PREFACE.

HE greatest of English historians, Macaulay, and one of the most brilliant writers of the present century, has said: "The history of a country is best told in a record of the lives of its people." In conformity with this idea the Portrait and Biographical Record of this country has been prepared. Instead of going to musty records, and taking therefrom dry statistical matter that can be appreciated by but few, our corps of writers have gone to the people, the men and women who have, by their enterprise and industry, brought the country to rank second to none among those comprising this great and noble State, and from their lips have the story of their life struggles. No more interesting or instructive matter could be presented to an intelligent public. In this volume will be found a record of many whose lives are worthy the imitation of coming generations. It tells how some, commencing life in poverty, by industry and economy have accumulated wealth. It tells how others, with limited advantages for securing an education, have become learned men and women, with an influence extending throughout the length and breadth of the land. It tells of men who have risen from the lower walks of life to eminence as statesmen, and whose names have become famous. It tells of those in every walk in life who have striven to succeed, and records how that success has usually crowned their efforts. It tells also of many, very many, who, not seeking the applause of the world, have pursued "the even tenor of their way," content to have it said of them as Christ said of the woman performing a deed of mercy—"they have done what they could." It tells how that many in the pride and strength of young manhood left the plow and the anvil, the lawyer's office and the counting-room, left every trade and profession, and at their country's call went forth valiantly "to do or die," and how through their efforts the Union was restored and peace once more reigned in the land. In the life of every man and of every woman is a lesson that should not be lost upon those who follow after.

Coming generations will appreciate this volume and preserve it as a sacred treasure, from the fact that it contains so much that would never find its way into public records, and which would otherwise be inaccessible. Great care has been taken in the compilation of the work and every opportunity possible given to those represented to insure correctness in what has been written, and the publishers flatter themselves that they give to their readers a work with few errors of consequence. In addition to the biographical sketches, portraits of a number of representative citizens are given.

The faces of some, and biographical sketches of many, will be missed in this volume. For this the publishers are not to blame. Not having a proper conception of the work, some refused to give the information necessary to compile a sketch, while others were indifferent. Occasionally some member of the family would oppose the enterprise, and on account of such opposition the support of the interested one would be withheld. In a few instances men could never be found, though repeated calls were made at their residence or place of business.

HE Father of our Country was born in Westmorland Co., Va., Feb. 22, 1732. His parents were Augustine and Mary (Ball) Washington. The family to which he belonged has not been satisfactorily traced in England. His great-grandfather, John Washington, emigrated to Virginia about 1657, and became a prosperous planter. He had two sons, Lawrence and John. The former married Mildred Warner and had three children, John, Augustine, the father of George, first married Jane Butler, who bore him four children, two of whom, Lawrence and Augustine, reached maturity. Of six children by his second marriage, George was the eldest, the others being Betty, Samuel, John Augustine, Charles and Mildred.

Augustine Washington, the father of George, died in 1743, leaving a large landed property. To his eldest son, Lawrence, he bequeathed an estate on the Patomac, afterwards known as Mount Vernon, and to George he left the parental residence. George received only such education as the neighborhood schools afforded, save for a short time after he left school, when he received private instruction in mathematics. His spelling was rather defective.

Remarkable stories are told of his great physical strength and development at an early age. He was an acknowledged leader among his companions, and was early noted for that nobleness of character, fairness and veracity which characterized his whole life.

When George was 14 years old he had a desire to go to sea, and a midshipman's warrant was secured for him, but through the opposition of his mother the idea was abandoned. Two years later he was appointed surveyor to the immense estate of Lord Fairfax. In this business he spent three years in a rough frontier life, gaining experience which afterwards proved very essential to him. In 1751, though only 19 years of age, he was appointed adjutant with the rank of major in the Virginia militia, then being trained for active service against the French and Indians. Soon after this he sailed to the West Indies with his brother Lawrence, who went there to restore his health. They soon returned, and in the summer of 1752 Lawrence died, leaving a large fortune to an infant daughter who did not long survive him. On her demise the estate of Mount Vernon was given to George.

Upon the arrival of Robert Dinwiddie, as Lieutenant-Governor of Virginia, in 1752, the militia was reorganized, and the province divided into four military districts, of which the northern was assigned to Washington as adjutant general. Shortly after this a very perilous mission was assigned him and accepted, which others had refused. This was to proceed to the French post near Lake Erie in Northwestern Pennsylvania. The distance to be traversed was between 500 and 600 miles. Winter was at hand, and the journey was to be made without military escort, through a territory occupied by Indians.

trip was a perilous one, and several times he came near losing his life, yet he returned in safety and furnished a full and useful report of his expedition. A regiment of 300 men was raised in Virginia and put in command of Col. Joshua Fry, and Major Washington was commissioned lieutenant-colonel. Active war was then begun against the French and Indians, in which Washington took a most important part. In the memorable event of July 9, 1755, known as Braddock's defeat, Washington was almost the only officer of distinction who escaped from the calamities of the day with life and honor. The other aids of Braddock were disabled early in the action, and Washington alone was left in that capacity on the field. In a letter to his brother he says: "I had four bullets through my coat, and two horses shot under me, yet I escaped unhurt, though death was leveling my companions on every side." An Indian sharpshooter said he was not born to be killed by a bullet, for he had taken direct aim at him seventeen times, and failed to hit him.

After having been five years in the military service, and vainly sought promotion in the royal army, he took advantage of the fall of Fort Duquesne and the expulsion of the French from the valley of the Ohio, to resign his commission. Soon after he entered the Legislature, where, although not a leader, he took an active and important part. January 17, 1759, he married Mrs. Martha (Dandridge) Custis, the wealthy widow of John Parke Custis.

When the British Parliament had closed the port of Boston, the cry went up throughout the provinces that "The cause of Boston is the cause of us all." It was then, at the suggestion of Virginia, that a Congress of all the colonies was called to meet at Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1774, to secure their common liberties, peaceably if possible. To this Congress Col. Washington was sent as a delegate. On May 10, 1775, the Congress re-assembled, when the hostile intentions of England were plainly apparent. The battles of Concord and Lexington had been fought. Among the first acts of this Congress was the election of a commander-in-chief of the colonial forces. This high and responsible office was conferred upon Washington, who was still a member of the Congress. He accepted it on June 19, but upon the express condition that he receive no salary. He would keep an exact account of expenses and expect Congress to pay them and nothing more. It is not the object of this sketch to trace the military acts of Washington, to whom the fortunes and liberties of the people of this country were so long confided. The war was conducted by him under every possible disadvantage, and while his forces often met with reverses, yet he overcame every obstacle, and after seven years of heroic devotion and matchless skill he gained liberty for the greatest nation of earth. On Dec. 23, 1783, Washington, in a parting address of surpassing beauty, resigned his commission as commander-in-chief of the army to to the Continental Congress sitting at Annapolis. He retired immediately to Mount Vernon and resumed his occupation as a farmer and planter, shunning all connection with public life.

In February, 1789, Washington was unanimously elected President. In his presidential career he was subject to the peculiar trials incidental to a new government; trials from lack of confidence on the part of other governments; trials from want of harmony between the different sections of our own country; trials from the impoverished condition of the country, owing to the war and want of credit; trials from the beginnings of party strife. He was no partisan. His clear judgment could discern the golden mean; and while perhaps this alone kept our government from sinking at the very outset, it left him exposed to attacks from both sides, which were often bitter and very annoying.

At the expiration of his first term he was unanimously re-elected. At the end of this term many were anxious that he be re-elected, but he absolutely refused a third nomination. On the fourth of March, 1797, at the expiraton of his second term as President, he returned to his home, hoping to pass there his few remaining years free from the annoyances of public life. Later in the year, however, his repose seemed likely to be interrupted by war with France. At the prospect of such a war he was again urged to take command of the armies. He chose his sulordinate officers and left to them the charge of matters in the field, which he superintended from his home. In accepting the command he made the reservation that he was not to be in the field until it was necessary. In the midst of these preparations his life was suddenly cut off. December 12, he took a severe cold from a ride in the rain, which, settling in his throat, produced inflammation, and terminated fatally on the night of the fourteenth. On the eighteenth his body was borne with military honors to its final resting place, and interred in the family vault at Mount Vernon.

Of the character of Washington it is impossible to speak but in terms of the highest respect and admiration. The more we see of the operations of our government, and the more deeply we feel the difficulty of uniting all opinions in a common interest, the more highly we must estimate the force of his talent and character, which have been able to challenge the reverence of all parties, and principles, and nations, and to win a fame as extended as the limits of the globe, and which we cannot but believe will be as lasting as the existence of man.

The person of Washington was unusally tan, erect and well proportioned. His muscular strength was great. His features were of a beautiful symmetry He commanded respect without any appearance of haughtiness, and ever serious without being dull.

John Adams

OHN ADAMS, the second President and the first Vice-President of the United States, was born in Braintree (now Quincy), Mass., and about ten miles from Boston, Oct. 19, 1735. His great-grandfather, Henry Adams, emigrated from England about 1640, with a family of eight sons, and settled at Braintree. The parents of John were John and Susannah (Boylston) Adams. His father was a farmer of limited means, to which he added the business of shoemaking. He gave his eldest son, John, a classical education at Harvard College.

graduated in 1755, and at once took charge of the school in Worcester, Mass. This he found but a "school of affliction," from which he endeavored to gain relief by devoting himself, in addition, to the study of law. For this purpose he placed himself under the tuition of the only lawyer in the town. He had thought seriously of the clerical profession but seems to have been turned from this by what he termed "the frightful engines of ecclesiastical counils, of diabolical malice, and Calvanistic good nature," of the operations of which he had been a witness in his native town. He was well fitted for the legal profession, possessing a clear, sonorous voice, being ready and fluent of speech, and having quick perceptive powers. He gradually gained practice, and in 1764 married Abigail Smith, a daughter of a minister, and a lady of superior intelligence. Shortly after his marriage, (1765), the attempt of Parliamentary taxation turned him from law to politics. He took initial steps toward holding " town meeting, and the resolutions he offered on the subject became very popular throughout the Province, and were adopted word for word by over forty different towns. He moved to Boston in 1768, and became one of the most courageous and prominent advocates of the popular cause, and was chosen a member of the General Court (the Leglislature) in 1770.

Mr. Adams was chosen one of the first delegates from Massachusetts to the first Continental Congress, which met in 1774. Here he distinguished himselt by his capacity for business and for debate, and advocated the movement for independence against the majority of the members. In May, 1776, he moved and carried a resolution in Congress that the Colonies should assume the duties of self-government. He was a prominent member of the committee of ave appointed June 11, to prepare a declaration of independence. This article was drawn by Jefferson, but on Adams devolved the task of battling it through Congress in a three days debate.

On the day after the Declaration of Independence was passed, while his soul was yet warm with the glow of excited feeling, he wrote a letter to his wife which, as we read it now, seems to have been dictated by the spirit of prophecy. "Yesterday," he says, "the greatest question was decided that ever was debated in America; and greater, perhaps, never was or wil be decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, 'that these United States are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states.' The day is passed. The fourth of July, 1776, will be a memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe it will be celebrated by succeeding generations, as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to Almighty God. It ought to be solemnized with pomp, shows games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations from one end of the continent to the other, from this time forward for ever. You will think me transported with enthusiasm, but I am not. I am well aware of the toil, and blood and treasure, that it will cost to maintain this declaration, and support and defend these States; yet, through all the gloom, I can see the rays of light and glory. I can see that the end is worth more than all the means; and that posterity will triumph, although you and I may rue, which I hope we shall not."

In November, 1777, Mr. Adams was appointed a delegate to France and to co-operate with Bemjamin Franklin and Arthur Lee, who were then in Paris, in the endeavor to obtain assistance in arms and money from the French Government. This was a severe trial to his patriotism, as it separated him from his home, compelled him to cross the ocean in winter, and exposed him to great peril of capture by the British cruisers, who were seeking him. He left France June 17, 1770. In September of the same year he was again chosen to go to Paris, and there hold himself in readiness to negotiate a treaty of peace and of commerce with Great Britian, as soon as the British Cabinet might be found willing to listen to such proposels. He sailed for France in November, from there he went to Holland, where he negotiated important loans and formed important commercial treaties

Finally a treaty of peace with England was signed Jan. 21, 1783. The re-action from the excitement, toil and anxiety through which Mr. Adams had passed threw him into a fever. After suffering from a continued fever and becoming feeble and emaciated he was advised to go to England to drink the waters of Bath. While in England, still drooping and desponding, he received dispatches from his own government urging the necessity of his going to Amsterdam to negotiate another loan. It was winter, his health was delicate, yet he immediately set out, and through storm, on sea, on horseback and foot, he made the trip.

February 24, 1785, Congress appointed Mr. Adams envoy to the Court of St. James. Here he met face to face the King of England, who had so long regarded him as a traitor. As England did not condescend to appoint a minister to the United States, and as Mr. Adams felt that he was accomplishing but little, he sought permission to return to his own country, where he arrived in June, 1788.

When Washington was first chosen President, John Adams, rendered illustiious by his signal services at home and abroad, was chosen Vice President. Again at the second election of Washington as President, Adams was chosen Vice President. In 1796, Washington retired from public life, and Mr. Adams was elected President, though not without much opposition. Serving in this office four years, he was succeeded by Mr. Jefferson, his opponent in politics.

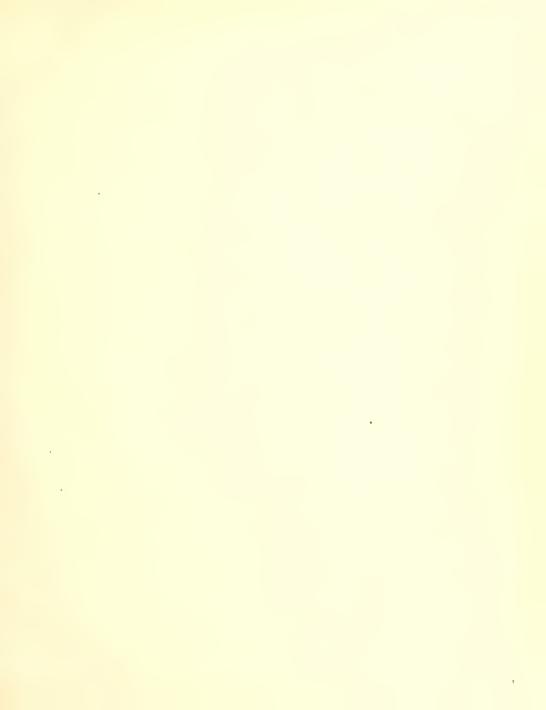

While Mr. Adams was Vice President the great

French Revolution shook the continent of Europe, and it was upon this point which he was at issue with the majority of his countrymen led by Mr. Jefferson. Mr. Adams felt no sympathy with the French people in their struggle, for he had no confidence in their power of self-government, and he utterly abhored the class of atheist philosophers who he claimed caused it. On the other hand Jefferson's sympathies were strongly enlisted in behalf of the French people. Hence originated the alienation between these distinguished men, and two powerful parties were thus soon organized, Adams at the head of the one whose sympathies were with England and Jefferson led the other in sympathy with France.

The world has seldom seen a spectacle of more moral beauty and grandeur, than was presented by the old age of Mr. Adams. The violence of party feeling had died away, and he had begun to receive that just appreciation which, to most men, is not accorded till after death. No one could look upon his venerable form, and think of what he had done and suffered, and how he had given up all the prime and strength of his life to the public good, without the deepest emotion of gratitude and respect. It was his peculiar good fortune to witness the complete success of the institution which he had been so active in creating and supporting. In 1824, his cup of happiness was filled to the brim, by seeing his son elevated to the highest station in the gift of the people.

The fourth of July, 1826, which completed the half century since the signing of the Declaration of Independence, arrived, and there were but three of the signers of that immortal instrument left upon the earth to hail its morning light. And, as it is well known, on that day two of these finished their earthly pilgrimage, a coincidence so remarkable as to seem miraculous. For a few days before Mr. Adams had been rapidly failing, and on the morning of the fourth he found himself too weak to rise from his bed. On being requested to name a toast for the customary celebration of the day, he exclaimed "In-DEPENDENCE FOREVER." When the day was ushered in, by the ringing of bells and the firing of cannons, he was asked by one of his attendants if he knew what day it was? He replied, "O yes; it is the glorious fourth of July-God bless it-God bless you all." In the course of the day he said, "It is a great and glorious day." The last words he uttered were, "Jefferson survives." But he had, at one o'clock, resigned his spirit into the hands of his God.

The personal appearance and manners of Mr. Adams were not particularly prepossessing. His face, as his portrait manifests, was intellectual ard expressive, but his figure was low and ungraceful, and he manners were frequently abrupt and uncourteous. He had neither the lofty dignity of Washington, nor the engaging elegance and gracefulness which marked the manners and address of Jefferson.

HOMAS JEFFERSON was born April 2, 1743, at Shadwell, Albermarle county, Va. His parents were Peter and Jane (Randolph) Jefferson, the former a native of Wales, and the latter born in London. To them were born six daughters and two sons, of whom Thomas was the elder. When 14 years of age his father died. He received a most liberal education, having been kept diligently at school from the time he was five years of age. In 1760 he entered William and Mary College. Williamsburg was then the seat of the Colonial Court, and it was the obode of fashion and splendor. Young Jefferson, who was then 17 years old, lived somewhat expensively, keeping fine horses, and much caressed by gay society, yet he was earnestly devoted to his studies, and irreproachaable in his morals. It is strange, however, under such influences, that he was not ruined. In the second year of his college course, moved by some unexplained inward impulse, he discarded his horses. society, and even his favorite violin, to which he had previously given much time. He often devoted fifteen hours a day to hard study, allowing himself for exercise only a run in the evening twilight of a mile out of the city and back again. He thus attained very high intellectual culture, alike excellence in philosophy and the languages. The most difficult Latin and Greek authors he read with facility. A more finished scholar has seldom gone forth from college halls; and there was not to be found, perhaps, in all Virginia, a more pureminded, upright, gentlemanly young man.

Immediately upon leaving college he began the study of law. For the short time he continued in the practice of his profession he rose rapidly and distinguished himself by his energy and accuteness as a lawyer. But the times called for greater action. The policy of England had awakened the spirit of resistance of the American Colonies, and the enlarged views which Jefferson had ever entertained, soon led him into active political life. In 1769 he was chosen a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses In 1772 he married Mrs. Martha Skelton, a very beautiful, wealthy and highly accomplished young widow

Upon Mr. Jefferson's large estate at Shadwell, there was a majestic swell of land, called Monticello, which commanded a prospect of wonderful extent and beauty. This spot Mr. Jefferson selected for his new home; and here he reared a mansion of modest yet elegant architecture, which, next to Mount Vernon became the most distinguished resort in our land.

In 1775 he was sent to the Colonial Congress, where, though a silent member, his abilities as a writer and a reasoner soon become known, and he was placed upon a number of important committees, and was chairman of the one appointed for the drawing up of a declaration of independence. This committee consisted of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston. Jefferson, as chairman, was appointed to draw up the paper. Franklin and Adams suggested a few verbal changes before it was submitted to Congress. On June 28, a few slight changes were made in it by Congress, and it was passed and signed July 4, 1776. What must have been the feelings of that man—what the emotions that swelled his breast—who was charged with the preparation of that Declaration, which, while it made known the wrongs of America, was also to publish her to the world, free, soverign and independent. It is one of the most remarkable papers ever written; and did no other effort of the mind of its author exist, that alone would be sufficient to stamp his name with immortality.

