-known people in the community where they resided. The paternal grandparents of our subject were Richard and Charlotte (Wood) Moffatt, and the former's death occurred in Canada at the advanced age of eighty-two years.

William Moffatt, whose name heads this sketch, learned the trade of blacksmithing in Monroe, Livingston County, N. Y., and did work as a journeyman on his own account in the Empire State until his emigration Westward from Fowler-ville. Before leaving the East, he was married in Youngstown, Niagara County, N. Y., on the 12th of July, 1854, to Miss Sarah J. Cannam, the Rev. Mr. Craig, the great temperance lecturer, officiating. The lady was born in Livingston County, of English parentage. Her father and mother were both natives of England, and after their marriage came to this country. They located in Livingston County, N. Y., where Mr. Cannam became a successful farmer, and in that county they spent the remainder of their days, dying when well advanced in years.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt has been born one son, who is yet living, Fred II., a successful grocery merchant, carrying on business on West State Street. Mr. Moffatt came with his family to Rockford in 1858, and has since engaged in blacksmithing with excellent success. His business is large, and to aid him he engaged Thomas Condon and others. Thomas Condon has now been in his employ for about twenty years. The latter makes a specialty of horse-shoeing and the others of fine repair work. Mr. Moffatt is himself a skilled workman, and by fair and honest dealing he has secured an excellent and constantly increasing trade, which has brought him in a good income and made him well-to-do. Both he and his son are supporters of the Republican party. Mr. Moffatt is public-spirited and progressive, true to all his duties, and is a good citizen. His shop is located at No. 109, and his pleasant home at No. 902 North Church Street.

SCAR NORTON, one of the prominent merchants of Durand, located here in 1861, and is thus numbered among the pioneers as one of the leading citizens. A native of New York, his birth occurred in Oswego County, October 4, 1837. He is the son of Birdsil and Almira (Hartshorn) Norton, natives respectively of Massachusetts and Madison County, N. Y. Ephrain Norton, the grandfather of our subject, was also a native of the Bay<sub>*</sub>State, where he was a farmer, and on removing to New York State lived to attain an old age.

Birdsil Norton was a cabinet-maker and carried on business in the town of Parish. He was born in 1805 and departed this life in 1815, when in the prime of life; his good wife, who lived to attain the advanced age of eighty-four years, died in Syraeuse, N. Y. They became the parents of seven children: Ephraim B., who follows the trade of a carpenter in the above-named city; Curtis M. was the second in order of birth; Ellen E., Mrs. Miller; our subject; Birdsley, and Dwight A., who died young. They are all residents of Syracuse, with the exception of our subject.

Oscar Norton in early life learned the trade of a cooper, to which he later added the occupation of a farmer. In 1861, he came to the Prairie State, and, locating in Durand, soon entered the employ of Andrew Ashton, for whom he clerked fifteen years. At the end of that time, he established in his present business and is now the oldest grocer in Durand, and by his courteous treatment of customers does about the largest business in that branch in the place.

The lady to whom our subject was married July 13, 1862, bore the name of Jane A., daughter of D. S. and Charlotte (Warren) Richards. She is a native of this place,her natal day being February 13: 1845. To them have been born seven children: Charles A., who was born May 2, 1863; James O., who was killed by a runaway team May 18, 1891, when in his twenty-sixth year; William B., who was born September 20, 1867; Lottie L., born July 22, 1871, is attending school in Chicago; Morton E., born January 3, 1874; Lawrence E., April 29, 1876, and Nina Nettic, April 26, 1880.

In politics, Mr. Norton votes with the Prohibition party, and has held the office of Town Clerk and Collector. With his wife, he is a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has aided materially in the upbuilding of this community where he has resided so long.

R8. CELIA O. THOMPSON, who is at present residing on section 14, Manchester Township, Boone County, is the widow of Ole Thompson, formerly a well-to-do farmer of this section. She was born in Norway, September 15, 1852, and was the daughter of T. Selland, also a native of Norway, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. The maiden name of his wife, the mother of Mrs. Thompson, was Madella A. Opsanger, and they reared a family of eight children, five daughters and three sons,

Our subject is the third child and second daughter in order of birth, and has one sister and two brothers in this country. Edmund Selland is a successful farmer living in Sanborn County, S. Dak., where also a sister, Anne, Mrs. Charles Thompson, is residing. Nels Selland makes his home in Benson, Swift County, Minn., where he is engaged in mercantile pursuits in partnership with his nephew, M. C. Thompson, the second son of Mrs. Anne Thompson.

On June 12, 1877, our subject and her sister came to America together and three years later Miss Celia was married to Ole Thompson, of Manchester Township. To them were granted two daughters: Mary Amelia and Anne Eliza, aged, respectively, eleven and eight years. By a previous marriage, Mr. Thompson was the father of three children. He departed this life November 13, 1888, and his widow is now superintending the farm which was willed by him to his daughters.

ENJAMIN F. BANKS. Among the war heroes of this county, none probably had more interesting adventures or served more bravely than the gentleman whose portrait adorns the opposite page. He is at present residing in a pleasant home at Rockford, where his friends are as numerous as his acquaintances. A native of Maine, he was born in Parkman, Piscataquis County, March 17, 1839. His father was born in Hartford, Me., July 14, 1806, and his paternal grandfather, Joseph Banks, was also born in that State, a descendant of English ancestors.

Alfred Banks became the proprietor of a farm in Parkman, where he made his home until 1845. During that year he came to Illinois, accompanied by his wife and four children. The trip was made with teams, and six weeks were consumed on the way. The elder Mr. Banks purchased a farm in the town of Franklin, De Kalb County, where he cultivated the soil until two years prior to his decease, when he removed to Belvidere and spent his last days. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Sarah Foster, and she was born in the Pine Tree State. By her union with Mr. Banks were born five children: Charles E., Sebastine S., Benjamin F., Sarah and George W.

Benjamin F. Banks was a lad of six years when he accompanied his parents to the Prairie State, and remembers well the incidents of the long overland journey and of pioneer life in De Kalb County. For a number of years after their location in that county there were no railroads, and Chicago was the principal market and depot for supplies. Our subject was reared to the duties of a farmer's lad, and, when old enough to start out on his own account, became an agriculturist.

In September, 1862, Mr. Banks enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Fifth Illinois Infantry, and served with his regiment until he was disabled. Joining Sherman's forces, he marched with them to the sea, and can give many an interesting account of that famous tramp. He was severely wounded at the battle of Kenesaw Mountain, and after being sent to the hospital at Nashville was granted a furlough and returned home. The following spring he reported for duty at Chicago, but was not accepted, on account of disability caused by injuries received while in the service. Returning again to the peaceful pursuits of farm life, he purchased a farm in De Kalb County, upon which he made his home until 1875, when, coming to Rockford, he purchased city property, and has since been numbered among the most prominent citizens of the place.

The marriage of our subject occurred April 19, 1869, at which time Miss Frances Eliza Chittenden became his wife. She was born in St. Joseph County, Mich., and was the daughter of Daniel Chittenden, a native of Wayne County, N. Y., where also his father, Benjamin, so far as is known, was born. The grandfather of Mrs. Banks was a cabinet-maker, and removed from Wayne to Chautauqua County, where his decease occurred. He had married Fannie Loper. The father of Mrs. Banks removed from the Empire State to Michigan in 1840, and purchased a tract of timber land in Constantine Township, St. Joseph County, which he cleared and placed under good cultivation. He made that place his home until 1854, when he sold and removed to lowa, making location in Bremer County, where he was one of the early settlers. He had traded his farm in Michigan for that property and resided in the Hawkeye State until his decease, which occurred in 1886.

The mother of Mrs. Banks was Pheebe, a daughter of James Ray, and a native of New York. She died on the farm in Bremer County in 1888, having borne her husband ten children, six of whom grew to mature years, namely: Ferdiando C., Benjamin, Frances E., Eugene, Daniel A., and Tina. Mr. and Mrs. Banks are the parents of six children, who bear the names of Bert F., Viola, Daisy, George, Pearl and Arthur E., respectively. Our subject is a Republican in politics, and socially is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R.

EORGE CHAFEE, who is one of the most successful and prosperous farmers of Spring Township, Boone County, was born in Onondaga County, N. Y., August 16, 1811, his parents being David and Eunice (Chapman) Chafee. They were natives of Connecticut and departed this life in Onondaga County at the respective ages of seventy-five and fifty-two years.

Our subject remained at home until reaching his majority, meanwhile, however, engaging in teaching two terms of winter school. He then worked by the month for his brothers for a period of eight years, and in September, 1840, was married to Miss Lucinda Kinyon, whose birth occurred March 12, 1813, in Onondaga County, N. Y. She departed this life July 15, 1850, in the above-named county, in her thirty-seventh year.

The lady whom Mr. Chafee took for his second wife was Miss Luey Waterman; she had her birth in Otsego County, N. Y., and died in Spring Township, this county, in her fortieth year. She became the mother of two children, only one of whom is living, Lillie K., now Mrs. E. J. Munn. This daughter was born September 7, 1855, on the home farm. The third marriage of Mr. Chafee occurred May 19, 1857, at which time Miss Annitia Smith, who was born in Herkimer County, N. Y., November 12, 1813, became his wife; she was the daughter of Richard and Rachel (Worth) Smith, who lived and died in the Empire State.

The first property which our subject owned was a small farm of twenty acres in New York State, which he disposed of in 1852, and came to Spring Township, this county, where he purchased a quarter-section of partially improved land, for which he paid $11 per acre. He has since creeted all the suitable farm buildings and made of his estate one of the finest in Boone County. It is thoroughly drained, Mr. Chafee having spent $2,000 in laying tile over his farm. He is engaged in mixed farming, ranking among the well-to-do agriculturists in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. Chafee move in the best circles in their community and are universally respected for their sterling qualities and true neighborly kindness. In his political relations, our subject votes the Republican ticket, having served seven years in the capacity of Supervisor, as Commissioner of Highways for four years and also on the School Board. Mr. Chafee has a fine education, although he is a graduate from a country district school. He is a great reader and one of the active workers in educational affairs in the county. His first Presidential vote was east for Andrew Jackson and, as before stated, he now votes for Republican candidates.

The adopted son of our subject, George D. Chafee, is at present living with him and is part owner in the home farm. He married Miss Jane, daughter of C. B. Lord, and has a family of three children.

OHN BARNES is one of those to whom Flora Township, Boone County, owes its present highly cultivated and developed condition. He came hither in 1866, and not only is he well known as a general dealer in all kinds of grain and live stock, but he has also come before the public as an official who has served with credit to himself and to his constituents. He was born October 20, 1847, in Vernon, Oneida County, N. Y., while his father, Richard Barnes, was born in Kent County, England, in 1807. The grandparents of our subject were also natives of the British Isles where they spent their entire lives.

The father of our subject was reared in his native county and on emigrating to America in 1840 was accompanied on the journey by his wife and Locating in Vernon, Oneida three children. County. N. Y., he engaged in farming, and during the years intervening between his settlement there and 1866, had lived upon and cultivated several different farms. On the above date, he came to Illinois and resided for several years in Belvidere Township, this county. He was very successful in all his undertakings, and at the time of his decease in May, 1887, was the proprietor of a handsome estate. His last years were spent in retirement in Belvidere. He had been twice married, the maiden name of his second wife, who was the mother of our subject, was Elizabeth Cackett; she was born in Kent County, England, her parents being Richard and Lydia Cackett. Mrs. Barnes reared a family of seven children and is still living in Belvidere.

John Barnes of this sketch received his education in the primitive schools of Vernon, N. Y., and in 1866 came to Illinois with his parents, with whom he resided until his marriage. He then located on a farm one mile north of Belvidere, which was his home for ten years; at the expiration of that time he purchased his present property. The lady to whom he was married in 1872 bore the name of Jessie A. Wrate, a native of Westfield, Vt. Her father, Francis S. Wrate, was born in Cambridgeshire, England, where also his father, William Wrate was born and died. A brother of Francis S. Wrate, who bore the name of Albert, came to America and resided for a few years in Chicago. He is now living in Nottingham, England.

Francis S. Wrate was reared and married in Cambridgeshire, and in 1852, in company with his bride, embarked on a sailing-vessel, "The American Eagle," for the New World. For ten years he resided in Vermont and in 1861 came to Illinois and located a farm in Belvidere Township, this county. He later went to Geneva, Kane County, Ill., and is now building the Wrate Block there.

His wife was Jane, the daughter of John and Ann Jackson, who was born in the same shire as was her husband. They reared a family of four children. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes have one son, George R., who was born July 5, 1888. In politics, our subject is a Republican and at one time filled the office of Supervisor, and in other ways has aided materially in the upbuilding of his adopted township.

arl L. C. EBBESEN is the editor and General Manager of the Rockford Posten, the well-known Swedish-American newspaper of Northern Illinois. It is issued every Saturday as a seven-column, eight-page paper, and our subject was made its editor in 1888. The Rockford Posten was incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000, and the following prominent Swedish men of the city were selected as its officers: L. M. Noling, President; P. A. E. Peterson, Vice-president; A. P. Floberg, Treasurer; J. A. Alden, Secretary; and C. Ebbesen, editor and General Manager. It is the oldest Swedish-American newspaper in Illinois outside of Chicago. It has over three thousand circulation in the city and county, and is a live, newsy and well-printed paper, which is bound to succeed.

Mr. Ebbesen is a practical printer and newspaper man, having come to Rockford eight years ago and bought an interest in a newspaper run by the Rev. A. Lindskog, which he was obliged to abandon on account of insufficient backing. He learned the printer's trade in his native country of Sweden, where also he was reporter for a time. Four years after coming to the United States, he occupied the same position on the Rockford Gazette and Morning Star in this city. He was the originator and promoter of the first successful Swedish newspaper in the city.

He of whom we write was born and reared in Stockholm and was given an excellent education in the Grammar and High Schools of that city. In 1879, he emigrated to this country, and after spending four years in St. Paul and Minneapolis where he was employed on a newspaper of his native tongue, he made his advent into Winneapol

County. Mr. Ebbesen was married, while in Minnesota, to Miss Charlotte Palmquist, who was born, reared and educated in that State. Her parents were Swedish people, who located in Minnesota about forty years ago, and are still residing in Central City. Her father is a prominent farmer and citizen of that place and was for several years Deacon in the Swedish Lutheran Church. He served through the Rebellion as a private in a Minnesota regiment, and, unlike many of his comrades, escaped being either captured or wounded.

The wife of our subject was given a good education in the public schools, and remained with her parents until her marriage. With her husband, she is a member of the First Lutheran Church of Rockford. Our subject is a Republican in politics, and conducts his paper on Republican principles. He is a man possessed of intelligence and good judgment, and his reputation in the county is one of which any man might well be proud, providing, as in his case, the character is equal to the opinion of men.

OHN SMITH, who is living a retired life at No. 606 George Street, Rockford, where he has made his home for seventeen years, was born on the 28th of May, 1813, about seven miles east of Glasgow, Scotland, and, when six years of age, was brought to America by his parents, John and Mary (Hood) Smith, both of whom were also natives of Scotland. After emigrating to America in 1820, the father began life as a farmer in Grenby Township, Shepherd County, in the Province of Quebec. He worked hard, and did quite a little toward developing a good farm amid the forests of that region. In 1817, he came with his family to this State, locating in Owen Township, Winnebago County, where he and his wife made their home until called to their final rest. The father died at the age of eighty-two, and his wife passed away in her seventy-fourth year. They were both members of the Congregational Church.

Our subject spent his childhood days in Canada, in the usual manner of farmer lads, and, after arriving at years of maturity, was there married to Laura Webster, who was born in Vermont, of American parentage, but was chiefly reared in Canada. After the birth of five of their children, Mr. and Mrs. Smith determined to come to Illinois. They traveled by the Lakes to St. Johns, thence to Buffalo, from there around the Lakes, and overland to Cleveland, Ohio. Their money had given out when they arrived in that city, so they were forced to pause. Mr. Smith began cutting wood for Deacon Lyman, at twenty-five cents per cord. He was thus enabled to make about $1 per day, and in this way he procured enough to make it possible for them to complete their journey to Illinois. When they had reached Winnebago County, however, Mr. Smith was again empty-handed, but they began life in true pioneer style and bravely bore the hardships of the frontier. All went well until 1856, when, on the 9th of November, the wife and mother was called to her final rest. She left one son and four daughters, all of whom are yet living.

Mary, the eldest of these children, is now the wife of James Stewart, a retired farmer residing on Kilburn Avenue, this city; Lucena, is the wife of S. Young, of Falls City, Wis.; Abigail, widow of Benjamin Seaker, resides with her father; Priseilla is the wife of John Hoy, a retired farmer of Brownville, Minn.; John D., who was one of the boys in blue during the late war, is a dealer in machinery in Rockford. Mr. Smith was a second time married, in Beloit, Wis., his union being with Mrs. Jerusha (Hill) Ward, a native of the Empire State, born and reared in Wayne County, N. Y. She came to Illinois in 1856, with her first husband, John P. Ward, who died in December of that year. He left three sons and a daughter, all of whom are now deceased, with the exception of Mary, wife of Il. Chiles, a banker of Sterling. Neb., and Eunice, who lives in Texas. One son, Ransom L. Ward, served in the army during the late Rebellion. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have one son, Adelbert, a mail carrier of Rockford, who married Ellen McGhae.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith are well-known people of this community and rank high in social circles. He was formerly a Republican in politics, but now supports the Prohibition party. With the Congregational Church he holds membership. His wife belongs to the Christian Church. After coming to this country, he made farming his principal occupation for a number of years and purchased and improved one hundred and sixty acres of valuable land, which he sold on his removal to the city.

A. LUNDGREN, who has held the position of Secretary and Treasurer of the Skandia Plow Company of Rockford since 1883, is a well-known and successful business man of Rockford, and it was an important day for both the city and him when he located here. He was born in Sweden, April 22, 1853. His parents, J. E. and Christine (Joneson) Lundgren, are still living in their native land, both being about seventy years of age. His father has followed farming throughout his life. He is well known in his neighborhood as a respected citizen of sterling worth and good Christian character.

Under the parental roof, our subject spent the days of his boyhood, and when a young man came to this country, the first of the family to cross the Atlantic. He has since been joined by a brother and sister, the former, F. E. Lundgren, being a cabinet-maker by trade, and a stockholder in the Standard and Star Furniture Companies of Rockford. His sister Amanda only recently came to the New World.

J. A. Lundgren led to the marriage altar Miss Hildegard A. Wanstrom, who was born in Sweden. July 26, 1857, and in 1864 came with her parents to this country. Their union has been blessed with four children, but Laura died in infancy. Joseph T. Esther C. and Lawrence A., all bright, intelligent children, are still with their parents.

Our subject came to Rockford in 1870, when a young man of twenty years. He was empty-handed, but possessed an industrious and enterprising nature, and a determination to succeed, come what would. He had acquired a good education, and after working as a farm hand for two years, accepted a clerical position in Rockford. As before stated, he has been connected with the Skandia Plow Company as Secretary and Treasurer since 1883. On the organization of the Central Furniture Company in 1879, he became its first Treasurer, and is still one of the stockholders. He has been President of the Standard Furniture Company of Rockford since its organization in 1885, is also a stockholder and Director, and is a Director in the Swedish Mutual Fire Insurance Company, the Skandia Coal Company, the Star Furniture Company, the Royal Sewing Machine Company, and the Rockford Posten Publishing Company. Mr. Lundgren's business career has been one of unalloyed prosperity, yet hard work has been the means of achieving this end. If he were not industrious and enterprising, he would not have won the snecess which has so richly crowned his efforts.

Our subject is a public-spirited and progressive citizen, whose life has been devoted to the interests of his adopted city, his church and his family. He is a member of the City School Board, and, in politics, is a stalwart Republican. He'is also a stanch advocate of temperance principles, and one ever ready to aid in the bettering of humanity. His life has been well and worthily spent, and thereby he has won the esteem of all.

RANK SHEIK. The life of this gentleman has been too short to give the biographical writer much to do in outlining it, but it gives the promise of filling an extended sphere of usefulness should life be spared. He is one of the prominent hardware merchants of Durand, where he has been in business for the past seven years, and during that time he has surrounded himself with friends whom he has gained by his upright character.

Born in Armstrong County, Pa., August 31, 1857, our subject is a son of Christian and Sarah (Troutman) Sheik, also natives of the Keystone State. The father was a farmer and in 1864 emigrated to Illinois and located in the village of Davis. Stephenson County, where he has since lived a retired life, being advanced in years. He has been three times married, the mother of our subject, who was his second wife, dying in 1874 at the age of fifty-two years. She bore him three children: Frank; David, who resides in Janesville, Wis., and one who died in infancy.

Our subject came to the Prairie State with his parents and, when eleven years of age, left home to battle with the world on his own account. For six years he worked as a farm hand, at the end of which time he engaged as a dry-goods clerk at Durand, being engaged by several of the prominent merchants. He then launched out in the poultry trade, and in 1885 established his present business as a hardware merchant.

In 1884, Mr. Sheik and Miss Belle, daughter of Norman Judd, were united in marriage. The lady died seven weeks after her union, and in 1885 our subject chose for his second wife Mollie O., daughter of Humphrey and Calista Jennison, of Durand. She was born in this county, December 3, 1864, and has borne her husband two children: Harlan and Gertie. Mr. Sheik is a Republican in politics, and in Jocal affairs has served as Treasurer of the Village Board and been a member of the Council. He is a go-ahead, enterprising citizen and is rapidly taking a position among the leading men of this community.

Rockford lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens. His life was one of usefulness, and in his demise the commercial and social world met with a serious loss. He embodied all those traits of character which endear men to their associates. He was broad minded, generous, kind hearted, true to his convictions and friends, and in every sense of the word an honest man. At the home which he established in Rockford he departed this life June 30, 1872, at the age of sixty-four.

Mr. Hall was born in Wallingford, New Haven County, Conn., April 1, 1808, the son of Reuben and Sallie (Miller) Hall. The father, who was a native of Connecticut, belonged to a thrifty New England family, and was extensively engaged in farming operations until his death at an advanced age. He was prominent in local affairs and was regarded with respect by all his associates. After the death of his first wife, by whom he became the father of eight children, he married Keziah Beach.

The next to the youngest in the parental family was Riley, who was reared and gained his education in Connecticut, becoming thoroughly familiar with farming pursuits when he was a mere lad. In his early manhood, he removed to the South, taking with him a large number of books, which he succeeded in disposing of at a handsome profit. In the early part of the '30s, he came West to Illinois and purchased a tract of land in Ottawa, also property in Sycamore, which he entered from the Government. A few years later, he came to Winnebago County, where he purchased a large amount of property in Rockford Township, three miles from the city. There he improved nine hundred acres, of which he remained the owner until his death, and he also improved five hundred acres in Winnebago Township, becoming known as one of the largest and wealthiest property owners in the county.

In the progress of the Republican party, Mr. Hall took an active part, but would never consent to hold official positions, although he contributed in every other way within his power to the promotion of the welfare of the party to whose principles he adhered. He was united in marriage in the township of Rockford to Mrs. lanette (Holcombe) Holcombe, on the 14th of November, 1865. She was born in Hartford County, Conn., the daughter of Alexander and Tryphena (Thrall) Holcombe, natives of the same county as herself. Mrs. Hall was married to Tallcott Holcombe August 3, 1834. He passed away August 3, 1847. To this union were born five children: two died in infancy; Ellen M., born April 29, 1838, died February 17, 1879; Caroline E., born June 7, 1841, married September 16, 1873, Thomas H. Brown; Thomas G., born June 7, 1846, died July 11, 1882; he served his country during the War of the Rebellion in Company F, One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Illinois Regiment. Mrs. Hall's parents resided on a farm in Connecticut until after the birth of their children, when they removed West to Geauga County, Ohio, and there engaged in improving a farm until the death of Mrs. Holcombe at the age of sixty-five. Afterward, Alexander Holcombe came to Illinois in 1854, and died in Winnebago County when three-score and ten. He was a successful man, a Whig in politics, and a member of the Episcopal Church. Prior to his removal from Connecticut, he served for fifteen years as Justice of the Peace.

When the Holeombe family removed to Ohio, the daughter Janette was sixteen years old, and she grew to womanhood in the Buckeye State, where she was united in marriage to Talcott Holcombe. The wedded life was terminated by the death of Mr. Holeombe in Trumbull County, Ohio, at the age of thirty-six years. Five children were born of the union, only one of whom now survives, Caroline E., wife of Thomas Henry Brown, a farmer of Rockford Township, and the mother of two children: Hermon H., who died, aged fifteen, and Pembroke. Mr. Brown was born in Benson, Vt., and was a son of Arthur and Jane (Dougan) Brown, also of Vermont. He came to Du Page County, Ill., in 1843, at the age of nine years, and to Rockford in 1856.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall became the parents of one child, Milie A., who died when fifteen years old. Mrs. Hall and her daughter, Mrs. Brown, are attendants at the Christian Union Church and sympathize with the progressive teachings of Dr. Kerr. Mrs. Hall resides with her daughter at the old homestead, No. 104 North West Street, Rockford.

LONZO SMITH. The subject of this sketch was born in Madison County, N. Y., November 3. 1821. His father, Clark Smith, was born in Pennsylvania, March 31, 1780, and died January 17, 1852. He was maried, November 3, 1816, to Mrs. Sabrina (Maurice) Morrow, who was born in New York State, March 7, 1789, and died July 31, 1870. Five children were born unto them, whose names were: Mary, James, Alonzo, Clark and Dwight.

Reared to farming pursuits, our subject naturally chose agriculture as his life occupation on starting out for himself. In 1845, his parents removed from Ohio to Illinois and, locating in Laona

Township, Winnebago County, there resided until called hence by death. Our subject had received a fair education and followed the profession of a teacher in the Buckeye State, and also after coming to Illinois. However, he devoted his attention principally to farming, and by persistent energy and intelligent management, had secured a handsone property at the time of his death.

November 13, 1851, Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Ann McClintic, who was born in Port Gibson, Ontario County, N. Y. She had one brother, Samuel, and seven sisters: Mary, Sarah, Nancy, Eliza, Mahalia, Thirsey and Lucinda. Her father, Samuel McClintic, was born in Hillsborough, N. Y., in 1790, and died at Solon, Ohio, in 1862. Her mother, Sarah Merdow, was likewise a native of Hillsborough, N. Y., who was born in 1794, and died in 1830, at Port Gibson, N. Y.

When a child of three years, Mrs. Smith was taken to Michigan by her father, and resided in that State until nineteen years of age in the family of her brother-in-law, Price B. Webster, at which time she accompanied his family to Winnesago County. Here she met and married Mr. Smith and with him made her home on sections 34 and 35, Laona Township, until the spring of 1889, Mr. Smith then removed to Durand and purchasing a lot in the village, erected thereon a substantial residence, in which he resided until his death, February 3, 1892. His farm comprised one hundred and forty-one and a half aeres, on which he had erected all the necessary buildings, and was successfully engaged in general agriculture.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Smith were born two children: Charlie M. and Lettie E. The son, who was born March I, 1853, was married, April 12, 1875, to Mary Sarver, whose birth occurred October 23, 1853, and they became the parents of two children, Ethel M. and Carrie B. They resided in Laona Township until February 18, 1886, at which time they removed to Creighton, Neb., and there he was engaged in the combined occupation of farmer and liveryman at the time of his death, October 3, 1889. The daughter Lettic resides with her mother. She was given a good education in the schools of Laona and Durand Townships, in which places she has taught twenty terms.

In political matters, Mr. Smith voted with the Republican party until 1876, and afterward east his ballot for the man whom he considered would best fill the office, regardless of party ties. In township affairs, he was very popular and was made the recipient of all positions within the power of the people to bestow, including the office of Supervisor which he held a number of years. He took an interest in public improvements of the county, and in the leading topics of the times, and received from his fellow-citizens the respect to which his virtues entitled him.

ICHAEL JOYCE (deceased). Nature seems to have intended Mr. Joyce for a long and more than ordinarily useful life, but, alas for human hopes and expectations, when but little past the prime of life his career was closed forever. Of great energy and much ability, he was not long in securing a comfortable home, and in every way he was a most worthy man, a kind father and a considerate husband.

Like most of the residents of Rockford, Mr. Joyce was of foreign nativity, born in County Tipperary, Ireland, in 1836, and he was but a small boy when his parents and the family emigrated to the States. They settled in the old Bay State. The father, John Joyce, was also a native of County Tipperary, Ireland, and was a tiller of the soil all his life. He remained with his family in Massachusetts until in the '50s, when he went to Wisconsin and there continued his former occupation in Green County until his death on the 23d of December, 1875, when well along in years. His wife, whose maiden name was Margaret Burk, died one week later. She was born about the same time and in the same county as her husband. All their lives had been passed as devoted members of the Catholic Church, and they were worthy and most excellent people. They were the parents of two sons and four daughters, the sons now deceased.

After he grew up, our subject became a mechanic, and when his parents moved to Green County, Wis., he accompanied them, and subsequently was married in Janesville, of that State, to Miss Maria Torpey, who was born in Galway, Ireland, August 15, 1844. She was a daughter of John and Mary (Cunningham) Torpey, natives of County Galway, Ireland, in which county they were married. After the birth of three children, the parents came to the United States, early in the '50s, and settled in New York State, where Mr. Torpey was engaged as a section boss on a railroad in that State. A few years later, they moved to Madison County, Wis., and then to Footville, of that State, where Mr. Torpey passed the closing scenes of his life, his death occurring in January, 1892, when eighty-two years of age. He was a healthy and well-preserved man almost to the last. His wife is yet living, is quite well, and makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Joyce, in Rockford. She is now eighty years of age and is a member of the Catholic Church. Her husband was also a member of that church. They were the parents of eight children, four sons and four daughters, all of whom grew to mature years.

Michael Joyce remained in Wisconsin a short time after his marriage, and in 1863 came to Rockford, Ill. He followed his trade for a number of years and about 1878 associated himself with James Walsh in the liquor and grocery business at No. 201 South Main Street. A few years later, they dissolved partnership, Mr. Joyce embarking in business on his own account, and he was very successful, subsequently purchasing a large business house, a three-story brick, on South Main Street, the same being very valuable at the present time, and in a fine location. He also purchased a fine residence at No. 1005 Third Avenue. Failing health caused him to retire from business in 1877, and on the 18th of October, 1888, he passed away.

After his death the business was taken up by his sons, Edward and John, and has been earried on successfully ever since, under the management of the wife and mother, Mrs. Joyce, who shows decided business ability. She is the mother of thirteen children, two of whom are deceased, Isabella and Lillian. Those living are: John W., with the brother in the business left by the father; Henry M., now of Chicago; Edward P., in the business left by the father; Mary, George J., Frank M., Margaret E., Agnes E., Laura C., Joseph P., and Charles B., all but one at home. All the family are members of the St. James Catholic Church, and the father was a Democrat in politics while living.

Mo Canwell

TTO CRONWELL. The prosperous merchant-tailoring establishment at No. 310 South Main Street, Rockford, has been conducted by Mr. Cronwell since 1887 and the enterprise is attended with marked success. The proprieter is a first-class practical cutter and tailor, and the garments produced are remarkable for their elegance of fit, quality and durability. He is perfectly honorable in all his dealings and treats his customers with equity and fairness.

Mr. Cronwell was born near Skane, Sweden, on the 23d of August, 1862, and passed his youth in his native land. In 1881, he emigrated to the I nited States with his brother August, and during the same year came to Rockford, where for a time he was engaged with a mitten company. Later, he filled the position of Superintendent for the glove and mitten department of the Rockford Mitten Company. Subsequently, he succeeded his brother, August Cronwell, who is now on Seventh Street in business as a merchant tailor. Another brother, C. Alfred, who was the first of the family to come to this country, is a mechanic and resides in California. Two other brothers, N. Ivar and Barnhardt J., are tailors in Chicago. A sister, Ida C., wife of Nils Nelson, now resides on Fourth Avenue, Rockford, and two other sisters, Selma and Hulda, are also residents of this city. There is one sister in Sweden, Esther N.

The parents of these children, Johanes and Kjersti (Pearson) Cronwell, are now residing in their native country, Sweden, and the father owns a large shoemaking establishment, working from four to five hands all the time. Both hold membership in the Lutheran Church.

Otto Cronwell chose his life companion in the person of Miss Mary Roslin, a native of Sweden, born October 22, 1862. She came to this country in 1882, to join her parents, who had crossed the ocean sixteen years previously, and settled with them in Byron, Ogle County, Ill. The father and mother passed away in that county. To Mr. and Mrs. Cronwell have been born three interesting children: Agnes V., Ruth A. and Martha. Mr. Cronwell and his wife are well liked by all acquainted with them and are prominent young people of the city. Both are members of the Swedish Mission Church. In polities, our subject advocates the principles of the Prohibition party. He has made most of his property since coming to Rockford, and, aside from his business on Main Street, is the owner of a good home at No. 1013 Kishwaukee Street, besides other property on Seventh Street, one of the leading Swedish business streets in the city.

A portrait of Mr. Cronwell is presented in connection with this sketch of his life.

UGUST PETERSON, one of the self-made men and a leading citizen of Rockford, was born in Sweden in 1854, and there his parents spent their entire lives, passing away when about sixty years of age. They were both members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Those of the family who are now residents of this country are D. R., whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work; G. A., a merchant of Wakefield, Neb., and Augusta M., wife of F. A. Wall, a contractor and builder of Rockford.

Our subject spent his early life in his native country, but when a lad of fifteen summers bade good-bye to home and friends and crossed the briny deep, sailing from Gottenburg in June, 1869. The vessel at length dropped anchor in the harbor of New York, whence Mr. Peterson came to Chicago and afterward to Rockford, where for some time he attended the schools in this place. After attaining to mature years, he chose as a companion and helpmate on life's journey Miss E. Amanda Johnson, a native of this city and a daughter of S. A. Johnson, whose life record appears elsewhere in this volume. She acquired her education in the Rockford schools and is an accomplished and cultured lady. The family circle numbers Mr. Peterson, his wife and three children: Edna B. A., Ruth E. and Eleanora C.

Since the Central Furniture Company was established in 1879, Mr. Peterson has been one of its stockholders and for the past three years has been its Secretary and Treasurer, S. A. Johnson being the President. One hundred and twenty-five men find employment in the factory which is located on Water Power. Other interests also engross the attention of our subject. For five years he was a commercial traveler and in that way has seen much of this country. He is now a stockholder in the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company, the Rockford Mantel and Furniture Company and the Star Furniture Company, of which he is a Director and Treasurer. He is likewise a member of the Swedish Building and Loan Association. During the twenty-three years of his residence here, be has lived a life that has won him the respect and esteem of all and gained bim many friends. He has proved a valued citizen of the community and one who has taken an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of Rockford. His business career has been a successful one, and as the result of his own industrious efforts, he has acquired a good competence.

ORACE J. ROLASON, who is classed among the well-to-do agriculturists of Winnebago County, has been a resident here since December, 1855. A native of New Jersey, he was born April 27, 1827, in Sussex County, and is a son of William and Eveline (Corcellius) Rolason. The Rolason family in the United States are descended from Charles Rolason, who came to America from Liverpool, England, many years ago. That gentleman made his home in Boston, where he was married and reared a family of two sons and one daughter: Isalah, Henry and Mary.

Isaiah Rolason, the grandfather of our subject, was a farmer and a patriot in the Revolutionary War. He reared a family of eight children who bore the respective names of John, Peter, William, James, Mary, Katie, Anna and Sarah, the two latter twins, and died at an advanced age in Sussex County. Of those children, William, the father of our subject, was born December 31, 1788, and on reaching mature years chose the occupation of a farmer. He served six months in the War of 1812, being stationed at Hoboken, N. J. The elder Mr. Rolason resided in his native State until his decease, which occurred June 2, 1836. His wife survived him many years, passing away in 1861. They were both members of the Congregational Church, in which denomination the father was an Elder.

The original of this sketch was one in a family of four children, his brother and sisters being Asa, who died in Mansfield, Pa.; Maria, who married Benjamin Crain, resides in Sussex County, N. J.: and Martha, Mrs. Henry Cole, who passed away in the above-named State and county. Horace J. was given an education in the common schools and was reared to the occupation of a farmer, which business he has followed successfully his entire life. January 1, 1853, he was married to Mary Jane, daughter of John and Phoebe Van Sickle. She was born in Sussex County, N. J., October 24, 1835, and has become the mother of five children: Ella, born April 5, 1854, married David Place and makes her home in Durand where she has a family of two children, Jesse E. and Vida; Ida was born March 14, 1856; Lillie, born Oct. 12, 1858, married Eugene Hoyt and is the mother of a son, Ralph E.; John V. was born Angust 24, 1861, and Horace B., September 12, 1865.

Mr. Rolason made several trips to the West before locating here and in 1850 purchased land in Richland County, Wis., which he sold in the spring of 1856 and then removed to Illinois, passing the winter in Pecatonica. In the spring, he bought one hundred and twenty aeres of land, which he improved and resided upon until May, 1881, at which time he came to Durand. His first possessions in this county included one hundred and forty-three acres adjoining the village, to which he has since added until he is now the proprietor of an estate including two hundred and seventy-two broad acres. He is engaged in mixed husbandry and by a proper rotation of crops reaps a handsome income from the soil.

In political affairs, our subject votes with the Republican party, although he is in full sympathy with the temperance movement. He has held many of the local offices and socially is a member of Durand Lodge No. 302, A. F. and A. M. He is connected by membership with the Presbyterian Church, in which body he is an active worker.

Mr. Rolason, in company with his sons, is interested in breeding Poland-China hogs, Jersey and Durham eattle and road and draft horses in which they are meeting with more than ordinary success.

ERMON THAYER. This gentleman, who has done much for the growth and development of Winnebago County, is at present residing in Rockford, while at the same time he superintends the operation of his farm in Rockford Township. He has made his home in the city since 1855, and is now taking his ease, so far as labor for sustenance is concerned.

The natal day of our subject was November 17, 1829, and the place of his birth Springfield, Vt. His father, William Thayer, was born in Rockingham, Windham County, Vt., while his father, who also bore the name of William, was a native of Taunton, Mass.

The grandfather of our subject removed from Taunton to Rockingham, Vt., in 1790, where he purchased a tract of timber land, erected a log house and cleared his farm, making that place his home for a number of years. He later removed to Springfield, where he established a tannery, continuing in that line of work until his decease. The old home in Rockingham is now occupied by Mrs. Sarah Albee, a sister of our subject.

William Thayer, Jr., learned the trade of a tanner and currier from his father, which he prosecuted in Springfield, but later, in 1833, returned to Rockingham and settled on the old homestead, where he engaged in farming and lived until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Sarah Joslyn; she was born in Walpole, N. H., and was a daughter of Peter and Sarah (Kidder) Johnson.

Our subject was reared and educated in his native State, where he resided until 1835, at which time he came to Winnebago County, and commenced life here working out on farms by the month. Very soon, however, he was enabled to purchase property of his own, and became the possessor of forty acres in Owen Township. Being single, he did not locate on his purchase, and two years later disposed of it, and in 1861 bought a farm of two hundred and fourteen acres on sections 3 and 4, Rockford Township, upon which he made his home until 1881, at which time he moved into the city. He later purchased an adjoining seventy-five acres in Owen Township.

Miss Harriet Whitiny and Hermon Thaver were united in marriage October 18, 1866. The lady was born in Rockingham, Vt., August 6, 1831, where also her father, John G. Whitiny, was born in 1808. Her grandfather, who also bore the name of John, was, it is believed, a native of Rockingham, and the great-grandfather, the Rev. Samuel Whitiny, hailed from Taunton. The latter-named gentleman was a minister in the Congregational Church, and one of the pioneers of Rockingham, where he was pastor of the church of that denomination. The maiden name of his wife, the great-grand mother of Mrs. Thayer, was Goldsbury; she was a native of England. The grandfather was reared and educated in his native town, and was a farmer by occupation; he died when a young man. His wife, who before her marriage was Phebe Locke, was born in the same town as was Mr. Whitiny, and was the daughter of Ebenezer Locke, a native of Taunton, and one of the early pioneers of Rockingham, where he improved and resided upon a farm until his decease. The father of Mrs. Thayer learned the trade of a shoemaker, but after his marriage purchased a farm three-quarters of a mile from the village of Saxton's River and farmed for two or three years, when he sold and located upon the old homestead which he inherited from his father, where he sojourned for the succeeding ten or twelve years. At the end of that time, disposing of the estate, he became the proprietor of another tract of land near the village of Saxton's River, and, living there a few years, later bought another farm, which he occupied until, on account of old age, he sold. He now resides with his daughter, Mrs. Mary Weston, at Upper Meadows, in the Connecticut River Valley. The maiden name of his wife, the mother of Mrs. Thayer, was Harriet Harlow; she was born in Springfield, Vt., and was the daughter of David and Betsey (Stocker) Harlow. She died in 1831, and Mr. Whitiny married Crissana Bailey.

The wife of our subject was reared and educated in her native town, and later attended the academy at Saxton's River. She commenced teaching school when eighteen years of age, and remained with her parents until her marriage in 1864. Two children, William W. and Mary W., have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Thayer. In politics, our subject easts a Republican vote. Mrs. Thayer, while on a visit to her father at Upper Meadows, Connecticut River, Rockingham, Vt., passed away from this life, April 1, 1892.

EVI G. HAYWARD. Agricultural pursuits Phave formed the chief occupation of this gentleman, and the wide-awake manner in which he has taken advantage of every method and idea tending towards the enhanced value of his property has had considerable to do with his success in life. Mr. Hayward was born in Weybridge, Vt., September 25, 1814, and was one of six children born to Edwin and Lucy A. (Warner) Hayward, the former a native of North Bridgewater, Mass., and the latter of Cornwall, Vt. Mrs. Hayward's parents were Dan and Eliza (Goodrich) Warner, of Cornwall, Addison County, where the father of our subject followed farming until his death. Mrs. Hayward still survives him, and resides with her daughter in Chicago. Although she numbers seventy-four years, she is still vigorous and bright mentally. Mr. Hayward's paternal grandfather was Asaph Hayward, of North Bridgewater, Mass., where he followed the cabinet-maker's trade. and where he reared a large family of children. He died at Weybridge, Vt., when about ninety years of age. His wife's maiden name was Polly Drake, and she was of the same place. She was also about ninety years of age at the time of her death.

When Grandfather Hayward removed from Massachusetts to Vermont he went horseback and carried the tall eight-day clock, by which the sun rose and set for many years, so the neighbors said, and when he inquired the way of a man, the latter said, "You are the first man I ever saw carrying his own movement." This old relic still exists. Our subject has in his possession the family record, in his father's writing, and recorded with a quill pen.

The father of our subject followed the occupation of a farmer all his life, and accumulated a handsome competency. He died on the 4th of June, 1854, when fifty-one years of age, and left a widow and six children, three sons and three daughters, viz.: Azel D., Harriet F., Levi G., Laura A., Miner W., and Susan M., all now living but the eldest, Azel D., who died in the United States service, having been a volunteer from Roscoe. He was in the Seventy-second Illinois Infantry, served three years, but was taken sick with a fever and died at Natchez, Miss., July 23, 1864, when but twenty-five years of age. The mother of these children came West from Vermont in the fall of 1855, settled on sixty acres in section 3, Roscoe Township, Winnebago County, and paid $60 per acre for this. Her eldest son was then fifteen years of age, and she took particular pains to give each one every advantage for an education, sending them to academies and colleges. As before mentioned, the eldest son was in the Civil War. leaving Beloit College to enlist. The home place is now occupied by Miner W.

Levi G. Hayward was also in the Beloit College when his eldest brother enlisted, and he was left to take charge of the farm. Since then agricultural pursuits have been his chosen calling and he has net with a fair degree of success. He was married in Cornwall, Vt., March 10, 1868, to Miss Sarah J. Baxter, whose parents died when she was a child. Mr. and Mrs. Hayward continued on the homestead for four years, and then purchased a farm of one hundred and thirty-two acres adjoining that farm, paying $50 per acre for it, but going in debt for most of the land. By economy and industry they soon paid off the indebtedness, and now own some city property. Mr. and Mrs. Hayward are members of the Congregational Church of Beloit, in which he has been Deacon for eleven years, and, in politics, he is a stanch Republican. To their marriage have been born four children, two sons and two daughters: L. Grace, Edwin B., Henry II., and Ruth P. The eldest child is a Sophomore in Mt. Holyoke (Mass.) College, and the remainder are at home.

ENO A. CAMPBELL. Although our subject has passed to the land beyond, he is remembered by the citizens of Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, as a man of a progressive and enterprising spirit, as well as a prominent farmer and stock-raiser of that section. His death October 31, 1891, was deeply mourned by those among whom he had lived and labored during his entire active life.

A native of this county, our subject was born January 14, 1843, and was therefore still in life's prime when his death occurred. His father, who was born in 1812, is still living; his mother, whose birth took place February 10, 1820, passed from the scenes of earth October 31, 1891. Their family numbered four children, namely: Zeno A., Adeline A., Arba Z. and Louis.

After passing his boyhood days in much the usual manner of farmer lads amid rural scenes, alternating study in the pioneer schools with work at home, Mr. Campbell was married, December 29, 1864, to Miss Kate C. Hulse. This lady was born in Rock Run Township, Stephenson County, Ill., February 20, 1842, and is a daughter of Henry and Susan (Glynn) Hulse. Her father was born in 1818, and departed this life in Iowa, in 1848; her mother is still living. For further particulars in regard to their lives, we refer the reader to the sketch of Joshua Hulse, found on another page of this volume.

Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, of whom the following may be mentioned: Walton II., born in Winnebago County, December 26, 1866; Merton D., born October 9, 1876; and Vida, June 15, 1883. The eldest son was married to Miss Nellie, daughter of David Mitchell, and they are the parents of two children, David M. and Jeanie.

In politics, Mr. Campbell was a strong Republican, and held many positions of trust among his fellow-townsmen. He was a general farmer by occupation, making a specialty of stock-raising and keeping on his place some splendid animals. In his agricultural operation, he introduced modern methods, and the latest improved machinery, hence success rewarded his efforts. Socially, he was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and enjoyed the acquaintance of the best citizens of Pecatonica Township.

In connection with this sketch of the life of Mr. Campbell, we present his portrait to our readers.

T. TORBERT, a retired farmer residing in Rockford, claims Pennsylvania as the State of his nativity. He was born in Bucks County, not far from Philadelphia, in 1834, and is one of seven children, five of whom are yet living. The parents were James and Mary S. (Simpson) Torbert, who spent their entire lives in Bucks County, their native place. Both were members of the Presbyterian Church, in which Mr. Torbert served as Elder for some years. His wife was a member of the Simpson family, from which U.S. Grant was descended. The grandfather, James Torbert, Sr., was a native of Bucks County, and was of Scotch lineage. He married a Miss McNair, who was similarly descended, and both died in the Keystone State, when well advanced in years. They, too, were adherents of the Presbyterian Church.

Our subject is the only member of the family residing in Illinois. The days of his boyhood were spent under the paternal roof and in attendance at the public schools, and when a young man he emigrated Westward, to try his fortune upon the broad prairies of Illinois. He located in Ogle County, and in Rockford was united in marriage with Miss Jane E. St. John, who was born in New York, and came with her parents to this State in 1855. Her father, L. St. John, who was a successful farmer, is now deceased. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary A. Pollock, died in Winnebago, at about the age of seventy-eight years. She was a member of the Methodist Church and the mother of four children: Mrs. Torbert of this sketch; James, who is married and follows farming in Rockford Township; Mrs. Annie Mellen, of Winnebago County; and Mary, who resides in this county.

Four children have also graced the union of our subject and his wife: Ettie, wife of William Sommers, who is operating the Torbert homestead in Ogle County; Mary, wife of Walter Howland, of Rockford; Belle, wife of John Delbridge, a farmer of De Kalb County, Ill.; and Edith, at home.

Mr. Torbert has been a resident of Illinois since 1855. He resided in Winnebago for some years and then removed to Ogle County, where he purchased his first land in Dement Township. From a humble position he has worked his way upward to one of affluence. By his industry and enterprise he placed his land under a high state of cultivation, thus making it very valuable, and in connection with general farming he engaged in the breeding of Norman horses. He is now a member of the Creston Horse Company, which owns some fine Normans, and he yet has in his possession some five hundred acres of valuable land in Ogle County, which yields him a good income. Recently, he came to Rockford, and now resides at his beautiful home on West State Street, enjoying the rest which he has so truly earned and richly deserves.

AMES O. GREGORY, a retired hardware merehant of Rockford, is a native of Delaware County, N. Y. He was born in 1821, and was the fourth in a family of six sons and three daughters, but he and Jehiel, a retired druggist of St. Paul, Minn., are the only two brothers now living. The parents were Aaron and Mary (Bailey) Gregory, the former a native of the Empire State, and the latter of Connecticut. The grandfather, Abijah Gregory, was born in Connecticut and was of English descent. He married Miss Mollie Thorp and afterward removed to New York, where he died at an advance age. His wife survived him some years and passed away at the age of eighty-seven. Both were members of the Baptist Church.

The father of our subject was a farmer in early life and afterwards carried on business in New York City as a butter commission merchant. In 1842, he emigrated to Illinois, whither his sons had come the year previous, and located in Ilarlem Township. During the succeeding summer, he was accidentally killed while trying to stop a run-away team. He was then fifty-three years of age. Ilis wife survived him some nineteen years and died in Roscoe, Ill., at the age of seventy-two. They held membership with the Methodist Church and were a worthy and respected couple.

The subject of this sketch spent his boyhood days upon his father's farm in Delaware and Ulster Counties, N. Y., and was subsequently employed for three years as a salesman. He first came to Winnebago County when eighteen years of age, with his brother Harvey. They entered land from the Government in Harlem Township, built a small log cabin and began to make improvements, subsequently converting it into a fine farm. In 1868, however, our subject abandoned agriculture and with two brothers-in-law, John and Charles Greenlee, purchased a stock of goods and established a hardware store in Belvidere, under the firm name of Greenlee Brothers & Co. They continued business until 1871, when Mr. Gregory sold out and the following year came to Rockford. In 1873, he began business as a hardware merchant of this city on West State Street, where he carried on operations for twelve years, when he was succeeded by Mr. Van Arnham, an old settler, still engaged in that trade. Mr. Gregory is now a stockholder, and was formerly a Director, of the Rockford Woolen Mills; he also owned stock in the Rockford Watch Company and was one of the promoters of the Chicago & Iowa Railroad, now owned by the Chicago, Burlington & Quiney Railroad, but does not now own stock in that enterprise.

Mr. Gregory was married in this county to Miss Janet Greenlee, a native of Argyleshire, Scotland, born near Campbelltown, in 1832. She is a daughter of John Greenlee, who was born at Kintyre, Argyleshire. The grandfather, George Greenlee, spent his entire life on a farm in that county and died at the age of eighty years. His father, John Greenlee, reached the advanced age of ninety years. The family was one of prominence and had the coat of arms of a baron. In the fifteenth century, the ancestors emigrated from France to Scotland, and there became Presbyterians. John Greenlee was the only son in a family of five children. He became a well-informed man and throughout his life followed farming. He married Miss Helen Brown, of the same county, and after the birth of most of their children they emigrated to America, in 1836, sailing from Liverpool to New York. They came to Illinois and purchased unbroken land on the dividing line between Winnebago and Boone Counties, in Caledonia Township, Mr. Greenlee built a log cabin and became the founder of the Scotch settlement in this community. He was very prominent in public affairs and proved himself a valued and highly-respected citizen. He did much for the development and upbuilding of the county and well deserves mention in this volume. He and his wife were among the founders, and were charter members, of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church. Mr. Greenlee was an Abolitionist and a Republican and took an active part in political affairs, but never sought preferment for himself. His high Christian character and sterling worth won him the love of all. He died December 30, 1883, at the age of ninety one years and four months, leaving a host of friends. His wife died in March, 1865, at an advanced age.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Gregory have been born five children, but two are now deceased. John, a promising young man, was employed as a commercial traveler for a large wholesale house in Chicago at the time of his death; Mary died in childhood; Helen M. is a graduate of the Rockford Seminary; Wilbur J., a graduate of the Rockford High School, and also of the classical department of the Michigan State University, was Cashier of a bank in Arapahoe, Neb., for four years and is now Cashier of the Manistee Connty Savings Bank of Manistee, Mich.; Elizabeth Greenlee, the youngest, a graduate of the Musical Conservatory of Rockford, is now engaged in teaching music. The Gregory family is one prominent in social circles, and the young people take quite an active part in society matters. The parents are both members of the Court Street Methodist Church, and in politics, Mr. Gregory is a Republican. They reside at their pleasant home at No. 601 North Horsman Street, and are highly esteemed people of this city.

ILLIAM A. BOYD, M. D. This gentleman, who stands high in the professional and social circles of Winnebago County, is at present residing in Rockford, where he is held in high esteem by all who know him. He was born in Liulithgowshire, Scotland, December 11, 1841, and is the son of John Boyd, who was also born in that shire, as was his father, John Boyd, Sr. The latter-named gentleman was a descendant of Lord Boyd, of Kilmarnock, who espoused the cause of Charles Stuart, in consequence of which his estate was confiscated and he was beheaded.

The grandfather of our subject was a farmer and spent his entire life in Scotland. The maiden name of his wife was Janet Ellen Boyd, who although bearing the same name was no relation; she departed this life in Scotland. John Boyd, Jr., learned the trade of a shoemaker, which business he earried on for upwards of forty years, spending his entire life in his native land. In 1839, he embarked on a vessel bound for America, which was wrecked and eighty lives lost; he never attempted the voyage again. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Janet Allan; she was born in the same shire in Scotland as was her husband, and there spent her last days. She was the daughter of John and Janet Allan and bore her husband the following seven children: Margaret, John, Janet, George, William, Marion and Mary. Of these, Janet, George, William and Mary came to America.

William A. Boyd of this sketch was reared in his native shire and remained with his parents until reaching his eighteenth year, when, March 27, 1861, he set sail from Liverpool on the steamer "City of Edinboro" and landed in New York the following month. He remained in Brooklyn six weeks, then came West to Wisconsin, where his uncles, McNair, James and Thomas Boyd, resided. He worked for the former-named gentleman until October, when he enlisted for three years in the First Wisconsin Infantry, Among the important battles in which he was engaged were Stone River, Chickamauga, and all the engagements of the Fourteenth Army Corps, up to and including the siege and capture of Atlanta. He was appointed Orderly-Sergeant in 1864, and was honorably discharged at the expiration of his term of service, when he returned to Milwaukee and attended school for three months. January 30, 1865, however, he enlisted in the Ninth Regiment United States Veterans and served his adopted country until January 30, 1866.

At the close of the Civil War, the original of this sketch returned to his native land, where he remained two years amid the scenes of his boyhood, but, feeling that he could gain both fame and fortune for himself, he again came to Milwaukee, determined to make a success of his life in the New World. He was appointed letter-carrier, and continued in the service of the Government in different departments for ten years, during that time being appointed to the position of Superintendent of carriers. He resigned that office in 1878, in order to devote his time and attention to the study of medicine, it being his desire to become a physician.

Dr. Boyd began his medical studies under the instruction of Dr. Willis Danforth, of Milwaukee, and in the fall of 1878 entered the Chicago Homeopathic College, being graduated in the fall of 1880. He commenced the practice of his profession at Baraboo, Wis., where he remained for two years and then came to Rockford, where he has since been a continuous resident. In 1880, Dr. Boyd was married to Mary A. Leamon, a native of Ohio.

The Doctor is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and is also prominently connected with the Illinois and State Homeopathic Associations. He is a member of Star of the East Lodge No. 166, A. F. & A. M., Winnebago Chapter No. 24, and Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T. He is at the present time Health Commissioner of Rockford, and for four years was a member of the Board of Pension Examiners. Dr. Boyd stands very high in social circles and is the incumbent of the position of President of the Burns Club.

In regard to the Doctor's politics, we extract the following from an interview published in the Gazette. "No sir, I am not a Democrat" said Dr. Boyd to the reporter. "I have a liking for the term Mugwump, which our Republican friends invented for us last year. I think I am a Mugwump in politics, medicine, and religion. If in politics to be a Mugwump is to prefer principle above party, and integrity of character rather than political regularity, then I am a political Mugwump. If in religion to be a Mugwump is to prefer honest investigation, rational conclusions, and that which goes to the making of better men and women, then I am a Mugwump; and in medicine, if to be a Mugwump is to prefer that which seems to be for the best interest of the patient without stopping to inquire to what school it belongs, then I am a Mugwump in medicine."

XEL DAHLQUIST, who represents the Rockford Painting and Decorating Co. of

No. 111 South Third Street, has followed this business for the past three years, and for about two years he was Secretary of that company. He came to Rockford in 1873, was for six years a groceryman of Seventh Street, his being the first grocery on that now busy street, and he has ever been one of the live, thorough-going business men of the city. Since that time he has been engaged in painting and decorating. For one year after coming to this country he was with Mr. Almena, the prominent State Street painter.

Axel Dahlquist was born in Wester Gothland, Sweden, November 10, 1845, and was but fourteen years of age when he went to Stockholm to serve a five-years' apprenticeship at his trade. When twenty-six years of age, he bade farewell to home and friends, crossed the ocean to the United States, and arrived in New York City on the 8th of

GEORGE A. PETTENGILL.

August, 1872. He was then a single man, and the first of his family to come to America. His parents, Adam and Eve Dahlquist, died in Sweden. both when about sixty-seven years of age. They had been members of the Lutheran Church for many years. A son and daughter of this worthy couple were brought to this country by our subject, and the former, A. T. Dahlquist, is now a photographer of Duluth, Minn. The daughter, Minnie, married Frank Long, and now resides in Rockford.

Our subject was married, in 1873, to Miss Lotta Bargo, a native of North Land, Sweden, born December 12, 1845. She was left fatherless when young, but her mother is still living and is the wife of Thomas Haves, whom she married in Chicago, Ill. The father was a sailor, and died of cholera in Southern waters. Children have been denied Mr. and Mrs. Dahlquist, but they have adopted two: Gus, who is at home, and a carver by trade, and May M., a bright little girl of eight. Mrs. Dahlquist is a devout member of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Dahlquist is a sound Democrat in politics. He is also a member of the Ancient Free & Accepted Masons, and of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and the Select Knights.

EORGE A. PETTENGILL, deceased, a prominent farmer for many years of Durand Township. Winnebago County, held an important place among the business men of his section and materially aided in placing it on a sound financial basis. He was born in Buffalo, N. Y., August 19, 1820, and was the son of James and Betsey Pettengill, for a further sketch of whom the reader is referred to the hiography of John F. Pettengill.

In the fall of 1837, our subject followed the tide of emigration toward the Mississippi Valley, and came alone to Chicago, being the first member of the family circle who came West. After spending the winter in Chicago, he proceeded thence to the Fox River, where he was employed during the summer of 1838. His next removal was to Durand, where he was married, January 1, 1848, to Sibyl Herring. He with his wife located on section 22, which he had entered from the Government. and began the work of placing it under good cultivation. So successful was he, that at his death, which occurred March 19, 1890, he owned one hundred and seventy-five acres of excellent land, which bore all the improvements in the way of substantial buildings and useful machinery that are generally to be found on estates of men of enterprise. Mr. Pettengill was for many years a stanch Republican but during the latter period of his life supported the Prohibition party, in whose ranks he was an untiring and influential worker. He was held in high esteem throughout the community and his friends will notice with pleasure the accompanying portrait.

The two children born to Mr. and Mrs. Pettengill are Warren G., born February 21, 1851, who married Miss Grace A. Coulton and has three children: Martha Sibyl, Charlie and Ralph A.; and Granville, born October 1, 1861, married Mary Gary and is the father of three children: Everett G., Averill J. and Sibyl Kate. Mrs. Pettengill was born in Waterford, Me., May 13, 1827, and is the daughter of John and Mercy (Haskell) Herring, Her father had his birth in New Gloucester, Me., February 19, 1788, in which State his father, Benjamin Herring, was a pioneer. The father of the latter-named gentleman was a sea-captain, who on one of his trips took his son Benjamin with him. The latter, who was then quite a lad, begged hard to be taken home, and resolved then and there never to leave dry land again. He obtained a handsome fortune in farming pursuits, and died at the age of eighty-four years.

The father of Mrs. Pettengill was a mechanic and came West to Illinois June 30, 1838. Purchasing a tract of land in Durand Township, he there made his home until his decease, which occurred when ninety years of age; the mother departed this life in her eighty-third year. The record of the brothers and sisters of Mrs. Pettengill, all of whom were born in Oxford County, Me., is as follows: Julia, born January 10, 1814, married Frederick Krune, and died in Iowa; Merey IL, born October 4, 1815, became the wife of Price B. Webster and died in Durand. John R., born March 30, 1818, was a prominent man in Winnebago County, and was the first surveyor in and around Durand, spending the winter of 1838-39 in that occupation. A Republican in politics, he has been the recipient of many positions of trust and honor, and is at present an influential citizen of Ransom City, N. Dak. George H., whose birth occurred July 13, 1820, departed this life in Wichita, Kan.; Granville, born May 27, 1823, makes his home in Colorado; and Benjamin, who was born June 30, 1825, resides in 10wa, where he has been successfully engaged in farming pursuits. George and Granville owned good farms in Durand and were successful farmers.

AMES McAFFEE was originally from the Keystone State, born in Bradford County in August, 1827, and his father, Alexander Mc Affee, was also a native of that State but was born in Northumberland County in 1798. The elder Mr. McAffee married Miss Jane McCarty, of Lycoming County, Pa., born at Muncy in 1800, and one of thirteen children. The result of this union was nine children, four sons and five daughters, two of whom died in early childhood. Of the seven that grew to adult years, only four now survive, and they are Amanda. now Mrs. Henry A. Fahnestock, at Waverly, Iowa: Mary A., widow of Melvin J. Wood, resides in Roscoe, Ill.; Edwin, a farmer of Audubon County, Iowa, and our subject, who is the eldest of the family. The parents of these children came West from Pennsylvania in October, 1838, made the journey with teams, and landed in Roscoe on the 31st of January, 1839. While on the way to this State, they were in Michigan, near South Bend, Ind., for a short time, and the father and his brother John came on to Roscoe Township, where they bought a claim of four hundred acres one-half mile from the (then) village of Roscoe. They paid $400 for this tract, and, although fifteen acres had been cultivated, there was no house on it. They immediately erected a double log house and then returned for the family. Here the father passed the remainder of his days, dying of an abscess in March, 1852, when not quite fifty four years of age. His wife remained a widow and survived him twenty-six years, keeping the family together until about 1870, when she went to live with her daughter. About this time, the old place was sold for $4,500. Mrs. McAffee died in March, 1878, when about seventy-eight years of age, her death occurring in lowa, where she was visiting her daughter.

James McAffee, subject of this sketch, and his brother Edwin were volunteers in the Civil War. The former enlisted in the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry as a Sergeant, August, 1862, and was discharged for disability in January of the following year. He and his brothers and sisters were all fairly educated, and our subject, being a man of observation and study, has not allowed his ideas to rust out, but is well informed on all subjects and is thoroughly apace with the times. After the death of his father, he carried on the farm and was married to Miss Almeda McCausland. of Ridott, Ill., but a native of Canada. Her father was William McCausland. Mrs. McAffee passed away in 1856, leaving one daughter, Meda, who is a resident of Iowa at the present time. Mr. Me-Affee's second marriage was to Miss Margaret L. Cross, a native of Roscoe, born in that city (or rather town at that time) in 1839. Her father, Robert J. Cross, was a native of Newburgh, N. Y., but moved to near Detroit, Mich., in 1825 and thence to Coldwater in 1830. Five years later, he came to Roscoe, Ill., where he became a successful agriculturist. He was quite a prominent man in the county and held many positions of trust and honor. He was the first County Commissioner appointed in 1836 and was the first County Treasurer appointed by the County Commissioners, serving in that capacity for three years. In 1816, he was elected by the Whigs of Winnebago County to represent them in the General Assembly, and in 1816 and 1847 he was a colleague of Judge Church to revise the Constitution of the State. In 1872, he was a member of the convention to again revise the State Constitution. He was a profound thinker, a deep reasoner, and one of the ablest men the county has ever had. He died in February, 1873, when sixty-nine years of age, and was at that time a member of the General Assembly from Winnebago and Boone Counties. His wife and four children still survive him. One son, John, is in Kansas; Margaret L. became the wife of our subject; William Henry is a Congregational minister of California, and Lewis is a farmer of Iowa. The mother of these children was born July 21, 1812, and, although nearly eighty years of age, is as bright mentally as ever, but her physical condition is not of the best.

Mr. and Mrs. McAffee have been farmers in this section nearly all their lives and settled on the present farm, consisting of one hundred and thirty-five acres, which formerly constituted the home place of Mr. Cross. Their union has been blessed by the birth of three children, two daughters and one son: Hannah J., now Mrs. P. W. Ralston, residing in Chicago, her husband being a civil engineer; Julia E., now Mrs. Ernest I. Worcester, of Chicago, her husband an architect, and James C., a civil engineer working on the Columbian Exposition grounds, Chicago. Mr. McAffee is virtually a retired farmer, although living on the farm, which he has rented out for a number of years. He was born and reared a Democrat, but since 1860 has affiliated with the Republican party, although he is free to vote for the best man always.

ON, GEORGE REED. The subject of this sketch is well worthy of extended notice in this volume, for his life at home and among the law makers of Illinois is a model which any young man might emulate with profit and honor. He has practically retired from farm work and resides at his beautiful country home, the improvements on which have been brought about by his own hands, even to the planting of every tree and shrub. His home farm is very efficiently managed by his son Frank, while another estate of two hundred and seventy-five acres, one mile and a half distant, is successfully managed by his son Fred. In addition to his public service, he gives his attention to the management of two creameries, which he superintends with excellent success.

Throughout Boone County the name of the Hon.

George Reed is synonymous with public spirit, progress and honesty. He was born in Westfield, Mass., May 26, 1824, the son of Samuel F. and Patience (Sibley) Reed. His father was born in Mansfield, Conn., and died in Granville, Mass., when seventy-seven years old. For seventeen years, he was agent for and connected with the D. B. Cook Publishing Company, of Hartford, Conn., but later engaged in the grocery business, and for a time was a contractor. While employed in the last-named occupation, he built the bridges and aqueducts on the New Haven and North Hampton canal, long since in disuse, and the New Haven & North Hampton Railroad built on its bank. So far as is known, the Reed family was first represented in America by three brothers, who came from England about 1650.

The mother of our subject was born in Willington, Conn., and departed this life at the home of her son, aged eighty-eight years. Her parents, Moses and Patience (Yeamans) Sibley, were natives of the Nutmeg State, the father dying when eighty-four years, and the mother when seventy. The maternal grandfather of our subject was a farmer, and during the last years of his life was a pensioner, having served in the Revolutionary War. He and his wife reared a family of eight children, all of whom are deceased.

The family of which our subject is a member consisted of six daughters and three sons. George Reed, of this sketch, remained at home until arriving at his majority, when he removed to Hinsdale, Mass., and there worked out by the month on a farm for two years. In 1847, he came West, and in the month of June reached Boone County, where he visited a short time with his brother, Charles, in Ohio Precinct, which, upon adopting township organization, was called Spring. Thence he proceeded to the northern part of Winnebago County, where he remained two years, working by the day and month at odd jobs, for lifty or seventy-five cents per day.

In 1849, Mr. Reed returned to Spring Township, where he had purchased one hundred and twenty acres of land of the Government, to which he has since added until his estate comprises live hundred and twenty-five acres, divided into two splendid farms about one and one-half miles apart. He has also a fine creamery plant, located near the center of the town, at which he receives an average of ten thousand pounds of milk daily throughout the entire year. He also has a third interest in the Belvidere Butter and Cheese Manufacturing Company in Belvidere, which he manages successfully, and is the owner of a commodious residence and desirable lot in Belvidere. In addition to these interests, he is a stockholder and Director in the People's Bank of Belvidere.

On coming to Boone County, Mr. Reed had no moneyed capital, and borrowed the wherewithal to purchase a land warrant, paying fifty per cent. for the money. The warrant called for one hundred and sixty acres but he only received one hundred and twenty acres (for the reason that there was not another contiguous forty acres) and cost him $108 and interest. He secured the money before the note became due, and, walking to Chiago, paid the indebtedness, after which he returned home on foot through the mud.

October 10, 1849, Mr. Reed was married to Miss Eliza A. Wait, who was born in Warsaw, now Middleburg, N. Y., August 23, 1828. Further mention of her parents, Henry and Polly Wait, will be found in the biography of her brother, W. H. Wait, on another page. When the young couple commenced housekeeping, they had no furniture nor any money to make purchases, but Mr. Reed being quite handy with his saw and hammer, procured some seantling and constructed their first bedstead, also made a table, and benches for chairs. After harvest, he hauled a load of wheat with oxen to Chicago, and selling it for fifty cents per bushel, brought home some needed furniture, which was highly appreciated by his estimable wife, to whom he accords her full share for their success in life.

The four children born to our subject and his wife are as follows: Fannie E., born September 6, 1850; Franklin P., November 9, 1852; Frederick A., January 8, 1855; and Albert E., who was born July 8, 1857, died May 9, 1863. Frederick A. married Miss Caroline Wiggers, and they have become the parents of five children, four of whom are now living.

Mr. Reed has always taken an active interest in affairs pertaining to his vocation. For twenty years he was a Director on the County Board of Agriculture, serving as its President for eight years, and advancing its welfare materially during his administration. In 1886, he was elected to the office of Vice-president of the State Board of Agriculture for the Fifth Congressional District, and was re-elected in 1888, in which position he served with credit to himself and honor to the district. In 1890, he was elected Director in the Illinois State Dairymen's Association, of which organization he is now a member.

In 1876, with a number of other farmers, Mr. Reed alded in the organization of the Belvidere Farmers' Mutual Fire and Lightning Insurance Company as a township company with four towns. Later, the law was changed, and it was re-organized into a county company, and is now one of the most prosperous companies in the State, having at present nine hundred members, with $1,589,548 at risk. Mr. Reed has been a Director from the organization of the company, and its President for the last ten years. At the annual meeting, January 6, 1891, the Secretary, Henry W. Avery, Esq., made the following statement, which will be of interest to the reader:

"The farmers of Little Boone as a whole, and the members of this Insurance Company in particular, have reason for congratulation that they are represented this year in the State Legislature by one of their number, the honored President of this organization, who to-day takes his seat as a peer among the law-makers of this great State of Illinois, one who can ever be trusted for honesty, integrity and nobility of character, whose words and votes are in harmony, and who can always be counted upon for right, justice, temperance and humanity."

In politics, Mr. Reed is a Republican, and has held nearly all the offices in his town, such as Overseer of Roads. Commissioner of Highways, School Director for twenty years, Town Clerk and Supervisor and member of the County Board twelve years, serving as Chairman of the latter a number of times. He was elected to the State Legislature in 1890, and served on the Committee of Agriculture, Warehouse, Public Charities, County and Township Organization and State Municipal Indebtedness. His vote is recorded on many good laws of the State, and he has introduced several important bills, one of which was with reference to creating the office of Food and Dairy Commissioner, and prescribing the duties of such an officer; also to prevent the coloring of oleomargarine in imitation of butter, and to prevent the making and selling of filled cheese in imitation of full cream cheese.

Mr. Reed may be justly termed "self-made," his only schooling having been obtained in a country district school; hence, too much credit cannot be accorded him for the position which he now occupies in social and business circles, and which was obtained through his own ambition and perseverance. He has a keen appreciation of the high honor his friends have conferred upon him, and feels under greater obligations since they have renominated him for the Legislature. He has no opposition, and it may safely be predicted that he will be re-elected to the position which he has so capably filled.

We cannot better close this sketch than by the following high compliment to the worth of Mr. Reed, which was published in a recent issue of the Northwestern: "Mr. Reed is a man of the people, a man of sound judgment, and one who may be relied upon to guard the interests of the masses. His record in the last Legislature will bear the closest scrutiny. He was found on the right side every time when the votes on important measures were taken. With a clean record, and the experience of one session to his credit, he will enter upon the duties of a second term with undoubted recognition, and will be placed in position to exert a wider induence with satisfactory results to himself and his constituents."

EVI P. II. MUNRO, who is engaged in general farming on section 1, New Milford Township, is a worthy representative of one of the honored pioneer families of Winnebago County. He was born on the 30th of June, 1828, in Troy, N. Y., and is a son of Levi and Esther II. (Carmichael) Munro, both of whom were natives of the Empire State. His parents came to Illinois in July, 1838, and settled on one hundred and sixty acres of land on section 1, New Milford Township. The land was then worth about $1.50 per acre and is now valued at $300 per acre. It lies just outside the city limits of Rockford and is a very desirable property. The father died January 3, 1875, at the age of seventy-four years, and his wife was called to her final rest August 29, 1857, at the age of fifty years. They had three children: Harriet A., wife of Isaac Rowley, a farmer of Guilford Township; Levi, of this sketch; and Milton C., now of Cedar Falls, lowa.

Our subject was a lad of only ten years when with his parents he came to this country. His educational advantages were very limited, for the schools here were few and of an inferior order. On the breaking out of the late war, he and his brother enlisted, December 6, 1861, for three years' service as members of Company E, First Illinois Light Artillery. From Camp Douglas in Chicago they went to Cairo, Ill., and on the 27th of March embarked for Pittsburg Landing. They took part in the terrible battle of Shiloh, where our subject was placed on the caisson to deal out the ammunition, his officer saying that his head would prove level in the emergency. He was wounded but stood at his post until ordered to fall back. His brother was at gun No. 4. The battery held an exposed position in front of Beauregard who made the most determined and desperate effort to capture the guns but did not succeed. Mr. Munro was discharged on account of disability, resulting from his wound and exposure, December 6, 1862, and at the same time his brother was mustered out. The latter almost lost his life and would have done so had it not been for the faithful nursing of Levi.

Mr. Munro has never married but has a pleasant home on the old farm and is recognized as one of the leading agriculturists of the community and a valued citizen, as well as an upright man. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles and, religiously, holds the faith of the laptist Church but is not connected with any congregation. For several years he has been a member of G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R. For more than half a century he has resided in Winnebago County and can well remember many incidents of his pioneer days. The journey to Illinois was made by the Eric Canal and the Lakes to Chicago, and thence by ox-team to this place. The farm products were marketed in Chicago, where wheat brought only forty cents a bushel and pork from $1 to $2 per hundred. Those days have now passed away and in the years which have followed Mr. Munro has acquired a handsome competence and is now the owner of a very valuable property.

HIPPLE JILSON, now deceased, was one of the most prominent citizens of Rockford. An influential man, he exercised a power for good in this community which will long be felt though he has passed away. He was born in Elbridge, Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1819, and was a son of David Jilson, of one of the leading families of Massachusetts. In his native State our subject was reared to manhood and in Weedsport, N. Y., married Miss Caroline Bayles, a native of Cayuga County, and a daughter of Aaron and Lydia (Edmister) Bayles, natives of New Jersey. The latter were married near Chenango, N. Y., where they resided for some years, after which Mr. Bayles became a gram dealer on the Canal, He subsequently located in Weedsport, where he did business as a merchant and became very wealthy. He and his wife spent their last years with their daughter, Mrs. Jilson. Mrs. Bayles' death occurred at the age of eighty-one years and the husband and father was called to his final rest at the age of eightyseven. Both were members of the Baptist Church. A brother of Mrs. Jilson founded the first college in Milwaukee and later established the Bayles Business College, of Dubuque, Iowa, the first in that city. Her only sister, Mrs. St. Johns, is living in Rockford and she and Mrs. Jilson are the only survivors of the family.

With his wife and children, Mr. Jilson came to Rockford in 1855, and as a partner of E. St. Johns embarked in the grocery business. After some years, he became sole proprietor, and at length sold out, removing to Ogle County, Ill., purchasing a farm near Byron. After operating his land for some years, he returned to Rockford and established a tailor and repair shop, to which business he devoted his energies throughout nearly the remainder of his life. He accumulated a good property and was well-to-do at the time of his death.

It is meet that when a good man dies some tribute should be paid to his memory. Mr. Jilson was essentially a self-made man, and adversity seemed only to draw out the latent energy and force of his character, which he concentrated with renewed effort on the work in hand. Truth, industry and uprightness were cardinal points in his creed and his word was as good as his bond. From his infancy he was crippled but he did not allow this accident to stand in his way. When a young man be joined the Baptist Church but afterwards became a liberal thinker. He possessed an inexhaustible fund of wit and humor, which made him a pleasant and interesting companion, for he was also a great reader and well informed. His life was above reproach, his morality of the highest character. He never used tobacco or intoxicating liquors in any way, and ever exerted his influence in behalf of temperance on those lines. He also voted with the Prohibition party for many years. In early life he was a stanch Abolitionist and his home in New York, during slavery days, was a station on the Underground Railroad, where he helped many a slave on his way to Canada and freedom. His first Presidential vote was cast for James G. Birney, the Abolition candidate. To the poor and needy he was ever ready to lend a helping hand and he had the respect of both young and old. In 1891, he was stricken with the grip and after a week passed away.

Mrs. Jilson has since her husband's death resided on West State Street, and has successfully managed the property left by him and her parents. She is a most estimable lady and ranks high in social circles. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Jilson were born three children. Carrie P. became the wife of Charles Lundgren and died leaving four children: her two daughters, Ethel and Carrie, now living with their grandmother, Mrs. Jilson, and two sons, Frank and Lewis, residing in Indiana. Harriet Helena is the wife of Lewis A. Weyburn, a manufacturer of Rockford, by whom she has two daughters. Blanche and Jennic. Harry married Lida Mellon and occupies a position with the firm of Emerson, Talcott & Co.

MARLES HASKIN. The results of undagging perseverance, prudent economy and investment and good habits, probably find no better exponent in the city of Rockford than in the above-named gentleman who is residing at No. 405 East Street. He is what may be truly termed a self-made man, having started at the bottom round of life and now ranks among the substantial citizens of the county. He has always taken an active interest in all public enterprises, and is an ardent advocate of both church and school. He is now living retired in the city, and with his wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which body he joined in his youth. As soon as it was possible to do so, Mr. Haskin organized a class in Harlem, which was composed of eight members who congregated in a log house on section 29. Our subject was made Steward of the church, which position he held for thirty years, He was also a teacher of the Bible Class for many years. On coming to Rockford, he transferred his membership to the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church, where he is one of its active workers.

Born in Washington, Berkshire County, Mass., March 14, 1817, our subject is a son of Amos Haskin, a native of Salisbury, Conn., from which place his father removed to Washington, and operated a gristmill for a number of years. The grandfather made his own tombstone, working on the inscription, with the exception of the date of his death. His remains and those of his wife lie buried in the cemetery in that place.

Amos Haskin was very young when his parents removed to Washington, where he was reared and married to Lovisa Bille, who was a native of that place and the daughter of William Bille. She is buried by the side of her husband in the same cemetery in which the grandparents of our subject are interred. Charles, of this sketch, was the youngest member of the parental family of ten children, and his father being in limited circumstances, he commenced when quite young to make his own way in the world, his first employment being working on farms in the neighborhood. He later learned the trade of a stonemason, and when sixteen years of age was able to superintend the work. Soon after reaching his majority, he commenced contracting in Lee, Mass., where he resided until 1811, the date of his coming to Illinois. He was accompanied on the journey hither by his young bride, and on locating in Winnebago County found the greater part of the land west of Rock River was still owned by the Government. He purchased eighty acres on the east side, and later rented an improved farm and began housekeeping in a log cabin. Three years later, Mr. Haskin purchased a partially improved farm of one hundred acres on section 29, paying therefor the sum of $700. He erected a temporary frame house on the place, in which his family lived while he cleared and further cultivated the property. Chicago was the nearest market where he could get cash for the farm produce, and as there were no railroads the trip was made with ox-teams. The following year our subject purchased one hundred and sixty acres of wild prairie land on section 31, still owning, however, his property on section 29, on which latter tract he erected a good set of buildings and resided until 1882, when he left it in charge of his son and came to Rockford.

August 29, 1841, in Jefferson County, N. Y., Miss Mary W. Atwood became the wife of our subject. She was a native of Hinsdale, Berkshire County, Mass., having been born November 21, 1819, and was a daughter of the Rev. Phineas and Huldah (Haskell) Atwood, also natives of the Bay State. Mr. and Mrs. Haskin, of this sketch, have had four children: Amos, Emily L., Wright and Daniel. Amos enlisted in Company A, Seventy-fourth Hlinois Infantry, and gave his life in the service of his country, dying at the age of twenty-two. All were members of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church. The father of Mrs. Haskin was a son of Hezekiah and Lydia (Heath) Atwood, and removed from that State to New York, where he resided for a number of years. In 1844, he came to Winnebago County, and, settling in Harlem Township, improved and lived upon a farm until his death, when eighty-six years of age. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in his younger days, of which denomination he was a local preacher and later an ordained Elder. The mother of Mrs. Haskin was the daughter of Roger and Mary (Webster) Haskell; she also died in Harlem Township when in her ninety-third year. The son of our subject has been twice married, his first wife being Frances L. Hall, by whom he has two children: one who died young and one living, Emily Fern. His present wife is Florence Poulton. In politics, our subject is a Republican, and has filled various offices of trust in the township, having served as Justice of the Peace, Assessor, Highway Commissioner and member of the School Board.

MOMAS W. EVANS has for many years been a leading farmer of Winnebago County and now resides on his pleasant home which is situated on a hillside on section 26, New Milford Township. He is a native of Steuben Township, Oneida County, N. Y., and is a son of John J. and Anna (Williams) Evans, who were natives of Wales. His grandfather, John Lee Evans, was born in Carnaryonshire, Wales, and there died in early life, leaving a widow and four children, the youngest of whom was the father of our subject. John J. Williams married in Wales and came at once to America, sailing from Liverpool to New York, where he arrived after three months. He commenced life in limited circumstances but at his death owned one hundred acres of valuable land. This worthy couple lost one daughter, Margaret, who died at the age of twelve years. Three of their children grew to mature years, Janet, John and Thomas. The mother died in July, 1839, at the age of sixty-one years, and Mr. Evans was afterward married again. By the second union he had two sons and three daughters, but John and Josephine died at the ages of ten and twelve years respectively. The living are David, Margaret and Phoebe. The first was a volunteer soldier in the late war, serving as Standard Bearer of the Third New York Battery. At the close of the war, he went to Topeka, Kan., and for three years was Superintendent of Schools. He was afterwards City Attorney of Great Bend, Kan., and Supervisor of the United States Census for the northern district of that State. He was called to Washington by that department and is now in the Navy Department there. Phoebe resides in Ransom, Oneida County, being the widow of James Griffith. Margaret is the widow of Paschal Enos and is Postnistress at Kingsville, Ill.

Our subject is the only survivor of the first family. In the fall of 1843, he left New York and spent the winter in St. Louis, Mo., working at the carpenter's trade until the succeeding spring, when he came to Rockford and erected many buildings in that city during the next five years. On the 4th of July, 1848, he was united in marriage with Caroline Crill, daughter of Henry and Betsy (Brooks) Crill. Unto them were born eleven children, seven sons and four daughters, six of whom grew to mature years, while five are yet living: Belle, wife of Russell Barrows, a farmer of New Milford Township; John O., who operates the old homestead in Monroe Township, Ogle County; Henrietta, wife of J. C. Thompson; Gene Paul, a farmer of Ogle County; and Thaddeus Wilber at home.

Mr. Evans first located in Ogle County and was one of the organizers of Monroe Township. He served as its first Assessor and was Justice of the Peace for six years, when he resigned and removed to Rockford. His first wife died April 28, 1874, at the age of forty-four years, and he was again married, September 30, 1875, in Utica, N. Y., his second union being with Laura E. Lewis of Steuben, Oneida County, N. Y. They have one daughter, Mattie Lois, a bright maiden of fourteen summers.

Mr. Evans continued to reside in Rockford until 1856, and then returned to the old farm in Ogle County, where he had purchased five hundred acres of Government land at $1.25 per acre. His first purchase where he now lives was a hundred-acre tract, to which he added until he had six-hundred acres. It is now occupied as three farms by his children. In 1880, he purchased his home farm, comprising two hundred and forty-five acres which pay to him a golden tribute for his care and cultivation. The pleasant home is beautifully situated on a hillside and commands a good view of the surrounding country. Mr. and Mrs. Evans rank high in social circles and are genial, companionable people who have many warm friends in this community. Our subject has been blessed with prosperity and is now enjoying a well-deserved competence acquired through his own industry, good management and enterprise.

dent of Rockford has been more closely connected with its growth from an unimportant village to one of the most enterprising cities of Northern Illinois, than the gentleman whose life sketch is herewith presented. Although not a native of the city, Beverly, Mass., being his birthplace, and June, 1830, the date thereof, the most of his active life has been passed within its limits, and for many years he has resided in his beautiful home at No. 913 Kilburn Avenue.

The parents of our subject, Thomas and Mary (Raymond) Carrico, were natives of New England, born and reared in Beverly, Mass. His paternal grandfather, Benjamin Carrico, was a mechanic, and his maternal grandfather, who was a merchantman, traded with southern islands in mahogany and other choice woods. Our subject is the only child, with the exception of a daughter, Mary, deceased. After the death of his mother, which occurred when he was quite small, he was tenderly cared for by an aunt, Mrs. W. F. Parish, of Beverly. His father removed to Ohio, and some time in the '40s proceeded thence to Logan, lowa, where he married again and remained until his death in 1881.

In the spring of 1854 Mr. Carrico came West to Rockford, where three years later he was united in marriage with Miss Mary L., daughter of Benjamin and Eleanor (Maynard) Kilburn, natives of Massachusetts, who had come to Rockford in 1837. After their marriage, the young couple located at once on a tract of land comprising one hundred and sixty acres, which he purchased from the Government, and which was located a short distance from the present post-office, but at that time considered out in the country. Mr. and Mrs. Carrico were married in a house that stood on the site of their present home, where she was also born. The stone quarry and sand-bed, which have since proved so valuable, are now in the thickly-settled part of the city.

Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Carrico, one of whom died in infancy; Frank K., died in 1890 of consumption, aged thirty years; and Mary E., wife of John Salter, Jr., of Chicago, died in 1891, at the age of twenty-seven years, leaving two little daughters to the care of the bereft grandparents. The six children are bright and beautiful, the comfort of their grandparents as well as the solace of their father. Fred K., the youngest son, now thirteen years old, lives with his parents. Mrs. Carrico is one of seven children, of whom she alone survives. Her father died in 1861, but her mother, at the advanced age of eighty-one, still survives, and makes her home with Mrs. Carrico.

Mr. Carrico is still carrying on a large business in building stone and sand. Politically, he alliliates with the Republican party, and although he belongs to no sect or creed, preferring liberty of thought and belief, yet he is an ever-willing supporter of reformatory measures, and has a neat little mission chapel on his beautiful grounds.

Benjamin Kilburn, whose portrait accompanies this sketch, was born in Belchertown, Mass., in 1808, and was one of the very earliest of the pioneers of Rockford, there being but two or three residents here at the time of his arrival. He lived through the period of transition from the wild waste to the flourishing city, and was always interested in anything that tended to the advancement of the place. Although he passed away in the prime of life, when only fifty-two years old, his influence was widespread, and he left a name that is imperishable in the annals of Rockford. Kilburn Avenue, a beautiful street, is named in his honor, and the old residents still remember Mr.

Kilburn, to whom they always refer with affection. We are glad to hand his portrait down to posterity, so that coming generations may look upon the features of one of the pioneers of Rockford, who contributed so effectively to its progress.

AVID C. COWAN, a general merchant at Poplar Grove, Boone County, was born in Fall River, Mass., January 1, 1854. He is the son of Robert Cowan who was born in Buteshire, Scotland, where also his grandparents were born and spent their entire lives. Robert Cowan was the only member of the family who came to America, emigrating hither when a young man. He was engaged in the cotton mills in Fall River and Bernan, R. L. residing in the East until 1848, at which time he came to Illinois. Making a short stay here, he returned to New England, and in the spring of 1851 came with his family to Boone Township where he had purchased land. There was a log house on the place, in which the family resided and here Mr. Cowan engaged in farming until his decease.

Our subject's mother, who bore the maiden name of Mary Carment, was a native of Glasgow, Scotland, and the daughter of Alexander and Elizabeth Carment. She is at present residing in Poplar Grove and is the mother of four children: Robert; Mary E., Mrs. E. B. Ball; David C., and Emma J., the wife of Arthur G. Edgell. Our subject was an infant when his parents removed to the Prairie State and received his education in the district schools of this vicinity. When nineteen years of age, he began teaching school, being thus employed for three terms. At the expiration of that time, he entered the State Normal School at Normal, 11L, and after a course of two years was again engaged as a teacher at Bulkley, Iroquois County. Three years later, he came to Poplar Grove, this county, and in company with his father-in-law engaged in the lumber business and later as a hardware merchant.

In 1884, Mr. Cowan went to the Territory of Dakota and pre-empted a tract of Government land in Clark County, and after a residence there of one year returned to this place and engaged in the mercantile business. He carries a large stock of general merchandise, and by his conrecous treatment of customers is well liked by all who know him and has a good share of patronage.

Julia Webster, who was born in this county, became the wife of our subject in 1872. She is the daughter of Willet S. and Mary J. (Wheeler) Webster, and by her union with our subject has become the mother of two children: Mabel A. and Frank C. Mr. Cowan is a member of Poplar Grove Lodge A. O. U. W. and is a demitted member of the Masonic lodge at Buckley. A Republican in politics, he east his first Presidential vote for Hayes, and in local affairs has served as a member of the County Board of Supervisors for six years, five years as County Superintendent of Schools, and as a member of the Republican County Central Committee, has often represented his party in county and district conventions.

LSON H. KEELER, editor and proprietor of the Belvidere Northwestern, a weekly newspaper, was born in Belvidere Township, Boone County, March 13, 1854. His paternal grandfather, Martin Keeler, a native of Connecticut, went with his brother Joseph to Cortland County, X. Y. Both purchased land in the town of Truxton, cleared and developed farms, and there spent the remainder of their days. Martin married Anna Woodruff, who was born in Fabius, Onondaga County, N. Y., and died on the home farm.

Warren Keeler, father of our subject, was born on that farm June 12, 1821, and by purchasing the interest of the other heirs became owner of the old homestead, upon which he resided until 1819, when he sold out and emigrated to Boone County, Ill. He bought a tract of land of two hundred and twenty-five acres in Belvidere Township, of which one hundred and twenty-five acres were broken, the remainder being covered with timber. The improvements consisted of a log house and frame barn. Mr. Keeler there engaged in farming until 1878, when he sold that land and resided in the town of Spring until 1888, since which time he has lived a retired life in Belvidere, He was married, January 11, 1841, to Delotia Keeney, who was born in Fabius, N. Y., July 21, 1818. The family numbered five children: Felecia B., Horatio, Mary A., Alson H. and Emma L. The parents are both members of the First Baptist Church and are highly respected people of Belvidere.

The maternal grandfather of our subject was Champion Keeney, a native of Connecticut, and a son of Simon Keeney, who was born in the same State and removed to New York in 1796, becoming one of the early settlers of Fabius. In the midst of the forest, he developed a farm and went through all the experiences and hardships of pioneer life. While he worked upon the farm, his wife soun and wove the cloth used in clothing the family. Her maiden name was Polly Bates. The grandfather of our subject was only two years old when his parents emigrated to Onondaga County. He married Esther Daniels, a native of that county, and for many years there followed farming. His last days were spent in retirement in the village of Fabius, where he died at the advanced age of ninety-one. He served in the War of 1812, and his widow is one of its pensioners.

We now take up the personal history of our subject who acquired his early education in the country schools and supplemented it by study in Belvidere and at Beloit College. In the autumn of 1874, he went to Butler County, Iowa, where he engaged in teaching through the winter, and in the spring of 1875 returned to Belvidere and opened a real-estate and insurance office with R. W. Coon, publisher of the Belvidere Northwestern. Mr. Keeler afterward became connected with the paper as reporter and compositor, and later was foreman of the office and local editor until 1888. In that year he resigned his position and went to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where he spent two years, after which he was foreman and city editor of the Waukegan Gazette, of Waukegan, Ill., for two years. He then purchased the Northwestern, of which he is now sole proprietor.

Mr. Keeler was married, September 23, 1880, to Edith A. Swasey, who was born in Portsmouth, N. H., and is a daughter of Samuel and Edith A. (Holmes) Swasey. They have one son, Lawrence S., born December 23, 1882. The parents are both members of the Presbyterian Church. Since casting his first Presidential vote for R. B. Hayes, Mr. Keeler has been a stanch Republican. Socially, he is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M.; Kishwaukee Chapter No. 90, R. A. M.; Big Thunder Lodge No. 28, I. O. O. F., and several other of the secret benevolent societies.

In the spring of 1892, Mr. Keeler was elected a member of the City Council, representing the Third Ward, and was also in the same spring elected a member of the Board of Education of the South Belvidere School.

Under its present management, the Northwestern has not only been enlarged but has been improved in every way. The circulation has been greatly increased, and the liberal patronage which it now receives is well deserved. In January, 1892, Mr. Keeler removed to his own new office building on South State Streef. He undoubtedly occupies one of the finest buildings used for newspaper publication in Northern Illinois. It was built for the spurpose, and is a handsome two-story brick building, conveniently arranged, and supplied with all the accessories of the modern office. It has a complete outfit for a job office, and its machinery is run by water power.

UGUST BLOMBERG, a prosperous business man and stockholder in the Forest City Baking Company, recently organized at No. 609 Seventh Street, was formerly engaged in the bakery business here but sold out to this company. He was born in Sweden, September 22, 1847, and learned his trade there after reaching his fourteenth birthday. In September, 1879, he came to the United States, and subsequently to Rockford, where he established a bakery on Seventh Street. He met with unusual success and has accumulated a handsome competence. Previous to coming to Rockford, he was engaged in the bakery business in New York City, Boston, and other cities of the New England States. He is the owner of much valuable property in Rockford, and is a stockholder in the Excelsior Furniture Company. Mr. Blomberg expects to visit his native country in 1892, but will return and take charge of the Forest City Baking Company.

Mr. Blomberg is the only one of his relatives in this country. His father, John Blomberg, is still a resident of Sweden, and is seventy years of age. He served his country faithfully as a soldier for thirty-four years. He is a prominent man in his native province and is highly respected. The maiden name of his wife was Cathrina Bengston and she died in her native country many years ago. She was a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and Mr. Blomberg holds membership in the same at the present time.

Our subject is a public-spirited citizen and takes a deep interest in all local matters. He is a worthy member of the Zion Lutheran Church, and in poltics supports the principles of the Republican party. To his marriage with Josephine Bangston were born three interesting children: Charles A., John II. and Fred.

UMPHREY TRIPP. The citizens of Pecatonica know Mr. Tripp as not only a successful man, with large landed interests in various States, but they know him as something more, a man who is earnestly striving in all honorable ways to make the world better for his presence in it. He began life poor, and in all that the phrase implies, is the architect of his own fortune, of which he contributes constantly and generously to foster education, promote the interests of the people and relieve suffering. Orphaned at the age of sixteen, he early became self-supporting, and with no moneyed capital, but with plenty of determination and perseverance, worked his way to prosperity.

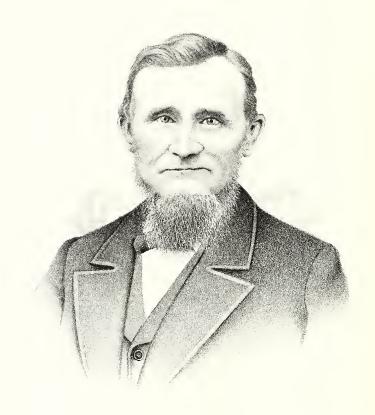

A Canadian by birth and parentage, our subject was born in Oxford, May 20, 1830. His parents, Michael and Rebecca (Sissan) Tripp, were born in New Brunswick and had a family of eight children. The mother died in Canada when only thirty-eight, but the father survived until he was about sixty, when his death occurred in Indiana. Humphrey passed his boyhood in Canada whence he removed to the States in 1855, taking up his residence in Pecatonica. From the first, he was successful in his various enterprises, and it may be said of him that he never knew the meaning of the word "failure."

November 13, 1866, Mr. Tripp was married to Cynthia A., widow of Jacob Manderville, who died in Pecatonica at the age of forty years. Mrs. Tripp was born in New York, July 20, 1826, the daughter of Abel and Betsy (Buell) Buell. Her father was born in Connecticut and died in Delaware County, N. Y., at the age of seventy-six years; while her mother was born in Connecticut and passed away in Pecatonica at the ripe old age of ninety-one years. Abel Buell was one of the brave soldiers who, during the War of 1812, contributed his services to the defense of his country, and after his death a pension was granted to his widow.

The members of the Buell family, with the exception of one brother, were stanch adherents of Democratic principles, and they were uniformly men of uprightness and honor, highly esteemed wherever they resided. Mrs. Tripp was one of nine children, three of whom are now living. She is a lady whose kindness of heart and generosity are recognized by her large circle of acquaintances, and she also possesses large executive ability and excellent judgment, which enable her to assist her husband in his business transactions by her sound and active co-operation.

Mr. Tripp believes that the best interests of the Government are subserved by Protection, hence is firm in his allegiance to Republican principles. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workman, and is prominent in both orders. In his religious connections, he is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which his estimable wife also belongs. Mr. and Mrs. Tripp are stockholders in the shoe factory at Pecatonica, own considerable valuable village property, including business blocks and residence lots, and, besides this, are the owners of more than thirteen hundred and twenty acres of fine farming land in Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois, so that their attention is closely occupied by their landed interests.

ANS F. PETERSON. In a city of the rapid growth and development which has characterized Rockford, the importance of the line of industry in which Mr. Peterson is engaged cannot be over-estimated. To the contractor and builder in effect, conjointly with the architect, belongs the task of imparting to the city that appearance of solidity, wealth, refinement and comfort which at once stamps its citizens as progressive and enterprising.

Mr. Peterson has been a resident of Rockford since 1859, and during that time has met with success in his business. He is a skillful and reliable workman, and has erected many fine homes in the city, besides numerous business blocks. He has a beautiful residence at No. 105 Baker Street, and is one of the most prominent and highly respected residents of Rockford.

The parents of our subject, Peter and Christina (Hansen) 'Swanson, passed their entire lives in Sweden, and died when fifty-two and seventy-two years of age, respectively. They were members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Of the seven children born to them, three are yet living in Sweden, all of whom are married. Our subject and a sister, Charlotte, were the only members of the family to come to the United States. She became the wife of Peter Johnson, and died in Rockford when about middle age. Her husband is still residing in this city.

Our subject was born in Jonkoping, Sweden, on the 14th of October, 1847, and there learned his trade of mason and contractor. He was married in that country to Miss Eva C. Samuelson, a native of the same province as her husband. Her parents passed their entire lives in Sweden, and she grew to womanhood in her native land. After the birth of one son, Osear, now deceased, Mr. and Mrs. Peterson took passage for the United States, arriving in this country soon after. They lived for one year in Geneva, III., where Mr. Peterson followed his trade, then came to Rockford, and here he has resided ever since. In 1888, he had the misfortune to lose his estimable wife, who possessed many virtues of mind and heart. At the time of her decease she was sixty-six years old. She was a member of the Lutheran Church, to which her children also belonged.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson were the parents of six children, but lost four: Carl A., an infant unnamed, Oscar F. and Alexander F. Those living are Mary, an accomplished and educated young lady, who is at home, and Samuel, a brick-mason by trade, who is also at home. Mr. Peterson was one of the first members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, of Rockford, and has been Trustee of the same. In politics, he upholds the principles of the Republican party, and has been Supervisor of his ward, the Second, for four years.

A portrait of Mr. Peterson accompanies this sketch.

ENRY II. ROBINSON, a real-estate dealer of Rockford, is a typical business man of this day and age of the world, wide-awake (and enterprising, his entire life characterized by thrift and push. He was born in 1845, and in 1847 the family made a permanent location in Rockford, Ill. In March, 1850, the father crossed the plains to California in company with a number of the prominent citizens of Rockford, and about six months later landed at San Francisco. He died soon afterward at Mud Creek, near Hangtown, and was buried by his friends in that far-off place. His wife was called to her final rest in 1870. She was a member of the Congregational Church. In the family were two sons and a daughter: Mary H., wife of Dr. E. P. Catlin, of this city; Norman S., who married Addie K. Davis, of Chicago, and is a prominent eitizen, now living a retired life in Eugene, Ore.; and H. H., of this sketch.

Indolence and idleness are utterly foreign to the nature of our subject. At the age of nineteen, he left home and went to California where he spent one year. He has traveled considerably and has thereby become a well-in ormed man, at the same time gaining an excellent knowledge of men and their manners. After his return to Rockford, he engaged in the hardware business for some years and then turned his attention to real-estate dealmg. From the beginning, he has met with excellent success. For about two years past, he has been in partnership with Mr. Haines. They deal in real estate in the West, in Chicago, other parts of the country, and especially in Rockford. Mr. Robinson is also a Director in the Third National Bank, and a stockholder in many other enterprises which add to the life and business prosperity of the city. He was Secretary of the first Street Railway Company, the road being built in 1880, the first car being run on the 1th of March of the following year. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of Rockford Hospital and of the executive committee of the Rockford Seminary. Of the Young Men's Christian Association, he is a prominent member and has held a number of its offices, being President at this writing. He is a friend to all educational and moral interests and never withholds his support from any enterprise calculated to prove of public benefit.

OHN L. WITBECK, proprietor of the Flora Meadows Stock Farm, in the township of Flora, Boone County, was born in Athens, Greene County, N. Y., February 19, 1812. His father, Isaac T. Witbeck, was also born in that place, where he ranked among the well-to-do citizens.

The father of our subject was reared and educated in his native town and resided there until 1853, when he removed to Chicago and was engaged in the manufacture of carriages, wagons, plows and other kinds of vehicles and agricultural implements, as a member of the firm of II. Witbeck & Co., which was one of the largest manufacturing houses in the city at that time. He continued in the business about four years. Then, on account of ill-health, he sought a country home and, coming to Belvidere, lived there one year, and then purchased a portion of the farm where our subject now resides. After occupying that place a few years, the elder Mr. Witbeck removed to the village and resided there until his death. In politics, he was a Republican and held various offices of trust, representing both Flora and Belvidere Townships on the County Board of Supervisors. He was one of the organizers of the First and Second National Banks, and also one of the Directors in the former institution.

Our subject's mother, Miss Miranda Onderdonk, was born in May, 1816. She became the mother of four children, three of whom are living, viz: Tunis, John L. and Abraham O. Her only daughter died in her fifth year. He of whom we write received his early education in the schools of New York State, supplemented by attendance in the city schools of Chicago, and later in Belvidere. He took a commercial course at Bryant & Stratton's College in the Garden City, and after his marriage located on the farm which he now owns and occupies, where he devotes much attention to the breeding of fine stock. He has upwards of sixty head of well-bred horses, including draft and trotting stock. In the former, Clydesdales are his favorite breed, and in the latter Hambletonians and Mambrinos.

In 1864, John L. Witbeek and Miss Marietta Olney were united in marriage. Their children are, May, now Mrs. Jesse Wheeland, who lives in Belvidere and has one child; Olney married Jennie Bennett and lives in Belvidere; Alice, Ethel and Mr. and Mrs. Witbeck are members of the Presbyterian Church, and in his political relations our subject votes the Republican His wife was born in Girard, Branch County, Mich., and was the daughter of Daniel T. Olney, who was born September 22, 1816, in Saratoga County, N. Y. The first ancestor in America was Thomas Olney, of Hertfordshire, England, who came to America with his family in 1635, in the ship "Planter," and located in Salem, Mass. A year later, that gentleman was appointed Surveyor, and was granted forty acres of land on Jeffrey Creek, now in Manchester, Mass. He was a freeman the same year and was early imbued with the views of Roger Williams. March 12, 1638, he was excluded from the Colony of Massachusetts, and a year later from the church in Salem. He went to Narragansett Bay and located on the west side of Seekonk River and, with eleven others, founded a colony called Providence, purchasing their rights from the Indians.

Thomas Olney was one of the founders of the First Baptist Church of Providence, and at one time was acting pastor and prominent in public affairs. The next in line of descent also bore the name of Thomas, and was born in England in 1632. His son, William, was born in Rhode Island, June 25, 1663, and the next in line was his son William, who was born October 6, 1694. Nathan Olney, the son of William, Jr., was the next in line and was born November 20, 1720, in Rhode Island. That gentleman was the great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Witbeck. He emigrated from Providence to Saratoga County, N. Y., between the years 1765 and 1770, and was one of the first settlers of the county, where he resided until his decease in 1778.

The maiden name of the wife of Nathan Olney was Elizabeth Goodspeed. She was born in Rhode Island and died in Saratoga County, N. Y. The great-grandfather of Mrs. Witbeck, Stephen Olney, was born in Rhode Island January 31, 1758. He cleared a farm from the wilderness in Saratoga County, upon which he died in 1833. The maiden name of his wife was Sarah Irish. The grandfather of Mrs. Witbeek, Thomas Olney, was born in Saratoga County, in October, 1784. After his marriage, he settled in the town of Northumberland, purchased a partially-improved farm, and lived there until 1836, then went to the Territory of Michigan, where he was one of the early settlers in the town of Girard, Branch County, and there his decease occurred July 22, 1861. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Taylor; she was born in Connecticut, and her father, the greatgrandfather of Mrs. Witbeck, was a native of Connecticut and a soldier in the Revolutionary War, dying at the advanced age of one hundred years. The grandmother of Mrs. Witbeck died at Girard, Mich., in February, 1886.

Daniel T. Olney was reared in his native State and was twenty years of age when he went to Michigan and engaged in the mercantile business at Girard. In 1848, he came to Illinois, and now lives retired in Belvidere. In 1843, he was married to Adelia M. Ames, who was born in Burlington, Vt., and was the daughter of William Ames.

affords better encouragement to a man who desires to devote himself to agricultural life than does Hlinois. Its resources are almost inexhaustible and the climate is adapted to the cultivation of various crops. Our subject is one who has found success in the line of agriculture and now follows general farming and stock-raising. His birth occurred in England in 1836 and he was one of eleven children born to Thomas and Charlotte (Kemp) Lloyd.

The father of our subject, Thomas Lloyd, was a Welshman, born in the year 1792, and when seventeen years of age he was drafted for a soldier. This was not at all to his taste and he took "French leave" and went to England, where he met and married Miss Kemp. He was a stone cutter by trade and followed that trade in England until 1810, when he became convinced that he could better his condition very materially by crossing the ocean to America. In the above-mentioned year, he left his wife and children and took passage for the United States on the brig "Europe" which landed him in New York after an ocean voyage of six weeks. He then went earnestly to work to accumulate means to send for his wife and five children and found employment on the Eric Canal for two years. When the canal was finished, he began working for a man, one Brayton, with whom he remained for some time. About a year and a half after his residence in this c untry, he sent for his little family and met them at Hayana, Schuyler County, N. Y. In the spring of 1814, he came with his family to Chicago, by water, and he and his eldest son William took one hundred and seventy-three acres of Government land which they soon deeded. Here he passed the remainder of his days, dying in 1867 when seventy-five years of age. He was a hard-working, industrious man and no one in the community was more highly esteemed. He was among the early settlers of Winnebago County and soon became inured to the hardships of pioneer life. The sterling qualities of his nature would not permit him to relinquish his hold upon the advantages that he here saw before him. His wife followed him to the grave on the 27th of November, 1879, when seventy-nine years of age. They had been the parents of eleven children, five of whom reached mature years: William; Mary, Mrs. John Lövesee, who died in * Wisconsin when sixty-live years of age, leaving a a family; Martha became Mrs. Irish and died in Kansas; Thomas (our subject), and Amelia, Mrs. Henry Lovesee of Roscoe.

The original of this notice was reared to manhood in the locality where he now lives and acquired a knowledge of the three R's in the district school. He has been a life-tong farmer and has brought the whole strength of his mental ability to bear upon his life work. He was married on the 23d of September, 1880, to Miss Ellen Brayton, a native of Byron, Ogle County, Ill., born November 29, 1852. Her father, Russell C. Brayton, was a native of Canada, who died in Manchester, Ill., in 1889, when eighty-four years of age, and her mother, whose maiden name was Susan Gurnee, was a native of New York. They were the parents of eleven children, nearly all the younger members alive at the present time.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd became the parents of four interesting children but three are deceased: Mary, died March 1t, 1888, when three years of age; Thomas E. died February 27, 1891, when fourteen months old, and Alma, who died suddenly on the 3d of March, 189t, when not quite four years of age. They have one child living, Charlotte S., who was born June 18, 1882. She is a bright, pleasant little girl and the hope and pride of her afflicted parents. Although Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd started with limited means they are now the owners of two hundred and fifty-four acres of choice land and have one hundred and seventy acres under cultivation. They do general farming. and keep a small dairy of eight or ten cows, selling the cream at Argyle. They keep about thirty head of horses and horned cattle, and are among the substantial people of the locality. Mr. Lloyd is independent in his political views and votes for the man rather than the party. He is a member of the Methodist, and his wife a member of the Baptist, Church.

HARLES W. JOHNSON, of New Milford, is a native of Clarkson, Monroe County, N. Y. He was born April 13, 1829. His father, Williams Johnson, was born at Haverstraw, N. Y., December 29, 1799, and was a son of Theo S. Johnson, a farmer, who died in 1848, at the age of seventy years, leaving three sons and four daughters. He was twice married and by the first union he had five children: Williams, father of our subject; Zebulon, who was born April 13, 1801, and is residing upon a farm in New York, which has been his home since 1825; Mrs. Sarah Bonnell, of Alexander Bay; Rebecca and Clarissa, who are now deceased. The two brothers were married at the same time to Sallie and Matilda Paddock respectively and as partners engaged in farming until two years before the death of Williams, which occurred December 3, 1886, at the age of eighty-six years, in Spencerport, N. Y., where he had gone two years previous. His wife died December 29, 1891, at the age of eighty-three, in the same place.

Charles W. Johnson of this sketch acquired a liberal education and at the age of twenty-five years, in the fall of 1852, came West on a visit. Two years later, he again came to Illinois and purchased lands in Ogle and Winnebago Counties, making his home in New Milford Township. His farm now comprises two hundred and forty acres and has increased from $10 to $65 per acre in value. On the 8th of May, 1857, he married Phebe Jane Horton, of Tompkins County, N. Y., daughter of Levi D. and Susan (Polhamus) Horton, natives of the Empire State. They came West in 1843 by teams and after four weeks settled in New Milford Township, Winnebago County. They had a family of seven children. Mrs. Johnson acquired her portion of education under the instruction of Misses Caroline and Eliza Miller, in the parlor of Esquire Miller.

O. M. Harge

Our subject and his wife resided upon a farm for some twenty years and in 1876 rented their land and made a visit to the East, since which time they have been residents of New Milford. Their home has been blessed with three children: Charles S., who was born March 12, 1859, graduated in music under Prof. Hood in 1879, and from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, where he is still living. He is a fine performer on both the piano and organ. Susan Marilda was born November 3, 1865, and is now the wife of William Hill on the old homestead. Nellie Eusebia Huntley, born December 11, 1875, is now a student in the Allen Seminary, of West Newton, Mass. The family is one held in high regard and holds a high social rank. Mr. Johnson was first a Whig and then voted with the Republican party for twenty-five years but is now a Prohibitionist. The upright life he has lived has won him many friends and he is numbered among the prominent and enterprising citizens of New Milford.

W. HAEGG, a real-estate dealer and investment broker and merchant of Rockfords who has resided in the city since 1869, claims Sweden as the land of his birth. His parents, S. J. and Charlotte (Lindstrom) Haegg, are still living in that country, where they are prominent people and active members of the Lutheran Church. The father is a manufacturer of furniture.

Mr. Haegg, was only sixteen years of age when he came to Hinois, with nothing to depend upon but his own efforts. He began clerking in a drygoods house, and, meriting promotion, steadily worked his way upward. Later on, he purchased a farm in the vicinity of Rockford, on which he resided for three years. In 1880, he removed to the city and organized the Skandia Plow Company, of which he was Secretary and Director for some years. This company started with a capital of $25,000, which has since been increased to $200,000, and has now capacity for the employment of two hundred men. From the beginning, the work has prospered and the plow company is now one of the leading industries of the city.

Mr. Haegg was also a promoter and organizer of several other prominent manufacturing institutions, among which are the Excelsior Furniture Company, the Rockford Desk and Furniture Company, and the West End Furniture Company, with which companies he is connected as an officer and Director. He also aided in organizing the Swedish Building and Loan Association. He was one of the organizers of the Rockford Brick Company in 1882, of which he has since been Secretary. This company owns seventy-five acres adjoining the city limits, West Rockford, which has recently been platted into city lots and is now a very valuable tract. Mr. Haegg also purchased twenty-five acres in the southeast part of the city, and later organized the Rockford Manufacturing Company, with a capital stock of $200,000. This land was platted into city lots for the benefit of the company and is known as Manufacturers' Addition. He is also interested in the Phoenix Furniture Company, Rockford Electric Manufacturing Company, Rockford Paint Manufacturing Company and Rock River Planing Mill Company, and owns a large interest in the Electric Light Manufacturing Company of Belvidere, Ill.

In addition to other interests, Mr. Haegg was one of the organizers and is Vice-president of the West End Street Railway Company, which operates a road of fourteen miles in the city. The latest enterprise with which he is connected is the People's Mantel and Furniture Company, which was recently organized, with $100,000 capital, and is located on Haegg Bros.' Southeast Addition. This addition comprises one hundred acres and is most beautifully located on the bank of Rock River, adjoining the finest park grounds in the city.

As a real-estate dealer, Mr. Haegy does a large business, owning two additions in the West End, one addition in the North End and two additions in the East End. He also owns and conducts one of the most popular dry-goods stores, having one of the most prominent locations in the city.

Mr. Haegg was married in Rockford to Mrs. Clara Wigell, a native of Sweden, who was brought to Rockford during her infancy. Her father, Lars Johnson, was an early emigrant from Galesburg, Ill., to Pike's Peak, and there died, leaving some valuable mining possessions. Mrs. Mary C. Johnson, Mrs. Haegg's mother, came to Rockford after her husband's death, and is still living in this city. By her former marriage, Mrs. Haegg had one son, Osear J. Wigell, manager of the branch house of Lyon, Potter & Co., of Chicago, of whom mention is elsewhere made. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Haegg were born five children: L. Vernon, a stenographer in the Architectural Metal Works, of Beloit, Wis.; Lillie E., O. Vincent, Harold W., and Florence E.

In the Young Men's Christian Association of this city, Mr. Haegg is a prominent member and Director, and served as a delegate to Europe to the World's Conference of that association. Himself, wife and children are all members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is an active worker in all that pertains to the welfare and best interests of the people. He has led an upright and honorable life, devoted not to self alone, but to good works, and has been blessed with prosperity, and at the same time has won the confidence and high regard of those with whom he has been brought in contact. His portrait is presented in connection with this brief review of his life.

SAAC UTTER died at his home at No. 211 S. Winnebago Street, May 7, 1888, at the age of four-score years. He was well known in this community and this work would be incomplete without his sketch. A native of the Empire State, he was descended from an old and prominent family of New York, where his parents spent their entire lives. He was there reared to manhood and became a successful mechanic. He established a woolen mill in Warsaw, N. Y., which he operated for some years, and then sold out, emigrating to Rockford in 1852. He here formed a business connection with Orlando Clark, one of the early settlers of Rockford, who died in Portland, Ore., and began the manufacture of farm implements. This connection was continued for several years, when Mr. Clark withdrew and Levi Rhodes became a partner of Mr. Utter. For twenty-one years they were engaged in the manufacture of paper, Mr. Utter afterward continuing the business with his son. Mr. Utter and Mr. Rhodes were two gentlemen possessed of qualities essential to success, and by their industry, perseverance and good management won a well-deserved prosperity. Both are now deceased, and in their deaths the county lost two of its best citizens.

Mr. Utter was a man of sound, reliable judgment and gave his support to all enterprises calculated to prove of benefit to the community or promote the general welfare. He was a stockholder in the People's Bank, the Winnebago National Bank and a Director and stockholder in the Second National Bank. A man of great determination and energy, whatever he undertook he always carried forward to a successful completion, and this characteristic in his life proved one of the most important factors in securing him prosperity. He took no very active part in political matters, but was a stanch supporter of Republican principles and never failed to cast his ballot with that party. He also held membership with the Christian Union Church.

Mr. Utter was twice married. In New York he wedded Miss Eliza Smith, who was born in that State, March 28, 1810, and died in this city October 26, 1871. She too belonged to the Christian Union Church and was a most estimable lady. At her death she left six children: Charles, who married Anna Clark, is a member of the Utter Manufacturing Company and the Paper Manufacturing Company; Morris L., who married Mrs. Mary J. (Hitchcock) Simpson, is now living a retired life on S. Church Street; Harriet is the wife of William Trowbridge, a successful landscape and portrait artist of Chicago; Harris B., who wedded Elizabeth Adams, is President of the Utter Manufacturing Company, of Rockford; Mary E. is the wife of Milton Fraley, Secretary and Treasurer of the Utter Manufacturing Company; and Fidelia L. resides in Rockford.

Mr. Utter was again married, in 1873, his second union being with Miss Lydia A. Rush, who was born in Somerset County, Pa., and is a daughter of Hon. John and Margaret (Hanna) Rush, also natives of Pennsylvania. They were reared and married in Somerset County, began their domestic life on a farm and unto them were born twelve children. Mr. Rush was for a number of years the representative of his district in the Pennsylvania Legislature, elected by the Democratic party, and took quite a prominent part in polities. In 1852, he came with his family to Rockford, Ill., where he engaged in keeping a hotel and became owner of the large block where the magnificent hotel now stands. His death occurred September 28, 1857, at the age of seventy-one years. He was a member of the Baptist Church and for a long time served as its Deacon. His wife survived him only two weeks, dying on the 11th of October. She was six months his junior and she too was a member of the Baptist Church. Of their twelve children, Mrs. Martha McCall and John are now deceased; Jacob is married and follows farming in Fayette County, Pa; Alexander married Sarah Fry, who is now deceased, and is living in Fayette County; Mary, widow of James Fry, resides in Boone, lowa; Reuben married Charlotte Mitchell, who is now deceased, and he is now living retired in Cedar Rapids, Iowa; James, who wedded Sabina Mitchell is a fruit farmer of Maryland; Jane is the wife of Jacob Hazlett, a retired farmer of Rockford; Sarah is living with a sister; Margaret resides at No.710 W. Mulberry Street, and Rebecca is living with Mrs. Utter.

Mrs. Utter and her sister are members of the Christian Union Church. She has continued to make her home in Rockford since her husband's death, and owns one of the most beautiful residences of the city, located at No. 211 S. Winnebago Street.

ILLIAM HALLEY. There is probably no family in Owen Township better known for intelligence and character than that which is represented by the name just given. Our subject was born in the village of Markineh, in Fifeshire, Scotland, on the 4th of June, 1818, and came of a class of people noted for their integrity, honesty and uprightness. His father was one of the foremost men in the manufacture of linen, his principal business being in preparing webs for the weaver. He was the father of seven children, all of whom he sent to America before he settled there himself. In 1843, while on his third voyage to this country, he was drowned in the St. Lawrence River, near Montreal. His wife, the daughter of David Mackey, who was a miller by trade, died about 1828, when our subject was ten years of age.

Our subject sailed for America with an elder brother when fifteen years of age, and after a voyage of eight weeks landed in Montreal. From there they went immediately to Newbury, Vt., where our subject remained five years (with the exception of one and a half years spent in Boston), and during the time worked at the tailor trade, which he had learned in his native country. In the spring of 1838, he became impressed with the idea that he could do better in the West and he started alone for Illinois, reaching Rockton, of that State, on the 12th of June, after spending four weeks on the way. At this time, the State was sparsely settled, a few pioneers living along the stream and in the timber, and the towns were just starting. For two years Mr. Halley spent most of his time in farm work, but in the spring of 1840 he opened a tailor shop in the village of Rockton. at first as a working tailor, but subsequently he purchased a stock of cloth and some ready-made clothing. He had a good trade from the beginning, for, being a skillful workman, he found plenty of patrons who recognized his worth, and he continued his trade in that city. His was the second tailoring establishment in the county, and he was the first tailor who brought and kept for sale tailor's goods.

The marriage of our subject, in 1846, united him with Miss Christina Mackey, a native of the same part of Scotland, and to them have been granted three children, all of whom are living. In 1860 Mr. Halley and family moved on section 4, in the Township of Owen, and engaged in mixed stock and grain farming at which he was fairly successful. Our subject is the owner of over eleven hundred acres of as fine land as any in the country. He put the first tile draining in the town of Rockton; previous to that time there had been very little draining done in the county. In all, Mr. Halley used about fifteen car loads of tile, making about as many miles of dram. He has also held a number of local offices and has filled them in a very creditable and satisfactory manner. He filled in succession the offices of Township Clerk, Justice of the Peace, Assessor and Supervisor. His eldest son, William, married Miss Sarah Armstrong, his daughter Anna married John Wishop, and Edwin R. married Miss Ida A. Cowan, and all are settled on farms in the vicinity.

Mr. Halley was the first of his relatives to come West but he was soon followed from the East and from Scotland, many of them coming to Winnebago County, there being about one hundred in this vicinity while many are in Southern and Western States. Of Mr. Halley's brothers and sisters, John, the eldest, has no living children; Ann married William Gilmore and they had four sons and six daughters all living but one son William; Jean married Alexander Patterson, and they have two sons and two daughters living; Margaret married Thomas Farmer, and they have seven sons and two daughters living; David has four sons and two daughters living, and Robert, the youngest, one son and three daughters.

AMES S. TERWILLIGER, Cashier of the First National Bank of Belvidere, was born in Preble, Cortland County, N. Y., March 26, 1822. His paternal grandfather was a native of Holland and the founder of the family in America. By occupation he was a farmer and spent his last days in Preble, N. Y. Green Terwilliger, the father of our subject, was born in Greene, Chenango County, N. Y., April 20, 1798, and was reared to agricultural pursuits, which he followed throughout his entire life. He died on his farm in Preble Township, September 11, 1879. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Martha Pearsall, was born in New York, June 1, 1796, and died August 5, 1863. The five children of the family were Simmons, James S., Riley, Maria and Philetus.

Mr. Terwilliger, whose name heads this record, acquired his early education in the district schools of Preble. At the age of fourteen, he left the parental roof and walked to Camillus, where he found employment in a woolen mill and there remained one year. He then spent the succeeding year in a mill at Marcellus Falls, after which be entered Homer Academy and prepared himself for teaching. He then taught school during the winter season and the remainder of the year he devoted to the study of law with his uncle, Gardner Knapp, at Hooper's Valley, N. Y., and was admitted to the Bar in the city of Syracuse, where he resided until 1847. That year witnessed his emigration to the West. He came by way of the Welland Canal and Great Lakes to Chicago and thence went by stage to Beloit, Wis., where he remained a short time, after which he came to Belvidere. A short time afterward he formed a partnership with George Kretsinger and practiced law for a few months, when he accepted a position as clerk in the office of the Circuit Clerk, where he remained for about three years. He was then elected Justice of the Peace, but after a time resigned and accepted a position as clerk in the Fuller & Lawrence Bank, where he remained until 1859. With three others, in the spring of that year, he started for Pike's Peak. They had three horses and a wagon and plenty of provisions for the journey. They traversed the State of Iowa, crossing the Missouri River at Plattsmouth and thence went on across the plains, over which deer, antelope and buffaloes roamed in large numbers. It was on that journey that Mr. Terwilliger killed his only buffalo. As prospects were not very good at Pike's Peak, the young men sold their team and soon returned home. Our subject remained in Boone County until the breaking out of the war, when he went to Springfield and was engaged as clerk in the mustering office for about one year.

In 1848, Mr. Terwilliger was united in marriage with Emily Mitchell, who was born in New Hampshire November 23, 1822, and died October 21, 1887, leaving a daughter, Florence, who was born September 12, 1851, became the wife of D. C. Holenshead, and died December 17, 1885, leaving one child, lolenc, who makes her home with her grandfather. In November, 1888, Mr. Terwilliger wedded Elizabeth (Rightor) Martin. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, as was also his first wife, but his second wife holds membership with the Baptist Church. They are highly respected people and have many warm friends in this community. In early life he was a Democrat but since the organization of the Republican party has been one of its stanch advocates.

On his return from Springfield, Mr. Terwilliger became connected with the banking interests of Belvidere and when the First National Bank was organized in 1865, he was made Assistant Cashier and later Cashier, which position he has held for over twenty years. In 1890, he became one of the organizers of the Second National Bank, of which he is a Director. His faithful service as Cashier of the First National has won him the confidence and ware regard of his employers and he is held in high esteen throughout business circles.

EWIS PATTERSON, another old and muchesteemed citizen of Winnebago County, was born in Canada, on the 16th of February, 1818, and is the son of Jonathan Patterson, a native of New Hampshire, born March 20, 1780. The elder Mr. Patterson moved to Canada with his bride, Lydia (Parker) Patterson, he at the age of twenty-one and she when twenty, and they purchased land and began farming. There eight of their thirteen children were born. In 1820 they sold out and moved to Ellisburgh, Jefferson County, N. Y., settling on a small farm. In 1831, they moved to Cuyahoga County, Ohio, near Cleveland, resided there about eight years and then moved to Harrison Township, Winnebago County, Ill., where they purchased one hundred acres, pay-Mr. Patterson died on his farm on ing $100. the 20th of March, 1845, on his sixty-fifth birthday, leaving a widow and eleven children. Eight of the thirteen children born to this worthy couple were sons, and five daughters, but two sons died in early youth. The paternal grandfather of these children, Jonathan Patterson, Sr., was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and served several years as a private. The maternal grandfather, Caleb Parker, of Brattleboro, Vt., was a Captain in the Revolution. Both came out of the war unharmed. The mother of our subject survived her husband many years and died at the home of her daughter in Minnesota, in 1865, when eighty-four years of age.

The original of this notice has been a life-long farmer, and has been a resident of Harrison Township since 1839, over half a century. As he grew to manhood, he received but little-schooling, and when twenty-one years of age, he wedded Miss Emily Blackburn, of the Buckeye State, daughter of John and Jane (Beers) Blackburn. Their marriage was celebrated in May, 1839, and they took the wedding trip to Illinois, the father and an elder brother of our subject, Dr. Almond Patterson, going ahead of the family in March. Our subject sent the household goods to Chicago by way of the Lake, and then he and the rest of the family, five in number, including the mother, made the trip with a team. They were thirty-two days en route but had a very pleasant journey and escaped the mudof the Maumee Swamps. Our subject and wife commenced housekeeping on the claim of one hundred and sixty acres, which Mrs. Compton now owns, but within two years they sold this and purchased forty acres near where they now reside. About thirty years later, or in 1876, they bought their present farm of eighty acres and erected a good, comfortable residence on this.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson have lost two sons; one. John A., enlisted with the Boys in Blue and died in the Rebel prison at Macon, Ga., in 1862, probably of starvation. He enlisted at Harrison in the fall of 1861, with the Fifty-fifth Illinois Infantry, Company C, and was captured on the first day of the battle of Shiloh. He was taken to Montgomery, Ala., on Sunday and had nothing to eat until the following Tuesday morning. He was in that state until his sad ending. George C., another son, who fought bravely for the Old Flag, volunteered in August, 1862, in the Seventy-second Illinois Infantry, Company B. under Capt. Curtiss. went at once to Vicksburg, Miss., and was under fire at that siege for forty-seven days. The next engagement was at Natchez, Tenn. He served two years and four months in the ranks and only had a short furlough when he was sick with fever. He was killed at Franklin, Tenn., November 28, 1864-shot dead while in action. Mr., and Mrs. Patterson have two children left: Frederick W., who is at home conducting the farm. He married Miss Erdell Kilbourn, a native of Oneida County, N. Y., who came to Illinois with her grandmother, Thorne, when a child. Her parents were Daniel and Kate (Thorne) Kilbourn. Marion, the daughter of this worthy old couple, married Elmer Richie, a farmer, and resides in Floyd County, Iowa. She has two daughters and one son. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson have five grandchildren: Emily K. and Flora J. Patterson, the son's children, at home. Emily is a young lady of twenty-two years, and Flora J. a sweet, pretty child of two years, the joy and pride of her grandparents. Marion is a graduate of the Durand School and is of a literary turn of mind, writing much for the press. She also delivered some very able addresses. Mr. Patterson has served the township as Justice of the Peace, Assessor, and Collector, and is an unswerving Republican in politics. He has retired from active labor, and for the past twenty-five years his health has not been of the best, but his mind is still clear and bright as of old. Mrs. Patterson is a member of the United Brethren Church and is still quite active and strong. She was one of the heroines of the war, gave up her sons and fain would have gone herself as nurse, NDREW HOLMQUIST, a successful merchant tailor doing business at No.205South Third Street, enjoys a wide reputation for first-class workmanship and style. He has a valuable and complete stock of both foreign and domestic goods which is made up to order in the latest fashions, well trimmed and finished and warranted to give satisfaction.

Mr. Holmquist came to Rockford in the spring of 1861, and was for a time, a tailor on the bench. Later, he became a custom cutter, following this for a number of years, and then opened a store at No. 407 East State Street. This was in 1884, and three years later he located in the Holland House block with a Mr. Hepbern, with whom he continued in business for two years. He then opened up his present establishment and has since been successful. He owns a fine house at No. 513 Walnut Street, and is one of the substantial, progressive men of the city.

During the latter part of the war, he enlisted in Company E, One Hundred and Forty-first Illinois Infantry, from Rockford for one hundred days, but was in service for four months. After being honorably discharged he returned to this eity.

Born in Jonkoping, Sweden, March 15, 1835, he there attained his growth and received his scholastic advantages. He also learned his trade in that country, and was the first of the family to come to the United States. He sailed from Gottenburg to New York City, and from there to Chicago, Ill., where he remained six months, there he came to Rockford, and has since been joined by a brother, Swan J., who married, and is now a retired carpenter, residing at No.302 Seventh Street. A sister, Mrs. John Shult, died in this city. The parents died in their native country, Sweden; the father, Andrew Swansen, when ninetyeight years of age, and the mother, whose maiden name was Mary Samuelson, when sixty-five years of age. The father followed the occupation of an agriculturist. Both were worthy members of the Lutheran Church. The only daughter living Sarah, widow of John Mathewson, is now a resident of the native country.

Andrew Holmquist was united in marriage to Miss Inga Sophia Abrahamson, a native of Jonkoping Lan, Sweden, born February 6, 1842. When twelve years of age, she came with her parents, John and Anna (Nelson) Abrahamson, to the United States, and with them located in Rockford. Mr. Abrahamson was born in 1846, and died in Rockford in the fall of 1891. His wife had died a number of years previously, when little past middle life. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal (Swedish) Church during the latter part of their lives. They left three children: Mrs. Holmquist; Albert, a designer in the Rockford Mantel and Furniture Company, and August, a painter for George Brown, in Galesburg, H.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmquist became the parents of live children, one, Osear, dying when seven years of age. The others are Albert J., book-keeper in the Winnebago National Bank of Rockford, who married Miss Hilda Olson, of Rockford, and now resides on Third Street; Fred A. H. is book-keeper for his father. Both are well educated. Esther A. and Minnie G., both at home. Mr. Holmquist and family are members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is a local preacher. In politics, he and his sons advocate the principles of the Republican party.

ILLIAM KERR, born in the parish of Old Deer, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, is a son of George Kerr, also a native of that place. He is at present residing on an excellent tract of land located on the State Road in Winnebago Township, six miles west of the court house.

The father of our subject followed his trade of a tailor in the village of Fiterangus, Scotland, where he made his home until 1835, and then with his wife and five children came to America, setting sail from Aberdeen in the vessel "Carleton" in the month of April, and landed at Quebec six weeks later. The elder Mr. Kerr located near the town of Cornwall, where he prosecuted his trade until 1838, when he came to Illinois and settled near Lockport, Will County. Residing there till the summer of 1841, he came to Winnebago County and entered a tract of eighty acres of Government land in Guilford Township, in addition to which he purchased fifty acres adjoining. He erected a good set of farm buildings on the place and there made his home until his decease. His wife was also born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and prior to her marriage was Helen Legg, daughter of George and Barbara Legg. She also departed this life on the home farm in Guilford Township.

The five sons and one daughter comprising the parental household were George, William, Alexander, Charles, James and Helen. He of whom we write was quite young when he made the trip to America with his parents, and was a lad of ten years when he commenced working out. When the family came to this county it was very sparsely settled; deer and other wild game roamed at will through the forests, and the marketing of grain was done at Chicago. William Kerr resided with his parents until their decease, and still continued on the old homestead until 1867. In 1852, having visited Iowa, he entered a tract of prairie land in Clayton County, and a tract of land in Allamakee County, making the round trip to the Hawkeye State with a team. Mr. Kerr never located on his Iowa land, but in 1867 sold his prairie tract and purchased the farm which he now owns and occupies.

In 1864, Miss Ellen Ralston, also a native of Argyleshire, Scotland, became the wife of our subject. She sailed from Campbelltown in 1812 with a Scotch colony, which located in Holland and vicinity. Mrs. Kerr was the daughter of William and Elizabeth (Andrew) Ralston, and departed this life January 4, 1892. The two children born of her union with our subject are Amelia and George William. The family of Mr. Kerr are all members of the Presbyterian Church of Winnebago, and are highly esteemed by all who know them.

OHN BLAKE. A well-regulated farm in Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, is the home of the gentleman above named, the estate being located upon section 5. Our subject was educated in the public schools in his township, and received from his father a thorough understanding of agriculture which he chose as his life work. The one hundred and forty-three acres of land which he owns are improved by the use of the best fertilizing agents and a proper rotation of crops brings its owner handsome returns.

Born in Franklin County, Vt., March 31, 1813, our subject is a son of John and Phylura (Campbell) Blake. He was married in the fall of 1841 to Miss Miranda Barker and to them have been born six children: Milan A. is married and has five children; Harlow E. is also married and the father of six children; his wife, who bore the maiden name of Lydia Corwin, is the daughter of Captain and Betsey (Hulsey) Corwin, who came to Winnebago County in 1840; Andrew S. Blake is married and the father of four children; Hervey J.; Mary A. is Mrs. A. H. Moore and the mother of three children, and Sarah A., who married Frank Anshouts and resides in Lowa.

Mr. Blake of this sketch cast his first vote for William Henry Harrison, and is a firm adherent of the Republican party. In religious matters, he is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and is active in all measures which have for their object the upbuilding of his community. He is of English descent on his father's side, three brothers having come to this country from England, and his ancestors on the maternal side of the house are Scotch. Mr. Blake has held many offices of trust within the power of the people to bestow and is regarded by them as an upright and honorable man.

AVID CARPENTER. The farming community of Rockton Township, Winnebago County, recognizes a worthy representative in the subject of this notice, who for a number of years pursued the even tenor of his way on a well-developed farm of one hundred and sixty-four acres. In 1863, however, he removed to the village, and has since that time lived retired from work of any kind. He was born in Adams, Mass., in 1808, and is the son of Nathaniel Carpenter, who was born October 29, 1764, in Rehoboth, Bristol County, Mass. He departed this life in October, 1842, when seventy-eight years of age.

The father of our subject emigrated to Rockton, this county, in the spring of 1836, starting from Stillwater, Saratoga County, N. Y., in May of that year. The party, which was composed of our subject, his young bride, aged father, his brothers John and Nathaniel, and four sisters, were shipwrecked en route, near Ripley. The maiden name of our subject's wife was Julia M. Pettibone; she was born in July, 1814, in Stockholm, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and is a daughter of Luman and Almira (Rudd) Pettibone, natives, respectively, of Vermont and New York.

Our subject was heavily bereaved in 1833, by the death of his mother, who died at Hoosiek Falls, N. Y. The parental family included twelve children, two of whom are still living: Mary C., Mrs. John Bachelder, makes her home in San Francisco, Cal. A sister, Mrs. Susan Lawrence, died in Rockton in 1892, when eighty-two years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter have buried one son, Philo Pettibone, who died when eighteen months old. Another son, Lyman N., has been a resident of Lovelock, Nev., since 1865, where he is a prominent and wealthy business man. The son was married to a Miss Nellie Lovelock, whose father was the founder of that place. During the late war, he was a volunteer from Ployer, Wis., going to the front as Second Lieutenant. He participated in many important battles of that period, but was prevented by sickness from being present at the battle of Shiloh; he was taken prisoner at Altoona.

An adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, Anna Phidelia Lippitt, entered their home when eight years of age, and was given an excellent education in the Rockton schools. In 1856, she married C. B. Ayer, of Chicago, and is at present residing at Beloit, Wis., where her husband has charge of the Water Works. Our subject is not only respected by his associates, but by all who know him, for his uprightness and ability, while the members of his family are likewise regarded with favor by their acquantances.

ON. JOHN RUSH, deceased, one of the early settlers of Rockford, was a native of Somerset County, Pa. His father, Jacob Rush, was also born in Somerset County, and died on the old Rush homestead in that community at the advanced age of ninety-seven years. He was a prominent man all through the War of the Revolution, and was highly respected by all who knew him. By occupation he was a farmer, which business he followed throughout his entire life. His wife was also a native of Somerset County, and there they resided until called to their final rest at an advanced age.

The subject of this sketch was reared in the usual manner of farmer lads in the county of his nativity, and, after attaining to man's estate, was joined in wedlock with Miss Margaret Hanna, who was born in Little York, Pa., and was descended from an old family of the Keystone State. They became the parents of twelve children, and, with the exception of John, who died at the age of sixteen years, and Mrs. Martha McCall, all are yet living. Jacob is now a retired farmer of Falls City, Pa.; Alex is living a retired life in Brownsville; Mary is now Mrs. Fry, of Boone, lowa; Martha, deceased, was wife of William McCall; Reuben is living a retired life in Cedar Rapids, Iowa; James makes his home in Friendsville, Md.; Jane is now Mrs. Hazlett, of Rockford; Lydia is the wife of Isaac Utter, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work; and Sarah, Rebecca and Margaret are living in Rockford, having a pleasant home on Mulberry Street.

Mr. Rush followed farming in Pennsylvania for some years. He was one of the most prominent and influential citizens of his county, and twice represented his district in the State Legislature, being elected by the Democratic Larty. He proved a faithful officer, giving great satisfaction to the people. At length, he determined to leave the East and seek a home in Illinois. Accompanied by his family, he came to Rockford, and engaged in keeping a hotel, being for eighteen months proprietor of the Rock River House. After that time he lived a retired life until called to his final rest. He died at his home on South Main Street, the present site of the new Nelson House, on the 27th of September, 1857, at the age of seventyone years. He was a man of sound judgment, of kind and happy disposition, and won friends wherever he went. In early manhood, he became a member of the Baptist Church, to which he was ever faithful, and served as Deacon and Church Clerk for a great many years. His wife survived him only two weeks, when she, too, was called to her final home. Like her husband, she was a consistent member of the Baptist Church, and had the love of all who knew her. Mr. Rush was a prominent member of the Masonic order for a great many years and was buried with the honors of that order. All of the children, who reside in Rockford, are members of the Christian Union Church, with the exception of Mrs. Hazlett, who is a Baptist. The Misses Rush are intelligent and cultured ladies, and have many warm friends throughout this community, where the family has been widely and favorably known since 1852.

UBREY A. SNYDER. One of the best-known residents of Winnebago County, is he whose name appears at the head of this sketch and who is the incumbent of the responsible office of Supervisor of Rockton Township. A native of Livingston County, N. Y., he was born October 28, 1812, in Springwater Township, and is the son of Nelson F. Snyder, whose birth occurred in the town of Scipio, N. Y., May 21, 1820.

The grandfather of our subject, Benjamin F. Snyder, was a pioneer of Springwater Township, whence he came when a young man from Scipio and followed the occupation of a farmer. His wife was, prior to her marriage, Miss Amanda Cole, and to them were born five sons and one daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Snyder died on the home farm, the father in 1853; the mother's death occurred a week before. Their children are all deceased with the exception of Dewitt C. Snyder, who is living retired in Springwater Township. He is a man of influence and prominence in his county and has been Representative from his District.

Nelson F. Snyder was a tradesman, earpenter and builder, and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Polly C. Ingoldsby, was married when eighteen years of age and died in her thirty-first year when our subject was a boy. She reared seven children: James F., our subject, Eugene B., Charles H., an infant daughter who died unnamed, Charles H. (second), and Allie R., now Mrs. W. W. Walker, of Wayland, Steuben County, N. Y. Three of the sons were volunteers during the late war, James being the first to enlist, becoming a member of Company B. Thirteenth New York Infantry, in April, 1861. He enlisted for a service of two years and was killed at the second battle of Bull Run. Our subject was very desirous of joining the army but at first could not obtain the consent of his father. Later, however, he received his permission and joined the same regiment of which his brother was a member and was mustered out with the title of Second Sergeant. His term of service expiring, he was discharged March 13, 1863, and re-enlisted in the Twenty-first New York Cavalry in September, 1863. The regiment made a rendezvous at Troy, N. Y., and went into winter quarters at Blanddinsburg, going the following spring to the Shenandoah Valley. Eugene B. belouged to Mack's Black Horse Battery of New York, whose service was in Louisiana. After the surrender of Lee, and the Grand Review at Washington, the Twentyfirst Cavalry was sent to Ft. Collins, Colo., to look after the Indians. Mr. Snyder was mustered out at Denver with the commission of Second Lieutenant, July 1, 1866.

During our subject's four years and four months of active service in the Union Army, he had two horses killed and his clothing torn with bullets, even to the cap on his head, at Ft, Royal. He was confined in the hospital but a few weeks at David's Island, L. I., and as soon as convalescent was given charge of the Iron Guard. This was during his first service.

On the death of his mother, Mr. Snyder went to Michigan and made his home with his uncle, D. C. Ingoldsby, at Oakland, with whom he remained until seventeen years of age, when he returned home and enlisted in the army, as above related. In 1866, he went again to his father's farm and the following year came to Rockton, where he has resided since that time, having established a fine reputation as carriage painter, decorator and paper hanger. His first work was with M. B. Morgan, and, having a natural taste and talent for that line of work, soon excelled his employer and succeeded him in the business.

Mr. Snyder was married, November 18, 1869, to Cora L. Stiles, a native of Rockton and the daughter of Erastus L. and Marantha (Capron) Stiles, whose sketch will be found on another page in this volume. Our subject and his wife have buried one daughter, Alta, who died when two years and four months old. Their living children are Alma F., Murray S., Minnie Lee, Roy N. and Luetta. Our subject purchased his snug little home on the south side of the Rock River in 1882. He east his first Presidential vote for Lincoln while a soldier and has since been a strong and firm adherent of that party. He served in the position of Town Collector several years, City Marshal six years and is now serving his fifth term as Supervisor. The subject of this sketch has made some specimens of oil painting and cabinet bric-a-brac, which shows much natural genius.

W. BARNES has been a resident of Rockford for nearly forty years, and during that time he has won the confidence and esteem of nearly every one. He is at present proprietor of the city scales, located on South First Street, and is also a prominent real-estate dealer. He came to Rockford in 1853, and, in partnership with C. A. Huntington, an ex-School Commissioner, and for many years a prominent man of that city, opened a stationery and book store. This business was very successfully carried on until 1857, when a severe fire swept over the city and the company lost $20,000. As might be supposed, this was quite a misfortune to Mr. Barnes, but he went to work with great earnestness, and, to some extent, retrieved his fallen fortune. He has taken a deep interest in every movement for the upbuilding and prosperity of the city, and assisted liberally with his means to build the Kenosha Railroad (now the Northwestern Railroad) in Rockford. He, as well as others, lost in this matter. Mr. Barnes has ever been industrions and enterprising, and what he has accumulated in the way of this world's goods is the result of his own good fighting qualities. He was born in Burlington, Vt., in 1831, and was there reared and educated. His father, Capt. Jackson Barnes, was born in Ferrisburg, Vt., and died when only fortylive years of age, after a short illness. The latter followed the occupation of a farmer, and met with substantial results in this pursuit. He was a Captain of a company in the War of 1812, and took part in the battle of Plattsburg. His father, Joshua Barnes, was also from the Green Mountain State, and was a Quaker in religion, devoting much of his time to religious work. The latter was also a farmer. Jackson Barnes was married in his native State to Miss Judah Wing a descendant of old Quaker stock, and the daughter of John and Sarah Wing, both of whom were devoted Quakers all their lives. Mrs. Barnes survived her husband many years, and died in 1884, when very old. R. W. Barnes was married in Burlington, Vt., to Miss Mary J. Gray, who was born, reared and educated there, and who comes of good old New England stock. To Mr. and Mrs. Barnes was born one child, who died when but a few years old. They have an adopted child, Nettie, who is now the wife of Frank Stewart, and who resides in Rockford. Mrs. Barnes is a member of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Barnes is a stanch Republican in his political principles.

EORGE G. LINDBLADE, who is engaged in raising vegetables and small fruit at the corner of Sixteenth Avenue and Kishwaukee Street, where he owns so he valuable land, has lived in this city and on Kishwaukee Street nearly all his life. For many years he has followed his present business and has met with much encouragement.

Born in Princeton, Ill., January 9, 1861, he was but two years of age when he was brought to Rockford by his parents, and he was here educated in the public schools and the business college. He was one of eight children, six of whom are yet living: Augusta, wife of J. P. Johnson, a tailor for the G. R. Atkinson Tailoring Company; George G., our subject; Emma D., Minnie; C. William and Henry E. C. William is a carver by trade and is now in the furniture factories of Rockford. Henry E. is completing his education in the Illinois School of Pharmacy at Chicago, and will graduate with the Class of '93. Elizabeth died in infancy, in October, 1855. Another sister, Jennie E., died at helpome in this city October 28, 1889, when thirty-four years of age. From the time she was nine years of age she had been an invalid, but during all that time she displayed a true Christian spirit and a sweet and cheerful disposition. She possessed all those qualities that make a grand and noble woman, and was universally loved and admired.

"Dead, and where now are those earnest, loving eyes

Which kindled in so many eyes the light? Have they departed from our earthly skies And left no ray to illuminate the night? Shall she thus die and waste away And no fond hope be left?

Is there no sweet, confiding ray for bosoms all bereft?

Yes, yes, an earnest trust."

J. August Lindblade, the father of the abovementioned children, was born in Jonkoping City, Sweden, March 22, 1830, and came of pure Swedish ancestry. His father was a goldsmith, and J. August learned this trade while growing up without help, for his father had died when J. August was but nine weeks old. The latter was reared by stepfathers, and when twenty-one years of age. he enlisted in the regular army, serving three years, but participating in no active engagements. He was married in his native city to Miss Emily S. Anderson, whose birth occurred in Jonkoping, November 18, 1832, and who was reared and educated in that city, as was also her husband. Following their marriage, they came to the United States, in June, 1853, and were very much pleased with the green trees and lovely flowers of this country, after the wintry and desolate aspect of the one they had left.

They settled at once in Kane County, Ill., and there Mr. Lindblade worked in Elgin, Geneva and St. Charles. In May, 1855, he located in Pecatonica, Winnebago County, Ill., but subsequently moved to Princeton and thence to Rockford, where the father died on the 11th of May, 1889. He was a worthy and much-respected citizen and a noble, warm-hearted man. During the last years of his life he followed the blacksmith's trade. He was a great lover of President Lincoln, and when the Civil War broke out, being a natural-born soldier, he was among the first to enlist in defense of the Union. He helped raise a company and served ninety days with it. Afterward he enlisted in the Sixty-ninth Illinois Infantry, and served his country faithfully until he was honorably discharged as First Sergeant. After returning to Princeton, he went back on a visit to Sweden, but after again coming to this country he settled in Rockford. Socially, he was a worthy member of the G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., a Master Mason, and was one of the Ancient Order of United Workmen at the time of his death.

His wife, who is now living in Rockford, is sixty years of age, but time has dealt leniently with her and she is yet quite active. Her father, Lars Anderson, who was born in Wester Gothland, but reared in the Province of Smoland, Jonkoping Lan, Sweden, was for years an overseer of the wharfs of Jonkoping City. His wife died in Sweden. Later, Mr. Anderson came to the United States with his daughter, Mrs. J. August Lindblade, and now resides in Rockford. On the 29th of September, 1892, he will have reached his eighty-sixth mile stone. He and his family were members of the Lutheran Church, but since coming here he has been identified with the Methodists.

Our subject was married in Chilton, Wis., March 28, 1889, to Miss Mary E. L. Cressy, a native of Calumet County, Wis., where she passed her girlhood and received her education. Her parents, Ithiel and Luraney (Coy) Cressy, were natives of Vermont. The father was a farmer and died in the prime of life. The mother is still living and makes her home in Chilton, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Lindblade are prominent young people of South East Rockford, and are well respected.

ENRY C. WILSON died at his home, at No. 809. South West Street, Rockford, April 14, 1891. He was one of the old residents of the city, having come here in 1854, and was extensively interested in the grain business, being thus engaged for a period of ten years. It was during that time that he purchased improved property on the South Side, which he built up and rented to tenants, and has thus added greatly to the development of this then unoccupied section. He was an interested witness of the advancement and growth of the eity and County, and few, if any, of the residents of Rockford have been more successful in a business way than was the subject of this sketch.

While a resident of Rockford, Mr. Wilson was interested in a general store at Independence, Iowa, for five years, and for two years had quite an income from the manufacture of lime. He served as Alderman of the Fifth Ward for six years, on the Democratic ticket, and always took an active part in all measures that tended to the upbuilding of the city. It is due to his push and enterprise that the streets in the Fifth Ward were macadamized and that the lights thereon were improved.

Our subject was born in Hampden County, Mass., September 1, 1827. His father and grandfather were born in the same county, where the former gentleman, Andrew Wilson, lived and died. His father, who bore the name of Col. Justin Wilson, was an officer in the State militia, and was probably in active service in the War of 1812. He was a farmer in his native State, where he resided until 1855, then coming to Winnebago County, died in Rockford November 8, 1864, when in his seventieth year, having been born March 25, 1794. The lady who became his wife was also a native of the Bay State, and bore the maiden name of Samantha Baird. Her disease occurred at Independence, lowa, July 16, 1869, firm in the faith of the Congregational Church.

Henry C. Wilson was one of two children born to his parents, and received a practical education in his native State. He was married in Berkshire County, Mass., to Miss Abbie E. Baird, who was born in the Township of Becket, that State, May 14, 1828. She was given an excellent education at the schools in Pittsford and Mount Holyoke Seminary, and was the daughter of Kendall and Lucinda (Chaffee) Baird, also natives of the Bay State, where families of that name resided prior to the Revolutionary War. Mr. and Mrs. Baird died in their native State at the respective ages of sixty-four and sixty-seven years. The wife of our subject was one of the eldest of their family of six children, one of whom is deceased. A sister, Mrs. Kellogg, now lives in this city.

Mrs. Wilson has, with her son, since the death of her husband, managed the business in a most intelligent and profitable manner. Two of the four children born to her are deceased: Edgar 11. and Prentice B.; the former dying when thirtytwo years of age, and the latter in his fifth year. Those living are Egbert T., at home, and George F., who manages the business left by his father. He holds a prominent place in local affairs, and has held the office of Supervisor of the Fifth Ward for the past four years. He is a stanch Democrat, in the ranks of which party he is an active worker. He married Emma Minzinger, who is a native of this county, where she is quite a leader in social matters, and a noble and highminded woman.

AMUEL WOOD was born in the Forest of Dean, Gloucestershire, England, February 25, 1812, and died in Belvidere, Ill., December 10, 1887. He was three times married. Unto him and his first wife, formerly Miss Mary Drinkwater, of England, were born two sons: Joseph and Frederick. After the death of his first wife, he married Miss Amelia Sulley, and they became the parents of a daughter, Mary Amelia. In 1851, accompanied by his wife, daughter and younger son, Mr. Wood emigrated from England to Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, where his wife died soon afterward.

In Syracuse, N. Y., Mr. Wood was married, February 9, 1851, to Miss Lucy Angeline Stiles, who survives him. In October of the year following his marriage, Mr. Wood came with his family to Illinois, where he purchased a lot eight rods square in Belvidere, on the corner of what is now Logan Avenue and Whitney Street. With the aid of his son Fred, and his father-in-law, Mr. Stiles, he at once erected a house, 16x24 feet, and, having established his family comfortably, began an active business life, engaging in buying and shipping produce. During the progress of the Civil War, he went to Vicksburg with a quantity of butter, and also for the purpose of visiting his son Fred, who was in the army.

Mr. Wood also dealt considerably in real estate, buying and selling some valuable property in the center of the city on the South Side. For several years, he was in the grocery business on State Street and during part of that time was proprietor of a lunch room. For some eighteen years, he owned the city scales. Beside his city property, he owned a farm four miles south of Belvidere, which, after managing for seventeen years, he sold six months before his death. Until two months and seven days prior to his demise, he resided in the house first erected by him, to which he added as needs and opportunities presented. His last enterprise was the erection of a double brick house on Whitney Street, where he died.

In his church life, Mr. Wood always endeavored to be useful. Reared an Episcopalian, he was converted and joined the Baptist Church at his old home in England. The stone church in which he was baptized still stands, and a photograph of it was shown at his funeral. After coming to America, he united by letter with the Second Baptist Church, of Syracuse, N. Y., and brought his letter from that place to Belvidere, uniting with the First Baptist Church and remaining in its fellowship for ten years to a day. Then, with his wife and daughter, he became a constituent member of the South Baptist Church at Belvidere, and was appointed a Trustee at its organization, October 26, 1865.

In July, 1866, Mr. Wood was elected Chairman of a Church Building Committee, which erected a beautiful edifice, dedicated September 12, 1867, but unfortunately, was burned down December 19, 1871. Steps were at once taken to rebuild, but Mr. Wood, observing that even after the foundation was on the ground there was a seemingly unnecessary delay, called on one of the Trustees to inquire the reason, and was suprised on being informed that the Trustees did not feel warranted in beginning to build with the present subscription. As they had no time to attend to the matter, they had decided to rent or buy the Christian Church. "Not build," ejaculated Mr. Wood, " and go into the Christian Church! where is our room to grow? It will not hold our present membership." Then as if impelled by some irresistible power, he added, "I will undertake to build the church if I can have Elder Fulton with me to help raise the money." He sketched an agreement, and on the following morning met the Church Board and submitted it to them. They accepted his proposition and at once passed over into his hands all plans and specifications. He began the work earnestly and enthusiastically, while the pastor as faithfully labored to raise the needed funds. At last, they completed the substantial brick building which now adorns Logan Avenue.

November 16, 1870, Mr. Wood was elected Clerk and Treasurer of the church, serving in that double office until the winter before his death, when he resigned the office of Treasurer, but continued to serve as Clerk until summoned to the Church Triumphant at 3:30 A. M., December 10, 1887. The funeral services were held at the church, conducted by Rev. E. C. Stover, and the remains were interred in the family lot at Belvidere Cemetery.

Lucy Angeline Stiles was born in Winfield, Herkimer County, N. Y., June 3, 1823, and spent her early years alternately in the homes of her parents and paternal grandparents. From the age of twelve until she was twenty, she resided altogether with her grandparents. She was converted at seven years of age, and at the age of twenty years united with the Baptist Church at Salisbury, Herkimer County, N. Y. Returning soon afterward to her parents, she united with the Baptist Church in Cazenovia, Madison County, N. Y. After completing her education at Oneida Conference Seminary, she taught several terms and then engaged in millinery and dressmaking. Removing from Cazenovia to Syracuse with her parents, she united with the Second Baptist Church, and was there married to Samuel Wood, removing soon afterward to Belvidere. For ten years, she held membership with the First Baptist Church and from that time onward held membership with the South

The elder son of our subject, Joseph, was born October 10, 1832, came to America about 1868, and is now engaged as a cabinet-maker in Rockford. His wife bore the maiden name of Martha Jones. Fred, the younger son of our subject, was born in Bullo Pill, Parish of Aure, England, February 12, 1838, and remained at home in business with his father and clerking in the grocery store of S. Bennett until he enlisted in the army. At the close of the war, he embarked in business at Chicago and had a fair prospect of success as a commission merchant, but in the great fire lost everything excepting the clothes that he wore. His father sent him supplies with which to replenish his wardrobe, but they were stolen before they reached him. Nothing daunted by misfortunes, he erected a shanty on the ruins of what had been his place of business and once more resumed the business which he still conducts. He was married, May 1, 1878, to Miss Della May, who was born in Rockford, this State, October 11, 1857. This estimable lady died October 14, 1885, leaving one daughter, May, who was born in Chicago, March 3, 1879.

The only daughter of our subject, Mary A., was born July 30, 1845, in Bridgewater, Somersetshire, England, and came to America when a mere child. She attended school for a time in Syracuse, N. Y., and made good progress in the graded schools of Belvidere, and was graduated from the Rockford Female Seminary in 1867. She taught successfully several years, closing her work in that line where she was graduated. As a teacher, her characteristies were conscientiousness and thoroughness. Persevering and unassuming, she also accomplished much earnest work for the Master through the medium of her pen. Such was her devotion to her work that she was always overtaxing her energies. One of her pupils writes: "She possessed fine literary tastes. In her school discipline, she kept the machinery of government out of sight, but the most wayward was subdued by her unvarying gentleness, her earnest persuasions and sometimes by her tears. Her work as a teacher was always done prayerfully, quietly and subject to the Master's approval."

She early became a Christian, joining the First Baptist Church at Belvidere. With her parents and sixty-five others interested in the organization of the South Belvidere Baptist Church, she aided in founding and enlarging the new church. In early life began her longings for mission work, and in the spring of 1874 she offered her services to the Board and was accepted. Strong in her attachments, few could more truly appreciate the blessedness of home and the refinements of social life. She was an only and tenderly beloved daughter. As the time of her departure drew near, she attended farewell services in Rockford, Milwaukee, Belvidere and Chicago. Her father went East and parted with her on shipboard. She sailed on the steamer "Bolivia," September 19, in company with other missionaries, stopped for a visit with friends in the South of England, and arrived in Nellorc January 2, 1875. She at once commenced the study of the Telugu language. In March following her arrival, she went to Ramapatan, where her interests were to center.

At Ramapatan Mission Chapel, India, Miss Mary A. Wood was married to Rev. Alfred A. Newhall, the ceremony being performed by Rev. D. Clough, D. D. Dr. Newhall was born January 7, 1844, in Cambridgeport, Mass. During the short missionary career of Mrs. Newhall it was hers to witness the horrors of a terrible famine. She died October 9, 1877. Loving hands robed her for burial, and after a brief funeral service, conducted by Rev. D. Downy, her remains were borne to Nellore Cemetery and laid to rest under the shadow of a margosa tree. Her husband has since erected upon the grave a low monument of polished black granite, bearing this inscription: "Sacred to the memory of Mary A. Wood, wife of Rev. A. A. Newhall, missionary at Ramapatan." After seven years, Mr. Newhall married again, his wife being Miss Marie Menke, and they have one son, Freddie. In the autumn of 1890, they returned from India and are now in the pine regions of North Carolina in quest of health, at a place known as Southern Pincs.

Some brief mention of the ancestry of Mrs. Wood will be of interest to the reader. Her great-grandfather Stiles died suddenly, while sitting in a chair at the table. Her grandfather Stiles, born May 10, 1780, married Lucy Ives, who was born January 15, 1782, and they became the parents of seven children. David Stiles, father of Mrs. Wood, was born December 20, 1801, and died April 8, 1868. Ehzabeth Bredenburgh, mother of Mrs. Wood, was born September 15, 1802, died April 17, 1855, and was buried near Syracuse, N. Y.

Taking a further glance at the descent of Mrs. Wood, we find that in 1644 three brothers emigrated from Holland to America, who were by name Peter, Jacob and Hendrick Marse Vroman. Peter settled on Long Island, where he married Volchin Peters about 1650. They had a family of two children and became well-to-do, accumulating property in New York and Long Island. They made a joint will, deeding their property to their children and the Dutch Church. Jacob returned to Holland during 1644, and about six years later was elected Lord Mayor of Leiden. He owned a large vineyard in Leiden and a block of buildings in Amsterdam, besides a number of slups. His death occurred in Leiden about 1680. His property was sold and the money put in the Orphans' Chamber of Holland, where it will remain until the heirs in America call for it and prove their

The third brother, Hendrick, settled in Albany, N. Y., whence he removed to Schenectady, N. Y., about 1646, and two years afterward was married there. He and his wife, who were Mrs. Wood's grandparents in the fifth generation, had two children: John, born in 1650, and Adam, in 1652, The last-named married Engeliea Bloom in 1677, and they became the parents of six children. His wife and youngest child were killed by the Indians February 8, 1690, and he died at his plantation in Schoharie, N. Y., February 25, 1730, aged seventyeight years. His second son, Wanter, was born in 1680, and married Maritie Hollenbech, September 24, 1708. Their family consisted of twelve children, and Isaac, who was the sixth in order of birth, married Dorothy Vanbuskirk September 24, 1744. They had eight children. Rachel, the eldest, was born October 24, 1745, married John Farrell, and became the mother of two children. One of these, Dorothy, was born August 3, 1763, and on May 25, 1788, married William Bredenburgh, a Methodist minister, who was born May 8, 1763.

The sixth in the family of eleven children born to William and Dorothy Bredenburgh was Elizabeth, who became the wife of David Stiles March 31, 1822, and died April 17, 1855. They were the parents of eight children, namely: Lucy Angeline, Ann Eliza, Amanda Maria, David, Jr., Harriett C., William Philo, Betsey Amelia, and George Washington. Ann Eliza, who was born May 18, 1825, married Willard M. Hudson, August 22, 1846, and they had two children: George M. and Herbert; Amanda Maria, born March 12, 1827, married Alfred Darrow, September 1, 1855, and they had four children: Flora Adell (deceased), Josephine, Walter (deceased) and May, now Mrs. E. Hoyt. David, Jr., born August 26, 1828, was married, in 1819, to Miss Esther Tuller, who was born April 26, 1833, and they had four children: Dewitt Monroe, Ella Zepherine, Hattie Amelia and Ida Lorette. Harriett C. Stiles, who was born March 24, 1830. was married, February 17, 1851, to Wesley Peck, who was born in Hamilton, Madison County, N. Y., September 25, 1831. Their family consisted of four children: Ellen Harriett, Anna Bell, Lillie May, and Charles. William Philo, born February 16, 1832, married Syrine Helmer, and they had three children: Ida, Anna Maria and D. May. Betsey Amelia, born March 12, 1834, died in infancy; George Washington, born February 6, 1835. died in Belvidere, September 19, 1856.

ARRY M. JOHNSON is Secretary and Treasurer of the Rockford Star Printing Company, which was established in 1888, and publishes the Daily, Semi-weekly and Weekly Star. Mr. Johnson first became associated with the business as City Editor and Business Manager, but owing to the demands made of him in the office, he now gives his entire time to the business end of the enterprise, and under his management of the Star it has steadily grown in circulation and power.

Mr. Johnson has been connected with newspaper work, in one capacity or another, all his life, beginning when a boy as a carrier. After graduating from the High School, he became reporter for the Rockford Register, when nineteen years of age, and was associated in that capacity with the paper for six years. Recognizing his ability, he was offered an interest in the stock company being organized to found a new morning daily in Rockford and the position of manager of the enterprise, which he accepted. He now controls more of the stock of the company than any other stockholder in the concern. The paper was first issued March 20, 1888, as the Morning Stor, and has always been a strong Democratic organ. It is a seven-column quarto, neatly printed, and has a large enreulation throughout the county.

Our subject has been a resident of Rockford since 1872, coming here when a boy from Wisconsin. His birth occurred in that State, near Madison, Dane County, in 1863. His father, William W. Johnson, was a native of Pennsylvania, where also the paternal ancestors of our subject were born for four generations back. The father of our subject left his native State when a young man, going to Wisconsin, where he became a pilot, plying on the Wisconsin and Mississippi Rivers in the interest of the lumbermen. Later, he became a resident of Dane County, whence he removed to Rockford in 1872, and was employed in the manufacture of piano stools in this city. Later, he was one of the organizers and first Superintendent of the Co-operative Furniture Company. At the present time, however, he is engaged as a contractor and builder.

The parents of our subject were married in Wisconsin, the maiden name of the lady being Elizabeth P. Briggs. She was born in Michigan, her father, Isaac Briggs, being a native of the Green Mountain State and a veteran in the War of 1812. His father was one of the Green Mountain boys who fought in the Revolutionary War. He was known as Dr. Briggs, and after having attained to his majority came West to Michigan, settling on an improved farm near Schoolcraft. Owing, however, to the prevailing epidemic of chills and fever, he disposed of his farm at a sacrifice and moved with his family to Wisconsin, where he spent his last days in Dane County. He had one son, M. J. Briggs, who was a soldier in the late Civil War, enlisting as a private when eighteen years old, and being mustered out with the commission of Lieutenant.

He of whom we write was married, in Rockford, to Miss Carrie May Ashton, a native of Durand, this county, but reared and educated in this city. She is a daughter of Andrew Ashton, a prominent dry-goods merchant, having stores in Rockford and in Durand. She is a most intelligent lady, being a well known contributor to many of the famous papers of the land. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have one child, W. Ashton Johnson.

NDREW G. ORTLUND, a member of the firm of Carlson, Ortlund & Co., deaders in gents' furnishing goods, hats, caps. etc., claims Sweden as the land of his birth. He was born in the Province of Westmoreland, on the 6th of December, 1860, and is a son of Andrew and Augusta Ortlund, both of whom are residents of Evanston. Ill., and members of the Lutheran Church. The father is now seventy-two years of age, and his wife has reached the age of three-score years. All of the brothers of our subject and his sister reside either at Rockford or in Evanston, having come to this country since Andrew emigrated.

Mr. Ortland, whose name heads this sketch, acquired his education in the common schools of his native land and there learned the butcher's trade. At the age of twenty years, he bade goodbye to his old home and family and in the month of June, 1880, started for America, sailing from Gottenburg to New York City. He went from thence to Amburg, N. Y., where he resided for nineteen months. It was in August, 1882, that he left the Empire State and went South, spending some time in the vicinity of New Orleans, after which he went to Cuba. Later, he returned to this country and made a location in Evanston, lil., where he resided for six years. During that time, he learned the trade of a laundryman and in his own interest established business, which he carried on for five years before coming to Rockford. The year 1890 witnessed his arrival in this city. He formed a partnership with Mr. Carlson, as a dealer in gents' furnishing goods, hats, caps, clothing, etc., and the following year a change in the firm caused the change in the business title to Carlson, Ortland & Co. Their store is located at No. 525 Seventh Street and they are now doing a good business, having built up an excellent trade which is constantly increasing.

In Evanston, Ill., Mr. Ortlund was joined in wedlock with Miss Matilda C. Johnson, who was born and reared in Sweden, and while a young lady left the old home for the United States, to which her parents afterwards emigrated. They are still residents of Evanston. One child graces the union of our subject and his wife, a daughter, Minnie M. The parents are both members of the Swedish Methodist Church, and although they have resided in this city but a short time, are already well known and have made many friends, their excellencies of character having won for them the high regard of those with whom they have come in contact. In his political affiliations, Mr. Ortlund is a Republican.

OHN H. BENNETT, an agriculturist residing in Belvidere, claims the old Bay State as the place of his birth. He first opened his eyes to the light of day in Groton, Middlesex County, July 7, 1835. His grandfather was a lifelong farmer, and spent his last years in Groton. The father, James Bennett, was born in that town, where he acquired his education, and was reared to manhood. He wedded Mary Shattuck, also a native of Groton, where they resided until 1839, when, with their four children, they came to Illinois. The journey was made by way of the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes to Chicago, and thence by teams to Boone County, which they found to be a sparsely settled region, almost on the borders of civilization. Mr. Bennett purchased a tract of land near the locality known as the Lone Tree, in Flora Township, built a house. and there made his home for four years, when he sold, and purchased the farm on the north side of the river, a portion of which is now included within the city limits. There he carried on his chosen occupation until his death, which occurred in 1868. His wife long survived him, and passed away January 23, 1892. They had a family of six children: James Augustus, Samuel, John II., Sarah J., George S. and Charles. Samuel is now deceased.

Our subject was only four years of age when, with his parents, he came to Illinois. He literally grew up with the country, and has been an eyewitness of its development and progress from almost the beginning. He has seen the growth of Belvidere from a hamlet to a city of five thousand, while some of the villages of importance had not yet sprung into existence when he came here. There were no free schools in those early days, and his father, who was determined to give his children an education, employed a teacher, who taught two terms in his own home. John afterwards attended a subscription school in the city. He aided in the arduous task of developing the wild land, and remained with his father until he attained his majority, but on his twenty-first birthday he left the parental roof, and started out in life for himself. He found employment upon a farm, where he remained until fall, when he borrowed a sum of money, went to Chicago, and pursued a course in a commercial college of that city. In the spring he returned, and entered the employ of his father, and in July, 1857, started for Minnesota. After three months spent in that State, he returned home and engaged in chopping wood for his father through the winter, after which he was in the employ of his brother Samuel as a salesman for three years.

On the 31st of October, 1862, Mr. Bennett was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Sarah Maria, daughter of George and Mary Vickery, and a native of Pennsylvania. They have two children living: Frank and Anna. The parents are both members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, and in politics our subject is a Republican.

Mr. Bennett made his first purchase of land in Caledonia Township. There was a water-power on the place, and a sawmill, and he built a gristmill, which he operated in connection with the other, while at the same time he engaged in raising stock. He there resided for about ten years, when he sold that farm and purchased land in Belvidere Township, which he operated until 1882, when he again sold and bought the farm he now owns and occupies, adjoining the city limits. He is an industrious and energetic agriculturist, and the neat appearance of his place, with its many improvements, indicates his thrift and good management. He may well be termed a self-made man, for his success is due entirely to his own efforts.

EWIS SHIRLEY, who is now living a retired life in Cherry Valley, Winnebago County, was born March 1, 1820, and was a son of Joseph S. and Elizabeth (Keith) Shirley, both of whom were natives of Huntingdon County, Pa. His father was born March 25, 1793, and removed to Ohio about 1810, with his parents. He married Elizabeth Keith, in Morgan County, Ohio, in 1814, and unto them were born six children: Peter; Nancy, wife of Jacob Cline; Lewis, of this sketch; George, who resides near Waterloo, Iowa; Ruhama, wife of William Mervin; and Julia, who married William Witter. The daughters are all now deceased.

The subject of this sketch removed from Ohio to La Porte County, Ind., with his parents, in 1837, and three years later came to Illinois, locating near his present home. The family crossed the prairies with teams in the fall of 1840, and the father purchased a tract, comprising one hundred and twenty acres, in Winnebago County. Their market was Chicago, and Mr. Shirley remembers to have taken a load of pork and a load of wheat to that place on one occasion, when the net proceeds of the two were only $40. The family bore all the hardships and privations of pioneer life, such as fall to the lot of those who make homes on the frontier.

On the 6th of January, 1843, Mr. Shirley was united in marriage, in this county, with Lucinda Keith, daughter of Balser and Lucy (Smith) Keith. They have buried two children, who died in infancy, and six children, three sons and three daughters are now living, namely: Elizabeth A., born October 31, 1844, now the wife of Capt.

William Van Wert, of DeKalb County; Silas W., born June 26, 1818, of Cherry Valley; Lucretia E., born January 6, 1850, of Cherry Valley; Phoeba Jane, born April 2, 1852, wife of William Thompson, of De Kalb County; George B., born November 28, 1855, of Cherry Valley Township; and Lewis E., born March 13, 1861, also of Cherry Valley.

Mr. Shirley has engaged in farming ever since coming to this county, and has opened and improved several hundred acres. At one time he owned fifteen hundred acres in different farms. The homestead comprises five hundred acres of highly improved land; the large barns, the outbuildings, and the commodious residence were erected thereon in 1878. The place is now owned by his son George B., who married Nellie Whitmore; Silas W. married Julia Taylor.

In politics, Mr. Shirley has been a Republican since the organization of the party and has taken an active interest in its upbuilding. He has always been interested in the Methodist Church. His wife died November 1, 1888, at the age of sixtycight years, one month and fifteen days, and was buried at Flora Cemetery. She belonged to the Free-will Baptist Church, of Cherry Valley, and was a most estimable lady. Mr. Shirley is a selfmade man. When he started out in life to fight its battles, he had nothing to aid him, but has steadily worked his way upward to a position of affluence and is recognized as one of the enterprising and successful agriculturists of the community.

TILIAM T. MELTON. A high place among the farmers and stock-raisers of Winnebago County must be accorded the gentleman above named, who has made a fortune by hard labor, prudent economy, and business shrewdness. He has experienced all that is known to a poor man who makes a settlement in a new country, and among the many disadvantages has been enabled to lay by a handsome competence and is at the present time occupying a beautiful home on section 8, Owen Township.

That part of England which is known as Lincolnshire has furnished this country many of her best citizens and most enterprising farmers. To it we are indebted for the subject of this sketch, who was born in that fur-away land, May 13, 1814. His father, William B. Melton, was also born in that shire, as was also his father, George Melton. The latter-named gentleman was a farmer and spent his entire life in England.

William B. Melton was a lad of eight years when he commenced to earn his own way in the world, being in the employ of a wealthy gentleman for some time. He later was engaged in training horses for the track, for sale, etc., and in May of 1851 sailed from Liverpool, for America, accompanied by his wife and four children. They landed in New York six weeks later, when Mr. Melton came directly to Rockford, which was at that time a small but flourishing city. He purchased a small house and entered the employ of the Chicago & Galena Union Railroad, now the Northwestern Railroad Company, and worked for them in Rockford for two months. He then went to Ridott, Stephenson County, where he was engaged for ten years as bridge tender of the same company. The elder Mr. Melton then purchased land and engaged in farming until his decease, October 3, 1890. His wife, prior to her marriage, was Mary A. Wilmer and still makes her home on the old farm.

He of whom we write celebrated his eighth birthday while on the ocean en route to America. His father being in limited circumstances, he commenced when quite young to earn his own living, making his first money by earrying drinking-water for the railroad employes and which amounted to fifty cents per day. He later worked out on farms by the day and month until 1861, when, on the 30th of August, he enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Forty-sixth Illinois Infantry, being mustered in at Camp Butler. He served his country for one year on detached duty, and being taken sick in June, 1865, received his honorable discharge. For a time after his return home, Mr. Melton was in very poor health, and going to Iowa worked on a farm for a twelvemonth, at the expiration of which time he returned and took charge of the home farm until 1868. Then in company with his brother-in-law, he rented and operated a farm for two years and then purchased eighty acres, which are included in his present farm, and to which he has since added eighty acres adjoining. The entire tract is well fenced and improved with a good set of buildings, not the least among which is the comfortable farm residence.

William T. Melton was united in marriage to Elizabeth Mayers, January 12, 1870. Mrs. Melton was born in Stephenson County, this State and has become the mother of four children: Alvin William, Mary Luella, George F. and Edward S. Socially, our subject is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and with his estimable wife is respected as a thoroughly upright and honest citizen.

ETER G. BAUDER. Among the venerable and highly esteemed residents of Rockford, we are pleased to mention the name which appears at the head of this paragraph, that of a man who was born in the town of Mendon, Montgomery County, N. Y., near what was known as the Mohawk Flats, in December, 1818, His father, George U. Bauder, was born in the same town, and his grandfather, Uriel, had his nativity in Germany, and was, as far as is known, the only member of the family who ever came to America. He crossed the seas in Colonial days, and served America as a soldier during the Revolutionary War. Montgomery County, N. Y., became his home, and there he bought a large tract of timber land, in the town of Mendon,

In the days when the grandfather of our subject settled in New York, there were no canals or railroads, and Indians were numerous. He cleared quite a farm, and lived there until his death, after which his son inherited his property in that place, and, buying other land there, built a sawmill, which he carried on in addition to farming, residing there throughout all his days. He served in the War of 1812, following in the example of his patriotic father. He had married Maria Dunkle, a hative of Mendon Township, whose father, Peter Dunkle, had come to America from Germany before the Revolutionary War, and who had also fought in the War for Independence. He subsequently bought large tracts of land in Mendon Township, and resided there until his death. His daughter, the mother of our subject, lived to the venerable age of ninety-four, and ended her days upon her son's farm.

Peter Bauder was reared and educated in his native town, and after he grew to man's estate bought a tract of land near the old home, and farmed there until 1854, during which year he came to Winnebago County, reaching New Milford on the 16th of October. He had visited Illinois in the earlier part of that year, and had bought two hundred and fourteen acres of land on the south side of the Kishwaukee River, and a house and lot in the village of Kishwaukee.

Our subject was married, August 11, 1839, to Julia A. Allen, who was born in White Creek, Rensselaer County, N. Y., January 29, 1819. Her father, Hugh Allen, was a native of the same place, a son of an Englishman, Ebenezer Allen, who came to America and settled in Rensselaer County during the War of 1812. The Indians were then very troublesome. Mr. Allen and a neighbor were set upon by Indians one day while thay were engaged in splitting rails, and the red men demanded that their prisoners follow them. Mr. Allen asked them to wait till he finished splitting his log, and induced the Indians to take hold of the log and pull it apart. While their hands were thus engaged, and their fingers in the crack, he knocked out the wedge and the log came together, thus making the Indians his prisoners. Later he was taken prisoner by Indians, and spent some time in bondage, but finally escaped, and his last years were passed upon the farm in Rensselaer County.

The father of Mrs. Bauder lived in Rensselaer County until 1823, and then removed to Otsego County, where he bought land in the town of Cherry Valley, and there resided until a few weeks before his death, which took place at Mendon. His wife was, before her union with him, Miss Electa Lee. She was born in New York State, of French ancestry, being a daughter of Samuel Lee, and died at Ft. Plain, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Bauder resided in the village of

New Milford after coming to this county, and then built a house upon the farm and removed there, making it their home until 1878, when Mr. Bauder decided to give his farm to his son, and removed to Rockford, where he has resided ever since. He has devoted himself largely to handling real estate, and attending to business of that nature. He has three children living: Judson J., George M. and Franklin M. Mrs. Bauder is a devout and earnest member of the Baptist Church, and is highly esteemed in the social and church circles of Rockford.

NDREW N. NELSON, Assistant Superintendent of the Forest City Furniture Company, has for nineteen years held his present position, which fact shows that he has been true to every trust reposed in him and has faithfully discharged his duties. He was born near Smoland, Sweden, on the 13th of September, 1850, and is the second child of the family. His parents were Nelson and Swenborg (Holenbeck) Nelson. The father was a carpenter and cabinet-maker, and is still living at the age of seventy-two years. His wife died about two years ago, at the age of sixty-six. Like him, she always adhered to the Lutheran Church.

When quite a young lad, our subject learned the trade of a cabinet-maker, and at the age of sixteen went to sea, sailing as a ship earpenter, and as second mate for five years. He sailed on the waters of the Atlantic and many of the European seas and touched at most of the ports in that continent. He crossed the Atlantic to America in 1871, with the determination to try his fortune in this country. Four years previous, his brother, L. P. Nelson, had come to the United States and located in Chicago, where he yet resides. The first eighteen months after his arrival in this country, Andrew Nelson spent in the State of Michigan and then came to Illinois, locating in Rockford.

It was in this city that our subject led to the marriage altar Miss Emily Eskelson, who was born in Southern Sweden and when a maiden of sixteen summers crossed the briny deep. She afterward returned to her old home, but again came to this country in 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are prominent and intelligent young people and favorably known in this community.

Mr. Nelson has resided in Rockford since the 9th of April, 1872, and, during all the succeeding years, has filled the position which he now occupies. The Forest City Furniture Company owns a large factory on Railroad Avenue and is one of the largest furniture enterprises of the city, doing an extensive and constantly-increasing business. Our subject is also a stockholder in the Excelsior Furniture Company, and in other local enterprises, and is recognized as one of the wide-awake and energetic business men of this city. He certainly deserves great credit for his success in life, which has been achieved entirely through his own efforts and since coming to Rockford. Socially, he is a member of the Odd Fellows' society, and in politics is a supporter of Republican principles, but has never sought or desired public office, preferring to give his attention to his business interests, in which he has met with signal success.

- A CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF

AMES BLACKLAWS. Among the prominent agriculturists of Rockford Township. Winnebago County, we take pleasure in mentioning Mr. Blacklaws, who was born in Kincardineshire, Scotland, January 10, 1833. His father, William Blacklaws, was a native of the same shire in Scotland, where he carried on agricultural pursuits, and spent his entire life. The maiden name of his wife was Margaret Milne, also a native of Scotland, and who, upon emigrating to America, departed this life in this State.

The original of this sketch was seventeen years of age when he accompanied his mother to the New World, they setting sail from Aberdeen in the month of August, 1850, embarking on a sailer commanded by Capt. Pease. After a tedious voyage of five weeks and two days, they landed at Quebec, soon after which they came to Winnebago County, via the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario to Lewistown, N. Y., where they boarded a train which conveyed them to Buffalo, then by way of the Lakes to Chicago, thence by railroad to Elgin, which was then the Western terminus of the road. The remainder of the journey was made with team.

James Blacklaws, on making his home in this county, engaged to work out at $9 per month on farms. He was very industrious and economical, and after being engaged in various kinds of work, purchased a well drill, which was one of the first ever used in this county, and which he operated together with a harvesting machine. After his marriage, our subject located on the farm where he has since resided, and which, by a proper rotation of crops, is made to yield handsome returns.

The "rst marriage of Mr. Blacklaws occurred in 1859, at which time Jessie (Raney) Simpson, became his wife. She was born in Scotland and departed this life August 21, 1866. In 1870, our subject was married to Ellen Walsh, who was born in the North of Ireland, of Scotch parents. The three children born to Mr. Blacklaws by his first marriage were Henry W., Albert and Lewis. The eldest son married Hattie Felch; he was born in February, 1860, and died August 21, 1891. Lewis married Stella Atkinson; Albert died November 29, 1892. The present union of our subject has resulted in the birth of four children, namely: Nellie, Hattie, James and Walter.

Mrs. Blacklaws, who was a member in good standing of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, in which body she was an active worker, died December 13, 1891. Our subject, who is interested in all measures which tend to the upbuilding of his community, votes the straight Republican ticket.

ETER LARSON, who is engaged in farming, and also earries on the dairy business on section 30, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, has for eighteen years resided in this locality, and devoted his energies to his present work. He owns forty acres of land under a high state of cultivation and well improved, and in addition to general farming, is engaged in dairying, keeping on land forty-five cows for this purpose. He came to Illinois from Michigan, where he was engaged in mining for two years after coming to this country.

Mr. Larson was born in Skona, Sweden, May 23, 1848, and grew to manhood in his native province on a farm. His father, Lars Nelson, spent his entire life in that land as an agriculturist, and passed away at the age of sixty-eight years. His wife, who was born March 21, 1820, is yet living on the old homestead in Sweden. She has been a lifelong member of the Lutheran Church, as was Mr. Nelson. In their family were six sons and a daughter. One son, Ola, and the daughter, Anna, are both married, and own farms in Sweden. Five sons are living in this country, and all follow agricultural pursuits. Lars is a farmer of Guilford Township; Peter is the next younger; Nels is also a farmer of Guilford Township; and John and Samuel likewise make their home in that township. The brothers are all successful farmers and industrious and enterprising men, and, with the exception of the first mentioned, all are married.