In 1779 Mr. Jefferson was elected successor to Patrick Henry, as Governor of Virginia. At one time the British officer, Tarleton, sent a secret expedition to Monticello, to capture the Governor. Scarcely five minutes elapsed after the hurried escape of Mr. Jefferson and his family, ere his mansion was in possession of the British troops. His wife's health, never very good, was much injured by this excitement, and in the summer of 1782 she died.

Mr. Jefferson was elected to Congress in 1783. Two years later he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to France. Returning to the United States in September, 1789, he became Secretary of State in Washington's cabinet. This position he resigned Jan. 1, 1794. In 1797, he was chosen Vice President, and four years later was elected President over Mr. Adams, with Aaron Burr as Vice President. In 1804 he was re-elected with wonderful unanimity, and George Clinton, Vice President.

The early part of Mr. Jefferson's second adminstration was disturbed by an event which threatened the tranquility and peace of the Union; this was the conspiracy of Aaron Burr. Defeated in the late election to the Vice Presidency, and led on by an unprincipled ambition, this extraordinary man formed the plan of a military expedition into the Spanish territories on our southwestern frontier, for the purpose of forming there a new republic. This has been generally supposed was a mere pretext; and although it has not been generally known what his real plans were, there is no doubt that they were of a far more dangerous character.

In 1809, at the expiration of the second term for which Mr. Jefferson had been elected, he determined to retire from political life. For a period of nearly forty years, he had been continually before the pubic, and all that time had been employed in offices of the greatest trust and responsibility. Having thus devoted the best part of his life to the service of his country, he now felt desirous of that rest which his declining years required, and upon the organization of the new administration, in March, 1809, he bid farewell forever to public life, and retired to Monticello.

Mr. Jefferson was profuse in his hospitality. Whole families came in their coaches with their horses,—fathers and mothers, boys and girls, habies and nurses,—and remained three and even six months. Life at Monticello, for years, resembled that at a fashionable watering-place.

The fourth of July, 1826, being the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence, great preparations were made in every part of the Union for its celebration, as the nation's jubilee, and the citizens of Washington, to add to the solemnity of the occasion, invited Mr. Jefferson, as the framer, and one of the few surviving signers of the Declaration, to participate in their testivities. But an illness, which had been of several weeks duration, and had been continually increasing, compelled him to decline the invitation.

On the second of July, the disease under which he was laboring left him, but in such a reduced state that his medical attendants, entertained no hope of his recovery. From this time he was perfectly sensible that his last hour was at hand. On the next day, which was Monday, he asked of those around him, the day of the month, and on being told it was the third of July, he expressed the earnest wish that he might be permitted to breathe the air of the fiftieth anniversary. His prayer was heard—that day, whose dawn was hailed with such rapture through our land, burst upon his eyes, and then they were closed forever. And what a noble consummation of a noble life! To die on that day,—the birthday of a nation, the day which his own name and his own act had rendered glorious; to die amidst the rejoicings and festivities of a whole nation, who looked up to him, as the author, under God, of their greatest blessings, was all that was wanting to fill up the record his life.

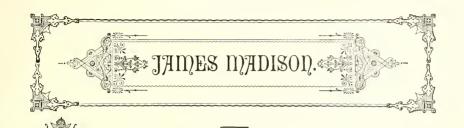

Almost at the same hour of his death, the kindred spirit of the venerable Adams, as if to bear him company, left the scene of his carthly honors, Hand in hand they had stood forth, the champions of freedom; hand in hand, during the dark and desperate struggle of the Revolution, they had cheered and animated their desponding countrymen; for half a century they had labored together for the good of the country; and now hand in hand they depart. In their lives they had been united in the same great cause of liberty, and in their deaths they were not divided.

In person Mr. Jefferson was tall and thin, rather above six feet in height, but well formed; his eyes were light, his hair originally red, in after life became white and silvery; his complexion was fair, his fore. head broad, and his whole courtenance intelligent and thoughtful. He possessed great fortitude of mind as well as personal courage; and his command of temper was such that his oldest and most intimate friends never recollected to have seen him in a passion. His manners, though dignified, were simple and unaffected, and his hospitality was so unbounded that all found at his house a ready welcome. In conversation he was fluent, eloquent and enthusiastic; and his language was remarkably pure and correct. He was a finished classical scholar, and in his writings is discernable the care with which he formed his style upon the best models of antiquity.

AMES MADISON, "Father of the Constitution," and fourth President of the United States, was born March 16, 1757, and died at his home in Virginia, June 28, 1836. The name of James Madison is inseparably connected with most of the important events in that heroic period of our country during which the foundations of this great republic were laid. He was the last of the founders of the Constitution of the United States to be called to his eternal reward.

The Madison family were among the early emigrants to the New World, landing upon the shores of the Chesapeake but 15 years after the settlement of Jamestown. The father of James Madison was an opulent planter, residing upon a very fine estate called "Montpelier," Orange Co., Va. The mansion was situated in the midst of scenery highly picturesque and romantic, on the west side of South-west Mountain, at the foot of Blue Ridge. It was but 25 miles from the home of Jefferson at Monticello. The closest personal and political attachment existed between these illustrious men, from their early youth until death.

The early education of Mr. Madison was conducted mostly at home under a private tutor. At the age of 18 he was sent to Princeton College, in New Jersey. Here he applied himself to study with the most imprudent zeal; allowing himself, for months, but three hours' sleep out of the 24. His health thus became so seriously impaired that he never recovered any vigor of constitution. He graduated in 1771, with a feeble body, with a character of utmost purity, and with a mind highly disciplined and richly stored with learning which embellished and gave proficiency to his subsequent career.

Returning to Virginia, he commenced the study of law and a course of extensive and systematic reading. This educational course, the spirit of the times in which he lived, and the society with which he associated, all combined to inspire him with a strong love of liberty, and to train him for his life-work of a statesman. Being naturally of a religious turn of mind, and his frail health leading him to think that his life was not to be long, he directed especial attention to theological studies. Endowed with a mind singularly free from passion and prejudice, and with almost unequalled powers of reasoning, he weighed all the arguments for and against revealed religion, until his faith became so established as never to be shaken.

In the spring of 1776, when 26 years of age, he was elected a member of the Virginia Convention, to frame the constitution of the State. The next year (1777), he was a candidate for the General Assembly. He refused to treat the whisky-loving voters, and consequently lost his election; but those who had witnessed the talent, energy and public spirit of the modest young man, enlisted themselves in his behalf, and he was appointed to the Executive Council.

Both Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson were Governors of Virginia while Mr. Madison remained member of the Council; and their appreciation of his untellectual, social and moral worth, contributed not a little to his subsequent eminence. In the year 1780, he was elected a member of the Continental Congress. Here he met the most illustrious men in our land, and he was immediately assigned to one of the most conspicuous positions among them.

For three years Mr. Madison continued in Congress, one of its most active and influential members. In the year 1784, his term having expired, he was elected a member of the Virginia Legislature.

No man felt more deeply than Mr. Madison the utter inefficiency of the old confederacy, with no national government, with no power to form treaties which would be binding, or to enforce law. There was not any State more prominent than Virginia in the declaration, that an efficient national government must be formed. In January, 1786, Mr. Madison carried a resolution through the General Assembly of Virginia, inviting the other States to appoint commissioners to meet in convention at Annapolis to discuss this subject. Five States only were represented. The convention, however, issued another call, drawn up by Mr. Madison, urging all the States to send their delegates to Philadelphia, in May, 1787, to draft a Constitution for the United States, to take the place of that Confederate League. The delegates met at the time appointed. Every State but Rhode Island was represented. George Washington was chosen president of the convention; and the present Constitution of the United States was then and there formed. There was, perhaps, no mind and no pen more active in framing this immortal document than the mind and the pen of James Madison.

The Constitution, adopted by a vote 81 to 79, was to be presented to the several States for acceptance. But grave solicitude was felt. Should it be rejected we should be left but a conglomeration of independent States, with but little power at home and little respect abroad. Mr. Madison was selected by the convenion to draw up an address to the people of the United States, expounding the principles of the Constitution, and urging its adoption. There was great opposition to it at first, but it at length triumphed over all, and went into effect in 1780.

Mr. Madison was elected to the House of Representatives in the first Congress, and soon became the avowed leader of the Republican party. While in New York attending Congress, he met Mrs. Todd, a young widow of remarkable power of fascination, whom he married. She was in person and character queenly, and probably no lady has thus far occupied so prominent a position in the very peculiar society which has constituted our republican court as Mrs. Madison.

Mr. Madison served as Secretary of State under Jefferson, and at the close of his administration was chosen President. At this time the encroachments of England had brought us to the verge of war.

British orders in council destroyed our commerce, and our flag was exposed to constant insult. Mr. Madison was a man of peace. Scholarly in his taste, retiring in his disposition, war had no charms for him. But the meekest spirit can be roused. It makes one's blood boil, even now, to think of an American ship brought to, upon the ocean, by the guns of an English cruiser. A young lieutenant steps on board and orders the crew to be paraded before him. With great nonchalance he selects any number whom he may please to designate as British subjects; orders them down the ship's side into his boat; and places them on the gundeck of his man-of-war, to fight, by compulsion, the battles of England. This right of search and impressment, no efforts of our Government could induce the British cabinet to relinquish.

On the 18th of June, 1812, President Madison gave his approval to an act of Congress declaring war against Great Britain. Notwithstanding the bitter hostility of the Federal party to the war, the country in general approved; and Mr. Madison, on the 4th of March, 1813, was re-elected by a large majority, and entered upon his second term of office. This is not the place to describe the various adventures of this war on the land and on the water. Our infantancy then laid the foundations of its renown in grappling with the most formidable power which ever swept the seas. The contest commenced in earnest by the appearance of a British fleet, early in February, 1813, in Chesapeake Bay, declaring nearly the whole coast of the United States under blockade.

The Emperor of Russia offered his services as me ditator. America accepted; England refused. A British force of five thousand men landed on the banks of the Patuxet River, near its entrance into Chesapeake Bay, and marched rapidly, by way of Bladensburg, upon Washington.

The straggling little city of Washington was thrown into consternation. The cannon of the brief conflict at Bladensburg echoed through the streets of the metropolis. The whole population fled from the city. The President, leaving Mrs. Madison in the White House, with her carriage drawn up at the door to await his speedy return, hurried to meet the officers in a council of war. He met our troops utterly routed, and he could not go back without danger of being captured. But few hours elapsed ere the Presidential Mansion, the Capitol, and all the public buildings in Washington were in flames.

The war closed after two years of fighting, and on Feb. 13, 1815, the treaty of peace was signed at Ghent.

On the 4th of March, 1817, his second term of office expired, and he resigned the Presidential chair to his friend, James Monroe. He retired to his Leautiful home at Montpelier, and there passed the remainder of his days. On June 28, 1836, then at the age of 85 years, he fell asleep in death. Mrs. Madison died July 12, 1849.

AMES MONROE, the fifth President of The United States, was born in Westmoreland Co., Va., April 28, 1758. His early life was passed at the place of nativity. His ancestors had for many years resided in the province in which he was born. When, at 17 years of age, in the process of completing his education at William and Mary College, the Colonial Congress assembled at Philadelphia to deliberate upon the unjust and manifold oppressions of Great Britian, declared the separation of the Colonies, and promulgated the Declaration of Independence. Had he been born ten years before it is highly probable that he would have been one of the signers of that celebrated instrument. At this time he left school and enlisted among the patriots.

He joined the army when everything looked hopeless and gloomy. The number of deserters increased from day to day. The invading armies came pouring in; and the tories not only favored the cause of the mother country, but disheartened the new recruits, who were sufficiently terrified at the prospect of contending with an enemy whom they had been taught to deem invincible. To such brave spirits as James Monroe, who went right onward, undismayed through difficulty and danger, the United States owe their political emancipation. The young cadet joined the ranks, and espoused the cause of his injured country, with a firm determination to live or die with her strife for liberty. Firmly yet sadly he shared in the melancholy retreat from Harleam Heights and White Plains, and accompanied the dispirited army as it fled before its foes through New Jersey. In four months after the Declaration of Independence, the patriots had been beaten in seven battles. At the battle of Trenton he led the vanguard, and, in the act of charging upon the enemy he received a wound in the left shoulder.

As a reward for his bravery, Mr. Monroe was promoted a captain of infantry; and, having recovered from his wound, he rejoined the army. He, however, receded from the line of promotion, by becoming an officer in the staff of Lord Sterling. During the campaigns of 1777 and 1778, in the actions of Brandy wine, Germantown and Monmouth, he continued aid-de-camp; but becoming desirous to regain his position in the army, he exerted himself to collect a regiment for the Virginia line. This scheme failed owing to the exhausted condition of the State. Upon this failure he entered the office of Mr. Jefferson, at that period Governor, and pursued, with considerable ardor, the study of common law. He did not, however, entirely lay aside the knapsack for the green bag; but on the invasions of the enemy, served as a volunteer, during the two years of his legal pursuits.

In 1782, he was elected from King George county, a member of the Leglislature of Virginia, and by that body he was elevated to a seat in the Executive Council. He was thus honored with the confidence of his fellow citizens at 23 years of age; and having at this early period displayed some of that ability and aptitude for legislation, which were afterwards employed with unremitting energy for the public good, he was in the succeeding year chosen a member of the Congress of the United States.

Deeply as Mr. Monroe felt the imperfections of the old Confederacy, he was opposed to the new Constitution, thinking, with many others of the Republican party, that it gave too much power to the Central Government, and not enough to the individual States. Still he retained the esteem of his friends who were its warm supporters, and who, notwithstanding his opposition secured its adoption. In 1789, he became a member of the United States Senate; which office he held for four years. Every month the line of distinction between the two great parties which divided the nation, the Federal and the Republican, was growing more distinct. The two prominent ideas which now separated them were, that the Republican party was in sympathy with France, and also in favor of such a strict construction of the Constitution as to give the Central Government as little power, and the State Governments as much power, as the Constitution would warrant. The Federalists sympathized with England, and were in favor of a liberal construction of the Constitution, which would give as much power to the Central Government as that document could possibly authorize.

The leading Federalists and Republicans were alike noble men, consecrating all their energies to the good of the nation. Two more honest men or more pure patriots than John Adams the Federalist, and James Monroe the Republican, never breathed. In building up this majestic nation, which is destined to eclipse all Grecian and Assyrian greatness, the combination of their antagonism was needed to create the right equilibrium. And yet each in his day was denounced as almost a demon.

Washington was then President. England had espoused the cause of the Bourbons against the principles of the French Revolution. All Europe was drawn into the conflict. We were feeble and far away, Washington issued a proclamation of neutrality between these contending powers. France had helped us in the struggle for our liberties. All the despotisms of Europe were now combined to prevent the French from escaping from a tyranny a thousand-fold worse than that which we had endured Col. Monroe, more magnanimous than prudent, was anxious that, at whatever hazard, we should help our old allies in their extremity. It was the impulse of a generous and noble nature. He violently opposed the President's proclamation as ungrateful and wanting in magnanimity.

Washington, who could appreciate such a character, developed his calm, serene, almost divine greatness, by appointing that very James Monroe, who was denouncing the policy of the Government, as the minister of that Government to the Republic of France. Mr. Monroe was welcomed by the National Convention in France with the most enthusiastic demonstrations.

Shortly after his return to this country, Mr. Monroe was elected Governor of Virginia, and held the office for three years. He was again sent to France to co-operate with Chancellor Livingston in obtaining the vast territory then known as the Province of Louisiana, which France had but shortly before obtained from Spain. Their united efforts were successful. For the comparatively small sum of fifteen millions of dollars, the entire territory of Orleans and district of Louisiana were added to the United States. This was probably the largest transfer of real estate which was ever made in all the history of the world.

From France Mr. Monroe went to England to obtain from that country some recognition of our rights as neutrals, and to remonstrate against those odious impressments of our seamen. But England was unrelenting. He again returned to England on the same mission, but could receive no redress. He returned to his home and was again chosen Governor of Virginia. This he soon resigned to accept the position of Secretary of State under Madison. While in this office war with England was declared, the Secretary of War resigned, and during these trying times, the duties of the War Departmen. were also put upon him. He was truly the armorbearer of President Madison, and the most efficient business man in his cabinet. Upon the return of peace he resigned the Department of War, but continued in the office of Secretary of State until the expiration of Mr. Madison's adminstration. At the election held the previous autumn Mr. Monroe himself had been chosen President with but little opposition, and upon March 4, 1817, was inaugurated. Four years later he was elected for a second term.

Among the important measures of his Presidency were the cession of Florida to the United States; the Missouri Compromise, and the "Monroe doctrine.'

This famous doctrine, since known as the "Monroe doctrine," was enunciated by him in 1823. At that time the United States had recognized the independence of the South American states, and did not wish to have European powers longer attempting to sub due portions of the American Continent. The doctrine is as follows: "That we should consider any attempt on the part of European powers to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety," and "that we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing or controlling American governments or provinces in any other light than as a manifestation by European powers of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States." This doctrine immediately affected the course of foreign governments, and has become the approved sentiment of the United States.

At the end of his second term Mr Monroe retired to his home in Virginia, where he lived until 1830 when he went to New York to live with his son-in-law. In that city he died, on the 4th of July, 1831

OHN OUINCY ADAMS, the sixth President of the United States, was born in the rural home of his honored father, John Adams, in Quincy, Mass., on the rith of July, 1767. His mother, a woman of exalted worth, watched over his childhood during the almost constant absence of his father. When but eight years of age, he stood with his mother on an eminence, listening to the booming of the great battle on Bunker's Hill, and gazing on upon the smoke and flames billowing up from the conflagration of Charlestown.

When but eleven years old he took a tearful adieu of his mother, to sail with his father for Europe, through a fleet of hostile British cruisers. The bright, animated boy spent a year and a half in Paris, where his father was associated with Franklin and Lee as mister plenipotentiary. His intelligence attracted the notice of these distinguished men, and he received from them flattering marks of attention.

Mr. John Adams had scarcely returned to this country, in 1779, ere he was again sent abroad. Again John Quincy accompanied his father. At Paris he applied himself with great diligence, for six months, to study; then accompained his father to Holland, where he entered, first a school in Amsterdam, then the University at Leyden. About a year from this time, in 1781, when the manly boy was but fourteen years of age, he was selected by Mr. Dana, our minister to the Russian court, as his private secretary.

In this school of incessant labor and of enobling culture he spent fourteen months, and then returned to Holland through Sweden, Denmark, Hamburg and Bremen. This long journey he took alone, in the winter, when in his sixteenth year. Again he resumed as studies, under a private tutor, at Hague. Thence in the spring of 1782, he accompanied his father to Paris, traveling leisurely, and forming acquaintance with the most distinguished men on the Continent examining architectural remains, galleries of paintings and all renowned works of art. At Paris he again became associated with the most illustrious men of all lands in the contemplations of the loftiest temporal themes which can engross the human mind. a short visit to England he returned to Paris, and consecrated all his energies to study until May, 1785, when he returned to America. To a brilliant young man of eighteen, who had seen much of the world, and who was familiar with the etiquette of courts, a residence with his father in London, under such circumstances, must have been extremely attractive but with judgment very rare in one of his age, he preferred to return to America to complete his education in an American college. He wished then to study law, that with an honorable profession, he might be able to obtain an independent support.

Upon leaving Harvard College, at the age of twenty he studied law for three years. In June, 1794, being then but twenty-seven years of age, he was appointed by Washington, resident minister at. the Netherlands. Sailing from Boston in July, he reached London in October, where he was immediately admitted to the deliberations of Messrs. Jay and Pinckney, assisting them in negotiating a commercial treaty with Great Britian. After thus spending a fortnight is London, he proceeded to the Hague.

In July, 1797, he left the Hague to go to Portugal as minister plenipotentiary. On his way to Portugal upon arriving in London, he met with despatches directing him to the court of Berlin, but requesting him to remain in London until he should receive his instructions. While waiting he was married to at American lady to whom he had been previously engaged,—Miss Louisa Catherine Johnson, daughter of Mr. Joshua Johnson, American consul in London a lady endownd with that beauty and those accomplishment which eminently fitted her to move in the elevated sphere for which she was descent.

He reached Berlin with his wife in November, 1797; where he remained until July, 1799, when, having fulfilled all the purposes of his mission, he solicited his recall

Soon after his return, in 1802, he was chosen to the Senate of Massachusetts, from Boston, and then was elected Senator of the United States for six years, from the 4th of March, 1804. His reputation, his ability and his experience, placed him immediately among the most prominent and influential members of that body. Especially did he sustain the Government in its measures of resistance to the encroachments of England, destroying our commerce and insulting our flag. There was no man in America more familiar with the arrogance of the British court upon these points, and no one more resolved to present a firm resistance.

In 1809, Madison succeeded Jefferson in the Presidential chair, and he immediately nominated John Quincy Adams minister to St. Petersburg. Resigning his professorship in Harvard College, he embarked at Boston, in August, 1809.

While in Russia, Mr. Ádams was an intense student. He devoted his attention to the language and history of Russia; to the Chinese trade; to the European system of weights, measures, and coins; to the climate and astronomical observations; while he kept up a familiar acquaintance with the Greek and Latin classics. In all the universities of Europe, a more accomplished scholar could scarcely be found. All through life the Bible constituted an important part of his studies. It was his rule to read five chapters every day.

On the 4th of March, 1817, Mr. Monroe took the Presidential chair, and immediately appointed Mr. Adams Secretary of State. Taking leave of his numerous friends in public and private life in Europe, he sailed in Jane, 1819, for the United States. On the 18th of August, he again crossed the threshold of his home in Quincy. During the eight years of Mr. Monroe's administration, Mr. Adams continued Secretary of State.

Some time before the close of Mr. Monroe's second term of office, new candidates began to be presented for the Presidency. The friends of Mr. Adams brought forward his name. It was an exciting campaign. Party spirit was never more bitter. Two hundred and sixty electoral votes were cast. Andrew Jackson received ninety-nine; John Quincy Adams, eighty-four; William H. Crawford, forty-one; Henry Clay, thirty-seven. As there was no choice by the people, the question went to the House of Representatives. Mr. Clay gave the vote of Kentucky to Mr. Adams, and be was elected.

The friends of all the disappointed candidates now combined in a venomous and persistent assault upon Mr. Adams. There is nothing more disgraceful in the past history of our country than the abuse which was poured in one uninterrupted stream, upon this high-minded, upright, patriotic man. There never was an administration more pure in principles, more conscientiously devoted to the best interests of the country, than that of John Quincy Adams; and never, perhaps, was there an administration more unscrupulously and outrageously assailed.

Mr. Adams was, to a very remarkable degree, abstenious and temperate in his habits; always rising early, and taking much exercise. When at his home in Quincy, he has been known to walk, before breakfast seven miles to Boston. In Washington, it was said that he was the first man up in the city, lighting his own fire and applying himself to work in his library often long before dawn.

On the 4th of March, 1829, Mr. Adams retired from the Presidency, and was succeeded by Andrew Jackson. John C. Calhoun was elected Vice President. The slavery question now began to assume portentous magnitude. Mr. Adams returned to Quincy and to his studies, which he pursued with unabated zeal. But he was not long permitted to remain in retirement. In November, 1830, he was elected representative to Congress. For seventeen years, antil his death, he occupied the post as representative, towering above all his peers, ever ready to do brave battle for freedom, and winning the title of "the old man eloquent." Upon taking his seat in the House, he announced that he should hold himself bound to no party. Probably there never was a member more devoted to his duties. He was usually the first in his place in the morning, and the last to leave his seat in the evening. Not a measure could be brought forward and escape his scrutiny. battle which Mr. Adams fought, almost singly, against the proslavery party in the Government, was sublime in its moral daring and heroism. For persisting in presenting petitions for the abolition of slavery, he was threatened with indictment by the grand jury with expulsion from the House, with assassination but no threats could intimidate him, and his final triumph was complete.

It has been said of President Adams, that when his body was bent and his hair silvered by the lapse of fourscore years, yielding to the simple faith of a little child, he was accustomed to repeat every night, before he slept, the prayer which his mother taught him in his infant years.

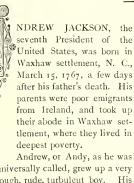

On the 21st of February, 1848, he rose on the floor of Congress, with a paper in his hand, to address the speaker. Suddenly he fell, again stricken by paralysis, and was caught in the arms of those around him. For a time he was senseless, as he was conveyed to the sofa in the rotunda. With reviving consciousness, he opened his eyes, looked calmly around and said "This is the end of earth;" then after a moment's pause he added, "I am content." These were the last words of the grand "Old Man Eloquent."

Andrew Jackson

universally called, grew up a very rough, rude, turbulent boy. His features were coarse, his form ungainly; and there was but very gamly; and there was but very little in his character, made visible, which was attractive.

When only thirteen years old he joined the volunteers of Carolina against the British invasion. In 1781, he and his brother Robert were captured and imprisoned for a time at Camden. A British officer ordered him to brush his mud-spattered boots. "I am a prisoner of war, not your servant," was the reply of the dauntless boy.

The brute drew his sword, and aimed a desperate plow at the head of the helpless young prisoner. Andrew raised his hand, and thus received two fearful gashes,—one on the hand and the other upon the head. The officer then turned to his brother Robert with the same demand. He also refused, and received a blow from the keen-edged sabre, which quite disabled him, and which probably soon after caused his death. They suffered much other ill-treatment, and were finally stricken with the small-pox. Their mother was successful in obtaining their exchange, and took her sick boys home. After a long illness, Andrew recovered, and the death of his mother soon left him entirely friendless.

Andrew supported himself in various ways, such as working at the saddler's trade, teaching school and clerking in a general store, until 1784, when he entered a law office at Salisbury, N. C. He, however, gave more attention to the wild amusements of the times than to his studies. In 1788, he was appointed soliciter for the western district of North Carolina, of which Tennessee was then a part. This involved many long and tedious journeys amid dangers of every kind, but Andrew Jackson never knew fear, and the Indians had no desire to repeat a skirmisb with the Sharp Knife.

In 1791, Mr. Jackson was married to a woman who supposed herself divorced from her former husband. Great was the surprise of both parties, two years later, to find that the conditions of the divorce had just been definitely settled by the first husband. The marriage ceremony was performed a second time, but the occurrence was often used by his enemies to bring Mr. Jackson into disfavor.

During these years he worked hard at his profes sion, and frequently had one or more duels on hand, one of which, when he killed Dickenson, was especially disgraceful.

In January, 1796, the Territory of Tennessee then containing nearly eighty thousand inhabitants, the people met in convention at Knoxville to frame a constitution. Five were sent from each of the eleven counties. Andrew Jackson was one of the delegates. The new State was entitled to but one member in the National House of Representatives. Andrew Jackson was chosen that member. Mounting his horse he rode to Philedelphia, where Congress then held its sessions,—a distance of about eight hundred miles. Jackson was an earnest advocate of the Democratic party. Jefferson was his idol. He admired Bonaparte, loved France and hated England. As Mr. Jackson took his seat, Gen. Washington, whose second term of office was then expiring, delivered his last speech to Congress. A committee drew up a complimentary address in reply. Andrew Jackson did not approve of the address, and was one of the twelve who voted against it. He was not willing to say that Gen. Washington's adminstration had been "wise, firm and patriotic."

Mr. Jackson was elected to the United States Senate in 1797, but soon resigned and returned home. Soon after he was chosen Judge of the Supreme Court of his State, which position he held for six years.

When the war of 1812 with Great Britian commenced, Madison occupied the Presidential chair. Aaron Burr sent word to the President that there was an unknown man in the West, Andrew Jackson, who would do credit to a commission if one were conferred upon him. Just at that time Gen. Jackson offered his services and those of twenty-five hundred volunteers. His offer was accepted, and the troops were assembled at Nashville.

As the British were hourly expected to make an attack upon New Orleans, where Gen. Wilkinson was in command, he was ordered to descend the river with fifteen hundred troops to aid Wilkinson. The expedition reached Natchez; and after a delay of several weeks there, without accomplishing anything, the men were ordered back to their homes. But the energy Gen. Jackson had displayed, and his entire devotion to the comrfort of his soldiers, won him golden opinions; and he became the most popular man in the State. It was in this expedition that his toughness gave him the nickname of "Old Hickory."

Soon after this, while attempting to horsewhip Col. Thomas H. Benton, for a remark that gentleman made about his taking a part as second in a duel, in which a younger brother of Benton's was engaged, he received two severe pistol wounds. While he was lingering upon a bed of suffering news came that the Indians, who had combined under Tecumseh from Florida to the Lakes, to exterminate the white settlers, were committing the most awful ravages. Decisive action became necessary. Gen. Jackson, with his fractured bone just beginning to heal, his arm in a sling, and unable to mount his horse without assistance, gave his amazing energies to the raising of an army to rendezvous at Fayettesville, Alabama.

The Creek Indians had established a strong fort on one of the bends of the Tallapoosa River, near the center of Alabama, about fifty miles below Fort Strother. With an army of two thousand men, Gen. Jackson traversed the pathless wilderness in a march of eleven days. He reached their fort, called Tohopeka or Horse-shoe, on the 27th of March. 1814. The bend of the river enclosed nearly one hundred acres of tangled forest and wild ravine. Across the narrow neck the Indians had constructed a formidable breastwork of logs and brush. Here nine hundred warriors, with an ample suply of arms were assembled.

The fort was stormed. The fight was utterly desperate. Not an Indian would accept of quarter. When bleeding and dying, they would fight those who endeavored to spare their lives. From ten in the morning until dark, the battle raged. The carnage was awful and revolting. Some threw themselves into the river; but the unerring bullet struck their heads as they swam. Nearly everyone of the nine hundred warrios were killed. A few probably, in the night, swam the river and escaped. This ended the war. The power of the Creeks was broken forever. This bold plunge into the wilderness, with its terriffic slaughter, so appalled the savages, that the haggard remnants of the bands came to the camp, begging for peace.

This closing of the Creek war enabled us to concentrate all our militia upon the British, who were the allies of the Indians No man of less resolute will than Gen. Jackson could have conducted this Indian campaign to so successful an issue Immediately he was appointed major-general.

Late in August, with an army of two thousand men, on a rushing march, Gen. Jackson came to Mobile. A British fleet came from Pensacola, landed a force upon the beach, anchored near the little fort, and from both ship and shore commenced a furious assault. The battle was long and doubtful. At length one of the ships was blown up and the rest retired.

Garrisoning Mobile, where he had taken his little army, he moved his troops to New Orleans, And the battle of New Orleans which soon ensued, was in reality a very arduous campaign. This won for Gen. Jackson an imperishable name. Here his troops, which numbered about four thousand men, won a signal victory over the British army of about nine thousand. His loss was but thirteen, while the loss of the British was two thousand six hundred.

The name of Gen. Jackson soon began to be mentioned in connection with the Presidency, but, in 824, he was defeated by Mr. Adams. He was, however, successful in the election of 1828, and was re-elected for a second term in 1832. In 1829, just before he assumed the reins of the government, he met with the most terrible affliction of his life in the death of his wife, whom he had loved with a devotion which has perhaps never been surpassed. From the shock of her death he never recovered.

His administration was one of the most memorable in the annals of our country; applaude one party, condemned by the other. No man had more bitter enemies or warmer friends. At the expiration of his two terms of office he retired to the Hermitage, where he died June 8, 1845. The last years of Mr. Jackson's life were that of a devoted Christian man.

ARTIN VAN BUREN, the eighth President of the United States, was born at Kinderhook, N. V., Dec. 5, 1782. He died at the same place, July 24, 1862. His body rests in the cemetery at Kinderhook. Above it is a plain granite shaft fifteen feet high, bearing a simple inscription about half way up on one face. The lot is unfenced, unbordered or unbounded by shrub or flower.

There is but little in the life of Martin Van Buren of romantic interest. He fought no battles, engaged in no wild adventures. Though his life was stormy in political and intellectual conflicts, and he gained many signal victories, his days passed uneventful in those incidents which give zest to biography. His ancestors, as his name indicates, were of Dutch origin, and were among the earliest emigrants from Holland to the banks of the Hudson. His father was a farmer, residing in the old town of Kinderhook. His mother, also of Dutch lineage, was a woman of superior intelligence and exemplary piety.

.fe was decidedly a precocious boy, developing unusual activity, vigor and strength of mind. At the age of fourteen, he had finished his academic studies in his native village, and commenced the study of law. As he had not a collegiate education, seven years of study in a law-office were required of him before he could be admitted to the bar. Inspired with a lofty ambition, and conscious of his powers, he pursued his studies with indefatigable industry. After spending six years in an office in his native village, he went to the city of New York, and prosecuted his studies for the seventh year.

In 1803, Mr. Van Buren, then twenty-one years of age, commenced the practice of law in his native village. The great conflict between the Federal and Republican party was then at its height. Mr. Van Buren was from the beginning a politician. He had, perhaps, imbibed that spirit while listening to the many discussions which had been carried on in his father's hotel. He was in cordial sympathy with Jefferson, and earnestly and eloquently esponsed the cause of State Rights; though at that time the Federal party held the supremacy both in his town and State.

His success and increasing ruputation led him after six years of practice, to remove to Hudson, the county seat of his county. Here he spent seven years, constantly gaining strength by contending in the courts with some of the ablest men who have adorned the bar of his State.

Just before leaving Kinderhook for Hudson, Mr. Van Buren married a lady alike distinguished for beauty and accomplishments. After twelve short years she sank into the grave, the victim of consumption, leaving her husband and four sons to weep over her loss. For twenty-five years, Mr. Van Buren was an earnest, successful, assiduous lawyer. The record of those years is barren in items of public interest. In 1812, when thirty years of age, he was chosen to the State Senate, and gave his strenuous support to Mr. Madison's administration. In 1815, he was appointed Attorney-General, and the next year moved to Albany, the capital of the State.

While he was acknowledged as one of the most pominent leaders of the Democratic party, he had the moral courage to avow that true democracy did not require that "universal suffrage" which admits the vile, the degraded, the ignorant, to the right of governing the State. In true consistency with his democratic principles, he contended that, while the path leading to the privilege of voting should be open to every man without distinction, no one should be invested with that sacred prerogative, unless he were in some degree qualified for it by intelligence, virtue and some property interests in the welfare of the State.

In 1821 he was elected a member of the United States Senate; and in the same year, he took a seat in the convention to revise the constitution of his native State. His course in this convention secured the approval of men of all parties. No one could doubt the singleness of his endeavors to promote the interests of all classes in the community. In the Senate of the United States, he rose at once to a conspicuous position as an active and useful legislator.

In 1827, John Quincy Adams being then in the Presidential chair, Mr. Van Buren was re-elected to the Senate. He had been from the beginning a deremined opposer of the Administration, adopting the "State Rights" view in opposition to what was feemed the Federal proclivities of Mr. Adams.

Soon after this, in 1828, he was chosen Governor of the State of New York, and accordingly resigned his seat in the Senate. Probably no one in the United States contributed so much towards ejecting John Q. Adams from the Presidential chair, and placing in it Andrew Jackson, as did Martin Van Buren. Whether entitled to the reputation or not, he certainly was regarded throughout the United States as one of the most skillful, sagacious and cunning of politicians. It was supposed that no one knew so well as he how to touch the secret springs of action; how to pull all the wires to put his machinery in motion; and how to organize a political army which would, secretly and stealthily accomplish the most gigantic results. these powers it is said that he outwitted Mr. Adams, Mr. Clay, Mr. Webster, and secured results which few thought then could be accomplished.

When Andrew Jackson was elected President he appointed Mr. Van Buren Secretary of State. This position he resigned in 1831, and was immediately appointed Minister to England, where he went the same autumn. The Senate, however, when it met, refused to ratify the nomination, and he returned home, apparently untroubled; was nominated Vice President in the place of Calhoun, at the re-election of President Jackson; and with smiles for all and frowns for none, he took his place at the head of that Senate which had refused to confirm his nomination as ambassador.

His rejection by the Senate roused all the zeal of President Jackson in behalf of his repudiated favorite; and this, probably more than any other cause, secured his elevation to the chair of the Chief Executive. On the 20th of May, 1836, Mr. Van Buren received the Democratic nomination to succeed Gen. Jackson as President of the United States. He was elected by a handsome majority, to the delight of the retiring President. "Leaving New York out of the canvass," says Mr. Parton, "the election of Mr. Van Buren to the Presidency was as much the act of Gen. Jackson as though the Constitution had conferred upon him the power to appoint a successor."

His administration was filled with exciting events. The insurrection in Canada, which threatened to involve this country in war with England, the agitation of the slavery question, and finally the great commercial panic which spread over the country, all were trials to his wisdom. The financial distress was attributed to the management of the Democratic party, and brought the President into such disfavor that he failed of re-election.

With the exception of being nominated for the Presidency by the "Free Soil" Democrats, in 1848, Mr. Van Buren lived quietly upon his estate until his death.

He had ever been a prudent man, of frugal habits, and living within his income, had now fortunately a competence for his declining years. His unblemished character, his commanding abilities, his unquestioned patriotism, and the distinguished positions which he had occupied in the government of our country, secured to him not only the homage of his party, but the respect of the whole community. It was on the 4th of March, 1841, that Mr. Van Buren retired from the presidency. From his fine estate at Lindenwald. he still exerted a powerful influence upon the politics of the country. From this time until his death, on the 24th of July, 1862, at the age of eighty years, he resided at Lindenwald, a gentleman of leisure, of culture and of wealth; enjoying in a healthy old age, probably far more happiness than he had before experienced amid the stormy scenes of his active life,

ILLIAM HENRY HARRI-SON, the ninth President of the United States, was born at Berkeley, Va., Feb. 9, 1773. His father, Benjamin Harrison, was in comparatively opulent circumstances, and was one of the most distinguished men of his day. He was an intimate friend of George Washington, was early elected a member of the Continental Congress, and was conspicuous among the patriots of Virginia in resisting the encroachments of the British crown. In the celebrated Congress of 1775, Benjamin Harrison and John Hancock were both candidates for the office of speaker.

Mr Harrison was subsequently chosen Governor of Virginia, and was twice re-elected. His son, William Henry, of course enjoyed in childhood all the advantages which wealth and intellectual and cultivated society could give. Having received a thorough common-school education, he entered Hampden Sidney College, where he graduated with honor soon after the death of his father. He then repaired to Philadelphia to study medicine under the instructions of Dr. Rush and the guardianship of lobert Morris, both of whom were, with his father, signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Upon the outbreak of the Indian troubles, and notwithstanding the remonstrances of his friends, he abandoned his medical studies and entered the army, laving obtained a commission of Ensign from President Washington. He was then but 19 years old. From that time he passed gradually upward in rank until he became aid to General Wayne, after whose death he resigned his commission. He was then appointed Secretary of the North-western Territory. This Territory was then entitled to but one member in Congress and Capt. Harrison was chosen to fill that position.