It was in Rockford that Mr. Larson was joined in wedlock to Miss Charlotte Anderson, a native of Sweden, who, when a young lady, bade good-bye to her old home, and crossed the water to America, where all of the family have since found homes. The father, Charles Anders Rapp, is living on a farm near Donaldson, Marshall County, Ind., at the age of seventy years. He is widely known in his community, and is a member of the Lutheran Church, as was his wife, who died in 1890, at an advanced age. Their family numbers two sons and two daughters, who are yet living: John A. Blomquist, who is married and is employed as a tailor by the firm of Johnson & Wanstrom, of Rockford; Mrs. Larson, of this sketch; Gust, a milk dealer, who is married and resides on Charles Street, Rockford; and Sophia, wife of John Sainuelson, a resident farmer of Marshall County, Ind.

Mr. Larson is regarded as one of the enterprising and successful farmers of this community, and is a public-spirited and progressive citizen. He exercises his right of franchise in support of the Republican party, and he and his wife are members of the Swedish Mission Church of Rockford. Six children grace their union, and the family circle yet remains unbroken. They are as follows: Anna C., J. V. Herbert, Harry L., Lillie E., Elmer and Rosa V., all of whom are still under the parental roof. In addition to his other business, Mr. Larson is connected with the American Furniture Company, which was organized with a capital stock of $100,000.

ORTMAN COMPTON. In the history of our late war, the name of our subject will be found as not having borne an unimportant part in that eventful struggle. He enlisted August 9, 1862, for a three-years' service in Company D, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, and remained with his regiment until the close of the war. He is at the present time residing in the city of Rockford, successfully engaged at his trade of a earpenter and joiner.

Burnett Township, Somerset County, N. J., was the native place of our subject, his birth occurring July 27, 1830, he being the son of Reuben Compton, also a native of that State, where James Compton, the grandfather was born. The latter-named gentleman was a farmer by calling, and spent his entire life on a farm in Burnett Township. The father of our subject bought the old homestead, upon which he resided until 1857, when he sold it and came to Winnebago County, purchasing a tract of land in Owen Township, on which was a small house and a few agres broken. He placed the entire farm under good tillage, and made his home upon it until 1875, when his decease occurred. His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth (Powellson) Compton, was also a native of Somerset County, N. J., and was the daughter of John Powellson. She died on the old farm in Owen Township, in 1884, having become the mother of six sons and one daughter, viz: Nathan, James, Mary, Wortman, Henry, Samnel and John.

Samuel Compton, a brother of our subject, served as a member of Company D, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, and was killed in the battle of Missionary Ridge, where he was color-bearer. John was wounded at Pittsburg Landing, being a member of the Fifteenth Illinois Infantry, and died from the result of his wounds at the hospital at St. Louis. Our subject participated in many of the important battles of that period, being present at Stone River, and was with Sherman on his Atlanta eampaign, engaging in the various battles of that memorable march, including the siege and capture of Atlanta. After the fall of that city, he was under the command of Thomas in pursuit of the Rebel Gen. Hood, and thus fought at the battles of Franklin and Nashville. In the charge at Kenesaw Mountain, Mr. Compton's gun was broken in his hand, in consequence of which he was slightly wounded by a splinter, but with one other exception entirely escaped the fate of many a poor soldier. At another time, while the command were sleeping on the ground without even the shelter of a tent, one of the horses broke loose and ran over Mr. Compton, giving him a severe scalp wound. He received his honorable discharge in Kentucky, in June, 1865, and, returning home, resumed his trade of a carpenter.

Our subject was reared in his native State, and when eighteen years of age learned the trade of a carpenter, serving as a journeyman for two years, and in 1855 came to Illinois, and purchased twenty-five aeres of land in Harrison Township, Winnebago County, where he worked at his trade until entering the army. In 1868, however, he sold that farm and purchased the old homestead in Owen Township, on which he erected a good set of frame buildings, and otherwise improved the farm, on which he resided until 1886, which was the date of his coming to Rockford.

In November, 1852, Mr. Compton was married to Mary Vanderhoof, a native of Somerset County, N. J., and the daughter of Henry Vanderhoof, who, as far as is known, was also born in New Jersey. He died when Mrs. Compton was fourteen months old. The maiden name of her mother was Rachael Vail; her birth also occurred in the above-named county and State. On the death of Mr. Vanderhoof, she was married to Cornelius Vandyke, a patriot of the War of 1812. They came to Illinois in 1860, settling in Winnebago County, where the mother died at the home of Mrs. Compton.

To our subject and his wife have been born two children, Agnes and Whitefield. The daughter is the wife of Archibald Armstrong, to whom have been born two children, Charles E. and Mary L. Whitefield married Nellie Johnson, and is the father of four children: Maud B., Mabel C., John W. and James H. Mr. and Mrs. Compton are members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and our subject being a Grand Army man, is connected with the Nevius Post No. 1. In politics, he is a Republican.

HRISTOPHER MYERS. Among the many enterprising and prominent citizens of Pecatonica will be noticed a number of retired farmers, and it therefore gives us pleasure to mention Mr. Myers, who rented his fine property and removed to the village in 1887, where he has a pleasant home and is surrounded by all that goes to make life enjoyable.

A native of Germany, our subject was born in Mecklenburg, April 23, 1843, being the son of John and Elizabeth (Schoknecht) Myers, who hailed from the Province of Mecklenburg. The father came to the United States November 6, 1857, and made his home for a time in Milwaukee, Wis., whence he removed to Stephenson County, this State, and passed his last days on his farm, dying at the age of fifty-nine years.

Christopher Myers was one in a family of six children born to his parents, only one of whom is deceased. He remained at home until eight years of age, when he was occupied for three years as a shepherd boy, and three years more in watching cattle. At the expiration of that time, he returned home and soon afterward crossed the water to the New World. He resided in Wisconsin until 1860, when he came to Illinois and was employed in working on farms by the month. He then rented a tract, and on New Year's Day of 1868 was married to Miss Ireni Atwood, who was born November 29, 1811. in Owen Township, Winnebago County. The lady is a daughter of Patten and Anna Atwood, of whom a sketch will be found in another portion of this work.

To Mr. and Mrs. Myers have been born eight children, three of whom are living, namely: Mabel A., whose birth occurred May 14, 1871; Walter C., who was born April 14, 1879; Clifford P., who was born July 2, 1880.

The first land of which our subject became the owner was an eighty-acre tract, to which he later added fifty-five acres, one hundred and lifty-one and one hundred and twenty acres, at different times. Ten acres of his estate is timber land and twelve is city property, on the latter of which is located his fine residence. He is deservedly proud of his present financial standing, as he commenced in life a poor boy and knows that his accumulations have been the result of persistent industry and wise management.

Mr. and Mrs. Myers are attendants of the Congregational Church, and in politics our subject is a Republican, casting his first vote for U. S. Grant. He is not interested in politics other than to east his ballot at election times. He is one of the enterprising men of the community and has stock in a shoe factory, which is one of the leading industries of the village. In social matters, he is a Mason, holding the office of Junior Warden in A. W. Rawson Lodge No. 115. He is also connected with the United Workmen and the Eureka Camp of Modern Woodmen.

AVID C. LEWIS. For many years the commercial and agricultural interests of Winnebago County were prominently and successfully represented by Mr. Lewis, who is now a retired merchant residing in Winnebago. He is a native of the Buckeye State, and was born in Milan, Huron County, February 4, 1823. His father, David, was born in New England, and was a piencer of Ohio, where he located about 1820, residing for a time at Sandusky, and removing thence to Milan.

From Ohio, the father of our subject removed to the then Territory of Michigan, and resided at Detroit for a time, thence returned to Milan, Ohio, where he operated a distillery. In 1838, he again sought a home in Michigan, and located in St. Clair County, where he died during the same year. His wife, whose maiden name was Nancy Champion, was born in New York State, the daughter of Selden and Huldah (Hart) Champion. Her first marriage united her with Stephen De Gate, who died in St. Clair County. She came to Illinois in 1846, and spent her last days in Winnebago County.

Orphaned by the death of his father when he was fifteen, our subject gained a maintenance for himself by fishing and trapping, and later engaged in lumbering. He remained in Michigan until 1845, when, accompanied by his wife, he took passage on a boat at Pt. Huron and sailed on Lakes Huron and Michigan, landing at Racine, whence he walked to Winnebago County. At that time Rockford was a small village, and the surrounding country was sparsely settled, some of the land being in the possession of the Government. For one year Mr. Lewis found employment upon a farm, after which he worked at the earpenter's trade for a short time.

In 1848, Mr. Lewis purchased eighty-five acres of Government land, for which he paid $90, and, locating there, he continued to follow his trade while he hired men to cultivate the soil. In 1852, he removed to Rockford and followed his trade one year, later opened a restaurant, of which he was the proprietor for one year, and then returned to the farm. In 1860, he erected a building on the corner of Main and Benton Streets, and for twenty-six years was successfully engaged in mercantile pursuits, building up a splendid reputation as a reliable dealer and upright man. During a portion of that time he was in partnership with A. G. Rainey, but the remainder of the twenty-six years was alone. Meanwhile, he supervised his lumber interests until 1876, when he sold out to Mr. Parsons; and, in addition to other duties, was the proprietor of the Winnebago Hotel for four years, having altered and added to the hotel, which he conducted under a highly improved management. In 1891, he erected a brick block, the finest structure in the village, and, in addition to his city property, is the owner of two good farms.

The marriage of Mr. Lewis in 1845 united him with Miss Lucy Burt, a native of London, Canada, and they have two children: E. Chandler and Etta II. The former married Etta Burgstresser; and has five children: Mabel, Minnic, Grace, Stella and Eddie. Etta married George Ades, and has two children: Lewis and Floyd. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in his political affiliation he is a Prohibitionist. Through the exercise of prudence and industry he has arisen from a position of poverty in his youth to one of affluence in his declining years, and now, with his estimable wife, can enjoy all the comforts and many of the luxuries of existence.

USTAF JERNBERG, a stockholder and Director of the Rockford Manufacturing Company, in which he has been patternmaker and mechanical draughtsman since the company was founded in 1890, has been a resident of this city since 1878 and is one of its foremost citizens. He began here in the last-named year for the well-known manufacturer, N. C. Thompson, with whom he continued eight years, and later was with Savage & Love, with whom he remained eighteen months. After this he embarked in the pattern-making business on his own account. He subsequently became connected as a stockholder with the present company and has since invented the Imperial Mower, which is manufactured exclusively by this great manufacturing company. He also owns a fine home at No. 301 South Fourth Street, designed and erected by his own hands, and a well-improved farm of eighty acres, with buildings, on section 2, of Cherry Valley Township.

Sweden is his native land, and he was born in Wester Moreland Province, on the 18th of March, 1849. He was there reared and educated, and was taught his trade, serving an apprenticeship of a few years. He, with his brother Eric, was the first of the family to come to the States. The latter is now married to Miss Christina Carlson, and is cultivating the soil in New Milford Township. The parents and other members of the family came to this country in 1869, and located in Marquette County, Mich., where they resided until 1875. They then came to Illinois, settled in Milford Township, Winnebago County, where the father, John E. Jernberg, died in 1888, when sixty-five years of age. He was a Lutheran in religion, and a Republican in politics. His wife, who is still living, and sixty-two years of age, finds a comfortable home with her daughter, Mrs. John Odhner. She is also a member of the First Lutheran Church.

Gustaf Jernberg, the second in order of birth of eight children, five sons and three daughters, all of whom are living and married but one son, was a resident of Ishpeming, Mich., for ten years after coming to the United States, and followed his trade of pattern-maker. Just ten years after reaching this country; he came to Rockford, and has been a resident of this flourishing city since. He was married in Chicago, Ill., to Miss Axelina W. Holmgren, who was born in Easter Gothland Province, Sweden, November 8, 1857, and who came to this country and settled in Marquette County, Mich., with her parents in 1873. The father, Andrew Holmgren, was born in Easter Gothland, Sweden, as was also his mother, Anna L. (Sjoberg) Holmgren, and after coming to Michigan, they settled in the improved regions of that State. There the father followed the occupation of a mine mechanic. Later, they came to Rockford, and here the father died when sixty-one years of age and the mother, when fifty-four. They were reared to the Lutheran faith. They have one son, John Holmgren, who is a resident of Traverse City, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Jernberg's union has been blessed by the birth of one daughter, Huldah V., who was born December 25, 1878, and who is a cultivated and refined young lady.

ILLIAM FORBES. There are few citizens of Rockford who are better known, and certainly none are more highly esteemed, than Mr. Forbes, who occupies a pleasant home at No. 1106 Rock Street, and is retired from the active labors which occupied his close attention in life's prime. Coming to this city in 1854, he has since been closely identified with its best interests and has watched with keen sympathy its progress and development. By industry and energy, and through years of labor at his trade, that of a moulder, he accumulated a goodly amount of this world's comforts and is numbered among the prosperous citizens of the place.

A native of Scotland, Mr. Forbes was born in Perthshire, August 17, 1826, and belonged to a worthy Scotch family, whose members figured extensively in the history of that country. His father, Alex Forbes, lived and died in Perthshire, his death occurring when he was about seventy years old. By trade he was a weaver. He married Miss Margaret Smith, who was born in the Lowlands of Scotland, and who, surviving her husband, emigrated to America, in company with her children, in 1849. The voyage was made in a sailing-vessel from Glasgow to New York City, after which the family settled in New York Mills, where the mother died at an advanced age. She was a Presbyterian in religious convictions, and her husband was also identified with that Church.

The family of which our subject is a member consisted of seven sons and one daughter. last-named, the eldest in the family, makes her home with our subject, and is now eighty-four years old. The other children have passed away. In his youth, William Forbes served an apprenticeship to the trade of a monlder in a foundry at Troy, N. Y., at the completion of which he came to Rockford, and here established his permanent home. He was married in New York City to Miss Rebecca Henderson, who was born and reared in Wilmington, Del., and died in Rockford in 1872, at the age of fifty-two. At her demise she left three children, namely: Mary, wife of Clark S. Gilbert, a ranchman in California; Margaret, wife of Frederick McPherson, a surveyor, who resides in California; and Alex, who is a moulder by trade, and has charge of a foundry at San Franeisco, Cal., his home being in Oakland, that State.

The second marriage of our subject took place in this city, and united him with Mrs. Barbara (Shaw) Barr, who was born in Argyleshire, Scotland. She was first married to James Barr, an engineer, who passed his entire life in Glasgow, dying there in the prime of life. After emigrating to the United States in 1871, Mrs. Barr came to Roekford, and was here married to Mr. Forbes, in 1874. Of her first marriage one child survives, James Barr, M. D., of Foley Springs, Ore. In their religious connections, Mr. Forbes and his estimable wife are faithful members of the Presbyterian Church, and, politically, he is a stanch adherent of Republican principles.

For three years during the late war, Mr. Forbes served in defense of the Union, enlisting as a member of Company G, Second Illinois Light Artillery, Col. Mathews commanding. For two years the regiment was incorporated with the Army of the Tennessee, and participated in many engagements, among them those at Memphis and Vicksburg. After serving with valor for three years, Mr. Forbes was honorably discharged at Springfield, and returned once more to his home in Rockford. Since the war he has suffered greatly from rhenmatism, caused by exposure on the battle-field, in eamp, and during long marches, and receives a pension as a slight compensation for services rendered the Government. His war record is one of which his descendants and friends may justly feel proud, and his conduct in affairs of civic life has been characterized by equal fidelity and honor.

EORGE W. WUNDER, who is now living a retired life in his pleasant home at No. 610 State Street, Rockford, was born on the 4th of July, 1827, in Bavaria, Germany, and is a son of Michael and Louisa (Karner) Wunder. His father was a German farmer and died at the age of sixty-three years. His wife died in 1886, at the age of eighty-four, and up to the time of her death was bright and active. Both were members of the Methodist Church. They had only two sons, our subject and Martin, who is six years his junior, and now owns and occupies the old homestead in Bavaria.

George W. Wunder spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native land, but at length determined to try his fortune in the New World, and on the 28th of August, 1854, landed in New York, having crossed the Atlantic from Bremen on a sailing-vessel, which after forty-two days reached its destined port. In 1884, he returned to his native land on a visit, but is well content that his home is in America, for he has here met with prosperity. He had only $5 in his pocket when he reached Chicago to which he came immediately after landing in the United States, and thus almost empty-handed, he began life in the New World, but has worked his way up to a position of affluence.

It was in December, 1859, in Chicago, that Mr. Wunder formed a matrimonial alliance with Miss Louisa Cattley, who was born in the Canton of Berne, Switzerland, and came to the United States in 1854. To her husband she had proved a true helpmate and faithful companion. They have one ehild, a daughter, Carrie, now the wife of Fritz Spahr. He is also a native of the Canton of Berne, Switzerland. In that country, he grew to manhood and learned the trade of a jeweler. When a young man, he came to America in 1877. and for five years was employed in the watch factories of this city, since which time he has been engaged in the saloon business on East State Street. He and his wife reside with Mrs. Spahr's parents.

After residing in Chicago for two years, Mr. Wunder came to Rockford in 1856, and for some time was engaged in the lumber business, after which he engaged in farming in Rockford Township on his own account. At length, he returned to the city, and did business for the old lumber firm, in whose employ he had formerly been, and to that work devoted his energies until 1860, when he went to California by way of New York and the Isthmus of Panama. In that State he engaged in business for some years and was quite successful, but failing health eaused him to return, and in 1864 we again find him in Rockford. He then rented land for some years, and with the money saved during that time he began dealing in sand. Two years later, he embarked in the dairy business, to which he devoted his energies for four years, when he sold out and for two years lived retired. Subsequently, he was engaged in buying and shipping horses, and in 1876 became a wholesale dealer in beer and also did a retail bottling business, which he carried on until 1890. His efforts being crowned with success, and thereby acquiring considerable capital, he is now enabled to live a retired life, resting in the enjoyment of the fruits of his former toil. In politics, he is a Democrat and is a member of the Germania Society.

HERON G. PIERPONT. Nowhere can more beautiful farms be found than in the Prairie State, and no sections of it are any more attractive than Winnebago County. On section 20, Rockford Township, lies a body of land comprising one hundred and sixty productive acres, which, under the hand of a progressive and intelligent farmer, produce abundantly.

Mr. Pierpont had his birth in North Haven, Conn., April 21, 1851, and his father, Guy Pierpont, who was also a native of that State and place, was the son of Giles and Sallie (Bassett) Pierpont. The father of our subject was reared and educated in the Nutmeg State, and came West to Winnebago County in 1857, where he purchased a farm two miles from the Court House, and there resided until his death. His wife, prior to her marriage, was known as Jerusha Gaylord; she was also a native of Connecticut and is at present residing in Rockford.

The original of this sketch was six years of age when he accompanied his parents on their removal to the Prairie State, and, after receiving his primary education in the district school, attended a select school taught by Prof. Lownsbury. Theron S, was reared to farm life and has, since coming to Illinois, lived on the old homestead. He was married, in 1878, to Helen M. Blakeman, who was born in Stratford, Conn., and was the daughter of Benjamin Blakeman, also a native of that State.

The two children comprising the household of Mr. and Mrs. Pierpont are Birdseye B, and Eleanore (twins). The parents are influential members of the Second Congregational Church, and in his political relations our subject votes the Republican ticket. The father of Mrs. Pierpout, Benjamin Blakeman, was born in Stratford, Fairfield County, Conn., and was a son of Treat and Annie (Birdseye) Blakeman. Her father came to Ulinois in 1856, and, locating in Rockford, has since been prominently identified with its business interests, being now President of the Blakeman & Dobson Manufacturing Company, The maiden name of the mother was Caroline Fairchild, who was also a native of the same State and county as was her husband. Mrs. Pierpont finished her education at Vassar College, at Poughkeepsie, after graduating at the High School of Rockford.

NUT BELTING, a successful dealer in real estate, is a gentlemen. real estate, is a gentleman of thorough experience in that line, both as a means of speculation and permanent investment. He came to Rockford in 1882, established a cigar store and news stand on a capital of $20, was very successful, and his valuation at the present time is $10,000. He owns a fine double business house with flats above, at the corner of Fourteenth Avenue and Ninth Street, also some good residence property, and has in process a new business building fronting on Fourteenth Street, where he owns seventeen valuable lots, all in a growing part of the city. Mr. Belting is a man full of energy and business, and his prospects for the future are very bright. He owns stock in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, was a promoter of the Skandia Exchange, and is a public-spirited, enterprising citizen.

Mr. Belting was born near Skona, Sweden, October 26, 1854, attained his growth there, and was engaged as an employe in a grain-dealing establishment at Helsingborg, where he remained for a number of years. Subsequently, he went to Stockholm, where, for a number of years, he was superintendent of the largest bakery of the place, it being the one that baked the bread for the royal family. He was thus engaged for four years and then became a commission merchant. He met with much success, but the collapse came and he, with others, lost all. One month later, he concluded to try his fortune in a new country, and in 1882 he sailed for the United States, landing in Philadelphia in May of that year. From there he went to Chicago, Ill., and thence to Michigan a few months later; after a short experience in lumber camps of that State, he came to Rockford, where he started in the tobacco and news-dealer business, as above mentioned. He is a self-made man, and all his accumulations are the result of hard work and perseverance on his part. He is the only member of his family now in this country, and has no relative here on either side.

His father, Carl Belting, died in Sweden in 1875, but the mother is still living on the old home place in her native country, and is now over sixty years of age. She has been a life-long member of the State Church, and her husband was also a devout member of that church. She has four children in Sweden, two sons and two daughters, viz.: Nils, married, and is a dry-goods merchant; Rev. Eric, a preacher in the Lutheran Baptist Church, single; Johanna, wife of Manges Lichtie, who is Principal in the High School at Lund; and Botilda, single, at home.

His father, Victor Munthe, spent his entire life in Sweden, dying at the age of fifty-five years. He was a prominent citizen of his native province and the owner of a large estate. His father was Judge of the province of Smoland. The mother of our subject is still living and makes her home at the city of Stockholm, at the age of seventy-one. She has been a life-long member of the Lutheran Church, as was also her husband. Two sisters of the family are still living in Sweden: Hedvig, wife of Lieut. Edward Brietholtz, of Smoland, a Lieutenant in the standing army, and Matilda, wife of Carl Sunblade, a successful merchant of Stockholm.

Our subject is the only son of the family. The days of his boyhood and youth were spent in his native land, and when a young man he sailed from Gottenburg to New York City, whence he came to the West. He made his first location in Chicago and afterward went to Michigan, where he worked for a time and then came to Rockford in 1868. He was married in this city to Miss Maria Peterson, who was born, reared and educated in Smoland. With her parents, she came to this country, the family locating in Rockford, where Niles and Christina Peterson now reside. They are members of the Mission Lutheran Church, Mr. Peterson is a tailor and followed that business for a number of years but is now living a retired life.

When a young man, Mr. Munthe had learned the trade of a glove and mitten maker and to that work devoted his attention for some years. For twelve years after coming to Rockford he was connected with the H. W. Price Glove and Mitten Company, being foreman of the large business during the latter half of the time. He then established the Rockford Mitten and Hosiery Company, doing business alone for two years, when a company was incorporated and he continued a member of the firm for three years. On account of failing health, he then sold out and went to Oregon, and for three years engaged in business as a tanner and glove maker in the city of Portland. He then returned to Rockford and during the past two years has been successfully engaged in business as a realestate and insurance agent and Notary Public. He is agent for the Nelson Addition to Rockford and is one of the owners of the River View Addition. His business career has been a successful one and he is now one of the prosperous citizens of Rockford.

He was born in Harrison Township, this county, December 3, 1849, and was reared to farm pursuits, which calling he has made his life work.

Mrs. Grace Campbell was a daughter of Samuel Plum and was married in 1793. The Campbells are of Scotch ancestry.

After the death of his mother, David S. Campbell went to New York State and lived with an uncle, William Campbell, where he learned the trade of a potter, and at odd times worked on the farm. In 1836, he came to Illinois, and locating one hundred and sixty acres of land on section 33, Durand Township, he improved the same, and when twenty-four years of age returned to Vermont, where, February 16, 1840, he was married. With his young bride, Mr. Campbell started for his new home, landing at his claim April 28, 1840. Here he resided until 1885, during which time he became the proprietor of three hundred broad acres and then traded farms with Mr. Sarver, his son-in-law, where he is residing at the present time. His wife died October 31, 1891, after having become the mother of six children, two of whom died when young. Adelaide L. was born January 11, 1811. and died October 28, 1844. The Republican party claims our subject as one of its most active workers. He has been Assessor of Durand Township since its organization and is consequently the oldest Assessor in the county if not in the State. He was one of the organizers of the Durand Fire Insurance Company and was active in all measures which tended to promote the best welfare of his community. Socially, he is a member of the United Workmen. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are Spiritualists in behef.

ARTON B. GATES, who at present makes his home in Rockton Township, Winnebago County, is largely interested in the limekiln at Rockton, where Mr. Gates, with his characteristic energy, push and fair dealing, has built up a fine and paying business, having had full charge of it for some years. The bed of lime rock is the best of rock and seemingly inexhaustible. With their present capacity of two large and improved kilns, they burn from one bundred and forty thousand to one hundred and fifty thousand bushels of lime per year, for which they have a convenient market at the paper mills here and in Beloit.

A native of Macomb County, Mich., our subject, who was born November 7, 1832, is the son of Gideon and Lucy (Blinn) Gates. The parents were natives of Wethersfield, Conn., and soon after their marriage went to Bloomfield, N. Y., where they were keeping hotel at the time of the Morgan (Masonic) excitement. They later came to Michigan during the pioneer days of that State and ranked among the well-to-do citizens of Macomb County. The parental panily included four sons and three daughters, the eldest being born in New York in 1812, and the remainder of the family being born on a farm near Romeo, Michigan. In 1843, the father moved to the village, where the children were given the advantages of the common schools, and where Mr. Gates was one of the first teachers in the school house, which he had helped to erect.

In 1854 and 1855, Gideon Gates came to Rockton, this county, where he purchased five hundred acres of land, known as the Gibson farm, for which he paid $13,500. The following spring his wife, with the family, which included Wilber B .. our subject, John B. and Hubert B., came to the new home. The initial B., which accompanies the names of several of the children, stood for Blinn, the mother being desirous to perpetuate her maiden name. Of the family, two are now deceased: Jane, who had married Mr. L. D. Owen, passed away at Romeo, Mich., in 1882, and Wilbur, who was born in New York State, died in November, 1889, aged seventy-seven years. Hubert is living retired in Owosso, Mich.; John is a farmer in Oakland County, that State. The parents died when ripe in years, the father in 1864 and the mother in 1866.

Barton B. Gates was married when twenty-three years of age in Brighton, Mich., to Miss Ellen Bingham, the date of the ceremony being January 9, 1855. The lady was born in England, and was a daughter of Allen and Johanna (McColliff) Bingham. In the fall of 1867, Mr. and Mrs. Gates removed to Rockton Village, this county, where the mother of the latter died, February 14, 1871, and the father in July, 1881, at the respective ages of sixty-four and seventy-six years.

Our subject was engaged in the grocery business for a time in Rockton, but later disposed of it, and in company with J. W. Cowles embarked in the milling business, buying the Rockton Stone Mill, for which they paid $15,000. This they enlarged, adding two run of stone to the four which the mill already possessed, and were successfully engaged in that line of business until April, 1879, when it was destroyed by fire. While thus engaged, Mr. Gates and his partner obtained jointly a one-third interest in the linekiln then owned by parties of Lanark, Carroll County. Our subject later bought out his partner's interest, and has since continued to manage affairs in company with his partners at Lanark.

He of whom we write has held the office of Commissioner of Highways for the past twentythree years. His wife is a member of the Congregational Church, but he is pledged to no religious denomination.

RANK I. WINNE, of Belvidere, was born in the town of Bethlehem, Albany County, N. Y., on the 12th of April, 1832. The family is of Dutch descent. The grandparents of our subject, Henry and Sarah (Groosbeck) Winne, spent their entire lives in Albany County as farming people. The father of our subject, John H. Winne, was also a native of Albany County. He learned the trade of a shoemaker and followed that occupation some years. In 1852, he left his home in the East and emigrated to Boone County, Ill., purchasing land in the town of Spring, where he engaged in farming for some years. He afterwards moved to Butler County, lowa, and purchased a farm upon which he spent his last days. He married Christina Winne, who, though of the same name, was no relation. She was born in the town of Bethlehem, as were her father and grandfather, Francis and Adam Winne. Her death occurred in Butler County, Iowa, on the home farm about 1877, passing away eleven years before her husband was called to his final rest.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who spent the days of his boyhood and youth under the parental roof, and was early inured to the labors of the farm. He remained at home until his marriage in August, 1862, when Miss Keziah Sager became his wife. She was born in Greene County, N. Y., July 5, 1832, and was a daughter of Garrett W. and Elizabeth (Winne) Sager. Her grandparents, William and Hannah (Brunk) Sager, spent their entire lives in Albany County, N. Y., where Garrett W. was born and reared. In the town of Bethlehem he married Miss Winne, also a native of that county. They removed to Athens, Greene County, where he purchased a farm and made his home until 1852, when he came with his family to Illinois, locating in the town of Spring, Boone County. Purchasing a farm, he made his home thereon for some years, and on selling out came to Belvidere. He spent his last days in the home of our subject, his death occurring in June, 1876. His wife survived him only a short time, passing away on the 8th of November, 1876.

Mr. and Mrs. Winne began their domestic life upon rented land, and then purchased a farm in Belvidere Township, where they made their home for two years. They then came to the city of Belvidere, where they have since resided. They are highly respected people of this community and well deserve representation in the history of their adopted county. Socially, Mr. Winne is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 152, A. O. U. W., and in his political affiliations is a Democrat.

OBERT SWAIL, who is extensively engaged in the cultivation of small fruits, making a specialty of strawberries and a specialty of strawberries and raspherries, is residing on a pleasant farm in Flora Township, Boone County. He was born at Longucuil opposite Montreal, Canada, November 1, 1835. His father, John Swail, was born in Cumberland County, England, and the grandfather, William Swail, came from Westmoreland County, England.

The great-grandfather of our subject also bore the name of William and like his son was born in Westmoreland, England, where he was reared and married. In early life, he went to the West Indies and was never after heard from. His wife was left in England and lived to be over one hundred years of age. The grandfather of our subject was the only son of his parents and was reared to manhood in Westmoreland. He was married to Mary Borbeck, a daughter of very wealthy parents, who disowned her because of her marriage with Mr. Swail. The couple resided in Cumberland County until 1839 and then with their three sons and two daughters emigrated to America and located on a farm on Mt. Royal. The grandfather was very successful in all his undertakings and at the time of his decease was in good circumstances. The five children included in their family were named respectively: Ann, Sarah, Rachel, John and William.

John Swail, the father of our subject, when reaching mature years commanded a ferry boat plying between Montreal and Longueuil. He later. however, located on a farm at Mt. Royal and spent the remainder of his days there. His wife bore the maiden name of Esther Hannah; she was born in County Monaghan, Ireland and spent her last days on the home farm in Canada. Robert of this sketch pursued his early studies in the public schools at Longueuil and later was a student in the select school at Montreal. When nineteen years of age, he commenced farming on his father's estate and continued to be so employed until 1860, when he came to Boone County. In the fall of that year, he went to New Orleans, where he remained until the outbreak of the Civil War. His sympathies being with the North, Mr. Swail returned to Boone County and located on the farm he now occupies on section 3, Flora Township.

Robert Swail was married, November 27, 1861, to Harriet Feakins, who was born in Cherry Valley, Otsego County, N. Y., May 19, 1841. Her father, William Feakins, was born in London, England and came to America after reaching his majority. He was married in Cherry Valley, N. Y., where he lived until 1856 and then, coming to Boone County, located in Belvidere Township, and was engaged in farming until his death. He had married Catherine Allen, a native of Cherry Valley, N. Y., and who now lives in Belvidere.

A family of eleven children have been granted our subject and his wife, namely: Sarah, Esther, Alice, Charles, William, Mabel, Frank, Archibald. Bertha, Ida and Ilazel. Mr. Swail is liberal in his religious views, while his wife and three daughters are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Democrat in politics and actively interested in all township affairs. He was engaged in general farming for about twenty years, then linding that he could realize handsome returns from raising vegetables, he has since been extensively engaged in that branch of agriculture. His farm is pleasantly located three and one-half miles from Belvidere and is improved and operated in a manner which indicates the enterprise of its owner.

OHN H. LARSON is a representative and well-to-do farmer and stock-raiser of Winnebago County, residing on section 35, Guilford Township. That farm has been his home for five years but his residence in this county covers a period of almost twenty. Like many of his fellow-townsmen, he is of Swedish birth. He was born in the province of Skona, on the 12th of April, 1856, and in the usual manner of farmer lads was reared to manhood, no event of special importance occurring during his youth. In company with his brother, Peter Larson, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work, he had formed a desire to seek a home in the New World and together the young men crossed the Atlantic to America. It was an important day for them when they had thus determined, for they have here met with prosperity and found pleasant homes. They are active and energetic people, well deserving the success which has crowned their efforts.

As a companion and helpmate on life's journey Mr. Larson chose Miss Anna G. Oberg, their union being celebrated in Rockford. The lady was born in Sweden, in 1863, and when quite young came with her parents to the United States, and located in Rockford. A sketch of her father, John P. Oberg, is given on another page of this work. Mrs. Larson is the eldest living child of the family. She was reared in Rockford, acquired her education in the city schools and is an intelligent and estimable lady, who has indeed proved a true helpmate to her husband. Their union has been blessed with five children, four of whom are yet living: George H., Flora O., Grace M. R. and John. Arthur A. died in childhood.

Mr. Larson began work in this country as a miner in Marquette County, Mich., where he was employed for eighteen months. At the expiration of that time, he began farming in Flint County, Mich., and in the spring of 1873 came to Rockford. Since that time, he has been a resident of Winnebago County and has made farming his chief occupation in this locality. About five years ago, he purchased his present farm and now owns and operates one hundred and twenty acres of valuable land, which pays a golden tribute to the care and cultivation he bestows upon it. His success in life has all been due to his own efforts and his possessions are as a monument to his thrift and enterprise. In connection with general farming, he engages in stock-raising and is succeeding admirably. Mr. Larson is recognized as a public-spirited and progressive citizen and manifests a commendable interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the county and its upbuilding. In politics, he is a stalwart Republican, and himself and wife are members of the First Lutheran Church.

ARREN H. GRAVES. Since settling upon the farm on section 15, Rockton Township, Winnebago County, Mr. Graves has devoted himself assiduously to its cultivation, with so much success that the estate is now one of the best in the county. At the time of its purchase for $2,100, it was improved by a small house and thatched shed, and comprised a quarter of the section, but the residence has been enlarged until it is now a commodious and conveniently arranged abode, while in 1883 a barn was erected, 42x60 feet in dimensions. The original purchase has been added to until now the farm includes two hundred and thirty-three acres, and the neat appearance of buildings and highly-cultivated soil give evidence of the thrift and progressive spirit of the owner.

Mr. Graves was born in Hoosick Falls, Rensselaer County, N. Y., October 29, 1839. There is no definite record of the progenitors of this family prior to David Graves, who was born of English parentage, October 5, 1728, and passed his entire life in New England. His grandson, Timothy Graves, engaged as a tiller of the soil in Connecticut, where his son, also named Timothy, was born, January 1, 1754. The latter emigrated from the Nutmeg State to New York in an early day, and settled on a farm in Rensselaer County, where his son, Timothy, Jr., was born in August, 1803.

The mother of our subject was Frances, daughter of William and Jerusha (Rich) Thomas, and was born November 15, 1810. She died March 1, 1849, leaving two children, our subject and Frances E., the widow of Charles Platt, and a resident of Wichita, Kan. Afterward, the father of our subject was a second time married, choosing as his wife Miss Margaret A., daughter of Jacob and Christine Stover, of Pittstown, Rensselaer County, N. Y. Mrs. Margaret A. Graves was descended from German ancestors on her father's side, and was born February 26, 1820. She became the wife of Timothy Graves, Jr., November 6, 1851, and unto them were born two children; Jacob A. and Hattie A., the former a farmer residing on the old homestead and the latter a teacher by profession. Timothy Graves, Jr., died May 31, 1881, aged seventy-eight years. His widow resides on the old homestead at Iloosick.

After gaining a good education in the academy near his home, our subject left the parental roof to respond to his country's call for defenders of the old flag, and enlisting at Hoosick in June, 1861, became a member of Company II, Thirtieth New York Infantry. In the first engagement of the regiment, which was at the second Battle of Bull Run, he was incapacitated for duty for three months by having his left thumb shot off. At the close of the term of service, he was honorably discharged, in June, 1863, and returned to his home in the Empire State. He got a pension of $8 per month from the Government.

In the fall of 1866, Mr. Graves removed to Illinois, and for a time was employed on the farm of J. P. Farnsworth. January 21, 1867, he was married to Miss Clara A. Farnsworth, who was born in Eaton. Province of Quebec, September 27, 1832. Her father, Samuel, died at the age of sixty-six years, and her mother, whose maiden name was Tabitha Barlow, died in April, 1869, at the age of seventy-four, leaving eight children, of whom Mrs.

Graves is the youngest. Hon. John F. Farnsworth, of Washington, D. C., a cousin of Mrs. Graves, was a General in the late war, and a member of Congress from St. Charles, Ill., for ten years. Gen. E. J. Farnsworth, her second cousin, was a Brigadier-General in the Civil War, and was mortally wounded at the battle of Gettysburg.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Graves settled on the farm where they still reside, and to the improvement of which they have devoted their energies. They have two surviving children, and lost two in infancy. Walter T., the only son, received a good education at the academy, and is a young man of sturdy integrity and unusual mechanical genius. Nettie C, is a student in the Rockton schools, and is an accomplished young lady. Politically, Mr. Graves is a Republican. He and his wife attend the Congregational Church, although Mrs. Graves was reared in the Episcopal faith. In addition to general farming, Mr. Graves devoted considerable attention to stock-raising, and is successful at that occupation. He usually keeps fifteen or twenty cows on the place, and sells the milk to the cheese factories. He is a man of honor and commendable public spirit, and his position is among the most progressive farmers of the community.

AMES KELLY. To have the esteem of one's fellowmen, and especially of those who know you most intimately, is a worthy ambition in the breast of any honorable man. We may truly say that Mr. Kelly has attained this high place, as he has held the office of Assessor of Caledonia Township, Boone County, for eighteen years. He is well spoken of by all who know him and has attained a broad and true friendship with many. He engaged in agricultural pursuits on section 15, Caledonia Township, and is one whose ability, energy and enterprise have made him prominent and prosperous.

A native of Scotland, our subject was born July 17, 1825 in Argyleshire, while his father, John, and his grandfather, James Kelly, were born in Argyleshire. The grandfather of our subject was a farmer and spent his entire life in his native land, as also did his wife, who bore the name of Euphemia McDonald. John Kelly was reared to manhood in Scotland, where he was married and followed farming until 1852, when he emigrated to the New World and located in Cincinnati, Ohio. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Kelly, also a native of the same shire as was her husband, and the daughter of Donald and Barbara Kelly. She survived her husband many years and departed this life at the home of her son, Duncan S., in Caledonia Township, this county.

Our subject was the fourth in order of birth of a large family of children, his brothers and sisters being Barbara, Agnes, Mary, John, Jennette, Charles, Jane, Duncan and Marion. He remained in his native land until 1850, when in June of that year he set sail from Glasgow on the vessel "Sarah" and landed in New York after a voyage of five weeks and six days. He went immediately to Ohio and, locating in Washington County, commenced working out on farms by the month. Being economical, he saved his money and purchased two hundred acres in Belpre Township, which he operated until 1869, and then selling out came to this township, and engaged in farming on his own land until 1886, since which time he has resided on his estate one-half mile east of the village. He is retired from active work of any kind on the farm and gives his attention to his official duties.

In 1857, Mr. Kelly and Miss Elizabeth Brown were united in marriage. The lady, who was born in Kintyre, Scotland, was the daughter of John and Ellen Brown, and died January 17, 1858. November 28, 1860, our subject and Miss Ellen J., daughter of Joseph Potter were united in marriage. The lady was born in Belpre Township, Washington County, Ohio, while her father was born in New England. Mr. Potter was a blacksmith but after coming to Stark County, Ill., engaged in farming until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Sarah Cunningham; she died March 6, 1884.

By our subject's union with Miss Potter four children were born: Elizabeth, Charles, Mary and Ella L. The eldest is the wife of Clement Clark, and has one daughter named Eva Ella. The family of our subject are all members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church. In politics, he is a Republican and is well titted to occupy the prominent positions of which he has been the incumbent.

ENECA ASHTON. It is no doubt owing in a great measure to Mr. Ashton's Quaker ancestors that he is indebted for his gifts of frugality, industry, and uprightness, as well as many other estimable qualities, which have gathered around him much that makes life enjoyable. He was born in Livingston County, N. Y., January 29, 1830, and is one of eight children, all but one now living, born to the marriage of Sidney Ashton, Sr., and Miss Eliza Downs. The father was born in the Keystone State and there resided for many years, but subsequently moved to the Empire State and from there to Illinois, where his death occurred when eighty-eight years of age. He came of old Quaker stock and was a man of quiet, dignified habits, and one who held the esteem of all. His wife was born in Vermont and moved with her husband to New York, where her death occurred when but fifty-six years of age. She was also highly respected.

Of the children born to this worthy couple nearly all selected agricultural pursuits as their occupation in life. Seneca Ashton is no exception to this rule and is well posted on all matters relating to tilling the soil. He remained under the parental roof until he had reached mature years, and on the 6th of February, 1852, he was wedded to Miss Elizabeth Miller, who was born in Livingston County, N. Y., June 11th, 1831. Her parents, Barkley and Catherine (Smith) Miller, were natives of the Jersey State, but after marriage moved to New York State, where they passed the closing scenes of their lives, the father dying at the age of sixty-seven and the mother when eighty-three years of age. They were the parents of ten children, all of whom grew to mature years, and most of whom became tillers of the soil. Mrs. Ashton's Grandfather and Grandmother Smith were natives of New Jersey, and there died when extremely old people.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashton's happy union was blessed by the birth of one child, a son, Like M., whose birth occurred in Livingston County, N. Y., January 15, 1854. The latter was reared in his native State, received his education there, and in Boone County was married to Mrs Augusta P. Allen, daughter of A. H. Allen (see sketch). To this union has been born a son, Ray L., who was but an infant when his mother died. Ray Ashton was born in Boone County, 1ll., on the 13th of January, 1884, and is a bright, intelligent lad.

After his marriage, Mr. Ashton remained in New York State until 1875, when he sold out and came to Illinois. He bought his present farm of one hundred acres with improvements, and on this he has made his home up to the present time. He is ambitious and enterprising and has accumulated sufficient to render his future years comfortable and free from all worry or care. In politics, Mr. Ashton and son affiliates with the Democratic party, and his first Presidential vote was cast for James Buchanan. Mr. Ashton had two uncles in the War of 1812, and both drew pensions until their deaths.

RSON TRUMAN, one of the prominent contractors and builders of Rockford, was born in the town of Wort, Allegany County, N. Y., June 21, 1840, and is the son of John Truman, who also hailed from the Empire State. The latter-named gentleman was a blacksmith by trade, and later was engaged in the manufacture of edged tools. After his marriage, he settled in Wirt, Allegany County, where he prosecuted his trade until 1845, then accompanied by his wife and seven children, he started for the Territory of Wisconsin.

On making his home in the Badger State, the father of our subject purchased a tract of land in Lima Township, Rock County, for which he paid $3.33 per aere. Twenty broken acres and a log house constituted the only improvements of the place, the rest of the land, excepting a small marsh, being timber. The family took up their abode in the rude cabin, and the father at once set about the improvement of his property. The country round about was very sparsely settled, and as the greater portion of the land was still owned by the Government, Mr. Truman entered a large tract adjoining his farm. He erected a blacksmith shop, and, in addition to superintending the operations of the farm, worked at his trade until 1852, when, the railroad being completed, the station was placed on his farm, and he appointed its agent. The place was named Lima, and there Mr. Truman resided until his decease.

Our subject's mother was known in her maidenhood as Maria Holcomb; she was also a native of New York. Orson, of this sketch, was a lad of five years when his parents removed to Wisconsin, where he was reared and educated. He aided his father in developing the home farm and in the shop, and on the death of the father succeeded him as station agent, in which position he continued until 1864.

In August of the above-named year, our subject enlisted in Company G, Thirty-eighth Wisconsin Infantry. Joining his regiment before Petersburg, he served in the First Brigade, First Division, Ninth Corps of the Army of the Potomac, with which he remained until the close of the war. Then marching to Washington, D. C., he participated in the Grand Review, and was honorably discharged at Camp Randall, Madison, Wis. Mr. Truman at once returned to Lima, and for one year was engaged in the produce business. At the end of that time he went to Muskegon, Mich., where he remained only a few months, however. Again making his home in Lima, our subject commenced work at the trade of a carpenter, at which he was engaged until March, 1869, when he went to Iowa and lived until the fall of that year, thence coming to Rockford, and continuing as a journeyman in that city until 1873. Mr. Truman then formed a partnership with L. H. Child; they continued as carpenters and builders together for three years, since which time our subject has carried on the business successfully alone, and has been instrumental in erecting some of the finest residences and business blocks in Rockford.

Miss Adeline D., daughter of M. A. and Lydia Child, was married to our subject, February 14, 1862. To them have been born six children, two of whom are deceased; those living are Effic M., Willis C., Mina E. and Harry C. A Republican in politics, our subject cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. Socially, he is a member of Forest City Lodge No. 12, A. O. U. W.

ELS P. NELSON, who is engaged in general farming on section 2, New Milford Township, Winnebago County, claims Sweden as the land of his birth. He was born January 25, 1851, and is a son of Nels and Ida (Johnson) Parsons, who were farming people. They lost three sons in childhood. The children who grew to mature years were Peter, Anna, Ida, Carrie, John and Andrew.

Our subject acquired a good education in his native land, and was reared in the usual manner of farmer lads. He left home at the age of fifteen years, and began to make his own way in the world. On attaining his majority, he bade goodbye to his native land, and in October, 1872, crossed the broad Atlantic, landing in New York, whence he came at once to Rockford. this county he worked by the month on a farm for Charles Shirley, and for five years was employed in that capacity for different farmers of the neighborhood. He was then employed for two years by Allen Needham. Becoming acquainted with Miss Mary, the daughter of his employer, their acquaintance ripened into love, and in February, 1878, they were united in marriage. Her parents, Allen and Eunice (Lombard) Needham, were natives of Massachusetts, whence they removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where they resided for about five years, when in 1856 they came to Rockford.

The young couple began their domestic life upon a rented farm in Boone County, where they resided for two years, after which Mr. Nelson operated a part of his father-in-law's farm. In 1881, he made his first purchase of land, becoming the owner of eighty acres in New Milford Township, a part of his present farm. Two years later, he bought an additional eighty acres, paying $8,000 for the quarter section. Since that time, he has devoted his entire energies to its cultivation and improvement. He is engaged in general farming, but sells nothing except rye, feeding his crops to his cattle, hogs and horses. He keeps on hand from fifteen to eighteen cows, and sells the milk to Rockford dealers. He is an industrious and enterprising man, sagacious and economical, and by his own efforts has worked his way upward to a position among the substantial farmers of the community.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have been born six children, three sons and three daughters: Frances, born December 18, 1878; Anna, January 6, 1881; Eunice M., March 11, 1881; Roy, April 19, 1886; Wilbur, April 20, 1888; and Dwight, September 11, 1891. The daughters are all in school, and are quite proficient in their studies, and Frances is studying music. Mr. Nelson is a friend to education, and to all that can benefit and upbuild the community. In politics, he is independent, holding himself free to support whoever he pleases, regardless of party affiliations, and at the last election was the only man in New Milford Township to vote for the Labor candidate. His life has been well and worthily spent in the faithful discharge of the duties devolving upon him, and he is highly esteemed for his sterling worth.

ALEB ALLEN STARR. This gentleman needs little introduction to the people of Winnebago County as he has been a resident of the county since April, 1855. He is universally popular in both social and business circles in Durand where he is the owner of a well-equipped drug store and is possessed of the energy and enterprise which seldom fail to win. He was born in Deerfield, Franklin County, Mass., March 3, 1822, and is a son of Oliver and Lavina (Allen) Starr, natives respectively of Middletown, Conn., and Deerfield, Mass.

In 1632, Dr. Comfort Starr came from England, and, settling in Boston, founded the Starr family in the United States. The grandfather of our subject, William Starr, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and in early life was a ship carpenter and later followed the occupation of a miller.

He removed from Middletown, Conn., to Greenfield, Mass., and after making his home there twelve years, became a resident of Deerfield, that State, where his decease occurred when in his seventy-fourth year.

The father of our subject was born in 1791 and was three years of age when his parents removed to the Bay State. He was reared to the occupation of a miller by his father and later learned the trade of a dyer and clothes-presser. In 1855, he came to Illinois, and in Laona Township, this county, settled on a farm, where his decease occurred when seventy-nine years of age; his good wife, who bore him four children, was seventy-seven years of age when called hence.

The brother and sisters of our subject were Oliver, Eliza A. and Eunice. Eliza A. makes her home in Chicago, where she is an artist and also a literary character. She became a Catholic when quite young and is recognized as a noted writer in works published by that body. Eunice A. became the wife of C. W. W. Wellington and makes her home in Chicago with her sister. Oliver died when fifteen years of age. Caleb A. Starr of this sketch was reared to farm pursuits and received his primary education in the district schools, which was supplemented by an attendance at an academy. For five years he was engaged as a sailor, at one time going to Calcutta.

On leaving the sea, Mr. Starr engaged in farming in the Bay State, and in 1848 was married to Susan G. Childs, the daughter of Samuel and Electa (Gates) Childs, and a native of Deerfield, Mass. In 1855, our subject came West and in partnership with his father purchased a farm of one hundred acres in Laona Township, Winnebago County, which he operated for twenty-two years. He then came to Durand, and engaging in the drug business, has since represented that trade in this State. William W. Starr, the eldest son of our subject, was born in Deerfield, Mass., January 9, 1851. He was four years of age when brought to the Prairie State by his parents, and passed his early life in Laona Township, this county, where he attended the common schools. In 1870, he went to Chicago and took drawing lessons under the instruction of his aunt, Eliza A. Starr. Two years later, he went to Boston and attended the Lowell Institute of Art, where he remained for about six years. He then accompanied his aunt on a tour through Europe, spending about one year in Rome, studying the old masters.

Returning to the United States, William W. Starr became a crayon artist in Grand Rapids, Mich., which business he followed for two years. In 1880, he went back to Chicago, where he also prosecuted that branch of his art, very soon, however, resuming modeling, which study he began in Boston and pursued in Rome. In 1889, he came to Durand, since which time he has given his whole attention to his work as a sculptor. He has made a bust of Henry M. Wilmarth, of Chicago; a bust of Dr. N. S. Davis, of that city, and reliefs of Dr. Braynard and wife, who also make their home in the Garden City.

Mary H. Starr, the second child of our subject, is Mrs. Charles M. Blaisdell, of Chicopee, Mass. She is also a portrait artist, and in pursuit of her study has traveled over the continent of Europe, spending two years in Paris. The second daughter, Ellen G., is one of the founders of the Hull House, a well-known benevolent institution in Chicago. She has also visited Europe. The youngest child of our subject, Albert C., is engaged in the cotton-broking business with his brother-in-law in Chicopec, Mass. He was a member of the first class that passed the examination under the new pharmacy law at Chicago.

Our subject in early life a Whig, now casts his vote in favor of the Republican candidates.

OHN SCHAD, who carries on agricultural pursuits in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, was born on the 6th of January, 1822, in Bavaria, Germany, and is a son of Frederick and Catherina (Koch) Schad. The family numbered eight children, five sons and three daughters. The father died March 6, 1841, at the age of forty-six years, and the mother was called to her final rest in December, 1850. Mr. Schad, our subject, was a conscript soldier in the Germau army for fourteen years. He entered the service at the age of twenty-two, and was succeeded by his son Max. His pay was ten cents per day while a private, but he was promoted to the rank of First Sergeant, and received thirty cents. A photograph of him taken at the age of thirty-three shows him to be a very young-looking man, His military coat bears all the badges of his promotion from the rank of Corporal to Sergeant. He never participated in war, as his service was during a period of peace.

In March, 1858, Mr. Schad was united in marriage with Paulina Schmidt, of Augsburg, daughter of Powell and Johanna (Klein) Schmidt. They were married on his leaving the army, and at once sailed for America from Hamburg on the 1st of May of that year. Their voyage was a tempestuous one. One storm lasted from Sunday night to the following Friday noon, and they were driven back three hundred miles. After forty-two days spent upon the briny deep, they arrived at New York City on the 14th of June, and a week later started for Rockford, where we find them on the 28th of the same month. They commenced keeping house on the Cherry Valley road, now Charles Street, of Rockfor', near Second Avenue, and during that year Mr. Schad bought a lot on Third Avenue. He built them a snug little home on that lot, which is now occupied by fine brick flats, and there they resided until March, 1863, when they removed to a farm of eighty acres in New Milford Township, Mr. Schad operating the same for five years upon shares. Having in the meantime accumulated some capital, he then purchased eighty acres of land in Ogle County, which he operated for eleven years, when he traded it for his present home on sections 4 and 5, Cherry Valley Township, a farm of one hundred and forty acres, highly improved and cultivated. He carries on general farming, and is quite successful. His wife is considered one of the finest butter-makers in the county. They do not have a large dairy, but keep on hand about six cows, and have made as high as twelve hundred pounds of butter per year.

Mr. and Mrs. Schad have seven children, but Paulina, a young lady of eighteen years, is now the only one at home. One son, William, resides in Rockford. They also lost one son, Frank, who died at the age of two years. The parents are members of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Schad is independent in polities, voting for the man whom he thinks best qualified for the office, regardless of party affiliations. He is an intelligent and well-informed man, a valued citizen, and has the high regard of those with whom he has been brought in contact.

OHN BROOKS, who is engaged in mixed farming in Spring Township, Boone County, was born in Somersetshire, England, April 5, 1821. His parents, James and Ann (Cole) Brooks, were also natives of that shire, where they died at the respective ages of eighty-five and seventy years. The parental family included eight children, two of whom are still living in England.

Our subject was married in his native country, January 22, 1857, to Eliza Price, who died in this county, June 3, 1876, after having become the mother of four children, two of whom are living: Robert P. is married, and the father of two children; the daughter, Minnie J., is married and also has two children. Mr. Brooks took for his second wife Mrs. M. Hathaway, their marriage being celebrated November 29, 1877; she died in 1887 in her sixtieth year.

The present wife of our subject was formerly Mrs. Lucena R. Sprague, a sister of Thomas Farley, in whose sketch the family history will be found. Mrs. Brooks' first marriage occurred in November, 1874, with Mr. Austin G. Sprague, who was born in Ohio. His decease occurred in 1863, while a member of Company D, Twenty-fourth lowa Infantry. By that marriage she became the mother of four children, namely: Charles A., Ella D., Lotta L. and James A.

After leaving England, our subject spent three years in Australia, and in the spring of 1857 came to America and almost directly to Spring Township, this county, where he purchased eighty acres of land. His estate now includes two hundred finely improved acres, upon which he has erected some of the finest farm buildings to be found in the county, not the least among which is his comfortable residence. His wife went West in an early day, and took up a quarter-section of land in Ford County, Kan. Her son and daughter also entered land, upon which they resided one year. The children born to our subject by his first marriage were educated in the Lawrence (Kan.) University.

Mr. Brooks has traveled extensively, and has visited almost every country on the globe. With his wife, he is a member of the Baptist Church, in which denomination he has been Deacon for a number of years. In politics, he is a believer in and supports the principles of the Republican party, but aside from easting his vote during elections, is not interested in politics. While residing in Australia, he worked in the gold mines, and speculated in fruits. He has also visited South America and made a fourteen thousand mile trip on a slow sailing-vessel.

Mr. Brooks is what may be termed a self-made man, as his present handsome property is the result of his early years of persistent industry and wise investments. Aside from earrying on his farm, he owns stock in a creamery. His present beautiful residence was erected in 1880, and is finished in a manner which indicates its inmates to be people of means and culture.

AMUEL JONES, deceased, is a native of St Lawrence County, N. Y., his birth occurring April 13, 1821. He was a son of John and Nancy Jones, the former of whom came from England to the United States when our subject was an infant of two years. Settling at once in Canada, he resided there until emigrating to the States about 1847, at which time he made his home in Rockford, where his death oc-

The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Nancy Eldridge, was a native of Rhode Island, and also departed this life while residing in Rockford. Samuel remained at home until twenty-seven years of age, when, being a fine workman, he was engaged in building railroad bridges. In 1841, eurred January 11, 1892.

he entered a tract of land containing one hundred and sixty acres, which he brought to a good state of cultivation and made a permanent location upon in 1853.

The lady to whom our subject was married, June 16, 1853, was Miss Adelia Campbell, and her birth occurred March 31, 1827. She was the daughter of David and Sarah Campbell, natives of Franklin County, Vt., who, in 1836, took the trip to Indiana, accompanied by his wife and eleven children. There Mr. Campbell lived until 1837, when he became a resident of Guilford Township, this county. He had purchased a squatter's claim of three hundred acres, upon which he erected a log cabin, and there the family resided for the following six or seven years, and there the mother died. The father of Mrs. Jones followed the occupation of a farmer, and was thus enabled to reap a handsome income. He died previous to his wife.

Of the ten children born to our subject and his wife, seven are living: Viola E., Mrs. R. H. Hench, has four children; Almina J., who is married to William Johns. has two children; George S., who is married, is the father of four children; Frank C. is the next in order of birth; Della R., Mrs. Fred D. Teachout, has two children; William A. and Mary, are at home. Mrs. Jones still resides on the old homestead which is operated by her son, William A. Two of her brothers fought in the Union Army, one of whom, John, died at St. Louis. Iliram, now deceased. Our subject was a firm adherent of the Republican party, in polities, and in church matters was a devoted member of the Congregational Church.

AMES HINKLEY, deceased, was for many years a prominent resident of Rockford. He was born in Posey County, Ind., November 19, 1829, and was descended from an old and prominent New England family, to which ex-Gov. Hinkley of Massachusetts belonged. Otis Hinkley, the father of our subject, was a native of Cape Cod. Mass., and when a young man emigrated Westward, settling in Indiana, where he married Eliza Henderson, a sonthern lady. She died in Posey County in middle life, and Mr. Hink-ley afterward married an English lady, who survived him some years. She was an intelligent woman of marked character, and was held in high esteem by all. The father of our subject died in Posey County, Ind., when well advanced in life. In polities, he was a Democrat and a strong opponent of slavery.

James Hinkley, of this sketch, spent his boyhood days upon his father's farm, and before he had attained his majority, fitted out an ox-team and crossed the plains to California in 1849. After six months of travel, he arrived at his destination and spent three years in the mines, returning by way of the Isthmus with considerable experience but not much gold. He then gave his attention to agricultural pursuits and on the 9th of November, 1856, was married in Posey County, near his old home, to Miss Harriet Andrews, who was born in that county, October 8, 1832, and is a daughter of Anson and Elizabeth (Butler) Andrews, natives of Connecticut and Massachusetts, respectively. Their wedding, however, was celebrated in Posey County, whither they had removed when young. Mr. Andrews there purchased Government land from which he developed a farm, making it his home throughout the remainder of his life. He passed away at the age of seventy years. In politics, he was a Whig and later an Abolitionist. His wife afterward came to Rockford and died at the home of her son, John Andrews, when past the age of three-score years.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hinkley were born six children, but two are now deceased: George, who died in childhood, and Ella, a graduate of the High School of this city, who died at the age of eighteen. Anson, who wedded Allie W. Meech, of Rockford, is now engaged in fruit growing in Washington County, Ill.; Arthur, who married Harriet Hinkley, so operating the canning factory of this city; H. Otis is a successful florist of Rockford, and Ralph W. is a stenographer and type-writer of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinkley began their domestic life upon a farm in Indiana, where they resided for two years, when they came to Illinois. After two years spent in Washington County, near Dubois, they came to Rockford and purchased property in the city limits. Mr. Hinkley engaged in fruit growing until he became connected with the firm of Upson & Skinner in the canning business. He was afterward in partnership with his brother-in-law, John Andrews, and subsequently became sole proprietor. He put up goods of a superior order and in this business met with splendid success. Mr. Hinkley was a straightforward, upright man and was recognized as one of the valued citizens of Rockford. His integrity was above question and he had the respect of all who knew him. He died while on a visit to his son Anson, in Washington County, January 8, 1891, at the age of sixty-two years. His wife is still living at the old home. She is a most estimable lady and has many friends throughout this community.

AMES PORTER. This gentleman, though born across the ocean, was one of the early pioneers of Winnebago County, having been a resident here for half a century. He has given the best efforts of his life to agricultural pursuits, and as a reward for his industry has a splendid farm of two hundred and forty acres on section 6. He has won his way to his present honorable station in life without the aid of wealth or influential friends, and is consequently a self-made man.

Our subject was born in Banffshire, Scotland, April 24, 1817, and is a son of James and Jane (Gregor) Porter, natives also of Scotland. The father departed this life in his native land in 1844, soon after which our subject emigrated to America with his mother; she died at his home two years later. Our subject was one of two children born to his parents; his sister Isabella became the wife of Alexander Milne, and makes her home in Burritt Township, this county.

James Porter was reared and educated in his native shire. Having heard glowing accounts of the New World, he decided to emigrate hither, and set sail April 15, 1843, on the steamer "Anna Mary." After a tedious voyage of five weeks and one day, he landed on American shores, and came directly to Illinois via the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario to Rochester, thence by way of the Lakes to Chicago, where he procured a team which conveyed him to Winnebago County. At that time this section was sparsely settled, the greater portion of the land being still owned by the Government. Deer and other wild game were plentiful, and although the markets were far distant, the early settlers did not suffer for fresh meats.

Our subject made a claim to a tract of Government land, which is now included in his present farm. There he erected a log house and commenced to work at clearing and improving his farm. There being no railroads in this vicinity for years, he hauled the products of his farm to market to Chicago with a team. The old log cabin has since given way to a beautiful stone residence, and also a stone barn, which add greatly to the attractiveness of the estate. His farm is beautifully located just five miles from Rockford, and bears all the improvements which stamp it to be in possession of a man of progressive ideas, and means to earry them out.

Barbara Kirton became the wife of our subject in 1843. She was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and by her union with our subject has become the mother of two children, James and Margaret. In their church relations, Mr. and Mrs. Porter are active and influential members of the First Presbyterian Church. Our subject has been very successful in his farm work, and secured a competence as a product of personal industry and good judgment put forth in a field wisely selected.

OBERT GRENLUND, a practical and enterprising farmer and stock-raiser, who owns and operates sixty acres of well-imported land on section 27, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, was born in Wester Gothland, Sweden, February 26, 1849. His parents never left their native land. His father, Peter Anderson, there followed the occupation of farming until his death, which occurred at the age of sixty-nine years, having survived his wife some time. She bore the maiden name of Sarah Eysrill and died at the age of fifty-two. With the Lutheran Church that worthy couple held membership. In the family were two daughters and two sons: Sophia, wife of John Lind, a farmer of Pecatonica; Carrie, wife of E. Medine, a resident of Moline, Ill.; and John, now deceased.

In the usual manner of farmer lads our subject spent his childhood days under the parental roof, and when a young man of nineteen years he bade good-bye to home and friends and crossed the Atlantic to America. This was in the fall of 1868, He sailed from Gottenburg to Hull, England, thence to Liverpool, and crossing the briny deep landed at New York City. He came on at once to Illinois, locating in Winnebago County, joining his brother John, who had previously located here. For some time, he made his home in Rockford and did work as a farm hand through the county. He afterward worked in the furniture factories of that city and after sixteen years, in 1886, purchased his present farm with the capital he had saved from his earnings. In connection with the cultivation of his own land, he also operates other lands adjoining his farm. His land is under a high state of cultivation and well improved with good buildings such as are necessary for the eare of his stock and grain, and which are found upon a model farm.

Mrs. Grenlund bore the maiden name of Augusta Bodine. She was a native of Sweden and was reared in the same locality as her husband, With her parents and other members of the family she came to the United States in 1869, locating upon a farm. E. P. and Katie Bodine, her father and mother, spent their last days in Rockford, the former dying at the age of fifty-five years and the mother in her seventieth year. They were upright, honorable people, highly respected by all and were members of the Lutheran Church. The wife of our subject is the only member of the family now living. Her only sister, Anna, became the wife of John Grenlund and died in 1886. The union of our subject and his wife has been blessed with four children: August E., who aids his father in the work of the farm; Godfred L., who is clerking for the Union Drug Company of Rockford; and Emily S. and Joseph, who are at home. The parents are both members of the First Lutheran Church of Rockford, and in politics, Mr. Grenlund is a Republican. He has served as School Director for his district, and is a man well and favorably known in the community where he resides.

ILLIAM SLATER, who is engaged in general merchandising in Cherry Valley, was born in England, in 1824, and is a son of John and Mary (Nixon) Slater. His father was a manufacturer of brick. Our subject went to sea at the age of fourteen years on a merchantman and sailed from London to various ports in Russia, Australia and the East and West Indies. He made three voyages to the United States, two to Quebee and one to St. John, New Brunswick. After fourteen years spent upon the high seas, he sailed from his native land at the age of twenty-seven to New York, accompanied by his wife and one son.

Mr. Slater was married in 1850 to Sarah Proetor, daughter of Henry Proctor. They had an eventful voyage and arrived in Rockford on May 15, 1853. They had no definite destination, but as the railroad terminated there they stopped at that place and began housekeeping at once. In that city, they resided for five years, during which time Mr. Slater was in the employ of the old Galena Railroad as watchman. In the spring of 1858, he came to Cherry Valley in the employ of the railroad company as bridge tender and built a small house on railroad lands. After ten years he opened a saloon, which he earried on for four years, when he quit that business and converted the buildings which he had creeted in 1870 into a grocery store. A partnership was then formed with his eldest son and for twenty-two years this has been the leading grocery house of Cherry Valley. In 1880, they added a stock of dry-goods, boots and shoes, hats, caps and clothing. Their stock is valued at $10,000 and their annual sales amount to at least $30,000.

In 1860, Mr. Slater was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who died in the spring of that year, leaving two children: William J., who married Phene Hale, daughter of Squire Hale, one of the pioneers of Cherry Valley, who died many years ago. He is his father's partner in business and is an enterprising man. The other son, Henry P., has for the past five years resided in the West and is now in Salt Lake City, Utah. One daughter died in infancy in Rockford.

Mr. Slater was again married, his second union being with Emma Proctor, his first wife's sister. They had seven children but have lost one son, Arthur, who died at the age of seven years. The living are Fred, Charles; Sarah, wife of Dan Packard, of Cherry Valley; Amelia, Jessie, wife of Mart Fuller, of Englewood, Hl.; and Emma completes the family. The children have all received good educational advantages and the family is one widely and favorably known in this community, its members being held in high esteem. In politics, Mr. Slater has been a life-long Republican and his eldest son has for nine years been the Town Treasurer of the school fund.

OSEPH S. DAVIS was numbered among the honored pioneers of the county. He was engaged in farming on section 11. Guilford Township, where he owned and operated eighty acres of valuable land. It was once a timbe ed tract, but through the industry of the owner it has been transformed into a rich and fertile farm, now under a high state of cultivation, supplied with a good set of farm buildings and highly improved.

Our subject was born near London, Canada, and was the sixth child of Thaddeus and Catherine (Kirkland) Davis, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. Joseph was a lad of but twelve years when he came with his parents to Illinois. He remembers well many incidents of the long and todious journey made across the country with teams. The family arrived in Rockford, July 6, 1839. At that time, the greater part of the land was still owned by the Government, deer and other wild game were very plentiful, and the work of civilization seemed searcely begun. With the family, Mr. Davis shared in the experiences and hardships of frontier life. He resided with his father, assisting him on the farm until he attained his majority, when he began earning his own livelihood, working by the month as a farm land. For four years, he devoted his energies to that occupation and then began learning the carpenter's trade, which he followed for three years. Subsequently, he purchased eighty acres of land on section 11, Guilford Township, and began farming on his own account. In 1863, he purchased the farm on which he now resides and, as before stated, has made it very valuable. He is a successful agriculturist, a man of good business ability and his success is the just reward of his own efforts.

Mr. Davis was married, June 1, 1870, to Mrs. Almira Manning, daughter of Heman Campbell, a native of Vermont, and a son of David Campbell, who emigrated from the Green Mountain State to Illinois in 1836, and became one of the first settlers of Guilford Township. He secured a tract of Government land on section 24, and began the development of the farm, on which he made his home until his death. He married Sarah Jones and she also spent her last days on the old homestead. The father of Mrs. Campbell was reared in Vermont and there made his home until 1836, when he removed to Indiana. A year later, he came to Illinois and purchased a claim in Durand Township, Winnebago County, the improvements on which consisted of a log cabin. That house was the birthplace of Mrs. Davis. After living there for a short time, Mr. Campbell traded that farm for a tract of timber and prairie land in the same township, from which he developed a fine farm. He also erected good buildings, made many other improvements, and there resided until his death on the 24th of August, 1884.

Almira Campbell first became the wife of Charles Manning, who was born near London, in the Province of Ontario, Canada, and was a son of Joseph J. and Catherine (Swart) Manning. He came to Winnebago County with his parents, and for a time was engaged in the mercantile business at Cherry Valley. At the time of his death in 1864, he was clerking in Belvidere. Mr. and Mrs. Manning had two children: Lee, who died at the age of fourteen years; and Mary, who is now the wife of Alfred Purdy, and the mother of two children: Belle and Bertha. Mr. and Mrs. Davis have one son living, Elmo. Their first-born, Earl, died at the age of eighteen years.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Davis was a Republican and had served as Township Collector and School Director. He had always taken an interest in educational affairs, and was a public-spirited and progressive citizen, who gave his support to every thing pertaining to the welfare of the community. He had the confidence and high regard of all with whom he had come in contact and was one of the prominent early settlers of the county. Mr. Davis departed this life May 20, 1892.

SEORGE STEVENS, one of the well-to-do __ farmers, and a progressive citizen of New Milford Township, Winnebago County, residing on section 31, is a native of Boston, Mass. He was born on the 18th of March, 1856, and at the age of four years was brought by his parents to Illinois, the family settling near his present home. In the usual manner of farmer lads, he was reared to manhood, and has followed agricultural pursuits almost continuously since. At the age of twenty-two years, he was united in marriage to Miss Abbie Rothwell, daughter of William and Nancy (Bartleman) Rothwell, who was born June 31, 1859, and was reared in this neighborhood, Her father was born in Kishwaukee, February 19, 1838, and was one of the first native settlers of this locality; his parents came from Massachusetts to Winnebago County about a year prior to his birth.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens began their domestic life upon the farm of sixty acres which is yet their home, although it now comprises one hundred and ninety-four acres of valuable land. Many excellent improvements have also been there made and a comfortable residence, good barns and other outbuildings have been erected, including a milk house, ice-house, etc. While these add to the value and convenience of the place, they also stand as monuments to the thrift and enterprise of the owner. In connection with general farming, Mr. Stevens is engaged in dairying, keeping from twelve to tifteen cows for this purpose, sending the cream to a neighboring shipper. He possesses considerable mechanical genius, and owns a portable engine, which he runs himself on his own farm in shelling corn, grinding feed, sawing wood, etc., and sometimes furnishes power for his neighbors in manufacturing.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Stevens has been blessed with three children, and the family circle yet remains unbroken. Harry was born November 18, 1881; Clara B., February 21, 1885; and Alma, January 21, 1891. The parents are both members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. In polities, Mr. Stevens was a Republican until his views on the temperance question led him to join the ranks of the Prohibition party. He has ever been a stanch temperance worker, and is recognized as one of the best temperance singers in this locality, his inspiring songs along that line doing much for the work. Viewed from a financial standpoint, also, his life has been a decided success. He started with very limited means, but by perseverance, industry and economy, and the assistance of his estimable wife, whom he recognizes as an efficient helpmate, he has obtained a handsome competence, his farm alone being worth at least $15,000. In addition to this, for the past two years, he has dealt successfully in farm machinery. The farm on which he resides is owned by himself and his father.

SAAC M. McCOY, a retired farmer living in Belvidere, was born in Washington County, Ind., on the 23d of July, 1816. His father, James McCoy, was a native of Pennsylvania, and a son of William McCoy. When a young man he went to Kentucky, where he met and married Nancy Lanc, a native of that State. Subsequently, he removed to the Territory of Indana, becoming a pioneer of Washington County, where he secured a tract of Government land, and erected the log cabin in which our subject was born. Clearing and improving a farm, he made it his home until 1832. About 1816, he was ordamed a minister of the Baptist Church, and preached in different parts of Washington and Jackson Counties. In October, 1832, he rented his farm, and removed to Salem, where he engaged in teaching during the week, and on Sunday attended to his ministerial labors. His death occurred in July, 1833, of cholera, and his wife and one son died the same month. In the family were twelve children.

Isaac M. McCoy was a young man of seventeen years when his parents died. He resided with his brother in Marion County until December, 1835, when he started on foot for Illinois, walking to De Kalb County. This part of the State was then in almost its primitive condition, the work of upbuilding and progress having hardly been begun. He found a family living in a log cabin near the dividing line between De Kalb and Boone Counties, with whom he made arrangements to board at $2.50 per week. He made a claim adjoining that upon which his landlord was living, and in the winter engaged in splitting rails at $1 per hundred. The next summer he built a log house upon his land, and began the improvement of a farm.

On the 28th of November, 1838, Mr. McCoy was united in marriage with Cynthia Ann Penwell, a native of Indiana, and a daughter of Reuben Penwell, with whom she eame to Illinois in June, 1836. The young couple began their domestic life in the cabin home before mentioned, living in true frontier style. Their home was blessed with a family of seven children: James Vincent, Sarah, Esther, Mary, Amanda, Carrie E. and Fred. All are still living, with the exception of the eldest, who was born in 1840, and died in 1886.

Mr. McCoy continued his farming operations, and ere many years had passed, had transformed the wild land into rich and fertile fields. When the land came into market in 1839, he entered eighty acres, and by purchase afterwards extended the boundaries of his farm until it now comprises two hundred and thirty-three acres, the greater part of which is under a high state of cultivation, and well improved. He made it his home until 1863, when he came to Belvidere, where he resided for some time. He afterwards again spent a period of seven years upon his farm, but is now living retired in Belvidere. In 1888, he was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who died in the month of June. They were both members of the Christian Church in De Kalb County, but after coming to Belvidere, joined the Baptist Church. Mr. McCoy is an honored pioneer of this region, and of its growth he has been an eye-witness from almost the beginning. His life has been well and worthily spent, and he has thereby won the high regard of his many friends and acquaintances.

OHN FLEMING. This gentleman, though born across the ocean, was one of the early pioneers of Winnelago County, having been a resident here for thirty-five years He makes his home at the present time on one hundred and sixty acres, located on section 3, Owen Township, which he cultivates in a most thorough and profitable manner. Mr. Fleming was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, in January, 1828, and is a son of Neil and Marian Fleming, both natives of that country, and who, in coming to America in 1855, located in Canada. After a residence there of two years, they came to Boone County, Hl., and lived for a short time in Caledonia, whence they removed to Roscoe, and later to Owen Township, this county, where they died.

The parental family of our subject included nine children: James, Alexander, Flora, John, Donald, Mary, Marion, Neil and Robert. James, the eldest son, was married in Scotland, and, on coming to America with his family, died in Argyle, this county; Alexander, who made his home with our subject and a sister, died a single man; Flora married Alexander McDonigal, and departed this life in Owen Township; Donald passed away in Rockford, where he resided for many years; Mary married James Ryburn, and at the present time resides in Rockwell, Cerro Gordo County, Iowa; Marion makes her home with our subject; Neil died when a young man, in Winnebago County; and Robert lives in Pleasant Valley Township, Cerro Gordo County, Iowa.

John Fleming of this sketch was given a good education in his native shire, and accompanied his parents, in 1855, on their removal to America, setting sail from Glasgow in June, on the sailing-vessel "Chieftain." The party landed at Quebec, and our subject immediately found employment in a harvest field, twenty miles north of Toronto. He was later employed by the month on a farm, and in 1857 came to Illinois, the following year locating in Winnebago County. In 1864, our subject purchased the farm which he now owns and occupies, on which he has placed good and substantial improvements. He has never married, and his sister Marion keeps house for him. They are both members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, and are held in high esteem by all who know them.

HARLES C. COONS. Nothing gives the patriotic biographer more pleasure than to tell the story of the life of one of our "brave boys in blue," who sacrificed all that he held dearest upon the altar of our country. The gentleman whose name appears at the head of this paragraph is one whose record as a soldier is of interest to every one who opens the covers of this Record.

Mr. Coons is one of the prominent business men of Rockton, where he is engaged in a prosperous lumber and coal business in company with the Keeler Lumber Company. He is a native of this State, having been born June 9, 1843, in Rockford. He is a son of Thomas M. Coons, who was born in 1814, near Culpeper, Va., where he was reared to agricultural pursuits and resided until his removal to Indiana. After a stay of a short time in the Hoosier State, the elder Mr. Coons came to Illinois at a very early day.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Rebecca Reed. She was born in Winnebago, this county, and departed this life leaving two sons and one daughter, the brother and sister of our subject: William M., who died at Rockton in 1876, and Clara C., now Mrs. A. R. Hart, of Clinton, Iowa. Soon after the death of his mother, our subject was taken to the home of an aunt in Will County, and when eight or nine years of age was brought to Rockton by his father, where he has since resided. In early life, he worked on a farm, and in 1861, when nineteen years of age, enlisted in Company G, Forty-fourth Illinois Infantry, under Col. Knoblesdorf and Capt. L. M. Sabin.

Our subject enlisted as a private for three years and was sent with his regiment to St. Louis, Mo., in which State his first engagement took place at Springfield. The next battle of his regiment was fought at Pea Ridge, Ark.; then followed the battle of Corinth, Miss., the next conflict of note being at Perryville, Ky., October 8, 1862, in which the regiment lost heavily. At Murfreesboro, Tenn., Mr. Coons was taken prisoner with two hundred others and confined for three months in Libby Prison. His confinement in prison was the hardest experience of the war, and when he was exchanged found he had lost eighty-eight pounds of flesh during that three months. He joined his regiment in time to participate in the battle of Chickamauga, in which conflict he was seriously wounded in the left thigh and hip joint. He was taken to Cumberland Hospital, at Nashville, Tenn., where he remained one year less a few days, During that time, he was a great sufferer from rheumatism, and the following fall, his term of service having expired, he was discharged, but in February, 1865, re-enlisted in Company A, One Hundred and Fifty-third Illinois Infantry, and in September of that year was discharged, at the close of the war.

Returning home to Rockton, Mr. Coons operated his father's farm for the following two years, and June 13, 1867, was married to Miss Rebecca Hunt, who was born in England in 1845. She was the daughter of Robert and Jane Hunt, who, on emigrating to this country, located in Connecticut, and later came to Illinois, when Mrs. Coons was ten years of age. Our subject and his wife have ever since their marriage made their home on this place, with the exception of two years spent on a farm in Minnesota. They have become the parents of the following children: Winnie, who died when two years of age, in 1872; Mabel, Cecil and Orville. Cecil, who is now residing in Clinton, Iowa, was graduated from the Rockton High School in 1890, with the honors of his class. This bright and promising young man has displayed a rare taste for drawing and portrait painting, having produced some fine pictures without any instruction whatever.

In their religious faith, Mr. and Mrs. Coons are members of the Methodist Church. Our subject, who is a Republican in politics, has been for the past twelve years a comrade of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., of Rockford.

AMUEL MORSE. That a lifetime spent in pursuing one occupation will in the end result in substantial success, where energy and perseverance are applied, cannot for a moment be doubted, and such is found to be the case with Mr. Morse, who from boyhood has given attention to agricultural pursuits. This adherence to his chosen calling, coupled with strict integrity, honesty of purpose, and liberality in directions, have placed Mr. Morse among the honored and much esteemed citizens of the county.

A native of New York, he was born in Ridgeway Township, Orleans County, on the 21st of November, 1827, to the marriage of John and Hannah (Davis) Morse. The father was born in the old Bay State, but seeing the advantages to be derived from locating on the fertile prairies of Illinois, he came to this State in 1840, and seleeted a suitable location, to which he brought his family the following year. He brought his family overland, but shipped his household effects by the Lakes. He was about a month in making the journey, and after reaching this State he erected a small frame house, in which he and his thrifty and industrious wife resided for twenty years. They then erected a fine brick residence, and in this received their final summons, the father dving at the age of seventy-five, and the mother when eighty-six years of age. The latter was a native of New Hampshire, and a most estimable and worthy lady.

Of the nine children born to the above-mentioned couple, three are now living. The Morse family have followed the occupation of agriculturists for the most part, but some have been prominent mechanics. This family is of English origin. Samuel Morse received the rudiments of an education in his native county, and received the finishing touches after coming to Boone County, Ill. At an early age, he manifested a desire to follow agricultural pursuits for a livelihood, and as he had every chance to perfect himself in this pursuit on his father's farm, he naturally has continued to follow this until the present time. In those pioneer days, he was obliged to work hard, and all his father's marketing was done in Chicago.

Our subject has remained under the parental roof all his life, and after the death of his parents he bought out the other heirs, and now owns one hundred and twenty acres in this township. He also owns one hundred and forty acres in Bonus Township, this county, and is one of the foremost tillers of the soil in the community. He was married in 1876 to Miss Sarah F. Cleveland, who was born in Boone County, Ill., and whose parents, Henry W. and Sarah F. Cleveland, were early settlers in this county. Her mother is still living in this county, but the father died several years ago. Although his father was a Democrat in his political views, our subject's first Presidential vote was east for Abraham Lincoln. Mr. and Mrs. Morse are classed among the representative citizens of the county.

RANK WAGNER has for over thirty years been a resident of this county, and since coming here attained an honorable position among its industrious and progressive citizens. He is a well-known resident of Rockford, having acted as Superintendent of the West Side Cemetery for a period of twenty-five years. Our subject is of German birth and breeding, born in March, 1830. in Prussia. He is a son of Adam and Mary Wagner, natives also of the Fatherland, where the elder Mr. Wagner spent his entire life. The mother, however, came to America with four of her children, and, locating in Wisconsin, resided there until her death.

The brother and sisters of our subject were Charles, Amanda and Christina. He was reared and educated in his native land, and there served an apprenticeship as landscape gardener. Desiring to come to America, Mr. Wagner set sail from Berlin in 1856, and after a voyage of eight weeks landed in Vermont. Coming directly to Illinois, he resided for two years in Aurora, since which time he has been identified with the interests of Rockford.

Anna Barbara Henry, who was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, was married to our subject in August, 1863. She was the daughter of Michael and Anna Maria (Schramm) Henry, also natives of that place, where their decease occurred. Mrs. Wagner came to America in 1860, landing in Plymouth, Mass., where she joined the family of her uncle, John Henry, with whom she made her home until September, 1862, which was the date of her coming to Rockford. Her union with our subject has resulted in the birth of three children: Carrie Anna, born in 1864, died in November, 1888; Frank W., born in 1865, departed this life in January, 1888; Lizzie, the only member of the family living, with her parents is a member of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church.

ON, JOHN BUDLONG. The credit for a large share of enterprise which helps to make Rockford one of the most prosperous of cities in the United States, belongs to the gentleman whose name is at the head of this sketch, and who is President of the Royal Sewing Machine Company. He is also a stockholder of the Standard Furniture Company, the Bit and Tool Company, the Excelsior Furniture Company, and the Rockford Manufacturing Company, in which latter organization he is Director. Indeed, almost every advantage that the town enjoys, from a business point of view, is owing in a greater or less degree to his push and energy. He is very popular with the people, and has made a financial success of his various undertakings.

The original of this sketch was born in Rodman, Jefferson County, N. Y., February 18, 1833. He is the son of Clark Budlong, who was a native of Herkimer County, that State, his birth occurring in 1804. His father, Green Budlong, was a native of Rhode Island, and of English ancestry. The latter-named gentleman removed to the Empire State as early as 1800, and was one of the pioneers of Herkimer County, purchasing a tract of timber in Litchfield, a portion of which he brought to a good degree of cultivation. At that early period there were neither railroads nor canal near his home, and Albany was the nearest market and depot for supplies. On removing from Herkimer County, which he did in 1805, he became a resident of Jefferson County, making his home in the town of Rodman, where he cultivated a tract of land which had been given him by his father, and where he made his home until his decease. Clark Budlong, the father of our subject, was reared in Jefferson County on the home farm, and when starting out in life for himself, purchased a tract of timber land near the old home. In addition to farming, he operated a sawmill for a time, and at the time of his death, which occurred in 1841, owned and operated a hotel at Rodman.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Mary Lucas; she was born in Middletown, Conn., in 1806, and was a daughter of John W. and Esther (Stowe) Lucas, natives of the Nutmeg State. The mother now resides with our subject, having attained to her eighty-sixth year. John Budlong was the only child of his parents, and was given an excellent education in the Rodman Seminary, which was later supplemented by attendance at the Jefferson County Institute at Watertown. and the Adams Institute, also in that county, and the Falley Seminary at Fulton, Oswego County. He commenced teaching school when in his eighteenth year, and in 1853 went to North Carolina, where he was engaged as a pedagogue for a twelvemonth at Eadington. Thence he went to Gaytown, where he taught for one year, thence to Texas, where he was similarly engaged for the same length of time in Washington County. Coming North, he engaged as a teacher in Missouri, and in the fall of 1860 returned to his native town, teaching school and studying law. In 1860, he was elected Justice of the Peace, and in April, 1861, on the outbreak of the Civil War, enlisted in Company G, Thirty-fifth New York Infantry, being commissioned Second Lieutenant on the organization of the company. One year later, he was promoted to be First Lieutenant, and the Captain of his company, J. II. Haddock, being on detached service, Lieut. Budlong was in command of the company, with which he continued until the expiration of his term of service.

On receiving his honorable discharge, our subject returned home, soon after which time he purchased the plant of the Northern New York Journal, at Watertown, which he edited until 1867, at which time he disposed of his office, and, coming to Winnebago County, purchased a farm of one hundred and eighty acres adjoining the city of Rockford.

The city grew rapidly, and in 1889 Mr. Budlong platted a portion of his farm, and at the present time there are upwards of forty dwellings and four manufacturing institutions on his farm. Miss Minnie G. Smith, who was born in Lorain, Jefferson County, N. Y., August 7, 1840, became the wife of our subject, June 14, 1865. Mrs. Budlong is the daughter of Philander Smith, whose native place was Worth, Jefferson County, N. Y., and his father, Henry Smith, hailed from Nelson, N. H., moving from that State to New York in 1808, where he was one of the early settlers in the town of Worth. He continued to reside there a short time, when, in order to give his children better advantages for an education, he moved to Ellisburg, and when his object was accomplished, purchased a farm near Camillus, where they resided for a number of years. Mr. Smith departed this life at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Kingsly, at Arlington Heights, this State. The maiden name of his wife, the grandmother of Mrs. Budlong, was Fannie Wilson. She also died at the home of Mrs. Kingsly. The father of Mrs. Budlong followed the occupation of a farmer during the earlier part of his life, his decease occurring at Oak Park, Ill. The maiden name of her mother was Adeline Meacham; she was born in Pulaski, Oswego County, N. Y., April 20, 1820 and is the lineal descendant of Miles Standish, who was born in England in 1584, and married Barbara Standish in 1623, and came to America in the "Mayflower" in 1620. He died in 1656, leaving three sons: Alexander, Miles, Joseah, and a daughter, who died young. Joseah was the lineal ancestor of Mrs. Budlong. His son, Samuel, was the next in line; he married Deborah, daughter of George Gates, and resided in Preston, Conn. The next in line was their son Thomas, who was born in 1724, and married in 1750 to Mrs. Sarah Williams, a widow. Their daughter, Lucy Standish, was the next in line. She married Isaac Meacham, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Budlong; he was a native of New England, where he cultivated a farm, and passed from this life in Pulaski, Vt. The grandfather of Mrs. Budlong, Simon Meacham, was born in Paulet, Vt., whence he removed to Pulaski, Oswego County, N. Y., where he was among the pioneers of that locality, improving a farm, upon which he spent his last years. His wife was Sarah Harmon, who was born in Paulet, Vt., and died in Pulaski, N. Y. The mother of Mrs. Budlong is at the present time residing at Oak Park, Chicago.

Philander Smith left money to be used as his wife thought best for missionary purposes. She has established the following schools and hospitals: Philander Smith College for colored people, at Little Rock, Ark.; Philander Smith Hospital; a hospital at Nankin, China, where she has also established a home and school for girls, and a boys' boarding school in India; also the Philander Smith Biblical Institute, for the purpose of training native ministers. She is now building a chapel and school for girls at Muttra, India, besides doing a great deal in this country.

To our subject and his estimable wife have been granted five children, namely: Standish S., Winthrope M., Mary A., John W. and one deceased. Winthrope and Mary are students at Oberlin, Ohio, while John is prosecuting his studies in the Rockford High School. Mr. and Mrs. Budlong in church affairs are connected with the Cenntenial Methodist Episcopal denomination. Our subject is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and is thoroughly representative of the progressive element of this section. He has given the best efforts of his life to commercial pursuits, and as a reward for his industry has a high standing in financial circles. His career has been one eminently worthy and useful in the community in which he resides, and his neighbors and friends unitedly bear testimony to his sterling worth, integrity and valuable services. Our subject has been elected Supervisor of his township, and has also been a member of the Legislature.

ONAS HAKANSON, retired, was originally from Sweden, his birth occurring in Wester Gothland Province, on the 3d of April, 1819. He came of a good class of Swedish people, who were tillers of the soil for generations, and his father, Hocken Johnson, also followed that occupation. The latter came to the United States one month after our subject, and two years later died in St. Charles, Ill., when sixty-two years of age. His wife, whose maiden name was Martha Brunard, came to the States two years later than her husband and survived him about twentyfour years, dying at the home of her son, our subject, in Owen Township, when eighty-four years of age. Both were life-long members of the Swedish Lutheran church.

Jonas Hakanson was reared in his native country and early in youth became familiar with the arduous duties of the farm. He was there married to Miss Mary Christianson, who came of similar ancestors, and the young couple immediately took passage for the United States. They were seven weeks and one day on the water, and after landing came to the State of Illinois. This was in the year 1852. After coming to this State, they located for a time in St. Charles and there Mrs. Hakanson died of cholera two weeks later. Mr. Hakanson's second marriage occurred in St. Charles, Ill., in 1853, to Miss Mary Johnson, also a native of Wester Gothland, born October 31, 1823. Her parents died in Sweden, and in 1852 Mrs. Hakanson came alone to the States and settled in St. Charles, Ill. Two years later, she was married to Mr. Hakanson and has borne him five children: David, single, died at the age of about thirty-two; Matilda married August Lumberg, a farmer of Owen Township; Louisa, wife of Gust Wanstrom, a carpenter and mechanic of Rockford; Albertena married William Haff, a machinist in the Nelson Knitting Factory, and Helna married Henry Wanstrom, a carpenter of Rockford.

After his second marriage, or in 1855, Mr. Hakanson came to Winnebago County and settled on a small piece of land in Owen Township. He added to this from time to time until he finally became the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of well-improved land. This he sold to his son and in 1879 moved to Rockford, of which city he has been a resident since. He built a comfortable residence at No. 406 South Fourth Street and now enjoys the comforts secured by previous years of toil

LFRED ANDERSON. In giving a history of the manufacturing and business interests of the city of Rockford, it is necessary that due mention should be made of the Union Furniture Company, which adds so much to the development and progress of the city. A prominent cabinet-maker and stockholder in this enterprise is Mr. Alfred Anderson who was one of its promoters, and who is a gentleman of thorough training. He is a stockholder in the Chair and Furniture Factory, the Royal Sewing Machine Company, and many other enterprises.