In the spring of 1800 the North-western Territory was divided by Congress into two portions. eastern portion, comprising the region now embraced in the State of Ohio, was called "The Territory north-west of the Ohio." The western portion, which included what is now called Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, was called the "Indiana Territory." William Henry Harrison, then 27 years of age, was appointed by John Adams, Governor of the Indiana Territory, and immediately after, also Governor of Upper Louisiana. He was thus ruler over almost as extensive a realm as any sovereign upon the globe. He was Superintendent of Indian Affairs, and was invested with powers nearly dictatorial over the new rapidly increasing white population. The ability and fidelity with which he discharged these responsible duties may be inferred from the fact that he was four times appointed to this office-first by John Adams. twice by Thomas Jefferson and afterwards by President Madison.

When he began his adminstration there were but three white settlements in that almost boundless region, now crowded with cities and resounding with all the tumult of wealth and traffic. One of these settlements was on the Ohio, nearly opposite Louisville; one at Vincennes, on the Wabash, and the third a French settlement.

The vast wilderness over which Gov. Harrison reigned was filled with many tribes of Indians. About the year 1806, two extraordinary men, twin brothers, of the Shawnese tribe, rose among them. One of these was called Tecumseh, or "The Crouching Panther;" the other, Olliwacheca, or "The Prophet." Tecumseh was not only an Indian warrior, but a man of great sagacity, far-reaching foresight and indomitable perseverance in any enterprise in which he might engage. He was inspired with the highest enthusiasm, and had long regarded with dread and with hatred the encroachment of the whites upon the huntinggrounds of his fathers. His brother, the Prophet, was an orator, who could sway the feelings of the untutored Indian as the gale tossed the tree-tops beneath which they dwelt.

But the Prophet was not merely an orator: he was, in the superstitious minds of the Indians, invested with the superhuman dignity of a medicine-man or a magician. With an enthusiasm unsurpassed by Peter the Hermit rousing Europe to the crusades, he went from tribe to tribe, assuming that he was specially sent by the Great Spirit.

Gov. Harrison made many attempts to conciliate the Indians, but at last the war came, and at Tippecanoe the Indians were routed with great slaughter. October 28, 1812, his army began its march. When near the Prophet's town three Indians of rank made their appearance and inquired why Gov. Harrison was approaching them in so hostile an attitude. After a short conference, arrangements were made for a meeting the next day, to agree upon terms of peace.

But Gov. Harrison was too well acquainted with the Indian character to be deceived by such protestations. Selecting a favorable spot for his night's encampment, he took every precaution against surprise. His troops were posted in a hollow square, and slept upon their arms.

The troops threw themselves upon the ground for rest; but every man had his accourtrements on, his loaded musket by his side, and his bayonet fixed. The wakeful Governor, between three and four o'clock in the morning, had risen, and was sitting in conversation with his aids by the embers of a waning fire. It was a chill, cloudy morning with a drizzling rain. In the darkness, the Indians had crept as near as possible, and just then, with a savage yell, rushed, with all the desperation which superstition and passion most highly inflamed could give, upon the left flank of the little army. The savages had been amply provided with guns and ammunition by the English. Their war-whoop was accompained by a shower of bullets.

The camp-fires were instantly extinguished, as the light aided the Indians in their aim. With hidebus yells, the Indian bands rushed on, not doubting a speedy and an entire victory. But Gen. Harrison's troops stood as immovable as the rocks around them until day dawned: they then made a simultaneous charge with the bayonet, and swept every thing before them, and completely routing the foe.

Gov. Harrison now had all his energies tasked to the utmost. The British descending from the Canadas, were of themselves a very formidable force; but with their savage allies, rushing like wolves from the forest, searthing out every remote farm-house, burning, plundering, scalping, torturing, the wide frontier was plunged into a state of consternation which even the most vivid imagination can but faintly conceive, The war-whoop was resounding everywhere in the forest. The horizon was illuminated with the conflagration of the cabins of the settlers. Gen Hull had made the ignominious surrender of his forces at Detroit. Under these despairing circumstances, Gov. Harrison was appointed by President Madison commander-inchief of the North-western army, with orders to retake Detroit, and to protect the frontiers.

It would be difficult to place a man in a situation demanding more energy, sagacity and courage; but General Harrison was found equal to the position, and nobly and triumphantly did he meet all the responsibilities.

He won the love of his soldiers by always sharing with them their fatigue. His whole baggage, while pursuing the foe up the Thames, was carried in a valise; and his bedding consisted of a single blanket lashed over his saddle. Thirty-five British officers, his prisoners of war, supped with him after the battle. The only fare he could give them was beef roasted before the fire, without bread or salt.

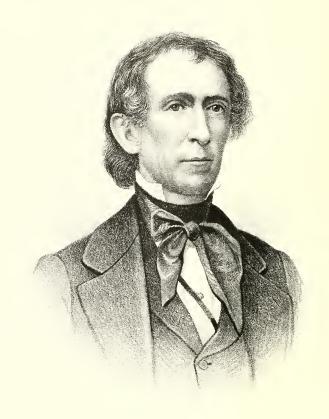

In 1816, Gen. Harrison was chosen a member of the National House of Representatives, to represent the District of Ohio. In Congress he proved an active member; and whenever he spoke, it was with force of reason and power of eloquence, which arrested the attention of all the members.

In 1819, Harrison was elected to the Senate of Ohio; and in 1824, as one of the presidential electors of that State, he gave his vote for Henry Clay. The same year he was chosen to the United States Senate.

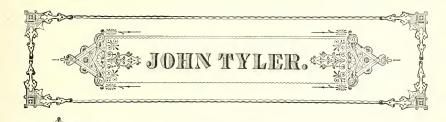

In 1836, the friends of Gen. Harrison brought him forward as a candidate for the Presidency against Van Buren, but he was defeated. At the close of Mr. Van Buren's term, he was re-nominated by his party, and Mr. Harrison was unanimously nominated by the Whigs, with John Tyler for the Vice Presidency. The contest was very animated. Gen. Jackson gave all his influence to prevent Harrison's election; but his triumph was signal.

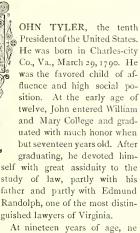

The cabinet which he formed, with Daniel Webster at its head as Secretary of State, was one of the most brilliant with which any President had ever been surrounded. Never were the prospects of an administration more flattering, or the hopes of the country more sanguine. In the midst of these bright and joyous prospects, Gen. Harrison was seized by a pleurisy-fever and after a few days of violent sickness, died on the 4th of April; just one month after his inauguration as President of the United States.

John Tyler

At nineteen years of age, ne commenced the practice of law. His success was rapid and astonishing. It is said that three months had not elapsed ere there was scarcely a case on the docket of the court in which he was not retained. When but twenty-one years of age, he was almost unanimously elected to a seat in the State Legislature. He connected himself with the Democratic party, and warmly advocated the measures of Jefferson and Madison. For five successive years he was elected to the Legislature, receiving nearly the unanimous vote or his county.

When but twenty-six years of age, he was elected a member of Congress. Here he acted earnestly and ably with the Democratic party, opposing a national bank, internal improvements by the General Government, a protective tariff, and advocating a strict construction of the Constitution, and the most careful vigilance over State rights. His labors in Congress were so arduous that before the close of his second term he found it necessary to resign and retire to his estate in Charles-city Co., to recruit his health. He, however, soon after consented to take his seat in the State Legislature, where his influence was powerful in promoting public works of great utility. With a reputation thus canstantly increasing, he was chosen by a very large majority of votes, Governor of his native State. His administration was signally a successful one. His popularity secured his re-election.

John Randolph, a brilliant, erratic, half-crazed man, then represented Virginia in the Senate of the United States. A portion of the Democratic party was displeased with Mr. Randolph's wayward course, and brought forward John Tyler as his opponent, considering him the only man in Virginia of sufficient popularity to succeed against the renowned orator of Roanoke. Mr. Tyler was the victor.

In accordance with his professions, upon taking his seat in the Senate, he joined the ranks of the opposition. He opposed the tariff; he spoke against and voted against the bank as unconstitutional; he strenuously opposed all restrictions upon slavery, resisting all projects of internal improvements by the General Government, and avowed his sympathy with Mr. Calhoun's view of nullification; he declared that Gen. Jackson, by his opposition to the nullifiers, had abandoned the principles of the Democratic party. Such was Mr. Tyler's record in Congress,—a record in perfect accordance with the principles which be had always avowed.

Returning to Virginia, he resumed the practice of his profession. There was a split in the Democratic Party. His friends still regarded him as a true Jeffersonian, gave him a dinner, and showered compliments upon him. He had now attained the age of forty-six. His career had been very brilliant. In consequence of his devotion to public business, his private affairs had fallen into some disorder; and it was not without satisfaction that he resumed the practice of law, and devoted himself to the culture of his plantation. Soon after this he removed to Williamsburg, for the better education of his children; and he again took his seat in the Legislature of Virginia.

By the Southern Whigs, he was sent to the national convention at Harrisburg to nominate a President in 1839. The majority of votes were given to Gen. Harrison, a genuine Whig, much to the disappointment of the South, who wished for Henry Clay. To conciliate the Southern Whigs and to secure their vote, the convention then nominated John Tyler for Vice President. It was well known that he was not in sympathy with the Whig party in the North: but the Vice President has but very little power in the Government, his main and almost only duty being to preside over the meetings of the Senate. Thus it happened that a Whig President, and, in reality, a Democratic Vice President were chosen.

In 1841, Mr. Tyler was inaugurated Vice Presi-Jent of the United States. In one short month from that time, President Harrison died, and Mr. Tyler thus cand himself, to his own surprise and that of the whole Nation, an occupant of the Presidential chair. This was a new test of the stability of our institutions, as it was the first time in the history of our country that such an event had occured. Mr. Tyler was at home in Williamsburg when he received the unexpected tidings of the death of President Harrison. He hastened to Washington, and on the 6th of April was inaugurated to the high and responsible office. He was placed in a position of exceeding delicacy and difficulty. All his long life he had been opposed to the main principles of the party which had brought him into power. He had ever been a consistent, honest man, with an unblemished record. Gen. Harrison had selected a Whig cabinet. Should he retain them, and thus surround himself with counsellors whose views were antagonistic to his own? or, on the other hand, should he turn against the party which had elected him and select a cabinet in harmony with himself, and which would oppose all those views which the Whigs deemed essential to the public welfare? This was his fearful dilemma. He invited the cabinet which President Harrison had selected to retain their seats. He reccommended a day of fasting and prayer, that God would guide and bless us.

The Whigs carried through Congress a bill for the incorporation of a fiscal bank of the United States. The President, after ten days' delay, returned it with his veto. He suggested, however, that he would approve of a bill drawn up upon such a plan as he proposed. Such a bill was accordingly prepared, and privately submitted to him. He gave it his approval. It was passed without alteration, and he sent it back with his veto. Here commenced the open rupture. It is said that Mr. Tyler was provoked to this measure by a published letter from the Hon. John M. Botts, a distinguished Virginia Whig, who severely touched the pride of the President.

The opposition now exultingly received the President into their arms. The party which elected him denounced him bitterly. All the members of his cabinet, excepting Mr. Webster, resigned. The Whigs of Congress, both the Senate and the House, held a meeting and issued an address to the people of the United States, proclaiming that all political alliance between the Whigs and President Tyler were at an end.

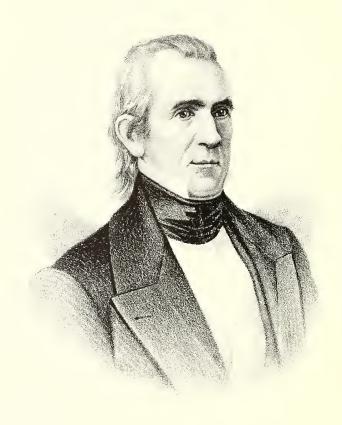

Still the President attempted to conciliate. He appointed a new cabinet of distinguished Whigs and Conservatives, carefully leaving out all strong party men. Mr. Webster soon found it necessary to resign, forced out by the pressure of his Whig friends. Thus the four years of Mr. Tyler's unfortunate administration passed sadly away. No one was satisfied. The land was filled with nurmurs and vituperation. Whigs and Democrats alike assailed him. More and more, however, he brought himself into sympathy with his old friends, the Democrats, until at the close of his term, he gave his whole influence to the support of Mr. Polk, the Democratic candidate for his successor.

On the 4th of March, 1845, he retired from the harassments of office, to the regret of neither party, and probably to his own unspeakable relief. His first wife, Miss Letitia Christian, died in Washington, in 1842; and in June, 1844, President Tyler was again married, at New York, to Miss Julia Gardiner, a young lady of many personal and intellectual accomplishments.

The remainder of his days Mr. Tyler passed mainly in retirement at his beautiful home,—Sherwood Forest, Charles-city Co., Va. A polished gentleman in his manners, richly furnished with information from books and experience in the world, and possessing brilliant powers of conversation, his family circle was the scene of unusual attractions. With sufficient means for the exercise of a generous hospitality, he might have enjoyed a serene old age with the few friends who gathered around him, were it not for the storms of civil war which his own principles and policy had helped to introduce.

When the great Rebellion rose, which the State rights and nullifying doctrines of Mr. John C. Calboun had inaugurated, President Tyler renounced his allegiance to the United States, and joined the Confederates. He was chosen a member of their Congress; and while engaged in active measures to destroy, by force of arms, the Government over which he had once presided, he was taken sick and soon died.

Samez or Salk

AMES K. POLK, the eleventh President of the United States, was born in Mecklenburg Co., N. C., Nov. 2, 1795. His parents were Samuel and Jane (Knox) Polk, the former a son of Col. Thomas Polk, who located at the above place, as one of the first pioneers, in 1735.

In the year 1306, with his wife and children, and soon after followed by most of the members of the Polk famly, Samuel Polk emigrated some two or three hundred miles farther west, to the rich valley of the Duck River. Here in the midst of the wilderness, in a region which was subsequently called Maury Co., they reared their log huts. and established their homes. In the hard toil of a new farm in the wilderness, James K. Polk spent the early years of his childhood and youth. His father, adding the pursuit of a surveyor to that of a farmer, gradually increased in wealth until he became one of the leading men of the region. His mother was a superior woman, of strong common sense and earnest piety.

Very early in life, James developed a taste for reading and expressed the strongest desire to obtain a liberal education. His mother's training had made him methodical in his habits, had taught him punctuality and industry, and had inspired him with lofty principles of morality. His health was frail; and his father, fearing that he might not be able to endure a sedentary life, got a situation for him behind the counter, hoping to fit him for commercial pursuits.

This was to James a bitter disappointment. He had no taste for these duties, and his daily tasks were irksome in the extreme. He remained in this uncongenial occupation but a few weeks, when at his earnest solicitation his father removed him, and made arrangements for him to prosecute his studies. Soon after he sent him to Murfreesboro Academy. With ardor which could scarcely be surpassed, he pressed forward in his studies, and in less than two and a half years, in the autumn of 1815, entered the sophomore class in the University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill. Here he was one of the most exemplary of scholars, punctual in every exercise, never allowing himself to be absent from a recitation or a religious service.

He graduated in 1818, with the highest honors, being deemed the best scholar of his class, both in mathematics and the classics. He was then twenty-three years of age. Mr. Polk's health was at this time much impaired by the assiduity with which he had prosecuted his studies. After a short season of relaxation he went to Nashville, and entered the office of Felix Grundy, to study law. Here Mr. Polk renewed his acquaintance with Andrew Jackson, who resided on his plantation, the Hermitage, but a few miles from Nashville. They had probably been slightly acquainted before.

Mr. Polk's father was a Jeffersonian Republican, and James K. Polk ever adhered to the same political faith. He was a popular public speaker, and was constantly called upon to address the meetings of his party friends. His skill as a speaker was such that he was popularly called the Napoleon of the stump. He was a man of unblemished morals, genial and tourtecus in his bearing, and with that sympathetic nature in the joys and griefs of others which ever gave him troops of friends. In 1823, Mr. Polk was elected to the Legislature of Tennessee. Here he gave his strong influence towards the election of his friend, Mr. Jackson, to the Presidency of the United States.

In January, 1824, Mr. Polk married Miss Sarah Childress, of Rutherford Co., Tenn. His bride was altogether worthy of him,—a lady of beauty and culture. In the fall of 1825, Mr. Polk was chosen a member of Congress. The satisfaction which he gave to his constituents may be inferred from the fact, that for fourteen successive years, until 1839, he was continued in that office. He then voluntarily withdrew, only that he might accept the Gubernatorial chair of Tonnessee. In Congress he was a laborious member, a frequent and a popular speaker. He was always in his seat, always courteous; and whenever he spoke it was always to the point, and without any ambitious rhetorical display.

During five sessions of Congress, Mr. Polk was Speaker of the House Strong passions were roused, and stormy scenes were witnessed; but Mr. Polk performed his arduous duties to a very general satisfaction, and a unanimous vote of thanks to him was passed by the House as he withdrew on the 4th of March, 1839.

In accordance with Southern usage, Mr. Polk, as a candidate for Governor, canvassed the State. He was elected by a large majority, and on the 14th of October, 1839, took the oath of office at Nashville. In 1841, his term of office expired, and he was again the candidate of the Democratic party, but was defeated.

On the 4th of March, 1845, Mr. Polk was inaugurated President of the United States. The verdict of the country in favor of the annexation of Texas, exerted its influence upon Congress; and the last act of the administration of President Tyler was to affix his signature to a joint resolution of Congress, passed on the 3d of March, approving of the annexation of Texas to the American Union. As Mexico still claimed Texas as one of her provinces, the Mexican minister, Almonte, immediately demanded his passports and left the country, declaring the act of the annexation to be an act hostile to Mexico.

In his first message, President Polk urged that Texas should immediately, by act of Congress, be received into the Union on the same footing with the other States. In the meantime, Gen. Taylor was sent with an army into Texas to hold the country. He was sent first to Nueces, which the Mexicans said was the western boundary of Texas. Then he was sent nearly two hundred miles further west, to the Rio Grande, where he erected batteries which commanded the Mexican city of Matamoras, which was situated on the western banks.

The anticipated collision soon took place, and was was declared against Mexico by President Polk. The war was pushed forward by Mr. Polk's administration with great vigor. Gen. Taylor, whose army was first called one of "observation," then of "occupation," then of "invasion," was sent forward to Monterey. The feeble Mexicans, in every encounter, were hopelessly and awfully slaughtered. The day of judgement alone can reveal the misery which this war caused. It was by the ingenuity of Mr. Polk's administration that the war was brought on.

'To the victors belong the spoils." Mexico was prostrate before us. Her capital was in our hands. We now consented to peace upon the condition that Mexico should surrender to us, in addition to Texas, all of New Mexico, and all of Upper and Lower California. This new demand embraced, exclusive of Texas, eight hundred thousand square miles. This was an extent of territory equal to nine States of the size of New York. Thus slavery was securing eighteen majestic States to be added to the Union. There were some Americans who thought it all right: there were others who thought it all wrong. In the prosecution of this war, we expended twenty thousand lives and more than a hundred million of dollars. Of this money fifteen millions were paid to Mexico.

On the 3d of March, 1849, Mr. Polk retired from office, having served one term. The next day was Sunday. On the 5th, Gen. Taylor was inaugurated as his successor. Mr. Polk rode to the Capitol in the same carriage with Gen. Taylor; and the same evening, with Mrs. Polk, he commenced his return to Tennessee. He was then but fifty-four years of age. He had ever been strictly temperate in all his habits, and his health was good. With an ample fortune, a choice library, a cultivated mind, and domestic ties of the dearest nature, it seemed as though long years of tranquility and happiness were before him. But the cholera-that fearful scourge-was then sweeping up the Valley of the Mississippi. This he contracted, and died on the 15th of June, 1849, in the fifty-fourth year of his age, greatly mourned by his countrymen.

Zachary Taylor-

ZACHARY TAYLOR.

ACHARY TAYLOR, twelfth
President of the United States, was born on the 24th of Nov., 1784, in Orange Co., Va. His father, Colonel Taylor, was a Virginian of note, and a distinguished patriot and soldier of the Revolution. When Zachary was an infant, his father with his wife and two children, emigrated to Kentucky, where he settled in the pathless wilderness, a few miles from Louisville. In this frontier home, away from civilization and all its refinements, young Zachary could enjoy but few social and educational advantages. When six years of age he attended a common school, and was then regarded as a bright, active boy, rather remarkable for bluntness and decision of character. He was strong, fearless and self-reliant, and manifested a strong desire to enter the army to fight the Indians who were ravaging the frontiers. There is little to be recorded of the uneventful years of his childhood on his father's large but lonely plantation.

In 1808, his father succeeded in obtaining for him the commission of lieutenant in the United States army; and he joined the troops which were stationed at New Orleans under Gen. Wilkinson. Soon after this he married Miss Margaret Smith, a young lady from one of the first families of Maryland.

Immediately after the declaration of war with England, in 1812, Capt. Taylor (for he had then been promoted to that rank) was put in command of Fort Harrison, on the Wabash, about fifty miles above Vincennes. This fort had been built in the wilderness by Gen. Harrison.on his march to Tippecanoe. It was one of the first points of attack by the Indians, led by Tecunseh. Its garrison consisted of a broken company of infantry numbering fifty men, many of whom were sick.

Early in the autumn of 1\(\xi\)12, the Indians, stealthily, and in large numbers, moved upon the fort. Their approach was first indicated by the murder of two soldiers just outside of the stockade. Capt. Taylor made every possible preparation to meet the anticipated assault. On the 4th of September, a band of forty painted and plumed savages came to the fort, waving a white flag, and informed Capt. Taylor that in the morning their chief would come to have a talk with him. It was evident that their object was merely to ascertain the state of things at the fort, and Capt. Taylor, well versed in the wiles of the savages, kept them at a distance.

The sun went down; the savages disappeared, the garrison slept upon their arms. One hour before midnight the war whoop burst from a thousand lips in the forest around, followed by the discharge of musketry, and the rush of the foe. Every man, sick and well, sprang to his post. Every man knew that defeat was not merely death, but in the case of capture, death by the most agonizing and prolonged torture. No pen can describe, no immagination can conceive the scenes which ensued. The savages succeeded in setting fire to one of the block-houses-Until six o'clock in the morning, this awful conflict continued. The savages then, baffled at every point, and gnashing their teeth with rage, retired. Capt. Taylor, for this gallant defence, was promoted to the rank of major by brevet.

Until the close of the war, Major Taylor was placed in such situations that he saw but little more of active service. He was sent far away into the depths of the wilderness, to Fort Crawford, on Fox River, which empties into Green Bay. Here there was but little to be done but to wear away the tedious hours as one best could. There were no books, no society, no intellectual stimulus. Thus with him the uneventful years rolled on Gradually he rose to the rank of colonel. In the Black-Hawk war, which resulted in the capture of that renowned chieftain, Col Taylor took a subordinate but a brave and efficient part.

For twenty-four years Col. Taylor was engaged in the defence of the frontiers, in scenes so remote, and in employments so obscure, that his name was unknown beyond the limits of his own immediate acquaintance. In the year 1836, he was sent to Florida to compel the Seminole Indians to vacate that region and retire beyond the Mississippi, as their chiefs by treaty, had promised they should do. The services rendered here secured for Col. Taylor the high appreciation of the Government; and as a reward, he was elevated to the rank of brigadier-general by brevet; and soon after, in May, 1838, was appointed to the chief command of the United States troops in Florida.

After two years of such wearisome employment amidst the everglades of the peninsula, Gen. Taylor obtained, at his own request, a change of command, and was stationed over the Department of the Southwest. This field embraced Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia. Establishing his headquarters at Fort Jessup, in Louisiana, he removed his family to a plantation which he purchased, near Baton Rogue. Here he remained for five years, buried, as it were, from the world, but faithfully discharging every duty imposed upon him.

In 1846, Gen. Taylor was sent to guard the land between the Nueces and Rio Grande, the latter river being the boundary of Texas, which was then claimed by the United States. Soon the war with Mexico was brought on, and at Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, Gen. Taylor won brilliant victories over the Mexicans. The rank of major-general by brevet was then conferred upon Gen. Taylor, and his name was received with enthusiasm almost everywhere in the Nation. Then came the battles of Monterey and Buena Vista in which he won signal victories over forces much larger than he commanded.

His careless habits of dress and his unaffected simplicity, secured for Gen. Taylor among his troops, the sobriquet of "Old Rough and Ready."

The tidings of the brilliant victory of Buena Vista spread the wildest enthusiasm over the country. The name of Gen. Taylor was on every one's lips. The Whig party decided to take advantage of this wonderful popularity in bringing forward the unpolished, un-

"red, honest soldier as their candidate for the Presidency. Gen. Taylor was astonished at the announcement, and for a time would not listen to it; declaring that he was not at all qualified for such an office. So little interest had he taken in politics that, for forty years, he had not cast a vote. It was not without chagrin that several distinguished statesmen who had been long years in the public service found their claims set aside in behalf of one whose name had never been heard of, save in connection with Palo Aito, Resaca de la Palma, Monterey and Buena Vista. It is said that Daniel Webster, in his haste remarked, "It is a nomination not fit to be made."

Gen. Taylor was not an eloquent speaker nor a fine writer His friends took possession of him, and prepared such few communications as it was needful should be presented to the public. The popularity of the successful warrior swept the land. He was triumphantly elected over two opposing candidates,-Gen. Cass and Ex-President Martin Van Buren. Though he selected an excellent cabinet, the good old man found himself in a very uncongenial position, and was, at times, sorely perplexed and harassed. His mental sufferings were very severe, and probably tended to hasten his death. The pro-slavery party was pushing its claims with tireless energy, expeditions were fitting out to capture Cuba; California was pleading for admission to the Union, while slavery stood at the door to bar her out. Gen. Taylor found the political conflicts in Washington to be far more trying to the nerves than battles with Mexicans or Indians

In the midst of all these troubles, Gen. Taylor, after he had occupied the Presidential chair but little over a year, took cold, and after a brief sickness of but little over five days, died on the 9th of July, 1850. His last words were, "I am not afraid to die. I am ready. I have endeavored to do my duty." He died universally respected and beloved. An honest, unpretending man, he had been steadily growing in the affections of the people; and the Nation bitterly lamented his death.

Gen. Scott, who was thoroughly acquainted with Gen. Taylor, gave the following graphic and truthful description of his character:- "With a good store of common sense, Gen. Taylor's mind had not been enlarged and refreshed by reading, or much converse with the world. Rigidity of ideas was the consequence. The frontiers and small military posts had been his home. Hence he was quite ignorant for his rank, and quite bigoted in his ignorance. His simplicity was child-like, and with innumerable prejudices, amusing and incorrigible, well suited to the tender age. Thus, if a man, however respectable, chanced to wear a coat of an unusual color, or his hat a little on one side of his head; or an officer to leave a corner of his handkerchief dangling from an outside pocket,-in any such case, this critic held the offender to be a coxcomb (perhaps something worse), whom he would not, to use his oft repeated phrase, 'touch with a pair of tongs.'

"Any allusion to literature beyond good old Dilworth's spelling-book, on the part of one wearing a sword, was evidence, with the same judge, of utter unfitness for heavy marchings and combats. In short few men have ever had a more comfortable, labor, saving contempt for learning of every kind."

ILLARD FILLMORE, thirteenth President of the United States, was born at Summer Hill, Cayuga Co., N. Y., on the 7th of January, 1800. His father was a farmer, and owing to misfortune, in humble ciro ing to misfortune, in humble circumstances. Of his mother, the daughter of Dr. Abiathar Millard, of Pittsfield, Mass., it has been said that she possessed an intellect of very high order, united with much personal loveliness, sweetness of disposition, graceful manners and exquisite sensibilities. She died in 1831; having lived to see her son a young man of distinguished prom-use, though she was not permitted to witness the high dignity which he finally attained.

In consequence of the secluded home and limited means of his father, Millard enjoyed but slender advantages for education in his early years. The common schools, which he occasionally attended were very imperfect institutions; and books were scarce and expensive. There was nothing then in his character to indicate the brilliant career upon which he was about to enter. He was a plain farmer's boy; intelligent, good-looking, kind-hearted. The sacred influences of home had taught him to revere the Bible, and had laid the foundations of an upright character. When fourteen years of age, his father sent him some hundred miles from home, to the then wilds of Livingston County, to learn the trade of a clothier, Near the mill there was a small villiage, where some enterprising man had commenced the collection of a village library. This proved an inestimable blessing to young Fillmore. His evenings were spent in reading. Soon every leisure moment was occupied with books. His thirst for knowledge became insatiate and the selections which he made were continually more elevating and instructive. He read history, biography, oratory, and thus gradually there was enkindled in his heart a desire to be something more than a mere worker with his hands; and he was becoming, almost unknown to himself, a well-informed, educated man.

The young clothier had now attained the age of nineteen years, and was of fine personal appearance and of gentlemanly demeanor. It so happened that there was a gentleman in the neighborhood of ample pecuniary means and of benevolence,-Iudge Walter Wood, -who was struck with the prepossessing appearance of young Fillmore. He made his acquaintance, and was so much impressed with his ability and attainments that he advised him to abandon his trade and devote himself to the study of the law. The young man replied, that he had no means of his own, no friends to help him and that his previous education had been very imperfect. But Judge Wood had so much confidence in him that he kindly offered to take him into his own office, and to loan him such money as he needed. Most gratefully the generous offer was accepted.

There is in many minds a strange delusion about a collegiate education. A young man is supposed to be liberally educated if he has graduated at some college. But many a boy loiters through university halls and then enters a law office, who is by no means as well prepared to prosecute his legal studies as was Millard Fillmore when he graduated at the clothingmill at the end of four years of manual labor, during which every leisure moment had been devoted to intense mental culture.

In 1823, when twenty-three years of age, he was admitted to the Court of Common Pleas. He then went to the village of Aurora, and commenced the practice of law. In this secluded, peaceful region, his practice of course was limited, and there was no opportunity for a sudden rise in fortune or in fame. Here, in the year 1826, he married a lady of great moral worth, and one capable of adorning any station she might be called to fill,—Miss Abigail Powers.

His elevation of character, his untiring industry, his legal acquirements, and his skill as an advocate, gradually attracted attention; and he was invited to enter into partnership under highly advantageous circumstances, with an elder member of the bar in Buffalo. Just before removing to Buffalo, in 1829, he took his seat in the House of Assembly, of the State of New York, as a representative from Eric County. Though he had never taken a very active part in politics, his vote and his sympathies were with the Whig party. The State was then Democratic, and he found himself in a helpless minority in the Legislature, still the testimony comes from all parties, that his courtesy, ability and integrity, won, to a very unusual degree the respect of his associates.

In the autumn of 1832, he was elected to a seat in the United States Congress. He entered that troubled arena in some of the most tunultuous hours of our national history. The great conflict respecting the national bank and the removal of the deposits, was then raging.

His term of two years closed; and he returned to his profession, which he pursued with increasing reputation and success. After a lapse of two years he again became a candidate for Congress; was reelected, and took his seat in 1837. His past experience as a representative gave him strength and confidence. The first term of service in Congress to any man can be but little more than an introduction. He was now prepared for active duty. All his energies were brought to bear upon the public good. Every measure received his impress.

Mr. Fillmore was now a man of wide repute, and his popularity filled the State, and in the year 1847, he was elected Comptroller of the State.

Mr. Fillmore had attained the age of forty-seven years. His labors at the bar, in the Legislature, in Congress and as Comptroller, had given him very considerable fame. The Whigs were casting about to find suitable candidates for President and Vice-President at the approaching election. Far away, on the waters of the Rio Grande, there was a rough old soldier, who had fought one or two successful battles with the Mexicans, which had caused his name to be proclaimed in trumpet-tones all over the land. But it was necessary to associate with him on the same ticket some man of reputation as a statesman.

Under the influence of these considerations, the names of Zachary Taylor and Millard Fillmore became the rallying-cry of the Whigs, as their candidates for President and Vice-Peesident. The Whig ticket was signally triumphant. On the 4th of March, 1849, Gen. Taylor was inaugurated President, and Millard Fillmore Vice-President, of the United States.

On the 9th of July, 1850, President Taylor, but about one year and four months after his inauguration, was suddenly taken sick and died. By the Constitution, Vice-President Fillmore thus became President. He appointed a very able cabinet, of which the illustrious Daniel Webster was Secretary of State.

Mr. Fillmore had very serious difficulties to contend with, since the opposition had a majority in both Houses. He did everything in his power to conciliate the South; but the pro-slavery party in the South felt the inadequacy of all measures of transient conciliation. The population of the free States was so rapidly increasing over that of the slave States that it was inevitable that the power of the Government should soon pass into the hands of the free States. The famous compromise measures were adopted under Mr. Fillmore's administration, and the Japan Expedition was sent out. On the 4th of March, 1853, Mr. Fillmore, having served one term, retired.

In 1856, Mr. Fillmore was nominated for the Presidency by the "Know Nothing" party, but was beaten by Mr. Buchanan. After that Mr. Fillmore lived in retirement. During the terrible conflict of civil war, he was mostly silent. It was generally supposed that his sympathies were rather with those who were endeavoring to overthrow our institutions. President Fillmore kept aloof from the conflict, without any cordial words of cheer to the one party or the other. He was thus forgotten by both. He lived to a ripe old age, and died in Buffalo. N. Y., March 8, 1874.

Hantelin Horce

RANKLIN PIERCE, the fourteenth President of the United States, was born in Hillsborough, N. H., Nov. 23, 1804. His father was a Revolutionary soldier, who, with his own strong arm, hewed out a home in the wilderness. He was a man of inflexible integrity; of strong, though uncultivated mind, and an uncompromising Democrat. The mother of Franklin Pierce was all that a son could desire, -an intelligent, prudent, affectionate, Christian woman. Franklin was the sixth of eight children.

Franklin was a very bright and handsome boy, generous, warm-hearted and brave. He won alike the love of old and young. The boys on the play ground loved him. His teachers loved him. The neighbors looked upon him with pride and affection. He was by instinct a gentleman; always speaking kind words, doing kind deeds, with a peculiar unstudied tact which taught him what was agreeable. Without developing any precocity of genius, or any unnatural devotion to books, he was a good scholar; in body, in mind, in affections, a finely-developed boy.

When sixteen years of age, in the year 1820, he entered Bowdoin College, at Brunswick, Me He was one of the most popular young men in the college. The purity of his moral character, the unvarying courtesy of his demeanor, his rank as a scholar, and genial nature, rendered him a universal favorite. There was something very peculiarly winning in his address, and it was evidently not in the slightest degree studied: it was the simple outgushing of his own magnanimous and loving nature.

Upon graduating, in the year 1824, Franklin Pierce commenced the study of law in the office of Judge Woodbury, one of the most distinguished lawyers of the State, and a man of great private worth. The eminent social qualities of the young lawyer, his father's prominence as a public man, and the brilliant political career into which Judge Woodbury was entering, all tended to entice Mr. Pierce into the facinating yet perilous path of political life. With all the ardor of his nature he espoused the cause of Gen, Jackson for the Presidency. He commenced the practice of law in Hillsborough, and was soon elected to represent the town in the State Legislature. Here he served for four years. The last two years he was chosen speaker of the house by a very large vote.

In 1833, at the age of twenty-nine, he was elected a member of Congress. Without taking an active part in debates, he was faithful and laborious in duty and ever rising in the estimation of those with whom he was associated.

In 1837, being then but thirty-three years of age, he was elected to the Senate of the United States; taking his seat just as Mr. Van Buren commenced his administration. He was the youngest member in the Senate. In the year 1834, he married Miss Jane Means Appleton, a lady of rare beauty and accomplishments, and one admirably fitted to adorn every station with which her husband was honoied. Of the three sons who were born to them, all now sleep with their parents in the grave.

In the year 1838, Mr. Pierce, with growing fame and increasing business as a lawyer, took up his residence in Concord, the capital of New Hampshire. President Polk, upon his accession to office, appointed Mr. Pierce attorney-general of the United States; but the offer was declined, in consequence of numerous professional engagements at home, and the precariuos state of Mrs. Pierce's health. He also, about the same time declined the nomination for governor by the Democratic party. The war with Mexico called Mr. Pierce in the army. Receiving the appointment of brigadier-general, he embarked, with a portion of his troops, at Newport, R. I., on the 27th of May, 1847. He took an important part in this war, proving himself a brave and true soldier.

When Gen. Pierce reached his home in his native State, he was received enthusiastically by the advocates of the Mexican war, and coldly by his opponents. He resumed the practice of his profession, very frequently taking an active part in political questions, giving his cordial support to the pro-slavery wing of the Democratic party. The compromise measures met cordially with his approval; and he strenuously advocated the enforcement of the infamous fugitive-slave law, which so shocked the religious sensibilities of the North. He thus became distinguished as a "Northern man with Southern principles." The strong partisans of slavery in the South consequently regarded him as a man whom they could safely trust in office to carry out their plans.

On the 12th of June, 1852, the Democratic convention met in Baltimore to nominate a candidate for the Presidency. For four days they continued in session, and in thirty-five ballotings no one had obtained a two-thirds vote. Not a vote thus far had been thrown for Gen. Pierce. Then the Virginia delegation brought forward his name. There were fourteen more ballotings, during which Gen. Pierce constantly gained strength, until, at the forty-ninth ballot, he received two hundred and eighty-two votes, and all other candidates eleven. Gen. Winfield Scott was the Whig candidate. Gen. Pierce was chosen with great unanimity. Only four States-Vermont, Massachusetts, Kentucky and Tennessee - cast their electoral votes against him Gen. Franklin Pierce was therefore inaugurated President of the United States on the 4th of March, 1853.

His administration proved one of the most stormy our country had ever experienced. The controversy be tween slavery and freedom was then approaching its culminating point. It became evident that there was an "irrepressible conflict" between them, and that this Nation could not long exist "half slave and half free." President Pierce, during the whole of his administration, did every thing he could to conciliate the South; but it was all in vain. The conflict every year grew more violent, and threats of the dissolution of the Union were borne to the North on every Southern breeze.

Such was the condition of affairs when President Pierce approached the close of his four-years' term of office. The North had become thoroughly alienated from him. The anti-slavery sentiment, goaded by great outrages, had been rapidly increasing; all the intellectual ability and social worth of President Pierce were forgotten in deep reprehension of his administrative acts. The slaveholders of the South, also, unmindful of the fidelity with which he had advocated those measures of Government which they approved, and perhaps, also, feeling that he had rendered himself so unpopular as no longer to be able acceptably to serve them, ungratefully dropped him, and nominated James Buchanan to succeed him.

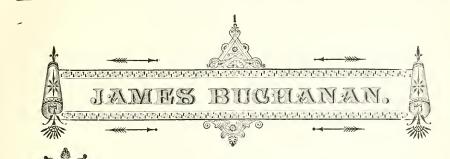

On the 4th of March, 1857, President Pierce retired to his home in Concord. Of three children, two had died, and his only surviving child had been kitted before his eyes by a railroad accident; and his wife, one of the most estimable and accomplished of ladies, was rapidly sinking in consumption. The hour of dreadful gloom soon came, and he was left alone in the world, without wife or child.