Like many of the representative citizens of Rockford, Mr. Anderson is a Swede, his birth having occurred in Wester Gothland Province, on the 19th of April, 1849, and, like all his countrymen, he is thrifty and industrious. He took up the carpenter trade in youth, under his father, John Wegren, who passed his entire life in Sweden, dying when sixty-five years of age. The latter followed the occupation of a blacksmith, earpenter and farmer. His wife is still living, is in her seventy-fourth year, and now resides in Sweden. She is a member of the Lutheran Church and her husband also held membership in the same. Of the two sons born to this union our subject is the younger. His brother, John R. Anderson, is now with his mother in Sweden and is a tiller of the soil. John married Miss Clara Anderson.

As our subject grew to manhood, he received a good practical education in the common schools of his native country, and in 1872 or 1873 came to the United States. For about eighteen months he was in Southern and Central Illinois, but on the 6th of January, 1874, he came to Rockford and followed his trade here until 1876, when he took up eabinet-making. He was married in Rockford to Miss Ella Peterson, a native of this eity, born September 8, 1854, and the youngest daughter and child of Peter and Mary (Brisman) Peterson, natives of Wester Gothland Province, Sweden. After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Peterson resided on a farm in their native country until six children were born, three of whom died there, and then, in 1852, the family came to the United States, landing in Boston on the 1th of July of that year. They came West to Elgin, where two children were born, twins, and two months later eame on to Rockford. The father died in Rockford on the 25th of November, 1889, when eightysix years of age. He was quite active up to almost the last and was an intelligent and worthy His wife is still living, and though seventy three years of age, time has dealt leniently with her and she is still quite active. She has a comfortable home with her son, P. A. Peterson (see sketch). She is a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church.

Mr. Anderson adheres strictly to the principles of the Republican party in his political views, and in religion he and Mrs. Anderson are worthy members of the First Latheran Church. The fruits of their union have been two very bright boys: John R., born June 17, 1879, and Pearl A., born May 21, 1881.

ILLIAM P. BUCHAN, who is engaged in general farming on section 6, Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, was born in Ontario County, N. Y., in 1814, and is descended from an old Maryand family. His boyhood days were spent in his native State and there he acquired his education. Hoping to better his financial condition, he came to the West in 1848, and, with the exception of a few months, has since resided in this county. In Cherry Valley Township, Mr. Buchan was united in marriage with Mrs. Susanna J. (Stilson) Rowley, who was born in Broome County, N. Y., and with her parents came to Illinois in 1844, settling in Rockford. Her father, Harley Stilson, was a native of Connecticut and in New York he married Retta Burton, also a native of the Nutmeg State. Subsequently, they came to the West and for two years resided in Rockford, where Mr. Stilson followed his trade of earpentering and bridge-building, at which he had worked in the East. He helped to build the first bridge that spanned the Rock River at Rockford and also the first Court House. This was in 1845. Later, he purchased a farm near Rockford and there he and his wife spent the remainder of their days. He was born January 17, 1800, and died in March, 1874. Mrs. Stilson, who was born February 17, 1803, passed away in April, 1876. They were both members of the Methodist Church, and were worthy people. Three of their children are yet living, of whom Mrs. Buchan is the eldest. Her brother, Nathan L., is a carpenter of Elgin Ill., and a prominent member of the Masonic order. Her sister, Mrs. Lucy L. Burt, resides in Lake City, Iowa, and by her marriage has become the mother of the following children: John, Jane E., Sarah, deceased, Kate L., Retta, Lucy J., Frank E., William, Charles and Thomas.

An uncle of Mrs. Buchan, Rev. James W. Burton, came to this State with her father, and on the 18th of March, 1850, started for California. He crossed the plains with teams, and after engaging in mining for some time, again began preaching. He was one of the first Methodist ministers in that State, and died while serving as pastor of the church of Woodland, when about forty years of age, leaving a wife and four children. His widow afterward again married. Of his children, Retta J. died at the age of twenty-six years; Thomas H. married Georgia Best, of Dixon, Ill.; Frank wedded Ida Fowler, of California, and they live in California, Eliza L. is the wife of Isaac Wicks, of Fresno, Cal.

Prior to her marriage to Mr. Buchan, his wife wedded Franklin Lewis, who started to California in 1850, and died on the way in the prime of life. She then married Daniel Rowley, who died a few years later. By the first union she had two children: Sarah A. and Philo E., and by the second marriage was born one daughter, Retta J., but all are now deceased.

Mr. Buchan is an enterprising and successful farmer and a well-to-do citizen of this community. His home farm comprises one hundred and sixty acres of arable land, highly cultivated, and he also owns one hundred and four acres of land near the city limits of Rockford, together with twenty-five acres of timber land in Guilford Township and a ten-acre timber tract in Cherry Valley Township. He is a Republican in politics, and himself and wife attend the Centennial Methodist Church of Rockford.

ARK DAY. This gentleman, who is residing one-half mile from Rockford, was born in Essex, Chittenden County, Vt., November 28, 1840. He is a son of Childs Day, who was born in the above-named county and town, March 29, 1794. His father, David Day, was born in West Springfield, Mass., May 2, 1758, and was the son of David Day, who in turn was a son of John Day, who was born in Springfield, July 5, 1698. His father, also named John Day, was a son of Thomas Day, who, in turn, was a son of Robert and Sarah (Cooper) Day.

The first ancestor of our subject to come to America was Robert Day, who settled in Newton, now Cambridge, Mass., in 1634. The genealogy of the Day family records that he was one of the company of one hundred pioneers, who, with their pastor, the Rev. Mr. Hooker, penetrated the wilderness of Massachusetts in 1636. The second wife of Robert Day was Editha Stebbins, sister of Deacon Edward Stebbins. The great-grandfather of our subject removed from Massachusetts to Essex, Vt., where he was one of the earliest settlers and where his death occurred in June, 1795, when in his sixty-third year. The grandfather of our subject was one of the pioneers of Essex, and, clearing a farm from the wilderness, there spent his last days.

He served as a patriot in the Revolutionary War for seven years and was very prominent during the conflict and afterwards was a pensioner of the Government. The maiden name of his wife was Aseneth Childs; she died on the old home farm in the town of Essex.

Childs Day, the father of our subject, was reared and married in his native town and remembers when there were no railroads in the vicinity of his home, and how all the transportation was carried on by means of teams, he being employed for a number of years to drive a team between Montreal and Boston. He later purchased a farm near the old home, where he spent the remaining years of his life in quiet retirement. He served as a patriot in the War of 1812, and was prominently connected with all local affairs. The maiden name of his wife was Mahala Collins; she was born in Lebanon, N. II., and was the daughter of Henry and Fannie (Aldrich) Collins.

The original of this sketch received his education in the pioneer schools of his district and remained with his parents assisting his father in carrying on the farm until their decease. On the outbreak of the Civil War, he enlisted, August 19, 1862, in Company D, Thirteenth Vermont Infantry, and in July, 1863, received his honorable discharge. During his term of service, he participated in the battle of Gettysburg, and was engaged in numerous skirmishes. He continued to reside in his native State until 1864, then emigrating to Winncbago County, purchased the farm which he now owns and occupies. It is an excellently improved tract, having thereon all the necessary buildings and machinery, which make of it a first-class estate. It is further made more valuable by its proximity to Rockford, being only one-half mile distant.

Mary E. Winch became the wife of our subject in 1874; she was born in Aurora, Cayuga County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Walter Winch, who was a native of Brownville, Jefferson County, that State. Her grandfather, John Winch, hailed from Massachusetts and on the removal to New York, located in the above-named county, where he departed this life. The maiden name of his wife was Amelia Gage. The father of Mrs. Day early in life learned the trade of a tinner and later that of a jeweler, which business he carried on in Aurora, N. Y. He later removed to Auburn and in 1875 emigrated to San Francisco, Cal., where he is successfully engaged in the jewelry business. He was married to Rosanna Campbell, who was born in Auburn, N. Y., and is the daughter of John and Amanda Campbell.

To Mr. and Mrs. Day has been born one son, Herbert W. They are both active members of the Second Congregational Church, and in his political relations, Mr. Day votes the straight Republican ticket. Socially, he is connected with Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and is held in high esteem by all his neighbors and friends.

ENRY CURTIS. In studying the genealogical tree of the Curtis family, we find that they came originally from England and were prominent in their different callings in that country. The subject of this sketch was born in Hampshire, England, March 30, 1813, to the union of Stephen, Jr., and Elizabeth (Poor) Curtis, natives of Hampshire and Lincolnshire, respectively, where both received their final summons, the father dying at the age of eighty, and the mother when about seventy-live years of age. Stephen, Jr., was a farmer and had followed that occupation all his life. To his marriage was born a large family of children, eleven of whom lived to be grown, two died in infancy, and four are now living. The paternal grandfather, Stephen Curtis, Sr., passed his entire life in Hampshire, England, and he and his wife died there when quite aged. Elizabeth Poor, mother of our subject, was one of two children born to Edward Poor and his wife. natives of Oxfordshire, England. Her parents moved to Hampshire, England, and there engaged in the nursery business, Edward Poor being known as head gardener.

The subject of this sketch remained under the parental roof until about ten years of age, and then for three years worked for his board and clothes with an uncle, James Curtis. After this he was engaged in teaming for an old Quaker, with whom he remained until eighteen years of age, and then took passage on the vessel "Process," landing at Quebec, Canada, six weeks later. He remained in Eastern Canada, worked on a farm for about four years, and after saving $200 started for the fertile soil of Illinois. He came by stage and steamer to Montreal, and canal to Kingston, thence by the Lakes to Queenstown and by carriage to Chippewa, after which he took the steamer "Thomas Jefferson" at Buffalo to go to Detroit, but changed on to the "Michigan" and came by it to Chicago. He walked from that city out to Boone County, and made his first appearance in that county in June, 1836. He at once settled on his present farm, erected a log cabin 16 x 20, and in this he made his home until 1876, when he moved into his present fine large house.

Mr. Curtis was married in Canada in April. 1835, to Miss Mary Atkinson, who was born in Lincolnshire, England, on the 26th of July, 1804, and was the daughter of Robert and Ann (Ross) Atkinson, natives also of Lincolnshire, England. Her parents died in East, or Lower, Canada, when extremely aged people; they were the parents of seven or eight children, all now deceased, the youngest having died in this county in the winter of 1891. When our subject reached Chicago on his way to this county, he left his wife, who had accompanied him thus far, in Chicago, and he started out on foot for Boone County. The country was almost a wilderness then and he followed surveying lines and blazed trees until he came to this county. Very few neighbors were here then, but game abounded on all sides. After selecting a suitable location and getting everything in readiness, he returned in the fall of 1836 to Chicago for his wife, whom he brought to his pioneer home. Of the four children born to this worthy couple, three are yet living, as follows: Elizabeth, born March 11, 1838, married George Williams and became the mother of five children; William H. H., born August 26, 1840, and Thomas, born June 6, 1843. When locating in this county, our subject took up one hundred and sixty acres of land and has resided on this ever since. Mr. Curtis is a Republican in his political views and his first Presidential vote was cast for W. H. Harrison. named his son after this President.

This son, William Henry Harrison Curtis, was born in Spring Township, Boone County, 111., on the 26th of August, 1840, as above mentioned, and after attaining his growth was married to Miss Maritta D. Handy, who was born in this county on the 7th of November, 1847. This union has been blessed by the birth of five children, as follows: Clarence L., born in Milton, Pa., on the 28th of March, 1872; Lois M., born in Pennsylvania., November 25, 1874, attending school; Mabel M., born in this county, May 31, 1878; Clyde W., born in Pennsylvania, April 3, 1882, and Grace D., born in Pennsylvania, July 27, 1884. Mrs. Curtis is a daughter of John and Celinda M. (Shattuck) Handy. Her father was a native of Ohio and came to this county in 1835. He took up Government land, but sold out late in life and moved to Wisconsin, where he died on the 7th of March, 1850, when forty years of age. His wife died in this county on the 1st of April, 1864, (See sketch of C. B. Lord for further particulars of Mrs. Curtis.) Mrs. Curtis' eldest sister was the first female child born in Boone County. Mr. Curtis, like his father, is a Republican, and his first Presidential vote was cast for Lincoln. He has held a number of the local offices of the county and is now Supervisor. The family attend the Methodist Church. William H. H. Curtis was in Company B, Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, as a private and came out with the rank of Lieutenant. He was in the service three years, up to the 17th of September, 1865. His brother George enlisted in Company I, Ninth Illinois Cavalry, was wounded at Nashville, and died from the effects of the same at Louisville, Ky.

EORGE PETERSON, the well-known mannfacturer of all kinds of foundry supplies, under the title of the Union Foundry & Machine Company, located at Nos. 404 and 410 Cedar Street, is one of the most enterprising and thorough-going business men of the city. His factory is well equipped and he has been proprietor of the same since August, 1887. He was formerly President of the old corporation, which was organized in May, 1881, under the same name as it is now operated. Mr. Peterson became a member of the firm and its President in August, 1883, and four years later sole proprietor. He is President, his wife, E. Peterson, Vice-president and his daughter, J. B. Peterson, Secretary and Treasurer. The business has been well and successfully carried on and is crowded with work, although about thirty men are employed all the time.

Mr. Peterson has been a resident of Rockford since 1854 and is well and favorably known in the county. He learned the trade of a machinist at an early age, has followed this all his life, and has met with substantial results. Aside from the foundry, he is interested in outside enterprises of Rockford, and has a fine residence on South West Street, in the Fifth Ward.

Born in New York City, Mr. Peterson came to this State when a young man and what he has accumulated in the way of this world's goods is the result of his own good fighting qualities. His father, John Peterson, was a native of Sweden, and came to this country when but fourteen years of age and in the latter part of the last century. He became a ship-rigger and was killed by falling from the ship's rigging which he was putting on at the wharfs of New York City. He was then fiftynine years of age, and was a quiet, industrious man. His death was a great blow to his wife and family. He had always resided in New York City, but his wife afterward followed her children to Rockford, Ill., where her death occurred at the home of her son, Frederick Peterson, when eighty-seven years of age. Her maiden name was Mary Kirfus and she was born in Philadelphia in 1802. She was of German ancestry and the daughter of Christian Kirfus, who was a baker by trade. The latter died in New York City when seventy years of age. His wife had come to Rockford at an early day and died here when eighty-nine years of age.

Our subject was one of six children, five of whom are living at the present time and all married. He selected his wife in the person of Miss Eliza Vibbard, a native of Rockford Township, this county, and their union was solemnized in Rockford. Her parents, Thomas and Phebe (Scott) Vibbard, were natives of the Green Mountain State and after marriage came to Rockford Township where the father cultivated the soil. Later, or in 1867, they moved to Iowa, Delaware County, and there the mother died when sixty-nine years of age. Mr. Vibbard subsequently returned to Rockford and has since been domiciled with his daughter, Mrs. Peterson. He is now eighty years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson are prominent society people of Rockford, and Mrs. Peterson is a Methodist in her religious belief. Mr. Peterson is a stanch supporter of the principles of the Republican party. They have had four children, but one, Gertrude, a bright little girl, died at the age of ten years. Those living are: Carrie M., wife of William G. Shapley, a baker of Rockford; Jennie B., at home, and Secretary and Treasurer of her father's manufactory, and Maud, in the High School.

ILLIAM NETTLETON, who is pleasantly located on section 36, Le Roy Township, Boone County, is the proprietor of one hundred and twenty-seven acres of land, which his good judgment has placed under excellent cultivation. He is a native of this county and township, his birth having occurred in 1853, while his father, Danforth Nettleton, was a native of Genesee County, N. Y., and was born in 1804.

The father of our subject was left an orphan when a lad of seven years, and was bound out to his godfather until reaching his majority. He was then married to Miss Maria Grovenberg, by whom he became the father of five children. Mrs. Nettleton died, and the lady to whom the father was married in Le Roy Township, March 19, 1849, was Miss Margaret Postlethwaite. She was born in England, September 7, 1823, being the daughter of James Postlethwaite, and bore her husband four children, namely: Maria; William, our subject; Ella, now Mrs. James Black, of Washington; and Minnie, who married Frank Vickers, of Poplar Grove.

Danforth Nettleton departed this life February 13, 1891, when eighty-seven years of age. He came to this locality in 1842 and took up a quarter-section of Government land, which was his perma-nentabiding-place. Our subject was married, September 15, 1875, to Rilla Nash, of Chemung, Mellenry County, Ill. The lady was the daughter of Sidney and Caroline (Carpenter) Nash, natives of New York, who came to Illinois early in the '40s, where they were married; they have a family of six children, and make their home in Me Henry County.

The five children born to our subject and his wife are as follows: Clarence B., born in 1876; Frank in 1878; Mabel in 1880; Bertha in 1882 and Joy in 1883.

In politics, our subject is a Republican, and in social matters, a Modern Woodman. He is engaged in general farming, and keeps on his place about twelve dairy cows. The half-brothers and sisters of our subject are Fannie, Mrs. Jonathan Leonard, of Washington State; Jane S., who married John Rice, of Chillicothe, this State; Densie, the wife of Edwin Walker, also of Chillicothe; James A. and Elias H., both of whom were soldiers in the Civil War, the latter of whom died of measles when in the service; James A. is a farmer in Kansas, and is married to Cecil Leonard.

AMES HESTED, one of the extensive farmers of Winnebago County, residing on section 27, Cherry Valley Township, claims England as the land of his nativity. He was born in Kent County in October, 1825, and is the son of William and Sarah (Eldredge) Hested. They were both born in the same locality and emigrated to this country about 1830, bringing with them their three sons and one daughter. They settled in Rensselaer County, N. Y., where for eighteen years Mr. Hested operated a rented farm. There the mother died, leaving a family of seven children. The father afterwards removed to Bradford County and bought a farm, upon which he spent his remaining days, dying at the age of sixty-five years, in the summer of 1857.

Our subject was the third child of the family. He left the parental roof at the age of fifteen years, and since that time he has made his own way in the world. He began as a farm hand at $5 per month, and worked eight months, then worked for his board while he went to school for four months, paying his own tuition. After clothing himself he had $20 left. His time was spent in this way for seventeen years, his wages being increased to $15 per month, which was considered good pay at that time. He lived with Andrew Ryan in Rensselaer County for ten years, and his employer being old and infirm, he managed the farm as though it was his own property. On leaving New York in April, 1855, he came to the West, locating in Winnebago County, and was employed upon the farm of J. H. Fake. He brought with him about $1,000, which he had saved from his wages in the East, and this he loaned at ten per cent. Other men were loaning money at twenty-five per cent, and considered him a greenhorn, but he lost nothing by his efforts to aid others. In 1859, he purchased his first farm, a one hundred aere tract on section 14, Cherry Valley Township, and in 1868 bought eighty acres more, selling the next year, and clearing $1,800. In 1871, he purchased one hundred and sixty acres on section 27, Cherry Valley Township.

January 24, 1861, Mr. Hested was joined in wedlock with Miss Mary J. Boltazer, who was born in Pennsylvania. January 24, 1836. They began their domestic life upon the farm in the spring of 1861, and to the work of developing and improving his land our subject devoted his entire attention. The small house and barn have since been replaced by a commodious residence and ample outbuildings. He has laid about a thousand rods of tiling, and the quarter-section which he owns, with its rich and fertile fields, is considered one of the best farms in the community. It is worth at least $60 per acre. The home is situated on an elevation and commands a fine view of the surrounding country.

In 1884, Mr. Hested was ealled upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who died on the 23d of April, leaving a family of four children: Wilham E., who is operating a two hundred acre farm of his father's in Carroll County; Minnie E., wife of William Blair, of Irene, Boone County; Harry V., who aids in the cultivation of the home farm, and Edwin, who is attending school at Dixon. For a number of years Mr. Hested was a stanch Republican in polities, but is now a stalwart advocate of the Prohibition party. His life has been well and worthily spent, and owing to his persistent industry, enterprise and good management, he has made a hand-some competence which places him among the substantial citizens of Winnebago County.

RASTUS L. STILES, who is at present residing in the city of Rockton, is engaged as Station Agent. He was born in Gibson, Susquebanna County, Pa., August 8, 1820, and is a son of George Stiles, a native of Windham, Conn., where his birth occurred about 1782. The latternamed gentleman was a tanner, currier and shoemaker, which different trades he followed, with the exception of the time spent in the War of 1812, during his entire life. He participated in the battle of New London, soon after which he secured a substitute, and returned home.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Elizabeth Lincoln. The parents were married at the old brick church in Windham, soon after which they removed to Pennsylvania, where the mother died February 25, 1853. The father of our subject departed this life December 22, 1854, when seventy-two years of age. Our subject was the fifth in a family of five sons and two daughters, only two of whom are living, his youngest brother residing at Factoryville, Pa.

Erastus L. Stiles, when fifteen years of age, left home and engaged to work at the shoemaker's trade, which he had learned from his father. He emigrated to Pecatonica, where he remained for a time, and in September, 1885, came to Rockford, where he engaged to work for Lewis Holmes. In October, 1856, he was given the position of Station Agent on the Racine & Miss. Railroad, which occupation he has followed under different corporations since that time. Mr. Stiles has been ill during the past six weeks (April, 1892), which is the longest vacation he has had for many years.

The lady to whom our subject was married at Brooklyn, Pa., in June, 1841, was Miss Marantha Capron. She was born in Hartford, Pa., and was the daughter of Wheaton and Daidane (Aldrich)

Capron, also natives of the Keystone State. To Mr. and Mrs. Stiles have been born eight children, three of whom are deceased, namely: Ella, who died in infancy; George, who passed away when twentyseven years of age, at Rockton, leaving a wife and one son; and Charles K., who died in December, 1890, in a hospital at Chicago, in his thirtieth year. Those living are Arthur G., Oscar T., Cora, Durand and Herbert. Arthur enlisted when eighteen years of age in Company D, Fifty-first Illinois Infantry, during the late war, which was known as the Lead Mine Regiment, it being commanded by Col. Smith, of Galena. He served for a time under Sherman, and when being sent back to look after Hood, was wounded at the battle of Franklin, Tenn., where he was taken prisoner and confined for six months in Andersonville Prison. He served his country faithfully and well for four years, and receives from the Government a pension of $8 per month.

Mr. Stiles votes for the best man during election times, regardless of party, and is as free in religious matters as in politics. He has been twice elected Clerk of his township, and for several years was Corporation Clerk.

ENRY G. DAVIS, M. D., a practicing physician and surgeon of Rockford, claims Wisconsin as the State of his nativity, his birth having occurred in Rock County on the 26th of December, 1860. His paternal grandfather, Jeremiah Davis, is yet living in Rock County, at the age of ninety. The father of our subject, Jeremiah Davis, Jr., was born in Herkimer County, N.Y., and was reared to manhood on a farm in that locality. With his father, he came West, and a marriage ceremony performed in Rock County united his destiny with that of Miss Jane Goodrich, also a native of the Empire State, who came West in her girlhood days. Her father, Joseph Goodrich, was an early settler and prominent farmer and merchant of Rock County. He was also the founder of Milton College, a Seventh-day Baptist School, of Milton, Wis., and established the churches of that denomination in the county. He died in Milton in 1870, having reached the allotted age of three-score years and ten. His wife, whose maiden name was Nancy Maxon, had passed away some years previous. She also was a prominent member of the Seventh-day Baptist Church. As Mrs. Davis was a mere girl when her parents emigrated Westward, she was reared and educated in Wisconsin. In the year 1861, the parents of our subject removed to Ogle County, Ill., and settled at what is now Davis Junction. When the railroad was built through that locality, the father established the town of Davis Junction and afterward improved a very large property, upon which he made his home until 1881, when he came to Rockford and is now living a retired life at No. 206 North Second Street. His wife has proved a true helpmate to him, and they are a worthy and estimable couple. In their family were six children, all yet living and four are now married.

Our subject is the only one who follows a profession. When he was only a few months old, his parents removed to Ogle County, where he resided until coming to Rockford. At length, he determined to make the practice of medicine his life work, and to that end entered Hahnemann Medical College, of Chicago, from which he was graduated in the Class of '83. He established practice in Monroe, Ogle County, where he continued to reside until 1889, which year witnessed his arrival in this city. He formed a partnership with Dr. W. A. McDowell, and opened an office at No. 112 South Main Street. The firm existed for about a year, since which time Dr. Davis has been alone in practice and has removed his office to the William Brown Building.

The lady who bears the name of Mrs. Davis was in her maidenhood Miss Georgie Hogle, a native of Chicago and a daughter of George Hogle, a prominent stock dealer of that city. Her parents were both born in the East and are quite prominent people in the circles of society in which they move. The marriage of the Doctor and his wife was celebrated in Chicago, and has been blessed with one son. Harry H. They are well-known and leading people of this community, who hold a high social position. They attend the Second Congregational Church, and in politics the Doctor is a Republican. He is already enjoying a liberal patronage and has a reputation which many an older physician might well envy.

ONTUS PETERSON is a stockholder in the Swedish Brewery Company, which was established in 1890, and does business in southeast Rockford. A native of Sweden, he was born in Verland, May 3, 1838. His father died in Sweden at the age fifty-six years, after which his mother came to America and died in Rockford at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Helburg, in 1891, at the age of seventy-seven years. She was a most estimable lady, a true wife and mother, and lived a consistent Christian life.

The subject of this sketch was reared to manhood in his native land, where he learned the trade of a brewer and also served as book-keeper for a leading bank for some time. He received excellent educational advantages, having been a student in a leading conservatory of music. He possesses musical talent of a high order and has devoted much time to that art and its enjoyment. He was the first of his family to come to this country, the year 1867 witnessing bis emigration. He had already married before leaving his native land, his union being with Miss Ida E. Ekblad, who came of an old Swedish family. Her father lived and died in his native land, passing away at an advanced age. He was at one time quite wealthy and was a prominent citizen of the community in which he resided. His wife is now living with her daughter in Indianapolis, Ind., at the advanced age of eighty-one years. Like her husband, she is descended from an old and well-known Swedish family.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Peterson have been born nine children as follows: Robert W., an engraver in the Rockford Silver Plate Company; Gertrude L., who is employed in the S. B. Wilkins Knitting works; Hurbert, who is also an engraver for the Rockford Silver Plate Company; Benjamin, Agnes, Elsie, Lillie, Harry and Thomas, all of whom are yet at home. The family reside at No. 198 Catherine Street, where they have a pleasant and commodious residence.

Mr. Peterson came to Rockford in 1867, and has here made his home continuously since. For twenty years he devoted his life to the art of music, teaching both vocal and instrumental. His talent in this direction is much above the average. He was a member of the Forest City Band, has been connected with other musical societies and is interested in everything pertaining to the art. As before stated, since 1890 he has been connected with the Swedish Brewery Company, of which he is a leading stockholder, and to the promotion of that industry he now gives his time and attention.

IRAM C. BURROUGHS. The magnitude of the commercial interests of Rockford is the subject of frequent remark on the part of visitors to this progressive city, and among its most prominent establishments is the firm of Burroughs & Thomas, undertakers and burial directors, located at No. 109 North Main Street. They carry a full line of burial cases, and white and black hearses, and by energy and enterprise have gained an enviable reputation with the public. The business was established by Mr. Burroughs in January, 1882, and four years later was transferred to the present place of business, while the firm of Burroughs & Thomas was organized in February, 1890.

Mr. Burroughs is also one of the original stock-holders and at present a Director in the Rockford Burial Case Company, which was established in 1882, and commenced business the following year. This company has met with marked success and is one of the representative institutions of the city, its reputation being extended throughout the surrounding country. Since Mr. Burroughs came to Winnebago County in 1874, he has been closely connected with its history, first as a farmer for nine years, later as a confectioner for three years, and afterward as a funeral director and undertaker, and in these various relations has won the confidence of the people with whom he has been brought in contact.

A native of Pennsylvania, Mr. Burroughs was born in Eric County, August 21, 1839, and was only five years old when he accompanied his parents to Mellenry County, Ill. Two years afterward, the family removed to Ogle County, where our subject grew to manhood upon his father's farm. When twenty-two years of age, he enlisted in the service of the Union as a member of Company G, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, Capt. Bacon and Col. Marsh commanding. The regiment was incorporated with the Army of the Cumberland and fought at the battles of Perryville, Ky., Stone River and in many skirmishes with the enemy. Mr. Burroughs was detailed for special duty part of the time and was for three months confined to the hospital on account of sickness.

At the expiration of his term of service, Mr. Burroughs returned to Ogle County, where he engaged in farming for nine years. In that county he was married to Miss Angeline A. Campbell, who was the first white child born in the township of Linnville, Ogle County, her birth having occurred in 1839. She was reared in her native township, on the farm which her father improved from the raw prairie. Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs are the parents of one child: Lavina, wife of W. W. Sawyer, a druggist of Rockford, and the mother of one child, Harold. Politically, Mr. Burroughs is an independent Republican, and socially belongs to the G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., at Rockford, is a Master Mason, belonging to Blue Lodge No. 102, at Rockford, Subordinate Lodge, No. 140, I. O. O. F. and Knights of Pythias, No. 36.

Mr. Burroughs belongs to a very worthy family whose members have been upright citizens and enterprising and successful men. His grandfather, Charles Burroughs, was a native of New York State, who removed to Erie County, Pa., and there followed the occupation of a farmer until his death at the age of fifty-two. Prior to his removal from the Empire State he was married to Lucinda Cunningham, who survived him some years, coming West after his decease and passing away in Floyd County, Iowa, at the age of seventy.

This worthy couple were identified with the Methodist Episeopal Church, and were the parents of thirteen children, most of whom were farmers. The eldest, C. C., was born May 30, 1816, in New York, and was twenty years old when his parents removed to Erie County, Pa. Upon attaining to his majority he started out in life for himself and for a time was a teacher, and later commenced to farm, being thus engaged in Pennsylvania and Ogle County, Ill. At the age of fifty years he retired from agricultural pursuits and is passing his declining years quietly, at his home at No. 801 West State Street, Rockford. In his political and religious views, he is independent and liberal, and enjoys splendid health notwithstanding his age. His wife also survives at the age of seventy-one and with him enjoys the esteem of all with whom she has come in contact during a long and useful life.

OLLIN G. WHITMAN, Postmaster of Belvidere, was born in Belvidere Township, Boone County, Ill., January 18, 1847, and is a son of Iliram and Clarinda (Hanchett) Whitman, who are mentioned in connection with the sketch of Dr. F. S. Whitman, on another page of this work. His education was acquired in Belvidere, and when not attending school he assisted in the labors of the farm, remaining under the paternal roof until he had attained his majority.

At the age of twenty-one, Mr. Whitman bade good-bye to his old home, and started for the West. He went to Caldwell County, Mo., locating in Hamilton, where he purchased a large tract of land, and engaged in the real-estate business. He also dealt in live stock, became quite a prominent and influential citizen of that community, and for seven years served as Postmaster of Hamilton. He continued to reside in that city until 1886, when he returned to Belvidere, and was employed as time-keeper in the June Factory, which position he continued to fill until January, 1890, when he was appointed Postmaster of Belvidere by President Harrison.

A marriage ceremony performed in 1874 united the destinies of Mr. Whitman and Miss Florence E. Moss, and their union has been blessed with two children, a son and daughter: Frank S., Jr., and Mary M. The parents are leading young people of this city, who rank high in the social circles in which they move, and are held in warm regard by their many friends.

In politics, Mr. Whitman is a stanch supporter of Republican principles, and served as a member of the Central Committee of his party in Caldwell County, Mo., and was also Delegate to the Republican State Convention. While residing in Hamilton, he also served as President of the Village Board, and is now proving himself an efficient and popular Postmaster. Socially, he is a member of Eden Lodge No. 190, I. O. O. F., and of Hamilton Encampment, and belongs to La Fayette Garrison, K. G., of Belvidere.

OHN ANDREW, an extensive farmer of Caledonia Township, Boone County, is a native of this State, having been born in May, 1850, in Winnebago County. He is the son of John Andrew, Sr., one of the pioneers of the last-named county, who was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, and was the son of David Andrew. The father of our subject was engaged in farming on leased land in Scotland, where he remained until 1840, at which time he came to America, accompanied by his wife and three children. The party set sail from Greenock in June, and landed in New York after a long and stormy voyage of some weeks. They came directly to Illinois by way of the Hudson River and Lakes, and located in Winnebago County at a time when this section was sparsely settled, and all kinds of wild game were plentiful. The family moved into a log house with the family of Mrs. Andrew's sister. The father soon purchased land extending on both sides of the county line, and immediately began the work of improving his estate, which was his home until his death, in 1862.

The parents of our subject were married in Scotland, the maiden name of the mother being Mary Brown. She was also born in Kintyre, and was the daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Ralston) Brown, and is still living, residing on the home farm with her son Thomas, at the advanced age of seventy-eight years. The ten children ineluded in the family were Elizabeth, David, Charles, Janet, Mary, Margaret, Hugh, John, Thomas and Jane. The parents were members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, with which they identified themselves on its organization.

John Andrew was reared and educated in Harlem Township, and resided on the home farm until his marriage, when he settled on the farm which is his present place of residence. The estate includes two hundred and sixty-nine acres, which is improved with modern buildings, and ranks among the very finest in the county. In 1876, Mr. Andrew was married to Barbara McMillan, who was also a native of Kintyre, Scotland, and was an infant when she was brought to America by her parents, Mathew and Agnes (Kelly) McMillan, of whom an extended sketch appears elsewhere in this work.

Our subject and his wife have four children: Mary B., Mathew J., Louis and Thomas J. They are also members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, and are classed among the well-to-do residents of this county.

USTAVE SWEMBERG. Prominent among the successful business men of Rockford stands the name that heads this sketch, a first-class stone-cutter, who resides in a comfortable home at No. 703 North Second Street. He is a persevering, energetic business man, and what he has accumulated in the way of this world's goods is the result of hard work and good management.

Born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, on the 13th of January, 1834, he there passed his boyhood and learned his trade. In the year 1884, he bade farewell to the land of his birth and crossed the ocean to the United States. He came immediately to the Sucker State and located in Rockford, where he has followed his trade ever since. He is one of the honest, industrious citizens and is universally respected.

Miss Johanna Samuelson, whom he married in his native country, was born in the year 1836 and by her marriage has become the mother of the following children: Charles, a cabinet-maker of the Skandia Furniture Company, of Rockford; Albert, a glove cutter in Chicago; Erick works in the watch factory of Rockford; Ernest, at home; Hilda, a seamstress for the Rockford Clothing Company; Belle, wife of Oscar Larson, a fruit dealer on Seventh Street, and Hanna, a book-keeper for the Skandia Furniture Company, of Rockford. Mr. Swemberg and wife are members of the First Lutheran (Swedish) Church of Rockford, and are liberal contributors to the same. In politics, Mr. Swemberg closely adheres to the principles of the Republican party. He is a useful citizen and a stirring business man.

ENJAMIN FRANKLIN RICHARDSON has the honor of being a native of Roscoe, Ill. He lived for twenty-two years on the old homestead, on section 33, Roscoe Township, but has now resided on section 22 for the past thirty-three years. He was born May 8, 1837, and was the first male child born in Winnebago County. His father, Benjamin Richardson, was born near Gloversville, N. Y., and in his youth learned the trade of a blacksmith. When quite a young man, he invented a machine used in pulling up stumps. He afterwards engaged in blacksmithing, possessing both mechanical and inventive genius, which made him quite successful. He was married at his home and thence emigrated to Michigan when twenty-five years of age. Three months later, he started for the Rock River Country of Illinois, of which he had heard glowing descriptions, and was so favorably impressed, that he immediately returned for his wife and two children. Purchasing an ox-team, he started with his family for Illinois, arriving in Roscoe in the autumn of 1836. He made a claim of eighty acres of timber land and eighty acres of prairie, south of where the depot now stands, and turned his attention to blacksmithing. He soon built up a good trade and he followed that occupation for many years with excellent success, his labors being much in demand. His first dwelling was a log cabin, which he built with the help of his neighbors. This was burned several years later and he built a concrete house. Other settlers had tried this, but failed to make a substantial house. Mr. Richardson, however, was successful and the old house is yet standing. His wife died in Roscoe, in 1844, leaving five sons and three daughters, but the youngest child, an infant, did not long survive her.

The children were Charles, Abigail, Benjamin F., Emily, James, Josiah and Mary. James and Josiah were volunteers in the late war, the former a member of the Nineteenth Chicago Zouaves. Josiah served in the Eighth Illinois Cavalry and was three times wounded. He enlisted as a private, but when discharged was Captain of a colored company. His last wound, which was in the thigh, was received near Richmond. He returned home disabled and when he rejoined his regiment, the war was just over and he was mustered out, in 1865. He died in Pueblo, Mexico, where he went for his health. James returned home at the close of the war and his death occurred not long afterward.

Our subject was reared to manhood amid the wild scenes of frontier life. He aided in the arduous task of developing a farm, and his education was acquired in the old pioneer schools. In September, 1862, on the day when Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation, he married Libbie A. Gregory, of Harlem Township, who was born in New York and is a daughter of Samuel and Maria (Bathrick) Gregory, both of whom were natives of the Empire State and came to Illinois in 1846, when their daughter was a young lady.

Mrs. Richardson died at the old homestead, March 28, 1887, at the age of forty-five years, leaving eight children, four sons and four daughters, the youngest a babe of four months; one daughter, Carrie, had died at the age of two years. The living are Coradell, Franklin A., Fannie Maria, Mary Elizabeth, Kate Anna Belle, Clifford Benjamin, Walter Samuel and James Erwin. All of the children are at home except Cora, who is the wife of James McMickkin, of Nebraska; Frank A., and Fannie M., wife of Edwin Goldthwait. The last two reside in Durand, 118. The children have all received good educational advantages, thus being fitted for the practical duties of life.

Mr. Richardson voted the Republican ticket until 1884, since which time he has been a Prohibitionist. He has been a life-long member of the Methodist Church, to which his wife belonged, and has lived worthily and well. He is recognized as one of the substantial farmers of Roscoe Township and is one of the honored early settlers.

RCHIBALD HUTCHINSON, who resides on section 25, Le Roy Township, Boone County, by his progressiveness and natural ability, has become one of the representative people of the township. In addition to general farming, he makes a specialty of stock-raising, keeping about fifty head of horned cattle and thirty-five head of horses on his place constantly, being the owner of "Allego," a fine young stallion which he purchased in 1887.

Our subject was born in County Armagh, Ireland, in 1813, where also his father, James Hutchinson, was born, and a well-to-do farmer. Our subject's mother, prior to her marriage, was Sarah Copeland, and by her union with Mr. Hutchinson became the mother of six children, of whom our subject was the youngest. She departed this life at middle age, the father living to be a very old man.

Archibald Hutchinson was reared on the home farm, and when reaching his majority established a home for himself, and married Agnes Davidson, a native of the county where his birth occurred. They lived on the home farm until the summer of 1866, at which time they set sail from Liverpool on the steamer "City of Baltimore," and landed on the shores of the New World after a voyage of two weeks. They immediately came West to Boone County, where our subject purchased one hundred and twenty acres of improved property from Ephraim Robinson, for which he paid $25 per acre.

The five sons and two daughters born to our subject and his wife are James, who married Margaret Shanks, of this county, and has a family of five children; Ann, who died in August, 1891; Hannah, now Mrs. Thomas Davidson, who is the mother of three children, and resides in McHenry County; David, who married Martha McChure, is the father of two children, and engaged in farming in this county; William, who is a physician of Iron Mountain, Mich., being a graduate of Rush Medical College, Chieago; Robert, who married Minna J. Herrick, is a physician, and has two children; and Archie, who remains at home with his aged parents.

Mrs. Hutchinson is in good health, and has reached the age of seventy-eight years, while her husband is one year her senior. Our subject rented his farm in 1883, and moved to Capron. where he lived until 1890, and then took up his abode on the farm of his son Archie, which comprises three hundred and nineteen acres. The estate was purchased in 1887, and eost $50 per aere. One hundred and sixty acres are given to a fine burr oak pasture and live woodland, and it is a model of agricultural neatness and productiveness its good features in this direction being beautified by the taste and judgment of its owner, who finds that the best methods and the latest improvements in agricultural ways are those that bring him in the largest returns.

DWIN L. LAWRENCE, Supervisor of Belvidere, was born in Cuba, Allegany County, N. Y., September 9, 1833. He is descended from a New England family whose members bore an important part in Colonial history, and his great-grandfather participated in the famous battle of Bunker Hill, where two of his brothers were killed. For particulars with reference to the paternal grandfather of our subject, the reader is referred to the sketch of E. C. Lawrence on another page.

The father of our subject, Hon. Luther W. Lawrence, was born in Chenango County, N. Y., April 19, 1808, and learned the trade of a tanner, currier and shoemaker. He was married in his native State, where he resided until 1837. In 1836, he first visited Illinois and selected a claim to a tract of land in what is now Bonus Township, and after erecting a log house there returned to the Empire State. In the fall of 1837, with his family and parents, he returned, making the journey overland with a pair of horses and a wagon, and spending six weeks on the road. The dimensions of the log house which he had built were 18x24, and seventeen persons spent the following winter in that house. He improved a farm, erected frame buildings, and remained there until his death, in July, 1886.

In his political belief, Mr. Lawrence was first a Whig and became a Republican when that party was formed. In 1854, he was elected to the Legislature and had the honor of being the first Republican ever elected from Boone County. He served in that position for three terms, and for twelve years was Judge of Boone County. In his religious belief, he was a Baptist and a pioneer preacher in that denomination. It has often been said of him that he had exerted a greater influence in formulating public opinion, both religious and political, than any other man in Boone County, and the fact that since 1856 it has been the banner Republican county of the United States is largely due to the speeches made by him in all classes of gatherings, from mass meetings to the evening gatherings at rural schoolhouses. As an orator, he was eloquent and coneise, stating his premises and forming his arguments in such a manner as to produce conviction and force his auditors to enthusiastically join in his conclusions. His enunciation was so clear and distinct that in the largest outdoor meetings not one word was lost to his listeners. By actual test on a still evening, the line of his argument could be followed at the distance of one-half mile, yet his voice never failed him and he never complained of weariness.

The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Elvira Chamberlin, was born in Cazenovia, Madison County, N. Y., and died May 2, 1891. She reared seven children: Alonzo D., Edwin L., Harriet E., Sarah A., Lucia, Esther M. and Luther C. Our subject was four years old when he accompanied his parents to Illinois, and at that time most of the land in the northern part of the State was owned by the Government. Deer and other wild game abounded, and the country was sparsely settled. He attended the first free school ever taught in Boone County, and gained a commonschool education, which he afterward extended by a careful course of reading.

When twenty years old, our subject entered the employ of the Wisconsin Central Railroad Company, remaining for one year in the capacity of a civil engineer and making the preliminary surveys for a proposed road that was to extend from Richmond, Ill., to Columbus, Wis. Later, he was employed by the Illinois Central Railroad Company in making surveys in the southern part of the State until 1855, when he was elected County Surveyor, and devoted his attention to the duties of that office in connection with farming until September, 1861.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Lawrence enlisted in Company F, Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry, being mustered in as Second Lieutenant, and was promoted to be First Lieutenant, April 8, 1862. for meritorious conduct at Pittsburg Landing. Among the battles in which he participated were Ft. Donelson, Shiloh and Medan Station. was slightly wounded at the battle of Shiloh and was hit with a spent ball at the battle of Medan Station. He served for one year, when he was compelled to resign on account of ill health. Returning home, he resumed the peaceful calling of a farmer and continued thus occupied until 1871, when he accepted the position of Superintendent of the farm connected with the Illinois Industrial College (now the State University) at Champaign, Ill. The farm at that time contained four hundred acres. In 1874, one hundred and eighty aeres, comprising the Horticultural Farm, were added to the place, and one year afterward one hundred and sixty acres more. Mr. Lawrence added $20,000 in permanent improvements and stock to the farm, and continued in its charge until 1881. when he resigned, and, returning to Belvidere, located at his present home, where he has since engaged in raising small fruits.

The marriage of Mr. Lawrence, in 1856, united him with Miss Mary E., daughter of Daniel W. and Precepta (Austin) Lawrence, and a native of Cuba, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence have five ehildren: Nettie E., Kate, Mamie, Gertrude and Neva W. Since the formation of the Republican party, Mr. Lawrence has adhered to its platform and principles, and has served in various positions of trust and honor. He has served seven years on the County Board of Supervisors, has been nine times elected to the office of County Surveyor, has served by appointment as City Engineer, and has been twice elected a member of the City Council, holding that office at present. In addition to these positions of trust, he had served for eight years as a member of the Board of Edueation. He is a charter member of Hurlbut Post No. 164, G. A. R., and has been Quartermaster since its organization. He is a man whose strict probity is never questioned, whose unusual capabilities are acknowledged by his fellowmen, and whose life has exemplified the fact that industry and enterprise, coupled with an honorable disposition and business tact, will bring success to the fortunate possessor.

ENRY PORTER, a retired farmer residing in Belvidere, is of English birth. He first opened his eyes to the light of day in Norfolk County, March 9, 1828. His father, Thomas W. Porter, was born in Norfolk County, December 13, 1803, and was a son of James W. The maiden name of his mother was Winels. He learned the trade of a miller, which he followed for a few years, and then engaged in farming. In November, 1833, accompanied by his wife and four children, he sailed from Liverpool and, after a voyage of six weeks, landed at New York. cated three miles from that city and engaged in farming for a year, after which he spent one year in Hamburg, Eric County, and then removed to Buffalo, where he engaged in the grocery business until July, 1838. He then made his way to Boone County, Ill., and made a claim of Government land in what is now Bonus Township, purchasing it when it came into market at Chicago. The first home of the family was a log cabin, and he improved a farm upon which he resided until 1866, when he came to Belvidere, where he resided until called to his final rest February 22, 1882. His wife, whose maiden name was Charlotte Lane, was born in Norfolk County, England, and died in Belvidere, November 20, 1873. Their family numbered nine children: Thomas W., Henry, Charlotte L., Annie M., Robert, James W., Elizabeth P., Washington, and Fred. Robert served in Company A, One Hundred and Fifty-third Illinois Infantry, from February 2, 1865, to June 24 of the same year. Washington enlisted in 1862 in Company B, Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, and served until after the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged. He participated in a number of hardfought battles, and was wounded in the engagement before Guntown.

Our subject was a lad of only ten summers when with his parents he came to Illinois. Deer and other kinds of wild game roamed over the prairies at will, and the greater part of the land was owned by the Government. There were no schools for a time, and after his father built a frame house the old Porter log cabin was used as a school-room. It was supplied with the usual primitive furniture, and in such schools our subject acquired his early education. As soon as he was old enough he began to aid in the farm work and cut the grass with a scythe, and the grain with a cradle. He remained under the parental roof until twenty-two years of age, when he came to Belvidere and entered the employ of the Galena Union Railroad Company, now the Northwestern. A year later he went to Rockford, where he engaged in buying grain until 1853, and then went to California by way of the Isthmus route, landing at San Francisco twentysix days later. For about four and a half years he was employed on a ranch in Sacramento, and then returned to his old home.

On the 4th of March, 1858, Mr. Porter married Annie E. Roper, who was born in Suffolk County, England. Her parents, Sion and Mary Sepha (Clark) Roper, were natives of Suffolk, and came to America in 1854, locating in the town of Spring, Boone County, where Mr. Roper purchased a farm and resided until called to his final home. His widow now lives with her son-in-law, T. W. Porter. Unto our subject and his wife were born three sons, who are yet living: Fred A., Thomas W., and Leslie J. Frank, their first child, died in his twenty-eighth year; and Spencer W., the second son, died at the age of three years.

On his return from California, Mr. Porter bought a farm at $25 per acre, upon which were a log house and stable. He erected a good set of farm buildings, made other improvements, and extended the boundaries of his land until he now owns two hundred and sixty-four acres. In August, 1891, he began the erection of a pleasant home at the corner of Julian and South Main Streets, Belvidere, which he has occupied since the following spring. Himself and wife were reared in the Episcopal Church, but joined the Congregational Church of Garden Prairie. In politics, he is a Republican, and has served as a member of the County Board of Supervisors.

TILES P. RANSOM, M. D., a practicing physician of Roscoc, was born in Clarence, Oneida County, N. Y., January 13, 1824. Tradition says that the family was founded in America by three brothers, who emigrated to this country from England. The grandfather of our subject, Daniel Ransom, was born in New England, and removed from Vermont to New York in an early day. He followed farming throughout his entire life, and died in Wyoming County. Doctor's father, Daniel Ransom, M. D., was born in Windham County, Vt., and in early life gave his attention to the study of medicine. commenced practice in Oncida County, N. Y., whence he removed to Eric County, and later to Pennsylvania, spending eight years in Union City, In 1844 he came to Illinois and engaged in practice in Belvidere, until failing health caused him to abandon his life work. He died at the home of our subject in Roscoe, in 1870, at the age of seventy-six years. His wife bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Willard. She was born in Wethersfield, Conn., and was a daughter of Simon Willard. She, too, spent her last days at the home of our subject, and was called to her final rest in 1874. In the family were six children: Erasmus D., Alzina, Giles, Cynthia, Samantha E., and Loretta M.

Our subject acquired his early education in the district schools of Pennsylvania, and by private instruction was fitted for teaching. When a mere youth, he decided to come to the West, and in the spring of 1843 joined a party of emigrants en route for the Rock River Valley of Illinois. walked the greater part of the distance to Belvidere, and after arriving at his destination secured a position to teach a three-months' term of school at Poplar Grove. At the close of the term, before he had received his pay, he went to the postoffice, where a letter was awaiting him with the usual twenty-five cents postage charge due upon it. He had not the money, but from his friends secured twenty-three cents and was allowed to take his mail. In that way he made the acquaintance of Dr. Ames, the Postmaster, and by him was soon afterwards employed as Deputy Postmaster at Belvidere. During the winter, he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Ames, and in January, 1845, went to Roscoe, where the Doctor had preceded him. There he served as Postmaster, and soon afterwards commenced practice. In 1850, he was graduated from Rush Medical College of Chicago, and has since devoted almost his entire attention to the practice of medicine. In 1862, he enlisted in the United States service as Assistant Surgeon of the Second Illinois Light Artillery. After a year he resigned, on account of ill health, returning to his home in Roscoe.

The Doctor was united in marriage with Mahala Jents, in March. 1860, and unto them have been born six children, five of whom are yet living: Wilmot L., a practicing physician of Rockford; L. Elizabeth, wife of Penn Walker, a practicing physician and the proprietor of the Sanitarium near Rockford; Grace married Clarence Shaw, son of Dr. Shaw of this place, and lives in Nebraska; Arthur L., a telegrapher, and station agent of Roscoe.

The Doctor is a Democrat in politics, and socially is a member of Roscoe Lodge No. 75, A. F. & A. M. Himself and wife are members of the Methodist Church, and he also holds membership with the Army and Navy Medical Association of Illinois. He is one of the oldest physicians in years of continuous practice in the county, and ranks among the best of his professional brethren. He has ever been a close student of the profession, and has enjoyed a large and herative practice. (Our subject has been called hence since the above was written. His demise occurred April 22, 1892.)

ARREN C. ROWAN, late of Belvidere, was born in Batavia, Genesee County, N. Y., March 2, 1826. He is a son of William Rowan, who was born in Washington County, N. Y., and spent his last days in Kirkland, De Kalb County, Ill. The mother of our subject was also a native of the Empire State and, like her husband, departed this life in De Kalb County, Ill., at the age of forty-five years.

Our subject was one in a family of nine children, six of whom are living. He remained at home until eighteen years of age, and aided his father in conducting the home farm. When striking out for himself, he purchased timber land in De Kalb County, Ill., from which he cut and sold the timber. He was the owner of the farm until thirty years of age, when he sold the place and purchased property in the town of Belvidere.

The lady to whom our subject was married in Beloit, Wis., was Miss Lavina Caswell. She was born in Belvidere, and departed this life in Boone County, when forty-six years of age, having become the mother of three children, Jay and Perry, deceased, and Lovina, who makes her home in this township. Mr. Rowan was married again, this time to Miss Rose M. Hes, by whom he became the father of one son, Warren C., who was born in Belvidere, October 3, 1888.

The wife of our subject was born in England, April 11, 1854, and was the daughter of Richard and Eliza A. (Edwards) Iles, who were also natives of that country, and came to the United States in 1858. Mr. Iles purchased a tract of land of one hundred and twenty-seven acres in Belvidere, upon which he resided until his decease, when fifty-eight years of age; the mother died at the same age.

After his marriage, our subject removed to Belvidere, and was engaged in the real-estate business. which he found to be very profitable, and at the time of his death had accumulated a handsome fortune. He was a stanch adherent of Republican principles, but aside from easting his vote, took very little part in political affairs. He was a kind and devoted husband and father, and his friends were as numerous as his acquaintances. He was self-made, in all that that term implies, never having had a week's schooling after attaining his fourteenth year, and when eighteen years of age was competent to earry on a business for himself. He established a reputation for honest and fair dealing among his fellow-men, and his loss was keenly felt in the community where he had resided for so He was a member of the Baptist many years. Church, and departed this life at his beautiful home in Belvidere, September 11, 1888. He was liberal in the distribution of his means, and was a cheerful contributor to all worthy objects, the deserving poor never being forgotten by him. Mr. Rowan's youngest brother was a soldier during the late war, and was killed at the battle of Murfreesboro. He bore the name of Perry C., and enlisted when eighteen years of age to fight for his country's honor.

The Rowan family is of Irish ancestry, while the Iles were from England. Mrs. Rowan's parents were six weeks in crossing the Atlantic, being passengers on the sailing-vessel "Mayflower."

RANK C. AND HENRY C. GILL constitute the well-known firm of Gill Brothers, dentists of Rockford, located at No. 223 East State Street. H. C. Gill first came to this city and began business with Dr. Noyes E. Babcock in 1875. That connection was continued until March, 1878, when F. C. Gill bought out Dr. Babcock and the partnership between the two brothers was formed. Dental parlors were established at their present location in 1871, and dentistry has since been practiced at that point. The Gill Brothers have convenient and pleasant parlors and have an excellent patronage which has constantly increased from the beginning and which is well merited, for they are skilled workmen. The brothers both studied under Dr. Palmer, of Fitchburg, Mass., for two years, and their preceptor was known as one of the best dentists in the State. They both practiced in Massachusetts for a short time, then came West in 1869, locating in Freeport, Ill., whence they came to Rockford.

The brothers were born in Windsor County, Vt., and there received their early education. The father, Charles Gill, was a Vermont farmer and his sons were reared to manhood on the old homestead where he continued to reside until called to his final rest at about the age of seventy-five years. He lived a quiet, unassuming life and was well and favorably known in his community. His father, Amos Gill, was also a Vermont farmer, deseended from an old New England family, probably of English origin. He died when more than eighty-four years of age. He had married Miss Sarah Bates, a native of Canada, who came to the United States during her maidenhood. She survived her husband a short time and was also about eighty-four years of age at the time of her death. Charles Gill married Miss Sophia Healy, who was born in the Green Mountain State, of New England parentage. After her husband's death, she came to Illinois and spent her last days in the home of her son, Dr. H. C. Gill, her death occurring in 1888. at the age of eighty-five years. She died in the faith of the Methodist Church, of which she had long been a member.

At her death, Mrs. Gill left four children, and Sophia, another daughter, had died at the age of four years. Ellen L., the cldest surviving member of the family, is now the wife of D. R. Judkins, a resident of Chicago; F. C. married Kate A. Wallace of Fitchburg, Mass., who was born, reared and educated in the Bay State. Two daughters grace their union: Lena K. and Grace W. Daniel O. is a grocer and a well-to-do citizen of Windsor County, Vt. He married Lucy J. Butterfield. II. C. wedded 1da C. Bunker, their union being celebrated in Kane County, Ill. Unto them were born three children, but Edward died in early life. Harry and Carl are still with their parents.

Another event in the life of Dr. F. C. Gill is worthy of mention. After removing to Massachusetts, he enlisted in the Fifty-third Infantry, commanded by Col. Kimball, and was assigned to Company B, under Capt. Jonas Corey. The regiment was sent to the South, doing service mostly in Louisiana. They came in contact with the enemy at Port Iludson, where they kept them penned up for forty-four days before they surrendered. The regiment had enlisted for nine months but continued in the service for thirteen months, when they were discharged. The Doctor was on duty all of the time and when mustered out was serving as Corporal.

The brothers and their wives all attend the Christian Union Church, and in social circles they rank high. The Doctors are supporters of the Republican party. The senior member of the firm is a Knight Templar Mason and belongs to G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R. of Rockford, while the junior member of the firm belongs to the Blue Lodge. Among their professional brethren they rank high and a well-deserved prosperity is theirs.

EMIL SWENSON occupies the position of Secretary and Treasurer of the Star Furniture Company, and is also a stockholder and one of the Directors. He has made his home in Rockford since 1882, at which time he came with his family to America. He claims Sweden as the land of his nativity, his birth having occurred in Smoland, in 1864. He is the youngest child born unto Swan and Fredica (Olson) Nelson, who, in the year before mentioned, bade good-bye to their old home, and crossed the broad Atlantic, accompanied by all of their children. They came at once to Rockford, and are still residents of this city. With the Swedish Lutheran Church they hold membership, and are worthy and highly respected people. Five of their children are yet living, and all are married, with the exception of our subject.

Mr. Swenson was a young man of sixteen years at the time of his emigration to the United States. His education was acquired in his native land, and has been supplemented by reading and observation, which has made him well informed. By trade he is a cabinet-maker. He became connected with the Co-operative Furniture Company as a stockholder, and was also a worker in the finishingrooms. Subsequently, he became connected with the Star Furniture Company, which was organized in 1890, and is now its efficient Secretary and Treasurer. The factory of this company is located on the corner of Eighteenth Avenue and Fourteenth Street, and therein are employed one hundred and twenty-five men. The success with which the company has already met, argues well for a bright future for this enterprise. It is certainly deserving of success, for its members are wideawake, enterprising and experienced business men, and prosperity should be the reward of their efforts.

In religious belief, Mr. Swenson is a Lutheran, and, in political affairs, is a Republican. He has the confidence and high regard of all with whom he has been brought in contact, and is a prominent and well-known young man. His residence in the city covers only about ten years, but during that time he has made many acquaintances and gained a large circle of friends.

ENRY W. CONKLIN. To have the esteem of one's fellow-men, and especially of those who know you most intimately, is a worthy ambition in the breast of any bonorable man. We may truly say that the gentleman whose name we place at the head of this sketch is well spoken of by all who know him, and he has attained to a broad and true friendship with many. He resides on a good tract of land, located on sections 28 and 20, Rockton Township, Winnebago County, where he has made a success of bee culture, keeping on hand twenty-four hives, from which he has made over $300 a year. He also has on his place about fifteen milch cows, and by his ability and enterprise reaps a good income.

He of whom we write was born in Damascus, Wayne County, Pa., June 24, 1827. He is the son of Benjamin Conklin, whose birth occurred in the above county, August 27, 1783. The grandfather of our subject, John Conklin, was au officer in the Revolutionary War, and after that was made County Judge. He was a man of wealth and influence in his community, owning large farms on the rich bottoms of the Susquelanna River. He was the father of five children who grew to adult age, of whom the father of our subject was the eldest.

The father of our subject was for many years an inn-keeper on the Newburg Turnpike Road, six miles west of Coelecton, and was also a prominent farmer in that region. He lost a portion of his property by going bondsman for a sheriff. His wife, Miss Mercy Comfort, was a native of Orange County, N. Y., and bore him fifteen children, all but one of whom grew to adult age and, with two exceptions, came to the Prairie State. The first to come hither was Eliza, now Mrs. William Thomas. In 1839, our subject, in company with his mother and nine children, came to Winnebago County, starting from home on the 4th of June, and arriving in Rockford July 12. His father having died about three years previously, Henry W, at once secured work to aid in the support of the family and received $12 a month for driving a breaking team.

Mr. Conklin became the proprietor of his first eighty acres of land in Harrison Township in 1854, for which he paid $3 per acre, which property he later lost by a railroad swindle. November 28, 1856, Miss Alvalina Grover, a daughter of John and Sarah (Burbank) Grover, became his wife. Her parents were natives of New York and came West the same year, where they were engaged as farmers. Her father, John Grover, was of German descent. During the late war, our subject endeavored to enlist in the Union army two different times, but was in each case rejected.

In 1865, Mr. and Mrs. Conklin went West to Oregon, where they remained but a twelvemonth, returning by way of the 1sthmus. In crossing the plains to the Western country, they had a very eventful journey, it being the year of the Indian hostilities. A brother of our subject lost two horses on the way, but the party reached their destination unharmed. Returning to Rockton, Mr. Conklin located on one hundred and seventy-nine acres of improved property, which cost $40 an acre, going in debt for all but about $350. In 1883, he erected his fine barn, 40x60 feet in dimensions, and has besides all the sheds and outbuildings which are to be found on first-class estates.

The five children born to our subject and his wife bear the respective names of Dorsey T., Lemi H., James B., Rose E. and Eva E. Mr. and Mrs. Conklin are living a retired life, the home farm being operated by their son James B. The children have all been given good school advantages, Miss Eva having returned recently from the Rockford Academy. Our subject has always been a Republican in politics, but at the present time leans toward Prohibition. Although not a member of any denomination, he gives liberally to the support of all churches and receives and deserves the best wishes and kindest regards of his numerous friends and acquaintances.

RTHUR F. LUNDY, more familiarly known as Frank Lundy, was originally from Canada, born on the 1st of July, 1860, and is one of the wide-awake, thorough-going young tillers of the soil in the county. Although he has not as yet amassed any great amount of wealth, he has the progressive spirit, and the push and energy that cannot fail to bring success in the near future. His father, William N. Lundy, M. D., was born on Grand Island, N. Y., March 4, 1819, and grandfather Lundy was for years a farmer on Grand Island, where he settled at a very early period, while it was still called the Queen's Bush. William N. Lundy first came to Roscoe, Ill., in 1840, when only twenty-one years of age, but he later returned to his native State. When our subject was six years of age, the parents came to Roscoe, where they made a permanent settlement.

Arthur F. Lundy was the only son and youngest child born to his parents, there being eight children in all, and seven of whom were daughters. Those deceased are: Helen E., Mrs. Henry Lampman, who died in Rockton when twenty-four years of age: Dorcas, wife of Edwin Love-see, M. D., who died in Topeka, Kan., aged nineteen years, and Dora Lundy, who died in Roscoe, aged twenty-two years. The living children are: Rozelba A., now Mrs. Charles M. Trimmer, of Owen Township; Mary E., Mrs. John L. Sage, of Williamstown, N. Y.; Anna M., Mrs. Dr. Buckeridge, of Beloit, Wis., and Sarah A., Mrs. F. B. Cummings, of Roscoe.

Our subject left the parental roof when thirteen years of age, and began the battle of life on his own responsibility. He worked by the month on the farm of Phillip Atwood, and received as compensation $12 per month for the first year, or until le broke his arm. The second year he worked for John Atwood, received $16 per month, and, after this, was employed for different farmers, but managed to attend school during the winter months. On the 25th of June, 1881, he was married in Madison, Wis., to Miss Emma E. Grant, a native of Illinois, and the daughter of Thomas W. and Almira (Dawson) Grant, natives, respectively, of New York and Ohio, but who came West to Boone County, Ill., at an early day.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Lundy worked for wages the first summer, and, in December, 1882, went to Kansas, where they bought a farm of eighty acres in Marshall County. Two years later, they sold and subsequently settled in Phillips County, of that State, where they bought a relinquishment of one hundred and sixty acres. This they sold four years later, and they then settled in Almena, Norton County, where Mr. Lundy was engaged in conducting a meat market. He bought a house and some real estate in the city, but only remained here one year, when he emigrated to Missouri, settling twenty miles North of St. Joseph. He rented a small farm and engaged in teaming for one year, when he returned to Roscoe. This was in February, 1890, and here he has made his home since. He rented the A. Collier farm one year, and, in 1891, he rented the L. M. Taft farm of two hundred acres for five years on shares. Mr. and Mrs. Lundy have two sons: J. M., born in Marshall County, Kan., June 7, 1883, and Fred W., born in Phillips County of that State, July 25, 1886. These bright boys are in school. Mr. Lundy has been a Republican, but is not a strict partisan, and will vote with the Prohibitionists. He and Mrs. Lundy are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Roscoe.

TEPHEN BLACHFORD. There is, perhaps, no family in Spring Township, Boone County, which is more highly respected than the one represented at the head of this sketch, and who are pioneers of this section. Our subject, who had his birth in Hampshire, England, August 18, 1813, is the son of Francis and Elizabeth Blachford, also natives of the British Isle. The parents emigrated from their native land in 1834 in the vessel "Crocus," and, after a voyage of six weeks, one of which was spent off the coast of Cape Ray, where the vessel was swamped, they landed in Onebee, There Mr. and Mrs. Blachford lived for four years, and then came to the States by way of the Lakes to Detroit, and from there with teams and on foot to this county, our subject and a brother having to walk the distance of four hundred miles. They arrived in this vicinity nine days ahead of he rest of the family, and when they were all comfortably housed, Stephen and his father hired out to work by the month. He of whom we write, in company with his father, took up a claim of four hundred and twenty acres of land to prove, for which they had to borrow the money and pay an interest of one hundred per cent.

Mr. Blachford of this sketch was one of seven children who came to Boone County with their parents. March 4, 1839, he was married to Maria Bump, who was born in New York, and was a daughter of Thomas and Phœbe (Brewer) Bump, who died in Pennsylvania. She had six brothers and sisters, all of whom are living, with one exception. Mr. and Mrs. Blachford have become the parents of five children, one of whom is deceased. They are named, respectively: Caroline S., now Mrs. F. Curtiss; Louisa, who married Francis H. Curtiss; Thomas, the husband of Anna Lawman;

Maria, now the wife of James Wan. The children are all established in homes in this county.

The father of our subject was eighty-four years of age when he died, and his mother eighty years old. He was a Democrat in politics, and took an active interest in local affairs. Our subject's share of the old homestead consists of one hundred and forty-six acres, which he cultivates in a profitable manner. In an early day, the farm products were marketed in Chicago and Milwaukee, and at one time pork sold at twenty shillings per hundred. The only house in the vicinity of Belvidere, in 1835, was the one erected by our subject and his father, on their farm. The hardships which the family endured during that period are beyond the comprehension of the present generation, but they bravely suffered and endured to pave the way for those who followed, and to make their settlement in the West a pleasure.

ILES S. RAY, of Belvidere, claims New York as the State of his nativity. He was born on the 10th of December, 1806, in Amenia, Dutchess County, and his father, Augustus Ray, was a native of the same town. The grandfather, Stephen Ray, and four brothers came to America from England. He was a farmer by occupation, but spent his last years in Amenia. His wife long survived him, and died in Sharon Valley, Litchfield County, Conn.

The father of our subject was reared upon a farm, and resided in Amenia until 1809, when, with his wife and six children, he became a resident of the town of Thompson. Sullivan County, and was one of its pioneers. He went there as a land agent, and surveyed and sold a portion of seventeen thousand acres. He erected a double log house in the midst of the forest, and built six sawmills in different parts of the tract. He there resided until his death, in March. 1812. He married Accy Crane, a native of Litchfield County, Conn., who died in March, of the same year. They had seven children: William, Theresa, John C., Cornelius and Cornelia, twins, Miles 8. and Emily.

Our subject was only seven years old when his parents died. He found a home with Andrew Comstock, a farmer of Monticello, Sullivan County, with whom he remained until twenty years of age, when he began to learn the carpenter trade, which he followed for ten years. With the money he had earned in that way, he then purchased a farm in the town of Fallsburgh, Sullivan County, and engaged in its operation until 1856, when he came to Illinois and cast in his lot with the early settlers of Boone County. He purchased a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Flora Township, and made it his home for a few years, when he removed to Belvidere, where he is now living retired.

In December, 1835, Mr. Ray was united in marriage with Ellen E. Hardenburgh, who was born in Fallsburgh, in 1812. Her father, Thomas R. Hardenburgh, was a native of New Jersey, and her grandfather, Johannes Hardenburgh, who was a minister of the Dutch Reformed Church, was born in Holland, it is thought. They were the owners of the Hardenburgh Patent, and Thomas inherited four thousand acres of that tract of land, and engaged in farming. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Ray were born seven children: Mary E., now Mrs. B. Arbuckle, Thomas, Henrietta, Sarah, Hylah, Louisa and John. The mother was called to her final rest in 1873. She was a most estimable lady, and many friends mourned her loss.

Mr. Ray east his first Presidential vote for Andrew Jackson, and has since been a stanch advocate of Democratic principles. His life has been well and worthily spent, and by his faithful performance of duty he has won the confidence and high esteem of all with whom he has come in contact.

ELS LARSON, a farmer and dairyman, residing on section 12, New Milford Township, is a representative citizen of Winnebago County, where he has resided for a quarter of a century. He was born in Scorney, Sweden, on the 16th of September, 1841, and is a son of Lars and Ida (Swansen) Olson, natives of Southern Sweden, where they were reared and married. In their native land, they made their home until 1867, when, accompanied by their children, they bade good-bye to Sweden, and crossed the Atlantic to America, landing in New York City. Thence they came Westward, reaching Rockford in June of that year. The parents and children all began life in this country as farming people. The father died in New Milford Township, at the home of his son, our subject, on the 11th of June, 1887, and was then past eighty years of age. He was twice married, and his second wife is yet living with her son, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. They were life-long members of the Lutheran Church, and were worthy, respected people. Our subject has one brother and two half brothers. The former, John Larson, is a resident farmer of Ogle County. The latter are Olof and Peter. The first-named is a shoe-maker and the latter a tailor, and both reside in Rockford.

Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth in the usual manner of farmer lads, and at the age of twenty-six years, accompanied his family on their emigration to the United States. In Rockford, he chose as a companion and helpmate on life's journey. Miss Ida Olson, who was born in Blaken, Sweden, in 1848, and is a daughter of Olfi and Sarah (Manson) Owkinson. The father died on his farm in Sweden at the advanced age of eighty-five years, and his wife passed away at the age of seventy-three. They were farming people, and both were members of the Lutheran Church. Unto our subject and his wife has been born one son, Henry W., a promising young man, yet at home.

After coming to this county, Mr. Larson worked as a farm hand for a time, and then rented land for some time, spending five years upon a rented farm in Jo Daviess County, Ill. He has resided upon his present farm since 1881, where he owns seventy-five acres that pay to him a golden tribute for the care and cultivation he bestows upon t. In connection with general farming, he carries on the dairy business, and is meeting with good success in this undertaking. He is a straightforward, upright business man, whose word is as good as his bond. In politics, he is a Republican. Himself and wife were among the first members of the Emanuel Lutheran Church of Rockford, and are active workers for its interests. They give their support to all worthy enterprises, and well deserve mention among the best citizens of New Milford Township.

RVILLE S. COHOON, a well-known and enterprising farmer of Boone County, residing in Flora Township, section 12, is a native of Pennsylvania, born in Green Township, Eric County, October 29, 1833. His father, John Cohoon, was born in the town of Milo, Yates County, N. Y., March 20, 1812, and passed the first eight years of his life in his father's home on the banks of Seneca Lake, whence he removed with his parents to Eric County, Pa.

The paternal grandparents of our subject, Steward and Charity (Culver) Cohoon, were natives respectively of Connecticut and England. The grandfather moved from his birthplace to the State of New York at an early day and was an officer in the War of 1812. He married Miss Charity Culver for his second wife and in March, 1820, removed from Yates County, N. Y., with ox-teams and sleds, and settled with his large family in Eric County, Pa., becoming one of the pioneers of the highlands and dense forests of that county. He remained there until his death, which occurred at Gospel Hill about 1840. His wife died in Columbia County, Wis., January 10, 1855, at the advanced age of eighty-seven. The paternal great-grandfather of our subject, Nathaniel Cohoon, was born in Connecticut, and tradition says that his parents were Hollanders. He died and was buried in Mill Creek Township, Erie County, Pa., in January, 1827.

John Cohoon, father of our subject, was married February 10, 1831, to Miss Fanny Wait, and their three children are all living at this date (1892): Orville S., Justina M., and Arlington R. Mrs. Fanny Cohoon was born July 26, 1806, and died October 2, 1876. She was a faithful, devoted wife and a true and loving mother. Her family and domestic cares were the pleasure of her life and she won the regard of all whom she met. Her life was that of a practical Christian and during her more than seventy years of life she never attended a theatre or circus.

The first-born of the family is the subject of this sketch, who is only a little more than twentyone years younger than his father. His early education was acquired under some difficulties, for in those early days the enforcement of the Schoolrate Bill threw the payment of the teacher's salary almost entirely upon the man who had a large family. He remembers the scenes of pioneer life and the hardships of existence amid primitive surroundings. Twenty-five cents postage was charged on letters, which were folded instead of being placed in envelopes. At the age of eighteen, he taught one term of school in Erie County, Pa., and then in 1852, with his father, removed to Porter County, Ind., where he resided one year and taught school one term.

June 17, 1853, Mr. Cohoon arrived in Belvidere, Boone County, Ill., and embarked in business as a merchant, continuing thus engaged for about two years. In the summer of 1855, he engaged in the carpenter's and builder's work, during which time he erected several houses in South Belvidere. He built the first house, with the exception of one building known as the old Otis Caswell farm house, and one car shanty standing on the present site of the South Baptist Church, east of Pcarl Street and south of Logan Avenue, and which was located on the corner of Whitney and Second Streets. In the spring of 1856, he took a course in Bacon's Mercantile College at Madison, Wis., which was among the pioneer business institutions in the country. During the remainder of that year, he was engaged in closing up a large amount of property interests for his father.

The marriage of Orville S. Cohoon, March 16, 1857, united him with Miss Juliett R. Wooster, of Beloit, Wis., and the young couple located on the farm he now owns and occupies on the 8th of April following. Mrs. Juliett Cohoon died April 4, 1864, and was buried at Beloit, Wis. Our subject continued thereafter in agricultural pursuits, which had previously occupied his attention, and followed literally the injunction given by Solomon that after you have taken hold of the plow "never look back." He divided and subdivided his farm into fields of convenient size, suitable for the pasturage of stock and the raising of grain, and also aided in opening roads and building bridges and embellished his farm with substantial barns and a neat residence, and notably with trees and shrubbery.

In all his labors our subject has received the efticient aid of his devoted wife, to whom he was married January 26, 1865. She was formerly Miss Anna H. Field, of Whitmore Lake, Mich., and was born at Niagara Falls, N. Y., October 9, 1829. Having no children of their own, they have reared two children, a boy and a girl, who are now married and have families of their own. Their farm and home is their paradise, and they have ever retained their faith in the great Master Spirit of the Universe as the Master of the situation, in whose hands they rest their ease with perfect assurance that after the acts of this life have been played, the next will be on a grander scale, filled with opportunities that all may reach, and that on the shores of eternity there will be no friction of mind and heart, but all will be peace and happiness forever more.

NDES F. ENGSTROM, agent for the C. W. Prescott Nursery, of Marengo, Ill., and gardener of Rockford, has resided on a small but very productive farm near the city limits for the past seven years. He makes a specialty of small fruits and vegetables, and is well paid for his time and trouble.

Previous to coming to Rockford, Mr. Engstrom had been a resident of Malta, De Kalb Connty, Ill., and was a maker and dealer in boots and shoes. He came to this country in 1857, resided for a short time in Geneva, this State, and then for twenty-eight years was a resident of Malta. In 1884, he came to Rockford, where he has carried on a successful business ever since.

He was born in Jonkoping, Sweden, August 17, 1832, and in connection with agricultural pursuits.

with which he became familiar in his youth, he was taught the shoe-maker's trade. He took passage for America, and, after five weeks and two days, or on the 10th of October, 1857, he landed in Boston, Mass. From there he came to Geneva, Ill. He was the first of his family to touch American soil. Since then, he has been joined by a sister, Mrs. P. A. Peterson, who resides at No. 1106 Second Avenue, Rockford, and whose husband is foreman of the West End Furniture Company.

The parents of our subject passed their entire days in Sweden, the father, Isaac Gustavson, laving died when forty-six years of age, and the mother, Anna E. Engstron, when considerably younger. The father was a shoemaker and farmer, and was twice married, his first wife being the mother of our subject. The second wife is also deceased.

Andes F. Engstrom joined the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church the first week after coming here, and has been Deacon in the same for the past twenty years, and Trustee for many years. He holds membership at De Kalb, Ill., and is an active worker in the church. While at Malta, he was a member of the Town Board for two terms, also a member of the School Board as Director for years, and has held other local positions. He has ever been a sound Republican in politics, and is a strong advocate of the principles of that party.

Miss Wilhelmena C. Swasen, whom our subject married in Malta, Ill., was originally from Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, born in 1842, and came with her family to the United States in May, 1852. The family first settled in Chicago, but moved from there to Geneva three years later, and thence to Malta, after a residence of about the same length of time. There as a family they resided for some time. Her parents, J. George and Mary (Johnson) Swasen, now reside near their daughter, Mrs. Engstrom, of this notice. They were both natives of Wester Gothland, Sweden, and the father followed the trade of a shoemaker nearly all his life, Life-long members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, they are well respected, and although seventy-seven and eighty-one years of age, respectively, both enjoy comparatively good health. The father is a Republican in politics. Of the six children born to this much-esteemed couple, only Mrs. Engstrom is now living. A brother, Dr. Alfred, a promising young physician of Chicago, died when twenty-nine years of age. The others were John, Josephine, Mary and Joseph, all of whom died when under ten years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Engstrom are the happy parents of five interesting children: Anna M., wife of Oscar Hall, who is a member of the firm of Engstrom & Hall, merchants, at No. 324 State Street, Rockford; Theodore V., a partner of Mr. Hall, married Miss Florence Beatty, a daughter of Rev. Robert Beatty, of Rockford; Lillian C., at home; Alfred A., studying law at the Northwestern University at Chicago; Ebenezer W., at home, attending High School. All are intelligent, bright children.

ORACE O. SEARS has witnessed the great change wrought by the hand of man in bringing Boone County from a state of nature to its present condition as one of the richest and most highly-developed counties in Northern Illinois. He is at present residing on section 36, Bonus Township, and may well take pride in what he has done to aid in producing this wonderful result. He is what may be termed a self-made man, loved and respected by all who know him.

Born in Bristol, Ontario County, N. Y., October 1, 1819, our subject is a son of Alden and Delaney (Vincent) Sears, the former of whom was born in Dighton, Mass., in 1770, and died in the abovenamed town and county in New York, February 28, 1829. The mother was a native of Rhode Island, and passed away in Bonus Township, this county, August 27, 1841. The first ancestor of our subject who came to the United States in 1639, bore the given name of Richard, and spelled his name Saers. The mother of our subject came to Boone County in company with her seven sons and three daughters, all of whom are deceased with the exception of our subject, who was the youngest in the family. On coming hither, they stopped for four months at Lockport, this State, and on making settlement in Boone County, bought claims, aggregating over one thousand acres, on four hundred acres of which our subject resides. The brothers commenced industriously the work of clearing the new farm and erecting thereon the finest set of buildings in the county. It has since been divided, however, each of the sons being the owner of a fine estate.

Horace O. Sears remained at home with his mother until her decease, when, May 12, 1842, he was married to Harriet A. Ames, whose birth occurred April 9, 1820, in Colchester, Chittenden County, Vt. Mrs. Sears was the daughter of William and Polly Ames, also natives of the Green Mountain State, who emigrated to this county as early as 1834, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mrs. Sears had twelve brothers and sisters, only six of whom are living.

Mrs. Harriet A. Sears departed this life at her home December 6, 1877, having become the mother of four children, viz.: Henry O., who was born March 22, 1843, died when fourteen years of age; Edward C., born March 29, 1845, married Miss Jennie McGlashen, and is the father of a son and daughter; Charles A., born November 27, 1846, married Miss Belle Sisson, and is the father of one child; Theron M., born April 7, 1849, married Sarah Culbertson, and is the father of nine children.

He of whom we write has been the incumbent of various positions of honor and trust, having held the office of Supervisor for the past four years. He is a Republican of the strongest type, having voted for William Henry Harrison, and his grandson. He is an active and earnest worker in the Congregational Church, as was also his wife, which denomination they joined soon after its organization in this part of the county. He has worked his way up to a position of competence, all through his own efforts, he having been well-equipped for the struggle, with energy, determination and a good capacity for skillful labor, besides being a man of steady habits, thorough conscientiousness and unswerving integrity. He is now spending the evening of his life in quiet retirement, surrounded by the comforts which are the result of his toil in former years.

A more loving and kind father, estimable neighbor and honorable man than Horace O. Sears is not to be found within the confines of Boone County. His great misfortune was the loss of his noble and true wife who has preceded him to the land beyond, her death having occurred December 6, 1877.

HARLES E. HALLOCK, President of the village of Pecatonica, has for a number of years been prominently identified with its business and political affairs, and is the proprietor of a large furniture establishment. He occupies a leading position in his line of trade and maintains a high reputation for uprightness, commercial enterprise and progress, while his success makes more prominent every year the honorable policy for which the establishment is conspicuous.

The father of our subject, Reuben Hallock, was born near Albany, N. Y., May 20, 1804, and came West to Illinois in 1836, the journey being made on the Eric Canal to Buffalo, thence by the Lakes to Chicago, and thence with cattle to Ogle County, where he entered land from the Government and engaged in its cultivation until 1872. He was united in marriage with Miss Harriet A. Sperry, who was born January 1, 1814, in New York, and they became the parents of ten children, five of whom are still living.

In 1872, Reuben Hallock traded his Ogle County property for land in Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, which is now owned by our subject and comprises one hundred and forty acres. At the home which he there established the father died at the age of seventy-seven. He was a man of the utmost probity, firm in his convictions and a stanch adherent to the principles of equity and justice. In his politics, he was first an old-line Whig and afterward voted the Republican ticket until Gen. Hancock was nominated for the Presidency, at which time he supported that famous general. His wife survived him until 1890, when she passed away at the home of our subject, aged seventy-six.

Charles E. Hallock was born in Byron Township, Ogle County, Ill., July 31, 1856, and is of Scotch descent. He remained at home until his father's death, after which he bought out the interest of the other heirs in order to gain possession of the old homestead. The farm with all the stock thereon was willed to Charles E., the youngest son, but he was to pay the other children a stipulated sum, which is now paid. His marriage, May 23, 1882, united him with Miss Ella R. Ryan, who was born in Pecatonica, Ill., January 5, 1861, the daughter of Stephen and Catherine Ryan, residents of Rockford. One child has been born of the union, Stephen C., who was born March 6, 1891.

After his marriage, our subject remained on the old homestead until August 1, 1886, when he was appointed Postmaster of Pecatonica, and removed to the village, where he has since resided. He served efficiently as Postmaster during the administration of President Cleveland, meanwhile also carrying on his furniture business. He holds an interest in the shoc factory at Pecatonica, and is a stockholder in the Rockford Daily Star. His wife is a member of the Catholic Church and he is liberal in his religious views. Socially, he is identified with Eureka Camp No. 50, M. W. A.

ALTER TRUMBULL. This ge , who is one of the influential citizens of Rockford, was born across the ocean in Roxburghshire, Scotland, his natal day being May 22, 1815. His parents were Walter and Ellen (Oliver) Trumbull, also natives of Scotland, where they passed the remainder of their days. They reared a family of six children, of whom our subject was the only one that settled in America.

Walter Trumbull was reared in his native land and resided under the parental roof until reaching his eighteenth year, at which time he came to America in company with a neighboring family, setting sail from Liverpool and landing on the shores of the New World thirty-nine days later. He located in Delaware County, N. Y., and there learned the trade of a carpenter. In 1838, he went South to Georgia, and in Augusta followed the trade of a millwright during the summer months and spent the winter season in the mountains. Five years later, he returned to the Empire State and with the exception of visiting the South two or three times was a continuous resident there until 1855, which was the date of his advent into Rockford, when he purchased the home which he has since occupied. His residence is pleasantly located on the southeast corner of State and Fifth Streets, and the family of Mr. Trumbull ranks among the best residents of the city.

The original of this sketch was actively engaged as contractor and builder until 1889, since which time he has lived in retirement, enjoying the results of his early toil. In 1846, he was married to Elizabeth A. Chase, who was born in Delaware County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Edward B. and Julia (Goodrich) Chase. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Trumbull, Walter Chase, was a native of New England, and a prominent citizen of Delaware County, where he was elected its first Sheriff. To our subject and his estimable wife have been born three children: Charles, deceased; Frank E. and Carrie E. The son married Julia Shedd, and Carrie is now Mrs. George L. Brown and the mother of two children, Arthur T. and Frank II. Mr. and Mrs. Trumbull are active members of the Westminister Presbyterian Church, and in politics, our subject, though formerly a Whig, now votes the Republican party.

AVID PERRY, retired, owns a comfortable home at No. 1013 Charles Street, Rockford, also a fine double flat on Eighth Street, and is one of the city's prosperous citizens. He was originally from New York, his birth occurring in Cayuga County, of that State, in 1825, and he became familiar with the duties of the farm at an early age. He is a son of Ozias Perry, and the grandson of Ozias Perry, Sr., the latter a native of the Green Mountain State, and for seven years a soldier in the Revolutionary War.

Mr. Perry married a Vermont lady, Miss Esther Marvin, of an old New England family, and after the birth of several of their children, the family emigrated to Cayuga County, N. Y., where they arrived at a very early period. They opened up a farm in the wilds of that county, and there passed the closing scenes of their lives, both dying when about eighty years of age. They were life-long members of the Presbyterian Church. Their son, Ozias Perry, Jr., was one of cleven children, all now deceased, and was but a boy when his parents emigrated from Vermont to New York State. He grew to manhood in Cayuga County, and was there united in marriage to Miss Eliza Merchant, a native of New York State, and of Dutch descent.

After marriage, Ozias Perry, Jr., and his wife resided in Cayuga County until all their children were born, and then, in 1849, the family came to Illinois, settling in Cherry Valley. They opened a new faum, made many improvements on it, and there the parents passed the closing scenes of their lives, the mother dying on the 11th of April, 1876, when sixty-nine years of age, and the father in 1890, when eighty-nine years of age. The latter was a Universalist in his belief, and both were worthy people. Of the five children born to them all are living, and all are married and have families. Two sons reside on farms in Iowa, and two daughters are living in Belvidere, Ill.

David Perry, our subject, was the eldest of this family, and reached his twenty-first year in his native county. Two years after his parents had settled in Winnebago County, he followed them, and was married in Boone County of that State, to Miss Charity Van Alstine, a native of Montgomery County, N. Y., born January 7, 1832, and the daughter of John N. and Jemima (Tymeson) Van Alstine, natives also of the Empire State, and of Dutch stock. Her parents passed their entire lives in Montgomery County, and the old home is still in the hands of the family. They were members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Van Alstine was the son of Rev. Patriot Nicholas Van Alstine. The former had one son, Cornelius Van Alstine, who served in the United States Navy as Lieutenant Commander, and was on a coasting vessel. He was a West Point graduate, and served his country with great bravery, winning many laurels for his courage and gallant conduct. Another son, Deloss Van Alstine, was also in the Civil War, enlisting in the Ninety-second Illinois Infantry, and serving in many of the prominent engagements. Mrs. Perry, wife of our subject, is the youngest but one of the four children now living.

After his marriage, Mr. Perry began farming in Cherry Valley, and by his industry and good management, soon became the owner of much valuable property. He owns two hundred and eighty acres in the valley, all well improved with two sets of buildings, and he also owns six hundred and forty acres of fine land in Pocahontas County, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Perry are the parents of two children: Ciark married Miss Alice Lamb, and now resides on the farm in lowa; he has five children: Ella M., David R., Jessie M., Ethel and Frank. The other child, a daughter, Ella F., married L. Keith, and they have one child, Flora June; they reside in Rockford. Mr. and Mrs. Perry are members of the Christian Union Church, and Mr. Perry is a Republiean in politics.

HARLES W. HIZER, a retired farmer residing in Rockford, and one of the early settlers of the county, was born in Oneida County, N. Y., on the 13th of October, 1830, and is one of five children whose parents were Adam and Lucy (Shepard) Hizer, both of whom were natives of the Empire State. The paternal grandfather of our subject, Henry Ilizer, was a shoemaker by trade, but during the greater part of his life followed farming in Herkimer County, where he died at the age of sixty years. The parents of our subject emigrated to Illinois, locating in Winnebago County, where they resided for many years. The father died in Ogle County, at an advanced age, and the mother, who survived him twelve years, died in New Milford Township, this county, when about eighty years of age. They were adherents of the Methodist Church, and were highly-respected people. All of their children are yet living and have married.

Charles W. Hizer, whose name heads this record, was reared upon his father's farm, and resided in the Empire State until emigrating to Illinois some thirty-five years ago. He was married in Lewis County, N. Y., the lady of his choice being Miss Mary Starkweather, a native of Lewis County, and a daughter of Palmer and Anna Starkweather, who were born, reared and married in New York. Mrs. Hizer's parents came to Illinois and lived with their daughter, Mrs. Ilizer. The father died while visiting in his native State, and the mother passed away at the home of her daughter, in this county.

On coming to Illinois, Mr. Hizer located upon a farm in Burritt Township, Winnebago County, where he improved and developed eighty acres of land. He afterward removed with his family to Rockford Township, and the farm which he purchased is still in his possession. It is a one hundred and thirty-acre tract of valuable land under a high state of cultivation, and well supplied with good buildings. In addition to this, he also owns fifty acres near the city. He was an enterprising and successful farmer, and in the pursuit of his business, acquired a valuable property, which now enables him to live a retired life. After many years devoted to agriculture, he came to Rockford about seven years ago, and has since rested in the enjoyment of the fruits of his former toil. In polities, he is independent, voting for the man whom he thinks best qualified to fill the office, regardless of party affiliations.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hizer have been born six children, four of whom are yet living: Willard S., a successful florist and botanist, is now carrying on a greenhouse; Celia, Eusebia and Charles are still at home; Fred and Sarah are deceased. The family is one well known in this community, and worthy of the high regard in which it is held.

AVID ANDREW, a retired farmer, living at his pleasant and beautiful home at No. 803 North Court Street, Rockford, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, July 2, 1837, and was the second in order of birth in a family of eleven children. He is of pure Scotch origin. His father, John Andrew, was born in Argyleshire and there wedded Miss Mary Brown, who came of a good Scotch family. After the birth of three of their children, they joined a number of families who were emigrating to America. They sailed from Greenwich in 1840, and after six weeks landed at New York, whence they went by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and came overland to Winnebago County, where John Andrew began life upon a new farm, which is still the home of his family. He was then in limited circumstances, but through his own efforts became well-to-do. In those early days, however, he had to bear many hardships and privations incident to proneer life. He hauled many a load of grain to Chicago, which was then the nearest market of any importance. His death occurred at the age of fifty-one years. His wife is yet living at the advanced age of fourscore years, and is well preserved both mentally She makes her home with her and physically. youngest son, Thomas. Like her husband, she has been a life-long member of the Presbyterian Church. Of the children, one died at the age of eighteen years, but the other ten are still living and have all married.

Mr. Andrew, of this sketch, was brought to Illinois when only three years of age, and upon his father's farm in Harlem Township, he was reared to manhood in the usual manner of farmer lads. After attaining to mature years, he chose as a companion and helpmate on life's journey Miss Lizzie Brown, their union being celebrated in Hamilton County, near Cincinnati, Ohio. The lady was born in that locality of Scotch parentage, being a daughter of Alex and Margaret (Brown) Brown, natives of Scotland. Her parents were married in that country and immediately afterward crossed the Atlantie, settling near Cincinnati, where Mr. Brown followed farming until his death, at the age of eighty-one. His wife now lives with a son and daughter, and is eighty-three years of age.

Mrs. Andrew was educated at Cellege Hill, Ohio, and is a cultured and most estimable lady. By her marriage she became the mother of two children, but John, the only son, died at the age of seven years. The daughter, Maggie B., is still at home. As before stated, they reside at No. 803 North Court Street. The Andrew household is the abode of hospitality, and its members rank high in social circles. The parents and their daughter are members of the Presbyterian Church of this city.