When the terrible Rebellion burst forth, which divided our country into two parties, and two only, Mr. Pierce remained steadfast in the principles which he had always cherished, and gave his sympathies to that pro-slavery party with which he had ever been allied. He declined to do anything, either by voice or pen, to strengthen the hand of the National Government. He continued to reside in Concord until the time of his death, which occurred in October, 1869. He was one of the most genial and social of men, an honored communicant of the Episcopai Church, and one of the kindest of neighbors. Generous to a fault, he contributed liberally for the aleviation of suffering and want, and many of his townspeople were often gladened by his material bounty.

Ames o Fue herneing

AMES BUCHANAN, the fifteenth President of the United States, was born in a small frontier town, at the foot of the eastern ridge of the Alleghanies, in Franklin Co., Penn., on the 23d of April, 1701. The place where the humble cabin of his father stood was called Stony Batter. It was a wild and romantic spot in a gorge of the mountains, with towering summits rising grandly all around. His father was a native of the north of Ireland; a poor man, who had emigrated in 1783, with little property save his own strong arms. Five years afterwards he married Elizabeth Spear, the daughter of a respectable farmer, and, with his young bride, plunged into the wilderness, staked his claim, reared his log-hut, opened a clearing with his axe, and settled down there to perform his obscure part in the drama of life. In this secluded home, where James was born, he remained for eight years, enjoying but few social or intellectual advantages. When James was eight years of age, his father removed to the village of Mercersburg, where his son was placed at school, and commenced a course of study in English, Latin and Greek. progress was rapid, and at the age of fourteen, he entered Dickinson College, at Carlisle. Here he developed remarkable talent, and took his stand among the first scholars in the institution. His application to study was intense, and yet his native powers enabled him to master the most abstruse subjects will facility.

In the year 1809, he graduated with the highest honors of his class. He was then eighteen years of age; tall and graceful, vigorous in health, fond of athletic sport, an unerring shot, and enlivened with an exuberant flow of animal spirits. He immediately commenced the study of law in the city of Lancaster, and was admitted to the bar in 1812, when he was but twenty-one years of age. Very rapidly he rose in his profession, and at once took undisputed stand with the ablest lawyers of the State. When but twenty-six years of age, unaided by counsel, he successfully defended before the State Senate one of the judges of the State, who was tried upon articles of impeachment. At the age of thirty it was generally admitted that he stood at the head of the bar; and there was no lawyer in the State who had a more lucrative practice.

In 1820, he reluctantly consented to run as a candidate for Congress. He was elected, and for ten years he remained a member of the Lower House. During the vacations of Congress, he occasionally tried some important case. In 1831, he retired altogether from the toils of his profession, having acquired an ample fortune.

Gen. Jackson, upon his elevation to the Presidency, appointed Mr. Buchanan minister to Russia. The duties of his mission he performed with ability, which gave satisfaction to all parties. Upon his return, in 1833, he was elected to a seat in the United States Senate. He there met, as his associates, Webster, Clay, Wright and Calhoun. He advocated the measures proposed by President Jackson, of making reprisals against France, to enforce the payment of our claims against that country; and defended the course of the President in his unprecedented and wholesale removal from office of those who were not the supporters of his administration. Upon this question he was brought into direct collision with Henry Clay. He also, with voice and vote, advocated expunging from the journal of the Senate the vote of censure against Gen. Jackson for removing the deposits. Earnestly he opposed the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, and urged the prohibition of the circulation of anti-slavery documents by the United States mails.

As to petitions on the subject of slavery, he advocated that they should be respectfully received; and that the reply should be returned, that Congress had no power to legislate upon the subject. "Congress," said he, "might as well undertake to interfere with slavery under a foreign government as in any of the States where it now exists,'

Upon Mr. Polk's accession to the Presidency, Mr. Buchanan became Secretary of State, and as such, took his share of the responsibility in the conduct of the Mexican War. Mr. Polk assumed that crossing the Nueces by the American troops into the disputed territory was not wrong, but for the Mexicans to cross the Rio Grande into that territory was a declaration of war. No candid man can read with pleasure the account of the course our Government pursued in that movement

Mr. Buchanan identified himself thoroughly with the party devoted to the perpetuation and extension of slavery, and brought all the energies of his mind to bear against the Wilmot Proviso. He gave his cordial approval to the compromise measures of 1850, which included the fugitive-slave law. Mr. Pierce, upon his election to the Presidency, honored Mr. Buchanan with the mission to England.

In the year 1856, a national Democratic convention nominated Mr. Buchanan for the Presidency. The political conflict was one of the most severe in which our country has ever engaged. All the friends of slavery were on one side; all the advocates of its restriction and final abolition, on the other. Mr. Fremont, the candidate of the enemies of slavery, rereived 114 electoral votes. Mr. Buchanan received 174, and was elected. The popular vote stood 1,340,618, for Fremont, 1,224,750 for Buchanan. On March 4th, 1857, Mr. Buchanan was inaugurated.

Mr. Buchanan was far advanced in life. Only four years were wanting to fill up his threescore years and ten. His own friends, those with whom he had been allied in political principles and action for years, were seeking the destruction of the Government, that they might rear upon the ruins of our free institutions a nation whose corner-stone should be human slavery. In this emergency, Mr. Buchanan was hopelessly be-He could not, with his long-avowed principles, consistently oppose the State-rights party in their assumptions. As President of the United States, bound by his oath faithfully to administer the laws. he could not, without perjury of the grossest kind, unite with those endeavoring to overthrow the republic. He therefore did nothing.

The opponents of Mr. Buchanan's administration nominated Abraham Lincoln as their standard bearer The pro-slavery in the next Presidential canvass. party declared, that if he were elected, and the control of the Government were thus taken from their hands, they would secede from the Union, taking with them, as they retired, the National Capitol at Washington, and the lion's share of the territory of the United States.

Mr. Buchanan's sympathy with the pro-slavery party was such, that he had been willing to offer them far more than they had ventured to claim. All the South had professed to ask of the North was nonintervention upon the subject of slavery. Mr. Buchanan had been ready to offer them the active cooperation of the Government to defend and extend the institution.

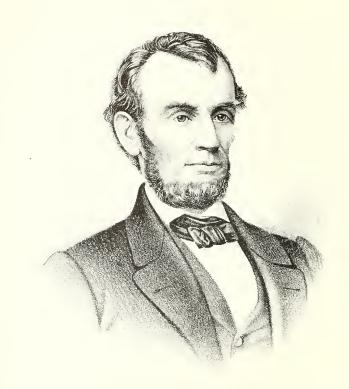

As the storm increased in violence, the slaveholders claiming the right to secede, and Mr. Buchanan avowing that Congress had no power to prevent it, one of the most pitiable exhibitions of governmental imbecility was exhibited the world has ever seen. He declared that Congress had no power to enforce its laws in any State which had withdrawn, or which was attempting to withdraw from the Union. This was not the doctrine of Andrew Jackson, when, with his hand upon his sword-hilt, he exclaimed, "The Union must and shall be preserved!"

South Carolina seceded in December, 1860; nearly three months before the inauguration of President Lincoln, Mr. Buchanan looked on in listless despair. The rebel flag was raised in Charleston; Fort Sumpter was besieged; our forts, navy-yards and arsenals were seized; our depots of military stores were plundered; and our custom-houses and post-offices were appropriated by the rebels.

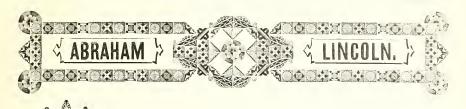

The energy of the rebels, and the imbecility of our Executive, were alike marvelous. The Nation looked on in agony, waiting for the slow weeks to glide away, and close the administration, so terrible in its weakness At length the long-looked-for hour of deliverance came, when Abraham Lincoln was to receive the scepter.

The administration of President Buchanan was certainly the most calamitous our country has experienced. His best friends cannot recall it with pleasure. And still more deplorable it is for his fame, that in that dreadful conflict which rolled its billows of flame and blood over our whole land, no word came from his lips to indicate his wish that our country's banner should triumph over the flag of the rebellion He died at his Wheatland retreat, June 1, 1868.

BRAHAM LINCOLN, the sixteenth President of the United States, was born in Hardin Co., Ky., Feb. 12, 1809. About the year 1780, a man by the name of Abraham Lincoln left Virginia with his family and moved into the then wilds of Kentucky. Only two years after this emigration, still a young man, while working one day in a field, was stealthily approached by an Indian and shot dead. His widow was left in extreme poverty with five little children, three boys and two girls. Thomas, the youngest of the boys, was four years of age at his father's death. This Thomas was the father of Abraham Lincoln, the President of the United States whose name must henceforth forever be enrolled with the most prominent in the annals of our world.

Of course no record has been kept of the life of one so lowly as Thomas Lincoln. He was among the poorest of the poor. His home was a wretched log-cabin; his food the coarsest and the meanest. Education he had none; he could never either read or write. As soon as he was able to do anything for himself, he was compelled to leave the cabin of his starving mother, and push out into the world, a friend-less, wandering boy, seeking work. He hired himself out, and thus spent the whole of his youth as a Aborer in the fields of others.

When twenty-eight years of age he built a logcabin of his own, and married Nancy Hanks, the daughter of another family of poor Kentucky emigrants, who had also come from Virginia. Their second child was Abraham Lincoln, the subject of this sketch. The mother of Abraham was a noble woman, gentle, loving, pensive, created to adorn a palace, doomed to toil and pine, and die in a hovel. "All that I am, or hope to be," exclaims the grateful son "I owe to my angel-mother."

When he was eight years of age, his father sold his cabin and small farm, and moved to Indiana Where two years later his mother died.

Abraham soon became the scribe of the uneducated community around him. He could not have had a better school than this to teach him to put thoughts into words. He also became an eager reader. The books he could obtain were few; but these he read and re-read until they were almost committed to memory.

As the years rolled on, the lot of this lowly family was the usual lot of humanity. There were joys and griefs, weddings and funerals. Abraham's sisted Sarah, to whom he was tenderly attached, was mar ried when a child of but fourteen years of age, and soon died. The family was gradually scattered. Mr Thomas Lincoln sold out his squatter's claim in 1830 and emigrated to Macon Co., Ill.

Abraham Lincoln was then twenty-one years of age. With vigorous hands he aided his father in rearing another log-cabin. Abraham worked diligently at this until he saw the family comfortably settled, and their small lot of enclosed prairie planted with corn, when he announced to his father his intention to leave home, and to go out into the world and seek his fortune. Little did he or his friends imagine how brilliant that fortune was to be. He saw the value of education and was intensely earnest to improve his mind to the utmost of his power. He saw the ruin which ardent spirits were causing, and became strictly temperate; refusing to allow a drop of intoxicating liquor to pass his lips. And he had read in God's word, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in ...;" and a profane expression he was never heard to utter. Religion he revered. His morals were pure, and he was uncontaminated by a single vice.

Young Abraham worked for a time as a hired labore, among the farmers. Then he went to Springfield, where he was employed in building a large flat-boat. In this he took a herd of swine, floated them down the Sangamon to the Illinois, and thence by the Mississippi to New Orleans. Whatever Abraham Lincoln undertook, he performed so faithfully as to give great satisfaction to his employers. In this adven ture his employers were so well pleased, that upon his return they placed a store and mill under his care.

In 1832, at the outbreak of the Black Hawk war, he enlisted and was chosen captain of a company. He returned to Sangamon County, and although only 23 years of age, was a candidate for the Legislature, but was defeated. He soon after received from Andrew Jackson the appointment of Postmaster of New Salem, His only post-office was his hat. All the letters he received he carried there ready to deliver to those he chanced to meet. He studied surveying, and soon made this his business. In 1834 he again became a candidate for the Legislature, and was elected Stuart, of Springfield, advised him to study law. He walked from New Salem to Springfield, borrowed of Mr. Stuart a load of books, carried them back and began his legal studies. When the Legislature assembled he trudged on foot with his pack on his back one hundred miles to Vandalia, then the capital. In 1836 he was re-elected to the Legislature. Here it was he first met Stephen A. Douglas. In 1839 he removed to Springfield and began the practice of law. His success with the jury was so great that he was soon engaged in almost every noted case in the circuit.

In 1854 the great discussion began between Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Douglas, on the slavery question. In the organization of the Republican party in Illinois, in 1856, he took an active part, and at once became one of the leaders in that party. Mr. Lincoln's speeches in opposition to Senator Douglas in the contest in 1858 for a seat in the Senate, form a most notable part of his history. The issue was on the slavery question, and he took the broad ground of he Declaration of Independence, that all men are created equal. Mr. Lincoln was defeated in this contest, but won a far higher prize.

The great Republican Convention met at Chicago on the 16th of June, 1860. The delegates and strangers who crowded the city amounted to twentyfive thousand. An immense building called "The Wigwam," was reared to accommodate the Convention. There were eleven candidates for whom votes were thrown. William H. Seward, a man whose fame as a statesman had long filled the land, was the most prominent. It was generally supposed he would be the nominee. Abraham Lincoln, however, received the nomination on the third ballot. Little did he then dream of the weary years of toil and care, and the bloody death, to which that nomination doomed him: and as little did he dream that he was to render services to his country, which would fix upon him the eyes of the whole civilized world, and which would give him a place in the affections of his countrymen, second only, if second, to that of Washington.

Election day came and Mr. Lincoln received 180 electoral votes out of 203 cast, and was, therefore, constitutionally elected President of the United States. The tirade of abuse that was poured upon this good and merciful man, especially by the slaveholders, was greater than upon any other man ever elected to this high position. In February, 1861, Mr. Lincoln started for Washington, stopping in all the large cities on his way making speeches. The whole journey was frought with much danger. Many of the Southern States had already seceded, and several attempts at assassination were afterwards brought to light. A gang in Baltimore had arranged, upon his arrival to "get up a row, and in the confusion to make sure of his death with revolvers and hand-grenades. A detective unravelled the plot. A secret and special train was provided to take him from Harrisburg, through Baltimore, at an unexpected hour of the night. The train started at half-past ten; and to prevent any possible communication on the part of the Secessionists with their Confederate gang in Baltimore, as soon as the train had started the telegraph-wires were cut. Mr. Lincoln reached Washington in safety and was inaugurated, although great anxiety was felt by all loyal people.

In the selection of his cabinet Mr. Lincoln gave to Mr. Seward the Department of State, and to other prominent opponents before the convention he gave important positions.

During no other administration have the duties devolving upon the President been so manifold, and the responsibilities so great, as those which fell to the lot of President Lincoln. Knowing this, and feeling his own weakness and inability to meet, and in his own strength to cope with, the difficulties, he learned early to seek Divine wisdom and guidance in determining his plans, and Divine comfort in all his trials, both personal and national. Contrary to his own estimate of himself, Mr. Lincoln was one of the most courageous of men. He went directly into the rebel capital just as the retreating foe was leaving, with no guard but a few sailors. From the time he had left Springfield, in 1861, however, plans had been made for his assassination, and he at last fell a victim to one of them. April 14, 1865, he, with Gen. Grant, was urgently invited to attend Fords' Theater. It was announced that they would be present. Grant, however, left the city. President Lincoln, feeling, with his characteristic kindliness of heart, that it would be a disappointment if he should fail them, very reluctantly consented to go. While listening to the play an actor by the name of John Wilkes Booth entered the box where the President and family were seated, and fired a bullet into his brains. He died the next morning at seven o'clock.

Never before, in the history of the world was a nation plunged into such deep grief by the death of its ruler. Strong men met in the streets and wept in speechless anguish. It is not too much to say that a nation was in tears. His was a life which will fitly become a model. His name as the savior of his country will live with that of Washington's, its father; his countrymen being unable to decide which is the greater.

NDREW JOHNSON, seventeenth President of the United The early life of States. Andrew Johnson contains but the record of poverty, destitution and friendlessness. He was born December 29, 1808, in Raleigh, N. C. His parents, belonging to the class of the "poor whites" of the South, were in such circumstances, that they could not confer even the slightest advantages of education upon their child. When Andrew was five years of age, his father accidentally tost his life while herorically endeavoring to save a friend from drowning. It nil ten years of age, Andrew was a ragged boy about the streets, supported by the labor of his mother, who obtained her living with her own hands.

He then, having never attended a school one day, and being unable either to read or write, was apprenticed to a tailor in his native town. A gentleman was in the habit of going to the tailor's shop occasionally, and reading to the boys at work there. He often read from the speeches of distinguished British statesmen. Andrew, who was endowed with a mind of more than ordinary native ability, became much interested in these speeches; his ambition was roused, and he was inspired with a strong desire to learn to read.

He accordingly applied himself to the alphabet, and with the assistance of some of his fellow-workmen, learned his letters. He then called upon the gentleman to borrow the book of speeches. The owner, pleased with his zeal, not only gave him the book but assisted him in learning to combine the letters into words. Under such difficulties he pressed of ward laboriously, spending usually ten or twelve hours at work in the shop, and then robbing himself of rest and recreation to devote such time as he could to reading.

He went to Tennessee in 1826, and located at Greenville, where he married a young lady who possessed some education. Under her instructions he learned to write and cipher. He became prominent in the village debating society, and a favorite with the students of Greenville College. In 1828, he or ganized a working man's party, which elected him alderman, and in 1830 elected him mayor, which position he held three years.

He now began to take a lively interest in political affairs; identifying himself with the working-classes, to which he belonged. In 1835, he was elected a member of the House of Representatives of Tennessee. He was then just twenty-seven years of age. He became a very active member of the legislature gave his adhesion to the Democratic party, and in 1840 "stumped the State," advocating Martin Tan Buren's claims to the Presidency, in opposition to thos, of Gen. Harrison. In this campaign he acquired much readiness as a speaker, and extended and increased his reputation.

In 1841, he was elected State Senator; in 1843, he was elected a member of Congress, and by successive elections, held that important post for ten years. In 1853, he was elected Governor of Tennessee, and was re-elected in 1855. In all these responsible positions, he discharged his duties with distinguished abi.

ity, and proved himself the warm friend of the working classes. In 1857, Mr. Johnson was elected United States Senator.

Years before, in 1845, he had warmly advocated the annexation of Texas, stating however, as his reason, that he thought this annexation would probably prove "to be the gateway out of which the sable sons of Africa are to pass from bondage to freedom, and become merged in a population congenial to themselves." In 1850, he also supported the compromise measures, the two essential features of which were, that the white people of the Territories should be permitted to decide for themselves whether they would enslave the colored people or not, and that the free States of the North should return to the South persons who attempted to escape from slavery.

Mr. Johnson was never ashamed of his lowly origin: on the contrary, he often took pride in avowing that he owed his distinction to his own exertions. "Sir," said he on the floor of the Senate, "I do not forget that I am a mechanic; neither do I forget that Adam was a tailor and sewed fig-leaves, and that our Savior was the son of a carpenter."

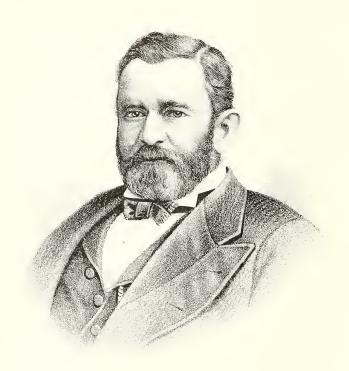

In the Charleston-Baltimore convention of 1860, he was the choice of the Tennessee Democrats for the Presidency. In 1861, when the purpose of the Southzrn Democracy became apparent, he took a decided stand in favor of the Union, and held that "slavery must be held subordinate to the Union at whatever cost." He returned to Tennessee, and repeatedly imperiled his own life to protect the Unionists of Tennesee. Tennessee having seceded from the Union, President Lincoln, on March 4th, 1862, appointed him Military Governor of the State, and he established the most stringent military rule. numerous proclamations attracted wide attention. In 1864, he was elected Vice-President of the United States, and upon the death of Mr. Lincoln, April 15, 1865, became President. In a speech two days later he said, "The American people must be taught, if they do not already feel, that treason is a crime and must be punished; that the Government will not always bear with its enemies; that it is strong not only to protect, but to punish. * * The people must understand that it (treason) is the blackest of crimes, and will surely be punished." Yet his whole administration, the history of which is so well known, was in utter inconsistency with, and the most violent opposition to, the principles laid down in that speech.

In his loose policy of reconstruction and general amnesty, he was opposed by Congress; and he characterized Congress as a new rebellion, and lawlessly defied it, in everything possible, to the utmost. In the beginning of 1868, on account of "high crimes and misdemeanors," the principal of which was the removal of Secretary Stanton, in violation of the Tenure of Office Act, articles of impeachment were preferred against him, and the trial began March 23.

It was very tedious, continuing for nearly three months. A test article of the impeachment was at length submitted to the court for its action. It was certain that as the court voted upon that article so would it vote upon all. Thirty-four voices pronounced the President guilty. As a two-thirds vote was necessary to his condemnation, he was pronounced acquitted, notwithstanding the great majority against him. The change of one vote from the not guilty side would have sustained the impeachment.

The President, for the remainder of his term, was but little regarded. He continued, though impotently, his conflict with Congress. His own party did not think it expedient to renominate him for the Presidency. The Nation rallied, with enthusiasm unparalleled since the days of Washington, around the name of Gen. Grant. Andrew Johnson was forgotten. The bullet of the assassin introduced him to the President's chair. Notwithstanding this, never was there presented to a man a better opportunity to immortalize his name, and to win the gratitude of a nation. He failed utterly. He retired to his home in Greenville, Tenn., taking no very active part in politics until 1875. On Jan. 26, after an exciting struggle, he was chosen by the Legislature of Tennessee, United States Senator in the forty-fourth Congress, and took his seat in that body, at the special session convened by President Grant, on the 5th of March. On the 27th of July, 1875, the ex-President made a visit to his daughter's home, near Carter Station, Tenn. When he started on his journey, he was apparently in his usual vigorous health, but on reaching the residence of his child the following day, was stricken with paralysis, rendering him unconscious. He rallied occasionally, but finally passed away at 2 A. M., July 31, aged sixty-seven years. His funeral was attended at Geenville, on the 3d of August, with every demonstration of respect.

LYSSES S. GRANT, the eighteenth President of the United States, was born on the 29th of April, 1822, of Christian parents, in a humble home, at Point Pleasant, on the banks of the Ohio. Shortly after his father moved to Georgetown, Brown Co., O. In this remote frontier hamlet, Ulysses received a common-school education. At the age of seventeen, in the year 1839, he entered the Military Academy at West Point. Here he was regarded as a solid, sensible young man of fair abilities, and of sturdy, honest character. He took respectable rank as a scholar. In June, 1843, he graduated, about the middle in his class, and was sent as lieutenant of infantry to one of the distant military posts in the Missouri Territory. Two years he past in these dreary solitudes, watching the vagabond and exasperating Indians.

The war with Mexico came. Lieut. Grant was sent with his regiment to Corpus Christi. His first battle was at Palo Alto. There was no chance here for the exhibition of either skill or heroism, nor at Resaca de la Palma, his second battle. At the battle of Monterey, his third engagement, it is said that he performed a signal service of daring and skillful horsemanship. His brigade had exhausted its ammunition. A messenger must be sent for more, along a route exposed to the bullets of the foe. Lieut. Grant, adopting an expedient learned of the Indians, grasped the mane of his horse, and hanging upon one side of the animal, ran the gauntlet in entire safety.

From Monterey he was sent, with the fourth infantry, to aid Gen. Scott, at the siege of Vera Cruz. In preparation for the march to the city of Mexico, he was appointed quartermaster of his regiment. At the battle of Molino del Rey, he was promoted to a first lieutenancy, and was brevetted captain at Chapultepec.

At the close of the Mexican War, Capt. Grant returned with his regiment to New York, and was again sent to one of the military posts on the frontier. The discovery of gold in California causing an immense tide of emigration to flow to the Pacific shores, Capt. Grant was sent with a battalion to Fort Dallas, in Oregon, for the protection of the interests of the immigrants. Life was wearisome in those wilds, Capt. Grant resigned his commission and returned to the States; and having married, entered upon the cultivation of a small farm near St. Louis, Mo. He had but little skill as a farmer. Finding his toil not remunerative, he turned to mercantile life, entering into the leather business, with a younger brother, at Galena, Ill. This was in the year 1860. As the tidings of the rebels firing on Fort Sumpter reached the ears of Capt. Grant in his counting-room, he said,-"Uncle Sam has educated me for the army; though I have served him through one war, I do not feel that I have yet repaid the debt. I am still ready to discharge my obligations. I shall therefore buckle on my sword and see Uncle Sam through this war too."

He went into the streets, raised a company of volunteers, and led them as their captain to Springfield, the capital of the State, where their services were offered to Gov. Yates. The Governor, impressed by the zeal and straightforward executive ability of Capt. Grant, gave him a desk in his office, to assist in the volunteer organization that was being formed in the State in behalf of the Government. On the 15th of June, 1861, Capt. Grant received a commission as Colonel of the Twenty-first Regiment of Illinois Volunteers. His merits as a West Point graduate, who had served for 15 years in the regular army, were such that he was soon promoted to the rank of Brigadier-General and was placed in command at Cairo. The rebels raised their banner at Paducah, near the mouth of the Tennessee River. Scarcely had its folds appeared in the breeze ere Gen. Grant was there. The rebels fled. Their banner fell, and the star and stripes were unfurled in its stead.

He entered the service with great determination and immediately began active duty. This was the beginning, and until the surrender of Lee at Richmond he was ever pushing the enemy with great vigor and effectiveness. At Belmont, a few days later, he surprised and routed the rebels, then at Fort Henry won another victory. Then came the brilliant fight at Fort Donelson. The nation was electrified by the victory, and the brave leader of the boys in blue was immediately made a Major-General, and the military listrict of Tennessee was assigned to him.

Like all great captains, Gen. Grant knew well how to secure the results of victory. He immediately pushed on to the enemies' lines. Then came the terrible battles of Pittsburg Landing, Corinth, and the siege of Vicksburg, where Gen. Pemberton made an unconditional surrender of the city with over thirty thousand men and one-hundred and seventy-two cannon. The fall of Vicksburg was by far the most severe blow which the rebels had thus far encountered, and opened up the Mississippi from Cairo to the Gulf.

Gen. Grant was next ordered to co-operate with Gen. Banks in a movement upon Texas, and proceeded to New Orleans, where he was thrown from his horse, and received severe injuries, from which he was laid up for months. He then rushed to the aid of Gens. Rosecrans and Thomas at Chattanooga, and by a wonderful series of strategic and technical measures put the Union Army in fighting condition. Then followed the bloody battles at Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge, in which the rebels were routed with great loss. This won for him unbounded praise in the North. On the 4th of February, 1864, Congress revived the grade of lieutenantgeneral, and the rank was conferred on Gen. Grant. He repaired to Washington to receive his credentials and enter upon the duties of his new office

Gen. Grant decided as soon as he took charge of the army to concentrate the widely-dispersed National troops for an attack upon Richmond, the nominal capital of the Rebellion, and endeavor there to destroy the rebel armies which would be promptly assembled from all quarters for its defence. The whole continent seemed to tremble under the tramp of these majestic armies, rushing to the decisive battle field. Steamers were crowded with troops. Railway trains were burdened with closely packed thousands. His plans were comprehensive and involved a series of campaigns, which were executed with remarkable energy and ability, and were consummated at the surrender of Lee, April 9, 1865.

The war was ended. The Union was saved. The almost unanimous voice of the Nation declared Gen. Grant to be the most prominent instrument in its salvation. The eminent services he had thus rendered the country brought him conspicuously forward as the Republican candidate for the Presidential chair.

At the Republican Convention held at Chicago. May 21, 1868, he was unanimously nominated for the Presidency, and at the autumn election received a majority of the popular vote, and 214 out of 294 electoral votes.

The National Convention of the Republican party which met at Philadelphia on the 5th of June, 1872, placed Gen. Grant in nomination for a second term by a unanimous vote. The selection was emphatically indorsed by the people five months later, 292 electoral votes being cast for him.

Soon after the close of his second term, Gen. Grant started upon his famous trip around the world. He visited almost every country of the civilized world, and was everywhere received with such ovations and demonstrations of respect and honor, private as well as public and official, as were never before bestowed upon any citizen of the United States.

He was the most prominent candidate before the Republican National Convention in 1880 for a renomination for President. He went to New York and embarked in the brokerage business under the firm name of Grant & Ward. The latter proved a villain, wrecked Grant's fortune, and for larceny was sent to the penitentiary. The General was attacked with cancer in the throat, but suffered in his stoic-like manner, never complaining. He was re-instated as General of the Army and retired by Congress. The cancer soon finished its deadly work, and July 23. 1885, the nation went in mourning over the death of the illustrious General.

UTHERFORD B. HAYES. the nineteenth President of the United States, was born in Delaware, O., Oct. 4, 1822, almost three months after the death of his father, Rutherford Hayes. His ancestry on both the paternal and maternal sides, was of the most honorable character. It can be traced, it is said, as far back as 1280, when Haves and Rutherford were two Scottish chieftains, fighting side by side with Baliol, William Wallace and Robert Bruce. Both families belonged to the nobility, owned extensive estates, and had a large following. Misfortane overcaking the family, George Hayes left Scotland in 1680, and settled in Windsor, Conn. His son George was born in Windsor, and remained there during his life. Daniel Hayes, son of the latter, marriage until his death in Simsbury, Conn. Ezekiel, son of Daniel, was born in 1724, and was a manufacturer of scythes at Bradford, Conn. Rutherford Hayes, son of Ezekiel and grandfather of President Hayes, was born in New Haven, in August, 1756. He was a farmer, blacksmith and tavern-keeper. He emigrated to Vermont at an urknown date, settling in Brattleboro, where he established a hotel. Here his son Rutherford Hayes the father of President Hayes, was born. He was married, in September, 1813, to Sopiia Birchard, of Wilmington, Vt., whose ancestors emigrated thither from Connecticut, they having been among the wealthiest and best families of Norwich. Her ancestry on the male side are traced back to 1635, to John Birchard, one of the principal founders of Norwich. Both of her grandfathers were soldiers in the Revolutionary War.

The father of President Hayes was an industrious frugal and opened-hearted man. He was of a mechanical turn, and could mend a plow, knit a stocking, or do almost anything else that he choose to undertake. He was a member of the Church, active in all the benevolent enterprises of the town, and conducted his business on Christian principles. After the close of the war of 1812, for reasons inexplicable to his neighbors, he resolved to emigrate to Ohio.

The journey from Vermont to Ohio in that day when there were no canals, steamers, nor railways, was a very serious affair. A tour of inspection was first made, occupying four months. Mr. Hayes deter mined to move to Delaware, where the family arrived in 1817. He died July 22, 1822, a victim of malarial fever, less than three months before the birth of the son, of whom we now write. Mrs. Hayes, in her sore bereavement, found the support she so much needed in her brother Sardis, who had been a member of the household from the day of its departure from Vermont, and in an orphan girl whom she had adopted some time before as an act of charity.

Mrs. Hayes at this period was very weak, and the subject of this sketch was so feeble at birth that he was not expected to live beyond a month or two at most. As the months went by he grew weaker and weaker, so that the neighbors were in the habit of inquiring from time to time "if Mrs. Hayes' baby died last night." On one occasion a neighbor, who was on familiar terms with the family, after alluding to the boy's big head, and the mother's assiduous care of him, said in a bantering way, "That's right! Stick to him. You have got him along so far, and I shouldn't wonder if he would really come to something yet."

"You need not laugh," said Mrs. Hayes. "You wait and see. You can't tell but I shall make him President of the United States yet." The boy lived, in spite of the universal predictions of his speedy death; and when, in 1825, his older brother was drowned, he became, if possible, still dearer to his mother.

The boy was seven years old before he went to school. His education, however, was not neglected. He probably learned as much from his mother and sister as he would have done at school. His sports were almost wholly within doors, his playmates being his sister and her associates. These circumstances tended, no doubt, to foster that gentleness of disposition, and that delicate consideration for the feelings of others, which are marked traits of his character.

His uncle Sardis Birchard took the deepest interest in his education; and as the boy's health had improved, and he was making good progress in his studies, he proposed to send him to college. His preparation commenced with a tutor at home; but he was afterwards sent for one year to a professor in the Wesleyan University, in Middletown, Conn. He entered Kenyon College in 1838, at the age of sixteen, and was graduated at the head of his class in 1842.

Immediately after his graduation he began the study of law in the office of Thomas Sparrow, Esq., in Columbus. Finding his opportunities for study in Columbus somewhat limited, he determined to enter the Law School at Cambridge, Mass., where he remained two years.

In 1845, after graduating at the Law School, he was admitted to the bar at Marietta, Ohio, and shortly afterward went into practice as an attorney-at-law with Ralph P. Buckland, of Fremont. Here he remained three years, acquiring but a limited practice, and apparently unambitious of distinction in his procession.

Vn 1849 he moved to Cincinnati, where his ambition found a new stimulus. For several years, however, his progress was slow. Two events, occurring at this period, had a powerful influence upon his subsequent life. One of these was his marrage with Miss Lucy Ware Webb, daughter of Dr. James Webb, of Chilicothe; the other was his introduction to the Cincinnati Literary Club, a body embracing among its members such men as Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase,

Gen. John Pope, Gov. Edward F. Noyes, and many others hardly less distinguished in after life. The marriage was a fortunate one in every respect, as everybody knows. Not one of all the wives of our Presidents was more universally admired, reverenced and beloved than was Mrs. Hayes, and no one did more than she to reflect honor upon American womanhood. The Literary Club brought Mr. Hayes into constant association with young men of high character and noble aims, and lured him to display the qualities so long hidden by his bashfulness and modesty.

In 1856 he was nominated to the office of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas; but he declined to accept the nomination. Two years later, the office of city solicitor becoming vacant, the City Council elected him for the unexpired term.

In 1861, when the Rebellion broke out, he was at the zenith of his professional Life. His rank at the bar was among the the first. But the news of the attack on Fort Sumpter found him eager to take in arms for the defense of his country.

His military record was bright and illustrious. In October, 1861, he was made Lieutenant-Colonel, and in August, 1862, promoted Colonel of the 79th Ohio regiment, but he refused to leave his old comrades and go among strangers. Subsequently, however, he was made Colonel of his old regiment. At the battle of South Mountain he received a wound, and while faint and bleeding displayed courage and fortitude that won admiration from all.

Col. Hayes was detached from his regiment, after his recovery, to act as Brigadier-General, and placed in command of the celebrated Kanawha division, and for gallant and meritorious services in the battles of Winchester, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek, he was promoted Brigadier-General. He was also brevetted Major-General, "for gallant and distinguished services during the campaigns of 1864, in West Virginia." In the course of his arduous services, four horses were shot from under him, and he was wounded four times.

In 1864, Gen. Hayes was elected to Congress, from the Second Ohio District, which had long been Democratic. He was not present during the campaign, and after his election was importuned to resign his commission in the army; but he finally declared, "I shall never come to Washington until I can come by the way of Richmond." He was re-elected in 1866.

In 1867, Gen Hayes was elected Governor of Ohio, over Hon. Allen G. Thurman, a popular Democrat. In 1869 was re-elected over George H. Pendleton. He was elected Governor for the third term in 1875.

In 1876 he was the standard bearer of the Republican Party in the Presidential contest, and after a hard long contest was chosen President, and was in augurated Monday, March 5, 1875. He served his full term, not, however, with satisfaction to his party, but his administration was an average one AMES A. GARFIELD, twentieth President of the United States, was born Nov. 19, 1831, in the woods of Orange, Cuyahoga Co., O His parents were Abram and Eliza (Ballou) Garfield, both of New England ancestry and from families well known in the early history of that section of our country, but had moved to the Western Reserve, in Ohio, early in its settlement.

The house in which James A. was born was not unlike the houses of poor Ohio farmers of that day. It as about 20 x 30 feet, built of logs, with the spaces beween the logs filled with clay. His father was a hard working farmer, and he soon had his fields cleared, an orchard planted, and a log barn built. The household comprised the father and mother and their four children-Mehetabel, Thomas, Mary and Tames. In May, 1823, the father, from a cold conracted in helping to put out a forest fire, died. At this time James was about eighteen months old, and Thomas about ten years old. No one, perhaps, can tell how much James was indebted to his brother's toil and self-sacrifice during the twenty years succeeding his father's death, but undoubtedly very much. He now lives in Michigan, and the two sisvers live in Solon, O., near their birthplace.

The early educational advantages young Garfield enjoyed were very limited, yet he made the most of them. He labored at farm work for others, did carpenter work, chopped wood, or did anything that would bring in a few dollars to aid his widowed mother in her struggles to keep the little family together. Nor was Gen. Garfield ever ashamed of his origin, and he never forgot the friends of his struggling childhood, youth and manhood, neither did they ever forget him. When in the highest seats of honor, the humblest friend of his boyhood was as kindly greeted as ever. The poorest laborer was sure of the sympathy of one who had known all the bitterness of want and the sweetness of bread earned by the sweat of the brow. He was ever the simple, plain, modest gentleman.

The highest ambition of young Garfield until he was about sixteen years old was to be a captain of a vessel on Lake Erie. He was anxious to go aboard a vessel, which his mother strongly opposed. She finally consented to his going to Cleveland, with the understanding, however, that he should try to obtain some other kind of employment. He walked all the way to Cleveland. This was his first visit to the city After making many applications for work, and trying to get aboard a lake vessel, and not meeting with success, he engaged as a driver for his cousin, Amos Letcher, on the Ohio & Pennsylvania Canal. Heremained at this work but a short time when he wenhome, and attended the seminary at Chester for about three years, when he entered Hiram and the Eclectic Institute, teaching a few terms of school in the meantime, and doing other work. This school was started by the Disciples of Christ in 1850, of which church he was then a member. He became janitor and bell-ringer in order to help pay his way He then became both teacher and pupil. He soon "exhausted Hiram" and needed more; hence, in the fall of 1854, he entered Williams College, from which he graduated in 1856, taking one of the highest hearors of his class. He afterwards returned to Hiram College as its President. As above stated, he early united with the Christian or Diciples Church at Hiram, and was ever after a devoted, zealous member, often preaching in its pulpit and places where he happened to be. Dr. Noah Porter, President of Yale College, says of him in reference to his religion:

"President Garfield was more than a man of strong moral and religious convictions. His whole history, from boyhood to the last, shows that duty to man and to God, and devotion to Christ and life and faith and spiritual commission were controlling springs of his being, and to a more than usual degree. In my judgment there is no more interesting feature of his character than his loyal allegiance to the body of Christians in which he was trained, and the fervent sympathy which he ever showed in their Christian communion. Not many of the few 'wise and mighty and noble who are called' show a similar loyalty to the less stately and cultured Christian communions in which they have been reared. Too often it is true that as they step upward in social and political significance they step upward from one degree to another in some of the many types of fashionable President Garfield adhered to the Christianity. church of his mother, the church in which he was trained, and in which he served as a pillar and an evangelist, and yet with the largest and most unsectarian charity for all 'who love our Lord in sincerity."

Mr. Garfield was united in marriage with Miss Lucretia Rudolph, Nov. 11, 1858, who proved herself worthy as the wife of one whom all the world loved and mourned. To them were born seven children, five of whom are still living, four boys and one girl.