When Mr. Andrew entered upon his business career, he located at Argyle Station, where for twenty-five years he carried on business as a dealer in grain, lumber, and coal. His surplus earnings he has invested in real estate and now owns some good property in Boone County, also in Rockford. He was very successful in his undertakings, and as the result of his enterprise met with a well-deserved prosperity. He was recognized as one of the leading citizens of his township, prominent in all public affairs, and a leader among his fellow-countrymen. Since the month of November, 1888, he has lived a retired life in Rockford.

RANK A. FISCHER, who from early life has made his own way in the world, and by his own efforts acquired a handsome property, has, since 1886, dealt in wines and liquors at Nos. 103 and 105 East State Street, his establishment being one of the finest of the kind in the eity. His life record is as follows: He was born in Saxony, Germany, July 15, 1848, and comes of a wealthy and prominent family. His father and grandfather, both of whom bore the name of William, were successful and extensive lumbermen. further mention of them being made in the sketch of Berhard Fischer, on another page of this work. In the family were six brothers, all of whom grew to manhood and became wealthy. One died very recently in New York, leaving a large estate.

Frank obtained a good education in his native land, and at the age of fourteen began clerking in a hardware house. Four years later he sailed for America, taking passage at Hamburg, and at length landed in New York. It was in 1867 that he arrived in Rockford, where he has since made his home, and been actively engaged in business, a part of the time as a partner of his brother. Not only is he a dealer in wines and liquors, but he is also a stockholder in the Merchants' and Manufacturers' National Bank, and owns an interest in the Electric Manufacturing Company, of Rockford. He possesses good business ability, is enterprising and industrious, and by his untiring efforts has accumulated considerable property.

In Rockford, Mr. Fischer led to the marriage altar Miss Minnie Strese, who was born in Jefferson City, Wis., and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Strese, both natives of Germany. A short time after their marriage they emigrated to this country, locating in Jefferson City, where they are now living. The daughter was there reared and educated, remaining at home until her marriage. She is one of a family of six children. After their marriage, Mr. Fischer brought his wife to Rockford, and they hold a prominent position among the people of his nationality in this city, having a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Fischer takes quite an active part in social affairs, especially with the Germania Society, of which he is an influential and leading member. He has also taken considerable interest in political affairs, but is connected with no party, voting for the man, regardless of party affiliations.

EV. GARRET R. VANHORNE, D. D., the presiding elder of Dixon District, was born in Franklin Township, Bergen County, N. J., June 30, 1841. His father, John Vanhorne, was a native of the same county and township, and the grandfather, Barney Vanhorne, was also born there, and was of early Dutch ancestry. He was a farmer, and spent his entire life in his native town. He was a member of the Dutch Reformed Church, and reared his children in the same faith.

The father of our subject was reared upon a farm, and learned the trade of a tanner, following that for a time, but finally bought a farm in the township of Franklin, N. J., and after that earried on farming until a few years before his death, when he retired from active life, and spent his last days in the city of Paterson, N. J., where he breathed his last October 19, 1891. The father of our subject married Martha Terhune, who was a native of Franklin, N. J., and was born May 25, 1822, living until June 11, 1881. The parents of our subject both joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in early life, and the father served as Steward, Trustee and Class-Leader; also as Superintendent of the Sunday-school. The children who are still living are Cornelius, Catherine, our subject, Sarah, Albert and Rachel. One child, John, died at the age of three years.

Our subject received his early education in the public schools of the town of Franklin, and at the age of sixteen began to learn the trade of a bricklayer, serving three years thereat, and then left his trade, and in the fall of 1859 entered Garrett Biblical Institute, at Evanston, III., and remained there until August, 1861. This young man, like thousands of others, threw down his books at the call of his country, and took up a musket. He enlisted in Taylor's Battery of Light Artillery, of Chicago, being the first student to enlist from his school. He was in the battle of Frederickstown, Mo., and later fought at Belmont, the first battle in which Grant was commander. Receiving a wound there, he was sent to the hospital at Cairo; typhoid fever afterward set in, and he was for eighty-two days under the surgeon's care, and finally received his honorable discharge on account of physical disability, by order of Gen. Halleck, and went home to New Jersey.

After fully recuperating, Mr. Vanhorne joined the Newark Conference, and officiated as a minister of the Gospel until the fall of 1861, when, his health again failing, he returned to Illinois in the fall of 1865, when he joined the Rock River Conference. He has been a member of that organization ever since, and has preached at the following places: Oregon, Minooka, Plainfield, Rochelle, De-Kalb, Dixon, on Michigan Avenue, Chicago, and in Rockford. While in charge of the church in the latter-named city, our subject was instrumental in erecting the present handsome edifice. After serving as pastor of the Centennial Church of Rockford for three years, he was appointed the Presiding Elder of the Rockford District, and served in that eapacity for five years, when he was appointed Presiding Elder of the Dixon District, and is the incumbent of that position at the present time, serving his third year.

Miss Jennie A. Munroe became the wife of our subject in 1865. She was born in Brownville, Jefferson County, N. Y., October 18, 1847, and is a daughter of George Munroe. Her father, who was born in Lanark, Scotland, was the son of Daniel and Jane Munroe, also natives of that country. They came to the United States in an early day, and located in Watertown, N. Y., where the grandmother died. Mr. Daniel Munroe came West to this State in 1849, making a location in Will County, where he purchased a farm near Wilmington, and made that place his home the remainder of his life. The father of Mrs. Vanhorne was very young when accompanying his parents to America. He was married in the Empire State to Sarah, daughter of Henry and Charity Henze, natives of New York, and of German descent.

George Munroe, the father of Mrs. Vanhorne, continued to reside in New York until 1849, at which time he came to the Prairie State, and purchased a farm near Florence, Will County. There he followed his trade of moulder for two winters. and then farmed until November, 1861, when he was elected Sheriff of the county, serving his full term. Removing to Joliet, he opened up in the grocery business, doing a large retail trade, and later took in as partner his son George, the firm name being George Munroe & Son. In addition to the grocery business, Mr. Munroe operated extensively in real estate, which business netted him a fine income. He was very prominent in his locality, and departed this life September 5, 1890, In politics, he was in early life a Democrat, but on the organization of the Republican party, joined its ranks. He served in the responsible position of Treasurer of Will County. He was widely and favorably known throughout the community, where he was held in high esteem.

Mr. and Mrs. Vanhorne have become the parents of three children. Eva M., Jennie and George. The elder daughter became the wife of Osear J. Wigell. He of whom we write east his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, since which time he has voted the Republican ticket. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by McKendry College, of Illinois, in 1888.

The Rev. Garret R. Vanhorne was elected and served as reserve delegate to the general Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1888. When Dr. Vincent was elected Bishop, he was appointed to fill that vacancy in the conference. In social matters, he is a Master Mason, and is connected with the Royal Arch Masons at Oregon. He is also a member of Sycamore Commandery, and of the Forest City Lodge No. 12, A. O. I'. W. He is a Grand Army man, and holds membership with Nevins Post No. 1. He is Chaplain of the Third Regiment, Illinois National Guards, and is the second oldest chaplain in the State.

DMUND SNOWDON. A pleasantly located and fertile tract of land on section 15, Burritt Township. Winnebago County, is owned and occupied by the subject of this sketch, who is now giving his attention to its cultivation. Born April 30, 1836, in Yorkshire, England, he is a son of Daniel and Ann (Gambel) Snowdon, also natives of the above-named county, where they spent their entire lives as farmers.

Edmund Snowdon was the only member of the parental family to come to America, prior to which time he received a limited education in his native country. He commenced to work out at the age of nine years, and in 1855 sailed from Liverpool in the vessel "Webster," landing at New York after a voyage of six weeks. Going at once to Fulton County, N. Y., Mr. Snowdon was employed on a farm there for a year, and then came to Winnebago County, where he was engaged to work on a farm in Harlem Township, for three years. Desiring to see something of the far West, he went to California, via the Isthmus of Panama, and worked on a ranch for the three succeeding years, and on returning to York State was engaged as a farm hand for another twelvemonth. Finally, making a permanent location in Winnebago County, Mr. Snowdon bought a farm, upon which he is residing at the present time, and which then contained eighty acres, since which time, however, he has added ninety acres adjoining, all of which is pleasantly located on the Trask Bridge Road.

The lady to whom our subject was married, April 3, 1865, was Miss Pathenia Sophia Fell, and to them have been granted three children: Belle  $\Lambda_{}$

Cora L. and Millie G. Mrs. Snowdon was born in Cheshire, England, where her father, William Fell, was born September 6, 1806. Her grandparents, William and Sophia Hartley Fell, spent their entire lives in that shire. William Fell learned the trade of a hand-weaver, at which he worked until ten years of age, when he entered the cotton mills in Cheshire, and worked until 1843. Then, with his wife and three children, he crossed the ocean to America in the sailing-vessel "Patrick Henry," landing at Castle Garden after a voyage of thirty days. Going immediately to Rhode Island, Mr. Fell made that State his home for three years, and then came to Winnebago County, which was at that time very sparsely settled. He located in Durand Township, purchasing a tract of forty acres, upon which he erected a log house, and commenced at once to improve the farm. He erected good buildings on the place, and there resided until 1890, when he removed to the home of our subject and his wife. The maiden name of Mrs. Fell was Sarah Barningham, a native of Yorkshire, England, who died on the home farm in 1868.

A career honorable alike to himself and to the community in which he resides, Mr. Snowdon has shown those valuable traits of character without which success is unattainable.

OBERT BAUCH is Superintendent, Director and stockholder of the Desk and Furniture Company of Rockford, which business is located on North Second Street, at what is commonly known as Knightville, where it was established in 1889. Since that time, Mr. Bauch has held the above-mentioned positions, and through his able management the business has been productive of the best results. He was formerly Superintendent of the Rockford Cabinet Company, of which he was the founder, and which was established in 1886. He has now under him about one hundred men, and the success of the business is characterized by his push and energy, and good judgment and executive ability. He is an old, tried and practical workman, and has been actively engaged in business for the past twenty-five years. He was for some time employed as a practical workman and mechanic with the large furniture factory of A. D. Seam & Co. (now the Cream City Furniture Company), of Milwaukee, Wis., and it was while in that city that he learned his trade. Since that time, he has given his best efforts to his business, and with substantial results. He invested his money and takes a deep interest in the Skandia Furniture Company, also the Diamond Furniture Company, and is a Director and stockholder in both, besides holding his present position with the Desk and Furniture Company, to which he gives his personal supervision. His whole energy and time are devoted to the furniture business, and he keeps well posted in all matters relating to the same.

Mr. Bauch comes of Teutonic stock, but was born, however, in Milwaukee, Wis., in 1854. He was there reared and educated, receiving a practical training in the city schools; he was naturally a practical mechanic and designer, and had also a wonderful command of languages, speaking English, German and Swedish, besides understanding others. This is of great importance in his business, and renders his services of much value.

He was the eldest of eight children, five sons and three daughters, born to Gotlieb G. and Paulina (Falke) Bauch, natives of Germany. The father was reared in his native country, and there learned the weaver's trade. Soon after his marriage, he came to the United States and first located in Milwaukee, where they had some trouble in making a living, but after a time he began at his trade, and possessing much natural ability, soon came to the front. He became Superintendent and Manager for Niedner & Co., extensive weavers for many years in the Cream City, and after continuing with them for some time, he began business on his own account. During the Civil War, he served with a Wisconsin regiment, and was in many prominent engagements, receiving a wound in one of them that rendered him a cripple for life. Subsequently, Mr. Bauch took up a soldier's claim at Butternut Creek, Wis., and there passed the closing scenes of his life. He had been a sufferer from la grippe, and after recovering somewhat, although still very weak, took a drive behind a spirited young team, that finally got beyond his control; the carriage was upset, and he so seriously injured, that he died in March, 1889, when about seventy-three years of age. He came of a long-lived stock, and his father, who died about six years ago, was nearly one hundred years old. The mother of our subject is still living, and makes her home with a son, Oscar, a dry-goods merchant of Milwankee. She is now, March 13, 1892, fifty-eight years of age. She is a member of the German Lutheran Church, and her husband was also connected with that church. Of the children born to their marriage, all are living, and four are married.

Robert Bauch, of this notice, is the only one residing in Rockford. He was married in Rockton, Ill., to Miss Flora E. Springer, a native of Maine, born July 25, 1854, and the daughter of George W. and Rosanna (Guptill) Springer, both of German nativity. The father was a shoemaker by trade, who is now deceased, his death having occurred in Rockton in 1887. His widow is still living, resides at Beloit, Wis., and is seventy-six years of age. Of the eight children born to this worthy couple, Mrs. Bauch was the youngest in order of birth. One son, George Springer, was a soldier in the Union army, and was killed while defending the Stars and Stripes.

Mr. Bauch and his wife are both working members of the First Congregational Church of Rockford. Their union has been blessed by the birth of three children, two of whom are living: Robert G. and P. A. Florence died in infancy. In politics, Mr. Bauch is a strict Republican.

ARL O. ASPROOTII, baker and confectioner, of Rockford, Ill. One of the salient features of the business men in the cities of Illinois is their energy and push, or, as the Americans put it, "go-aheaditiveness." Rockford is no exception in this respect, but affords a striking example of the truth of the assertion, and Mr. Carl O. Asprooth furnishes us with a striking case in point. He owns a fine business building at No.

106 Kishwaukee Street, the same being 22x80 feet, with a basement, storerooms, and two thats above, the whole of his building being the north half of Union Block.

Mr. Asprooth, like many of the representative business men of Rockford, is of foreign birth, and first saw the light of day in Jonkoping, Sweden, December 15, 1846. He learned his trade in his native country, and when about twenty years of age, came to the United States. His father, Daniel Asprooth, died in his native country in 1891, when seventy-four years of age. He was a Lieutenant in the regular army of Sweden, and was a pensioner for twenty years before his death. He was a prominent man. His father was a native of Finland, and a Finland soldier. After the war with Russia, the latter came into Sweden, where he became a Swedish soldier, and where he died. The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Hedwig Rosenquist, is still living in Sweden, and although seventy-six years of age, is quite active and spry. She and her husband were members of the State Church of Sweden all their lives.

Carl O. Asprooth was the third in order of birth of nine sons born to his parents, six of whom are yet living. Two are in Sweden: Rev. Conrad L., a Lutheran minister, married, and Martin, a railroad station agent, at Franas, that country. He is also married. The other brothers are in this country. Daniel B. works for our subject; Otto William is now residing in the northern part of California, and is a wood-dealer, and Frithof is a letter-earrier of Rockford. The latter married Miss Emma Bowman. Carl O. came to Rockford in 1867, and followed the baker's trade for different individuals until 1874, when he branched out in business on his own account, on East State Street, continuing there until recently, when he came to his present commodious quarters. This building was built especially for his purpose, and is complete in every department. The stock is complete in every detail, and of the best quality, which in no small measure is due his extended trade. He is a stockholder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, the Rockford Baking Company, and is interested in other local matters.

Mr. Asprooth was married, in this city, to Miss

Selma Ekblad, a native of Wester Gothland, Sweden, born in 1854. She came with her sisters to the United States in 1869, and has since resided in Rockford. Her father died in Sweden a number of years ago, and after his death his widow came to the States. She is now a resident of Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. and Mrs. Asprooth had born to their union seven children: Ellen H., Fred T., Segred L., Eksell, Oscar, John, and Mabel.

out Northern Illinois as one of the prominent horse-dealers, has invested much money in imported equines, and a lover of horse-tlesh would be pleased with the line animals to be seen on his place. He is ranked among the wealthy citizens of Winnebago County, and is at present residing in Durand, where he is held in excellent repute.

A native of this county, our subject was born in Pecatonica Township, October 24, 1855, and is the son of Henry J. and Calista C. (Walker) Randall. His early life was passed on a farm, and his education was obtained in the schools of Durand and Rockford, he having been a resident of the former place since seventeen years of age. The father of our subject was a dealer in horses, which, before the days of railroads, he drove to California, and had the honor of shipping the first car-load of horses over the Union Pacific Railway.

William II. Randall was thirteen years of age when his father sent him alone to California in charge of two car-loads of horses, which business, he has been engaged in since sixteen years of age. In 1875, he formed a partnership with Herbert L. Norton, with whom he is still associated. The firm purchases horses in various parts of Illinois and Iowa, and for the last four seasons have bought many horses in the St. Louis market, Their principal shipments have been to the Dakotas, where they have established an enviable reputation, and are doing a large and lucrative business, Mr. Randall being engaged in buying, and his partner in selling, the animals. They own some fourteen hundred acres of land in Dakota, and for five years, carried on a banking business at Hamilton, N. Dak., at which place they also own a hotel and livery. Messrs. Randall and Norton have a one-third interest in the town site of Hamilton, which has a most desirable location, and have aided materially in its upbuilding. The firm are the proprietors of a stock ranch on Mouse River, North Dakota, and are largely interested in race, running, and trotting horses, owning "Wanderoo," a famous running horse.

The original of this sketch, in 1887, was married to Miss Mary, daughter of Judge E. G. Allen, of Sterling, this State. Mrs. Randall was born in that place in 1865, and by her union with our subject, has become the mother of one son, Edgar, who was born in November, 1888. In social matters, our subject is an Odd Fellow, being identified with both the Subordinate Lodge and Encampment. In addition to the numerous interests in which he is engaged, he has in his possession a large stock farm, near Durand. He is a man who has made his way in the world, has large experience in his branch of work, and is far-seeing and prudent in the management of his affairs. To-day, he is considered one of the most successful and wealthy horsemen in this part of the State, and we predict that in the near future he is destined to reach even a higher round in the ladder of fame as a horse-breeder.

Mr. Randall is President of the Durand Driving Park Association. They have one of the best halfmile tracks in the State.

UTNAM B. DICKERMAN, a well-known farmer of New Milford Township, Winnebago County, residing on section 15, first opened his eyes to the light of day in Jewett, Greene County, N. Y., July 7, 1840. Ilis parents, Joel and Eunice (Bailey) Dickerman, were also natives of the same county. His grandfather, Joel Dickerman, Sr., was born in Connecticut, and died at the age of eighty years, leaving two sons and two daughters: Amelia, wife of Lucius Pond; Joel, father of our subject; Worcester A. and Catherine, widow of Addison Ramsey, deceased.

The grandmother died at the home of our subject, September 6, 1866, at the age of eighty-one years.

Putnam Dickerman acquired a good English education, and between the ages of eighteen and twenty-one years, engaged in teaching in the winter season, and in farming through the summer, but on the 1st of August, 1862, he left the plow and enlisted in the One Hundred and Twentieth New York Infantry. He participated in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg, where two-thirds of his company were killed, while after the battle but three responded to the rollcall. He took part in thirteen engagements altogether, including, besides those mentioned, the battle of Mine Run, the battle of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Strawberry Plains and Boydton. The engagement there was short but serious. The troops were once in great danger of being captured, but under cover of night succeeded in making their escape. Mr. Dickerman was sent by his Colonel to the hospital, on account of ill health, and returned home in February, 1865. He rejoined his regiment in April, but soon afterward Lee surrendered, and he was mustered out at Kingston on the 8th of June. He went into the service as Fifth Sergeant and came out as Second Lieutenant. He was ever a faithful soldier, always at his post of duty, and may well be proud of his army record.

Mr. Dickerman was married in Jewett, N. Y., Sepember 12, 1865, to Emily F. Peck, of that city, daughter of Munson and Mary Peck, both natives of Jewett. Both her paternal and maternal grandparents were from Connecticut. The Peck family were farming people, and were Presbyterians in religious belief. Her father died in Massachusetts in December, 1883, at the age of sixty-two. Her mother is still living at the age of seventy. Their only son, Alfred, died in January, 1871, at the age of twenty-three years. The two daughters are Emily, and Martha, wife of William Hasty, of Berkshire County, Mass.

The wedding tour of Mr. and Mrs. Dickerman was their journey to Rockford, Ill. In the autumn, they settled upon a farm of three hundred and forty-eight acres, which he and his father had purchased at $30 per acre. Since that time, he has made about $2,000 worth of improvements on the buildings, until now his barns and other outbuildings are models of convenience. He also raises a good grade of stock, and the farm seems complete in all its appointments. The home is a pleasant residence and is surrounded by well-tilled fields, which yield a golden tribute to the owner. He has given almost his entire time and attention to his business, yet has served as School Director and Path Master, and is Steward in the New Milford Methodist Church, in which he is an active member.

Mr. and Mrs. Dickerman have lost one son, Frank, who died at the age of fifteen months. Three children are yet living: Alfred, who was educated in Rockford and Beloit, and is a resident farmer of this community, wedded Fannie Holdridge, of New Milford; Mary has been a student in the Rockford Academy; and Burton, who is now eighteen years of age, is a student in the Rockford High School, from which he expects to graduate.

INER W. HAYWARD. In Winnebago County are to be found several farmers who have reached a high degree of prosperity by the persistent pursuit of a chosen calling, and the exercise of prudence and foresight in the conduct of their affairs. Among these none deserve the notice of the biographical writer more than the gentleman with whose name we open this paragraph. He is at present occupying a fine farm of one hundred and twenty acres. lying on section 3, Roscoe Township, where he devotes the greater portion of his time and attention to the growing of cereals, which, when marketed, bring him in handsome returns. He also keeps ten or twelve milch cows on his place, and sends the milk to a creamery in the vicinity.

A native of Vermont, our subject was born January 27, 1849, in Weybridge, and was a son of Edwin and Lucy A. (Warner) Hayward. Miner W. was the fifth child and third son in the parental family, his brothers and sisters bearing the respective names of Azel D., Hattie F., Laura A..

Levi G. and Susie M. The father of our subject departed this life in Vermont, and the mother, who is still surviving, came West with her children in 1855, and resides with her daughter in Chieago.

Miner W. Hayward and Miss Luey W., daughter of Benjamin F. and Hannah (Warner) Wooster, were united in marriage January 2, 1884. Her parents were natives of Vermont, where they spent their last days on their own farm, the father dying in March, 1884, when sixty-nine years of age, and the mother dying on March 1, 1887, when in her seventy-third year. Mrs. Wooster was the mother of two children by a former marriage, the eldest of whom, Warner, died in his second year; Leva, now Mrs. C. H. Richmond, is residing at Jay, Essex County, N. Y. By her union with Mr. Wooster have been born Jay W., who is a farmer at Whiting, Vt.; Frank H., also residing in that place, and Luey W., now Mrs. Hayward.

To our subject and his wife have been born two daughters and one son, viz.: Olive M., who was born November 1, 1886; Charles P., who was born April 18, 1888, and Marion M., who was born February 18, 1890. They hold membership in the Congregational Church, and in politics our subject is a stanch Republican. Mrs. Hayward is a very intelligent and cultured lady, and is a graduate of the State Normal School at Castleton, Vt.

As before stated, our subject has an excellent farm, which he is managing with good financial success, at the same time doing what he can to promote the highest interests of his adopted township, and as a practical farmer is contributing to its material prosperity.

AVID MITCHELL. Among the many progressive and prosperous citizens of Winnebago County, none is more deserving of representation in this volume than the gentleman above named, who makes his home in Pecatonica village. He was born in Genesee County, N. Y., in December, 1819, being a son of David, Sr., and Polly (Wooster) Mitchell, both of whom were natives of the Green Mountain State,

The father died in Stephenson County, at the age of seventy-four, while the mother died in this county at the age of eighty-four years. The entire Mitchell family, as far as is known, were natives of Vermont.

David, of this sketch, was a lad of twelve years when he left home and began to battle with life on his own account. June 11, 1846, he was united in marriage to Martha A., daughter of John and Maria Smith, a sketch of whom will be found in the biography of G. W. Smith on another page of this volume. Our subject was residing in Ohio at the time of his marriage, and in the fall of 1851 came with his wife to Stephenson County, this State, where he bought a tract of three hundred and twenty acres of land, which cost him $275.50 with a soldier's warrant. He made fine improvements on his estate, upon which he resided for twenty-one years, and in 1880 selling a portion of it, removed to Pecatonica, where he is the owner of considerable real estate. He still has in his possession one hundred and fifty agree of his farm property.

The five children born to Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell are Marietta E., who was born in Seneca County, Ohio, March 1, 1848, is married, and has five children; John P., also born in the above-named county, December 25, 1850, is married, and is the father of one child; Fannie F. is Mrs. Charles Comly, and was born in Stephenson County, June 8, 1857; Nellie A. and Wallace E., born in Stephenson County, the former September 26, 1865, and the latter February 13, 1869, are both married.

He of whom we write purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land in Iowa, which he deeded to one of his sons. He has given his children good educations, two of them having taught school for several terms. Mr. Mitchell for the past thirteen years has dealt extensively in blooded horses of the Hambletonian breed, one of which he has sold for $500.

The grandparents of Mrs. Mitchell on her mother's side were Gilbert F. and Ohve (Griswold) Ferris, the former of whom was born May 12, 1779, and the latter February 6, the same year. They were married March 16, 1798, the grandfather dying

January 15, 1834, when eighty-four years of age. He participated in the War of 1812, as did also the father of Mr. Mitchell, the latter of whom was a pensioner of the Government.

SAAC D. MILLER. We herewith present the sketch of a prominent and retired farmer, whose home is in the city of Belvidere. He is a native of Burlington, Bradford County, Pa., and was born December 26, 1827. He is a son of Isaac and Beulah (Morley) Miller, the father born in Bennington, Vt., where he was a farmer. He was very prominent in local affairs, and served in the responsible position of Justice of the Peace, and after coming to Boone County in 1842, was Supervisor for seven years.

On locating in the Prairie State, the elder Mr. Miller bought three hundred and twenty acres of land, for which he paid $4 per acre, and a part of which is the present property of our subject. The father erected all the necessary buildings on the farm and removed to Belvidere in 1865, where he resided until his death, April 14th, 1868, when seventy-five years of age. His wife, who is a native of Connecticut, departed this life on the home farm November 29, 1863, when in her sixty-sixth year. She was the daughter of Isaac and Benlah Morley, whose demise occurred in Pennsylvania, the former having been a soldier in the Revolutionary War.

Isaac D. Miller remained at home until his marriage, January 1, 1852, at which time Miss Caroline Akin, who was born in Crawford County, Pa., November 5, 1833, became his wife. Mrs. Miller is the daughter of Andrew and Marian (Graves) Akin. Her father was born at Mt. Upton, Chenango County, N. Y., March 8, 1810, and spent his boyhood days in his father's home. He attended school regularly until old and strong enough to work on the farm, after which his attendance was limited to the winter seasons. Like many other farmer boys he "mowed and hoed and held the plow and longed for one-and-twenty." The winter previous to his seventeenth birthday, he taught a large district school, in which at least one-third of the pupils were older than himself, but notwithstanding that fact, the youthful teacher succeeded in giving satisfaction to the patrons of the school. His salary was $12 per month, and he boarded around among the people. He continued to work on the farm during the summer and teach in winter until he was of age.

At Erie, Pa., October 11, 1832, Mr. Akin was married to Marian, the youngest of nine children born to Deacon Amos Graves and his wife. After his marriage, Mr. Akin's first undertaking was building a grist and saw mill in Sparta, in the adjoining county of Crawford, Pa. The country was new and sparsely settled, and the mills proving an unprofitable investment, he sold his interest and began the study of law. After practicing the profession about one year, he was compelled to abandon it on account of inflammation of the eyes.

Having concluded to come West, Mr. Akin, accompanied by his family and father and mother, removed to Belvidere, Ill., where he rented a new house just built by Alex Neely, across the street from the old "Towner Hotel." The following spring he rented a farm on Bonus Prairie, known as the Keith farm, and during that year raised one thousand five hundred bushels of corn, which he tried to dispose of, but failed to obtain an offer on it even at twelve and one-half cents per bushel. so he abandoned it to the rats. Later, Mr. Akin removed to Pigeon Woods, Kane County, where he remained two years, engaged in farming pursuits and serving as Justice of the Peace. Thence he removed to Elgin, where he engaged in the grocery business with success until his store was burglarized by a band of Mormons, who escaped with his most valuable goods.

In January, 1852, Mr. Akin removed to Chicago, and while there acted in the capacity of Justice of the Peace and Police Justice. When the Legislature changed the name of the latter office to that of Police Magistrate, and made it subject to election by the people, he was continued in the position for seven years in succession. Having been admitted to the Bar, he entered the practice of law in partnership with Hon Solon O. Thacher (now of Lawrence, Kan.), and continued in practice for one year. Later, with J. P. Mather, he concluded to erect a saw and grist mill in Council Grove, Kan. Accordingly, he bought machinery for both mills, and sent his son, C. G., to Kansas to commence the work of building. The mills were completed in 1862, and two years later Mr. Akin removed his family to the Grove. Disposing of his interest in the mills in 1864, he engaged in farming for a time, and afterward, with his sons, C. G. and Henry C., entered into the mercantile business at the Grove. They were very successful for two years, until the Union Pacific Railroad was finished to a point a few miles north of the Grove, which ruined the trade.

Removing to Wilson County, Kan., Mr. Akin erected a steam saw mill and a water power gristmill, and about the time they were finished he was appointed Registrar of the United States Land Office at Augusta, Kan. His next removal was to Chanute, Kan., where he bought a large steam grist mill and ran it for a year and a half. Again selling out, he returned to Chicago and purchased a flouring mill situated at Homewood, in Cook County, but when repairs had been completed and business commenced, his youngest son, Charles M., who was associated with him, was instantly killed as he was getting off the car at Homewood. Shortly afterward, Mr. Akin disposed of the business and returned to the city.

In July, 1879, Mr. Akin left Chicago and went to Sioux City, Iowa, where his son Henry C. was residing and in business. Hoping to benefit his health, he traveled extensively by steamboat up the Missouri and Yellowstone Rivers, and returning to Sioux City, spent two years there. On account of failing health, he came to Belvidere to live with his daughter, Mrs. Isaac D. Miller, with whom he made his home for nine years. He is now (1892) residing with his son H.C., at Omaha. His wife, who was born at Sherburne, N. Y., July 27, 1812, departed this life at Guilford, Kan., when sixty-two years old, and was buried in Topeka, that Their children were as follows: Carlos G., deceased; Eugene L., formerly of Kansas, now deeeased; Henry C., of Omaha, Neb.; Charles M., deceased; Caroline Miller, of Belvidere; Harriet Marvin, of Chicago; and Emma C. Singleton, of Fredonia, Kan. In politics, Mr. Akin was first a Whig, and when that party dissolved became a Republican, which party he still supports.

To our subject and his wife the following three children have been born: Lillie, Mrs. Charles Agor, is the mother of two children, one of whom is deceased; Ida married William Bowley, and Nellie became the wife of Melvin Dorn, a prominent merchant of Belvidere, and she and her husband reside with her parents at Belvidere. Mr. Miller fived upon the old homestead until 1891, when he purchased property in the village, and is now enjoying the results of his industry and perseverance. He and his wife are prominently identified with the Baptist Church. Socially, he is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M., and Kishwaukee Chapter No. 90, R. A. M. In 1852, he built the Little Thunder Mills, doing all of the mechanical work himself, and operated the same for a period of thirty-two years with marked success. Under the old process his mill stood at the head, having taken the premium on flour at the Boone County Fair three times in succession, in competition with the mills of this county.

ON. DAVID HUNTER, a well-known and popular farmer of Guilford Township, Winnebago County, residing on section 15, was born in Perry, Wyoming County, N. Y., January 15, 1836. His father, James Hunter, was born six miles from Belfast, Ireland, and was of Scotch descent. When a young man, he came to America, and resided in Oswego, N. Y., whence he removed to Perry, Wyoming County. He learned the trade of hand-weaving in his native land, and in Perry followed that occupation. In 1844, he came to Illinois, accompanied by his wife and five children, and settled in Guilford Township, upon the farm which is now the home of our subject, He developed a good farm, and here made his home until his death, which occurred in 1869. His wife bore the maiden name of Ann Aikens. She was also a native of the Emerald Isle, and when young came to this country, settling in Canada, whence she removed to New York. After her husband's death, she resided in Rockford, until called to her final rest December 31, 1891. She was of a charitable disposition and possessed a kindly Christian character, and those who knew her best loved her most. She took a deep interest in public affairs, especially those calculated to upbuild humanity, and was a consistent member of the First Congregational Church. She reared the following children: David, of this sketch; Belle, who is Principal of the Ellis School of Rockford; Mary J., a teacher in the public schools of St. Louis; Dr. Sarah, of St. Louis; and Benjamin, a prominent farmer near that city.

Our subject was eight years old, when, with his parents, he came to Illinois. His educational advantages were limited, being those of the common schools, and he was reared amid the wild scenes of frontier life. He remained under the parental roof until May, 1864, when he enlisted in Company C, Fifteenth Illinois Infantry. He served three years, participating in all the engagements of the regiment, and was discharged in May, 1864, on the expiration of his term of enlistment. He then spent a few weeks at home, after which he accepted a position in the Quartermaster's Department at Nashville, serving in that capacity until July, 1865, when he returned to the North and resumed farming on the old homestead.

In 1872, Mr. Hunter was united in marriage with Sarah L. Gunsolus, who was born in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, and is a daughter of James S. and Sophia Gunsolus, pioneers of this community. Their union has been blessed with the following children: Benjamin, Joseph, Robert, Annie, Mary, Edith, Gertrude and Harriet.

Mr. Hunter cast his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln and has since been a stalwart supporter of Republican principles. He has filled various offices of trust with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. In 1884, he was elected a representative from this district, and was one of the hundred and three who voted for John A. Logan for United States Senator. So well did he fill the office that at the expiration of his term he was re-elected, and once more, in 1890, he was the people's choice, and is the present representative of his district. This third election shows his popularity, and the trust reposed in him by his fellow-citizens. Socially, he is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and also belongs to Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M. In addition to his farming interests, he is a Director of the Third National Bank. A pleasant, genial gentleman, he is highly esteemed, and has many warm friends throughout the community.

MOMAS BROWN, deceased, was born in Campbellton, Scotland, February 28, 1807, and died on his farm in Caledonia Township, Boone County, October 4, 1889, respected by all who knew him. In his native land he remained until twenty-five years of age, when he crossed the broad Atlantic, and joined his brothers and sisters who had previously come to this country, and located near Cincinnati, Ohio. He there made his home for fourteen years, after which he came to Illinois, and purchased an unbroken tract of land in Caledonia Township, Boone County, where he began the development of a farm. He then returned to Ohio for his parents, who had also located in this country, and the family finally became residents of Boone County, where the father and mother of our subject spent their last days. The former, however, died just three weeks after reaching his new home. His wife survived him some years, and died at an advanced age in Boone County. They were active members of the Presbyterian Church, and highly respected people. They had quite a large family.

After coming to Illinois, Thomas Brown met and married Miss Margaret Ralston, their wedding being celebrated in Harlem Township, Winnebago County. She was born in Massachusetts, September 11, 1834, and is a daughter of William and Ella (Greenlee) Ralston, natives of Scotland. After the birth of four of their children, they emigrated to America in 1834, crossing the Atlantic in a sailing-vessel. After some time spent in Massachusetts, they removed to Hamilton County, Ohno, and in 1848 came to Illinois, where he purchased a tract of wild land in Harlem Township, making it a fine farm, upon which he and his wife spent their remaining days. His death occurred in 1870, at the age of seventy-six years, and Mrs. Ralston died four years later, at the age of sixty-seven. They led busy and useful lives, and when quite young, united with the Presbyterian Church. They became prominent workers of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, which they helped to organize. Their family numbered three sons and six daughters, of whom two sons and three daughters are yet living.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown were quite prominent people of Boone County, and he was very successful in his business affairs, but afterward lost a great many thousand dollars in a bank failure of Rockford. This materially diminished his fortune, yet he left a considerable property to his widow. In politics, he was a Democrat, and was honored with most of the township offices. He was an earnest worker and faithful member of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, which he served as Elder, and Mrs. Brown is a faithful member of the same congregation. Since her husband's death, Mrs. Brown has come to Rockford and built a fine home at No. 603 North First Street, where she is now living quietly. This worthy couple reared two adopted children: Edward Blowers, who married Mary Bamasqua, and is now carrying on a cheese factory in Capron, Boone County; and Eliza Blowers, now the wife of Henry Farmers, a machinist residing in Belvidere, Ill.

ENRY MILLER, now deceased, is numbered among the early settlers of Rockford, and well deserves representation in this volume.

A native of Cayuga County, N. Y., he was born at Union Springs, in 1814, and came of an old family of that State. His parents were well-to-do people, of German lineage, who lived and died on a farm in the county of his nativity.

In the usual manner of farmer lads, our subject was reared to manhood, and in Cayuga County he resided until his emigration to Illinois in 1856. For a time after locating in Rockford, he carried on a grocery store and eating house, then gave up the latter, and devoted his entire attention to the grocery business, in which he met with signal success, acquiring a large property. Later in life, he sold out his store and invested his money in read estate, and in the banking business. He was a sagacious and far-sighted business man, industrious and enterprising, and by the exercise of these characteristics, won prosperity, leaving at his death a large property to his widow.

Mr. Miller was married in Auburn, N. Y., to Miss Susan B. Rude, who was born in that city in 1820, and there spent the days of her maidenhood with her parents, Amos and Phoebe (Bayles) Rude, the former a native of New York, and the latter of New Jersey. They both came of wealthy and highly respected families. After their marriage, they resided in the Empire State, and Mr. Rude died in Auburn, at the age of seventy-two years. He had been connected with various enterprises, and was quite a prominent politician, a stanch advocate of the Democracy. He was a man quite liberal in thought, and of decided opinion when once his mind was made up concerning any question. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Rude came West, and died three years later at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Miller, in Rockford, at the age of seventy-five years. In religious belief, she was a Methodist.

Under the guidance of her parents, Mrs. Miller was reared, becoming an intelligent and cultured haly. She possesses good executive and business ability, and since her husband's death has managed all his affairs. She is a member of the Christian Union Church, and a liberal thinker on religious questions. She has the warm esteem of many friends, and the respect of all who know her.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Miller were born three children, all now deceased. William II., born in 1840, was the founder of the Keokuk Business College, a very successful institution. His death occurred December 26, 1881, in Keokuk, Iowa. His wife, whose maiden name was Minnie Gilbert, died just exactly four years before her husband, leaving three children: Frank, who resides with his grandmother, and is employed in the Winnebago National Bank, of Rockford; Sarah, wife of James Joslyn, Assistant Cashier of the Rockford National Bank, and Harry, now learning the machinist trade with the John Barnes Manufacturing Company. Sarah E., the second child in the Miller family, became the wife of Horace A. Towne, and died in Hannibal, Mo., January 12, 1870. Her husband resides in Minneapolis, Minn., and is ex-Superintendent of the Northern Pacific Railroad. May C., the youngest of the family, was the wife of James T. Joslyn, and died in Greeley, Colo., October 26, 1889, leaving two sons, Burtis T. and Fred M.

Mr. Miller, whose name heads this record, took quite a prominent part in public affairs, and was a worthy citizen. In politics, he was a Republican, and was a member of the Christian Union Church. After a well and worthily spent life of over three-score years and ten, he passed away at his home at No. 306 North Main Street, on the 13th of November, 1884.

OHN SEAL. We find our subject supplied with all the comforts, and many of the luxuries of life which are the result of the habits of thrift and industry to which he was trained from boyhood, and which have followed him through his latter years. He was engaged in farming until 1882, since which time he has resided in Rockford.

A native of Hunterdon County, N. J., our subject, who is the son of Robert and Sarah (Force) Seal, was born December 31, 1824. His parents were also natives of New Jersey, and being in limited circumstances, John was compelled to earn his own living when quite young, engaging to work on a farm when eleven years of age. At the end of nine months, he made a contract to remain a year longer, and was to receive $3 per month for the entire period. At the expiration of that time, he entered the employ of Peter Yawger, a farmer, and remained with him until reaching his majority.

After his marriage, the original of this sketch commenced life on a rented farm at Round Valley, N. J., whence a year later he removed to Charleston, same State, and lived on rented property for the five succeeding years. Mr. Seal then bought that farm, and was engaged in its cultivation until 1855, when he disposed of it, and, coming to this county, purchased a partially-improved tract of one hundred and twenty acres in Winnebago Township. Upon this farm he made his home nutil coming to Rockford, as before stated, in 1882. In the meantime, he added to his purchase, planted fruit, shade and ornamental trees, and erected a good set of frame buildings.

Mr. Seal, of this sketch, was married October 31, 1846, to Miss Jane Belles, a native of Warren County, N. J., who departed this life in 1849. Our subject was again married in November of that year, to Elizabeth Creager, who was born in the State and county of his nativity, and was the daughter of George and Charity Creager. Mr. Seal is the father of two children by his first marriage: Sarah, the wife of Joseph Mitchell, of Lyon County, Minn., is the mother of five children, viz: Lizzie, Nellie, Lydia, Agnes and Belle. The son, Peter, married Amanda Phelps, and has two children, Sarah and Camilla. Mrs. Mitchell's daughter Lizzie is now the wife of George Pervis, and is the mother of a daughter, Ada.

GDEN HANCE. This highly-respected citizen of Pecatonica enjoys the distinction of having been the first white child born in Winnebago County, his birth having occurred October 21, 1836, in Pecatonica Township. His early home was in one of the first log cabins erected in this portion of Illinois, whither his father, Thomas Hance, had removed in 1834. He is therefore well known throughout the county, and his life has been characterized by such honor and uprightness as to secure for him a high place in the regard of his fellowmen.

The paternal grandfather of our subject, Adam Hance, resided in the vicinity of Sandusky, Ohio, where he reared his eleven children. In his family was a son Thomas, who, seeking a new home in the great West, visited Northern Illinois, in the fall of 1833, and was so delighted with the splendid soil and pleasant climate that he determined to make it his permanent home. Accordingly, he went back to the Buckeye State for his wife and child, and with them he returned in 1834 and settled in Pecatonica Township, where he entered a tract of land from the Government and spent his remaining years. He departed this life at Pecatonica, July 13, 1886. His wife, whose maiden name was Phobe DeWitt, was a native of Ohio, where she was married in 1831; she survived her husband several years, passing away July 19, 1889.

The family of which our subject is a member comprised seven children, six of whom still survive. They were reared in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which their parents belonged. The sons were early initiated to hard work, aiding their father in his labor of clearing and cultivating the farm. Those early years witnessed many hardships, for upon making settlement here Mr. Hance was so poor that he could not pay for his claim until he had earned money by plowing furrows around different claims, to thus gain a start for himself. A few years before his demise, he retired from active labor, and surrounded by the love and tender care of his children, and in the enjoyment of the competency which his arduous labors had accumulated, he passed the twilight of his life. Politically, he was a Democrat, and served as Supervisor and Assessor for twenty years.

The lady who, August 17, 1862, became the wife of Ogden Hance, the ceremony being performed by Judge Miller, at Rockford, was known in maidenhood as Amanda V. Armstrong and was born in Washington, Richland County, Ohio, September 29, 1839. Her grandparents, William and Elizabeth (Kennie) Armstrong, were residents of Ohio until their death. Her parents, James and Catharine (Shoup) Armstrong, removed from Ohio to Stephenson County, this State, in 1841, and entered land from the Government. Twenty-five years after making settlement there, they moved to Iowa, where they died, the father, May 24, 1884, aged seventy-seven years, three months and one day, and the mother, October 4, 1872, aged fifty-four years, four months and thirteen days. They were the parents of eleven children, seven of whom are still living. Mr. Armstrong served as Justice of the Peace for a period of more than twenty-five years, and was the first school teacher, and also taught the first singing school at Rock Run, this State.

Mr. and Mrs. Hance are active in charitable works, and she is especially interested in the W. C. T. U., of which she is a member. They have two children, Edgar L. and Myrta F. The former was born August 26, 1863, and was graduated, June 16, 1886, from the Chicago Union Law School. He now resides in Chicago, where he has been practicing his profession for five years in the office of Kerr & Barr. Myrta F., born in Pecatonica Township, May 5, 1868, married S. B. Niles, October 15, 1885, and has one daughter, Rue V., who was born May 29, 1887.

OHN STEVES, who has been a resident of Winnebago County since 1846, is at present residing in Durand and was born May 19, 1820, in Montgomery County, N. Y. He is a son of Jacob and Mary (Young) Steves, also natives of the Empire State, while his greatgrandfather, Jeremiah Steves, hailed from England, coming to America in the Colonial times and locating at Sing Sing, N. Y. He reared a large family of children, a number of his sons being soldiers in the Revolutionary War.

John Steves, the grandfather of our subject, was born at Sing Sing, N. Y., and when attaining mature years married Margaret Miller. They resided in Montgomery County, whither he had removed when a young man. In early life, he followed the trade of a cooper, but in 1830, removing to Onondaga County, began farming and died in his eightyfourth year. He was the father of one son and three daughters, viz: Margaret, who married Abram Vosburg; Mary, the wife of Henry Voorhees; Eliza, who died unmarried, and Jacob, who was born in 1799, in Montgomery County, N. Y.

The father of our subject was reared on the home farm and in after life was more than ordinarily successful in agricultural pursuits. He was married in his native county, whence he removed to Onondaga County in the spring of 1824. There he made his home until his removal to Illinois in 1857, and on coming directly to Durand Township purchased property, to the operations of which he gave his personal superintendence. After making his home here for some ten or twelve years, the elder Mr. Steves removed to Vinton, Benton County, Iowa, where his demise occurred when in his eighty-fifth year; he was followed to the better land by his good wife, who died a year later.

John Steves of this sketch had two brothers and three sisters, namely: Sarah Ann, Catherine, Mary, Fletcher and Dempster. He was four years of age when his parents removed to Onondaga County, N. Y., where his early years were passed on the farm. Although the schoolhouse was a long distance from his home, he attended as regularly as he could, and when fourteen years of age entered a boarding-school, where he prosecuted his studies for a few winters.

The lady to whom our subject was married in 1843 bore the name of Julia A. Paddock, and was a native of Western New York. Three years later, the young couple emigrated to the Prairie State and made their home upon land which Mr. Steves purchased near the city of Rockford. He was the owner of a large foundry and machine shops in that city, which branch of business he managed in a most successful and profitable manner. In 1849, the family came to Durand, where our subject purchased a gristmill, the only one of that kind in the place and which is still in his possession. Although having quite a little sum of money when he came to Illinois, by paying strict attention to his milling operations he has acquired a handsome competenev.

To Mr. and Mrs. Steves have been born four sons and four daughters: Cynthia J., the widow of Lieut. Caperon, makes her home in this place; Mary E., Mrs. Henry Burrell, lives in Freeport; Julia E., who married Fred Miller, is a resident of Woodward, Iowa; Sarah Grace, at present Mrs. Will Bear, makes her home at Hot Springs, S. Dak.; Jacob E., who enlisted in the late war, died at White Station, near Memphis, Tenn., while in the service; John H., a resident of St. Helena, Cal., is conducting a successful business as a hardware merchant and plumber; Nathan P., who is a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, resides in Wisconsin, and Charles S., who died in 1888, at the age of twenty-eight years, at Langdon, N. Dak.

The original of this sketch has been an active worker and student all his life and is the author of several articles which have been published. From about the year 1880, his attention has been attracted to the social, industrial and governmental problems, on which subjects he has since studied and written. In 1840, our subject, though not of age, was in sympathy with the Whig party. Four years later, he voted for James G. Birney, the Abolition candidate, and on the organization of the Republican party was an active worker in its ranks until 1880, since which time he has ceased to support political parties. His parents were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with which denomination several of his children are also conneeted.

As before stated, Mr. Steves still owns his mill, in addition to which he has a small farm near the village and a large stone store building in that place. In 1862, he went to Wisconsin and while there a mob gathered to discipline a man who was considered disloyal. Our subject talked to the people in the victim's behalf, when the mob immediately surrounded him and demanded that he should take the oath of allegiance. He had no objection to taking the oath, but did not deem it necessary, as he was a loyal citizen of the State of Illinois, and disputed their jurisdiction. The mob then rode him on a rail, and later, to vindicate himself, he had twelve of the men arrested and after a trial in the United States Court was awarded a verdict of $5,000.

Mr. Steves has thought and written in relation to certain problems involving human welfare, in which he has challenged the truthfulness of traditional theology; he also has questioned the economy and the validity of current governments, and has arrived at definite conclusions regarding the cause and the remedy for the social ills so generally prevailing.

To make mention of some of the causes more nearly fundamental, he would group with hereditary sovereignty all official sovereignty, including the legislative, the judicial, the financial or capitalistic, as responsible for the administration of the public order, or disorder, as such sovereignty inevitably involves the elements of human slavery, by the grant of special privileges and franchises to certain persons, corporations and classes, thus creating and imposing inequitable and grievous disabilities and burdens upon the disfranchised, practically and in substance alienating personal rights, in sheer violation of the doctrine of the Declaration of American Independence.

From the foregoing noted principle of governmental sovereignty as parental, there proceeds monopoly—as of lands and other facilities, and powers of extortionate taxation as tribute to the favored, as involved in general trade and commerce. He charges that our system of exchange, as commercial and as competitive in proceeding by personal contract, is emphatically a false system, in which it is impossible to trace or to execute or conform to a line of equity, or to maintain justice. Under it life becomes a system of special opportunity and of chance, ignoring merit—personal success, so-called, depending frequently upon personal cunning and moral recklessness.

As contributive to the errors already noted and specified, a most potent factor is money as a medium of exchange, its use in a manner hiding or tending to obscure the correct basis of valuation as pertains to personal service and to property, hence, perforce, comes personal failure, poverty, crime and misery. We give the following as Mr. Steves' remedy for injustice and public misgovernment:

Let sovereignty be recognized as inherent in the individual citizen, connecting therewith the obligation of individual, personal self-support. Let society, that is the law of association, be and become a mutuality, a conference, a division of labor as a productive service; that is, a co-operation upon a basis of strict equity, holding the land and nature's resources entirely as a common heritage, as a birthright, a life right in a title inalienable. Let the social law pertain only to practical production and industry, discarding entirely all dictatorial proclamations, decrees and statutes, except such as are related to industry and which are of mutual benefit and universal necessity. Let the titleship of the land, the capital stock, the tools, the fixed and surplus properties, be and remain in the people collectively as one association—to be called, if you so please, "The State." Let all productive service be nominally chargeable to the State under such equitable and economical adjustments as to be in fact substantially a personal self-service, the principle of self-support and of reciprocity to be maintained by such methods as even to embrace the support and education of the children and youth, the care of the sick and aged. In the system Mr. Steves proposes, individual income in the law of distribution is made to depend upon productive service, say nominally to the State, rendered upon a time basis, and the amount of such service, after an exacted minimum to cover, to balance and to answer to benefits received in a personal consumption due to health and civilization, to be entirely optional or subject to individual personal election.

A system of government so radically unlike any now existing or those of the past, is worthy to be distinguished and known by a representative and a characteristic name, and as such, Mr. Steves suggests the term *Ochlowracy*, by Webster defined "a government by the multitude," qualified as a pure democracy, in a personal self-government. A government organized to protect the citizen in his rights, in his liberty, upon a basis of simplicity, of morality, of economy, of humanity, aimed and adapted to the development of the physical, the intellectual and the moral nature and needs of mankind.

citizen of Belvidere, is a native of Portland, Me. He was born October 23, 1827, and is one of ei.ht children, whose parents were Charles and Ann (Hager) Jackson. The father was born in North Yarmouth, Mass., October 10, 1779, was reared in his native State, and learned the trade of paper-maker. After his marriage, he settled in Portland, Me., and at one time owned two ships. He resided in Portland nntil 1838, when he emigrated to Illinois, accompanied by his wife, and entered a tract of Government land in Marengo Township, McHenry County, upon which he built a substantial log house, 18x24 feet, and two stories in height, one of the best homes in this section of the country at that time. He continued to reside upon that farm until his death, in 1873. His wife passed away the year previous. Their children were Charles, Hiram, Cranston, Nathan, William, James, Amos and Thomas. Cranston was the first of the family to come to Illinois, whither he emigrated immediately after leaving college in 1837. He located in what is now Boone County, and was followed by all of his brothers, who settled in Boone or McHenry Counties.

It was about 1840 when Thomas Jackson came to Illinois, in company with his brother Nathan. At that time, this region was very sparsely settled, much of the land was still owned by the Government, and deer roamed at will over the prairies. There were no railroads, and the farm products were hauled to Chicago. There was no mill nearer than Pecatonica, and it required two days to make the trip to and from that place. Our subject remained with his parents until their deaths, and continued to reside on the old homestead until 1883, when he went to Humboldt County, Iowa, where he purchased a farm, and made his home for one year. On selling out, he returned to the old homestead in Marengo Township, and engaged in its cultivation until 1891. He owned one hundred and twenty acres of fine land, under a high state of cultivation, and well improved with good buildings and the other accessories of a model farm.

On the 16th of May, 1850, Mr. Jackson led to the marriage altar, Miss Sarah A. Brush, who was born in Truxton, Cortland County, N. Y., October 14, 1830. Her father, Joseph Brush, was a native of Danbury, Conn., and the grandfather, Richard Brush, spent his entire life in the Nutmeg State. The father learned the trade of shoemaker, and followed it for a time, but spent his leisure hours in studying. When a young man, he went to New York City, where he studied law in the same class with Martin Van Buren, and then began the practice of the legal profession in Truxton. In 1832, he went to Smithport, McKean County, where he practiced for one year, after which he removed to LaFayette, and engaged in keeping hotel and in farming. He also served as Postmaster, and there made his home until 1846, when he became a resident of Chardon, Geauga County, Ohio. In 1858, he emigrated to Illinois, purchased a small tract of land in Bonus Township, Boone County, upon which he built a home, and there resided until his death, in 1861. He had served in the War of 1812, and was a prominent citizen. His wife was Sarah Partlow, in her maidenhood. She was born in Cayuga County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Seymour and Susanna (Purdy) Partlow. She spent her last years in Bonus Township, and departed this life in 1882.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson have a family of six children; these three are living: Daniel Leone, Berlin S., and Willie R. Those deceased are Harvey B., who died February 17, 1876, aged seventeen years, seven months, and twenty-one days; Eugene died November 12, 1888, aged twenty-two years, ten months and two days, and Jessie L., wife of Franz E. Tripp, died April 18, 1891, aged twenty-seven years, six months and one day. The family continued to reside upon the farm until 1891, when Mr. Jackson sold out and came to Belvidere. He purchased property and built a home in the locality known as Riverside, and is there living a retired life. He is a consistent member of the Free Methodist Church, has taken an active part in its interests, and done much for its upbuilding and advancement. In sentiment, he is a strong Prohibitionist, but is not connected with that party or any other political organization.

HOMAS P. KETTLEWELL, a well-known citizen of Rockford, was born in the vilage of Scruten, Yorkshire, England, August 22, 1818. His father, Thomas Kettlewell, was born in the same place, as was also the grandfather, Richard. In 1835, the father came to America, bringing with him his wife and nine children. They set sail from Liverpool May 13, and, having spent nearly two months upon the ocean in a sailing vessel, "The Columbia," they landed in New York July 3, later crossing Lake Erie to Port Stanley. He bought a farm in Southold Township in that part of Middlesex now included in Elgin County, Canada, and resided there for a number of years, after which he came to Rockford and there made his home until death ended his career.

The mother of our subject was known in maidenhood as Mary Pinekney. She was born in the village of Scruten, Yorkshire, England, and was a daughter of Ralph and Fannie Pinckney. Her life ended at the home of her son in Rockford in 1873. Her nine children were Mary Ann, Thomas, Richard, Fanny, Margaret, Jane, Susannah, Ralph and William. Thomas Kettlewell was seventeen years old when he came with his parents to America, and he remembers well the long ocean voyage. He resided with his parents in Southold until his marriage, after which he rented a farm in Westminster Township, Elgin County, Canada, where he made his home until 1850, when he came to Illinois by way of lake and railroad to Elgin, which was then the Western terminus of the railroad.

Having reached Rockford by team from Elgin, he engaged in farming for two years, and then for some time carried on butchering and stock-dealing, and has been active in this line of business from that time on. He was married, July 3, 1844, to Susanna Horton, who was born in Southold, Elgin County, Canada, April 12, 1824. Her father, Peter Horton, was born in New Jersey and was a son of Samuel Horton, who was also a native of the same State, but migrated from there to Canada, where he did thorough pioneer work, clearing a tract of timber land on Talbot Street and developing a farm from the wilderness, residing there until his death.

The mother of Mrs. Kettlewell was, before her marriage, known as Margaret Ramsey, and after her marriage with Mr. Horton they lived upon a tract of timber land three miles from the old home, residing there until 1846, when they sold their property, and, coming to Winnebago County, bought a tract of land in Guilford Township, where Mr. Horton died in 1850.

Mr. and Mrs. Kettlewell have reared seven children, in whom they take great delight, and for whose future they have true parental solicitude. They bear the names of Mary, Mannie J., Eva,

Louis, William, Charles and Fannie, respectively. The political views of our subject are in accordance with the doctrines of the Republican party, and he is truly American in his sympathy with our institutions. Both he and his good wife are active and earnest members of the Presbyterian Church.

OEL C. KLING, a retired farmer, residing near the end of Kishwaukee Street, is a good example of what can be accomplished in life when thorough determination to succeed in any calling is coupled with energy, perseverance and close application in the directions chosen. He came here in 1868 a poor man and a stranger, but by hard work and indomitable will-power has amassed considerable wealth, and is now classed among the substantial men of the county. He is a promoter and stockholder in the Rock River Planing Mill Company, and President of the Swedish Brewing Company.

Our subject began life in Rockford as a carpenter, and followed that occupation for about ten years for E. Flemming, and subsequently became one of the incorporators and stockholders of the Co-operative Furniture Company, with which he remained about eight years. After this, he purchased one hundred and fourteen acres near the city, tilled the soil for six years, and sold this fine farm recently for $23,500. He then invested in city property.

Mr. Kling was born in Wester Gothland, Sweden, November 28, 1836, and was taught the trade of a watch-maker there, following that until he came to this country. He was the third of his family who came to America, two brothers, Augustus and Swan, having preceded him. The parents died in Sweden, the father, Lars Kling, dying when seventy-seven years of age. He followed the trade of watch-maker all his life, and had seven sons who also became watch-makers. He was the father of twenty-two children by three wives, seventeen sons and five daughters, all of whom lived to mature years, and sixteen married. His second marriage resulted in the birth of twelve sons and one daughter, of whom our subject was one of the younger. Nine sons and the daughter are still living.

Joel C. Kling was first married in his native country to Miss Mary Anderson, who accompanied him to the States and died here in 1871, when forty years of age. She left no children. She was a working member of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Our subject's second marriage was to Charlotte Johnson, who was born in Norkart Province, Sweden, on the 14th of February, 1842. Her father, John P. Johnson, followed the occupation of a mechanic, was a skillful workman, and died when seventy-two years of age. His wife died when Mrs. Kling was about twenty years of age, being herself about forty-three years old. Mrs. Kling was the only child, and when twenty-eight years of age came unaccompanied to the United States. Like her mother, she was a dress-maker by trade, and followed this until her marriage to Mr. Kling.

The six children born to this union are named as follows: Verna T., Ernest H., Tiekła T., Beta C., Herbert J., and Huldah G., all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Kling are members of the Emanuel Swedish Lutheran Church, and Mr. Kling is a stanch supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

section 9, and denotes on all sides the hand of thrift and prosperity. By a process of careful cultivation and the exercise of cultivated tastes, the farm is now conceded to be one of the most desirable in this section of Boone County. The fields are conveniently laid off and enclosed with neat fences, and the farm buildings, erected in modern style, are all that could be reasonably required by the progressive agriculturist.

While Mr. Warren has devoted his energies to the establishment of a good home and has brought the one hundred and twenty acres on his farm to a high cultivation, he has not been unmindful of the welfare of the people around him and has aided in all good works to the best of his ability. He possesses excellent judgment and a good practical education, and has been uniformly fortunate in his investments. His residence, which was erected in the fall of 1891, is one of the most commodious and attractive in the vicinity, and is furnished throughout in a manner indicating the refined tastes of the family.

Matthew Warren, father of our subject, emigrated from England to America in early manhood and was married, near Batavia, N. Y., to Grace, daughter of William Dullum, who came to Boone County about 1816, and purchased land near Poplar Grove, where he established a permanent home. His death occurred there in 1857, when he was in the prime of life. He and his wife had a family of four children, three daughters and one son: Anna, Henrietta P., Stephen M. and Ellen. Anna became Mrs. Jesse Dennis and died in Dakota in 1873, at the age of twenty-six, leaving one son, Warren; Henrietta is the wife of W. Wilson, of Flint, Mich.; and Ellen is now Mrs. George Ziegaus, of Sharon, Wis.

A native of this county, our subject was born September 18, 1850. He was reared to farm life, and used his excellent education in the profession of a teacher, which he followed nine terms. He was also engaged for nine years in making cheese in factories, but has since engaged exclusively in farming and stockraising. He keeps a goodly number of fine cattle, his specialty being Holstein cows.

Mr. Warren has received the active co-operation of his wife, to whom he was married May 27, 1873. She was Miss Alida B., daughter of John and Cornelia (Walley) Prindle, natives of Massachusetts and New York respectively. They came West in the spring of 1842, two years after their marriage, making the trip in a covered wagon drawn by oxen. They first stopped at Kenosha, and from there came to Boone County, where he entered a tract of two hundred and sixty acres from the Government, to which he later added eighty acres. When he died on New Year's Day, 1891, at the age of seventy-five, he left his widow and four children comfortably provided for. Their sor, Franklin, enlisted in the Thirteenth Wisconsin Infantry at the age of nineteen years, and had served but three months when he died of pneumonia and his mortal remains are now resting in the cemetery at Sharon, Wis. The surviving members of the family are S. W., a grain dealer at Sharon; Juniette, the wife of W. H. Stevens, of Sharon; Martha J., who married C. S. Raymond, a commercial traveler of Keokuk, Iowa, and Mrs. Warren.

Our subject and his estimable wife are the parents of three children: Willis M., Mabel J. and Jesse E., who are receiving good educations in the schools of the neighborhood. Politically, Mr. Warren is a Republican, and is serving the third term both as Road Commissioner and School Director, in which positions he is doing effective work in behalf of the people.

OSIAII S. LEONARD, who is doing an extensive business as a dealer in hardwood lumber, is numbered among the enterprising citizens of Rockford. He established business in April, 1885, and from the beginning his trade has constantly increased, until it has now assumed extensive proportions.

Mr. Leonard is a native of Syracuse N. Y., and was there reared and educated. His grandfather, James Alex Leonard, was a native of New Jersey, and descended from New England parentage of After his marriage, he removed English origin. with his wife to the wilds of the Empire State, driving the teams overland, and settled upon a farm near Auburn, N. Y., which he purchased of the Government. He there made a home and developed a good farm, on which his daughter now resides. He and his wife there spent their remaining days, and were called to their final rest at an advanced age. It was there that John A. Leonard, the father of our subject, grew to manhood. He was united in marriage to Miss Louisa Sloan, who was born near Cooperstown, N. Y., and died at her home near Auburn when in middle life. Mr. Leonard passed away in 1873, at the age of sixty-eight years. He and his wife were members of the Congregational Church. Their family numbered four sons and five daughters, seven of whom are yet living, and with one exception all are married.

Josiah Leonard, whose name heads this record, entered upon his business career in his native city at the age of twenty-two years as a lumber merchant. Subsequently, he emigrated Westward, locating in Chicago, where he spent some years, removing thence to Rockford, where he has since carried on an extensive jobbing business. With the exception of eighteen months spent in the South, he has given his entire time and attention to the business which he yet follows. He buys lumber by the car load, and sells chiefly to the factories. Mr. Leonard is recognized as a man of excellent business ability, sagacious and enterprising, and straightforward and upright in all things.

In Onondaga County, N. Y., our subject was joined in wedlock with Miss Mary M. Bostwick, who was born on Otisco Hill, N. Y., and there resided until twelve years of age. Her education was acquired in Syracuse, and in Homer Academy, of Homer, N. Y. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Leonard have been born six children: Levi D., who now assists his father in business; Hettie M., attending the High School; Anna L., Charlotte H., Anna B., and Ruth, all yet at home. The parents are both members of the Grace Methodist Church, and take an active part in its work and upbuilding, Mr. Leonard being Chairman of the Board of Trustees. In polities, he is independent, not bound by party ties. Himself and wife rank high in social circles, and have the warm regard of all with whom they have come in contact.

AMES W. SCOTT, who is successfully operating a choice farm in Burritt Township, Winnebago County, was born on section 2, of that township, May 1, 1840. He is a son of James Scott, who was born in Richland County, Ohio, June 1, 1805, where his father, Joseph Scott, was one of the first settlers. The latter gentleman improved a good farm, upon which he resided for a number of years, and then coming to Illinois spent the remainder of his life with his youngest son in this township. The maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Brown; she died in Richland County, Ohio.

The father of our subject was reared on the home farm, and on attaining mature years was married, June 20, 1826, to Miss Elizabeth Fisher. Purchasing forty acres of timber land twelve miles east of Mansfield, he crected thereon a log house, in which he lived with his family until 1836. Then removing to the Territory of Michigan, he located near Cassopolis, where he made his home for two years, then came to the Prairie State, the journey being made overland with two pairs of oxen and a wagon, the party including his wife and four children. The country round about Rockford was sparsely settled, and Government land sold for $1.25 per acre. Mr. Scott, with his household, moved into a log cabin in company with a family named Manchester, with whom they lived for a short time. In the meantime, the father made a claim to the northeast quarter of section 9, Burritt Township, on which he erected a rude log cabin, and in it moved his family and resided until his decease, during the late war.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Miss Elizabeth Fisher; she was born in Columbiana County, Ohio, March 26, 1810, and is the daughter of Henry Fisher, a pioneer of that county, but a native of Pennsylvania. He was a teamster and was engaged in hauling goods from different points in Ohio to Philadelphia and Baltimore. Later in life, removing to Richland County, he purchased a tract of timber land, which he cleared and resided upon until his death. The maiden name of his wife, the grandmother of our subject, was Nancy Fulks, also a native of the Keystone State, who, on coming to Durand, Ill., died at the home of her son.

Mrs. Elizabeth Scott, the mother of our subject, is still living and makes her home with her son Charles, on section 6. She reared a family of eight children, of whom our subject was the fourth in order of birth. He was reared and educated in his native town and, with the exception of one year, has resided in Burritt Township all his life. He remained at home assisting his father until his marriage, when he rented property for a twelvemonth, and then purchased the farm where he makes his home at the present time, and which is located on the northeastern quarter of section 10, Burritt Township.

Miss Jane Steward and James W. Scott were united in marriage, October 15, 1862. The lady was born in Elgin County, Province of Ontario, Canada, and is the daughter of William Steward, who was, as far as is known, a native of the same locality. To Mr. and Mrs. Scott have been born two children: Edwin L. and Ella M. The son, who married Miss Clara Chapman, has two children: Elmer and Grace D. Our subject is independent in politics and is highly thought of by the entire community.

HERVA JONES, Superintendent of the Rockford Manufacturing Company, has been a resident of this city since 1863, and is numbered among the early settlers of the county of 1846. He was born in Canandaigua, N. Y., August 20, 1827, and is a son of J. Herva Jones, Sr., a native of Hudson City, N. Y. The grandfather was a Scotchman and in his native land learned the trade of a marble cutter. After his marriage, he came to this country, settling in Hudson City, N. Y., where he followed his trade until his death in 1806.

The father of our subject spent his boyhood days in the Empire State, where he learned the trade of a cabinet-maker. In Canandaigua, he wedded Miss Mary Doolittle, who was born in Connecticut and was a descendant of Jason Doolittle, an English inventor, who made one of the first steam engines. It is said that on one occasion the engine got away from him when he was displaying it to some friends and completely demolished a shed. After the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Jones, they resided in New York until 1846, when they emigrated Westward, locating in Byron, Ogle County, Ill. In the fall of 1851, Mr. Jones went to Boston and took passage on board the "Telegraph," for Calcutta, in hopes that a trip to that country would benefit his health, but the vessel was never afterward heard from. Mr. Jones was then fifty-one years of age. He was a life-long Methodist, and his wife, who survived him some years, was a consistent member of the same church.

The education of our subject was acquired in the schools of his native State, where he remained until 1846, when, with his parents, he came to A year later, he settled in Rockton. Winnebago County, With his father, he learned the trade of a cabinet-maker in his youth, and since that time has been a practical mechanic and inventor. He got out his first patent as early as 1854, the machine being a hand corn-planter, the first of the kind patented. He came to Rockford in 1863, and has since been one of the prominent residents of the city. He now occupies the position of Superintendent of the Rockford Manufacturing Company, which manufactures all kinds of farming implements, including plows, harrows, sulky rakes and mowers, and makes a specialty of the famous "Farm King Sulky Plow." Mr. Jones has taken out some eighty patents on farm implements, one of the most important of which is the Standard Mower, about ten thousand of these machines being constructed annually by the Emerson & Talcott Manufacturing Company, of this city. They use a number of his patents, which have proved to be very successful and have found a ready sale. For twenty-five years, Mr. Jones was Superintendent of the Emerson & Talcott Manufacturing Company, but now gives the greater part of his attention to the superintendency of the Rockford Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Jones was married in Rockton to Miss Pauline P. Austin, who was born in Maine, October 4, 1832, and was brought to Rockton in 1838 by her parents, H. Sewell and Margaret (Packard) Austin. Her father is numbered among the early settlers of that locality and was the owner of a large and well-improved farm, upon which his death occurred, January 26, 1892, caused by la grippe. Had he lived until the following May, he would have been eighty years of age. He was a prominent resident of that community, and for some years had served as Supervisor of Shirland Township. He had been twice married, his two wives being sisters. The mother of Mrs. Jones died when she was only a year old. By her marriage she has had two children. The elder, Herman A., a machimst in the employ of the Emerson & Talcott Company, wedded Louisa Switz, and they have two children, Charles and Mattie. May is now the wife of Uzal C. Osborne, foreman of the polishing department in the watch factory. They have one son, Fred

In politics, he is a stalwart Republican and has served as Supervisor of the Fifth Ward. His wife is an active member of the Christian Union Church. They have now a beautiful home at No. 606 North Church Street.

LAUS G. PETERSON has been agent for the Illinois Central Railroad of East Rock, ford since February, 1890, and has filled the position with credit to himself and to all concerned. He came to this city from Auburn, Neb., but had formerly been a resident of this county, having been reared and educated in Cherry Valley Township. He was connected with a boot and shoe firm for some time, but on account of voice failure he went to California, where he remained four years, and where he regained has vocal powers. Returning to Rockford, he has made this city his home ever since, with the exception of two years spent in Nebraska.

Our subject is of foreign birth, Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, being his native country, and he was born on the 11th of May, 1849. When three years of age, he was brought to the United States by his parents, who landed in Boston on the 4th of July, 1852. They were three months in crossing the ocean and many of the passengers died of cholera, but the Petersons escaped with little sickness. They came on to Chicago, but found cholera prevalent in that city, and they then went to Elgin, Ill., where they remained three months. In 1852, they came to Rockford, and in 1856 the family moved to Cherry Valley and made their home there until 1863, when they located in Cherry Valley Township, where they remained until 1875, and then came back to Rockford, where the father died in November, 1879, when eighty-six years of age. His name was Peter Peterson. His wife, who is still living and quite active for seventy-five years of age, resides with her son, P. A. Peterson (see sketch). Peter Peterson and his wife were early members of the First Lutheran Church of Rockford, and were classed among the representative Swedish-American settlers of the city.

Mr. Peterson of this notice was married in Rockford and is the father of one child, a son, Claus Varro, a bright, intelligent lad, who was born August 11, 1889. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of this city. Mr. Peterson is a strong advocate of Prohibition, and socially is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Blue Lodge. He is a hard-working, industrious citizen and a man universally respected.

EORGE W. FLAGG. Descended from two old New England families, this gentleman has, in his personal affairs, manifested the frugality, industry and perseverance that are prominent traits in the Yankee character, acquiring thereby a fortune that has enabled him to bestow upon his children thorough educations, and to surround his family with every comfort. He occupies one of the handsomest farm residences in Seward Township, Winnebago County, and has identified himself with various movements which tend to the higher civilization and prosperity of his community, gaining thereby a reputation second to none as a public-spirited citizen.

Our subject was born in Heath, Franklin County, Mass., September 9, 1775. He is a son of Silas M. and Hannah Flagg, the former of whom was a native of Worcester, Mass., but who spent the greater portion of his life in Franklin County, where his demise occurred when forty-seven years of age. Mrs. Hannah Flagg was born in Windham County, Vt., and also died in the above-named county in Massachusetts, when sixty-three years of age. Her parents were natives of New England.

Mr. Flagg, of this sketch, remained at home until 1856, when he came to Winnebago County, and lived for a time in Pecatonica. Thence he came to Seward Township, and two years thereafter went East and settled on the old home farm in Massachusetts. Returning, however, in 1859, he has since been identified with the interests of Seward Township, Miss Lestina Rugg became the wife of our subject, January 9, 1850. She was born in Franklin County, Mass., and was the daughter of Davis and Eunice Rugg, the former of whom was born August 20, 1786, in Leominister, Mass.; he departed this life in Seward Township, February 2, 1872. Mrs. Eunice Rugg was born October 17, 1790, in the same State and county as was her husband, and departed this life in Winnebago County, March 13, 1874. The wife of our subject was a member of a family of eleven children, five of whom are living. Her grandparents were also natives of the Bay State, of Irish descent.

To Mr. and Mrs. George W. Flagg have been born four children, two living: Henry E., who was born October 17, 1850, in Heath, Mass., was educated in Pecatonica College, and spent one year in Nebraska. Lillian A., who was born February 4, 1861, in Seward Township, is now Mrs. W. R. Stone, and the mother of one child. Our subject and his wife are members of the Congregational Church, and in their beautiful home entertain their many friends, who are as numerous as their aequaintances.

OHN N. PENWELL, a retired farmer, who now makes his home in Belvidere, has the honor of being a native citizen of Boone County. He was born in Flora Township, March 3, 1845. His father, Luke Penwell, was born near Connorsville, Fayette County, Ind., and his grandfather, Reuben Penwell, was a native of Indiana. He became one of the earliest settlers of Indiana, where he made his home until about 1840, which year witnessed his arrival in Illinois. He was also one of the pioneers of Boone County. He located at Blood's Point, secured a tract of Government land, and improved a farm, upon which he resided for some years. He spent his last days with his children, and died at the home of his daughter, in Noblesville County, Ind.

The father of our subject was reared in his native State, and when a young man came with his parents to Illinois. The removal hither was made overland, with ox-teams. They found Boone County to be very sparsely settled; all of the land was still in the possession of the Government, and deer and other wild game were very plentiful. There were no railroads here for several years after their arrival, and Mr. Penwell used to haul his grain to Chicago with ox-teams. He married Elizabeth Middleton, a native of the Buckeye State, and a daughter of John and Ruth Middleton, after which he located on land which his father had purchased. He made his home in Boone County until about 1858, when he removed to De Kalb County, and purchased a farm, to the cultivation and improvement of which he devoted his time and attention until 1883, when he removed to the village of Kirkland, where he is now living a retired life.

Our subject is one of a family of four children. His education was acquired in the pioneer schools of his native county, which he attended through the winter season, while in the summer months he aided his father in the labors of the farm. He remained under the parental roof until his marriage, when his father deeded him a portion of the old homestead, and he engaged in agricultural pursuits with excellent success until 1881, when he sold his farm and came to the city of Belvidere. He purchased property at the corner of Whitney and Fifth Streets, and for the past cleven years has spent his time in looking after his real-estate interests.

On the 27th of February, 1867, Mr. Penwell led to the marriage altar Miss Charlotte Leaman, who was born in Flora Township, Boone County, and is a daughter of George and Deborah Leaman, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this volume. Unto our subject and his wife has been born one son, Charles Arthur. The Penwell household is the abode of hospitality, and its members rank high in social circles. In his political affiliations, our subject is a Republican. Mr. and Mrs. Penwell were married nineteen years before their only child was born.

1 LLIAM M. RICHARDSON, who is engaged in general mechanical work in the village of Roscoe, Winnebago County, was born in Spencer, Mass., in 1820. His parents, Benjamin and Judith (Mason) Richardson, were both natives of New England. The paternal grandfather, Benjamin Richardson, Sr., also belonged to an old New England family. The father of our subject was a blacksmith and a skilled workman in edged tools. He removed from Massachusetts to Hudson, N. Y., and there followed his trade until his death in 1828. He left a family of six sons and six daughters.

Our subject came to Illinois in 1846, his brothers, Benjamin and Washington, having preceded him some eleven years. He learned the blacksmith's trade with his father and opened his first shop in Roscoe in 1849, carrying on his smithy for a number of years. However, in the autumn of 1847, he returned to Massachusetts with the intention of remaining there, but changed his mind and again came to Illinois, bringing his mother with him; she spent her last days with him.

Mr. Richardson was married in Roscoe, in 1850, to Miss Lucy A., daughter of Walter and Orry (Cheney) Warner, the former of Wethersfield and the latter of Berlin, Conn. Her parents came West to Rockford in 1836. Mr. Warner made the journey in the early spring with an oxteam, and after locating a Government claim, sent for his family, who came on in company with two other families. Upon his farm, he there resided until his death. In 1839, he lost his wife, who died, leaving one son and four daughters: Lucy Ann, Frederick, Mary Jane, Josephine and Elizabeth. Mr. Warner was again married, his second union being with Miss Sarah Tucker, of Elgin, Ill., a native of Virginia. By this marriage were born seven children, but three died in childhood. Washington, Wilber, Martha and Olin grew to adult age and two are now living: Wilber, of St. Louis, and Olin, of Chieago. The former was a soldier during the late war. The father died March 26, 1863, at the age of sixty-two years. His home and farm in Harlem Township still belong to his heirs. He came West with limited means, but died leaving a handsome estate.

Our subject and his wife have one child yet living, Alice, wife of H. B. Curtis, of Roscoe, by whom she had one child, Rubie, now a student in Beloit. For some time, Mr. Richardson owned and operated one hundred and two acres of land in Roscoe, but sold it after twenty years. He then engaged in the manufacture of plows in Roscoe for thirty years. Few men of his age are as youthful in appearance and in strength as he. Hunting has always been a favorite sport with him, and in early times after a hard day's work he would often go out in the evening and bring in from six to twelve prairie chickens. He still enjoys a day with his rod and gun as in former years. In political affiliations, he was first a Freesoiler, and is now a Republican. He and his wife have been members of the Methodist Church for forty-four years. They have traveled life's journey together for forty-two years and are a most worthy couple, held in high regard by all who know them.

HARLES B. LORD, one of the early settlers of Boone County, now living retired in Belvidere, was born in Sherburne, Chenango County, N. Y., June 24, 1821. His father, Alfred Lord, was born and reared in Connecticut, and in that State married Jerusha Carrier, a native of Connecticut. They removed from the Nutmeg State to Sherburne, N. Y., where they made their home until 1827, when they became residents of Eric County, Pa. Mr. Lord bought a tract of timber land and moved into a log cubin which was then on the place. In 1836, he sold that farm and took up his residence in Summit County, Ohio, where he made his home until 1839. when he came to Ilinois. With his wife and four children, he started with a team and drove to Cleveland, where he embarked on a steamer, intending to land at Toledo, but a storm arose and drove them across the lake to the Canadian shore, They landed at Detroit and with a team drove to Aurora, III., where they remained until the fall. During the summer, our subject and his father started with a horse and buggy to seek a location, and visited different parts of Northern Illinois. In the autumn, the family removed to Boone County, where Mr. Lord made a claim of Government land in what is now Spring Township. At that time there were only about sixteen acres broken, and a log cabin constituted the improvements. The father at once began the development of the farm, but was called to his final rest about six years later. His wife died on the home farm in 1841. Their four children were Harriet, Charles, Sarah and Lucius.

Our subject was eighteen years of age when his parents came to Illinois. The country was sparsely settled and they had to undergo many of the experiences and hardships of frontier life. Charles resided with his father until about the time of his marriage, when he bought eighty acres of Government land at $1.25 per acre, and on that commenced his career as an independent and successful farmer. As there were no railroads, he hauled his grain to Chicago, Milwaukee and Sheboygan. He made other purchases as his means accumulated until he was the owner of four hundred acres of fine land one hundred and sixty acres across the line in De Kalb County.

In October, 1844, Mr. Lord wedded Clarissa Shattuck, who was born in Concord, Geauga County, Ohio, September 28, 1822. Her father, Erastus Shattuck, who was born in Connecticut, removed to New York and afterward to Ohio, becoming one of the early settlers of Concord, Geauga County. He there resided until 1835, when, with his wife and four children, he came to Illinois, making the entire journey overland with teams. He was one of the very earliest settlers of Boone County. At that time the Indians were still in possession of their homes here, and the land was not surveyed. He purchased a claim, however, on which was a log cabin, in the building of which not a particle of sawed lumber was used. The roof was covered with shakes, the flooring was of white ash logs, and there were wooden hinges on the door, and a wooden latch. The chimney was made of earth and sticks. When the land came into market, Mr. Shattuck purchased it of the Government and upon his farm resided until his death. He married Ada Scoville, who was born in Connecticut and died on the old home farm.

Mrs. Lord is one of the oldest settlers in Boone County, and it is probable that no other lady has so long resided here. Both our subject and his wife have witnessed almost the entire growth of the county and are numbered among its honored pioneers. Their union has been blessed with five children: Osear, Editha, Frank, Mary and Jane. The parents are now living retired, enjoying the rest which they have so truly earned and richly deserved.

OHN BENSON, of the firm of Peterson & Benson, real-estate dealers at No. 601
Seventh Street, is one of the successful young business men of Rockford, and has real-estate interests in different parts of this thriving city. Coming hither in 1885, he was for some time engaged as clerk in a grocery store, but in August, 1891, embarked in the business which he has since conducted with ability and success. Prior to locating in Rockford, he had for two years resided in Geneva, this State, whither he had proceeded after emigrating to the United States.

Mr. Benson is descended from pure Swedish ancestry, and was born in Smoland, February 20, 1852. His parents, Christian and Johanna (Anderson) Benson, died at the ages respectively of seventy-six and seventy-two years. They were industrious and honorable, and occupied a high place in the regard of their acquaintances. Religiously, they were Lutherans. Our subject was single when he came to America, but was married at Geneva, Ill., in 1883, to Miss Anna Peterson, who was born in Smoland, in 1853, and came to this country in 1880. They are the parents of two children: Oscar and Clara. Religiously, they are active members of the Swedish Mission Church and in all their deeds they are guided by the high principles of consistent Christians. In politics, he is an advocate of the cause of temperance and votes the Prohibition ticket.

TEPHEN RYAN belongs to the class of mechanical builders who have aided in erecting the comfortable residences of Rockford, and in that way have advanced its interests in a material direction. Since he came to this city in 1882, he has not worked as actively at his trade as in former years, when he was also a contractor and builder as well as mechanic. In 1855, he came to Pecatonica, Winnebago County, and there followed his chosen occupation until he removed to Rockford, where he occupies a pleasant home at No. 409 North Avon Street.

Mr. Ryan belongs to that brave class who responded to their country's call for men to defend the Stars and Stripes and enlisted as a private in Company C, One Hundred and Forty-sixth Illinois Infantry, Col. Dean and Capt. McGuire commanding. He served with his regiment until peace was declared, being on detached service most of the time and doing duty as Sergeant over the Guard House of the Provost Marshal's office at Peoria and Alton, Ill. After serving one year in the service of the Union, he was honorably discharged and returned to Pecatonica, where he resided until removing to Rockford.

One hundred and twenty-five miles east of Halifax, in Nova Scotia, Mr. Ryan was born December 26, 1829. In his native town, Guysborough, he learned his trade and made his home with his parents, John and Bridget (Kelly) Ryan. They were natives respectively of Counties Carroll and Kilkenny, Ireland, and emigrated to Nova Scotia when young. The father, who was a farmer and an honorable citizen, died in Guysborough when about fifty years old. His wife afterward joined her son Stephen in Pecatonica and there died October 26, 1878, when sixty-nine years of years. They had eleven children, seven of whom still survive, our subject being the eldest.

The lady who became the wife of Mr. Ryan was Catharine Herlihy, and was born in Cork, Ireland, February 17, 1827, the daughter of Jeremiah and Elizabeth (Calazahn) Herlihy, also natives of the Emerald Isle. Mrs. Ryan was one of a large family, four of whom came to the United States, two now living, herself and her brother John, of Boston. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Ryan have been born nine children, all but one of whom died young, namely: Eliza, Johanna, John, Emma, Stephen, and three that died unnamed. The only surviving child is Helen, wife of Charles E. Hallock, a farmer and dealer in furniture in Pecatonica, who is also prominent in political affairs as a Democrat and is at present serving as Mayor of his municipality. He and his wife are the parents of one child, Stephen. The members of the family are identified with the Catholic Church, in which they are prominent and influential.

IRAM JUDSON SAWYER, a prominent citizen of Rockford and formerly Sheriff of Winnebago County, was born in Fredonia, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., December 5, 1821. His father, Earl Sawyer, was born in Rutland, Yt., and his grandfather, Joseph Sawyer, was also a native of the same State. The great-grandfather of our subject, Hooker Sawyer, was a native of England and emigrated to America in Colonial times with his brothers Joseph and Amos, the former of whom settled in Vermont and the latter in New Hampshire. Grandfather Sawyer was a commissioned officer in the Revolution and also in the War of 1812, where he served with valor.

Earl Sawyer was reared in the Green Mountain State, and after his marriage removed to New York, making the journey overland. As he had no team of his own, he rode with his uncle as far as Canandaigua, and from there proceeded with James Wadsworth to Pike Village. Thence he and his wife drew their goods on hand-sleds to what is now Fredonia, Cattaraugus County, where he purchased a tract of heavily timbered land from the Holland Purchase Company. On this place he erected a log cabin, and at once commenced to improve and cultivate the land. There being no railroads nor canals, and consequently no convenient markets, the family subsisted on the products of their farm; the mother was accustomed to eard and spin wool and flax, dressing the children in homespun made by her own hands, She was known in maidenhood as Polly Davis, and prior to her marriage made her home in New Hampshire. She reared thirteen children, nine sons and four daughters, and died on the home farm when past middle age. The father also spent his declining years on the old homestead, where he died about 1872.

Until he was twelve years old, our subject remained at home, but at that age went to Boston with his father, whom he assisted in driving horses to that city. While there, he made the acquaintance of some sailors, with whom he made arrangements to go out as cabin boy. During the night he slipped away from his father and went aboard the vessel. His father found him there soon afterward and consented to let him go to New Orleans. The ship was quarantined for twenty-four days after reaching that port, and during the time our subject became very homesick. The Captain's wife felt sorry for the lad and gave him $6, with which he went ashore and soon secured passage on a river steamer bound for St. Louis. There were no railroads or canals in Illinois at that time and not even stage connection between Chicago and St. Louis. He secured a ride on a wagon loaded with furs, and in that way traveled to Chicago, then a military post containing one hotel, which was kept by a squaw. From Chicago, he seenred a ride to Detroit, and thence on a sailing-vessel, the "Julia Palmer," to Buffalo, from which place he walked home.

After remaining on the home farm until 1843, Mr. Sawyer removed to Wisconsin, where he purchased land at Geneva Lake, Walworth County. He was soon elected Justice of the Peace and served twelve years in that capacity and two years as Deputy Sheriff. In 1859, he went to Darien and established an opposition line of stages from Darien to Racine and from Racine to Beloit. While residing there, he engaged in boating on the Mississippi for several seasons, first as pilot and later as Master of the vessel. After running the stage for a few months, he sold out to the regular line, and moving to Rockton kent an hotel for one year, and then secured employment in the paper mills, where he remained until 1865. During the last-named year, he was elected Sheriff, and removed to Rockford, where, at the expiration of his term of office, he started a blacksmith shop. After carrying it on for one year, he entered the employ of Rhoades, Utter & Co., who were then building their paper mill. He continued in their employ four years after the mill was built, ·but has since devoted most of his time to his official duties. He was elected Constable in 1869 and has since served continuously in that position. In politics, he is a Republican.

In 1843, Mr. Sawyer was married to Miss Lorilla Baker, who was born in New York, and spent her last years in Darien, Wis. In 1863, Mr. Sawyer was again married, this union being with Elmira Lippitt, who was born in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., the daughter of John and Sallie Lippitt. He has two sons living: William Earl and Preston Denton.

ILLIAM JOHNS. No better representative of honorable manhood and prosperous agricultural life could be obtained within the bounds of Winnebago County than is to be found in the gentleman above-named, whose home is located on section 2, Rockford Township. It bears all the improvements in the way of machinery and buildings which stamp its owner as a man of energy and progressiveness." The home farm includes one hundred and sixty acres, in addition to which Mr. Johns owns property in another portion of the township, which aggregates, with the tract spoken of above, five hundred and lifty-six acres.

Our subject, like many of the prominent residents of this county, came from England, his birth occurring in Cornwall, March 3, 1832. His father, Thomas Johns, was also a native of that county, where his father, also named Thomas, as far as is known, spent his entire life. The father of our subject emigrated to America in 1851, and, locating in Winnebago County, purchased a tract of land on section 12, Rockford Township, where he was engaged in farming. Remaining there for a number of years, he sold his estate and removed into the city of Rockford, where he departed this life. The maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Lightfoot; she was also born in Cornwall County, and her decease occurred in Rockford.

The parental family of our subject included the following-named eight children: Jane E., Elizabeth J., Richard, Thomas, William, Priseilla, Mary and Ann. They all came to America with the exception of Thomas, who still resides in England. William Johns of this sketch was eighteen years of age when he came with his parents to the New World, setting sail from Plymouth August 3, and landing in Quebec after a voyage of nine weeks. The family came directly to Rockford, traveling via railroad, river, canal and Lakes to Chicago, and from that city by way of the railroad to Auntley Station, which was then the Western terminus of the road.

On his arrival in Rockford, Mr. Johns engaged with his brother in the butchering business, which they carried on with signal success for fifteen months, and at the expiration of that time began farming with his father. He was thus employed until his marriage, after which event he located on a farm, which is his present place of residence, and the improvements on which are among the best to be found in the county. As before stated, Mr. Johns' landed estate comprises five hundred and fifty-six acres, all of which has been accumulated by his persistent industry and good management.

Miss Ann Rodd was married to our subject in 1860; she was born in Beverly Township, Canada, and was the daughter of Joseph and Mary A. Rodd, natives of England. To them have been born eleven children, namely: Ella R., Frederick W., Fannie May, George Thomas, Lewis A., Charles E., Luey M., Annie E., Edward J., Herbert J., and Roy C. Mr. and Mrs. Johns are active members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics, our subject votes the straight Republicant ticket. He is widely and favorably known throughout this county, where he is ranked among its wealthy and prominent residents.

AMES W. BRYDEN is a retired farmer residing at No. 1021 Mulberry Street, Rockford. He was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, July 22, 1830, and at the age of eighteen years bade good-bye to home and friends and came to America. He took passage from Liverpool, England, and after a voyage of seven weeks landed in New York City. He located in Delaware County, New York State, and afterward went to Scranton, Pa., whence he came to Rockford about 1856. Here he worked by the month in order to make a payment on the first land which he owned, a tract of sixty acres. He has been the architect of his own fortune and has builded well, When he came to this county he was empty-handed, but by his own efforts has acquired a handsome competence.

During the late war, Mr. Bryden enlisted as a teamster in the commissary department in the fall of 1861, and after two years of such service became a member of Company G, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, in which he remained until the close of the war, being then under command of Col. Funk, of Peoria. He was ever faithful to his duty and was a valiant soldier. For some time he lay sick in the hospital and was once crippled by being thrown from a horse, but otherwise escaped uninjured. He is proud of the fact, as well he may be, that he aided his adopted land in her struggle to preserve the Union, but having experienced the privations and trials of army life, has no desire again to see war.

Mr. Bryden was married in Beloit, Wis., to Miss Olive L. Hallstead, who was born in Luzerne County. Pa., May 23, 1846. When quite young, her parents. Samuel L. and Maria (Capwell) Hallstead, removed to Brown County, N. Y., and she was only six years of age when they came West, locating in Harrison Township, Winnebago County, where both her father and mother are living. There he improved a good farm where he still makes his home, at the age of eighty-four years. He served through the Rebellion as a faithful follower of the Stars and Stripes. His wife, who is a member of the Methodist Church, is now seventynine years of age.

Unto Mr. and Mr. Bryden have been born five children: Cora B., widow of Henry Barkley; Fairy M., wife of Fred Gilmore, a farmer of Owen Township; William J., who wedded Nellie Stillwell and operates his father's farm; Minnie M., wife of Fred Seoonmakers, a resident farmer of Harlem Township, and M. Eveline, who resides at home. In politics, Mr. Bryden is a stalwart Republican, and socially, is a member of G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., of Rockford. He came to this city from his farm in 1891, and is now living a retired life, enjoying the rest which he has so truly carned and richly deserves. He still owns one hundred acres of well-improved land in Owen Township.

ANIEL SCOTT, who resides on section 19, Guilford Township, is numbered among the honored pioneers of Winnebago County, few having longer resided in this community than our subject. He well deserves representation in this volume, as for many years he has been identified with the history of the county, its progress and its upbuilding.

Mr. Scott was born in the town of Machias, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., and is a son of Reuben C. and Anna (Johnson) Scott, a sketch of whom is given in connection with that of Sylvester Scott, on another page of this work. Daniel was a lad of seven summers when with his parents he came to Illinois. He well remembers the incidents of the journey and of pioneer life here. At the time of the settlement, all the land was owned by the Government. The few settlers were living in log houses, there were no railroads and no conveniences. The nearest market was Chicago, where grain sold at fifty cents per bushel, and in some cases men could not get enough for their farm products to pay for hauling them such a distance. Mr. Scott resided with his father until the latter's death and is still living upon the old homestead, which also includes the claim made by the maternal grandfather. He aided in the arduous task of developing a new farm, but now has his reward in the products of rich and fertile fields. In connection with this, he has creeted good farm buildings and has all the improvements and accessories found upon a model farm of the nineteenth century.

In July, 1848, Mr. Scott was united in marriage with Miss Nancy J. Hayes, a native of Canada, and a daughter of Samuel B. Hayes. Their union has been blessed with two children: Luther, who is living on the home farm, and Anna, now the wife of Harlow B. Rowley. Their pleasant home is conveniently situated a mile and a quarter east of the city limits and is the abode of hospitality. This worthy couple are held in the highest regard throughout the community where they have so long made their home. In politics, Mr. Scott is a Republican but has never been an office-seeker. He is numbered among the honored pioneers and has ever borne his part in the development and advancement of the county's interests.

AMES A. NEWMAN. Like many of the prosperous and representative citizens of Boone County, Ill., our subject claims New York as his native State, and was born in Onondaga County on the 24th of April, 1824. He enjoys the reputation of being one of the best farmers in the township, and not only that, but he is an intelligent and thoroughly posted man on all public affairs.

His parents, John and Chloe (Atwell) Newman, were natives of the Green Mountain State, but the former died in New York State, and the latter in Kenosha County, Wis. They were farmers all their lives. Our subject's paternal grandfather, Enos Newman, was a Vermonter by birth, but passed the closing scenes of his life in the State of New York, where he was one of the pioneers. On the maternal side, our subject's grandparents were Joseph and Clarissa Atwell. Of the eight children born to John and Chloe Newman, only one beside our subject is now living, Uriah, who is now ninety-one years of age.

Early trained to the duties of farm life, our subject became familiar with its every detail, and upon this training his success in subsequent years in a great measure depended. When eighteen years of age, he worked out by the month, and later rented land, and on the 10th of December, 1816, he wedded Miss Betsey Andrews. She was born in New York State, and there died when only twenty-eight years of age, leaving a bereaved and desolate young husband. Two children were born to this union, both sons: Lloyd, born in New York State, married Miss Anna Rogers, and has a daughter; he is now living in Chicago. John A., born in the same State, married Miss Mary Green, and has two children; he is a farmer.

Our subject's second marriage occurred on the 23d of February, 1850, to Miss Sarah A. Cook, a native of Oswego County, N. Y., born December 10, 1825, and the daughter of Ransom and Dolly (Ward) Cook. Her paternal grandfather, William Cook, was a native of Connecticut, and came to New York State at an early date. He lived to a good old age. Her ancestors were Revolutionary soldiers, and our subject's maternal grandfather also served in the Revolutionary War. Mrs. Newman was one of six children, and two are now living. To our subject's second union was born one child, Nellie L., a native of Kenosha County, Wis. She is now the wife of William G. Bennett, a prominent business man, and is the mother of one child, George N.

After his second union, or in 1852, Mr. Newman moved to Kenosha County, Wis., and there made his home until 1867, when he sold out and moved to Waukegan, Ill. Two years later, he moved to his present farm, which consists of three hundred acres, and on this he has made many and vast improvements in the way of buildings, fences, tiling, etc. He is one of the most progressive and thorough farmers of the township, as a glance over his broad acres will show. He is a Republican, with Prohibition proclivities, and his first Presidential vote was cast in 1848, for President Taylor. Mrs. Newman is a member of the Methodist Church, and is also a member of the Woman's deeply interested. Both are highly esteemed in the community, and are active in all good work.

RS. MARY MORGAN, widow of Mr. Horace S. Morgan, is one of the most active and intelligent women in Boone County, Ill. She was born in Ontario County, N. Y., in 1843, to the marriage of James and Mariah (Bourne) Westrip, the former a native of England, and the latter of Albany, N. Y.

The father came to "the land of the free" when a young man, and was here married. Agriculture was his occupation in life, and in this he met with substantial results, being ever very industrious and progressive. In 1846, he brought his family to Illinois, and settled on one hundred and eight acres of Government land, where he made his home until his death, in 1851, when still a comparatively young man, being only about thirty-eight years of age. He left his widow and a son and four daughters, all living but one daughter. His wife is still living, and makes her home with our subject, Mrs. Morgan. She is now seventy-seven years of age. Mrs. Westrip was again married, the second time to Mr. Philemon Degroff, of Steuben County, N. Y., born in the year 1807. His first wife, Elizabeth Mass, of the same place, died in 1866, leaving five children.

She of whom we write attained her growth in Boone County, Ill., for she was only about three years of age when she was brought to this county, and here received her education. Her marriage took place in Beloit, Wis., in 1873, to Mr. Horace S. Morgan, who was one of the successful farmers of this part of the county. Mrs. Morgan had made her home with the family of Mr. Morgan for two years prior to her marriage, and afterwards she and her husband began the struggle of life on their own responsibility. They were favored with success, and became prominently identified with the agricultural interests of the county. Mr. Morgan was ever public-spirited and upright, and in his death, which occurred in 1881, when seventy-two years of age, Boone County lost one of its representative citizens.

Mrs. Morgan's marriage was blessed by the birth of two children: Eudella M., born in October, 1874, and Wesley H., April I, 1884. Both of her children have received good educational advantages, and she has trained them to be intelligent and independent in thought and action. The daughter has taken several terms of music lessons, and promises to be a fine musician. Mrs. Morgan has eighty acres of good tillable land, but rents the farm out. Her brother, James Westrip, is engaged in tilling the soil on the old homestead in Roscoe Township.

VICTOR ENGSTROM. The firm of Engstrom & Hall was organized March 1, 1888, and has since been conducting a very successful business at No. 324 East State Street, Rockford. Their stock consists of a full line of dry goods, the specialty being fine dress-goods and cloaks, and through courtesy and fair dealings all the members of the firm have become widely and favorably known. Their place is one of the oldest dry-goods houses in the city, having formerly been occupied by L. Moulthrop.

When Mr. Engstrom located in Rockford in 1883, he at once became connected with George II. Dennett as a clerk in a dry-goods store of the latternamed gentleman and was continuously in his employ until March 1, 1888, when he formed his present partnership. An active and energetic young gentleman, with excellent judgment and progressive ideas, he has gained success through his unaided exertions.

Born in Malta, this State, October 2, 1865, our subject is the son of A. F. Engstrom (of whom see biography), and is one of the five children of the parental family. He was married in Rockford to Miss Florence Beatty, who was born in Waukegan, Wis., and reared in Rockford, receiving her education in the female seminary here. She has the rare gift of a voice of exceeding sweetness and purity, and is an active member of the Mendelssohn Club, a popular ladies' society, well known for musical ability. Her father, Rev. Robert Beatty, was for many years a minister in the Methodist Church, and with his wife, whose maiden name was Harriet Smith, is still living in Rockford. In their religious connections, Mr. and Mrs. Engstrom are members of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church of this city. In politics, he is an active adherent to the principles of the Republican party.

AMUEL BATES. Among the prosperous enterprises in Capron, Boone County, Ill., is that of Samuel Bates, dealer in farm machinery. Mr. Bates is a thoroughly practical, energetic man has been a resident of this county all his life, and is highly esteemed in all circles.

He was born in Boone Township Boone County, of this State, in about the first log house erected in this section, May 6, 1848, and here he grew to manhood and received his education. He is a son of Isaac and Phube T. (Tongue) Bates. (See sketch.) Until about sixteen years of age. our subject remained under the parental roof and assisted his father in the management of the farm. Not being particularly fascinated with the ardnous duties devolving upon him while tilling the soil, he went to Beloit and began learning the blacksmith's trade, which he continued about six months. From there he went to South Bend, Ind., and was engaged in following his trade there for about five years, after which he located in Iowa. In both places he was very successful, and being a skilled workman and a reliable and straightforward business man he met with encouragement on every side.

At the end of one year in Moingona of the latter State, our subject returned to South Bend and followed his trade there for two years, after which, in 1869, he located in Capron in the county where he first saw the light of day, and here he has remained ever since. He followed his trade in this county and town until 1887, when he sold out his business, and since then has been engaged as a dealer in farm machinery. Although but a short time has elapsed since Mr. Bates embarked in his present business, he has built up a most valuable trade and is prominently identified with the business interests of the place.

On the 27th of December, 1870, he was married to Miss Jennie Willott, who was born near Birmingham, England, on the 4th of November, 1851, and whose parents are Joseph and Maria (Gething) Willott, natives also of England. Mr. and Mrs. Willott came to the United States in 1867 and settled in Indiana, where Mr. Willott engaged as a mechanic. He is now manufacturing edged tools at Manitowoc, Wis., and is a prosperous and successful business man.

Our subject settled in Capron directly after his marriage. His union has been blessed by the birth of two children: Myrtle A. M., born here April 15, 1874, and Vivian S., born December 27, 1881. This is one of the pleasantest home in Boone County, and the domestic happiness found in this family circle makes a bright spot and is promotive of much true sociability. Mr. Bates is a Republican in politics, and his first Presidential vote was for U. S. Grant. He has held many local offices in the township, has been Supervisor since 1882 and has been a member of the School Board for some time. Mrs. Bates is a refined and cultured lady.

County are a class of men who for sturdy integrity, thorough-going industry and undaunted enterprise, will compare favorably with any class of men whom we may name. They did not come to the West with the expectation of finding a royal road to fortune, but they did hope, however, and their hopes have been realized, to make a home in the wilderness, where they might place the feet of their children on the high road to independence and a comfortable competency.

Our subject, who is one of the oldest residents in the county, is residing on section 33, Flora Township. He was born in Burnside Township, Clearfield County, Pa., December 3, 1823. His father, William Lee, was born in Centre County, that State, where also the grandfather, Jacob, as far as is known, was born and reared. The latternamed gentleman removed to Clearfield County, where he purchased a tract of timber land and resided until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Margaret Goodwin.

The father of our subject was a young man when he went to Clearfield County and was there married. He became the owner of a tract of land in Burnside Township, on which he erected a log house and resided for a number of years. There were no railroads in the vicinity of his home at that time, and the farmers lived principally off the products of their farm. In 1844, the elder Mr. Lee, with his family, came to Illinois, making the entire journey with teams, and after three weeks and three days landed in Ogle County. There they remained a few weeks and then came to Flora Township, where the father of our subject entered a tract of Government land, now included in the estate, which our subject occupies. There was a log cabin on the property, and this the family occupied for a few years, when a substantial residence was erected. There Mr. Lee departed this life in 1860, while his wife, prior to her marriage Miss Jane R. Gallaher, died while residing in Clearfield County, Pa. She was a daughter of James and Margaret Gallaher and was a native of the Keystone State.

William Lee was twenty years of age when he came to Illinois, and has since that time been an occupant of the home farm. His estate includes a quarter section, while in DeKalb County he is the owner of forty acres of land which bears good improvements. In November, 1843, he was married to Rebecca McKee, who was born June 18, 1822. in Blair County, Pa., and to them have been born eight children, four living: Thomas M., Joseph B., Millard E. and Mary C. Mrs. Lee departed this life, April 7, 1863, and the lady to whom our subject was united in marriage in 1865 was Harriet Taylor, a native of Noble County, Ohio. Three children were born unto them: Emery U., Lillie and Oscar E. The mother died in August, 1889, and in February, 1891, Mr. Lee married Rosetta Perrin, also a native of the Buckeye State. In political matters, Mr. Lee votes with the Republican party.

OANNA WELLINGTON, a most estimable lady, and the widow of Sparce Wellington, was born in Canada in the year 1808, to the union of Joseph and Jane (Chrisholm) Silverthorne, the latter a native of Canada and the former of the United States, although he was taken to Canada when but two years of age.

Our subject passed her girlhood and youth in her native country, and was married in Toronto in 1830, when twenty-two years of age, to Mr. Sparoe Wellington, who was just twenty-seven years of age. In 1838, they determined to try the fertile and productive prairies of Illinois, and took passage on a vessel, coming by the Lakes to Chicago. From that city they came by team to Ogle County, and without means, and with a family of three children, settled in Ogle County. All the privations incident to pioneer life they experienced in their new home, and Mr. Wellington was engaged as a tanner, currier, harness-maker and shoemaker, also farming in that county for five years. From there they removed to De Kalb County, and there resided until 1854, when they came to Manchester, Boone County. When they came to Ogle County from Canada, the notorious bandit, Dave Driscol, shot and killed John Campbell, who had come with them and had resided in the same house for some time. Mr. Campbell was Captain of the Regulators at the time of his death. Mr. Wellington took his first load of wheat from Ogle County in 1838, and received sixty cents a bushel in Chicago. He exchanged it for groceries, etc. Later, he took a load of fresh pork, and sold it for $1 per hundred pounds, and after paying his expenses on the trip, did not have enough left to pay his man for one month's work.

The union of our subject and his wife was blessed by the birth of ten children, seven sons and three daughters, five now deceased. Samuel B. Wellington enlisted the first year of the war, in Company B, Fifteenth Illinois Infantry, under Capt. Haywood, and served nearly three years. He died with fever in the hospital at St. Louis, July 27, 1863, aged twenty-three years; Sparoc died January 6, 1892, aged thirty-six years. The living children are as follows: Thomas S., a farmer of Nebraska, married, and has seven children; William L. M., a ranchman of Colorado, has a wife and two children; Quiney Joseph, a bookmerchant at Colorado Springs, is married and has one child; Jane married Mr. Orris Knox, a contractor and builder of Los Angeles, Cal.; and Frances, resides with her mother.

The father of these children was a hard-working, industrious citizen, and a man well liked and respected wherever he made his home. He was prominently identified with all movements regarded as worthy of consideration, and was a prominent member of the Methodist Church, in which he was a liberal contributor. In polities, he was a strong advocate and supporter of the principles of the Republican party. His death occurred in 1878, when seventy-five years of age. He left an estate of eighty acres, and property at Caledonia, and deeded eighty acres to his son, William L. M. He now rests with his departed children in Roscoe Cemetery. Mrs. Wellington is one of the pleasant, agreeable old ladies of the county, and is esteemed and respected by everyone. She enjoys good health, and her mind is clear and bright as in her best days.

ENJAMIN F. CUNNINGHAM occupies a beautiful home one mile south of Rockford, which is charmingly located on a rise of ground which commands an extended view up and down the river. It is in fact one of the most pleasant homes in Winnebago County, and our subject has brought it to its present condition, as when he located here there were but few improvements on the place. He is one of the pioneers of the county and has given the best efforts of his life to agricultural pursuits, and, as a reward of his industry, has a splendid estate in Rockford Township.

Born February 3, 1820, in Peterboro, Hillsboro County, N. H., our subject is a son of James and Sarah M. Cunningham, (See sketch of Samuel Cunningham.) Benjamin F. resided in his native town until 1839, when he came to Illinois, starting in the month of April and arriving in Winnebago County when Rockford contained only a few buildings, the most of them constructed of logs. Our subject joined his brother, Isaac N. Cunningham, who resided on a claim about one mile west of the town, and made his home with him for a twelvemonth, when he returned to the parental roof and remained until two years after his marriage. Mr. Cunningham then settled on his farm on section 6, which he sold in 1850, and the succeeding year lived on his brother's farm, during which time he purchased property in what is now Winnebago Township. Residing there for a period of three years, our subject on account of failing health moved into the city and in 1858 went to California via the Isthmus, the journey consuming twenty-eight days from New York to San Francisco. The first year, he was unable to do any kind of work, and when partially regaining his health, engaged in teaming from Sacramento to the mines, a distance of about one hundred miles. Mr. Cunningham remained in the Golden State two years, and, on returning to Illinois, made his home for a year in Rockford, then traded his property for a farm near Pecatonica, and was there engaged in cultivating the soil until the spring of 1868, when he sold out and spent a few months in Rockford. The following year he located on the farm where he at present resides. In 1870, he made a second trip to California in search of health, and returned a year later, somewhat improved, but the climate here not agreeing with him, in the fall of 1873 he again went West and resided for six years.

March 14, 1844, the original of this sketch was married to Clarissa J. Mandeville, who was born in Somerset, Cayuga County, N. Y., April 1, 1822. Her father, Michael Mandeville, was a native of the same county, where his father, Jacob Mandeville, as far as is known, was also born. The grandfather was a farmer and spent his last years in the town of Sennett. The father of Mrs Cunningham was married in his native State, and resided in Cayuga County until 1821, when he removed to Genesce County and purchased a tract of timber land on a small clearing, where he made his home for two years. Going to Darien, Mr. Mandeville purchased property and operated a gristmill, tannery and shoe factory. He lived there until 1839 and then came to Illinois, being accompanied by his wife and five children. The father rented a farm one year near Rockford, then bought a tract of land in the same township, on which he erected a log house and lived until the spring of 1841. Later removing to Rockford, he lived retired until his decease. His wife, prior to her marriage, was Elsie Corey, a native of Sennett, N. Y., and the daughter of James and Sarah Corey: her decease occurred in Rockford.

One daughter, Jennie E., has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham and makes her home with her parents at the present writing.

HRIST ORTLUND. The firm of Ortlund Bros. are proprictors of the Seventh Street Laundry, which was established December 1, 1891, and has since carried on a large and successful business. The members of the firm, our subject and G. A., are also contractors and builders of artificial stone pavements and sidewalks, an enterprise which since its inception in April, 1890, has steadily increased in magnitude and importance.

Prior to coming to Rockford, Mr. Ortlund resided for four years in Evanston, this State, where he located immediately after emigrating to the United States in 1886. He was born in Sweden, a country which has furnished a large number of enterprising and successful citizens to the city of Rockford, and in his native land received a common-school education. His parents, Andrew and Augusta (Olsen) Ortlund, recently came to the United States and now reside in Evanston, Ill., the father being seventy-two and the mother fifty-nine years old. They are members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and are people of worth and many generous impulses. Our subject takes an active interest in the public enterprises of Rockford and although he has resided here only a few years, is already widely known and honored.

ELOS II. DENTON, dealer in sand, stone and rubble, and a prominent business man of Rockford, was born in Durand Township, Winnebago, County, July 31, 1840. He was the only son born to his parents (for further information in regard to whose history the reader is referred to the sketch of Homer Denten). When a mere child, he accompanied his parents to Rockford, where he was reared and educated, and has since made his home. Until recent years, he has been engaged in farming pursuits, but now devotes his attention to the business above-mentioned, in connection with which he has large real-estate interests.

In 1861, Mr. Denton enlisted in Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry, responding to the first call for men to serve three years. Much of the time he served in the Quartermaster's Department, and was with his regiment at Ft. Henry, Ft. Donelson, Shiloh and Vicksburg. On account of disability, he was honorably discharged, and, returning home, commenced again the pursuits of peace.

The lady who became the wife of our subject was born and reared in Canada, and came to Rockford with her parents, who were natives of Canada, of English parentage. Her mother still lives in Rockford, being quite aged, but the father is deceased. Mrs. Denton died in the prime of life, leaving one child, Mary, now the wife of Ellsworth Lockwood, the proprietor of the Central Book Store at Rockford.

The second marriage of Mr. Denton united him to Miss Ann Lambert, who was born in Prince Edward Island, and accompanied her parents, Henry and Betty Lambert, to the States in childhood days. Mr. Lambert served in the English army for about seven years. He and his wife were born, reared and married in London, England, and now reside in Rockford, being quite advanced in years. Mrs. Ann Denton died at her home in this city in 1886, when about thirty-six years old. She was a good wife, devoted mother and kind neighbor. Her children were named Minnie B., William, Nellie, Hattie and Cora, respectively. All of them are at home, and are being educated in the schools of Rockford.

RANK E. ZAHM is one of the enterprising young farmers of Winnebago County, and operates a finely-improved farm in Shirland Township. Having passed his entire life within the limits of the township where he now resides, he is well known by his fellow-ertizens, among whom he occupies a prominent place. In connection with general farming, he is interested in stock-raising and usually keeps a large number of horses, cattle and hogs on the place. He has introduced modern machinery and every improvement which will conduce to success in his chosen occupation, and through good judgment and excellent management has become known as a prosperous and thrifty farmer.

The father of Mr. Zahm, Nicholas by name, was born in the Province of Lorraine (now included in Germany, but formerly owned by France), November 15, 1815. He was a son of Jacob Zahm, a native of the same place, and born of German ancestry. In 1828, Grandfather Zahm emigrated to the United States, and carried on farming operations until he was too old to engage in active labor.

The subject of this sketch was born in Shirland Township, April 22, 1856, and was the seventh in order of birth among a family of eight children, five sons and three daughters. On the farm which his father bought and located upon shortly before the railroad was built there, he grew to manhood, receiving a common-school education. In October, 1881, he was married to Miss Mary, daughter of Williston and Margaret (Miller) Beckham. Her father was born in Pennsylvania, in 1835, and her mother was a native of Vermont, born in October, 1840. They were married in Beloit, December 21, 1857, and became the parents of four children, namely: Frank, who died in infaney; Mary, who was born at the old homestead in Shirland Township, December 1, 1860; William, who married Mabel Herrick, of Beloit; and Lewis, whose home is in Rockford. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Zahm: Ethel B., born March 31, 1884, and Williston, a very bright and precocious child of three years. In his political affiliations, Mr. Zahm has identified himself with the Republican party, believing its principles best adapted to the welfare of the people.

SCAR DAY. Having accumulated a competence through the exercise of good judgment and tireless perseverance as a farmer, Mr. Day is passing his declining years quietly at his home in Rockford. He was born of English descent, in the town of Essex, Chittenden County, Vt., March 28, 1828. From the family genealogy we glean the following: The first ancestor in this county, Daniel Day, came to America in 1634, and settled in Newtown, near Cambridge, Mass. He was probably one of the company of one hundred pioneers who, with their pastor, the Rev. Mr. Hooker, penetrated the wilderness in 1636, and founded homes for themselves amid uninviting surroundings.

The second wife of Daniel Day was Editha Stebbins, or Stebbing, a sister of Deacon Edward Stebbing. From them the lineage is traced down through successive generations to Thomas Day, the great-great-great grandfather of our subject, and the son of Robert and Sarah (Cooper) Day. The first of the family to settle in Vermont was the great-grandfather, John Day, Jr., son of John Day, Sr., and he resided in the town of Essex until his death in June, 1795, at the age of sixty-three years. He was born in Springfield, Mass., July 5, 1698, and was a man of note in his community.

Grandfather David Day was born in West Springfield, Mass., May 2, 1758, and was a farmer by occupation, clearing from the wilderness of the town of Essex a farm which was his home until death. He served through the entire period of the Revolutionary War, and was a pensioner during the latter part of his life, receiving $120 per year. The maiden name of his wife, grandmother of our subject, was Aseneth Childs, and her declining years were passed on the old homestead at Essex.

Childs Day, father of our subject, was born in Essex, Vt., March 29, 1794, and was reared to agricultural pursuits, spending his entire life in the place of his birth. In his youth there were no railroads, and he was accustomed to team between Montreal and Boston, the two principal markets of New England. His last years were quietly passed on a farm which he purchased in the vicinity of his old home. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and a man of patriotic character and generous impulses, whose position in the community was one of honor and trust.

The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Mahala Collins, was born in Lebanon, N. II., the daughter of Henry and Fanny (Aldrich) Collins. She was an estimable lady, devoted to her husband and children, and sincerely mourned when she passed away at the old home in Essex. Osear Day was reared and educated in his native town, and resided with his parents until 1848, when he proceeded West to Buffalo, N. Y., and worked at the trade of a carpenter for three years. In 1851, he went to California via the Isthmus of Panama, and landed at San Francisco, then a village of about four thousand inhabitants. Seventy miles distant were the mines of Eldorado, where he engaged in mining until 1856, and then returned home by the Isthmus and New York.

In June, 1856, Mr. Day came to Winnebago County, where he bought one hundred and sixty acres in Winnebago Township and resided until 1865. His next purchase was the farm he now occupies, which joins that portion of Rockford known as the Seminary Tract. Thirty acres of the estate have been laid out in city lots, while the value of the place has been materially increased by its proximity to the growing city.

The marriage of Mr. Day, in October, 1857, united him with Susan P. Mills, who was born in Cayuga County, N. Y. Her father, David Mills, was born in Albany County, N. Y., and her grandfather, Abram Mills, was a native of the same county, and spent his entire life in New York State. Grandmother Day was known in maidenhood as Mary Foster, and was born in Ireland, of Scotch ancestry. David Mills, after his marriage, which occurred in Weedsport, N. Y., remained there for a time and then removed to Winnebago County, where he bought a farm in Winnebago Township and resided a number of years. Then retiring to Rockford, he lived quietly until called hence. His wife, Parmelia (Bayless) Mills, was born in Cayuga County, N. Y., the daughter of Aaron and Lydia (Edmiston) Bayless, natives of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Day attend the Congregational Church at Rockford, and are active in works of philanthrophy and benevolence. In political matters, he is a Republican, and takes an intelligent interest in all the public issues of the day.

OHN A. JAMES. Among the pushing, energetic and successful agriculturists of Manchester Township, Boone County, is the subject of this biographical notice. He was born in Genesee Township, Waukesha County, Wis., in 1850, and is a son of Charles James, a native of Wales, who came to America about 1845. The mother of our subject, prior to her marriage, was Miss Esther Edwards, also a native of Wales; she died in 1852, when twentynine years of age, leaving two sons, our subject, and an elder brother, Charles.

The original of this sketch was reared to farming pursuits, and March 23, 1881, was married to Miss Charlotte M., daughter of Samuel and Ann (Mason) Pye, both of whom were natives of England. The mother came to America in 1840, being preceded to the New World by her husband, who set sail from his native land in 1836. He remained at Geneva, N. Y., until 1840, when, in the spring of that year, he came to Rockford, and the same year bought a quarter-section of Government land in Manchester Township, Boone County. He was married here June 2, 1844, to Ann Mason. Her father died in this township in 1843, when forty-three years of age, and the mother when in her sixty-eighth year, in 1859. They were inu-keepers in Eugland. They also owned a farm of one hundred and eighty-seven acres of land in Manchester Township. They were married in 1821, and at their death left a family of five children. They came to Rockford in 1840.

Mr. and Mrs. Pve located in Boone County, October 31, 1844, where the father erected the second frame house in this vicinity, which is still standing. He was reared to farm life, which occupation he followed until his death. Their seven children bore the respective names of Joseph, Sarah Ann, Joseph Samuel, Charlotte M., Idella Gertrude, May Adelia and Alice Eva. Mrs. Pye departed this life September 25, 1877, aged sixtytwo years. Her husband survived her a number of years, dying April 15, 1891, in his eighty-first year. He left an estate of one hundred and sixty acres, which was well cultivated, improved with good buildings, and well stocked. Mr. Pye was not interested in politics other than to east a Republican vote during elections.

AMES SUNDQUIST is a cabinet-maker in the employ of the Palace Folding Bed Company, also Superintendent, and resides at No. 202 Seventh Street. A native of Sweden, he was born on the 11th of April, 1841. His father, Hans P. Sundquist, lived and died a farmer in his native province, passing away at the age of eighty years. His wife died seven years previous, when about sixty years of age. Her maiden name was Sarah K. Larson. This worthy couple were both members of the Swedish Lutheran Church.

Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth in the land of his birth, and when quite young began learning the cabinet-maker's trade. Since that time, he has made his own way in the world. At length, he determined to try his fortune in America. A younger brother, Andrew, had already come to this country, in 1867. He married Miss Katie Larson, and is now a successful furniture dealer of Toulon, Stark County, 111.

Mr. Sundquist, whose name heads this sketch, was united in marriage with Lena Anderson, a native of this country, born in Durand on the 9th of December, 1856. She was here reared and educated, her parents being Seavert and Maria Anderson, both of whom were natives of Norway. After their marriage and the birth of three of their children, they emigrated to this country, becoming residents of Rockford, but later removed to Durand, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. Anderson was a jeweler by trade, but in this country followed various employments. His death occurred at the advanced age of eightyone years, and his wife passed away at the age of seventy-seven. He was a supporter of Republican principles, and both were members of the Lutheran Church. Three children of the family are yet living: Martin A., a painter of Durand; Sophia, wife of Louis Blomquist, a tailor of Rockford; and the wife of our subject.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Sundquist were born five children, four of whom are yet living: Edith F., Oscar E., Chester R. and James L. One daughter, Lorena F., died in infancy. The family is well and favorably known throughout this community. Mr. Sundquist is an expert workman, able to command excellent positions. After coming to this country, he resided for four years in Galesburg and Chicago, and on the 23d of September, 1872, arrived in Rockford. He has prospered since coming to this city, and is now the owner of some good property, and is interested in some of the manufacturing companies of this city.

SAAC N. SHIPE deserves mention among the prominent farmers of Cherry Valley Township, Winnegago County. He was born in Culpeper, Va., April 3, 1842, and is a son of Abraham and Eliza (Reiley) Shipe, both of whom were Virginians by birth. His paternal grandfather was a native of Pennsylvania, and when young emigrated to the Old Dominion, settling in Howesville. He married Miss Windham, a native of that State, whose ancestors were leading men of the community. Col. Windham, of military fame, was her brother. They reared a family of seven sons and four daughters, one of whom, Isaac, was the twin brother of the father of our subject.

Abraham Shipe married Miss Reiley, daughter of John Reiley. Her father was born in Virginia and was the son of John Reiley, of Revolutionary fame. Mrs. Shipe was first married to William Green, and unto them were born three sons and a daughter, all of whom are yet living and are heads of families. By her second marriage, she had fourteen children, four of whom died in early childhood, but five sons and five daughters still abide. The mother has thus had eighteen children. Mr. and Mrs. Shipe removed from Virginia to Washington County, Ohio, when our subject was a lad of fourteen years, and there resided until the spring of 1866, when they came to Winnebago County, Ill., with their family. In the fall of 1865, they made a settlement on section 19, Cherry Valley Township. The father died on Thanksgiving Day of 1878, and his remains were interred in the burial ground near the Starkey Schoolhouse. The mother is still living at the age of seventy-seven years and makes her home in Flora, Boone County.

No event of special importance occurred during the boyhood of our subject, which was spent under the parental roof, but in November, 1861, in Ohio, he enlisted in his country's service, and with a brother and three half-brothers went to the front. This was a large number for one mother to give to her country, but all were spared to her and returned uninjured. Mr. Shipe was a prisoner of war for some time, being held at Charleston, S. C., Castle Thunder, and at Richmond, where he was parolled in March, 1865. His average weight was one hundred and sixty pounds, but when he came out of prison he weighed ninety-three pounds. now receives a pension of $6 per month in recognition of his services. He proved a faithful soldier, was ever at his post of duty, and of his war record he need never be ashamed.

In October, 1872, Mr. Shipe married Miss Kate Hall, daughter of Thomas and Flora A. (Hunter) Hall, both of whom were natives of Belfast, Ireland, who emigrated to Canada in the spring of 1842, whence they came to Winnebago County, Ilb., eight years later. Of their twelve children, all grew to mature years, and only four have been called to their final rest. The father died April 19, 1856, and the mother is still living at the age of eighty-one years, her home being with her daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Shipe have one child, Nellie, a maiden of sixteen summers, who is attending the High School of Rockford. The family have many friends throughout this community and rank high in the circles of society in which they move. In his political affiliations, Mr. Shipe is a Republican. He is held in high regard by all who know him and is recognized as a progressive farmer and valued citizen of the community.

OSEPII J. BRANTINGHAM. The publishers of this volume would fail in their object of presenting to their readers a review of the lives of the prominent citizens of the county were they to omit that of our subject, formerly one of the influential business men of Rockford, where he was a capitalist, money broker and real-estate dealer, and was largely interested in property in Chicago. He died in New York City, August 5, 1891, while on a pleasure trip through the East and his remains were brought home for interment in the cemetery of this city.

He of whom we write was born in or near New York City, October 28, 1834, and received an exeellent education in his native place and in the business college of Chicago, having come West with his parents in 1855. Later, he removed to this county, where he occupied a high rank among its wealthy eitizens and resided until his decease. He was not interested in political affairs other than to east a Republican vote at election times. The lady to whom he was married in Rockford bore the name of Miss Ada Brice, and had her birth in Washington, Pa. She was an infant of two years when her parents came to the city, and received an excellent education in the public schools. Her father, Capt. James Brice, was also a native of the Keystone State, where he owned and operated a foundry in Washington. Disposing of his interests there in the latter part of the '40s, he came to this section and here resided until a few years prior to his decease, which occurred in 1887, at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. He was in no sense of the word an office-seeker, preferring the quiet and happiness of his fireside to the turnoil of public life, but always voted with the Republican party.

During the late Civil War, Mr. Brice raised Company H, Ninety-second Illinois Infantry, at Rochelle, of which he was elected Captain, and went with his regiment to the South, where he was engaged in fighting for two years. At the expiration of that time, he received his honorable discharge on account of physical disability and returned home. During his entire service, he escaped accident, although he was in many hard-fought engagements, and at one time was offered a Colonel's commission, but declined to accept the honor. He was an active worker in the Grand Army of the Republic and his life record was such as to commend him to the respect and esteem of the entire community.

The maiden name of Mrs. Brantingham's mother was Miss Anna Miller; she was a native of Pennsylvania, and died when her daughter was an infant of two years. The lady whom Mr. Brice chose for his second wife is still surviving and makes her home in Tama, Iowa. To our subject and his wife have been born four children, who have been given good educations and fitted to lill honorable stations in life.

ORTON W. SERGENT. The highly cultivated farm owned and operated by Mr. Sergent comprises one hundred and forty acres on section 34, Flora Township, and is numbered among the best estates in Boone County. Since the present proprietor purchased the place in 1869, he has devoted his attention closely to its improvement, and has not only brought the soil to a high state of cultivation, but has erected a first-class set of farm buildings.

The Sergent family originated in England, whence the great-grandfather of our subject emigrated to America and settled in New England, where he was engaged as a tiller of the soil. The grandfather of our subject, Timothy Sergent, was born in Vermont, it is thought, and was a farmer by occupation. About 1852, he removed from the Green Mountain State, and, settling in the town of Franklin, De Kalb County, Ill., bought a place, where he made his home until called hence by death. The maiden name of his wife was Abigail Allen.

Eli Sergent, father of our subject, was born in Mendon, Rutland County, Vt., and was reared to manbood in his native place. About 1834, he removed to New York State and settled in the town of Gaines, Orleans County, where he bought a tract of land partly improved, and engaged in its cultivation until 1858. In April of that year, he came to Illinois and located in Henry County, where he operated a rented farm for three years. His home was next established in Franklin Township, De Kalb County, where he remained a few years, afterward buying the farm on which our subject now resides. In 1877, he removed to Belvidere, where he now lives retired from active duties.

The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Hannah K. Hogle, was born in Ticonderoga, N. Y., the daughter of Robert and Polly (Allen) Hogle, and died in May, 1880. Three of her children are now living: Horton W., Ora J., and Celinda E., wife of Thomas Lane. The first-named was born in Gaines, Orleans County, N. Y., December 7, 1835. He was reared and educated in his native place, and in the fall of 1856 came to Illinois, having in his possession $20 in cash and a pair of horses. It was during a time of financial depression that he located in this State and fifty cents per day was the highest wages received.

For a number of years, Mr. Sergent operated as a renter, and in 1869 purchased his father's farm, where he has since resided. His marriage, December 24, 1853, united him with Miss Mary J. Sleezer, who was born in Champion, Jefferson County, N. Y., and they are the parents of two children, namely: Edith H., who resides at home, and George Eli, who married Dora Heyward, and resides in Flora. The eldest child, Kittie, was born January 6, 1855, married Howard Shannon, and died in April, 1876; Arrissa M. was born April 28, 1858, married Seth Sleezer, and died February 15, 1891, leaving one child, Frank W.

Martin Sleezer, grandfather of Mrs. Sergent, was born in Germany, and, as far as known, was the only member of the family who ever came to America. He settled in Saratoga County, N. Y., where his son George was born and reared. The latter learned the trade of a mason and plasterer, and was thus occupied in Jefferson County, for a number of years. In the year 1854, he removed to Illinois and settled in Newark, Kendall County, where his death occurred in December, 1855. His wife, Polly (Woodward) Sleezer, was born in Providence, Saratoga County, N. Y., the daughter of Abraham and Susan (Van Curler) Woodward, and died in Gridley, McLean County, Ill.

In the social circles of Flora Township, Mr. and Mrs. Sergent occupy a prominent position, to which their hospitality, upright lives and nobility of character abundantly entitle them. They have not been without their sorrows and misfortunes, but through them all they have retained their cheerfulness of heart and faith in mankind. They have won the confidence of all with whom they have come in contact, and have done their share in the advancement of every cause for the benefit of the community.

OBERT GARRETT, who is living a retired life on his farm on section 15, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, claims Ohio as the State of his nativity. He was born in Lake County, May 17, 1832, and is of English descent. His grandfather, Patrick Garrett, spent his entire life on the Isle of Man, where Thomas Garrett, his father, was born and reared. He married Margaret Kewish, and she and her parents, Charles and Ann (McKnight) Kewish, were also natives of the Isle of Man. After their marriage, they emigrated to America, in 1827, sailing from Liverpool to New York, where they arrived after a voyage of nine weeks and three days. Mr. Garrett went directly to Ohio, but soon returned to Buffalo, N. Y., where he spent a year. He then again went to the Buckeye State, and purchased thirty acres of timber land at $16 per acre, upon which he built a log cabin, making it his home until 1838. At that time he came to Illinois. He found Rockford to be a mere hamlet in the midst of a sparsely settled country, most of the land being owned by the Government. He opened the first shoe shop in Rockford, and there followed his trade for two years, when he purchased the farm on which our subject now resides, and built a frame house, 18x24 feet, the family becoming its occupants in the spring of that year. He followed his trade, while his sons operated the farm, upon which he resided until his death, which occurred in June, 1873, at the age of seventy-eight years. His wife had passed away in February previous, when sixtysix years of age. In their family were six sons: William, John, Robert, Thomas and Benjamin, all residing in this county, and Charles, who died in Salt Lake City, in 1891.

Robert Garrett has resided in Illinois since he was a lad of six summers, and amid the wild scenes of frontier life was reared to manhood. After attaining his majority, he learned the trade of a carpenter and builder, and carried on that business until 1886, since which time he has lived a retired life. In 1863, he purchased a farm on section 15, Guilford Township, and it has since been his home. He now owns a well-improved farm, and is enjoying the rest which he has so truly earned and richly deserves.

Mr. Garrett was united in marriage, in 1862, with Dalla Hayes, who was born in this township, and is a daughter of Samuel Baker Hayes, one of the pioneer settlers of Winnebago County. He was born in Connecticut, whence he removed to the Province of Ontario, Canada, residing for a number of years near St. Thomas. He then emigrated to Illinois in the fall of 1838, and bought a "squatter's" claim, consisting of a tract of Government land on section 17, Guilford Township. When the land came into market, he purchased his farm at $1.25 per acre. The log cabin which he there erected was the birthplace of Mrs. Garrett. Upon his farm Mr. Hayes resided until his death. He was three times married, his second wife being the mother of Mrs. Garrett. Her maiden name was Catherine Govro. She was born in Canada, and was of French descent.

Two sons were born unto our subject and his wife: Dexter, the elder, married Louisa Haley, and they have one daughter, Mand; Lincoln wedded Alice Wilmot, and they have one child, Vera. The Garrett family is one widely and favorably known in this community. Mr. Garrett is a self-made man, who by his own efforts has steadily worked his way upward and acquired a handsome competence that now enables him to live a retired life. His sterling worth and strict integrity have won him high esteem.

EVI L. CHANDLER was born in Chester, Vt., November 1, 1810, the son of Thomas and Isena Chandler, and was one of seven children included in the family circle. His marriage, which occurred June 24, 1869, united him with Miss Phebe A. Sheldon, who was born in Medina County, Ohio, August 13, 1821, the daughter of David and Anna Sheldon. For further particulars in regard to her family history, the reader is referred to the sketch of Ira J. Sheldon, found elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. and Mrs. Chandler make their home in a pretty residence in the village of Pecatonica, and are highly esteemed by the people of that community. Mrs. Chandler, in her religious convictions, is identified with the Methodist Episeopal Church, of which she is an active and faithful member.

ENYON REYNOLDS is now living retired at his pleasant home, No. 309 North Main Street, Rockford, surrounded by all the comforts of life. Coming here in January, 1865, in order to secure good educational advantages for his children, he has since made the city his home, and is identified with many of its interests. Prior to locating here, he resided in Randall Township, Kenosha County, Wis., where he had settled on Government land and improved a fine farm. Later, he sold the place, and purchasing another farm, improved a splendid estate of nearly five hundred acres, which is now the property of his eldest son.

In his native place, Washington County, N. Y., Mr. Reynolds was reared to manhood. His father, John, and his grandfather, Oliver Reynolds, were both natives of Rhode Island and farmers by occupation. Grandfather Reynolds, accompanied by his family, removed at an early day to Washington County, N. Y., settling in Easton Township, where he cleared a farm from the thick forest growths. His death occurred when he was forty years of age, but his wife attained to a good old age. John Reynolds was a successful farmer and followed that occupation in Washington County, where he died in July, 1864, aged seventy-two years. His wife preceded him in death about six months. She was a faithful member of the Baptist Church, while he was a Quaker and reared in the Friends' Church.

The subject of this sketch was the fourth in a family of twelve children, seven of whom still survive. After coming to Wisconsin, Mr. Reynolds met and married Miss Anna E. McCommings, who was born and reared in Eric, Pa. Her father, Nathan McCommings, was born in Scotland, whence he emigrated to America with his parents and settled in Eric County, Pa. There he was married to Miss Mary Dewey, whose brother was the first white child born in Eric County. After marriage, Nathan McCommings and his wife settled in Eric County, where his death occurred at the age of about forty-five years. His wife afterward came to Wisconsin and died at the home of Mrs. Reynolds when fifty-nine years old.

Mrs. Reynolds is one of twelve children, ten of whom attained to mature years. She is a true friend, kind neighbor, and is ever ready to extend a helping hand to those in need or trouble. Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds became the parents of four children, two of whom survive. Sarah died when twenty years old and another child died young. John Floyd, who owns and operates the Wisconsin homestead, married Carrie M. Slade, and they have three children: Floyd, Anna and Clarence. The other son, Clarence, is a successful liveryman on Thirty-third Street, Chicago. His wife, whose maiden name was Kate Fellows, died leaving one child, Kenyon. In political matters, Mr. Reynolds is a Republican, true to the principles of that party. He and his wife are attendants at the Christian Union Church, of which they are prominent members.

AMUEL C. WESTERLING. Rockford is a well-known musical center, and among its inhabitants are to be found many whose tastes are correct and refined. There is therefore, a tempting field here for the musical merchant whose stock bears the stamp of merit, and whose reputation as an authority cannot be questioned. In Rockford there are several prominent dealers in musical instruments, but foremost among them is Mr. Samuel C. Westerling, who, in addition to a large line of musical instruments, pianos, organs, etc., as fine as are manufactured in the United States, he handles a large line of sewing machines—a dozen different kinds.

This flourishing business is located at No. 429 West State Street, and he has constantly on hand a full line of the best instruments. The excellence of his stock has long since secured for him a name second to none. Mr. Westerling began business here in 1877, and he has a very extensive trade. which he has built up entirely himself, and his career affords an excellent example of what pluck and energy can accomplish under adverse circumstances and against keen competition. He came to this city from Freeport, Ill., where he had been in the same business for three years, and previous to that he had carried on the same business for nine years in Toledo, Ohio. He is a man of experience in this line of business, having sold his first machine on the 5th of June, 1852. He had adjusted the twenty-fifth sewing machine sent out by the old firm of Wheeler & Wilson, and what he does not know about sewing machines is not worth knowing. Almost his entire life has been devoted to this business. He was the chief promoter of the Royal Sewing Machine Company, of Rockford, and an ex-Director and stock-holder in the same. Although he began at the bottom of the ladder in his business, filling all the different positions from office-boy to manager, special agent and dealer, he has now reached the topmost round and is now in a position to enjoy life.

Our subject is another of the many prominent citizens of Rockford who are of foreign birth, and, like the majority of them, he claims Sweden as his native country. He was born in Wester Gothland Province, but came to the United States when a small boy, and was reared in Chautauqua County, N. Y. His people left Gottenburg, Sweden, in the '40s, crossed the ocean in a three-mast vessel, and made the port of Boston after a number of weeks on the ocean. He was married in Ohio to Miss Anna E. Coder, who was born, reared and educated in the Buckeye State. Her parents came originally from Pennsylvania, and her mother is still living and a resident of Toledo, Ohio, Mr. Westerling is a Republican in his political views, and he and wife, although they attend church regularly, are not members. They have no children.

The original of this sketch takes great pride in the fact that he never had a lawsuit in business, being able to make satisfactory settlement without, and that he never had to discount a dollar.

SEORGE CLINTON HUTCHINS resides on = section 9, Harlem Township. There is probably no other resident of Winnebago County who has lived so long within its borders as our subject, and this work would be incomplete without his sketch. He was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., March 20, 1833, and is a son of Nathan and Lavina (Olmstead) Hutchins, the former a native of Otsego County, N. Y., and the latter of Massachusetts. His father was reared to manhood upon a farm, and removed to Chautauqua County when a young man, becoming one of its pioneer settlers. Buying a tract of timber land from the Holland Purchase, he cleared and developed it, making a good farm, upon which he resided until 1833. In that year, he made a visit to Illinois, and while here located a claim of Government land in Will County. He had made the journey on foot and in the same way returned to New York. The succeeding year, he came with his family to the new home which he had provided and there he continued to reside until 1838, when he came to Winnebago County, locating in Harlem Township. He purchased a tract of Government land and entered it at the land office in Galena and soon the work of development and improvement began. All of the experiences and trials of frontier life were experienced by himself and family. They used to pound corn and wheat in a mortar and thus secure flour, as there were no near mills or markets. Their grain had to be hauled to Chicago, and there their supplies were obtained. The death of Mr. Hutchins occurred on the old homestead in 1876, at the age of eighty-one years. He had made of his land a good farm and had acquired a considerable competence. His wife also spent her last days on the old homestead and was called to her final rest in 1874. In their family were four children: Henry, Erastus, George and Mary.

It was during the infancy of our subject that his parents came to Illinois and he was reared among the wild scenes of frontier life. At first there was no schools, for the settlers were widely scattered and many could not afford the expense of hiring a teacher. Mr. Hutchins attended the first school held in the neighborhood; one-half of a double log house was used as a place of meeting, the other portion of the building being occupied by a family. The seats were made of slabs, with wooden pins for legs, and similar wooden pins inserted in the wall with boards laid upon them served as desks for the larger scholars to write upon. As soon as he was old enough, he began aiding his father in the labors of the farm, and has often hauled the farm products all the way to Chicago. He has made agricultural pursuits his life work. He resided with his parents throughout their entire lives, caring for them in their old age, and now owns and occupies the old homestead farm, upon which he has lived since his infancy.

On July 11, 1859, Mr. Hutchins was joined in wedlock with Mary Steen, who was born near Montreal, Canada, and is a daughter of James and Mary Ann Steen. Their union has been blessed with five children, four sons and a daughter: Byron J., Herbert G., Minnic and Harry, and Mark, deceased. The parents are both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and their lives have been in harmony with their professions. In politics, Mr. Hutchins is a stalwart Republican. These worthy people have a very wide acquaintance throughout the community where they have so long made their home, and are held in the highest regard for their sterling worth.

OVEJOY C. HALL, one of the leading business men of New Milford, who is engaged in general merchandising, has spent his entire life in this locality. He was born in New Milford Township, Winnebago County, October 28, 1852, and is a son of Thomas and Anna (Ilunter) Hall, both of whom were natives of the Emerald Isle. In that land they were married, and about 1842 emigrated to America, sailing from Liverpool to Canada, whence they came to Illinois.

Our subject spent his childhood days under the parental roof, and at the age of fifteen began earning his own livelihood. Farming has been his principal occupation, but in 1889 he bought an interest in a New Milford store, and about the same time was appointed Postmaster by President Harrison.

On March 20, 1874, Mr. Hall was joined in wedlock to Miss Emma Seck, of New Milford, daughter of John and Eliza (Montgomery) Seck, who emigrated to Illinois from the East about 1857 and settled upon a farm on section 29, New Milford Township. The young couple began their domestie life upon a farm of one hundred acres, a part of which was the wife's property, while sixty acres were purchased by Mr. Hall. He erected upon it a good residence, commodious barns, put the entire farm under a high state of cultivation, set out evergreen and other ornamental trees, planted a nice orchard and made a pleasant home and a valuable and desirable farm. He there engaged in general farming and stock-raising until his removal to the village, when he rented his farm and in partnership with Charles A. Chase bought out the general merchandise establishment of W. II. Gardner. In connection with their dealings in this line, they also handle farm implements, and sold twenty McCormick harvesters and ten mowers last season. Their trade in both branches of industry is constantly increasing and their liberal patronage is certainly well deserved. Mr. Hall is an enterprising and industrious business man and by careful attention to all the details of his business has won a well-merited success.

Our subject and his wife have one son and two daughters: Maud A., who was born November 25, 1876, is now attending the High School and also studying music; Inez, born October 23, 1880; and Eugene, born April 1, 1889. The parents rank high in social circles and their home is the abode of hospitality. They have a wide circle of friends and acquaintances in this community, and it is with pleasure that we present their sketch to our readers.

NOTE DWIN A. COVEY, a retired farmer residing in Belvidere, is one of the oldest un-tive-born citizens of this county. He was born in Boone Township, May 29, 1843. His grandfather, Theodore Covey, was a native of New Hampshire, and the father, Stephen Covey, was born in Chester, Rockingham County, N. H., November 5, 1801. When young, he accompanied his parents to Vermont, and in early manhood removed to St. Lawrence County, N. Y., becoming one of the pioneer settlers of that region. He engaged in cutting timber, which was burned, and from the ashes was extracted potash, or black salts, as it was called. He removed from there to Chautauqua County, settling near Mayville, where he engaged in the manufacture of shingles until 1839, when, with his family, he came to Boone County and spent the winter in Belvidere. He then rented a farm east of the town for one year, after which he purchased a tract of land near Poplar Grove. Upon it was a log house, and a few aeres of land had been broken. He lived upon that farm until 1850, and afterwards bought and sold several farms. He was a resident of this county until his death, which occurred in Caledonia Township, August 21, 1885. His wife was in her maidenhood Miss Susan Jenner. She was born in Moriah, Essex County, N. Y., July 4, 1810, and is a daughter of Stephen and Betsy (Mather) Jenner. She was called to her final rest in August. 1882.

The first school which our subject attended was taught in a log house three miles from his home. At an early age, he commenced to assist his father in the labors of the farm, and remained with his parents until their deaths. He commenced farming for himself at the time of his marriage, and the farm upon which the young couple began their domestic life continued to be their home until 1890, when they came to Belvidere and built the home they now occupy.

On the 12th of September, 1862, Mr. Covey married Elizabeth J. Dimond, who was born in Brantford, Ontario, Canada, and is a daughter of Richard and Sarah (Luxton) Dimond. The father was born in the parish of Rexford, Devonshire, England, where James Dimond, the grandfather, spent his entire life. Richard learned the trade of a mason, which he followed in England until after his marriage to Miss Luxton, who was born in the same locality as her husband, and was a daughter of Hugh and Mary Luxton. After their marriage, they emigrated to Prince Edward Island, and four years later became residents of Brantford, Province of Ontario, where Mr. Dimond bought a tract of timber land, cleared a farm, and erected a good set of frame buildings. He there made his home until 1850, when, with his family, he came to Boone County and purchased a partially improved farm in Caledonia Township. His first home was a log eabin, but it was afterwards replaced by a stone residence. Mr. Dimond did all the work of build. ing the house himself, even quarried the stone and burned the lime. His death occurred at the old homestead, July 27, 1886. His wife passed away in 1863. They had a family of five children: Mary A., Thirza, Josiah, Stephen and Elizabeth J.

Four children grace the union of Mr. and Mrs. Covey: Fred, Frank R., Ira J. and Arthur A.

Fred married Blanche Wheeler and has one child, Louis Stephen. The Covey household is the abode of hospitality, and its members rank high in social circles. Mr. Covey cast his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has since been a stanch supporter of the Republican party. He has led a busy and useful life, and as the result of his industry, perseverance and good management, is now enabled to spend his declining days in retirement from labor, enjoying the fruits of his former toil.

EORGE MANSON. This gentleman, although still a young man, has a fine reputation as a member of the agricultural community, and a citizen of whose worth no one is in doubt. He is a native of Winnebago County, having been born in Shirland, November 16, 1850. He is at present residing on an excellent estate in Shirland Township, his father, Nicholas Manson, who was born in Canada in 1811, making his home with him.

The father of our subject brought his wife and family of two children overland to this county in 1840, landing in Shirland after a voyage of six weeks. His wife, Caroline Holden, was born in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., in 1809, and after having borne her husband three children, departed this life in 1847. The lady whom he afterward chose for his wife was Eliza Eddy, of Troy, N. Y., and to them were born three children: Nicholas E. and James E. (twins), and George, our subject. The wife and mother passed to the world beyond, September 31, 1890, in her seventy-seventh year.

The father of our subject remained at home until attaining his twenty-fourth year, and when starting out in life, was possessed of a strong determination to gain a handsome competency. In addition to his splendid farm, he is the owner of a home in Shirland. He has been a life-long Republitan, which is also the political faith of our subject, and is numbered among the leading citizens of Shirland Township. On locating in this county, he purchased forty acres of Government land, on which he placed a good hewed log house, and added from time to time to his estate, until in 1881 he was the possessor of two hundred and forty broad acres, valued at $25 per acre. His father, the grandfather of our subject, bore the name of James Manson, and was a native of Connecticut. He met his death by a run-away team when a young man.

The original of this sketch was married in Beloit, Wis., in 1874, to Miss Nettie J., daughter of Franklin S. and Elizabeth (Shrake) Hendee. Her father, who was a native of Goshen County, Vt., is now engaged in operating a farm in Wisconsin. The mother was born in Dresden County, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Manson have become the parents of four children, one of whom, an infant son, died unnamed. Mattie Belle was born January 28, 1876; Alma May, May 14, 1887, and George Noble, December 2, 1890.

Mrs. Manson's father, F. S. Hendee, is one of the extensive farmers of Rock County, Wis., owning three hundred acres there, besides a farm in Brule County, S. Dak. He came West in 1847, when seventeen years of age, and has built up a fine reputation as a man of push and enterprise. He has become the father of twelve children, one of whom is deceased.

ENRY LOVESEE. In the city of Berkshire, England, our subject was born in March, 1830, and his father, William Lovesee, and his grandfather, William Lovesee, Sr., were natives of that country also. Both father and grandfather were weavers by trade, the latter having his own loom in his house, but during his last days he was a farrier, or stock doctor. He was still vigorous and active when our subject left England with his parents in 1835, and could relate many interesting experiences and anecdotes. Our subject remembers hearing him tell about how he went to Newgate to witness the hanging of nine men for sheep stealing, that being the penalty in those days.

William Lovesee, Jr., followed his trade in a factory, manufacturing sail cloth, ropes, etc., but when steam was first introduced, he, with about three hundred other employes, was thrown out of work. He, being the eldest son born to his parents, inherited all his father's land, only about twenty acres, valued at about $30 per acre, and he sold his birthright in order to come to America. His father would not consent to his disposing of his property and coming to the United States unless he would consent to take with him his uncle John, who was a sailor, and the latter's family. This company numbered fourteen and they embarked from St. Catherine's Dock, London, on the "Cambrill," in the fall of 1835, reaching Pittsford, Monroe County, N. Y., late in November. The parish in which they lived in England fitted this company out for their adventurous trip, and when they landed in this country their means were limited to fifty cents. However, they had come here to stay and for some time they lived in an old shop, so open to the weather that our subject can remember seeing the stars shining through the roof. This little company remained in the Empire State about four years.

Henry Lovesee, at the youthful age of nine years, was obliged to begin the battle of life for himself, and being possessed of a wonderful amount of pluck for a little fellow, he began as a driver of horses on the Erie Canal and continued this for about one year. In the fall of 1837, he came by way of the Lakes to Chicago, where his brother John, who had located two years previously in the State of Illinois, met him with a horse and There were no bridges then between wagon. Chicago and Roscoe, Ill., where the brother lived, and they followed the Atkinson Trail, then the only white man's trail. They swam the Fox River near Dundee and after landing in Winnebago County, our subject went to work on a farm and followed this with teaming until twenty-five years of age.

Our subject selected his wife in the person of Miss Matilda Dodge, a native of Ohio, and the daughter of Almeron and Sally (Baldwin) Dodge, the parents were natives of the Buckeye State, but early settlers of Roscoe, Ill., coming here in the '40s. Mr. and Mrs. Lovesce commenced house-keeping in section 34, on thirty-two acres of land that he had bought with his earnings, having worked six years for Benjamin Richardson. Ilis first wife died leaving one daughter, Ellen, who died when twelve years of age. Mr. Lovesee's second wife was Amanda Dodge, a sister of his first wife; she lived but about four years, leaving at her death one son, Francis, who grew up, married, and died when twenty-nine years of age.

Mr. Lovesee's present wife, whose maiden name was Amelia Lloyd, was a native of England and came with her parents, Thomas and Charlotte (Kemp) Lloyd, to this country when but six years of age. Our subject's last union resulted in the birth of four children, two of whom, a son and daughter, died in infancy. The two children living are Ellen, now Mrs. Thomas Lovesee, her husband being a distant relative, residing in Wisconsin, and Giles Henry, who is now fifteen years of age and is attending the school at home.

Agricultural pursuits have been our subject's occupation in life and in this he has been fairly successful. He added sixty acres to his original tract, and, as time passed by, he bought other tracts, seven different farms in all. About sixteen years ago, he felt the need of rest after the years of hard labor he had passed through, and retired, having done very little since then except to collect his interest. His vote is generally cast with the Republican party, but he is not such a strict partisan but what he can vote for good men on the other side. He is not a member of any church, but generally attends the Methodist. Upright and honorable in all his relations, Mr. Lovesee is one of the county's best citizens.

PHRAIM WYMAN. The gentleman of whom it is our pleasure and privilege to here attempt a short sketch is the oldest living resident in point of settlement in Rockford, having come here September 20, 1835. He has witnessed with interest the gradual evolution of this section from its original wildness to its present prosperous condition of beautiful farms and thriving villages.

The original of this sketch was born in Laneaster, Worcester County, Mass., June 26, 1809. His father, Deacon Benjamin Wyman, was born on the same farm as was his son, while his father, Nathaniel Wyman, hailed from Woburn, Middlesex County, Mass. The ancestors of our subject were English, and emigrated to America in Colonial times, settling in what was then West Cambridge, but is now Woburn. The grandfather of our subject was a farmer by occupation and departed this life in Lancaster.

Benjamin Wyman was reared on the home farm and received such advantages in an educational way as the district schools of his locality afforded. He spent his entire life on the farm where he was born. He was very prominent in church circles and was Deacon in the Unitarian Church at Laneaster. The maiden name of his wife was Lucretia Fair, who was born in Lancaster. Ephraim Wyman assisted his father in carrying on the home farm and attended school in his district. He remained under the parental roof until attaining his fifteenth year, at which time he went to Keene, N. II., where he served an apprenticeship at the baker's trade. Having become master of that art, he engaged in that line of business in Keene until June 11, 1835.

Desiring to know something more of the Western country, Mr. Wyman emigrated to the Prairie State via stage to Albany, where he boarded a train which conveyed him to Schenectady, N. Y., whence he traveled by canal to Utica, from there by stage to Buffalo, by lake to Detroit and by stage to Chicago. In that city, he engaged to work at $1.25 per day, assisting to stake out lots three miles south of the Court House. He later assisted in laying out the road leading from Ft. Dearborn to Ft. Howard, Wis., being thus engaged until September, 1835. At that time, he purchased a horse and saddle in the Garden City and started for Midway, as Rockford was then called. When locating in this now prominent city, there were but six families in the vicinity, three on either side of the river. He continued to make this place his home, aiding in its development, until 1850, a part of the time being engaged in operating a bakery and boarding-house.

At the above-named date, Mr. Wyman started for the Golden State, where he remained for three years. Returning to Winnebago County, he again resided in Rockford for two years, after which time he spent three years in his old home in Lancaster, Mass. Mr. Wyman has been a continuous resident in Rockford with the exception of the few years above recounted since 1835, and can thus relate many an interesting tale of life in the thinly-settled country.

In 1853, the original of this sketch was united in marriage in Lancaster, Mass., to Carolina Pearee, Mrs. Wyman was born in Waltham, Mass., and was the daughter of William and Mary (Hager) Pearee. In religious matters, our subject and his wife are members of the Unitarian Church, to the support of which denomination they are liberal contributors. Mr. Wyman has always voted the Republican ticket, believing that party to be in the right. He has been a hard and steady worker all his life, commencing with his bare hands at a tender age, and the ground work of his success lay in his practice of economy and thrift.

AVID ATWOOD. After years of well.

directed efforts as one of the farmers of Winnebago County, this gentleman has retired in affluence to the enjoyment of a comfortable home and the society of many friends in the city of Rockford. He is one of the pioneers of the county and was born in Middlefield, Berkshire County, Mass., June 11, 1824. His father, Phineas Atwood, was a native of Great Barrington, that State, and followed the trade of a blacksmith in connection with farming. He was a local Methodist preacher in Middlefield and Washington.

The grandfather of our subject, Hezekiah Atwood, was, as far as is known, born in Berkshire County, Mass. In 1842, he removed to Lewis County, N. Y., and, in 1845, came to Winnebago County, making his home for a twelvemonth in New Milford, and then became the proprietor of an estate in the town of Harlem, where his death occurred in his eighty-tifth year. His wife prior to her marriage was known as Huldah Hascall, a native of Peru, Mass., and the daughter of Roger and Mary (Webster) Hascall. Her decease occurred on the home farm in Harlem at the advanced age of ninety-four. The father of our subject served in the War of 1812, and with his wife was an active and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The following ten children were included in the parental household: Phineas, Harriet N., Mary W., Patience, David, Louisa, Jonathan, Hezekiah, Bradley S. and Sylvester. Our subject was given a good education and accompanied his parents on their removal to Lewis County, N. Y., and from there to Illinois in 1845, making the journey by way of the Lakes to Chicago, thence overland in a stage to Rockford. At that time Winnebago County was sparsely settled, and, as most of the land was still owned by the Government, he commenced life here working out on farms by the month. Two years later, however, he purchased a tract of wild prairie land in Harlem Township, for which he paid $7 per acre. Cutting the timber on his farm, he drew the logs to Spafford & Gregory's Mill, at Rockford, and with the lumber made from them erected a frame house, 18x24 feet in dimensions, and a story and a half high. In that dwelling, he and his wife commenced housekeeping, moving in before there were either doors or windows provided. and which, when completed, was the most pretentious house in the neighborhood. Mr. Atwood hauled his corn to Beloit, twelve miles distant. which he marketed at twenty cents a bushel, and in this way made the money to pay for his farm. He was very successful and continued actively engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1888, when he left his sons in charge of the place and removed to Rockford, where he and his wife now live retired from active labor.

The lady to whom Mr. Atwood was married, November 15, 1848, was Miss Elizabeth Crill. a native of Starks, Herkimer County, N. Y., and the daughter of James Crill, who hailed from that county. His father, the grandfather of Mrs. Atwood, bore the name of Thomas and was born in Germany, coming to America as a soldier with Burgoyne, during the Revolutionary War. He was taken prisoner by the Colonists, with whom he was in sympathy, and later, taking the oath of allegiance, became a true and loyal citizen. Thomas Crill located in Herkimer County, where his death occurred. The father of Mrs. Atwood was married in his native county, and in 1844 accompanied by his wife and nine of his ten children emigrated to Illinois, spending a few months in New Milford. He then went to Ogle County and purchased land in what is now Monroe Township, where he resided until his decease. He was a man of excellent judgment and was very successful in all his ventures, owning at the time of his decease upward of two thousand acres of land. In addition to superintending the cultivation of his various farms, he was engaged quite extensively in money loaning.

The mother of Mrs. Atwood bore the maiden name of Susan Givets, a native of Herkimer County, whose decease occurred on the home farm in Ogle County. Two brothers of Mrs. Atwood, Isaac and John, now own fifteen hundred acres of the old homestead. Another brother, Nelson, was an early settler of Concordia, Cloud County, Kan., where he was the proprietor of an hotel for a number of years and at present is residing on his tract of one thousand acres near Concordia. Mr. and Mrs. Atwood have two sons, James M. and Charles D. The former is the husband of Lillie Tuttle and has three children, Jennie, Calla and Harry D. Charles married Emma Shaul. They were married in Amsterdam, N. Y., in 1888. Mrs. Atwood is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which body she is an active and enthusiastic worker.

HAUNCY B. WILMOT. A prominent citizen of Rockton Township, Winnebago County, he whose name is at the head of this sketch has the interest of the community at heart and takes pride in everything that shall redound to the honor of the people with whom his lot is cast. His birth occurred in Oneida County, N. Y., September 7, 1836, his parents being Luther and Caroline (Broddock) Wilmot, also natives of the Empire State, the father being born in 1800.

Ebenezer Wilmot, the grandfather of our subject, was a wealthy agriculturist, who was born in Greenbush, N. Y., and died in his fifty-seventh year in Oncida County, that State. His wife bore the name of Clarissa Rowley and became the mother of three children: Johanna, Luther R. and Adeline. Johanna, who married Lorenzo White, is now deceased, and Adeline, Mrs. Levi Merrill, died in Orleans County, N. Y., in middle life, leaving two sons: Gilford D. and Milton. Mr. Merrill was a volunteer soldier during the late war and died of fever while in the service.

The mother of our subject was the daughter of Nicholas and Eva (Campbell) Broddock, natives of Eastern New York, where they were well-to-do farmers in Oneida County and reared a family of six children: Julia, Chauney B., William, Emily. Adeline and Josephine. William died in Oneida County, N. Y., in 1882; he had previously come to Rockton and in company with our subject carried on a farm. Luther R. Wilmot departed this life when seventy-three years of age in New York, and his wife, who still survives him, is in her seventy-ninth year and makes her home with her daughter Josephine near Oneida Lake.

The original of this sketch was trained in farming pursuits, and in the winter of 1862 came West, and for one season was engaged in farming in Wisconsin. soon after which he came to Winnebago County and operated a farm in company with his brother William. His marriage with Miss Amelia Keeney occurred in the spring of 1867. She died leaving a son, Lewis L., and an infant of four months.

The lady whom our subject chose as his second wife was Miss Fannie Darrow, of Oneida County, N. Y.; she departed this life within four years after her marriage. The present wife of Mr. Wilmot, to whom he was married in March, 1885, was Mrs. Cordelia A. Southworth, nee Baker. Her father, George Baker, was a native of New England and died at an advanced age, in Eric County, leaving a widow and four children. Mrs. Wilmot, by her first union, is the mother of two children: Merton R., now residing in Mayesville, Ark., and Frank E., a farmer in Shirland Township, Winnebago County.

He of whom we write purchased his present farm of two hundred acres in 1867, for which he paid $16 per acre. He later added forty acres more, which cost him $27 per acre, all of which is under cultivation with the exception of seven or eight acres of excellent timber land. In the summer of 1890, he erected his fine large farm house, which cost $2,000, and numerous substantial and neat outbuildings stamp its owner as a man of push and enterprise, with means to carry out whatever he undertakes. He is thoroughly honest in all his dealings and has been the architect of his own fortune, as he came to the county poor in this world's goods. He keeps a number of milch cows on his place, and he disposes of the milk at the Coon Creek Cheese Factory, of which organization he is a stockholder and Director. The factory, which has been in operation only two years, has won a reputation for turning out the best quality of cheese, and its originators have already found it be a paying investment.

Mr. Wilmot has been chosen to fill various local positions and for several years was Commissioner of Highways. Although inclining toward Democratic principles, he easts his vote for the best man regardless of party. With his wife, he is a member in good standing of the Methodist Episcopal Church and his personal life is an example of uprightness and straightforward, simple honor. He is blessed with a good constitution and is still very active, although the hard labor on the farm is carried on by his son.

UDLEY LYFORD Esq., more familiarly known in Wunnebago County and Northern Illinois as "Dud" Lyford, is one of the most jovial and genial Granger Republicans in the State. He was originally from the Granite State, born in Canterbury, November 6, 1835, and the son of Thomas and Eliza B. (Greeley) Lyford, both typical New Englanders, the father born on the 14th of February. 1807, and the mother on the 8th of July. 1809, on the old Greeley Farm in Gilmanton Township, thirteen miles from Concord, N. II. They were married in their native State and there the father followed his trade, stone cutting, in connection with farming until his eldest child, our subject, was seven years of age, when they sold the home there and emigrated to Roscoe Township Ill., arriving here in October, 1842. They came by land with teams, except from Buffalo, N. Y., to Indiana, and settled where Mr. Lyford now lives on part of his present farm, buying out the claim of one Dudley Greeley, who had come here from the East six years previously. Here Mr. and Mrs. Lyford resided and reared their seven children, viz; Dudley, Elizabeth, Joseph G., Alice II., Thomas, Anna A, and Charles C., all of whom now survive, with the exception of Thomas, who died in 1863, when fourteen years of age. The father was killed by a threshing-machine on the 13th of December, 1858, when fifty-three years of age. His wife survived him until June, 1874, and died when seventy years of age. They were honest, upright citizens, and gave their hearty support to all enterprises of a landable nature.

Dudley Lyford was married in Rockton, April, 1862, to Miss Emma Harley, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Ancott) Harley, both natives of England. The parents came to this country when their eldest child, Frederick Harley, was an infant, and resided in New York City for some time, where the father followed the cabinet-maker's trade. Later they moved from the Empire State to Spartanburg, S. C., and still later, in 1847, to Rockton, Ill., making the entire journey by land with a horse. They started in the early spring and six weeks later reached Beloit, where the father followed his trade and also began dealing in furniture there. In 1836, he went to South America with a cargo of furniture and on the return trip encountered a heavy storm at sea and barely escaped with his life. He died at Rockton in the spring of 1856, when seventy-four years of age, leaving his widow and eight children. The mother received her final summons on the 1st of January, 1874. Of their children the following are now living: Elizabeth, now Mrs. John Harley, of Kansas; Benjamim M. Harley, in Kansas; William Harley, a farmer of Shirland, this county.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyford's union was blessed by the birth of a large family of children, four, three sons and one daughter, being deceased. Those living are: Helen (Nellie). Anna E., Marie, Kate, Thomas W., Dudley, Custer C., and Emma A., the youngest now twelve years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Lyford are giving their children every advantage for an education, for the former realizes what it is to be deprived of early advantages. His wife is well educated and was a school teacher prior to her marriage. Mr. Lyford's first farm was two hundred acres, part of the old homestead, and to this he has added until he has about twelve hundred acres, a large and commodious residence, and ample barns and outbuildings. In connection with farming, he is quite extensively engaged in stock-raising, feeding cattle for the market. He also raises some blooded stock in sheep. cattle, hogs and horses, and in cattle he likes the Durham stock very much. Our subject takes much interest in elections and is one of the leading spirits in the Republican ranks of the country. He has held no office, but has assisted his party in every way and is a member of the Central Republican Committee of the township. Mr. Lyford has resided on his farm for forty-nine years, and if a sunny, genial disposition has anything to do with longevity, he will live there forty-nine years longer.

ANIEL WITTER, who came to Boone County in 1841, was actively interested in the upbuilding of Manchester Township, until his decease, March 2, 1868. He was born in Madison County, N. Y., about 1819, and was the son of John Witter, also a native of that county, his birth occurring in March, 1781. The father died in February, 1855, in Jefferson County, N. Y., having been married to Prudence Colgrove, by whom he became the father of ten children.

Our subject's share of his father's estate was $150, and on coming West when a young man, he entered a claim of forty acres and purchased other claims to the amount of two hundred and forty acres. In January, 1849, he was married to Miss Sallie A., daughter of A. C. and Catherine (Eells) Adams, of New York. Mrs. Witter was the eldest in the family of three daughters, and was born in Delaware County, N. Y.

The parents of Mrs. Witter on coming West emigrated from Oxford, N. Y., and located four miles west of Beloit, soon after which the father rented property in Le Roy, thus county. A year or two later, he entered a claim, but did not live upon it. He subsequently purchased forty acres in Manchester Township, and departed this life in 1872, leaving a widow and three daughters, viz: Sallie A., Polly, the widow of Joseph Stiles, and Ellen, Mrs. Horace Graham.

Mr. and Mrs. Witter became the parents of five sons and one daughter, of whom three are deceased: Albert, who died in 1885, leaving a wife and three children; John, who departed this life in 1882, and Ulysses Sherman John Adams, who passed away in his twentieth year. Those living are Adelaide, Mrs. W. Mayberry; Lafayette, at home, and Addis A., a traveling salesman of Madison, Wis.; the latter married Minnie Isham, of Delavan, that State.

The mother of Mrs. Witter is still living at Clinton Juncton, Wis., at the advanced age of eighty years. The church home of our subject's wife is the Methodist Episcopal, in which denomination she is an active member. In company with her son, Lafayette, she is conducting a portion of the home farm in an intelligent and profitable manner.

ON. CHARLES E. FULLER, of Belvidere, who represents the Eighth Senatorial District in the Illinois Legislature, was born in Flora Township, Boone County. His father, Seymour Fuller, was born in Shaftsbury, Vt. The great-grandfather, Elijah Fuller, was a farmer and spent his last years in Shaftsbury. Solomon, the grandfather, was also a native of the Green Mountain State and a farmer by occupation. He removed to New York and spent his last days in Wyoming County.

Seymour Fuller was married in the Empire State to Eliza A. Mordoff, a native of Wyoming County, N. Y., and with his wife and one child he emigrated to Illinois in 1844, coming by the Lakes to Chicago and thence with teams to Boone County. He settled in what is now Flora Township and secured a tract of Government land, which he developed into a fine farm, upon which he still makes his home. In 1882, his wife was called to her final rest.

Our subject acquired his early education in the district schools, afterward was a student in the High school of Belvidere and spent one term in Wheaton College. In 1869, he commenced the study of law with Jesse S. Hildrufe, of Belvidere, was admitted to the Bar in 1870, and at once commenced practice. He married Sarah Mackey, daughter of Hugh Mackey, of Cherry Valley.

Socially, Mr. Fuller is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 90, A. F. & A. M.; the American Legion of Honor, and La Fayette Garrison, K. G. In polities, he has always been a stanch Republican. His first office was that of City Attorney, and in 1876 he was elected State Attorney of Boone County. Two years later, he was elected State Senator for the District composed of Winnebago and Boone Counties. In 1882, a new Senatorial District was formed, composed of Boone, McHenry and Lake Counties. This District had a holdover Senator, and in 1882 Mr. Fuller was elected Representative and re-elected in 1881. In 1888, he was elected Senator from the Eighth District for four years and is still holding the office. In 1884, he was a delegate to the National Convention and supported Gen. Logan for the Presidency until it was seen that he could not secure the nomination. when he voted for James G. Blaine, From a work entitled "Politics and Politicians of Illinois; A Succinct History of the State Covering a Period from 1808 until 1887," by D. W. Lusk, we quote the following from the account of the Thirty-fourth General Assembly:

"In point of ability, the Legislature compared very favorably with its predecessors in both the Senate and the House. In the Senate, the Democrats were particularly fortunate in having an array of able minds, and in some respects the remark is true of them in the House, but in neither body did any one man develop as their leader, as was the case on the Republican side. While there were many men of ability on the latter side, yet the leadership was conceded to Charles E. Fuller, and it is no flattery to him to say that he sustained himself ably and well in every conflict with the opposing forces, and after the seating of Mr. Weaver and the election of Gen. Logan, the Republicans being in the majority in the House, he would have been chosen Speaker but for his own advice in opposition to making any change in the organization of the House. Mr. Haines, however, recognized the right of the Republicans to control, and voluntarily yielded the chair to Mr. Fuller whenever the Republicans desired or requested it, so that during the contests over the passage of the election bills and the greater portion of the time during the last weeks of the session, when most of the real Legislative work was accomplished, Mr. Fuller occupied the chair and was the virtual Speaker of the House. At the close of the session, Mr. Graham, Democrat, of Macon, presented the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That members of the Thirty-fourth General Assembly return to Mr. Charles E. Fuller our hearty thanks for his courtesy while acting as Speaker and for the successful dispatch of the business of this House."

From the same work, we also take the following extract: "Mr. Fuller was Senator in the Thirtyfirst and Thirty-second General Assemblies and Representative in the Thirty-third and Thirtyfourth; was Chairman of the Committee on Railroads and member of the Committees on Judiciary, Retrenchment, Libraries, Civil Service and Rules, and Chairman of the Committee on the Governor's Message. Mr. Fuller was no less a leader in this Assembly than in the Thirty-fourth, and early manifested a disposition to legislate in the interests of the many by introducing House Bill No. 1, to reduce the contract rate of interest from eight to six per cent. The Committee on Judiciary recommended that it 'do pass,' but finding on second reading that it would be defeated, he amended it so as to make the legal rate seven per cent., and in this form it passed the House but failed in the Senate. He secured the passage of a bill to abolish judgment votes, but it fared in the Senate the fate of the interest bill. The bill appropriating $50,000 for a monument for Gen. John A. Logan was introduced by him. The act giving cities or villages power to license, tax or prohibit Cheap-John venders was his. He drafted House Bill No. 701, one of the most important of all the bills which became laws. He championed the Savings Bank Bill of the House and the General Banking Bill of the Senate, and seenred important amendments to each, both of which became laws. The Farmers' Insurance Bill, which originated in the Senate, was called up by him in the House, out of its regular order at each reading, and became a law. He had charge of Senator Crabtree's Anti-Bucket-shop Bill in the House and secured its passage; he advocated the submission to a vote of the people the question of Prohibition: he voted for and supported with his power of eloquence Merritt's Conspiracy Bill and Collins' Anti-Dynamite Bill, and no member of the Thirty-fifth General Assembly exercised a more potent influence in the Legislature in the interests of the masses of the people than did Mr. Fuller."

In the last session of the Senate, Mr. Fuller was Chairman of the Republican Senate Caucus, of the Joint Caucus and of the Republican Steering Committee. He was Chairman of the Senate Railroad Committee and introduced the Savings Bank Bill, which passed the Senate but met defeat in the House. He is one of the best-known men in the State, popular at home and abroad, and his position has been reached through his own ability. His fellow-citizens are justly proud of him and higher honors surely await him.

E. GOODWIN, M. D., for many years a leading physician of Rockford, was a native of Vermont, having been born in Chelsea, August 11, 1827. Under great difficulties and despite poverty, he succeeded in obtaining an education, being urged forward by an earnest desire for knowledge. It was no easy matter then to obtain even a crude education, and it was with great difficulty that the obstacles in his path were overcome. As he grew to manhood, his thoughts turned toward medicine and he resolved to follow that profession.

Without means or influence, our subject set about obtaining a professional education. He studied at Johnson, Vt., sawing wood and teaching school to gain a livelihood. His course was frequently interrupted by want of money, and it required some time to attain the desired end, but finally the course of study was completed and he was graduated with honors. He worked his way through the Berkshire Medical College, Pittsfield, Mass., and then devoted himself to the practice of medicine, opening an office at Clintonville, N. Y., where from the first he was successful.

At Clintonville, July 8, 1852, Dr. Goodwin was married to Miss Adelia E. Field, who survives him. In 1854, he removed to Rockford and ever afterward resided in the house on Jefferson street where he died. Coming here a stranger, his ability soon brought him a good practice and his conscientious attention to his business held his patients after he won them. During the Civil War, he enlisted as Surgeon in the Eleventh Illinois Infantry and was afterward appointed Surgeon of the One Hundred and eighth Illinois. He was wounded in the stomach at Vicksburg and in after years suffered greatly from this wound. He was a stanch Democrat and an earnest temperance advocate. At the last municipal election held in his life time, he was conveyed to the polls in a hack to vote for anti-license, and that was the last time he ever left his home. The immediate cause of his death, which occurred at Rockford May 14, 1889, was Bright's Disease.

Besides his wife, the Doctor left one daughter, Nellie T., wife of Robert Rew, the well-known attorney of Rockford. Another daughter, Carrie, died during childhood. Dr. Goodwin was an able physician, a thoughtful man and a good citizen. He filled many important offices of a public character, serving on the Board of Education for a number of years, as a member of the Library Board for two years, and in other positions of trust. He represented the District Medical Association at various places in the State, and the American Medical Association at St. Louis, Philadelphia, St. Paul, Chicago and Washington. At the time of his death, he was President of the Winnebago County Medical Society. He was tireless in his profession, reading extensively and keeping abreast the times. He paid the closest attention to his cases and neglected no precaution, however slight, to further the interests of his patients.

Years ago, Dr. Goodwin took a trip abroad and increased his medical knowledge by visiting the hospitals of Europe, as well as broadened his knowledge by sight-seeing and travel. He was the physician of many of Rockford's oldest families, and possessed their confidence to a marked degree. The close personal attention which he gave his eases made him a great favorite. As a man he was well posted on current events and was a companionable and genial gentleman. As husband and father, physician and trusted friend, he was highly regarded in life, and in death was mourned by all who knew him.

SAAC C. TUTTLE, now living retired in Pecatonica village was born in Antrim, Hillsboro County, N. H., September 11, 1820. His parents, Jacob and Betsey (Cummings) Tuttle, were natives of Massachusetts, the father being born February 6, 1767, and his wife May 25, 1778. They both died in Antrim, N. H., at an advanced age. The paternal grandfather, who was born August 29, 1738, died when seventy-seven years of age; his wife, who was, previous to her marriage, Miss Submit Warren, died when fifty-five years of age, having been born March 12, 1742.

The mother of our subject was the daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Trowbridge) Cummings. His marriage occurred November 11, 1816, at which time Miss Louisa I., daughter of Daniel and Hannah (Kidder) Lowe, became his wife. The father was born in Greenfield, N. II., and died at Antrim, aged seventy years. His wife, who was also a native of the Granite State, was seventy-two years of age at her death.

Mrs. Louisa Tuttlé was born in Antrim in the above-named State, November 21, 1821. Her union with our subject has resulted in the birth of ten children, six of whom are living: Henry C., who was born August 9, 1847, is married and the father of two children; Jacoh E., who was born April 11, 1851, is also married and has five children; Harriet L., whose birth occurred January 5, 1853, married Fred Elson and has a family of three children; Daniel P., born February 27, 1856, is unmarried; Frank S., born February 10, 1857, is married and has four children; George I., who was born October 29, 1858, is married and the father of one child.

Mr. Tuttle remained at home until his marriage, when he went to live on a portion of his father's farm. He has given his children excellent educations, thus fitting them to become good and useful citizens. In March, 1862, he left New Hampshire during a terrible storm and coming to Illinois purchased a farm of sixty-four acres in Pecatonica Township, to which he later added eighty acres and there resided until removing into the village, in May, 1889. He is the owner of considerable real estate in Pecatonica and is enjoying to the fullest extent the fruits of his early toil and industry.

The grandfather of Mrs. Tuttle, Simon Lowe, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War for seven years. The father of our subject was very prominent in public affairs and was elected to the State Legislature on the Democratic ticket in 1836, being the incumbent of that position for a period of sixteen years. He held many local township offices, and was otherwise interested in all measures which tend toward the upbuilding of his community. Socially, he of whom we write is an Odd Fellow belonging to Lodge No. 173, in which he held all the chairs. Mrs. Tuttle is a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and a lady highly respected for her many good works.

EORGE TROXELL. Few of the citizens of Rockford have been more prominently identified with its progress, and perhaps none have been more deeply interested in its welfare, than the gentleman above named. He was instrumental in securing the watch factory in its present location, and labored indefatigably to secure the many railroads now here, as well as the various manufacturing interests of the city.

Mr. Troxell was born in Easton, Northampton County, Pa., August 18, 1803, of which place his father, also named George, was a native. The grandfather of our subject was born in Germany, whence he emigrated to America, and settled in the village of Easton. He had learned the trade of a baker, and established himself in business at Easton, where he spent the remainder of his days, George Troxell, Sr., learned the trade of a mill-wright, which he followed many years, and spent his entire life in Easton. His wife, Catherine, was there born, of German ancestry, and in the village where she was born, closed her eyes to the scenes of earth.

At the age of sixteen, our subject commenced to learn the trade of a millwright, and worked under his father as an apprentice until he was twenty-one, after which he continued in business with him. The work proving too hard for him, he formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, Mr. Hummel, and engaged in the mercantile business, at Easton for two years. Afterward he established the same business at Mt. Bethel, where he built up an extensive trade, and carried a general line of dry-goods, groceries, hardware, cuthery, drugs, paints, and, in fact, almost anything in daily use. In addition to this, he erected a tannery, and carried on farming operations.

In 1854, Mr. Troxell sold his interests there and came to Illinois the spring of the next year, locating in East Rockford, and investing extensively in real estate. At that time, there was but one railroad in Rockford, and he turned his attention to securing another line, his efforts being rewarded in due course of time. It is largely due to the exertions of Mr. Troxell and his co-workers that Rockford has grown from a village of three or four thousand to a city of about thirty thousand.

In September, 1827, Mr. Troxell was married to Maria Yohe, who was born in Easton, Pa, the daughter of John and Rebecca Yohe; she died March 23, 1851. The second marriage of our subject united him, June 23, 1852, with Mary A. Smith, who was born in Mt. Bethel, Pa. Her father, Samuel Smith, was also born in Northampton County, Pa., whence he removed to Illinois in 1856, and purchased a farm in Stephenson County, where he resided until his death. Of the first marriage of Mr. Troxell, five children were reared, namely: Edwin Y., Carrie (Mrs. Robert Angelman), Edwin A., Emma and Sylvanus. Two children blessed the second marriage: Willis S. and George A. In his political belief, Mr. Troxell joined the Republican party at the time of its organization, but is now a Prohibitionist. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which they are active workers.

LEXANDER SARVER. Two and one-half miles northwest of the City of Rockford lies a farm of one hundred and forty-seven acres, the property of the subject of this sketch. Here he engaged in general farming and stock-raising, in which he has been more than usually successful, and is now numbered among the most progressive agriculturists of Winnebago County. His entire life has been passed in this county, where he was born, in Harrison Township, September 30, 1847.

It is thought that the paternal grandfather of our subject was born in Germany. For many years he resided in Pennsylvania, removing thence to Illinois, and spending his last days in Harrison Township. Henry Sarver, father of our subject, was born in Pennsylvania, and removed from Bedford County, that State, to Illinois in 1845, settling in Harrison Township, and entering a tract of three hundred and twenty acres of Government land. For a time, he made his home with the family of Mr. McCoy, then resided in a building that had been erected for a schoolhouse. Later, he put up a log house on his land, which in time was replaced by a more substantial frame residence, in which he remained until his death. For some years after he settled on the place, there were no railroads near, and Chicago being the nearest market, the farmers were accustomed to drive to that town with ox-teams.

Until he was twenty-one, our subject remained in the paternal home, but at that age commenced life for hinself on a rented farm. After operating for one year as a renter, he bought eighty acres in Owen Township, upon which he began his career as a successful farmer. Seven years after purchasing the place, he sold it, and bought one hundred and sixty-eight acres in Burritt Township. He added to the acreage of the farm, where he carried on agricultural pursuits until 1889, and then purchased the farm he now occupies. He still owns the estate in Burritt Township, and gives his personal attention to the management of both places.

In January, 1869, Mr. Sarver was married to Miss Sarah A. Fell. Her grandparents, William and Elizabeth Fell, spent their entire lives in England. Her father was there born in Laneashire, August 6, 1806, and was the only member of the family who ever came to America. In his native land he learned the trade of a cloth-dresser, and in 1842 set sail from Liverpool, landing at New York City, and proceeding thence to Rhode Island. He worked at his trade in that State and Massachusetts for two years, and then came to Winnebago County and settled in what is now Durand Township, of which he was a pioneer. Securing a tract of Government land, he built the log house in which Mrs. Sarver was born. He still has a home upon the farm which he has improved, although most of his time is spent with his children. His wife, whose maiden name was Sarah Barningham, was born in Yorkshire, England, the daughter of Job and Elizabeth (Flint) Barningham; she died in 1867. Mr. and Mrs. Sarver are the parents of three children: Nellie, William and Edith. Nellie married Theodore Dickerson, and they have one child, Vera. William married Dora Allen.

ER A. PETERSON. The city of Rockford can certainly be congratulated upon the high standard of enterprise and ability displayed by its leading business men, prominent among whom is the gentleman whose name heads this sketch. As Superintendent of the West End Furniture Factory and as a stockholder and Director in that enterprise since its organization in July, 1890, Mr. Peterson has bent all his energies to advance its interests and is well qualified for the position he now holds.

This factory, which is one of the flourishing institutions of the city, has a capacity of one hundred or more, and gives employment to about seventy-five men. The President, Austin Colton,

Vice-president, Frank Hoagland, and Secretary and Treasurer, Herman Lind, are popular in leading business and financial circles, and are very widely and favorably known. The establishment has all the modern improvements and turns out first-class work.

Mr. Peterson claims Sweden as his native country and first saw the light of day in Smoland Province, June 17, 1845. There his youth was passed and there, when but a small boy, he began learning his trade, having from an early age been master of tools as a cabinet-maker. Thinking that greater inducements were afforded in America, he took passage for this country in 1868, and after following his trade in Chicago and other cities, he finally came to the thriving city of Rockford, of which he has since been a resident. He has prospered in all his business ventures since living here, and is interested in a number of the prominent enterprises of the city. He is a stockholder and Director in the Mechanics' Furniture Company, which employs one hundred men, and owns real estate in the city. He has a tasty and neat residence at No. 1106 Second Avenue, and most of the time since 1875, when he first settled here, he has followed the trade of a cabinet-maker. His parents, P. M. and Eliza (Monson) Peterson, worthy and much-esteemed citizens of their native province in Sweden, passed their entire lives there, the father engaged as a tiller of the soil. They lived to be quite old people, both about eighty years of age, and all their lives were members of the Lutheran Church. An elder son, Adolph Peterson, who had also been filled with a great desire to settle in the broad, free land of America, came here previous to our subject, and is now engaged as a mason in De Kalb, Ill.

The original of this sketch selected his wife in the person of Miss Anna Engstrom, who was born in Jonkoping Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, January 5, 1850. She remained in her native country until eighteen years of age and then crossed the ocean to this country to join her brother, A. F. Engstrom, who made his advent into this country a number of years previously. (See sketch.)

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson are the happy parents of two bright children: Jennie V., and Herbert T., both now at home. Worthy and exemplary members of the First Lutheran Church, Mr. and Mrs. Peterson are popular young people of the city, and have a wide circle of friends. Mr. Peterson is an ardent supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

ORACE D. HOPKINS is an intelligent and enterprising man, very popular in Rockton, in the best circles of which place his family moves. At the present time he occupies the honored position of Alderman of the Fourth Ward and for a number of years has served in the capacity of School Director. He became a resident of this place in 1883, since which time he has been engaged as foreman in the coal, wood and lumber yards of Peet & Keeler.

Born April 9, 1841, in Orleans County, N. Y., our subject is a son of Luke and Eunice (Hinman) Hopkins, the latter of whom was born on the Mohawk Flats in 1801. The father was a native of Vermont, but removed to Eastern New York, where his marriage took place in 1830. He was in early life a Custom House officer on Lake Champlain, and when our subject was a lad removed to Lenawee County, Mich., where the family were residents for two years, and in 1855 came to Roscoe, Winnebago County. They made this place their home for several years and then returned to the Wolverine State, leaving their son, our subject, in this county.

December 22, 1869, the original of this sketch and Miss Hannah Moore were united in marriage. The lady was a native of England, and the daughter of Stephen and Sarah (Wait) Moore. Mr. Hopkins is the youngest child of his parents, having two sisters, Martha, Mrs. Isaac Lapp, of New York, and Helen, Mrs. James Lowe, of Hudson, Mich., with whom the mother resides at the age of ninety-one years. She is well preserved in body and mind and has done some fine needle work recently. Her husband died in Hudson, Mich., in 1887, in his ninety-fourth year, three years prior to his decease being totally blind.

Our subject learned the trade of a carpenter when about twenty-three years of age, but on moving to Rockton abandoned that line of work. His home is one of culture and refinement and with his wife he is held in high esteem by those to whom his character and attainments are known. They are the parents of four children: Guy M., Luther B., Helen M. and Mary B., and all remain at home with their parents. Our subject is a member of the Masonic order, and is a stalwart Republican.

RS. PATIENCE (ATWOOD) LYMAN, who resides on section 30, Harlem Township, Winnebago County, was born in the town of Peru, in Massachusetts, on the 5th of August, 1822, and comes of an old and highly respected family of New England. Her grandparents were Hezekiah and Lydia (Heth) Atwood. Her father, Phineas Atwood, was born in Great Barrington, Mass. He learned the trade of a blacksmith, and in addition to farming followed that occupation in the Bay State until 1842, when he removed to New York, where he spent three years. He then came with his family to Illinois, making the journey by the way of the Lakes to Chicago, where he purchased a team and then came on overland to Winnebago County, where his sons, David and Jonathan, had located the previous year. He spent three years in New Milford, and then made a settlement in the town of Harlem, where he bought a tract of land and improved a farm, upon which he resided until called to the home beyond. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and married Hulda Haskell, who was born in Peru, Mass., and was a daughter of Roger and Mary (Webster) Haskell. She died on the home farm at the advanced age of ninety-four years Both Mr. and Mrs. Atwood were consistent members of the Methodist Church and were highly respected people, who had the confidence and esteem of all with whom they came in contact.

Mrs. Lyman spent the days of her maidenhood in Massachusetts, and acquired her education in the public schools of her native State. She was a young lady of twenty-three years when she came to Illinois in company with her father and mother. She always resided with her parents and cared for them in their old age. In November, 1877, she became the wife of Joseph Allen Lyman, also a native of the Bay State, born in April, 1808. His parents were Joseph and Caroline (Atwood) Lyman. He was reared to agricultural pursuits, and engaged in farming in Hinsdale and Becket, Mass., for many years. At length he came to Illinois, in 1877, settling in Winnebago County, and spent the remainder of his days on the Atwood homestead. By a former marriage he had two sons: Edwin and Sheldon. He died on the 7th of April, 1885, respected by all who knew him.

Mrs. Lyman still owns and occupies the old homestead, upon which she has resided for about forty-six years. She has witnessed the growth and development of this county since a very early day and well deserves mention among its pioneer settlers. At the age of fifteen years, she united with the Methodist Church and has since been one of its faithful and consistent members, an earnest worker in the Master's vineyard. She was also for many years a teacher in the Sunday-school and is a life member of the missionary society of her church.

SCAR IIALL. Among the prominent mercantile establishments of Rockford may be mentioned the firm of Engstrom & Hall, dealers in a fine line of dry goods, at No. 324 East State Street. Since the inception of the business in March, 1889, the firm has built up a large trade and gained a good reputation for reliable dealings and courtesy to their customers. Mr. Hall has been a resident of Rockford since 1874, and was one of the original stockholders in the Central Furniture Company, with which he was connected as assistant foreman and salesman, and for a time was commercial agent.

Mr. Hall was born in the Province of Smoland, Sweden, December 2, 1855, and there grew to manhood, meanwhile learning the trade of a cabinetmaker and receiving a practical education in the public schools. In 1874, he emigrated to America, embarking on a vessel at Gottenburg, touching some of the ports of England, and landing at New York City. His parents, John P. and Caroline Hall, still reside in Sweden, and, although advanced in years, are hale and active. The father was a Swedish soldier, and served in the regular army. A sister of our subject, Matilda, resides in Rockford; another sister, Laura, is now living in Ogle County, and is the wife of Alfred Peterson. A brother, August N., formerly of Rockford, is now a clerk for Wanamaker & Brown, of Chicago.

The lady who became the wife of our subject was formerly Miss Anna M. Engstrom, who was born in Malta, De Kalb County, Ill., March 15, 1853. She is a graduate of both the schools of Malta and Rockford, and completed her education in Chicago, where she was graduated in music under the German Professor Conrade. She has since devoted her time largely to that art, and is a skilled musician and successful instructor. In politics, Mr. Hall is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the First Swedish Lutheran Church, and are prominent in the social circles of Rockford.

OHN NIDO. Since coming to Rockford in 1867, Mr. Nido has probably been the best-known machinist of the city. Possessing remarkable ability as a mechanic and machinist pattern-maker, he has gained success in that occupation, and his skill is universally recognized. Some time after locating in this city, he became connected with Mr. Nelson in the knitting-machine business, and has for several years been at the head of the machine shops of the Nelson Knitting Machine Company, as well as the maker of the machines.

Born in Stockholm, Sweden, June 26, 1834, Mr. Nido was reared and educated in the city of his birth, and received there his early training as a mechanic. From early boyhood, he worked as a pattern and model maker, in which he soon acquired great skill. He was the only one of the parental family who emigrated to the United Staces, and it was in 1865 that he crossed the Atlantic and commenced to work in Dunkirk, N. Y. He also resided in Chicago for a time before he came to Rockford, where, as above stated, he arrived in 1867.

In this city Mr. Nido was married to Miss Clara Johnson, a native of Sweden, who emigrated to America in her young womanhood. Mr. and Mrs. Nido have two children: Blanda and Herman, who are at home. In the public affairs of the day, Mr. Nido takes an intelligent interest, and is a stanch adherent of the principles of the Republican party.

LLEN RICE. Through the exercise of unflagging industry and judicious investments, Mr. Rice has become prosperous and now lives retired at No. 305½ Mulberry street, where he is surrounded by all the comforts which contribute to happiness. His home has been in Winnelago County since 1856 and during the first eight years of his residence here he cultivated a farm in Harrison Township, later located near Rockford, and finally removed to this city about twenty years ago.

The early home of Mr. Rice was in Washington County, N. Y., where he was born April 3, 1817. After attending school there when opportunity offered, he removed at the age of fourteen to Genesee County, which remained his home until he came West to Illinois. His father, Jonathan Rice, was born in the same county as himself, likewise his grandfather, Abraham. The last-named served in the War of 1812 when a young man. He married Miss Eda Deuell, a native of Washington County, one of whose brothers was a soldier during the War of 1812. The worthy couple passed their entire lives in Washington County, and among their children was Jonathan, father of our subject.

Jonathan Rice removed to Genesee County and there died at the age of fifty-two years. His children were twelve in number and six still survive, all of whom married and reared families of their own. In Genesee County, N. Y., our subject was married to Miss Lydia Mead, who was born in Northampton Township. Fulton County. N. Y.,

August 17, 1835. She was reared and received her education in Genesee County, which was for many years the home of her parents, Charles and Polly (Peirce) Mead, natives of Fulton County. Mrs. Mead died in Fulton County in the prime of life and her husband passed away at the age of sixty years. They were sincere Christians and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They were the parents of six children, four of whom are now living.

For thirty-five years Mr. and Mrs. Rice have lived and labored together for their common welfare and prosperity, and have reaped the reward of their labors in the possession of a competency and the universal esteem of the community. Their only child, Harris II., married Fannie Nearmen, and lives in Rockford. By a former marriage, Mr. Rice became the father of two sons: Charles E., who is a farmer in Storm Lake, Iowa; and James A., who is a speculator in Chicago. During his residence in Harrison Township, Mr. Rice served as Supervisor and Justice of the Peace, and in his political adherence is independent, easting his hallot for the candidates whom he deems best qualified to represent the people.

C. BURPEE is the senior member of the firm of Burpee & Son. They have the largest retail furniture and undertaking establishment in Illinois outside of Chieago. The business was founded by our subject in 1856, at Nos. 108 and 110 West State Street, where he is still located. The first year he was alone and then he admitted to partnership William Werner. After three years, that connection was discontinued and the firm of Burpee & Groneman did business from 1869 until 1871, after which Mr. Burpee was alone for fifteen years, when the present company was established. The store which they occupy is forty-four feet front and is two hundred feet deep and has a five story front. At night it is lighted with electricity. There are passenger and freight elevators and all the appointments of a modern furniture store, and the stock which they carry is both extensive and of fine make. As before stated, they have a very large trade and their establishment is one of the leading ones in the city. In connection with the furniture department, they also carry on the undertaking business, having large supplies in this line, together with a fine hearse. A. C. Burpee is a stockholder in the Rockford Burial Case Company, of which he has been a Director for live years. He is also a stockholder of the Rockford Silver Plate Company, a stockholder and Director of the Rockford Cattle Company, and is also interested in other corporations.

Mr. Burpee came to Rockford from Lima, N. Y., where his birth occurred August 10, 1822. His father, Samuel Burpee, was a native of Charlestown, Mass., where he was partially reared; he also lived in Worcester County. In Sterling, he learned the furniture business and on the 16th of June, 1816, removed to Lima, N. Y., where for forty-two years he was proprietor of a furniture store. Subsequently, he became a resident of Beloit, Wis., where he died ten years later, at the age of eightythree. He was well known in the East as an anti-slavery and temperance worker, and was an Abolitionist when there were only five others in Livingston County, N. Y. He signed the first temperance pledge which he saw, and never broke it. The church once took up his ease on account of his slavery and temperance principles. He debated those questions throughout Livingston County, N. Y., and was once threatened by a mob, but strong in the right, he bravely stood and neither fear nor favor could alter his belief or course. He afterward became identified with the Republican party. In religious belief, he was a Presbyterian. His wife, whose maiden name was Esther Crosby, died in Lima, N. Y., at the age of sixty-eight. She was born in New Hampshire and was a daughter of Capt. Alpheus Crosby, a commissioned officer and brave soldier of the Revolution, who died on his farm amid the hills of the Granite State. Two of his sons, Alpheus and Asa, came to Rockford in 1849, and were prominently connected with the early history of this city.

In Lima, N. Y., Mr. Burpee of this sketch learned the trade and business of a furniture dealer and undertaker and was engaged in that line for three years in LeRoy, N. Y., prior to coming to Rockford. He was married in Monroe County, N. Y., to Miss Harriet M. Baldwin, the accomphshed daughter of Gordon and Lydia (Fitch) Baldwin. Her father was a prominent and well-to-do farmer of Monroe County, who, in 1857, came to Illinois, dying in Iroquois County when past the age of sixty years. His wife was born in Hinsdale, Mass., and died in Iroquois County at an advanced age. Both were active and consistent members of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Burpee have taken an active part in all public affairs, are prominent members of society and are faithful workers in the Second Congregational Church. In politics, Mr. Burpee is a Republican. Their union has been blessed with five children: Minnie, at home; Harry B., who graduated from the Rockford High School and spent a year in Europe, studying in the colleges of London and Paris, married Della C. Trufan, of Rockford, and is now his father's partner; Herman N., of Seattle, Wash., is State Agent for a typewriting company, also for the Holly Water Works Manufacturing Company and in the works in Seattle; Florence is the wife of McGregor Huffman, who is employed in the Winnebago National Bank, of Rockford; and Stanton is a book-keeper in the Rockford National Bank. The family is one of prominence in this community. Mr. Burpee is one of the leading and progressive business men of the city, sagacious and far-sighted, and has done much for the upbuilding and growth of Rockford, where he has so long made his home.

OHN R. WELLS. In the ranks of the substantial farmers of Winnebago County this gentleman is worthy of prominent consideration, having by economical living and frugal management acquired a fine property, which brings him a comfortable income. He is at present residing on section 1, Seward Township, and has by his good conduct acquired an honored position among his fellow-townsmen.

The town of Mesina, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., was the birthplace of our subject, his natal day being February 20, 1837. His parents were Reuben and Jane Wells, the former of whom was a son of Reuben, Sr., a native of Vermont, and an old Revolutionary soldier. Tradition has it that two brothers of the Wells family came to the United States from Wales, but just at what date is not known. The father of our subject was born in Middleboro, Vt., and came West with his wife and eight children in 1841. He had been married in 1818 to Jane Roberts, who was born in Plattsburg, N. Y., and was the daughter of Abram Roberts, who died in this county at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jane Wells, when in his eighty-first year; his wife departed this life in New York.

The Wells family in Winnebago County are prosperous agriculturists. Our subject had an uncle, Levi Roberts, who was Aide-de-camp to John Mc Donald at the battle of Plattsburg, and drew a pension from the Government, having been wounded by a horse falling upon him. The mother of our subject passed away in this county, March 20, 1885. She bore her husband ten children, five of whom are living. The father of our subject died on the old home farm in this county, in February, 1850. His tract was a "squatter's" claim, thirty acres of which were broken, and erected thereon was a log cabin. One hundred and sixty acres were included in the farm, for which he paid $200. The father went from Vermont to New York with no earthly possessions other than the clothes he wore and an axe, and his possessions on coming to this county were two horses and a wagon.

After the death of his father, our subject remained at home until sixteen years of age, when he worked out by the month for two years, and then went to Iowa, where he was engaged in breaking prairie lands. Returning home, he remained until 1861, when he crossed the plains to California, and was engaged eight years in mining and market-gardening. Coming again to the Prairie State, Mr. Wells purchased a farm, upon which he makes his home at the present time, and has been successfully engaged in cultivating the soil since that time.

Miss Adel E., daughter of Roswell and Mary Clark, became the wife of our subject in March, 1870. The lady was born in New York, December 30, 1851, and died at her home in this county, March 1, 1889. She had become the mother of three children: Ernest E., who was born December 8, 1870, and is attending the business college at Rockford; Gertrude R., born September 1, 1873, is a very charming and accomplished young lady, being a graduate of the Winnebago High School, and Bernice M., who died in infancy.

A Republican in politics, our subject cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. His wife was a prominent member of the Women's Relief Corps, and is otherwise interested in many ennobling and elevating works. Mr. Wells is a self-made man in the truest sense of that term, as he started out in life empty-handed, and is now one of the well-to-do farmers of the county.

Roswell Clark, the father of Mrs. Wells, was born in Andover, Vt., where he was reared on a farm, and accompanied his parents on their removal to New York State in 1831. Settling in Wyoming County, he purchased a tract of timber land, cleared a farm from the wilderness, and resided there until 1857, when he came to Hlinois, and two years later purchased a farm at Twelve Mile Grove, Seward Township. Here his decease occurred in 1884. His wife, prior to her marriage, was May Walton, a native of Massachusetts, and the daughter of John Walton. She is now living near Pecatonica, having become the mother of four children: Amelia H., Alonzo W., Elbert J., and Dell E.

UST FLODELL, of Rockford City, Ill., follows the business of a news-dealer, than which in the wide range of industrial pursuits there is not a more interesting occupation, for upon him the education of the masses and the enlightenment of the citizens of this country in a large manner depend. Mr. Flodell, the successful Swedish news-dealer located at No. 310 East-State Street, has been in business in this city, in his present line, for ten years and carries a fine stock of the very best class of Swedish literature. He is a gentleman of energetic and accomplished business habits, and is prompt and reliable in all transactions. He came to Rockford in 1869, and in 1874 opened a meat market on East State Street which he carried on for six years. After this, he was in one of the furniture factories of the town, but subsequently opened a book store, and in 1888 he was associated with W. T. May in the jewelry business in the same room he had occupied as a book-seller. He is the leading steamship ticket agent of the city and represents all the leading trans-Atlantic steamship lines. Aside from this, he is a promoter of the Skandia Furniture Company, a stockholder of the same, and at present holds the position of Vice-president of that organization. He is also interested in the Union Grocery Company and is a promoter of the Central Furniture Company, also the Mantel and Furniture Company, and the Skandia Brick Company, of which he is President. He is a stockholder in the Brown Brick Company and a stockholder and promoter in a number of other enterprises. Mr. Flodell has been one of the leading business men in this city since his residence here, and has ever taken a decided interest in local matters. In politics he is a sound Republican. In religion he is an active member of the First Lutheran Church, of which he has been an official member. He has been very successful as a business man, and owns, beside his various interests in the city, a good home at No. 903 Third Avenue.

Mr. Flodell is a native of Sweden, born in Wester Gothland Province on the 12th of March, 1845, and was the first of his family to come to the United States. His father, Gustave Flodell, was born in 1808 and was a tiller of the soil until his death in 1857. The latter's wife survived him until 1872, and at the time of her death was quite aged. Both were members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Two of their daughters are residing in the old country, Mrs. Anna Anderson and Mrs. E. Johnson.

Gust Flodell selected as his companion in life Miss Eva Peterson, a native of the same province as her husband, her birth occurring in 1838, and their nuptials were celebrated in Rockford on the st of April, 1870. She came to the United States in 1869, and became a resident of Rockford. Her parents died in Sweden, the mother, Bertha Peterson, in 1880 and the father, Peter Peterson, the following year, the latter when just eighty years of age. They were Swedish Lutherans in their religious belief. The father had always followed the occupation of a farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Flodell have no children. Both are well respected in the city, and are intelligent, worthy people.

OUIS SANDINE of Rockford, like many of (a) the leading furniture men of this city, was born in Sweden, his birth occurring in the southern part of the country on the 22d of October, 1858. His father, Peter Pearson, was born in 1823, and is yet living, a hale and hearty old gentleman, who throughout life has followed the occupation of farming. He has also been a life-long member of the Lutheran Church, to which Mrs. Pearson also belonged. The death of his wife occurred in September, 1891. She was born in 1831, and bore the maiden name of Kjersti. Our subject was the first of the family to come to this country, but has been followed by three brothers: Nels, John and Mangnes. None are yet married and all are employed by the Rockford Mantel and Furniture Company of this city.

In the land of his nativity, Mr. Sandine spent the days of his boyhood and youth and acquired a good education in the city schools of Stockholm. Believing that this country offered better advantages to young men just starting out in life than the old countries, he determined to seek a home in America, and crossed the briny deep in 1881. He did not tarry long in the East but came at once to Rockford, Ill., and has since been connected with the practical work of different furniture companies, giving to the different branches his special attention. He therefore became well acquainted with the business in all its details and is well qualified for the responsible position of trust he now holds, that of Secretary and Treasurer of the Mantel and Furniture Company. The company was organized in 1890, and he has since held his present office and is also one of its Directors and a stockholder. When the new additions to the factory are completed, it will contain over 150,000 square feet and will furnish employment to at least three hundred men.

It will be one of the largest manufactories of the city and now does a more extensive business in the manufacture of mantels than any other corporation in the country. Their mantels, of which they make a specialty, are adjustable and thus can be used in any place.

A marriage ceremony performed in Rockford united the lives of Mr. Sandine and Mrs. Amanda Sahllin, who was born in Central Sweden and was reared and educated in the city of Stockholm. The year 1880 witnessed her arrival in the United States, since which time she has made her home in Rockford. By her former marriage she became the mother of two children: George and Elvera, By her second marriage an interesting family of four children have been born: Esther E., Louis A., Charles Otto and Agnes I. The parents are both members of the Zion Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Sandine is Secretary and one of the Trustees. In politics, he is independent. He is a straightforward business man, energetic and industrious, and has become well-to-do.

ILS T. THOMPSON is carrying on a successful business as a merchant tailor at No. 113 West State Street in Rockford. He opened this establishmennt in January, 1887. He carries an excellent line of goods, and his work is always first-class, so that he is able to retain his patrons and secure many others. His trade has constantly increased and he is now doing a flourishing business.

Mr. Thompson was born near Chrestenaham Laen, Sweden, April 22, 1834, and is a son of Jonas Hoe, who was a carpenter by trade, and in connection with that occupation also followed farming in Sweden. He came to this country late in life and spent seven years in the home of our subject, where his death occurred at the age of seventy-four. His wife died in Sweden when about sixty-two years of age. In the family were three sons and a daughter, our subject being the eldest; Louisa is the wife of Gustaf Gustafson, a cabinet-maker and stockholder in the Chair and Furniture Factory of this city; John is married and is a skilled cabinet-maker employed by the Forest City Furniture Company; and Olof is a cabinet-maker with the Standard Furniture Company. He married Mollie Swenson.

Our subject is a self-made man. He began life at the early age of ten years, when he commenced learning the tailor's trade, working as a journeyman until he came to this country. He took passage on board the three-mast sailing-vessel "Merrimac," which left Gottenburg in March, 1854, and after forty-nine days dropped anchor in the harbor of Quebec, Canada, whence Mr. Thompson came at once to Illinois, making his first settlement in Chicago, where he spent four years. At the expiration of that time, he came to Rockford, in 1859, and has since made his home in this city. He did journeyman work as a tailor here until 1878, when he began business as one of the principal stockholders in the Merchant Tailor Stock Company, with which he was officially connected for some time as Secretary and Treasurer. He later withdrew from that concern and has since been alone in business as a merchant tailor at No. 113 West State Street.

Mr. Thompson was married in Chicago to Johanna Wall in October, 1858, but she died of consumption in Rockford in 1873. There are no living children from this union. He was again married in this city to Miss Emma Peterson, a native of Sweden, born in 1844. When a young lady, she came to this country, to which her parents had emigrated in 1853. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have been born seven children: George W., a graduate of the Business College of Rockford, now employed as book-keeper for the Union Furniture Company; Laura, engaged in the millinery business; William, a graduate of the Rockford Business College and book-keeper for the Mantel and Furniture Company; Fannie, Mary, Hattie and Blanche, all yet at home.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Thompson is a Republican, and, socially, is a member of the Masonic lodge of this city. He is also a stockholder in the Peterson Land Syndicate, having an addition of three hundred and eleven acres near Rockford, and is interested in the Rockford Mantel and Furniture Company, the Royal Sewing Machine Company, the Rockford Planing Mill Company and other corporations. Although he started out in life so young, and has had many difficulties to overcome, he has steadily worked his way upward to a position of affluence. He resides at his pleasant home at No. 709 Elm Street.

EORGE II. BALDWIN. There is in the development of every successful life a principle which is a lesson to every man following in its footsteps. a lesson leading to a higher and more honorable position than the ordinary. Let a man be industriously ambitious, and honorable in his ambitions, and he will rise, whether having the prestige of family or the obscurity of poverty. These reflections are called forth by the study of the life of Mr. George II. Baldwin, whose reputation as an honorable, upright citizen is not merely local, but extends over a wide scope of country.

Mr. Baldwin is a native of the Empire State, born near Rochester in 1836, and was but a year old when he was brought to Illinois by his parents. His father, Thomas Baldwin, followed the hife of a mechanic, and our subject's youthful days were divided between assisting on the farm and in attending the common schools, in which he received a fairly good education for that early day. In concetion with his farming operations, the father also followed the trade of a carpenter and under his supervision our subject became quite proficient with the tools.

In 1859, and in Roscoe, Ill., our subject was married to Miss Jane Kerr, a native of Roscoe and the daughter of Charles and Ann F. (Meas) Kerr, the former a native of Scotland and the latter of England. Her parents were married in Canada and eame thence to Illinois about 1839. The father was a heavy contractor on the Illinois Canal and was situated at Lockport, near Joliet. His wife died near Roscoe about 1879, when fifty-five years of age, and three months later he followed her to the grave, dying at the same place when seventy-two years of age. They were the parents of eleven children, three sons and eight daughters, all of whom are living and the heads of families. They are scattered through four States. The eldest of this family is fifty-six years of age and the youngest twenty-nine. Four of the children reside in Roscoe.

Our subject and wife have resided in Roscoc since their marriage, and in that town all their children were born. They buried two infants, and now have six sons and one daughter living, viz: George E., now twenty-nine years of age, married Miss Jean Sands, and resides on the old homestead; he has two children. Fred Baldwin, a butcher of Rockford, married Miss Cora Frost; Giles H., single, is a machinist at Beloit; Willis C., single, also a butcher; Glenn C., single, is engaged in the dairy business; Grace A., is attending school and James R., a bright schoolboy.

Mr. Baldwin has just been elected Assessor, in which capacity he served twenty-one years and has been School Director since his majority, also for some time Trustee in the church of his choice, the Methodist. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin removed from their farm where they had a most charming and pleasant rural home in 1889, and purchased a good house and lot in Roscoe. They are well known and respected in this county and are prominent in all public enterprises. Mr. Baldwin is a member of the Modern Woodmen, and is an earnest advocate of the principles of the Republican party.

ILLIAM H. GILMAN, deceased, who was well known as a teacher, lawyer and banker, was born in Bristol, N. H., February 4, 1807, and was a son of Nicholas and Nancy (Holt) Gilman. He was reared and educated in his native State, where he engaged in teaching for a time. When a young man, he went to Canada, there studied law, was admitted to the Bar and commenced practice in the town of Sherbrooke, Province of Quebec, where he remained until 1837. He then came to Illinois, accompanied by his wife.

They came by way of the St. Lawrence River, canals and Lakes to Chicago, where a horse and buggy were purchased, and they drove on to Belvidere. At that time, there was not a bridge across any of the streams, and the land in Northern Illinois was all owned by the Government. Mr. Gilman made a claim and creeted a log cabin, in which he and his wife began life in the West in true pioneer style. For some years deer and other wild game were plentiful. When the land came into market, he went to Galena and entered his elaim at the land office. For two years, he resided upon his farm and then came to Belvidere, where he embarked in the practice of law. A few years later, he went to Chicago, purchased property and built a home. He then took a contract to build a portion of two railroads then in process of construction. The family resided in Chicago for two years, then returned to Belvidere, where our subject resumed the practice of the legal profession and later engaged in banking until his death, which occurred on the 7th of October, 1877.

Mrs. Gilman bore the maiden name of Juliet Walker. Their union was celebrated December 11, 1834, in Peacham, Vt. The lady was born at that place, April 15, 1808, and is a daughter of Joel and Alice (Houghton) Walker, the former a native of Massachusetts and the latter of Keene, N. H. Her father was a pioneer preacher and there engaged in mercantile pursuits for some years, and was also Postmaster at that place. He came to Illinois in 1839, and, purchasing land in Boone County, engaged in farming for some years, after which he came to Belvidere and lived retired throughout the remainder of his life.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Gilman were born six children, three of whom are yet living, a son and two daughters: Helen A., wife of H. P. Peck, a resident of Beloit, Wis.; William H., who married Sarah E. Williams, and is living in Chicago, and Kate M., widow of Winnie J. Sager, who now resides with her mother at the old home. The family are all Presbyterians.

Politically, Mr. Gilman was a Democrat. He always took an active interest in public affairs and extended a helping hand to any enterprise calculated to benefit the city. He was instrumental in securing the location of the Northwestern Railroad to Belvidere, to which he donated five acres of land in the city. He was a liberal contributor to the various churches and was a public-spirited and progressive citizen, widely and favorably known in this community.

AMES R. BARTLETT, who is at present residing in the city of Rockford, was born at Marlboro, Vt., August 24, 1819, and while an infant his parents removed to Cheshire County, N. II. His father, Jonas Bartlett, was also born at Marlboro, the date of his birth being December 25, 1798. He was a farmer by occupation and descended from a sturdy race of New Englanders.

Jonas Bartlett in 1818 was married to Miss E. Robertson, daughter of James Robertson, who was reared in Cheshire County, N. II. The ancestors of Mrs. Bartlett, both paternal and maternal, were very prominent in educational and public affairs, some of them being legislators and statesmen. The parents of our subject in the spring of 1835 removed to Le Roy, Genesee County, N. Y., where they purchased a farm near a popular academy, in order that their children might have the best educational advantages.

He of whom we write is one in a family of seven children, all of whom are living, with the exception of E. L., who died in Chicago in the autumn of 1890, aged sixty-nine years. Those living are James R., Elias L., Lucy W., Nathaniel, Susan K., and Jonas. Our subject was a lad of sixteen years when he went to Le Roy, N. Y., where he worked on a farm during the summers and attended school in the winter seasons in the old academy which was known as the Old Round House. Prior to reaching his majority, he taught school for two years in Bergen Township, and after attaining the age of twenty-one, he followed the occupation of a teacher for some time. For four years he served as School Commissioner, during which time he introduced the first Webster's Unabridged Dictionary ever used in school. His father was a zealous Methodist, and although young Bartlett was strongly inclined to the Presbyterian faith, he worshipped with his parents and when quite young was a Class-leader.

September 19, 1841, Mr. Bartlett of this sketch and Miss Julia Ann, daughter of Lucius and Elizabeth Parks, were united in marriage. Her parents were natives of Rutland, Vt., and later locating in Le Roy, N. Y.. resided there for some twenty years, where they were engaged in farming during the greater portion of the time. They came to Illinois in November, 1854, and settled in Rockford, where they have since made their home, with the exception of a few years spent in New Milford.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett have three children who are deceased, namely: George Lincoln, James R. and Mrs. Mary H. H. Talcott. The members of their family who are living bear the respective names of Franklin P., Frances E., Charles M., Cordelia J., now Mrs. C. N. Anderson, and Nellie C., a maiden lady who resides at Marshalltown, Iowa.

Mrs. Bartlett departed this life in December, 1882, mourned by a large circle of friends. Our subject has been connected with the First Congregational Church of Rockford for many years, and in his political relations is a zealous Republican.

APT. JOHN B. NASH, a highly esteemed citizen of Rockford, is a veteran of the late war, where he won a good record for faithful service, though he sacrificed his health for his country. A native of Maine, our subject was born in Parkman. Piscataquis County, February 14, 1831, and is the son of John Nash, who was also a native of the Pine Tree State. The grandfather of our subject, Jonathan Nash, hailed from Massachusetts, whence he removed to Maine, being one of the pioneers of the town of Minot. Thence he removed to Auburn, Me., where he purchased a farm and resided until his decease, which occurred at the advanced age of ninety-three years. He served as a patriot in the Revolutionary War.

The direct progenitor of our subject was reared on the home farm, and after his marriage resided in the town of Parkman a few years, when he removed to Auburn and made that place his home until 1855, which was the date of his advent into Illinois. On coming hither, he located in De Kalb County, where he purchased a farm and resided for a number of years, thence removed to Rockford, where his death occurred at the age of eighty-eight years. Rachael C. Banks, the mother of our subject, was also born in Maine, and departed this life in Rockford.

John B. Nash was reared and educated in the Pine Tree State and there resided until 1851, when, like so many others afflicted with the gold fever, he went to California via the Isthmus of Panama. He was there engaged in mining and resided for fonr years, when he returned to Maine and soon after came to Illinois. He resided for a time in De Kalb County, and in 1862, on the outbreak of the late war, raised a company, and in the fall of that year was elected its Captain, the same being known as Company G, One Hundred and Fifth Illinois Infantry. He was mustered in at Dixon on September 2, and served with his regiment until July, 1864, when his resignation was accepted on account of disability. Capt. Nash spent the following winter in Belvidere and then came to Rockford, which has since been his home.

Mary A. Williamson and our subject were united in marriage in 1858, and to them have been born three children: Earl L., Jay B., and Guy H., the first-born, who died in his thirtieth year. Capt. Nash is a prominent member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and in politics votes the straight Republican ticket. For fifteen years he served as Assessor of Rockford, and for six years was the incumbent of the responsible office of Deputy-Sheriff. He is prominent in social matters, being a member of Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M., of which society he has been Secretary for fourteen years. He has also occupied that position for six years in the Winnebago Chapter No. 24, R. A. M., and for six years was Recorder in Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T.

YRUS B. JUDD, an extensive farmer and stock-raiser of Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, has been a very prominent factor in its development in an agricultural way, and is the proprietor of a beautiful estate comprising two hundred and sixty-eight acres, of which one hundred and twenty-five were left to him by his father.

Mr. Judd of this sketch was born in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., June 11, 1839, and is the son of John B. and Louisa S. (Judd) Judd. John B. was residing at home at the time of his marriage, and on his father's death fell heir to the estate, to which he later added until he had one of the finest farms in the township. His father had been married in Messina, N. Y., and at the time of his removal to Illinois in 1854, he was accompanied by Cyrus B., who was an only child.

The lady to whom our subject was married December 26, 1860, was Miss Maria N. Kellogg, who was born in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., April 14, 1837. She was the daughter of Albert and Nancy (MeDonald) Kellogg, the former of whom was born in New Hampshire and died in the above-named county in New York. To Mr. and Mrs. Judd have been born two children: Laura B., whose birth occurred August 14, 1872, was graduated from the Peeatonica schools, and is now engaged in teaching in this township.; Lucius J. was born June 17, 1879, and is prosecuting his studies in the district schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Judd attend the Congregational Church, of which they are members and active workers. He is a Republican in politics, having cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. Mrs. Judd is a very intelligent lady and while residing in New York taught school for seven years and was similarly employed for two terms in Burritt Township.

AMES BLISS, an extensive farmer and stock-raiser of Owen Township, has been a very prominent factor in developing and extending the large agricultural interests of Winnebago County. He was born in Troy, N. Y., January 22, 1822, and is the son of Christopher Bliss, who was born and reared in New England. Later, he went to New York State, where he served as Captain on a river steamer for some time, after which he engaged in the mercantile business in Savoy, Berkshire County, Mass., whither he had removed in 1822.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Achsah Demming; she was a native of Wethersfield, Conn., and was the daughter of Capt. John and Elizabeth Demming. Her father was commander of a vessel for some time, and when abandoning that line of work engaged in farming in Savoy, Mass., where he spent his last years. The father of our subject departed this life in 1827, and his widow, after again marrying, died in Westfield, Mass.

James Bliss of this sketch was an infant when his parents removed to Massachusetts, where he was reared to the age of fifteen years in Savoy. Then starting out in life for himself, he worked on a farm for a time, when he found employment as clerk in a store for one year. Later, however, learning the carpenter's trade, he followed that line of work until his marriage, when he again began farming, purchasing a tract of one hundred acres in the town of Adams, Mass., which he cultivated successfully until 1863, the date of his advent into Winnebago County. He had visited this section in 1850, at which time he entered one hundred and sixty acres of land with a soldier's land warrant, for which he paid $110. He now has one of the finest and best-improved farms in the county, which comprises two hundred and thirty-two acres.

The lady to whom Mr. Bliss was married bore the maiden name of Lydia Fife. She was born in Berkshire County, Mass., and died on the farm in Owen Township in 1863. Our subject was then married to Miss Annie M. Colton, who was born in Westfield, Mass., and departed this life in 1882. The present wife of Mr. Bliss, prior to her marriage, was Miss Amanda Henderson. In religious affairs, our subject is a member of the Baptist Church, and occupies a prominent position among the wealthy farmers of this section.

MORY HAMILTON ALLEN, one of the extensive land-owners of Boone County, residing in Belvidere, claims Maine as the State of his nativity. He was born on the 16th of May, 1816, in that part of Cumberland County which is now included in Androscoggin County. The family is of English origin and was founded in America by Samuel Allen, of Bridgewater, Somersetshire, who came to America, accompanied by his wife, Ann, in 1620, and settled in Braintree, Mass. Their son Samuel was born in 1632, and became a large land-owner in Braintree and Bridgewater. He married Sarah Partridge and unto them was born Josiah Allen in 1677. He wedded Mary Reed and their son William was next in the line of descent. He was born in 1726, and was the great-grandfather of our subject. His wife bore the maiden name of Susanna Packard. Abel Allen, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Bridgewater, Mass., in 1760, and removed thence to what is now the town of Auburn, Androscoggin County, Me., becoming a pioneer of that locality. Throughout the remainder of his life, he there engaged in farming. His wife was Mary Dillingham, who was born in Massachusetts, and was of English descent.

The father of our subject, Lebbeus Allen, was born in Cumberland County, Me., July 4, 1792, and learned the trade of a carpenter following it in connection with farming. He married Joannah B. Nash, who was born in the same town as her husband in 1791, and was a daughter of Jonathan and Anna (Bird) Nash, natives of Worcester and Dorchester, Mass., respectively. He was a Revolutionary soldier and participated in the famous battle of Bunker Hill. For a few years after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Allen resided in the town of Auburn and in 1822 removed to the town of Hebron. Upon the farm which was there purchased, they both spent the remainder of their days. The father died September 8, 1872, and the mother in November, 1873. They had eight children: Amory H., Mary, Lebbeus, William N., John H., Charles A., Bernard B. and Melvin A.

The boyhood days of our subject were spent in the town of Hebron. He seemed to possess a natural taste for mechanics but remained at home and assisted his father in the farm work until twenty years of age, when he served a short apprenticeship to the carriage-making trade and then began business for himself in Buckfield, Oxford County, Me., where he continued to operate until 1846. He then sold out and engaged in the manufacture of rakes for three years, after which he engaged in the manufacture of powder for about four years. We next find him engaged in general merchandising, which he carried on in connection with the manufacture of boots, shoes and clothing until 1866, when he disposed of his business interests in the East.

Mr. Allen has been twice married. On the 18th of May, 1839, Zilpha Cushman became his wife. She was born in Bockfield, Me., was a daughter of Caleb and Mary Cushman, and was a lineal descendant of Rev. Mr. Cushman, the Pilgrim. She died November 17, 1865, leaving four children, who are yet living: William Wallace, Joanna B., Walter F. and A. Hamilton. Frances had died at the age of seven and a half years and Augusta became the wife of L. Ashton and died at the age of twenty-five years, leaving one son, Ray. Mr. Allen was again married, February 8, 1870, his second union being with Abigail Sampson, who was born in Androscoggin County, Me., and is a daughter of Seth and Deborah (Record) Sampson, both natives of Maine. Her paternal grandfather, Abel Sampson, was a native of Massachusetts, but her maternal grandparents, Daniel and Abigail (Damon) Record, spent their entire lives in the Pine Tree State. The father of Mrs. Allen was for many years Justice of the Peace and served in other offices. He spent his entire life in Maine and died at the age of eighty-four years.

In 1866, Mr. Allen came with his family to Belvidere, and purchased a farm in the town of Flora about five miles from the city. He there engaged in farming and dairying and introduced the first Jersey stock into this section of the country. In 1886, however, he rented his farm and, removing to Belvidere, has since lived a retired life. In politics, he is independent. Within the past two years, he has devoted much of his time and attention to art and has painted many beautiful pictures of landscapes, flowers, animals, etc. It is a pleasant way in which to spend his leisure time and he thereby also furnishes beautiful adornment for his home. Although he began life in limited circumstances, he has worked his way upward and has acquired a competence which now enables him to enjoy a well-earned rest.

SCAR BERGQUIST, who is now living a retired life at his pleasant home on the corner of Fifth Street and Fourth Avenue in Rockford, is numbered among the early settlers of this city of 1855. He has witnessed almost the entire growth of the place, and has been prominently connected with its business interests. As he is widely and favorably known in this community, we feel assured that this record of his life will prove of interest to many of our readers.

Mr. Bergquist was born in Vermland, Sweden, August 6, 1826, and is a son of Capt. Carl Axil Naucler, who came of French descent. For many years, he was connected with the army, and for his services and bravery received prominent recognition from the Swedish Government, being given a star and two gold medals. He died at the advanced age of seventy years. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Katie Anderson, was a Swedish lady, and was called to her final rest at the advanced age of eighty years. They were both Lutherans in religious betief.

Mr. Bergquist, whose name heads this record, spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native province, and there learned the painter's trade. Desiring to try his fortune in America, he erossed the Atlantic in 1854, being the first of his family to come to this country. He sailed from Christiana, Norway, and, after a voyage of eleven weeks and three days, landed in Quebec, Canada, whence he made his way to Chicago, where he spent one year working at his trade. The following year, he came to Rockford and began business as a painter. As he was a good workman and straightforward in business, he received a liberal patronage from the beginning, which constantly increased until he had acquired a handsome competence.

Mr. Bergquist was married in this city in 1855, to Miss Anna B. Mork, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, May 26, 1828, and is a daughter of Larson Mork, a private soldier in the regular Swedish Army, who after some years of active service, retired on a pension and died at an advanced age, in 1855. His wife survived him until 1857. Their daughter came to this country in 1853, landing on the 21st of October in Boston, where she made her home for a year. The vessel in which she sailed was nine weeks upon the boson of the Atlantic, and on the voyage sixty of its two hundred and fifty passengers died of cholera. Her brother, John Larson, had come to the United States a few months previous.

For thirty-seven years, Mr. and Mrs. Bergquist have lived and labored together, and their upright lives and sterling worth have won them the high regard of all they have come in contact. They now have a pleasant home on Fifth Street and Fourth Avenue, and he also owns one other good residence on the same block. Mrs. Bergquist was formerly a member of the Lutheran Church, but now belongs to the Methodist Church. They were parents of nine children, five of whom died in early infancy, and C. Gustave, William E., Ebba J. and Ebba W., all died in childhood.

RS. MINERVA LEWIS, reliet of Alfred Lewis, who was a successful tiller of the soil in Illinois for many years, was originally from the Empire State, born in Monroe County, near Rochester, in 1803. She is a lady in every sense of the term, and one whose refined presence and noble qualities of mind and heart have endeared her to a large circle of friends. Her parents, Philander and Wealthy (Parks) Barret, were natives of New England, and came when young married people to Monroe County, N. Y., when the country was wild and unsettled. Mrs. Lewis remembers that they said they saw leeks six inches high on the 16th of March. They came in a one-horse wagon and brought Mrs. Barret's parents with them, Christopher and Sarah (Mansfield) Parks, both natives of New Hampshire, where Mr. Parks had followed farming until quite aged. They died in New York State, the father when sixty years of age, and the mother at the very unusual age of over four-score, her grandmother living to the age of ninety-nine. She retained her faculties to the last, and when dying said to her son Christopher, "I am going," immediately afterward expiring; the grandfather Parks died at the age of sixty years. They were the parents of a large family of children.

Mrs. Lewis is one of fourteen children, and her father died on the farm he had taken up in New York State in 1814, when forty-four years of age. His wife survived him many years and died in 1849, an octogenarian. Mrs. Lewis was married January 25, 1827, in Monroe County, N. Y., on the farm where she was born. Her husband, Alfred Lewis, was nearly three years younger than herself, and was a blacksmith in his earlier days. He learned his trade when seventeen years of age, but only worked at this seven years, when he moved to Huron (now Erie) County, Ohio, and purchased a farm of one hundred acres of prairie land. To this he added from time to time until at the end of twelve years he owned a section of land. This he then sold and took in part payment a small farm in Wisconsin, near Clinton, but he located in the northwest corner of Roscoe Township in 1844, making a claim of several hundred acres. He immediately went to work improving this and put one hundred acres in wheat. Many of Mrs. Lewis' neighbors' farms were part of this claim, and when Mr. Lewis died, in 1874, he owned but forty acres, on which Mrs. Lewis is now residing, and ten acres of timber three miles east of Roscoe. He erected many buildings, and the cobblestone house in which his wife is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Helen Enos, was erected by him in 1854. He was an honest, upright, worthy citizen and was universally respected. His death occurred on February 14, 1874, when sixty-eight years of age.

Of the thirteen children born to this respected couple, eight died in infancy. Those who reached mature years were Maj. Alfred Lewis, who was born in 1828, married in Roscoe Miss Diana Brown, and in 1850 went to California during the gold fever excitement, going overland. He remained in that State until 1865, although he had visited his aged parents in the East, and then volunteered in the army. He served as bugler and died the victim of eamp fever, with eleven of his comrades. He is buried in Arizona. The other children are Minerva Jane, now Mrs. J. J. Mosher, of Nebraska; Martha Ann, now Mrs. Kendrick Scovill, of Nebraska; Emily P., Mrs. Sherwood Moss, with whom our subject is now living; and Helen, now Mrs. Leonard Enos. Mr. Moss was a cavalryman and served through the entire war.

Mrs. Lewis bas been a member of the Baptist Church since a young girl, and her husband, the principal part of his life, was a Deacon in this church. In politics, he was an Abolitionist and a Republican. Although quite aged, time has dealt leniently with Mrs. Lewis, and she bids fair to live many years longer. She is an excellent lady in every respect, and has passed her days in following the precepts of the Golden Rule, and may the sunset of her life be peaceful and happy, as it has every prospect of being. This venerable lady has sixteen grandchildren and several great-grandchildren. Mrs. Enos has three daughters: Cora M., Cicely W., and Alice B., aged sixteen, fourteen and five years, respectively. Miss Cora is a junior in the High School.

ANIEL SILLARS owns and operates one hundred and seventy-nine acres of land on section 25, Harlem Township, and is one of the representative farmers of Winnebago County. He claims Scotland as his native land, his birth having occurred in Kintyre, Argyleshire, in April, 1833. His father, Ducan Sillars, was born in the same locality and was reared to agricultural pursuits. He wedded Mary McWilliams, daughter of Alexander McWilliams, and unto them were born six children: Alexander, Archibald, Agnes, Ducan, Daniel and Mary. Archibald resides in New Zealand, and the other members of the family are now living in America. The mother died in her native land and there the father remained until 1854, when he crossed the broad Atlantic to America, taking passage on board the "John Hamilton," which sailed from Greenwich on the 17th of June. He was accompanied by three of his children. He landed at Quebec after a voyage of seven weeks and thence came directly to Illinois, settling in Guilford Township, Winnebago County, where he rented land and engaged in farming. His death occurred in 1869.

The subject of this sketch spent the days of his boyhood and youth in the county of his nativity and acquired his education in its public schools. He was a young man of twenty-one years when, in 1854, he accompanied his father on his emigration to America. On locating in this county, he commenced life for himself, working as a farm hand by the month. As the result of his industry and economy, he was soon enabled to lease a farm, and for thirteen years he operated rented land. Having acquired some capital during that time, he, in 1869, purchased the farm which he now owns and occupies. Within its boundaries are comprised one hundred and seventy-nine acres of arable land. His home, a comfortable residence, is in the midst of good outbuildings, such as are found on a model farm, and these in turn are surrounded by welltilled fields, whose neat appearance indicates the thrift and enterprise of the owner.

As a companion and helpmate on life's journey, Mr. Sillars chose Miss Janet Andrews, a native of Argyleshire, Scotland, and a daughter of David and Janet (Howie) Andrews, Mrs. Sillars came to America in 1852; after living six months in Ohio, she removed to Illinois, and located in Guilford Township. The parents are both dead. They were the parents of thirteen children, of whom ten are still living. Our subject's marriage was celebrated January 28, 1869, and their union has been blessed with five children, two deceased. The three daughters are Nettie, Agnes and Elizaabeth. The parents and their eldest daughter are members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church. The Sillars household is the abode of hospitality and the members rank high in social circles.

HARLES E. BENGTSON is a member of the firm of Bengtson Brothers, dealers in cigars, tobacco, snuff, sporting goods, etc. They have a fine and well-arranged store located at No. 619 Seventh Street, where they have been engaged in business for some time. They started on a small scale, but as their trade increased they have had to enlarge their capacity, and are now doing an extensive business, being wholesale dealers in snuff. Their's was the first business of the kind started on the famous "Phonix" Street. For five years, they have carried on operations under the title of Bengtson Brothers, Fred Bengtson being the partner of our subject.

The Bengtson family came to Rockford in 1866. Charles E. was born in Sweden on the 9th of January, 1863, and was therefore quite small when with his parents he crossed the Atlantic to America, the family coming on at once to Rockford. The father, Andrew Bengtson, died in this city when little past middle life. His wife still makes her home with her sons in Rockford, at the age of sixty years. She is a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, to which Mr. Bengtson also belonged.

Our subject has spent almost his entire life in this city. He was here reared to manhood and acquired his education in the public schools. Since attaining his majority, he has voted with the Republican party, of which he is a stalwart supporter, and socially he is a member of the Knights of Pythias Society on the East Side. On embarking in business, he chose the enterprise to which he yet devotes his energies. The Bengtson Brothers are wide-awake and industrious young men, ambitious and persevering, and are already winning a well-deserved prosperity. Their trade yields them a good income and is constantly increasing. In connection with their other interests, they also own seventeen furnished rooms in a flat immediately over their store. They are also stockholders in the Royal Sewing Machine Company in this city, and have interests in other local enterprises, and in real estate. Mr. Bengtson, who has so long resided in this city, is well known, and among his wide circle of friends are many who have been his acquaintances since boyhood.

EREMIAH CAMPBELL. This well-known pioneer of Winnebago County was identified with its most progressive measures, and was one of the influential citizens of Durand Township. He was a worthy representative of a patriotic and honored family, some of whom early founded homes in America. His paternal ancestors originated in Scotland and were prominent in many of the wars during the early history of this country, one member of the family having been a noted Captain in the War of 1812.

The parents of our subject, Samuel and Grace (Plumb) Campbell, were natives of St. Albans, Vt., where the last-named entered into her final rest. About 1838, Samuel Campbell moved to Winne-bago County (whither he had been preceded by a son) and here spent the twilight of his life, passing away in 1844 at the age of eighty-two. His son Jeremiah was born April 5, 1818, in Grand Isle, Vt., and came to Illinois in 1837, entering one hundred and sixty acres of Government land and engaging in clearing and cultivating the place.

The first marriage of our subject united him with Miss Lois B. Hoyt, June 30, 1839, and one child was born of the union, a son, Edward, who married Kate Smith; he resides in Durand Township, and is the father of three children. October 19. 1843, Jeremiah Campbell was again married, choosing as his wife Miss Cynthia E. Hoyt, a sister of his first wife. This lady was born in St. Albans. Vt., November 11, 1828, a daughter of Heman and Susan (Franklin) Hoyt. Her grandparents, Jonathan and Lois (Bradley) Hoyt, were natives of Connecticut, and were pioneers of St. Albans, Vt., where they spent the closing years of their lives. Heman Hoyt came to Winnebago County January 3, 1837, his family having arrived here the preceding October. He died in this county near the place of his first settlement, at the age of seventy-three, and his wife died at the same place when fifty-six years old.

When Jeremiah Campbell left St. Albans, Vt., he went to Wayne County, N. Y., where he remained some time with a sister, and after her death accompanied his brother-in-law to Michigan. He came to Winnebago County with his father some time later, the journey being made with a onehorse wagon. As he had no capital, he was obliged to operate Government land, but as soon as he had accumulated sufficient money he purchased a farm and constantly increased his landed possessions until he acquired a large property. During the early days of his residence in this county, Chicago was the nearest market and post-office, and the intervening country was sparsely settled. Mr. Campbell was a Republican, but not a partisan politician, and his place in the esteem of his fellow-men was so high that his death, April 25, 1884, was widely mourned.

The family of our subject consisted of four children: Romeo II., born September 15, 1844, is married and has five children; Eva M., born December 21, 1854, married Louis Goodrich, and they reside in Nebraska. One child is deceased. Frank B. was born July 25, 1846. He was married December 29, 1870, to Miss Belle Adams, who was born in Livingston County, N. Y., October 31, 1852. They have three children living, as follows: Lula A., born April 11, 1881; Ralph E., March 2, 1885; and Roy, April 19, 1888. The mother of this family, Mrs. Cynthia Campbell, still survives in the enjoyment of good health, and makes her home in Durand Township. The members of the family enjoy the respect of their large number of acquaintances, and their position in the community is among the best people.

LE R. TILLERSON. No one is to be more complimented on the perfect method and order with which their agricultural affairs are conducted, than he whose name is given above. He is a farmer, one of the most successful ones of the county, and, although of foreign birth, he has ever taken a deep interest in the progress and development of his adopted country. Mr. Tillerson was born near Vosbergen, Norway, on the 29th of August, 1823, and his father, Trond Tillerson, who was a carpenter by trade, was also a native of that country. The elder Mr. Tillerson was married in Norway to Miss Tilda Tillerson, and they became the parents of six children, one daughter dying in Norway when a small child. Three sons and two daughters grew to adult years and came to America. In 1848, two years after our subject came to America, the parents crossed the ocean and died on this side of the Atlantic, with their son, Ole Tillerson, both when about seventy-three years of age. All these children are now deceased except our subject.

After his marriage, which occurred in Norway, to Miss Martha Myra Tillerson, in 1845, our subject, with his bride, took passage on a sailing-vessel at Bergen, and, after an ocean voyage of forty-six days reached New York City. From there they went to Milwaukee, by river, canal, and the Lakes, and were about two weeks in making the trip. After reaching that city, they went with ox-teams to their present home, and the following year Mr. Tillerson bought one hundred and twenty acres of Government land. He had but $80 in money and one cow, and, his claim costing him $160, he had to borrow, paying fifty per cent. interest. (We might mention here that the man who charged this high rate of interest died in the poor-house.) Mr. Tillerson erected a rude log house and resided in it for about two years, when he was joined by his parents, and he and his father bought forty acres, upon which both resided for some time. Our subject lost his wife on the 9th of July, 1863. Their union had been blessed by the birth of eleven children, five daughters and six sons. One son died in infancy, and in the fall of 1853 they buried two little girls, Carrie and Emeline, both dying inside of two weeks, of typhoid fever. There were six persons prostrated in the house at one time with this disease.

On the 15th of September, 1868, Mr. Tillerson married Miss Christe Sleen, from Vos, Norway, who came over in 1866, and the fruits of this union have been nine children. They lost one daughter, Emma, a student of Rockford Seminary and a very promising young lady. Her death occurred on the 26th of January, 1892, and she would soon have graduated at the Seminary. She was a young lady of more than usual promise, and her sunny, pleasant disposition won her many friends. The living children are as follows: Ceril, now an invalid in Chicago; Martin, Andrew, Ella, Annie, Sarah, Kanut, and Dena, all at home. Mr. Tillerson has eight children living by his first wife: Henry, a hardware merchant of Chicago; Tilda, in Chicago; Thomas N. runs a stock ranch in New Mexico; Lewis is a merchant in Dakota; Martha married Mr. O. Olonson, a painter of Chicago; Ellis owns a sheep ranch in Dakota; Betsy is in Chicago; and Frank, a carpenter of Chicago. All but Frank are married and doing well in business.

Mr. Tillerson has now four hundred and forty acres of land and forty acres of second-growth timber. He raises all the small kinds of grain; raises ordinary stock, and milks from twenty-five to thirty-five cows, sending the milk and cream to the factory. Mr. Tillerson has always voted the Republican ticket, and was elected Supervisor, but did not qualify. He has been administrator for estates reaching many thousands of dollars, and guardian for six minors in one estate and two in another, He is highly esteemed in the community, and his honesty and uprightness are unquestioned. Honorable and upright in all his dealing, he has been entrusted with the finances of several estates, and is in every way worthy of the trust reposed in him. He and Mrs. Tillerson and their children are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, and are the founders of this church in the northern part of the township. Although they brought but little of this world's goods to this country, they respect the word of God and place their faith and trust in God, and have become prosperous and happy. Mrs. Tillerson's aged mother, now seventy-three years of age, has been with her on a visit since June, 1891, and, as much as she loves her daughter, her only child, and her grandchildren, she sighs and longs for her mountain home in Norway.

Although Mrs. Tillerson is not what one would call an educated lady, she is still more intelligent than many college-bred ladies, and has taught her children the Norwegian tongne, besides instructing them in many other useful ways. Mr. and Mrs. Tillerson's greatest and most earnest wish is that their children will always respect the word of God, and be considerate of the poor and suffering. While the early death of their daughter was a sad blow, and a trouble that seems hard, very hard, to bear, they still think that the cloud has its silver lining, and that "a good God reigns over all." Her funeral was one long to be remembered on account of the large concourse of friends who paid their last respects to the dear departed one.

HARLES MAYER. Among the prosperous citizens of Rockford, who have here accumulated a goodly fortune, may be mentioned the subject of this sketch. He was born on the river Rhine, at Nierstein, Hesse-Darmstadt, March 8, 1851. In his native land he grew to manhood, and, when eighteen years old, in 1869, enlisted in the Hessian Pioneer Company, Ninth Army Corps, his division general being Prince Ludwig, now Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt. He served throughout the Franco-Prussian War, and was honorably discharged, January 6, 1872, as Corporal of his company. Mr. Mayer participated in the battle of Carzellio, August 14, 1870, and four days afterward took part in the battle of Gravelotte, the greatest engagement of that well-known war. He was also present at Metz, Orleans, South of Paris, and Le Mans, including several minor engagements, making fourteen in all. He was particularly fortunate, for he was neither wounded nor taken prisoner, and was always on duty. For four months he served as advance guard, and is justly proud of his military record, having served his country with fidelity and valor.

At the close of the war, Mr. Mayer returned to his home, and at once commenced making preparations to emigrate to America. March 10, 1872, he left his home and took passage from Hamburg on the steamer "Harmonia," Capt. Meyer commanding, and landed in New York City on the 28th of March, after a voyage of eighteen days. Two sisters and two brothers had preceded him to the United States. The younger brother, Ferdinand, lives in Wisconsin and is a grain-buyer; Albert is a barber in Rockford; a sister, Mrs. Baumgartner, is the wife of a baker of New York City. The father of this family, Cornelius Mayer, was a miller and wine-maker on the Rhine, and died in his native place when forty-six years old.

The grandfather of our subject, Jacob Mayer, served under the first Napoleon, and participated in the battles of Leipsic and Austerlitz, as well as other prominent places. He died in the '40s, when quite full of years. He had married a Miss Zeigler, whose brother Henry fought with Napoleon at the battle of Moscow and in other engagements. The mother of our subject, who was formerly Miss Eva Schmitt, was born, reared, and passed her entire life in Hesse-Darmstadt, dying in 1859, at the age of forty-four. In her religion she was a Catholic, while her husband was a Protestant. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Jacob Schmitt, was a member of the Hessian parliament for years, and was a prominent citizen of Nierstein.

When Mr. Mayer came to Rockford in 1873, he had only $6.50, but by prudence and energy has become well-to-do. He is the owner of a fine property of two acres, with two houses, his business property, a valuable lot at No. 108 East State Street, and a two-story residence at No. 712½ Elm Street. The business in which he is successfully engaged is that of a wholesale dealer in beer and a retail bottler of the same, at Nos. 1310 and 1312 Charles Street. He is a stockholder in the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Bank, the Nelson Hotel, and the Rockford Driving Park.

The lady who became the wife of our subject in Rockford was Louisa Stricker, a native of Wurtemberg, who accompanied her parents to the United States and settled in Belvidere. Her father died in 1872, when sixty-eight years old; his wife died January 9, 1881, in her seventy-first year. They were members of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Mayer is a loving wife, and devoted to her three children: Carl H., Amelia R., and Harry G. cially, Mr. Mayer is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. For the past seven years he has served as President of the Rockford Germania Singing Society. He is a public-spirited man, always interested in the welfare of the city, and contributes liberally to the poor and needy.

LAUS H. ANDERSON is engaged in general farming on section 9, Cherry Valley Township, where he operates three hundred and sixty-five acres of good land. Throughout his entire life, he has engaged in agricultural pursuits. He claims Sweden as his native land, his birth having occurred on the 7th of July, 1851. Mention is made of his family in the sketch of A. J. Anderson on another page of this work. The days of his boyhood and youth were spent in the land of his nativity, no event of special importance occurring during that time. In 1875, he came with his parents to this country. They sailed from Gottenburg to Liverpool, England, whence they crossed the Atlantic to Boston, Mass., and thence came to Rockford, where the father and stepmother of our subject are now living, both being well advanced in years.

Mr. Anderson, of this sketch, since locating in this county, some seventeen years ago, has followed farming. For eleven years, he was engaged in that pursuit in New Milford Township and is now a leading agriculturist of Cherry Valley Township. He has been quite successful in his business career and has steadily worked his way upward, overcoming the obstacles in his path, until he is now well-to-do. He may well be termed a self-made man, for his prosperity is the result of his own efforts, good management and close application to business.

Mr. Anderson was married in the city of Rockford, the lady of his choice being Miss Mary Farb, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, in 1853, and came to this country when a maiden of about sixteen summers. She took up her residence in Rockford, and her parents afterward crossed the Atlantic, becoming residents of Winnebago County. They purchased a farm in Rockford Township, where they are now living, both being well advanced in years. Mr. Farb had served in the standing army of Sweden a good many years before he came to America.

The union of Mr. Anderson and Miss Farb has been blessed with five children, and the family circle yet remains unbroken. They are as follows: Alma J., Edward II., Charles G., Otto II. and Edna J. The parents are both members of the First Lutheran Church of Rockford and are enterprising and industrious citizens, well and favorably known in this community. They take an active interest in all that pertains to the general welfare and the upbuilding of the county. In politics, Mr. Anderson is a Republican but has never sought or desired official preferment.

Rockford there is one business more successful than all others, and attracting wider notices from other cities, it is the Nelson Knitting Company, of which the subject of this sketch is Director, and Superintendent of the Machine Department. The company furnishes steady employment to five hundred persons, and such is the demand for their goods that the full capacity of the plant is run night and day. The five thousand dozen pair of hose, which is the daily average, find a ready sale in every part of the United States, and have a reputation which is excelled by the products of no other manufactory.

This enterprise, which has been steadily and rapidly increasing in magnitude since 1870, is the outgrowth of the genius of the inventor, John Nelson (of whom see biography), the father of our subject. With reference to the Nelson Knitting Machines, it may be truthfully said that no invention of the kind equals them. In addition to his interests in this manufactory, Mr. Nelson is a Director in the Rockford Folding Bed Manufacturing Company, and in the Manufacturers' National Bank. He is also Vice-president of the Forest City Knitting Company, another prominent factory, located on the east side of the Rock River and employing about three hundred men. This is a successful industry and a valuable acquisition to the manufactories of Rockford.

Among the noteworthy additions to the city of Rockford, and one which is looked upon with special pride by the people, is the elegant new hotel, containing five hundred rooms, erected in a modern style of architecture and complete in every appointment. The house, which is called the Nelson Ilouse, in honor of its chief promoter, is unexcelled by any other hotel in the State outside of Chicago, and is probably one of the best throughout the entire Northwest.

These and other enterprises, including landed additions to the city and their improvement, have received the hearty support and active encouragement of Mr. Nelson, besides his financial assistance. The shrewd and careful way in which he has conducted his business affairs proves him to be a man of much natural tact and ability, and he is likewise the inheritor of some of his father's mechanical ingenuity, which enables him to conduct and manage the great machinery developed by his father. A stranger is impressed with the accuracy and perfection of the complicated machines, as well as by the skill which oversees and guides the whole.

William Nelson was born in Rockford, October 29, 1857. He received his education in the common schools and made the best use of his advantages in that direction. Not many years ago, he returned to his father's native land, Sweden, and there took for a wife one of the fair daughters of that country, Miss Oleva Olson, who was born and reared there. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have a beautiful home in the best residence portion of Rockford, and with their two children, Louisa and Elsie, are surrounded by all the comforts which increase the pleasures of life.

Being of a social nature, Mr. Nelson has taken especial interest in the order of Masonry and is a Royal Arch Mason; a member of the Knights Templar, or Commandery Degree, of this city: the Scottish Rites Consistory, of Freeport, Ill., and the Shrine of Chicago, making him a Thirty-second Degree member of the order.

ILLIAM J. COX. On a fertile and well-developed farm, consisting of one hundred and sixty-five acres on section 15, Burritt Township, Winnebago County, Mr. Cox pursues the even tenor of his way, gaining the good-will of his fellows and winning maintenance from the soil. He was born in New Jersey, March 16, 1843, and is the son of William Cox, a native of Hampshire, England, where the grandparents of our subject spent their entire lives.

William Cox was reared and married in England, setting sail from Liverpool with his young bride November 3, 1841, and landing in New York December 24, of that year. They made their home in New Jersey for five years, at the end of which time the father of our subject removed to Genesee County, N. Y., and in 1851 came by way of the Lakes to Chicago, thence by team to Rockford, in which city he lived for a few months. He later came to Burritt Township, where he purchased forty acres on section 14, only six of which were broken. Mr. Cox soon entered forty acres more from the Government and again added to his estate eighty acres, upon which he resided until 1876, when he moved into the city of Rockford and departed this life April 10, 1891.

November 3, 1841, the parents of our subject were married in England, the mother being Ann Radford, daughter of James Radford. Her father eame to the New World and lived with his children until his decease. The mother of our subject still resides in Rockford and has reared the following ten children: William J., Mary A., Alfred, Charles, Maria, Alonzo, Carrie, Frank, Joseph and Vern. Alfred served during the late war as a member of the Twelfth Illinois Cavalry and died in the service.

Our subject was nine years of age when he accompanied his parents on their removal to the Prairie State and here he assisted his father in developing a new farm until reaching his twentysecond year. During that time, however, he had become the owner of eighty acres which are included in his present farm and to which he has since added until his estate comprises one hundred and sixtyfive acres. It is well improved with good buildings, and besides that tract Mr. Cox owns considerable timber land.

The date which united the fortunes of Miss Annie Smith to those of our subject was March 16, 1870. The lady was born November 23, 1845. in Bedfordshire, England, where her father, James Smith, the son of Mark and Elizabeth Smith, was born. The father was married in Bedfordshire to a lady who bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Bettle, a daughter of William Bettle. Mr. and Mrs. Smith had the following children: William, Mark, Susan, Thomas, George, Sarah, Alfred, James, Elizabeth, and Mrs. Cox. The latter, together with William and Mark, are the only members of the family who came to America. Our subject and his wife have one son, William G.

EORGE R. ATKINSON, a well-known merchant tailor in Rockford, has his fine parlors located over the Golden Eagle Clothing Store, on the corner of West State and North Main Streets. He has been engaged in this branch of work since January 1, 1871, and does the most extensive trade in the city, giving employment to from eighteen to twenty men. Mr. Atkinson came to this city September 10, 1864, when he engaged to work for David Wallock & Co., who are retired business men, now residing in Chicago. Our subject acted as cutter for that company for seven years, and during the last two seasons of his service received the largest salary ever paid to a cutter in the Western country.

As before stated, in 1871 our subject lannehed out in the merchant tailoring business on his own account, and beside numbering among his customers the best eitizens of Rockford, he receives orders for work in the different States from Maine to California, which fact in itself indicates his ability as a skilled workman and business man. George R. Atkinson was born in Cumberland County, in the North of England, September 19, 1835, and was a lad of eleven years when he was bound out as a tailor's apprentice until reaching his majority. When seventeen years of age, however, he decided to leave his master, and his mother borrowing the money to pay his passage to the United States, he, in September, 1853, boarded a sailer at Liverpool, which landed him in the city of New York six weeks later, where he engaged to work at his trade. He was the eldest of three children born to his parents, and is the only member who makes his home in America. His father, Joseph Atkinson, was a wool-weaver by trade, and died in the prime of life, when our subject was three years of age. His wife, who survived him a number of years, died at the old home in Cumberland, England, in July, 1881. She was a very estimable lady and an active worker in the Dissenters' Church. Mary A., the only sister of our subject, died when only three weeks old, and his brother Thomas, who is one of the four oldest engineers on the London & Northwestern Railroad in England, will soon receive a pension from the company which he has served so many years with never an aeeident.

The lady to whom our subject was married in Boston, Mass., was Miss Julia A., daughter of Col. J. C. Harper, who was a well-known and prominent Mason in Wilson, Franklin County, Me., where he was born. Mrs. Atkinson was only two years of age when her mother died, and when ready to enter school received an excellent education, and is now one of the intelligent and cultured ladies of Rockford. She has become the mother of two children, George and Julia, who are both deceased.

Mr. Atkinson, of this sketch, is prominent in Masonic circles, having taken the Thirty-second Degree. He is also a member of the Shrine of Medina Temple in Chicago, is connected with the Scottish Rites of Freeport, also with the Crusaders' Commandery No. 17, Winnebago Chapter No. 24, and Blue Lodge Eastern Star No. 116. He is also connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which order he holds a high place.

OHN S. BATE has been identified with the interests of Rockford for the past six years, where he is carrying on his trade of carpenter and contractor. He makes his home at No. 1001 Ashland Avenue, where he owns valuable property and has erected a comfortable residence. He came to this section from Cherokee County, Iowa, where he had been engaged as a farmer for four years.

The original of this sketch was born in Wayne County, Pa., April 27, 1853, and was there reared to man's estate. His father, Robert Bate, was born in Cornwall County, England, where, on attaining manhood, he followed the occupation of a farmer. He was married in his native country to Miss Prudence Arthur, who was also born in the same county as was her husband, and who accompanied him soon after their union to the United States in the latter part of the '30s. They arrived in New York City after a tedious voyage of seven weeks, and going at once to Pennsylvania located on a farm in Wayne County, where the father is still living, being in his sixty-eighth year. His wife departed this life in 1866, leaving a family of ten children, of whom our subject is the sixth in order of birth, and the only one who makes his home in Illinois. The parents of our subject, who were Episcopalians in religion, were known and respected for the honesty and sincerity of their chararcter, and possessed the friendship of the best citizens in their community.

Young Bate, of this sketch, came to Illinois in 1876, and was later married to Miss Lucretia Kapp, who was born and reared in Burritt Township, Winnebago County. She was the daughter of Ashley Kapp, a well-to-do farmer of the above-named township, and departed this life at her home in the city of Rockford, July 16, 1890. She was a devoted member of the Baptist Church, and left at her decease one child, Robert Ashley. A daughter, Lucretia L., died when fourteen months old.

The lady whom Mr. Bate chose as his second wife was Anna A. B. Seegert, who was born in Chicago, July 2, 1870. Her early life was passed in the Garden City, where she received an excellent education in the public schools. Her father, Morris Seegert, was a native of Mechlenburg, Germany, and came to America in the '50s. He is at present living in Chicago, where he is a retired boot and shoe merchant. His wife was also a native of the Fatherland, and was about twenty-one years of age when she came to this country, being the first of her family to make her home in the New World. She was a working member of the Congregational Church, and reared a family of seven children. Mr. Bate stands well with his fellow-citizens, and is a sound Republican in politics. With his wife, he is connected with the Baptist Church, of which he has been a member for fifteen years, and a Deacon for the past two years, OHN Z. RYDBERG. The varied experiences which have fallen to the lot of this prominent citizen of Rockford entitles him to more than passing notice. As a sailor before the mast, and, in later life, a soldier in defense of the Stars and Stripes, he gained a wide knowledge of of men and things, which makes him a pleasant companion and entertaining conversationalist. A Swede by birth and parentage, he is nevertheless intensely American in his ideas, and has cherished a fond affection for the flag of our country since, when a boy of ten, he first saw it at his home in Gottenburg.

Mr. Rydberg was born in Sweden, September 22, 1833. He emigrated to the United States in 1852, and was a sailor on a merchant vessel out of the port of Boston, from which city the ship sailed on the waters of the Atlantic and through the Southern Ocean, passing the equator four times and touching the South American ports. In the course of the voyage, Mr. Rydberg also sailed on the Mediterranean Sea, and anchored at Palermo, Sicily, besides other ports. At the request of his mother, he withdrew from the marine service after being thus engaged two or three years, and coming to the States located in Chicago, where he remained for a short time.

Coming to Rockford in 1857, Mr. Rydberg has since made this city his home. When the Rebellion broke out, he enlisted in the Seventy-fourth Illmois Infantry, as a member of Company K, and in the fall of 1862 accompanied his regiment to the Army of the Cumberland, Sheridan's Division, Fourth Army Corps. He participated in the battles of Perryville, Kv., Stone River, Missionary Ridge, Resaca, Buzzard's Roost, and other miner engagements. At New Hope Church, he was wounded in the right ankle from the bursting of a shell, and was saved from what would have been a fatal wound by his ammunition box, which stayed the enemy's ball. Enlisting as a private, he was promoted to Corporal, in which capacity he was discharged at Nashville, Tenn, in the fall of 1865, after three years' service.

Returning to Rockford, Mr. Rydberg has since been connected with the progress of this city and has been identified with its foremost interests. He has served for some time as City and Town Collector, and is now Notary Public, besides which he holds the position of Secretary of the Swedish Mutual Fire Insurance Company. In politics, he is a Republican. For some years, he has served as Deacon in the Swedish Lutheran Church and is at present Superintendent of the Sunday-school.

In Chicago our subject was married to Miss Matilda Blom, a native of Sweden, who accompanied her parents to the United States in 1853 and with them settled in Chicago. Her father, who was a life guard to King Charles Oscar, died in Chicago, when more than fifty years old, and her mother also passed away in that city. Mr. and Mrs. Rydberg have had eight children, three of whom are deceased, namely: Lydia, Charlotte and Benjamin.

Charles, who married Laura Nelson, of Rockford, resides in Chicago; Olive is the wife of Paul Battenstron, a business man of Chicago; Emma married L. W. Keil, a jeweler of East State Street, Rockford; Joseph, who resides at home, is an engraver in a silver plate company; and Ebon is elerking for his brother-in-law in Chicago.

OBERT II. FARRANT. A farm of moderate extent, but well-improved and managed, and located in Roscoe Township, with which well-but the subject of this notice. The estate is supplied with a full line of well-but edifices, which afford adequate shelter for stock, and storage for the products which are yielded by the land, or manufactured upon it. The owner of this comfortable home is of English lineage and birth, his parents being William and Caroline (Hutchings) Farrant, wealthy farmers in England, the former of whom died when our subject was an infant of three months.

He of whom we write was born in Devonshire, England, September 29, 1822, and is the youngest of seven children born to his parents. The eldest son, Mark, died when young; the next son was William, the heir to his father's vast estate. Mrs. William Farrant died in her native land in 1864, at the advancedage of ninety-six years. Robert IL, of this sketch, left home when ten years of age, and went to Dublin with a brother-in-law to attend school, and there learned the upholsterer's trade. In the spring of 1839, he embarked on a sailing-vessel, "The New York." from Liverpool, and after a pleasant voyage of thirty days, landed on the American shore, in company with his brother-in-law, Robert Conner.

The original of this sketch made his home in Salem, Mass., for some twelve years, where he was engaged at his trade, and in 1854 came West to Gallipolis, Ohio. In December of 1863, he was married in Janesville, Wis., to Miss Ahmira, daughter of Daniel Goldthwait, whose birth occurred in Danvers, Essex County, Mass., and who was a potter by trade, which was the calling of his father before him. The family trace their ancestry back four generations, to John, Daniel and David Goldthwait, who came to this country in an early day. The father of Mrs. Farrant emigrated to Cleveland, Ohio, in 1834, but soon returned to his native State, where his decease occurred at sixty-four years of age. He was followed to the better land fourteen years later by his good wife, who bore the maiden name of Susan Curtis.

To Mr. and Mrs. Farrant has been born one son, his natal day being March 12, 1866. They located in Roseoe Township, this county, in May of that year, where they purchased sixty acres of improved farm land, to which they have since added seventy acres. The former tract was purchased from William and David Randall, who emigrated from England, and entered the land from the Government in 1844. Our subject has been engaged in the upholstering business at Beloit, Wis., much of the time since locating here, during which time he rented his property. He is now managing affairs himself, and cultivates the soil in a most intelligent and profitable manner. In early life an old-line Whig, Mr. Farrant became a Democrat at the time Stephen A. Douglas was nominated for the Presidency. His son, Henry Ross, was a student at Beloit for a number of years, but was compelled to abandon his studies on account of his health, and is now at home cultivating the farm.

DGAR N. LINCOLN, who was the owner and occupant of a fine farm on section 3, Flora Township, Boone County, was born in Bonus Township, July 12, 1842. Ilis father, Jedediah Lincoln, was born in Middletown, Conn., where he was reared and educated, and on leaving his native State went to Pennsylvania and made his home for two years in Eric County. In 1839, he came West to Illinois, locating in what is now Bonus Township, this county, and entered a tract of Government land. There he resided for three years, when, disposing of that property, he purchased land in Flora Township, where his death occurred October 26, 1888.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Marion Nichols, a native of Chautauqua County, N. Y., and the daughter of Phineas Nichols. Her father, who was also a native of the Empire State, when reaching mature years removed to Ohio, and later came to Boone County, where he was classed among the pioneers. He was a man of considerable means, and invested his money in Government land in Bonus, Caledonia and Flora Townships. He only resided here a few years, however, and, returning to the Buckeye State, there passed his remaining years. The maiden name of his wife was Esther Gore. The mother of our subjeet died at the home of her daughter in lowa, October 17, 1889. She reared a family of five children, viz.: Phœbe E., Oscar J., Edgar N., Alice M. and William P.

Edgar N. Lincoln attended the pioneer schools, and assisted in conducting the farm until September 4, 1862, when he enlisted in Company G, Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, and served in the Union ranks until February, 1863, when he was honorably discharged by special act of Congress. He re-enlisted the same day, however, in Company D, Mississippi River Marine Brigade, and served with that command until January 22, 1865, when the command was disbanded.

November 15, 1866, when our subject was married to Ellen H. Moss, he located upon a portion of the old home which he now owns and occupies. He has made excellent improvements upon the place and has the pleasure of knowing that his farm is one of the best cultivated in the county. Mrs. Lincoln was born in Spring Township, this county, while her father, Asa Moss, was born in 1818, in Washington County, N. Y. His father, who also bore the name of Asa, removed from Washington to Chautauqua County in 1820, and resided there until 1836, at which time he came to Boone County, and made one of the first settlers in Belvidere Township. He secured a tract of Government land, improved his farm and made it his home until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Sally Shirwood.

The father of Mrs. Lincoln was reared in Chautauqua County, and when a youth of eighteen years, came to Illinois with his parents, and secured a tract of Government land in Spring Township.

After his marriage, he sold his property, and, removing to Belvidere Township, purchased a farm which he occupied some years, and then lived retired in the city of that name until his decease, November 1, 1888. His wife was known in her maidenhood as Alvira Stewart. She was born in Eric County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Hosea and Phœbe (Aldrich) Stewart, natives also of the Empire State, where their decease occurred. Mrs. Moss came to Illinois with her brother Mathew, in 1843. She now makes her home with Mrs. Lincoln.

The following are the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln: Carrie A., wife of Fred McCoy; Rosa N., Gracie E. and Walter E. The parents are both members of the South Side Baptist Church, and, in politics, Mr. Lincoln is a Republican.

EROY L. KIDDER, who was born in Medina County, Ohio, February 12, 1832, is the son of Benjamin and Jane A. (Palmer) Kidder. The father was born in New Hampshire and died in Pecatonica when seventy-four years of age. While a resident of Ohio, he was engaged in the lumber business, which he sold out in 1854, and coming to Illinois purchased a farm in Seward Township, Winnebago County. In politics, he was in early life a Free-soiler and later joined the ranks of the Republican party. Religiously, he was a Congregationalist.

The paternal grandfather of our subject, Joseph Kidder, also hailed from New Hampshire and came West to Ohio in 1816, where he died when seventy years of age. The grandmother also died in the Buckeye State in her seventy-second year. Benjamin Kidder at one time walked from New Hampshire to Ohio on a pleasure trip. Mrs. Jane A. Kidder was born March 5, 1810 at Glens Falls, N. Y., and was a daughter of Hamner and Deborah (Lewis) Palmer. Her father came to Ohio in 1814, where he combined the occupation of a merchant and farmer and passed his last years, dying at the age of ninety-four years. His wife also died in Ohio in her fifty-fifth year. Mrs. Kidder departed this life at Akron after having become the mother of nine children, three of whom died in infancy and four are now living. An unele, Joseph Kidder, was a patriot in the War of 1812, and a brother of our subject, Benjamin Franklin, during the late war, was a member of Company K, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry.

Le Roy L. Kidder attended the schools taught in the old log cabin and remained at home until eighteen years of age. He then went West and engaged in mining in the Sierre Nevada Mountains, also in transferring goods from one camp to another. Later, he became a large cattle dealer in the West and in 1861, returning to Pecatonica, rode a mule the entire distance. Purchasing land in Seward and Pecatonica Townships, he added to his tract until he became the owner of four hundred acres of excellent land.

January 1, 1868, Mr. Kidder was united in marriage to Miss Celia Searls, who was born April 17, 1843 at Hinckley, Ohio, and is the daughter of Gilbert and Elizabeth (Halsted) Searls. The father was a native of New York, and on coming to Seward Township in 1858, here passed his last days, dying when forty-nine years of age. His wife, who was also born in the Empire State, is still living and makes her home in Pecatonica.

Mrs. C. Kidder is one in a family of eight children, seven of whom are living. By her union with our subject six children have been born, three of whom are deceased. Those hving are: Nellie E., who was born June 25, 1868, is a graduate of the Pecatonica schools, and at the present time is conducting one of the best millinery stores in the place. Ernest R. was born July 10, 1876, and Lewis L., July 27, 1878. After his marriage, our subject removed to the village of Pecatonica, where he was engaged in the hardware business for two years, at the end of which time he resided for four years on his farm. He then returned to the village, took in as partner a Mr. Marston, and condueted a general store under the name of Kidder & Marston for two years, when our subject purchased the interest of his partner and operated the business alone for ten and one-half years. The firm style then became Kidder & Swartz and his present fine store building was erected. He of whom we write is interested in the shoe factory in this place and gives liberally of his means to the furtherance of all good objects.

Our subject and his wife attend the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Kidder is connected with the Woman's Relief Corps and Legion of Honor. He of whom we write is a member of the Masonic fraternity in Pecatonica, in which lodge he has filled the positions of Secretary and Warden. He is also a member of Lodge No. 173. I. O. O. F., and has filled the principal chairs in that body three or four times. The Ancient Order of United Workmen claims him as one of its active members, as also does the Legion of Honor. In politics, our subject is a Republican. He was Assessor of his township for a number of years, for ten years served as President of the School Board, and was President of the Village Board for one term.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Kidder were Daniel and Phobe (Fisher) Searls. Her father was born June 3, 1811, in Greene County, N. Y., where also the mother's birth occurred, March 19 of the same year. She was the daughter of James and Phæbe (Jameson) Halsted, her father born March 24, 1775, on Long Island, and died August 28, 1854, in Hinckley, Medina County, Ohio, when seventy-nine years of age. Daniel Searls was born in April, 1775, and also passed away in Hinckley, Ohio, in his seventy-ninth year, while his wife, whose demise occurred in the above State, was eighty years of age at the time of her death. Our subject's maternal great-grandfather was held a prisoner by the Indians for a number of months and on making his escape was nearly starved to death.

HOMAS W. COLE. The high standard of excellence which marks the popularity of any business house is maintained by the firm of Cole & Day, dealers in all kinds of fancy and staple groceries, located at No. 307 West State Street, Rockford. The present firm was established in November, 1879, and carries one of the largest stocks in the city and is rapidly increasing its business beyond its previous scope by honest treatment of patrons and strict integrity.

Since 1865, Mr. Cole has been identified with the business interests of Rockford, and for some years was a tobacco dealer, later served as County Treasurer for six years and was Township Collector for two years. At present, he is Alderman of the Seventh Ward and as a strong Republican takes an active part in political matters and is prominent in public affairs. His fellow-citizens have repeatedly called him to official positions of honor and trust, which he has invariably tilled with credit to himself and satisfaction to all concerned, and has been especially active in all matters pertaining to the growth of the city.

Mr. Cole is a native of New York City and was born November 9, 1838, but has been a resident of Rockford since he was eighteen months old and has seen this city grow from a straggling village with a small population to a prominent position among the best cities of the State. When the Civil War broke out, he enlisted for three months in the early part of 1861 and served during the period of his enlistment as a member of Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry. In July, 1862, he reenlisted in the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry as a private in Company D, Capt. Douglas and Col. Marsh, commanding.

After organization, the regiment marched at once to the South and was assigned to the Twentieth Army corps, in the Army of the Cumberland. Among the engagements in which Mr. Cole participated were the battles of Perryville, Ky.; Stone River (after which he was made First Sergeant), Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Dalton, Buzzard's Roost and Resaca. At the last-named place, the Seventy-fourth took a very prominent part, and Mr. Cole, in the thickest of the fight, was wounded in the right elbow by a ball from the enemy's guns, which confined him to the hospital for six months. Meanwhile, he was sent back to Rockford, where his arm was amputated in November, 1864.

April 3, 1872, Mr. Cole was united in marriage with Miss Alice Mentzer, who was born in Rockford, January 11, 1849. She was reared and educated in this city, of which her parents were early settlers. Mr. and Mrs. Cole are the parents of three children, Frank C., William J. and Lulu, all of whom are at home. Mrs. Cole takes an active interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the women of the city, and has for many years been a prominent member of the Woman's Relief Corps. Mr. Cole is a member of G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., of Rockford, and has occupied the Chair of Quartermaster of the post.

M. SOUTHGATE, a retired business man of Rockford, occupies a pleasant home at No. 310 South Second Street. He has been a resident of this city since 1853, and has therefore been a witness of much of its development, aiding materially in its growth through his exertions. In his youth, he learned the trade of a tinner, and was thus engaged for some years, but in 1862 embarked in the grocery business, in partnership with his father-in-law, C. A. Shaw. Afterward, he carried on the business under the title of Southgate & Hodson, following which he was alone for three years, and then for ten years the firm was known as Southgate Bros., J. M. and V. M. being associated together. After many years spent suceessfully as a merchant, our subject retired from active business life in 1891, and is now enjoying the fruits of the toil of former years.

Mr. Southgate was born in Bridgewater, Windsor County, Vt., and belongs to a substantial New England family. His father, Thomas, a native of the Green Mountain State, died when forty-four years old, leaving his wife with four little children to eare for. He was a farmer by occupation, and a man of upright principles and the utmost probity. His wife, whose maiden name was Delcena Marsh, was born in Vermont, of worthy parents, and was reared to womanhood in her native State. After the death of Mr. Southgate, she was married to Samuel Harwood, a native of New York, and afterward made her home on a farm in Orleans County until her death, when about four-score years old.

In Rockford, Mr. Southgate of this sketch was married to Miss C. Jennie Shaw, who was born in Lapeer County, Mich. Her parents, Calvin A. and Clara M. Shaw, were natives, respectively, of Rutand and Middlebury. Vt., and after their marriage in the Green Mountain State, removed to Michigan.

settling in Lapeer County, and improving a good farm there. Afterward, Mr. Shaw became a merchant, and in 1857 came to Illinois, engaging in business at Rockford, in partnership with Mr. Brockway, whom our subject succeeded. Mr. Shaw, later, sold his interest in the store to Mr. Ilodson, and lived retired until his death, in 1879, at the age of seventy years. He was prominent in the polities of the city, and a strong adherent of the Republican party. He was an active member of the Presbyterian Church, and served as Elder. His wife, who was a noble woman and a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church, died in 1887, when seventy years old.

The family of which Mrs. Southgate is a member eonsisted of three children, the others being C. Adel, wife of William II. Worthington, of whom see biography; and L. Kate, whose husband is a elergyman in the Presbyterian Church at Vincennes, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. Southgate have two sons: Harry, married Edith Wettstein, of Rochelle, Ill., and is book-keeper in the Rockford Shoe Company; Clate R. married Daisy Harbough, and they reside in Rockford. In their religious connections, our subject and his wife are members of the First Congregational Church, of which he is a Trustee, and also Assistant Superintendent of the Sundayschool. Politically, Mr. Southgate is a Prohibitionist, and a believer in reform along temperance lines.

ON. SELDEN M. CHURCH, who is one of the prominent citizens of Rockford, was born in East Haddam, Middlesex County, Conn., March 4, 1804, and is the son of Lazarus Church, who, as far as is known, was also a native of Connecticut. His father, the grandfather of our subject, bore the name of Ira Church, and emigrated from the above-named State to New York in 1804, where he spent his last years in Monroe County.

Lazarus Church was reared to man's estate and married in Connecticut, whence he removed the same year as did his father to New York making the journey overland with his wife and family. He located in what is now Monroe County, where he purchased a tract of heavy timber land about twelve miles from the present site of Rochester. Residing there a few years, he later took up his abode in Avon, Livingston County, where he earried on his trade of a blacksmith. He was living in that place during the War of 1812, and on one occasion joined an independent company and went to the rescue of the city of Buffalo. The father of our subject resided in the Empire State until 1847, when he came West and, locating in this city, here spent his last days, dying August 8, 1852, when seventy-four years of age.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Miss Catherine Brockway, and like her husband, she was a native of Connecticut. She was the daughter of Abner and Catherine (Marvin) Brockway, and departed this life in Rockford. She reared a family of four sons, namely: Selden M., Ulysses F., Ira and William L. He of whom we write was an infant when his parents removed to New York, and, when old enough to attend school, received his education in the pioneer log schoolhouse near his boyhood's home. He commenced when quite young to make his own way in the world, being variously employed in New York until January, 1835, when he came West with a team, stopping for a while at the then village of Chicago. From there he went to Geneva, now the county seat of Kane County, where he was employed as clerk in the store of a Mr. Herrington, who was one of the first settlers in that place. During that summer, he visited Rockford, his business being to subpæna a witness, the journey being made on horseback. In that early day, Winnebago County was not organized, and the now prosperous and wealty city of Rockford contained but two buildings.

Mr. Church, of this sketch, remained in Geneva until the fall of 1836, when he came to this city, and for many years was one of the most active and influential citizens, until the infirmities of old age compelled him to retire from business and public life. He was one of the originators and organizers of the Rockford Water Power Company, and for some time served as President of the Rockford Insurance Company, and as Director of the Winnebago National Bank. He was elected County Clerk in 1840, being the third incumbent of that position, and in 1849 was elected County Judge, in which capacity he served for eight years. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1847, and was made a member of the General Assembly in 1862. He was appointed a member of the State Board of Public Charities in 1868, and was one of the Commissioners designated by the Government to locate the bridge at Rock Island.

The lady to whom our subject was married, in 1831, was Pamelia Stevens. She died in 1832, and the lady whom Mr. Church chose as his second wife, in 1845, was Mary (Turner) Preston, who was born in Cumberland County. Me., and was the daughter of James and Nancy (Tombs) Turner, and widow of Samuel D. Preston. Our subject has one daughter living by his first marriage, Katherine, now the widow of Theodore A. Keeler. She is the mother of two children: Jennie and Katherine. Mrs. Church had one daughter by her union with Mr. Preston, who bears the name of Mary.

ILLIAM L. HARBISON. Prominent among the citizens of Rockford stands the name of Mr. Harbison, who has for years been closely identified with the progress of the city, and especially of the Fifth Ward, which he is serving as Alderman. In October, 1881, he established a mercantile business at No. 816 South Main Street, where he has a large store, stocked with a full line of goods. Among the public-spirited citizens, stanch Republicans, and successful business men of the city, he occupies a prominent place, and is deserving of representation in this volume.

A native of the North of Ireland, and of Scotch-Irish parentage, our subject was early orphaned by the death of his mother. His father, Mathew Harbison, afterward came to America, in 1849, and engaged for some years as a miner in California. He made his home in the Golden State until his death, at Valley Ford, in 1888, aged eighty-five years. Our subject, after his mother's death, was taken into the home of his uncle, James Harbison, with whom he came to America in 1850, when fourteen years old. He remained for some time in New York City, and served an apprenticeship as clerk for six years. His Uncle James removed West to Ohio, and died in that State in middle life.

In the spring of 1856, Mr. Harbison came to Rockford, where for some years he was engaged in business as a contractor. Since he organized his present business, in 1881, he has been the sole proprietor, and has erected the substantial store-building he now owns and occupies. He was married in this city to Miss Anna A. Raymond, who was born in Vermont, and came to Illinois when quite young, accompanying her parents, Lemuel and Laura (Wilkinson) Raymond. They settled on a farm in Winnebago County, and after bringing it to a high state of cultivation, retired to Rockford, where Mr. Raymond died at the age of seventy-six years.

Mrs. Harbison was reared in the parental home and was for some years a teacher, following that profession with success. Six children were born to her, four of whom are deceased, three dying in infancy, and Frank L., when a promising young man of about twenty-one years. Omer A. is at present clerking in his father's store; Howard W. married Susan I. Tisdale, who was educated in Rockford, and was engaged as a teacher prior to her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Harbison are attendants at the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are highly esteemed throughout the community.

OEL BURBANK, the efficient and popular Sheriff of Winnebago County, was elected to office in the fall of 1890, and in the discharge of his duties he has proved himself worthy of the trust reposed in him. His entire life has been spent in this community. He was born in Harrison Township on the 12th of May, 1845, and is a son of Eli Burbank, one of the early setters. His father was a native of Massachusetts and was descended from an old New England family. When a youth, he removed to Cattarangus County, N. Y., where he grew to manhood upon a farm and married Miss Amanda Grover. They came West in 1835, and secured a tract of Government land in Harrison Township, whereon Mr. Burbank made his home until the early part of 1891, when he came to Rockford to live with his son, and his death occurred at Sheriff Burbank's home on the 17th of April. He lived the quiet, unassuming life of a farmer, was a worthy and valued citizen and had the respect of all who knew him. In polities, he was a Republican, and was a member of the United Brethren Church. His first wife died in Harrison Township of a fever that was prevalent in an early day. In Wisconsin, Mr. Burbank was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Anna Woodle, nee Smith, who was born in Kent County, Del., December 26, 1809. Her first husband died in Pennsylvania in the prime of life, and when a young widow she came to the West. Mr. and Mrs. Burbank lived together as man and wife for fifty years. She is yet living and makes her home with her son. She retains her memory to a remarkable degree, but is now suffering from a broken hip and the infirmities which declining years bring. She is a member of the Free-will Baptist Church, and a lady held in the highest regard by all who know her.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Burbank were parents of ten children, some born of the first and some of their second marriage. There are three children of the Burbank family yet living, two sons and a daughter: Amanda, now the wife of D. II. Ellis, of Rockford; Joel, of this sketch, and Thomas, who wedded Mary Hulett and is a member of the fire department of Rockford.

Our subject has spent his entire life in this county. Under the parental roof, he was reared to manbood, the days of his youth being passed in the usual manner of farmer lads, attending the district schools in the winter season and working at home through the summer months. He has also followed agricultural pursuits during the greater part of his life, in fact, until his removal to Rockford in 1891. He still owns his fine farm, which is under a high state of cultivation and well improved. He has been an influential and worthy citizen of the community in which he has resided, and for some years served his township as Collector. He was also Constable for fifteen years and Deputy Sheriff for six years. On questions of national importance, he always supports the Republican party, but at local elections votes independent and as an independent candidate ran for Sheriff in the fall of 1891.

In Green County, Wis., Mr. Burbank led to the marriage altar Miss Charlotte Davis, who was born June 4, 1859, in Spring Grove Township, that county. Her parents were David M. and Frances (Boughton) Davis, natives of Pennsylvania and New York, respectively. When young people, they came West and were married in Green County, Wis., beginning their domestic life on a farm in Spring Grove Township, where the father is still living at the age of sixty-two years. His wife died in November, 1881, at the age of forty-four. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Baptist Church, to which Mrs. Davis also belonged.

Mr. and Mrs. Burbank are now residents of the city of Rockford. They are genial, whole-souled people and have many friends throughout the community where they have so long resided. Mr. Burbank is proving a capable officer.

OEL E. CRONK, a retired farmer of Belvidere, is a native of Dutchess County, N. Y. He was born September 17, 1830, and is a son of Enoch Cronk, who was born in New York, March 11, 1804. The father was reared in Dutchess County, and wedded Mary Denney, who was born in that county, June 28, 1806. They removed to Tioga County in 1837, and Mr. Cronk purchased a tract of land in company with John Thorne. He made his home in that locality until 1845, when he sold out, and bidding good-bye to the East, came by the way of the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes to Boone County, Ill., being one of its early settlers. Here he lived for a year, and then purchased a tract of wild land in Bonus Township, at $2.25 per acre, and also bought some of the Government land at the same time, at $1.25 per acre. On the latter, he built a frame house, 12x20 feet, and made it his home until 1868, when he sold, and purchased a farm on Squaw Prairie. He afterward bought a home in Belvidere, where he resided until his death, on the 1st of November, 1884. His wife died in November, 1887. They reared a family of three children: Abbie J., Richard, and Joel E.

As soon as old enough, our subject began to aid his father in the farm labors, and, on coming to Illinois, assisted in the arduous task of developing the wild land. In 1852, however, he left home, and made an overland journey to California. He started on the 10th of April, and on the 21st of September reached his destination. For a time, he engaged in mining, and then went to Scott Valley, where he carried on a ranch, in connection with his brother Richard, until January, 1853. He then went to Etna Mills, where he was employed in a sawmill until autumn, when he returned home by way of the Isthmus of Panama and New York. Here he at once began to buy stock for a return trip across the plains, and started on the 11th of April, 1854. For five years, he engaged in farming and stock-raising in Siskiyon County, after which he made a visit of a few months to his old home. In January, 1860, he once more went to California by way of the Isthmus route, and continued to engage in agricultural pursuits and in stock-raising for six years, when he returned to Illinois and settled on the homestead in Bonus Township. Upon that farm, he resided until 1881, when he purchased his present farm, a portion of which is within the city limits of Belvidere.

On the 19th of May, 1866, Mr. Cronk was married to Miss Lottie Boomer, who was born in Ellisburgh, Jefferson County, N. Y., and is a daughter of Allen Boomer, also a native of Ellisburgh. The latter became a sailor when quite young, and afterwards was Captain of a lake vessel, which he sailed for seven years. During that time, he visited Chicago, then known as Ft. Dearborn, a small hamlet, containing only a few log houses. He was offered eighty acres of land, which is now in the heart of the city, at a nominal price, but, thinking it too swampy to become valuable, would not purchase it. In 1841, he became one of the early settlers of Stephenson County, where he resided for two years, when he purchased a claim on Garden Prairie, Boone County. The farm which he there made continued to be his home until 1869, when he came to Belvidere, and lived retired until his death, in 1875. In the War of 1812, he had served as a drummer-boy. He married Niobe Franklin, a native of Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., and a daughter of Abel Franklin, a second cousin of Benjamin Franklin. Mrs. Boomer is still living, and makes her home in Austin, Hl.

Mr. and Mrs. Cronk are members of the Free Methodist Church, and are highly esteemed citizens of this community. They have a family of ten children: Florence J., Eugene, Wakeman H., Niobe M., Castellio, Lottie E., Mittie E., Benjamin B., Louis A., and Ruby W.

ILAS B. MERCHANT belongs to that sturdy, honest and independent class, the farmers of Illinois, and is now engaged in cultivating an estate comprising one hundred and twenty acres of land—twenty acres of timber, and the balance well adapted to the purposes of general farming. He was born in Tompkins County, N. Y., in 1836, but his father, Arlo J. Merchant, was a native of Connecticut. The elder Mr. Merchant worked at his trade, that of blacksmith, all his life, and also followed agricultural pursuits on a limited scale. His father, Enoch Merchant, was also a blacksmith by trade, and moved to Tompkins County, N. Y., with his family of three sons and two daughters, at an early date, there passing the remainder of his days.

Arlo J. Merchant married Miss Eliza Olmstead of Tompkins County, N. Y., and after residing there until 1854 they sold out and came to Illinois, locating in Rockford in the fall of that year. They came by rail and brought fifteen of their seventeen children with them, two remaining in New York State. They subsequently settled in the village of Winnebago and there the father passed away within a year afterward, being only forty-six years of age. His widow afterward married M. J. Upright, who received his final summons a few years previous to her death. They had moved to Rockford, Iowa, and there her death occurred on the 27th of June, 1890, when in her eighty-fifth year. She was quite active and vigorous until within a short time of her death. Of the seventeen children born to this much esteemed and respected lady, ten are still living and heads of families. Mrs. Upright, formerly Mrs. Merchant, sent ten sons to the volunteer army during the war for the Union, and one son to the regular army after the close of the war. One of the ten sons serving in the Union army died in service, one was killed in action, one was killed by the accidental discharge of a cannon, two were promoted from privates to commissioned officers, and these, with five others, were honorably discharged at the close of the war. This is an extraordinary record, and the more notable because neither the mother nor her sous sought either notoriety or recognition from the Government. However, her case was brought to the notice of Congress in February, 1879, by the following letter from the Hon. George W. McCrary, then Secretary of War.

War Department, Washington, Feb. 11, 1879. To Hon. N. C. Deering, House of Repts.

Sir:-I have considered the petition of Mrs. Eliza Upright, of Butler County, Iowa, praying for the discharge from military service of her son, Norman M. Merchant, Battery B, Fourth Artillery, which petition was presented by you, and is concurred in by numerous citizens. The discharge of this soldier is asked by the petitioner, who says that she is seventy-four years old, on the ground that she had ten sons in the Union army during the Rebellion, and the one above named, her eleventh and youngest son, has served for over five years in the regular army. She furnishes the names of her sons and a statement of the organizations in which they served: Enoch Merchant was Corporal Company F, One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Illinois Volunteers, and was honorably discharged September 20, 1865, died in Sycamore, Ill., January 19, 1892; Aaron Merchant was private in Company G, Fifteenth Wisconsin Volunteers, and was killed at Island No. 10, December 26, 1862, by the aceidental discharge of a cannon; George W. Merchant was a private in Company C, Seventy-fourth Illinois Volunteers, afterwards a Lieutenant, and was honorably discharged September 26, 1865. He resides in South Dakota. DeWitt C. Merchant was a private in Company C, Fifteenth Illinois Volunteers, and was killed in action July 22, 1864, at Atlanta; Silas B. Merchant was a private in Company G, Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteers, was promoted to First Lieutentant, and resigned September 25, 1864. He lives in Manchester, Boone County, Ill. Abel L. Merchant was a private in Company C, Fifteenth Illinois Volunteers, came home on a furlough and died in Winnebago, Ill.; David O. Merchant was a private in Company C, Seventy-fourth Illinois Volunteers, and was honorably discharged June 10, 1865. He lives in Le Mars, Iowa. Lewis H. Merchant was a private in Company G, Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteers, and was honorably discharged September 26, 1864. He lives in Kansas. Arlo J. Merchant was a private in Company G, Forty-fourth Illinois Volunteers, and was honorably discharged September 25, 1865. He lives in Rockford, Iowa. James B. Merchant was a teamster in the employ of the Quartermaster's Department. He lives in Lanark, 1ll. Norman M. Merchant enlisted March 3, 1873, as a private in Company B, United States Cavalry, and was discharged March 11, 1878, by reason of expiration of term of service. He again enlisted May 4, 1878, and was assigned to Battery B, Fourth Artillery, and was discharged in accordance with his mother's request.

On the last week of the third session of the Forty-sixth Congress, a bill was passed to pay to Mrs. Eliza Upright, of Rockford, Iowa, a pension at the rate per month allowed to parents for the loss of children upon whom such parents were dependent. The action in bringing her before Congress seems to have been prompted by a desire to do her honor, as well as to testify in a substantial manner the appreciation of the Government.

Silas B. Merchant was the eighth child and seventh son born to this worthy mother of many worthy sons. He was reared on the farm until eighteen years of age, after which he began for himself and learned the carpenter and joiner's trade. He followed this until the breaking out of the Civil War, when, in August, 1861, he enlisted in the Forty-fourth Illinois Infantry, Company G, and served all through the war. He enlisted as a private and returned to his home bearing the rank of First Lieutenant. He was wounded in the arm and breast at the battle of Chickamauga and was home for eighty days, after which he returned to his regiment. He served three years and four months and on the whole rather enjoyed army life. He lives over those days in memory.

Returning to his home, Mr. Merchant purchased eighty acres of land for $1,800, going in debt about $800. He was married in September, 1866, to Miss Maggie Gray, of Manchester, and they settled at once in their present home. To the original tract they have added forty acres and now have a fine farm of one hundred and twenty acres, on which are ample barns and out-buildings, as well as a comfortable and pleasant dwelling. Mr. Merchant raises all the ordinary crops of the section, has some good stock, and keeps a small dairy of six or ten cows. In the month of October, 1880, Mrs. Merchant died, leaving him with four children, two sons and two daughters. They had buried one infant son. Those now living are: Ida M., now Mrs Henry Westrip, who resides on a farm in Murray County, Minn.; Fred S. married Miss Beatrice Ellsworth and is engaged in farming in this county; Della E., a young lady at home. and Hayes B., who was born the day Rutherford B. Hayes was elected President.

Our subject was again married, September 15, 1886, this time to Mrs. Mary L. Lovesce, nee De Graff, of Roscoe, and this union has been blessed by the birth of two daughters, the joy and pride of the household: Cora Belle, born April 2, 1888, and Edna May, born January 11, 1890. This is one of the pleasantest rural homes in the township, and Mrs. Merchant makes a model step-mother. By her former marriage she became the mother of two children: Fanny, who died in her fifth year, and a son, Charles A., who is now fourteen years of age. Mr. Merchant has been Road Commissioner for twelve years, and belongs to Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., at Rockford. He is a representative citizen and an honorable, upright man.

URTIS R. BRIGGS, one of the prominent citizens of the village of Winnelago, was born in Sardinia, Eric County, N. Y., March 14, 1823, and is the son of Albert Briggs, who was born in the town of North Greenwich, Kent County, R. I., in which State his father, Ephraim Briggs, was also born. The grandfather later in life went to Western New York, where he purchased land for each of his sons in the town of Sardinia, and there spent the remainder of his life with his children. The maiden name of his wife was Miss Nancy Burlingame, also a native of Rhode Island. The father of our subject was one in a family of nine children and was reared and educated in his native State. He began teaching school when a very young man, and on going to Chenango County, N. Y., was married in Sherburne, after which he removed to Erie County, where he was one of the pioneers of Sardinia. He made his home upon the tract of land which had been given him by his father and erected a log house, in which he established his family until a more suitable structure could be built. There were no railroads in the vicinity at that time and as the markets were far distant, the inhabitants lived mostly off the products of their land. Residing there until the year 1838, the parents of our subject started for the State of Illinois with their family of six children, making the entire journey overland, and July 2, of that year, arrived in Dixon, which at that time was little more than a hamlet. The following day, they went to Grand Detour and occupied a vacant log cabin which they found for a few weeks, during which time the father was engaged in seeking a suitable location. Visiting this county, he purchased a "squatter's" claim to two hundred and forty aeres of land in what is now Winnebago Township and for which he paid $750.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Zaviah Jewell, who was born in Dudley, Worcester County, Mass., and was the daughter of Jesse Jewell. She reared a family of seven children, namely: Paulina, our subject, Gleason, Irena, Irvin, May A. and Byron W. She was a most worthy lady and departed this life at the home of her youngest son. He of whom we write was a lad of fifteen when he came to Illinois with his parents, and remembers well the incidents of the overland journey and the many incidents and inconveniences to which they were subjected in their new home. He hauled the first load of wheat to Chicago ever taken from Winnebago Township and was given thorough training in farm pursuits. The lady to whom he was married bore the maiden name of Rachael Wood, of New York. She was the daughter of Joshua Wood, who was born in Massachusetts, and after many years of happy married life, died June 8, 1874. The lady who became the second wife of Mr. Briggs was Mrs. Narcissa (Folsom) Moore. Our subject joined the Methodist Episcopal Church when eighteen years of age, and in politics votes with the Republican party.

USSELL W. MORGAN, whose sketch now elaims attention, is one of the representative farmers of Bonus Township, Boone County, and a gentleman highly respected alike for his business qualifications and upright character. He was born in Eric County, N. Y., October 5, 1842, and is the son of Erastus and Nancy (Spaulding) Morgan, for a further sketch of whom the reader is referred to the biography of Jacob Mabie, on another page in this volume.

Russell W. remained at home on the farm until reaching his majority, when he went to Oil Creek and worked out by the day or month for three years. Coming to this section in 1866, he purchased one hundred and ten acres of land to which he later added three hundred and ten acres and is now one of the solid and influential agriculturists of the county. He was married, in December, 1869, to Sarah A. Bogardus, who was born in Cortland County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Israel R. and Irene (Brown) Bogardus. To them have been born three children, namely: Fred B., who was born April 17, 1874, was educated in the Belvidere schools, and resides at home; Frank R. and Glenn, the former of whom was born in August, 1879, and the latter, June 30, 1882.

He whose name heads this sketch has always been a Republican in politics and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln for his second term as President. He has been honored with the offices of Road Commissioner and School Trustee, the duties of which he has filled in a creditable manner. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan are members in good standing of the Baptist Church, and in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. Morgan is an active worker.

Mr. Morgan is a self-made man in the true sense of that term and has now one of the finest farms in the county and devotes his attention to mixed agriculture. His wife's father, Israel Bogardus, was born in Cortland County, N. Y., and is still living, making his home with his children. He came to Boone Connty in 1848, in company with his wife and four children. His wife, who was also a native of the Empire State, died in this county when thirty-nine years of age.

RANK G. MORGAN is a wholesale dealer in flour, feed, pressed hay and all kinds of seeds at No. 502 West State Street. He has carried on business for himself since November 1, 1886, the last four years of that time being located at the above address. From the beginning his trade has constantly increased, and by his industry, perseverance and fair and honest dealing he has worked up an excellent business.

Mr. Morgan has the honor of being a native of Winnebago County, where his birth occurred January 24, 1857. His paternal grandfather, John Morgan, a native of Livingston County, N. Y., followed the trade of a wagon-maker throughout his life. He married a Connecticut lady, Miss Betsy Hazen. His death occurred in Livingston County, but his wife passed away in Rockton, III. J. George Morgan, father of our subject, was a native of Livingston County, N. Y., and there wedded Miss Mary Doolittle, who was born in Ontario County. Soon afterward he emigrated with his young wife to Illinois, locating in Winnebago County in 1855, and was engaged as a successful farmer until his death. He was also an extensive railroad contractor, both before and after coming to the West. His death occurred in Shirland, in 1872. Mr. Morgan belonged to the Methodist Church, and in politics was a Republican. His wife is still living in Rockford at the age of fifty-seven years, and is a member of the Baptist Church. This worthy couple were the parents of six children who are yet living, three being now married.

Our subject received the educational advantages afforded by the common schools and Rockford Business College, after which he engaged in teaching for some time. He was joined in wedlock in this city with Miss Carrie Case, who was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., April 19, 1857, and when quite young came with her mother to Illinois, Her father, Charles Case, died in Chautauqua County. His wife, whose maiden name was Sarah Fitch, is yet living in Shirland Township, and is now the wife of Sebastian Fickes, a farmer of that community.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Morgan have been born two children: Mae C., and Clara F. The parents are both members of the Court Street Methodist Church and are held in high esteem for their many excellencies of character. At local elections, Mr. Morgan votes with the Prohibition party and on questions of National importance supports the Republican party. He has made his home in Rockford since 1877, and the property which he now owns has all been acquired since that time. For eight years, he was in the employ of J. G. Chick, a flour and feed dealer, after which he began business on his own account and has since successfully carried on trade in that line. He ranks high in business circles and is regarded as one of the valued citizens of the community.

ILBERT F. SMITH, who is at present residing in the village of Pecatonica, was born in Geauga County, Ohio. April 8, 1827, and is the son of John P. and Maria (Ferriss) Smith. The father, who was born in Massachusetts, died in Ohio when seventy-seven years of age. He was a pioneer farmer in the Western Reserve, where his father located in an early day. The maternal uncle of our subject, Edwin J. Ferriss, was a prominent man in Ohio, making his home near Cleveland.

Gilbert F. Smith, of this sketch, remained under the parental roof until reaching his majority, when, in 1848, he came to Stephenson County, this State, and purchased land with a soldier's land warrant; the land cost him only seventy-five cents per acre. The lady to whom he was married, September 27, 1849, was born in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, and bore the maiden name of Helen M. Shaw. She was the daughter of Joseph Shaw, who was born in Manchester, England, on Easter Sunday, in 1793. He emigrated to America when about twenty-five years of age, and was employed as a workman in a cotton factory in Massachusetts until 1829, when he went to Ohio and engaged in a woolen-mill. Thence, in 1853, he came to Illinois and became a farmer in Stephenson County, where he was residing at the time of his decease in his seventy-first year.

He of whom we write was one of a family of nine children, five of whom are living. By his union with Miss Shaw were born the following children, viz.: Devoisan A., who was born in Ohio, October 25, 1851; Alice G., who was born in Stephenson County, this State, February 11, 1853, is married, and has one daughter; Herbert S., who is also a native of the above county, was born November 23, 1855, and makes his home in Texas; Ella M., likewise born in Stephenson County, as was also Flora R., who is engaged in teaching school in Pecatonica.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith are not connected with any religious denomination, but contribute of their means to the support of all. In politics, our subject is a Republican, casting his first vote for J. C. Freemont. He has been prominent in local affairs, and served for some years as an efficient member of the School Board.

J. HEDLUND, a successful and popular merchant tailor at Rockford, was born in the Province of Wester Gothland, Sweden, September 22, 1852. When he was cleven years old, he commenced to learn the trade of a tailor, at which he was employed prior to emigrating to this country. His parents, Andrew and Clara (Anderson) Hedlund, were born in Wester Gothland, Sweden, and belonged to good old families of that province. After the birth of seven children, the parents emigrated to America and proceeded to Rockford, whither they were followed by our subject in 1869. The father pursued various avocations until his death in 1885, at the age of sixtyone years. His wife still makes her home in Rockford, where she is highly respected, and a valued member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, to which her husband also belonged.

In a family of eight children, our subject was the eldest son, and was reared in the parental home. He was married to Miss Christina Johnson, who was born in Sweden February 9, 1850. In the spring of 1870, she emigrated to the United States and settled in Rockford, whither her parents and the other members of the family had removed the year before. She is the daughter of John and Anna (Larson) Swanson, who are now living on a farm in Jackson County, Minn., and are in prosperous circumstances. They are adherents of the Lutheran Church and are worthy people, esteemed by all who know them. Their family consists of four children, two sons and two daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. Hedlund are the parents of four living children, and have lost one by death. The surviving children are named: Julia, Arthur E., Ellen G., and Anna C. In politics, Mr. Hedlund is a Republican, and socially is an active member of the Ancient Order of Modern Woodmen. He is a stockholder in what was formerly known as the Merchant Tailor Stock Company, but is now operated under the title of Marsales & Holmin.

ENRY HARRISON CUSHMAN was born in Paris Township, Oxford County, Me., August 23, 1813. His parents, Caleb and Thankful (Spaulding) Cushman, were also natives of the Pine Tree State, and died at Paris, Oxford County, the father at the age of seventy-six, and the mother when eighty-three years old. Three children comprise the parental family, namely: Henry Harrison, of this sketch; Cynthia E., who married Charles F. Cummings; and Clementine A.

The paternal grandparents of our subject, Caleb and Sylvia (Sampson) Cushman, were born in Maine, and in that State spent their entire lives, engaged in agricultural pursuits, the grandfather passing hence at the advanced age of eighty-three and his wife when forty-five years old. There were several branches of the Cushman family, some of whom took an active part in the Revolutionary War, and were among the early settlers of Paris, Oxford County, Me. They traced their "title clear" to Robert, who came to Plymouth in the ship "Fortune" in 1621, but did not remain in this country, returning to England as agent for the Plymouth Colony, and dying while in that service. While in Plymouth, he preached the noted lay sermon on "The Sin and Danger of Self Love,"

The maternal grandfather of our subject, Benjamin Spaulding, married Miss Polly Carrot, November 29, 1764, and died October 14, 1811. His wife was born January 31, 1740, and died October 4, 1819. The children born of this marriage were as follows: Patty, born September 14, 1765, married Joseph Robinson; Rebecca, born November 10, 1766, married Benjamin Heald; Benjamin, born August 15, 1768; Leonard, born February 13, 1770, married Margaret Warren; Elizabeth, born January 18, 1772, became the wife of John Fletcher; Abel, born October 15, 1777, chose as his wife Phebe Prosten; Esther, born October 28, 1779, became the wife of Alexander Thayer; Stephen, born August 13, 1782, and Thankful, born August 16, 1787, married Caleb Cushman December 26, 1808. Caleb Cushman passed from earth February 7, 1863, and his wife departed this life June 14, 1870.

Our subject was the seventh generation from the famous Robert. He passed his youth in his native State, and at the age of twenty-four, in company with several young men from Paris, Me. (one of whom was Bambridge Dean, who settled in De Kalb County), decided to go West, and, bidding farewell to the New England States, home and friends, they journeyed toward the setting sun in 1837. The trip was made partly by water, and after landing at Ottawa, Ill., he purchased four yoke of oxen, two wagons and two cows, after which he pushed on to De Kalb County.

After searching for some time for a suitable location, Mr. Cushman finally purchased four hundred acres of productive land in De Kalb County, where he made his home until the fall of 1837. He then bought land of the Government, in Flora, Boone County, on which he erected a dwelling house, barns, and made other improvements. There he and his wife reared their family and made their home until the death of the wife, about fifty years after coming hither. He made many improvements on the place, and on looking over the well-cultivated fields and good buildings, one could scarcely realize that it was a wild, uncultivated tract of land destitute of buildings when he first settled on it. He still owns part of the old farm in De Kalb County.

A man of very generous impulses and strictest honor, Mr. Cushman is most esteemed by those who knew him best. Before stricken with disease, he possessed great physical vigor, strength and activity. The companion who cheerfully assisted him in the struggle for a livelihood, and who stood faithfully by his side in adversity and disappointments, was known in maidenhood as Sarah Bateman, and became his wife in Rockford, May 10, 1840. She was the daughter of Jonathan and Polly (Russell) Bateman, and was born in Yates, Niagara County, N. Y., December 1, 1818, her ancestors being of English birth.

The parents of Mrs. Cushman were natives of Vermont, the father born in 1762 and the mother twenty years later. Their marriage was blessed by the birth of seven children, namely: Stephen, who married Lydia Shaver; Lovina, Mrs. Michael Shaver; Joana, who married Samuel S. Gregory; Truman; Sarah, wife of Henry H. Cushman; and two children who died in infancy. Mr. Bateman was a merchant, and engaged in buying and selling horses. In 1815, the family removed from Vermont to New York, where the mother died at the age of forty-four and the father when sixty-seven years old, leaving their daughter Sarah an orphan at the age of eleven. Subsequently she came West with her sister, Mrs. Samuel Gregory, and settled in their pioneer home at Rockford in 1836, when she was eighteen. Many are the incidents she would afterward relate of their wild prairie home in the little log cabin, which at times accommodated as many as thirty persons, and was situated on what is now known as Woodruff's Addition to Rockford.

After her marriage, Mrs. Cushnian removed to Flora, Boone County, where she remained until her death, April 18, 1889. She was the mother of four children, namely: Edna C., born February 15, 1811, married Walter S, Lucas, of Flora, Boone County; Mariette, born November 22, 1845, married Quincy Jones, of Waverly, Iowa: Sarah Jane, whose birth occurred December 9, 1848, became the wife of Isaac N. Witt, of Spring Township, Boone County; and James, born in 1853, died in infancy. There was also an adopted daughter, Helen Clase, who was born December 5, 1858, and was married to Frank J. Anderson, of Herndon, Guthrie County, Iowa. The daughters were reared and educated in Boone County, and all reside in the vicinity of the old homestead.

been engaged in agricultural pursuits, is at the present time making a specialty of bee culture on his splendid farm on sections 5 and 8, Seward Township, Winnebago County. He is a native of Stockbridge, Berkshire County, Mass., his birth occurring June 17, 1811. His father, Solomon Whittlesey, was born April 30, 1786, in the above-named county, where also his father, Eliphalet, was born in 1772. The latter-named gentleman married Comfort Waller, by whom he had eleven children; he spent his last days in Massachusetts.

The first of the name of Whittlesey known to have come to America was John W., who crossed the oeean in 1650, and was engaged as a tanner at Saybrook, N. Y. The father of our subject came West to Ohio in 1817, and, locating in Lorain County, cleared a tract of land, upon which he resided until his decease, which occurred when eighty years of age. Edmund was one of the four children born to his mother, but his father, by a second marriage, became the parent of seven children.

He of whom we write resided at home until reaching his majority, and in 1835 came to Rockford, where he resided for a twelvemonth, and in October of the following year removed to Seward Township, where he was in the employ of his prospective father-in-law for two years. Later, he took up a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of Government land, and May 6, 1839, was married to Miss Susan Vance, who was a native of South Charlestown, Clark County, Ohio, her birth occurring February 17, 1820. Mrs. Whittlesey was the daughter of Joseph C. and Jane E. Vance, the former born November 13, 1780, in Kentucky, and the latter July 26, 1785, in the same State. Mr. Vance died in Winnebago County, September 11, 1841, while his good wife, who survived him a number of years, departed this life in Ohio, in April, 1882.

Mrs. Susan Whittlesey departed this life at her home March 26, 1885. The family is very prominent in public life, there being many professional men in the family. Our subject had a half-brother in the late war, and his father participated in the War of 1812. To Mr. and Mrs. Whittlesey have been born three children: Mary O., born July 29, 1845; Edmund V., November 5, 1859; and Joseph H., June 6, 1848. Our subject has five grandchildren: Susan E., Walter E., Olive, Derwenth and H. R. Crane. With his wife, he is a member of the Congregational Church, and in township affairs has been Justice of the Peace for a period of fortythree years. He has also held the office of Supervisor for twenty-one years, and of Assessor and Treasurer of the township for thirty-nine years.

RS. ELSEY WYMAN, who is at present residing on section 31, Manchester Township, Boone County, was born in Bennington, Vt., where also her father, William Potten, was born. Her mother, who bore the name of Cynthia Burgess, was a native of Hoosick, N. Y., and died in 1844, when sixty-one years of age. The father departed this life in 1826, when in his thirty-ninth year, leaving his widow with six sons and three daughters, of whom Mrs. Wyman and her brother Washington, who makes his home in South Haven, Mich., are the only survivors.

The original of this sketch came from New England to Manchester Township in 1851, making the journey to Chicago by water, and from that city walked to this county, this part of the journey consuming two days. She was married when seventeen years of age, in Bennington, Vt., and the journey to this county above described was made in company with her husband and four children. Mr. and Mrs. Wyman lirst located upon a rented farm, and two years later purchased eighty acres of land, for which they paid $7 per acre. After various removals they, in 1884, purchased the present estate upon which our subject is residing, and which includes a quarter-section of excellent land. The place is improved with all the necessary buildings and farm machinery, and is well cultivated by its owner.

Mr. Wyman departed this life in December, 1886, when in his seventy-fourth year. The four children who are deceased are: Orson, who at his death, in 1860, left a wife and three children, as did also Calvin, who died in 1876. Jeanette departed this life in 1849, when nine years of age, and George died in 1842, at the age of five years. Those living are Jane, Mrs. Sherwood Ellsworth, now living in Manchester, and Charles, a farmer in Iowa. Mrs. Wyman has ten grandehildren and twelve great-grandchildren. Her son Charles was a volunteer soldier in the late Civil War, enlisting from Rockford in 1861, and becoming a member of the Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry. He served faithfully and well during the entire struggle and participated in many important battles, among which was Gettysburg, where he had the index finger of his right hand shot off.

Miss Carrie Wyman, an adopted daughter of our subject, married Edwin Fallow, who assists Mrs. Wyman in conducting the farm.

HARLES A. LINDERMAN. The farm which Mr. Linderman now owns and conducts in such an enterprising and industrious manner embraces one hundred and thirty-two acres, forming one of the neat, comfortable homesteads of this township. The improvements on it are convenient and complete, and, no doubt, one reason of his success in this calling is the fact that from his earliest youth he has been familiar with the duties of farm labor. He was born in Erie County, N. Y., May 8, 1833, and his father, Henry Linderman, was also a native of the Empire State, born in Tompkins County in 1800. The grandfather of our subject, Cornelius L. Linderman, was born in Germany, March 29, 1756, and his parents were also natives of that country. Cornelius L. Linderman came to America at an early date and followed farming in Tompkins County, N. Y., where he was one of the pioneers. He married Miss Anna Young, and they became the parents of fifteen children, seven sons and eight daughters, of whom but one died young, fourteen becoming the heads of families. The mother of these children died in Erie County at a ripe old age and her husband, too, lived to be extremely old, dving when in the nineties.

The father of our subject, Henry Linderman, was the thirteenth in order of birth of the above mentioned children, and after reaching mature years, he selected as his companion in life Miss Diana Hamel, a native of New Jersey, of German deseent, and their nuptials were celebrated in Erie County, N. Y., about 1823. They commenced life on a farm there, but sold this when coming to Illinois, in November, 1843. Their children were all born in New York State and accompanied them to the Far West. They were six weeks in making the journey and had a very rough trip, encountering many storms and much cold, disagreeable weather, which made it very unpleasant for them, as they went with a team of horses. After reaching Illinois, they bought eighty acres of land from Mr. Linderman's brother, William, who had preceded him about six years, and as it was covered with a thick growth of timber our subject immediately set to work clearing it. In this he was assisted very much by his sons, who had become large enough to do considerable work. On this farm the father died February 26, 1876, when in his seventy-sixth year, leaving his widow and five children an estate of one hundred and forty acres in cultivation, all well stocked, and good buildings. The mother passed away on the 8th of March, 1881, when seventy-five years of age. Their children were named as follows: William, born March 1, 1824, a farmer in Iowa; Elizabeth A., born Deeember 11, 1826, married William L. Adams, a farmer in Iowa; Cornelia, born September 13, 1830, Mrs. Nelson Hill, is now a resident of Beloit, having retired from a fine farm in Manchester Township; Charles A. (our subject); Cornelins, born March 20, 1836, died in Manchester Township, when twenty-two or twenty-three years of age, and George W., born May 4, 1838, married, and resides in California. He purchased one thousand four hundred acres in the Sacramento Valley.

On the farm in Manchester Township our subject grew to manhood, and on the 28th of December, 1857, he was married to Miss Mary Jane Grout, daughter of Theodore and Ann (Little) Grout, the father born in Addison County, Vt., in 1799, and the mother in Cumberland County, England, January 15, 1813. In 1849, Mr. and Mrs. Grout came to Illinois from Ohio, where Mrs. Linderman was born in Perry, Lake County, October 13, 1839, settled in Winnebago County, and here the father died in June, 1874, when seventy-five years of age, leaving a wife and a son and daughter. The son, John D. Grout, was born at Saybrook, Ashtabula County, Ohio, January 9, 1843, and was a soldier in the Civil War, serving the entire time. He never received a wound, but his health was never so good afterward, on account of exposure, etc. He enlisted in Company II, Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, and came out an Orderly. The daughter is now Mrs. Linderman. The mother of these children is now seventy-nine years of age, and her mind is clear as of old and she enjoys comparatively good health.

Mr. and Mrs. Linderman settled on sixty acres soon after marriage and have since added to this until they now have one hundred and thirty-two acres of excellent land. They built a large and commodious barn, in 1873, 76x50 and 60x24 with basement, and in 1890, their fine large house was erected. Mr. Linderman is engaged in general farming, raising all the cereals, and is also engaged to some extent in raising horses, having at the present time about fifteen head of fine animals. His marriage resulted in the following children: Cornelius A., born July 9, 1860, married Miss Tina Wright, and is now an employe on the railroad at Beloit; Carrie I., born February 20, 1864, attended the Seminary at Rockford; Fred S., born

May 10, 1877, is at home on the farm, and Maggie Ann, born July 2, 1881, is a very bright, intelligent little girl. They have lost four children, a daughter, Cora D., died February 17, 1883, when not five years of age, and a son, H. Irving, dued on the 20th of February, 1883, when twenty-one years of age, both of scarlet fever. Two children died in infancy.

Our subject is a strong advocate of Republican principles, and belongs to the Masonic order of Beloit, Wis.

EYMOUR A. BLAKE. This gentleman who is one of the prominent farmers of Durand Township, Winnebago County, is also President of the Bank of Durand. He is one of the old and honored pioneers of this section, having been born in Georgia, Franklin County, Vt., March 12, 1832, and came to Winnebago County when fourteen years of age. His parents, John and Philura (Campbell) Blake, were also natives of New England, and in 1846 came to Illinois and located in Durand Township. There the father entered a tract of land, which he later traded for improved property, and pursued farming until his decease at three-score and ten years of age. His good wife died in her ninctieth year.

The ten children included in the parental family are John, Sarah Ann, Samuel, Philura, Stephen, William, Phidelia Abigail, our subject and Hester A. Seymonr A. was reared on the home farm and resided under the parental roof until his marriage. The lady to whom he was married in 1858 bore the name of Cordelia Hoyt, the daughter of Hiram Hoyt. She was born in Georgia, Vt., in 1832, and after her marriage located with her husband on the old homestead, which Mr. Blake carried on in the interest of his father. He later purchased the property and made it his home until 1886, when, in order to get nearer town and church, he sold out and purchased his present place, which adjoins the village of Durand. His estate includes two hundred and forty acres of land, all in one body, and is excellently improved with first-class and substantial buildings.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake have had no children of their own, but have performed the part of parents to several whom they have adopted. In his political belief, he is a Prohibitionist and an advocate of woman's rights. He formerly supported the Republican ticket. In religious affairs, he is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which denomination he was instrumental in organizing in this township, and for the past quarter of a century has been Sunday-school Superintendent, and at the present time is the incumbent of the positions of Trustee and Steward.

HARLES A. NORTON, cashier of the bank of Durand, is a man of unquestioned business ability, and in years is still on the sunny side of thirty, having been born May 2, 1863, in Durand. He acquired a good practical education in the common schools, which was later supplemented by attendance at the Rock River Seminary at Mt. Morris, this State. He is the son of Oscar Norton, one of the well-to-do merchants and progressive citizens of the village, and whose sketch will be found on another page in this volume.

When eight years old our subject bought a small box of jewelry and started out as a pedlar through the surrounding country, and, being successful in that kind of work, continued to be so employed for the next five years, when not in school. During the last two seasons, he had a team and wagon, and besides earrying jewelry had a stock of notions which he gave in exchange for rags, etc. He met with more than ordinary success in his undertaking, and thus early in life became well versed in business principles. He later began elerking for his father and in one corner of the store had a stock of his own, eonsisting of books and stationery. In 1884, he purchased the hardware business of Mr. Morey and combining the same with his books and stationery has since continued in the hardware trade, and has to-day a fine building, which is stocked with a complete line of shelf and heavy hardware.

In December, 1891, the Bank of Durand was organized with the following-named gentlemen as officers: Seymour A. Blake, President; Oscar Norton, Vice-president, and Charles A. Norton, Cashier. The bank has a capital of $10,000, and since its establishment our subject has acted in the capacity of Cashier and Manager. January 17, 1883, he was united in marriage to Alice L., daughter of Seymour A. and Cordelia (Hoyt) Blake, who was born in this county, January 28, 1863.

In politics, the original of this sketch votes with the Prohibition party. He has been the incumbent of various positions of trust, having held the offices of Township Clerk, Village Treasurer, and is the present School Treasurer and also Notary Public. He is a member of Durand Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and in religious matters in identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which denomination he is Steward, Secretary, a teacher in the Sunday-school and President of the Epworth League.

ILLIAM H. OILL, the owner of a finely-improved farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Cherry Valley Township, and one of the prominent citizens of Winnebago County, has resided upon the place which he still owns and occupies since 1855, having purchased the land the year prior to his removal hither. He was born twelve miles west of Niagara Falls, in the province of Ontario, August 2, 1820, and was reared to farming pursuits.

The paternal grandfather of our subject, Nicholas Oill, was born in Germany, and when a young man came to America, he and a brother being among the Hessian troops who were hired for service in the Revolutionary War. After the contest was over, he settled in Canada, where he died upon a farm in Ontario. John N. Oill, father of our subject, was a native of the above-named province, and there spent his entire life, dying upon the old homestead where the family had lived for years. A man of honor and enterprise, and a believer of reform in polities, his death at the age of sixty-four years was mourned by all who knew him.

The mother of our subject, Margaret (Johnson)

Oill, was born and reared near the old Oill homestead. Her father, James Johnson, was a native of Pennsylvania, and at an early day removed from that State to Canada, where he died when past the years allotted to man. Mrs. Margaret Oill was a good and kind woman, and lived to be more than eighty years old. She was the mother of five sons and three daughters, all of whom still survive.

In his native province, our subject was married to Miss Hester A. Snure. This lady is the grand-daughter of John Snure, who came to America from Germany prior to the Revolutionary War and improved a farm from the heavy timber in Ontario. He died of injuries received by being thrown from a horse. He was a member of the Dunkard Church, and a true Christian, known as a noble man and a hero in the battlefield of life.

The father of Mrs. Oill was John Snure, Jr., whose entire life was passed on the old Snure homestead, in the province of Ontario. His wife, whose maiden name was Lydia Clark, was born in New York, and survived her husband for some years, coming to Rockford after his demise, and spending her remaining days with Mrs. Oill, in Cherry Valley Township. She was an active member of the Christian Church, to which her husband also belonged, and died in that faith at the age of seventy-six years, in 1878. Mr. and Mrs. Oill have no children of their own, but have reared five children, all of whom are married. Mrs. Oill is a prominent member of the Christian Church at Rockford, and has been identified with that denomination since 1844. In his political affiliations, Mr. Oill is a Republican, and ardently devoted to the principles of the party.

AMUEL B. MEREDITH, who resides in the eity of Rockford, has made farming his life occupation and since 1852 has been one of the leading agriculturists of Winnebago County. As he is well and favorably known throughout this community, we feel assured that this sketch will prove of interest to many of our readers. He was born in Millerstown, Juniata County, Pa., on the 18th of June, 1819, and is a son of David Meredith, who was born in Laneaster County, Pa., and is of Weish descent. The father learned the trade of a blacksmith, and when a young man removed to Millerstown of his native State, where he followed that occupation for some years. He then purchased a farm in the Rock River Valley, four miles from Millerstown, and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, which he there carried on until 1852. In that year, he came to Illinois and spent his last days in the home of his son Thomas. His wife bore the maiden name of Jane Black and she spent her entire life in the Keystone State.

No event of special importance occurred during the ehildhood of our subject which was passed in Pennsylvania and under the parental roof. It was in 1852 that he decided to seek a home in the West, hoping to better his financial condition by so doing. He came at once to Illinois, locating at Rockford, which was then the Western terminus of the railroad. After a few weeks spent in the city, he purchased forty acres of land in the town of Byron, Ogle County, for which he paid $800. He sold it, however, about ten months later and purchased ninety in Winnebago Township, this county for $2,500. He made a number of improvements during the few years of his residence on that place, and then sold it, soon afterwards becoming owner of a one hundred and eighty-two acre farm in the same township, upon which he made his home until 1865, when he came to Rockford Township and bought his present home, although he did not sell his farm in Winnebago Township until a few years later. He also bought a farm in Leaf River Township, which is still in his possession.

Mr. Meredith has been twice married. In the Keystone State; at the age of twenty-three, he was joined in wedlock with Margaret Donley, who was born in Pennsylvania and died on January 6, 1865. In 1867, he led to the marriage altar Mrs. Mary Johnson, nee Harmon, a native of Suffield, Conn. born on the 3d of June. 1818. Her father, Jehiel Harmon, was also born in Connecticut and there resided until 1845, when he, accompanied by his family, came to Illinois. They started with a team and drove to Westfield, Mass., whence they went by railroad to Albany and by the Eric Canal to Buffalo, where they took a Lake steamer for Chicago. The journey from there to Winnebago County was completed by wagons, and in Winnebago Township Mr. Harmon joined his son Simeon, one of the early settlers of the county. His death occurred here the following year. His wife survived him some time and departed this life in Centreville.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Meredith has been born one daughter, Nancy, now the widow of Henry Roberts of Winnebago Township. She has four children: Jessie, Blanche, Samuel and Ethel. The family is one favorably known throughout this community where they have so long resided and the Meredith household is the abode of hospitality. Our subject has led a busy and useful life, and his industry has met with a well-deserved reward in the shape of a good competence. Mr. Meredith affiliates with the Democratic party.

S. CHARN, stockholder, Director and custom cutter of the Globe Clothing Manufacturing Company, of Rockford, one of the most valuable and profitable enterprises of the city, was one of the promoters of the business and is noted for his ability, both technical and practical. He has been the custom cutter since the organization of the business in 1890, and is proficient and skillful in his work. This company has prospered in every way since starting, employs thirty to forty men, has five commercial men on the road all the time, and now stands on a solid foundation.

In Sweden, his native country, where his birth occurred in Wester Gothland Province, March 7, 1854, Mr. Charn received a good practical education and was married to Miss Sophia Anderson, who is also a native of that province. After the birth of two children, or in 1880, he brought his family to the States and settled in Rockford, where he subsequently learned his trade. Since their residence here four more children have blessed their union: Simon A. works in the Union Furniture Factory, of Rockford, as carver; Mary E., Esther

D., Hannah L., Huldah V. and Victor E., all at home. After learning his trade, Mr. Charn carried on a successful business on his own account until the present company was organized. When he brought his family to this country, his brother Benjamin came with him and settled in Rockford. The latter married Miss Jennie Landen, of Jonkoping, Sweden, who came to this country at the same time.

The father of our subject, A. J. Kjern, came to this country a year after his sons and has since been a resident of Rockford. He is engaged as tailor in the factory above mentioned but was formerly with the old and well-known firm of Johnson & Wanstron. His first wife, and the mother of our subject, died in the spring of 1891, when seventy-nine years of age, and he has since taken a second wife.

Mrs. Charn's parents died in Sweden; since her residence in Rockford she has been joined by two brothers, Gus and Samuel Floberg, the latter now a farmer of Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Charn are domiciled at No. 1702 Seventh Street, corner of Sixteenth Avenue, and are surrounded by all the comforts of life. Both are members of the Lutheran Mission Church, and he leans towards the Prohibition party in his political preference.

AJ. GEORGE S. ROPER, of Rockford, was born in Worcester County, Mass., January 28, 1832. When seven years old, he accompanied his parents. Joseph and Maria L. (Mendell) Roper, to Western Pennsylvania, where he received his education in the common schools. In 1848, he attended a select school taught by George Clark, and at the age of eighteen commenced to teach, being thus engaged for two years, and later clerking in a store for two years. While residing in Westmoreland County, Pa., he was married to Miss Louisa B. George, who was there born and reared.

In 1854, accompanied by his family, our subject came to Illinois and settled in Springfield, where for one year he clerked in a dry-goods store and for the same period was book-keeper for S. M. Tinsley. Afterward, he formed a business connection with Edward R. Ulrick & Co., lumber dealers, and later was admitted to the firm, his headquarters being at Alton, where the business was carried on under the firm name of Ulrick & Roper. In 1859, he returned to Springfield and commenced in business as a boot and shoe dealer. In the following year, he organized the first Republican Glee Club, which sang the first glee songs in that part of the State.

At the commencement of the Civil War, our subject entered the Commissary Department under Col. John Williams, and when the Government relieved that gentleman, he was assigned to a place in the Quartermaster's Department under Gen. Wood. At the time Gen. Grant took command of the Twenty-first Illinois Infantry, our subject accompanied him to the old Fair Grounds at Springfield, and thereafter enjoyed the friendship of the hero of Vicksburg. By special request of Gen. Grant, our subject was given a position in the Commissary Department with the rank of Captain, and was ordered to join Gen. W. T. Sherman at Louisville, Ky. Thence he was sent to the staff department of Gen. George 11. Thomas, where he continued until after the battle of Stone River.

Immediately following the battle of Mill Spring, Ky., our subject was promoted to Major and received a commendation from Gen. Thomas which was decidedly complimentary, for while the great General gave all the officers and men special credit for doing their duty he said: "If one was entitled to credit more than another for the success of the Northern troops, it was Capt. Roper." The newly-appointed Major continued on the staff of Gen. Thomas until he became connected with the First Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps, under the command of Gen. Spry, of Kentucky.

In the re-organization of the army after the battle of Chickamauga considerable change was made, and the Third Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps opened the charge, it being the duty of Maj. Roper to arrange the positions. November 24, 1863, he was sent to Nashville to inspect the horses, and was afterward appointed overseer and inspector of the military railroads of the Northwest. May 24, 1864, he was appointed on the staff of Gen. McCullom, with headquarters at Washington, and remained in that capacity until February 6, 1866, when he was mustered out with the rank of Colonel.

His military duties ended, Maj. Roper located in St. Louis, whence he soon removed to Alton in 1867, and for twenty years made that city his home, engaging in the insurance and real-estate business. His first wife died in Springfield, leaving three sons, viz: Mahon F., who died, leaving a wife and two children; George P., who married Kate Butterworth and resides in Rockford, where he is manager of the Van Wie Gas Stove Company; and Edward N., who married Miss Martha J. Robin, of Chicago, and is now manager of the Central Map, Survey & Inspection Company, of Chicago. The second wife of the Major, whose maiden name was Almira S. Bangs, and who was formerly principal of the schools of Springfield, died in Alton five months after marriage. The present wife of our subject was formerly Miss Roxy G. Conklin, of Jackson County, Mich., and is a leader in the social circles of Rockford, being especially prominent in the Woman's Relief Corps. Religiously, she is identified with the Christian Union Church as one of its devoted members. The only child born of this union, Charles S., died when five months old.

Maj. Roper is President of the Van Wie Gas Stove Company, of Rockford, which was organized in 1890, and is numbered among the most flourishing enterprises of the city. For more than ten years he has been Secretary of the Manufacturers' and Merchants' Mutual Insurance Company, which was organized February 11, 1881, by James Ferguson, and does an extensive business in this part of Illinois. Socially, Maj. Roper is a Master Mason, a Knight Templar, belonging to Rockford Crusader Commandery No. 17, the Supreme Council, Freeport Consistory and Medina Temple, of Chicago. He is also identified with the Illinois Commandery of Loyal Legions and has been present at many of the National Assemblies. As might be expected, he is a prominent worker in the G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., at Rockford. He holds membership in the Christian Union Church and is active in aiding religious causes.

A stanch supporter of the Republican party, Maj. Roper has for years been closely connected with local and State politics, and is a member of the State Central Committee, and was Chairman of the County Committee during the last Presidential campaign, that of 1888. For more than twenty-five years he has not been absent from any of the State Conventions, excepting those held while he was in the service of his country, and he has also frequently attended National Conventions. A man of great vigor of thought and firmness of purpose, he has at all times the courage of his convictions and is ready to defend to the last the principles of justice and right.

OHN BOYD. This well-known citizen of Rockford passed away January 26, 1892. He was a pioneer of the city, having come hither in 1843, and for a time clerked for Mr. Marsh. He then left the city, but returned in 1848, and entered the employ of Mr. Horseman, a dry-goods dealer. In 1856, he resigned that position, and in September of that year embarked in business for himself as a merchant, under the firm name of Boyd & Baxter.

Some six years later, Mr. Boyd commenced to travel for a lamp supply company of Chicago, in which position he remained for more than twenty years, enjoying the unlimited confidence of his house and becoming well known throughout a wide scope of country. On account of ill health, he resigned his position in 1888 and retired from active business. He was intimately associated with Rockford and its people and not only maintained a deep interest in the development of the city, but contributed untiringly to the promotion of its welfare.

Mr. Boyd was born in Chatham, Columbia County, N. Y., September 16.1828, and was reared in his native place, receiving his education there and in Catskill and Eric Counties. He was the son of George Boyd, a native of Belfast, Ireland, who in turn was the son of Thomas Boyd, whose death occurred near Belfast, Ireland, when he was quite old. By occupation, he was a farmer, and was descended from Scotch-Irish ancestry. His wife was of a similar lineage and was the daughter of an officer in the British navy, who served during the Revolutionary War and was at Charleston, Mass., when the tea was thrown overboard into the Boston Harbor by the Colonists.

In the Emerald Isle, George Boyd grew to a vigorous manhood and became familiar with farming pursuits. In his native county he was married to Miss Sarah Russell, an intelligent lady and a native of the North of Ireland, her ancestors having been prominent citizens of Belfast. After the birth of their first child Thomas (now deceased). George and Sarah Boyd emigrated to the United States in the early '30s and settled in Columbia County, N. Y., where the father followed his trade of a saddler. After living in New York State for some years, they came in 1846 to Rockford, where Mrs. Boyd died July 5, 1852, at the age of fifty-six years. Her husband survived until the fall of 1860, when he departed this life at the age of seventy years. After the death of his first wife, he was again married to a Rockford lady who is now deceased.

In his religious convictions, Mr. Boyd was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, politically, adhered to the principles of the Democratic party. Only two of his children are now living: Col. Wesley, of Kokomo, Colo., and Mrs. John A. Davis, of Chicago. Col. Wesley Boyd served throughout the Rebellion and at its close was honorably discharged as Colonel of the Fiftysecond Illinois Infantry. A brother-in-law of our subject, Maj. Samuel Pearson, of Chicago, also served throughout the Civil War as a member of an Iowa regiment.

In Fredonia, N. Y., October 3, 1851, the marriage of John Boyd and Miss Elizabeth A. Moore took place. Mrs. Boyd was born in Monroe County, N. Y., November 14, 1831, and received an academic education in Fredonia. Her parents, Josiah and Elizabeth (Roots) Moore, were natives respectively of Fabius and Hamilton, N. Y., and were married in the former village. Mr. Moore followed the occupation of a farmer until his death, which occurred in Fredonia in 1860, at the age of sixty-three years. In his political belief, he was a Whig, and religiously, was identified with the Eaptist Church. After his death, his widow came to Wiscousin, where she died at the age of four-score years. She was an active member of the Baptist Church and the daughter of Rev. P. P. Roots, a prominent Baptist minister and an evangelist of fame. He was born in 1765, and died in New York State, September 26, 1828. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Keep, died some years afterward at the age of eighty-four years.

The grandfather of Mrs. Boyd, Josiah Moore, Sr., was born in Connecticut in 1765, and married Miss Abigail Dewey, their union being solemnized at Harrington, Conn. They became early settlers of Fabius, Onondaga County, N. Y., and their son. Josiah, Jr., was the first white child born there. Mrs. Boyd is the fourth among six children, all of whom survive but the eldest son. She is a lady of prominence in Rockford, takes an active interest in all charitable measures, and is highly esteemed in social circles. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd became the parents of four children, only one of whom is living. Mary E., Eva J., and Addie died when small. John M. is a commercial traveler for the Rockford Watch Company, with headquarters in this city. He married Julia R. Berg, whose former home was in Grand Rapids, Mich. Mrs. Boyd sympathizes with the progressive views of the Rev. Dr. Kerr, and is identified with his church, the Christian Union, at Rockford.

OHN BROWN takes a leading part in the agricultural interests of Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, where he has a good estate on section 12. He was born in Ohio, October 11, 1832, and is the son of Jacob and Mary (Keith) Brown, natives respectively of New Jersey and Ohio. His maternal grandparents, Peter and Maria Keith, were born in Germany, and, on coming to the United States, died in this township when very old.

He of whom we write was two years of age when his parents came to Illinois, the journey being made overland to Ogle County, where they resided for one year, and then took up their abode in Winnebago County, where the father died in the spring of 1868, and the mother three years later. Our subject was one in a large family of children and received his education in the schools of that early day. When ready to establish a home of his own, he was married to Miss Ilannah M., daughter of William P. and Sarah (Fowler) Packard, natives of New York, who came to Illinois when she was eleven years of age. Locating in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, in the spring of 1847, Mr. and Mrs. Packard here made their home until their decease, the father dying in May, 1891. The mother, who preceded him to the better land by a number of years, left at her death nine children.

To our subject and his wife have been born twelve children, all of whom are living with the exception of Clifford S., who died in 1878, when two and one-half years old. Mr. Brown when starting out in life for himself purchased a quartersection of prairie land in Boone County, which he later sold, and, in 1867, purchased his present estate of nine hundred and twenty-two acres, for which he paid $40 per acre. With the exception of one hundred acres in timber, this vast amount of property is under good cultivation, and with its handsome farm residence and comfortable outbuildings, is one of the finest in the county. Mr. Brown gives the greater part of his attention to stock-raising, and from the year 1878 to 1888. in partnership with B. S. Sanborn, made large shipments to the city markets. He is now, however, conducting his affairs alone, and raises and feeds annually about one hundred head ofcattle, two hundred head of hogs, and keeps constantly on his place from twenty-five to forty of the finest horses. He has the distinction of shipping the first load of cattle from Cherry Valley Station in the fall of 1853, which sold in Chicago markets for two and one-half cents per pound. He cuts about one hundred and fifty tons of hay from his place, and has large crops of cereals.

The subject of this sketch, in the spring of 1850, went across the plains to California, the journey consuming five months and eight days. After remaining there for two years with fair success, he returned home, and has since been identified with the interests of Winnebago County, being one of its most prominent and wealthy farmers. In politics, he votes independently, reserving his right to vote for the man who, in his judgment, will best fill the office.

OSEPH GARDNER. This gentleman represents one of the oldest living pioneers in Winnebago County, having come to this region as early as 1838. The long years which he has spent here have given him an extended acquaintance throughout the county, where he is well known as one whose years have been spent in industry and good citizenship.

Born across the water, in Warwickshire, England, our subject is the son of John P. Gardner, a native of that shire, as was also his father, John P., Sr. The grandfather was a farmer and spent his entire life in his native place. John P. Gardner, Jr., learned the trade of a baker, which he followed in the village of Ox Hill, Warwickshire, and there departed his life. The maiden name of his wife was Charlotte Roddis; she was a native of England, where her death occurred in the village of Ratley.

The original of this sketch and his brother William were the only members of the family to come to America. The brother located near Hot Springs, Ark., where he resided till his death. Joseph learned the trade of a tailor in Newbold, Worcestershire, at which he served an apprenticeship of three and one-half years. In 1834, he set sail from Liverpool on the vessel "Inez" and landed in New York after a voyage of six weeks. He was engaged as a "jour" in Rome, N. Y., for a time, then going to Rochester was similarly engaged for a year. In 1837, our subject went to Michigan and was one of the early settlers in Schoolcraft, Kalamazoo County, where he began business at his trade. In the fall of the following year, however, accompanied by Horatio Blakeman, he came to Illinois, Mr. Blakeman owning the horse which conveyed them hither, and our subject the wagon. He located in Rockton, Winnebago County, and a couple of months after coming down to Rockford, was engaged as a journeyman tailor for some time and later established in business for himself, having one of the first shops of that kind in the place. A few years later, he retired from active work.

The lady to whom our subject was married was Mrs. Catherine Weyl, nee Courtwright. She was a native of Pennsylvania and departed this life in Rockford. Mr. Gardner was again married in this city, this time to Mary A. (Riches) Smith, a native of Friesenfield, England, and the daughter of James and Mary (Upcraft) Riches and widow of George Smith, to whom she was married in England, coming to America in 1853. Locating in New Jersey first, Mrs. Gardner afterward came to Winnebago County, and made her home in New Milford, where her husband died November 23, 1865. By that union she became the mother of two children, who died in infancy; by the former union of Mr. Gardner he was the father of one son, Henry, who died when a young man of twentythree years.

ETER J. HOLMQUIST. Now living in retirement at his pleasant home at No. 409 Cattin Street, Rockford, this gentleman is surrounded by the comforts which he accumulated by the exertions of former years. Since 1868, when he located in this city, he has been recognized as one of its most prominent Swedish citizens, and has a wide acquaintance throughout this section of country. After coming hither, he entered the employ of N. G. Thompson, and for seventeen years was engaged in the painting department. Since severing his connection with the manufactory, he has not engaged in active work.

In Sweden, where he was born March 6, 1833, Mr. Holmquist was reared and married. Accompanied by his wife and their three children, he emigrated to America, embarking on a ship at Gottenburg and landing in Quebec, Canada. Thence he proceeded to Rockford, where he arrived June 3, 1868. Since coming here, he has been joined by two brothers: John, who resides on Kishwaukee Street, and Gust, whose home is also in Rockford. The parents, John and Carrie (Johnson) Larson, spent their entire lives in Sweden, where a sister of our subject, Mrs. Andrew Swenson, is yet living.

The lady who became the wife of our subject was born in Sweden, July 27, 1827, the daughter of John and Carrie (Larson) Peterson. Her father, who was a farmer, died when forty-four years old, and the mother at the age of sixty-seven years. Mr. and Mrs. Holmquist had three children, only one of whom survives, Minnie, the wife of John A. Stenvall, and the mother of five children. The deceased are Gust, who died in Rockford, July 6, 1887, aged twenty-seven years and seven months, leaving a wife (now deceased) and a son Frank; and John P., whose death occurred May 31, 1881, aged twenty years and seven months.

EXTER A. K. ANDRUS. The book and stationery store located at No. 107 North Court Street, Rockford, is one of the successful business houses of the city, and was established by Mr. Andrus in June, 1884. Prior to its inception, he had been engaged for three years as editor of the Daily News, but owing to his sickness during a portion of the time, he lost heavily on account of the bad management of the business. For a few years, he also published a monthly periodical called Our Home and became quite well known in literary circles.

The father of our subject, Isaac Andrus, was born in Vermont in 1796, and when five years old, was orphaned by the death of his father, Isaac Andrus, Sr. He grew to manhood in New York and enlisted in the War of 1812, serving until its close as a member of the New York Regiment, which fought the British bravely at Lundy's Lane. After the close of the war, he was married to Miss Sophronia Knowlton, who was born and reared in Chautauqua County, N. Y. In 1842, he removed to Illinois and settled in the then little hamlet of Rockford, where he established a general store in connection with his son-in-law, William Van Arman. In 1857, the partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Andrus afterward embarked in the boot and shoe business, in which he was engaged for some years, until he retired from active labors. He was an Alderman, and took an active part in local politics. For a time, he was a member of the Baptist Church, but upon the organization of the Christian Union Church he became identified therewith, as did also his wife.

Our subject was reared to manhood in Rockford, where he was married to Miss Carrie E. Hazelteen, who was born in Luzerne County, Pa., and died three years after her marriage. The second union of Mr. Andrus united him with Mrs. Annette (Savage) Downes, an accomplished lady, who was born and reared in the East. They are the parents of two children, Dexter E. and Annette S. In politics, Mr. Andrus is independent. During the late war, he enlisted in response to the call for one-hundred day volunteers. Socially, he belongs to the Order of Red Men, of which he is Past Great Sachem; he is also identified with the Order of Chosen Friends, the Knights of Honor and the Modern Woodmen of America.

LVIN A. WELLS. It gives us pleasure to include in this volume a biographical notice of one whose life has been spent in the quiet performance of duty, and who, without filling any prominent position in public affairs, has gained the esteem and confidence of his neighbors and friends. Mr. Wells is a native of this county, and is the possessor of a comfortable, neat and pleasant home on section 3, Seward Township.

The original of this sketch was born October 15, 1844, and is the brother of John R. Wells, a prominent agriculturist of this county, whose sketch will be found on another page of this work. He is a son of Reuben and Jane Wells, the former of whom was born in Middleboro, Vt., in 1775, and in 1841, desiring to try his fortunes in the Western country, came to Illinois with his wife and eight children. The mother of our subject was known in her maidenhood as Jane Roberts, the daughter of Abram Roberts, who died at her home, after having attained the age of eighty-one years.

On August 30, 1864, Alvin A. Wells enlisted in the late war by joining Company C, One Hundred and Forty-sixth Illinois Infantry. He served his country faithfully and well for nearly a year, and on receiving his honorable discharge, July 8, 1865, returned home and engaged in the peaceful pursuits of agriculture. The lady who became his wife March 12, 1868, was known as Miss Alice Holcomb, the daughter of Hiram and Mary Holcomb. She was a native of Winnebago County, and departed this life June 27, 1870.

October 6, 1884, Mr. Wells and Miss Sarah E. Branan, who was born January 8, 1854, in this county, were united in marriage. The lady is the daughter of George and Paulina Brannon, who came from Ohio to this county in 1842. The father was born May 29, 1817, and departed this life October 26, 1891, in this county. His wife, whose maiden name was Paulina Gates, was born April 18, 1823, and is still living. He of whom we write is a Republican in politics, and is a prominent member of Ellis Post No. 320, G. A. R., at Pecatonica. Mr. and Mrs Wells are the parents of one child, a daughter, whom they have named Alice.

C. GARVER. The firm of Garver & Fisher, attorneys-at-law at Rockford, was established in 1890, and the members are already recognized as among the most extensive and successful practitioners of Winnebago County. Mr. Garver was admitted to the Bar in 1871, and five years afterward was elected to the office of State's Attorney, holding the position for eight years. He was well qualified to discharge the duties of the office with tact and ability, as he possessed unusual legal erudition and had the advantage of carrying on his studies with Gen. Keifer, of Springfield, Ohio.

Born in Winnebago County, Mr. Garver was here reared and educated, his home being with his father until he attained manhood. He then established a home of his own, and now, with his wife and the five children that have been born to them, occupies a warm place in the regard of the people of Rockford. Politically, he is a Republican, and is interested in all public enterprises which he believes calculated to promote the progress of the community.

REDERICK LUND. Our sketch of the different enterprises of Rockford would be manifestly incomplete without some brief notice of one of its most prominent jewelers. We refer to the emporium of Frederick Lund, of No. 311 East State Street, which has been in operation for a number of years, and to-day one of the most important houses of the kind on State Street, in point of value of its stock and its varied and comprehensive character. Mr. Lund is one of the representative business men of the city and now resides in his handsome residence at No. 306 South Fourth Street. He owns valuable property in the eity, is a stockholder and Director in the Union Grocery Company, and is prominently identified with the business interests of Rockford,

Mr. Lund's native country is Norway and he was born on the 31st of May, 1830. As he grew to manhood, he learned the jewelry trade, and for some time was engaged in business in Tromsoe, Norway. Thinking that broader fields were open for him in America, he left the land of his birth and sailed for this country, landing first in Quebec, Canada. Four months later, he came to Rockford, and has been a resident of this city for the past quarter of a century. He worked for two years and a half as jeweler for a State Street firm and then began on his own account. Although the first of his family to come to the States, he has since been joined by two sisters, both now residents of Chicago. They are Mrs. Anna Olson, a widow, and Mrs. Oveda Oberg. The father, Ole Lund, was a merchant tailor of Norway, and died in that country in middle age. The mother, whose maiden name was Magdalene Boyson, received her final summons in Norway in 1886, when eighty-two years of age.

When about thirty years of age, our subject was married in his native country to Miss Hannah Bohmer, whose birth occurred in Tromsoe, Norway, in June, 1843, and who after coming to this country was followed by her father and mother, her brother coming two years before. The mother died in Chicago in 1890, when sixty-six years of age. The father, Fred Bohmer, is a shoe-maker and dealer in Chicago, and is sixty-eight years of age. Mrs. Lund's brother, Olof Hanson, is foreman for the well-known jewelry merchant. Spaulding, of Chicago.

Mr. Lund's marriage has resulted in the birth of nine children, two of whom died when young. Those living are Mary, wife of Martin Christopherson, who resides in Rockford and her husband works in the Rockford Desk and Furniture Company, of which he is a stockholder and Director. Fred, Jr., was engaged in the office of the Waltham Watch Company, Chicago, and is now in the jewelry business at Missoula, Mont.; Henry, book-keeper with Holland, Ferguson & Co., abstractors; Clarence clerks in his father's store and Leila is at home.

In politics, Mr. Lund is a strong advocate of the Prohibition principles and is not at all averse to speaking his sentiments. He is a member of different local social orders, and he and Mrs. Lund are active members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church. For many years, Mr. Lund has been the Swedish Cemetery Committeeman.

OHN A. R. JOHNSON. Among the well-known Swedish citizens of Rockford is this gentleman, who for some time was a farmer in New Milford Township, but since 1891 has resided in this city. He was born in Smoland, Sweden, December 17, 1835, and is the only member of the parental family who has ever emigrated to America. He took passage at Gottenburg, July 10, 1854, on a three-mast schooner, which landed him at Quebec, Canada, after a voyage of thirteen weeks and four days. The trip was uneventful and tedious, and our subject was not sorry when the ship dropped anchor at Quebec.

From that city Mr. Johnson came to St. Charles,

Ill., and there resided until he came to Rockford in 1857, meanwhile following his trade of wagonmaker. After coming to this city, he was married to Miss Clara Anderson, who was born in Wester Gothland, June 3, 1840, the daughter of John and Mary Anderson, natives of Sweden. After all their children were born, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson emigrated to the United States, taking passage at Gottenburg, in 1852, on a two-mast sailer, landing in New York City after a monotonous voyage of seven weeks. The family came as far West as Buffalo, where they resided two years, coming from that city to Pecatonica, where they remained for a time in the village, and afterward bought land in the township of the same name. The father died in October, 1882, when more than three-score years old. His wife, who is now eighty, makes her home in Pecatonica.

Mrs. Johnson is the second of three children, the eldest of whom, Charlotte, is the wife of P. G. Hollen, of Rockford. The youngest, John, is a farmer in Pecatonica. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are the parents of four children, two of whom are deceased. Ida R. died when an accomplished young lady of twenty years, and Hattie C. passed away when thirteen years old. Fred G., an intelligent and popular young gentleman, is connected with the Rockford Burial Case Company. Elmer R. is at home. For thirty-five years Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have been members of the First Lutheran Church, in which the former served as Trustee for eight years, and as organist for fifteen years. In his political belief, he is a strong Republican.

At present. Mr. Johnson is engaged at his trade of wagon-maker, in the Peter Sames Wagon and Buggy Factory. He was one of the promoters of, and is now a stockholder in, the Skandia Plow Company, having served for some years as Vice-president and Treasurer. After his removal hither in 1857, he worked at his trade for some time, then removed to his farm in New Milford Township, and there remained engaged in cultivating its eighty acres until he again came to Rockford, in the spring of 1891. Although of foreign birth, he loved the country of his adopton, and during the Civil War enlisted in Company II, First Illinois Infantry. With his regiment, he participated in a number of engagements, including Shiloh, and other battles of less importance. After serving about one year, he was taken ill, and confined to the field hospital for two months, after which he was honorably discharged on account of disability.

AMUEL I. CHURCH, who departed this life in 1886 in Rockford, was born in Monroe County, N. Y., June 11, 1815. His parents were Lazarus and Catherine (Brockway) Church, for a further sketch of whom the reader is referred to the biography of the Hon. S. M. Church. Prior to coming to Illinois, which he did in 1848, our subject was married to Miss Silence Richmond, who was born in Camillus, Onondaga County, N. Y. Her father, Sylvester Richmond, was a native of Herkimer County, that State, and removed about 1856 to Ripon, Fond du Lac County, Wis. He spent his last years at the home of a daughter, passing away September 7, 1886, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years. He married Electa Bell, who was born in Chester, Mass. Her father, Aaron Bell, removed from the Bay State to New York in 1810, where he was one of the pioneers in the town of Camillus, and died in 1845. The grandmother of Mrs. Church was prior to her marriage Miss Abby Eggleston, of Chester, Mass.

The wife of our subject resided with her parents until her marriage, and in 1848 accompanied him on his removal to Illinois, the journey being made by way of the Lakes to Chicago and by teams to Rockford. There was no Government land for a radius of ten miles around Rockford, but the school section near by being vacant, when it came into market Mr. Church secured a quarter-section and engaged in farming. He made his home for many years in the city but later removed to the farm. where his decease occurred in 1886. The place is embellished with good farm buildings, the most noticeable among which is the commodious frame house, which contains all the conveniences of the modern style of building. Mrs. Church still resides upon the old place.

The five children born to our subject and his wife are Alice Emmagene, Sylvester Richmond, Samuel I., William Arthur, and Theodore Bell. Alice E. married A. E. Paul, of Chicago, in which eity Sylvester R. makes his home. The youngest son, who was born January 5, 1855, was a student in Rush Medical College and would have graduated with the Class of '81, but his ambition was cut short by his death in September, 1880. Samuel 1. and William A. died in infancy. Our subject in early life was a Whig, but has voted the Republican ticket since the formation of that party, and in publie life served his fellow-townsmen as Sheriff of the county for two years. The daughter, A. Emmagene, is a graduate of the Ontario Female Seminary, of Canandaigua, N. Y.; Sylvester R. is a graduate of the National Business College, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

AHLON PIPER, whose very productive farm is located on section 13, Le Roy Township, Boone County, where he has resided for the past eighteen years, was born September 12, 1839, where Rockford now stands. His father, Daniel Piper, was a native of Ohio, from which State he emigrated to La Salle County, Ill., and located on what is the present site of Ottawa. The trip was made overland in 1827, at which time he was accompanied by his young bride, who was born in 1810, near Richmond, Va., and bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Jones.

The father of our subject, on locating in this State, made claim to a tract of land on the bottoms of Willow Creek, and for a number of years was engaged in buying and selling claims in La Salle, Boone and Winnebago Counties. Mr. and Mrs. Piper came to Rockford about 1835, and located where our subject was born. During their residence there "Long John" Wentworth was a boarder in the family, and was a firm friend of Daniel Piper. The father was engaged for some time in hauling goods from Chicago to Galena, and in 1844 located on his claim, which consisted of one-half section, where he was residing at the time of his decease.

Eight of the ten ehildren born to the parents of our subject are still living, namely: Sarah, Mrs. Mallory, of Iowa; Eleazer, a retired farmer at Capron: Mahlon, our subject: Elizabeth, Mrs. Charles Burton; Amanda, Mrs. Ward; Ellen, Mrs. David Groesbeek; Harriet, Mrs. Andrew Anderson, and Benton. He of whom we write enlisted, August 18, 1862, in Company C, Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry. His father, who was then sixtytwo years of age, was mustered into Company E, of the same regiment, and served his country for six months. He was then sent to Overton Hospital at Memphis. Tenn., and later, reaching home, died within four days, in his sixty-third year. His widow is still surviving and makes her home in McHenry County, being in her eighty-second year.

Our subject served two years and eight months, and obtained a leave of absence to return home and vote for Lincoln during his second term, in 1864. He was never wounded, but was confined in the hospital for a short time with sore eyes. He was an active participant in many engagements, among them the siege of Vicksburg, which lasted more than forty days; the Red River expedition, at which time the regiment marched out on thirty days' rations and was absent ninety days; also the Guntown raid, and numerous battles of minor importance.

Returning home March 20, 1865, our subject was married, in June of the following year, to Mahala Burton, of McHenry County. She is the daughter of Billings and Harriet (Sweazey) Burton, natives of New York State. Three children have been born to our subject, of whom the eldest child, Minnie, died in her third year; Clara, who was born in 1871, is the wife of Conrad Englehardt, a farmer in this vicinity; and Fred, who was born June 17, 1882, is at home with his parents.

In 1866, our subject purchased twenty acres of the old home farm, to which he added thirty-three more, and there made his home for three years. Then, in company with three other gentlemen, he proceeded overland with teams to 10wa and Nebraska. Returning to Illinois in 1871, he purchased his present farm of forty acres, for which he paid $1,200. He has resided here since, with the exception of two years spent on his father-inlaw's farm. He has filled many positions of trust in the township, for eleven years was Highway Commissioner, and in politics easts a straight Republican vote.

Mr. Piper is an extensive apiarist, having about one hundred swarms of bees, in the raising of which he has been successful in the past seven or eight years. Mrs. Piper's grandmother, Naney Burton, is ninety-one years of age, and still enjoys good health. She was born in Schoharie County, N. Y., and reared a family of sixteen children.

ONAS R. ANDERSON, Viee-president, stockholder and Director of the Central Furniture Company, of Rockford, is actively connected with one of the most prominent concerns of the city, the other officers being: President, S. A. Johnson; Secretary and Treasurer, August Peterson; Superintendent, J. Gust Johnson. After coming to Rockford, in 1854, Mr. Anderson was for eighteen years connected with F. H. Manning, and later was a promoter of the Central Furniture Company, with which he has since been identified.

Our subject was born in Smoland, Sweden, June 22, 1833, and when ten months old was orphaned by the death of his father, Andrew Pearson. His mother survived many years and was about seventy-five years old at the time of her demise. The first member of the family to leave Sweden was Jonas R., who took passage at Gottenburg and landed at Quebee, Canada, proceeding thence to the States. Since locating in Rockford, he has been joined by a brother, Charles, who died here; also a sister, Martha, wife of John Johnson, who died about ten years ago.

In Roekford, Mr. Anderson was married to Helen Stockenburg, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, in May, 1829, and was the first member of her father's family who emigrated to this country, coming hither in 1857. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are influential members of the First Swedish Lutheran Church at Roekford, and for some years he served as Trustee and Deacon. They were the parents of five children, two of whom are deceased. Jennie died when a small child, and Jennie (second) passed away when eighteen years old. She was a skilled musician and a graduate of the city High School. Marah C. is the wife of the Rev. John Endston, a Swedish Lutheran elergyman of Minneapolis; Andrew J. is represented elsewhere in this volume; Amanda is at present part owner of a store in Wakefield, Neb.

ILLIAM S. P. HITCHCOCK. The excellence of the soil of Winnebago County for the uses of agriculture has been demonstrated by the pioneers, who cleared the land of its primeval forest growth, turned the first furrows in the soil, and gradually brought the land to a high state of improvement, until to-day this county ranks second to none in the quantity and quality of its products. Mr. Hitchcock devotes especial attention to the raising of small fruits and vegetables, a department of agriculture to which little attention has been paid until quite recently; he is also carrying on a general farming business in Seward Township.

In noting the ancestry of our subject, we find that his paternal grandfather, Ira Hitchcock, was a native of Connecticut and a soldier in the Revo-Intionary War. He married Miss Hannah Hotchkiss, and among their ten children was Ebenezer, who was born in Vermont, November 23, 1787. He grew to maturity in the Green Mountain State and was married to Miss Abi Button, a native of New Hampshire. They became the parents of ten children, all of whom have passed from earth except our subject and one sister. The parents are deceased, the father having died in Ogle County, Ill., and the mother in Winnebago County. They were pioneers of this section of country, having removed hither in 1847 and purchased forty acres of school land, which they afterward traded for the farm where our subject resides. The place had been originally entered from the Government by an older brother some ten years prior to the settlement of the father thereon.

Our subject was born in Massena Township, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., October 25, 1817. He grew to manhood in the Empire State, and on attaining to his majority commenced to work by the month on a farm, continuing in that occupation for six years. On Christmas Day, 1845, he was united in marriage with Miss Martha Hudson, who was born in Montreal, Canada, March 12, 1820. Her father, Samuel Hudson, died in Massena, N. Y., at the age of seventy-five, and her mother, whose maiden name was Polly Abbott, died in Winnebago County when about seventy-five. They were the parents of eleven children, five of whom survive.

Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock have six children, as follow: Louisa M., born December 14, 1846, married Alonson Wells, and they have five children, reside near Pecatonica: Julia S., born September 4, 1849, is the wife of C. T. Simpson and resides in Cedar Falls, Iowa; Sophronia, born March 9, 1852, was united with George Wright, and they are the parents of five children, reside in Pecatonica: George, born August 25, 1854, is married and the father of two children and resides in Los Angeles, Cal.: Eva, born January 11, 1858, is at home with her parents; Amanda, born March 20, 1861, became the wife of Orlando Hall, and they have two children, resides in Linn County, Iowa. The children have all received excellent educations and are highly esteemed throughout the communities where they reside. In his political belief, Mr. Hitchcock was an old-line Whig, easting his first ballot for William H. Harrison for President, and has been a Republican since the organization of the party.

SCAR G. WELLS, who has been a resident of Pecatonica Village since 1857, is one of the prominent and influential men of this section. He is the owner of a pleasant home in the village, where he is greatly respected for his honest and upright life. A native of Seward Township, Winnebago County, Ill., our subject is the son of Jesse and Lavina (Everett)

Wells. The father was an old settler in this region and died at his home in Seward Township, July 21, 1891, when over ninety-one years of age.

Mr. Wells of this sketch on reaching his majority was married, March 2, 1879, to Mary Patterson, who was also a native of this county, having been born March 26, 1860. She was the daughter of William and Sarah A. (Dean) Patterson, whose sketch the reader will find on another page of this volume. The three children born to our subject and his wife are Claud W., born August 15, 1880; Mand S., August 29, 1883, and Berniee M., April 11, 1885. He is an extensive hay merehant in the village and also the proprietor of two farms, one containing forty acres and the other one hundred acres of land. Mr. and Mrs. Wells are Universalists in their religion, and our subject belongs to the I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 173 and also to the Modern Woodmen of America. In politics, he is a trueblue Republican, and has served for a number of terms on the School Board.

William R. Patterson, the father of Mrs. Wells, was born November 11, 1822, in Finnis, County Down, Ireland, and is the son of John and Jane (Roan) Patterson, the former of whom died when about thirty-five years of age and the latter in her forty-seventh year. He came to America in 1845 and at Oriskany, Oneida County, N. Y., worked at the mason's trade, but in his own country was a linen weaver.

The lady to whom Mr. Patterson was married June 25, 1818, was Miss Sarah A. Dean, whose birth occurred February 27, 1819, in Otsego County, N. Y. She was the daughter of Amos and Jane (Chatterton) Dean, and was a cousin of Jay Gould. The Chattertons were Quakers and lived and died in the Empire State. The Dean family were commercial and professional men, and a sister of Amos married a Gould and Jay Gould is supposed to be a grandson or a son of that lady. Mrs. Wells is one in a family of seven children, three of whom are living: Jane D., who is married and has two children; Isabella P., who is married and the mother of six children.

The father of Mrs. Wells in 1856 came to Winnebago County, where he has since resided, engaged at his trade of a mason. He purchased a farm, which he later disposed of at a good profit. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson are Episcopalians in religious matters. The father east his first vote for Gen. Scott and has since that time voted with the Republican party. While residing in New York, he was a member of the Odd Fellows' lodge. Mr. Patterson, when en route to the New World, was nearly seven weeks sailing from Belfast to New York and on that trip passed through one of the greatest storms known to those days. For a period of three days and nights, he with over three hundred passengers was kept in the hold of the vessel with the hatch nailed down and not a morsel to eat. At the end of that time, when they were permitted to come out, it was found the vessel was leaking and Mr. Patterson with other passengers was forced to pump water for over ten days. He was accompanied to this country by a brother, from whom he was never separated until the latter was ealled hence.

"Another old settler gone" was heard throughout Winnebago County when Jesse Wells, the father of our subject, breathed his last. It might be truly said of him that he lived in the hearts of men while on earth and his memory will forever remain fresh in the hearts of the countless hundreds who knew and loved him dearly. His name was synonymous with all that was good, pure, noble and honest, and he was as much a stranger to corrupt methods of doing business as purity is a stranger to impurity. He stood out among his fellow-men as one absolutely self-made, and his memory must forever stand as a silent witness as to what straightforwardness and an honorable career ean do for a man.

Jesse Wells was born in New York, June 2, 1800 and when a lad of ten years his father died, thus throwing him on his own resources. He went out to work to help support his mother and brothers and sisters. Small indeed was the salary a boy could earn in those days, but this boy, no matter how small his income or salary, managed to live within it. He proved that labor and merit could and would be rewarded, as in 1825 he was married to Miss Aseneth Bennett. To them were born a family of nine children, all of whom are deceased, with the exception of one son who is an extensive farmer in Iowa. The partner of his early joys and sorrows died at Ridott, this State, in 1814.

The father of our subject was a pioneer in two Western States, as he first came to Ohio in 1834 and there farmed successfully until 1842, when he removed to Stephenson County, this State. In the town of Ridott, he entered an immense tract of land and later bought and in other trades acquired a large property in Winnebago County, which is located in Seward and Pecatonica Townships. In 1854, he removed to the farm in the former place, where his decease occurred when ninety-one years of age.

The second marriage of the elder Mr. Wells occurred in 1846, at which time Miss Lavina Everett, a native of Pennsylvania, became his wife. They became the parents of eight children, two of whom are deceased. That Jesse Wells was a grand success must be conceded when it is known that without any schooling and not a dollar of assistance from any one, he left an estate valued at over $100,000. That fortune was made by a strict integrity, and a thorough knowledge of economical principles.

ENRY H. HOVEY. There is not within the city of Rockford or vicinity a more cozy and conveniently-arranged home than that of Mr. Hovey, who is well known as one of the prominent citizens of the county. He was born in Warsaw, Wyoming County, N. Y., January 29, 1824, and is the son of David Hovey, whose birth occurred in Tolland County, Conn., March 19, 1783. So far as known, the paternal grandfather of our subject was a resident of Connecticut during his entire life, and he was at one time Sheriff of Tolland County.

David Hovey was reared in his native State, and after his marriage removed to Western New York, accompanied by his family, the removal being made with teams. He drove an ox-team with the household goods, while his wife, with her twin daughters, drove a one-horse buggy. Locating in Warsaw, he bought a tract of timber land of the Holland Purchase Company, and thereon erected a log cabin, in which our subject was born. This contained an unfinished loft, and one of the first recollections of Henry II. is that of climbing a ladder to his bed in the loft, where in the winter season he would often find snow on the bed covers.

At that early day railroads and canals were unknown, and the nearest market was at Rochester, forty miles distant. On the farm which he cleared, Mr. Hovey, Sr., remained until his death. The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Wealthy Palmer, was born in Mansfield, Conn., April 26, 1785. Her father, Elias Palmer, was born in Connecticut, and was a descendant of one of two brothers who emigrated from England, and were numbered among the first settlers of Stonington, Conn. The maternal grandfather of our subject was a farmer and spent his entire life in the State of his birth. Mrs. Wealthy Hovey survived her husband many years, spending the closing days of her life at Warsaw. She reared six children, namely: Martha and Mary (twins), Lucius A., V. R., Henry H. and Julia M.

At the time of his father's death, our subject was quite young, and he afterward assisted his brothers in cultivating the farm until he was fourteen. At that age he commenced to work in a woolen mill, where he served an apprenticeship of four years and then did "jour" work for two years. In company with his brother V. R., he later bought a sawmill in Allegany County, and this they operated for a time. Returning to Wyoming County, he cultivated the home farm and resided there until 1867, when he removed to Marengo, McHenry County, Ill., and for ten years thereafter traveled in the interest of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company, receiving a salary of $2,500 and expenses per year.

Resigning his position, Mr. Hovey built a haypress at Hinckley and engaged in buying and shipping hay for two years, and then, selling out, returned to Marengo. During the same year (1877) he exchanged his property there for a farm close to the city of Rockford, and here he has since resided. In 1889, he sold all but thirteen acres of the place to the "boomers," and upon the property still in his possession has erected a comfortable residence, where he lives retired. December 16, 1844, Mr. Hovey was married to Nancy S. Willey, who was born in Vermont, and they are the parents of two children: Frances M and Lucius A., Jr. Frances married George Wilson and they have one child, Henry H. Lucius maried Salina Blackman, and they, with their three children, Lucia A., Julia N. and Vine R., reside in St. Charles, Kane County. Mr. and Mrs. Hovey are active members of the Baptist Church. Politically, he is a stanch Republican. During the time that he was traveling, he purchased a farm in Kane County, beside land in Iowa and Minnesota, and still has in his possession a large tract in the lastnamed State.

AMUEL C. WITHROW. In the line of fine earpets, draperies, brass goods, etc., etc., the city of Rockford stands second to none, a fact in which its citizens may well take pride in these days of intense competitive effort. In this age of refinement, wealth, and enterprise, the demands of all classes for artistic productions are more exacting than ever before, and in no branch of trade is this more evident than that in which the firm of Withrow, Baird & Co. is engaged. This firm make a specialty of interior decorating, the same introduced lately, and are located in the Stewart Block, where they have a fine room, 135x44 feet. Withrow & Baird have been in business together since April, 1889, and have, until quite recently, been located at No. 122 South Main Street, where, besides doing a decorating business, they carried a large and full line of dry goods Seeing the need of a house in Rockford that would make a specialty of interior decorating, they established themselves in the most favorable location for the business, and have been rewarded by the signal success they have achieved.

Mr. Withrow has been actively engaged in business in this city for many years, while Mr. J. N. Baird, who came here from McGregor, Iowa, where he was engaged for a number of years as a dry-goods merchant, has only resided here since 1889. During that time, however, he has impressed the people as a man of sound judgment, excellent taste, and much energy. Mr. Withrow came to Rockford in June, 1861, and engaged in the drygoods business on his own account, but at the end of ten years, having a true artist's eye for harmony of colors and beautiful effects, he connected with his business a line of house decorations, which he carried on jointly and successfully with his former business until 1892. Since that time, the firm has established the latter line of business entirely. With the exception of a Mr. Dennett, who is still in business in this city, Mr. Withrow is the oldest dry-goods merchant in Rockford. The honorable and equitable methods of this gentleman and his partner inspire the utmost confidence, and their energy and enterprise are reaping a well-merited reward.

Our subject came to this city from Cincinnati, Ohio, where he had a thorough training as a seller of dry-goods, in both the retail and wholesale departments, being connected for some time with the old dry-goods firm of Shaw, Buel, Barber & Co., and having a natural aptitude for that business, he has been unusually successful. He was born in London, Madison County, Ohio, and there passed his boyhood and received his education. At an early age, he began clerking in a dry-goods store in his native town and subsequently went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he remained, actively engaged in business, until coming to this city.

Prominent in all enterprises of a laudable nature, Mr. Withrow is particularly so in educational and religious matters, having been one of the greatest, if not the greatest, Sunday-school worker in the county. Out of the thirty years he has been a resident of this city, twenty years have been spent as Superintendent of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and he has been an official member of the same for years. He has been a delegate to the State Sunday-school Convention a number of times, and when the National Convention met at Newark, N. J., he was one of the delegates from this State. He has been an energetic worker in this direction, and has been in every church and schoolhouse in the county. He gives new impetus and life to old Sunday-schools, and organizes new ones: he seems never to tire, and still the good work goes on. A stanch Republican in his political views, Mr. Withrow works hard for his party, and is a live man in all local affairs.

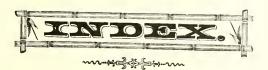

The parents of our subject, Robert and Ann (Carr) Withrow, were natives of Madison County, Ohio, and there passed their entire days. The father was a prominent farmer of his native county, but the last twenty years of his life were spent as a shipper of cattle. He died when seventy-seven years of age. His father was a Virginian, of English descent, and became an early settler of London Township, Madison County, Ohio, where he took up and improved Government land. He assisted in building the old National Road, and was a prominent man in his day. The wife of Robert Withrow died when seventy-two years of age. Her parents had come to Ohio from the Old Dominion at an early day, improved Government land, and were well known to the people of that county. Both the Withrow and Carr families were Methodists in their religious views, and were Whigs and Republicans in politics.

Samuel Withrow was married in Peoria, Ill., to Mrs. Sallie Irwin, nee McFarland, a native of Pittsburg, Pa., who came of Scotch-Irish ancestors, inheriting her thrift and industry from the former, and her wit and sociability from the latter. She was reared and educated in her native city, and was there married to Maj. S. C. Irwin, who was in an Ohio Regiment, and who was killed at the battle of Lookout Mountain, when in the prime of life. He received his regular promotions, was a brave and gallant officer, and fought bravely in defense of the Union. He left no children.

Mr. and Mrs. Withrow are without children of their own, but they have adopted one son, christened Fritz, who is now in the fruit business in Galt, Cal., and who is a promising young man. Mr. and Mrs. Withrow are promunent in social and religious matters, and are pleasantly located on Remington Bluff, south of the city.