Mr. Garfield made his first political speeches in 1856, in Hiram and the neighboring villages, and three years later he began to speak at county mass-meetings, and became the favorite speaker wherever he was. During this year he was elected to the Ohio Senate. He also began to study law at Cleveland, and in 1861 was admitted to the bar. The great Rebellion broke out in the early part of this year, and Mr. Garfield at once resolved to fight as he had talked, and enlisted to defend the old flag. He received his commission as Lieut.-Colonel of the Fortysecond Regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Aug. 14, 1861. He was immediately put into active service, and before he had ever seen a gun fired in action, was placed in command of four regiments of infantry and eight companies of cavalry, charged with the work of driving out of his native State the officer (Humphrey Marshall) reputed to be the ablest of those, not educated to war whom Kentucky had given to the Rebellion. This work was bravely and speedily accomplished, although against great odds. President Lincoln, on his success commissioned him Brigadier-General, Jan. 10, 1862; and as "he had been the youngest man in the Ohio Senate two years before, so now he was the youngest General in the army." He was with Gen. Buell's army at Shiloh, in its operations around Corinth and its march through Alabama. He was then detailed as a member of the General Court-Martial for the trial of Gen. Fitz-John Porter. He was then ordered to report to Gen. Rosecrans, and was assigned to the "Chief of Staff."

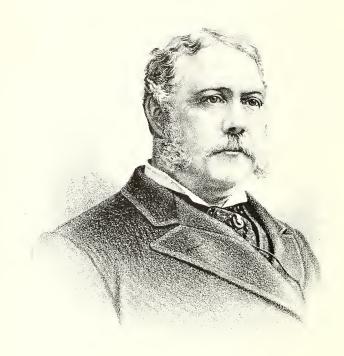

The military bistory of Gen. Garfield closed with his brilliant services at Chickamauga, where he won the stars of the Major-General.

Without an effort on his part Ger Garfield was elected to Congress in the fall of 1862 from the Nineteenth District of Ohio. This section of Ohio had been represented in Congress for sixty years mainly by two men-Elisha Whittlesey and Joshua R. Giddings. It was not without a struggle that he resigned his place in the army. At the time heentered Congress he was the youngest member in that body. There he remained by successive reelections until he was elected President in 1880. Of his labors in Congress Senator Hoar says: "Since the year 1864 you cannot think of a question which has been debated in Congress, or discussed before a tribunel of the American people, in regard to which you will not find, if you wish instruction, the argument on one side stated, in almost every instance better than by anybody else, in some speech made in the House of Representatives or on the hustings by Mr. Garfield."

Upon Jan. 14, 1880, Gen. Garfield was elected to the U. S. Senate, and on the eighth of June, of the same year, was nominated as the candidate of his party for President at the great Chicago Convention. He was elected in the following November, and on March 4, 1881, was inaugurated. Probably no administration ever opened its existence under brighter auspices than that of President Garfield, and every day it grew in favor with the people, and by the first of July he had completed all the initiatory and preliminary work of his administration and was preparing to leave the city to meet his friends at Williams College. While on his way and at the depot, in company with Secretary Blaine, a man stepped behind him, drew a revolver, and fired directly at his back. The President tottered and fell, and as he did so the assassin fired a second shot, the bullet cutting the left coat sleeve of his victim, but inflicting no further injury. It has been very truthfully said that this was "the shot that was heard round the world " Never before in the history of the Nation had anything occurred which so nearly froze the blood of the people for the moment, as this awful deed. He was smitten on the brightest, gladdest day of all his life, and was at the summit of his power and hope. For eighty days, all during the hot months of July and August, he lingered and suffered. He, however, remained master of himself till the last, and by his magnificent bearing was teaching the country and the world the noblest of human lessons-how to live grandly in the very clutch of death. Great in life, he was surpassingly great in death. He passed serenely away Sept. 19, 1883, at Elberon, N. J., on the very bank of the ocean, where he had been taken shortly previous. The world wept at his death, as it never had done on the death of any other man who had ever lived upon it. The murderer was duly tried, found guilty and executed, in one year after he committed the foul deed.

C. A. Hollin,

HESTER A. ARTHUR, twenty-first President of the United States was born in Franklin Courty, Vermont, on the fifth of October, 1830, and is the oldest of a family of two sons and five daughters. His father was the Rev. Dr. William Arthur, a Baptist & Lrgyman, who emigrated to this country from the county Antim, Ireland, in his 18th year, and died in 1875, in Newtonville, near Albany, after a long and successful ministry.

Young Arthur was educated at Union College, Schenectady, where he excelled in all his studies. After his graduation he taught school in Vermont for two years, and at the expiration of that time came to New York, with $500 in his pocket, and entered the office of ex-Judge E. D. Culver as student. After being admitted to the bar he formed a partnership with his intimate friend and room-mate, Henry D. Gardiner, with the intention of practicing in the West, and for three months they roamed about in the Western States in search of an eligible site, but in the end returned to New York, where they hung out their shingle, and entered upon a successful career almost from the start. General Arthur soon afterward married the daughter of Lieutenant Herndon, of the United States Navy, who was lost at sea. Congress voted a gold medal to his widow in recognition of the bravery he displayed on that occasion. Mrs. Arthur died shortly before Mr. Arthur's nomination to the Vice Presidency, leaving two children.

Gen. Arthur obtained considerable legal celebrity in his first great case, the famous Lemmon suit, brought to recover possession of eight slaves who had been declared free by Judge Paine, of the Superior Court of New York City. It was in 1852 that Jonathan Lemmon, of Virginia, went to New York with his slaves, intending to ship them to Texas, when they were discovered and freed. The Judge decided that they could not be held by the owner under the Fugitive Slave Law. A howl of rage went up from the South, and the Virginia Legislature authorized the Attorney General of that State to assist in an appeal, Wm, M. Evarts and Chester A. Arthur were employed to represent the People, and they won their case, which then went to the Supreme Court of the United States. Charles O'Conor here espoused the cause of the slave-holders, but he too was beaten by Messrs Evarts and Arthur, and a long step was taken toward the emancipation of the black race.

Another great service was rendered by General Arthur in the same cause in 1856. Lizzie Jennings, a respectable colored woman, was put off a Fourth Avenue car with violence after she had paid her fare. General Arthur sued on her behalf, and secured a verdict of $500 damages. The next day the company issued an order to admit colored persons to ride on their cars, and the other car companies quickly followed their example. Before that the Sixth Avenue Company ran a few special cars for colored persons and the other lines refused to let them ride at all.

General Arthur was a delegate to the Convention at Saratoga that founded the Republican party. Previous to the war he was Judge-Advocate of the Second Brigade of the State of New York, and Governor Morgan, of that State, appointed him Engineerin-Chief of his staff. In 1861, he was made Inspector General, and soon afterward became Quartermaster-General. In each of these offices he rendered great service to the Government during the war. At the end of Governor Morgan's term he resumed the practice of the law, forming a partnership with Mr. Ransom, and then Mr. Phelps, the District Attorney of New York, was added to the firm. The legal practice of this well-known firm was very large and lucrative, each of the gentlemen composing it were able lawyers, and possessed a splendid local reputation, if not indeed one of national extent.

He always took a leading part in State and city politics. He was appointed Collector of the Port of New York by President Grant, Nov. 21, 1872, to succeed Thomas Murphy, and held the office until July, 20, 1878, when he was succeeded by Collector Merritt.

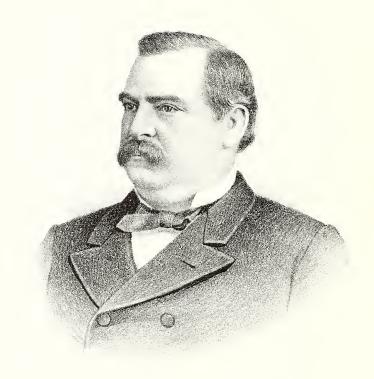

Mr. Arthur was nominated on the Presidential ticket, with Gen. James A. Garfield, at the famous National Republican Convention held at Chicago in Inne, 1880. This was perhaps the greatest political convention that ever assembled on the continent. It was composed of the Jeading politicians of the Republican party, all able men, and each stood firm and fought vigorously and with signal tenacity for their respective candidates that were before the convention for the nomination. Finally Gen. Garfield received the nomination for President and Gen. Arthur for Vice-President. The campaign which followed was one of the most animated known in the history of our country. Gen. Hancock, the standard-bearer of the Democratic party, was a popular man, and his party made a valiant fight for his election.

Finally the election came and the country's choice was Garfield and Arthur. They were inaugurated March 4, 1881, as President and Vice-President. A few months only had passed ere the newly chosen President was the victim of the assassin's bullet. Then came terrible weeks of suffering,—those moments of anxious suspense, when the hearts of all civilized nations were throbbing in unison, longing for the recovery of the noble, the good President. The remarkable patience that he manifested during those hours and weeks, and even months, of the most terrible sufering man has often been called upon to endure, was seemingly more than human. It was certainly Godlike. During all this period of deepest anxiety Mr. Arthur's every move was watched, and be it said to his credit that his every action displayed only an earnest desire that the suffering Garfield might recover, to serve the remainder of the term he had so auspiciously begun. Not a selfish feeling was manifested in deed or look of this man, even though the most honored position in the world was at any moment likely to fall to him.

At last God in his mercy relieved President Garfield from further suffering, and the world, as never before in its history over the death of any other man, wept at his bier. Then it became the duty of the Vice President to assume the responsibilities of the high office, and he took the oath in New York, Sept. 20, 1881. The position was an embarrassing one to him, made doubly so from the facts that all eyes were on him, anxious to know what he would do, what policy he would pursue, and who he would select as advisers. The duties of the office had been greatly neglected during the President's long illness, and many important measures were to be immediately decided by him; and still farther to embarrass him he did not fail to realize under what circumstances he became President, and knew the feelings of many on this point. Under these trying circumstances President Arthur took the reins of the Government in his own hands; and, as embarrassing as were the condition of affairs, he happily surprised the nation, acting so wisely that but few criticised his administration. He served the nation well and faithfully, until the close of his administration, March 4, 1885, and was a popular candidate before his party for a second term. His name was ably presented before the convention at Chicago, and was received with great favor, and doubtless but for the personal popularity of one of the opposing candidates, he would have been selected as the standard-bearer of his party for another campaign. He retired to private life carrying with him the best wishes of the American people, whom he had served in a manner satisfactory to them and with credit to himself.

Grover Gereland

TEPHEN GROVER CLEVE-LAND, the twenty-second President of the United States, was born in 1837, in the obscure town of Caldwell, Essex Co., N. J., and in a little two-and-a-half-story white house which is still standing, characteristically to mark the humble birth-place of one of America's great men in striking contrast with the Old World, where all men high in office must be high in origin and born in the cradle of wealth. When the subject of this sketch was three years of age, his father, who was a Presbyterian minister, with a large family and a small salary, moved, by way of the Hudson River and Eric Canal, to Fayetteville, in search of an increased income and a larger field of work. Fayetteville was then the most straggling of country villages, about five miles from Pompey Hill, where Governor Seymour was born.

At the last mentioned place young Grover commenced going to school in the "good, old-fashioned way," and presumably distinguished himself after the manner of all village boys, in doing the things he ought not to do. Such is the distinguishing trait of all geniuses and independent thinkers. When he arrived at the age of 14 years, he had outgrown the capacity of the village school and expressed a most emphatic desire to be sent to an academy. To this his father decidedly objected. Academies in those days cost money; besides, his father wanted him to become self-supporting by the quickest possible means, and this at that time in Fayetteville seemed to be a position in a country store, where his father and the large family on his hands had considerable influence. Grover was to be paid $50 for his services the first year, and if he proved trustworthy he was to receive $100 the second year. Here the lad commenced his career as salesman, and in two years he had earned so good a reputation for trustworthiness that his employers desired to retain him for an indefinite length of time. Otherwise he did not exhibit as yet any particular "flashes of genius" or eccentricities of talent. He was simply a good boy.

But instead of remaining with this firm in Fayette-ville, he went with the family in their removal to Clinton, where he had an opportunity of attending a high school. Here he industriously pursued his studies until the family removed with him to a point on Black River known as the "Holland Patent," a village of 500 or 600 people, 15 miles north of Utica, N. Y. At this place his father died, after preaching but three Sundays. This event broke up the family, and Grover set out for New York City to accept, at a small salary, the position of "under-teacher" in an asylum for the blind. He taught faithfully for two years, and although he obtained a good reputation in this capacity, he concluded that teaching was not his calling for life, and, reversing the traditional order, he left the city to seek his fortune. instead of soing to a city. He first thought of Cleveland, Ohio, as there was some charm in that name for him; but before proceeding to that place he went to Buffalo to ask the advice of his nucle, Lewis F. Allan, a noted stock-breeder of that place. The latter did not speak enthusiastically. "What is it you want to do, my boy?" he asked. "Well, sir, I want to study law," was the reply. "Good gracious!" remarked the old gentleman; "do you, indeed? What ever put that into your head? How much money have you got?" "Well, sir, to tell the truth, I haven't got ane."

After a long consultation, his uncle offered him a place temporarily as assistant herd-keeper, at $50 a year, while he could "look around." One day soon afterward he boldly walked into the office of Rogers, Bowen & Rogers, of Buffalo, and told them what he wanted. A number of young men were already engaged in the office, but Grover's persistency won, and he was finally permitted to come as an office boy and have the use of the law library, for the nominal sum of $3 or $4 a week. Out of this he had to pay for his board and washing. The walk to and from his uncle's was a long and rugged one; and, although the first winter was a memorably severe one, his shoes were out of repair and his overcoat-he had none-yet he was nevertheless prompt and regular. On the first day of his service here, his senior employer threw down a copy of Blackstone before him with a bang that made the dust fly, saving "That's where they all begin." A titter ran around the little circle of clerks and students, as they thought that was enough to scare young Grover out of his plans: but in due time he mastered that cumbersome volume. Then, as ever afterward, however, Mr. Cleveland exhibited a talent for executiveness rather than for chasing principles through all their metaphysical possibilities. "Let us quit talking and go and do it," was practically his motto.

The first public office to which Mr. Cleveland was elected was that of Sheriff of Erie Co., N. Y., in which Buffalo is situated; and in such capacity it fell to his duty to inflict capital publishment upon two caminals. In 1881 he was elected Mayor of the City of Buffalo, on the Democratic ticket, with especial reference to the bringing about certain reforms in the administration of the municipal affairs of that city In this office, as well as that of Sheriff, his performance of duty has generally been considered fair, with possibly a few exceptions which were ferreted out and magnified during the last Presidential campaign. As a specimen of his plain language in a veto message, we quote from one vetoing an iniqui tous street-cleaning contract: "This is a time for plain speech, and my objection to your action shall be plainly stated. I regard it as the culmination of a mos bare-faced, impudent and shameless scheme to betray the interests of the people and to worse than squander the people's money." The New York Sun afterward very highly commended Mr. Cleveland's administration as Mayor of Buffalo, and thereupon recommended him for Governor of the Empire State. To the latter office he was elected in 1882, and his administration of the affairs of State was generally satisfactory. The mistakes he made, if any, were made very public throughout the nation after he was nominated for President of the United States. For this high office he was nominated July 11, 1884, by the National Democratic Convention at Chicago, when other competitors were Thomas F. Bayard, Roswell P. Flower, Thomas A. Hendricks, Benjamin F. Butler, Allen G. Thurman, etc.; and he was elected by the people, by a majority of about a thousand, over the brilliant and long-tried Republican statesman, James G. Blaine. President Cleveland resigned his office as Governor of New York in January, 1885, in order to prepare for his duties as the Chief Executive of the United States, in which capacity his term commenced at noon on the 4th of March, 1885. For his Cabinet officers he selected the following gentlemen: For Secretary of State, Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware; Secretary of the Treasury, Daniel Manning, of New York; Secretary of War, William C. Endicott, of Massachusetts; Secretary of the Navy, William C. Whitney, of New York; Secretary of the Interior, L. Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi; Postmaster-General, William F. Vilas, of Wisconsin; Attorney-General, A. H. Garland, of Arkansas.

The silver question precipitated a controversy between those who were in favor of the continuance of silver coinage and those who were opposed, Mr. Cleveland answering for the latter, even before his inauguration.

NJAMIN HARRISON, the twenty-third President, is the descendant of one of the historical families of this country. The head of the family was a Major General Harrison, one of Oliver Cromwell's trusted follow-there. In the goaith of Cromy ers and fighters. In the zenith of Cromwell's power it became the duty of this Harrison to participate in the trial of Charles I, and afterward to sign the death warrant of the king. He subsequently paid for this with his life, being hung Oct. 13, 1660. His descendants came to America, and the next of the family that appears in history is Benjamin Harrison, of Virginia, great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, and after whom he was named. Benjamin Harrison was a member of the Continental Congress during the years 1774-5-6, and was one of the original signers of the Declaration of Independence. He was three times elected Governor of Virginia.

Gen William Henry Harrison, the son of the distinguished patriot of the Revolution, after a successful career as a soldier during the War of 1812, and with a clean record as Governor of the Northwestern Territory, was elected President of the United States in 1840. His career was cut short by death within one month after his inauguration.

President Harrison was born at North Bend, Hamilton Co., Ohio, Aug. 20, 1853 His life up to the time of his graduation by the Miami University. at Oxford, Ohio, was the uneventful one of a country lad of a family of small means. His father was able to give him a good education, and nothing more. He became engaged while at college to the daughter of Dr. Scott, Principal of a female school at Oxford. After graduating he determined to enter upon the study of the law. He went to Cin cinnati and then read law for two years. At the expiration of that time young Harrison received the only inheritance of his life; his aunt dying left him a lot valued at $800. He regarded this legacy as a fortune, and decided to get married at once, take this money and go to some Eastern town and begin the practice of law. He sold his lot, and with the money in his pocket, he started out with his young wife to fight for a place in the world. He decided to go to Indianapolis, which was even at that time a town of promise. He met with slight encouragement at first, making scarcely anything the first year. He worked diligently, applying himself closely to his calling, built up an extensive practice and took a leading rank in the legal profession. He is the father of two children.

In 1860 Mr. Harrison was nominated for the position of Supreme Court Reporter, and then began his experience as a stump speaker He canvassed the State thoroughly, and was elected by a handsome majority. In 1862 he raised the 17th Indiana Infantry, and was chosen its Colonel. His regiment was composed of the rawest of material, out Col. Harrison employed all his time at first mastering military tactics and drilling his men, when he therefore came to move toward the East with Sherman his regiment was one of the best drilled and organized in the army. At Resaca he especially distinguished himself, and for his bravery at Peachtree Creek he was made a Brigadier General, Gen. Hooker speaking of him in the most complimentary terms.

During the absence of Gen. Harrison in the field he Supreme Court declared the office of the Supreme Court Reporter vacant, and another person was elected to the position. From the time of leaving Indiana with his regiment until the fall of 1864 he had taken no leave of absence, but having been nominated that year for the same office, he got a thirty-day leave of absence, and during that time made a brilliant canvass of the State, and was elected for another term. He then started to rejoin Sherman, but on the way was stricken down with searlet lever, and after a most trying siege made his way to the front in time to participate in the closing beidents of the war

In 1868 Gen. Harrison declined re-election as reporter, and resumed the practice of law. In 1876 he was a candidate for Governor. Although deteated, the brilliant campaign he made won for him a National reputation, and he was much sought, especially in the East, to make speeches. In 1880, as usual, he took an active part in the campaign, and was elected to the United States Senate. Here he served six years, and was known as one of the shiest men, best lawyer and strongest debaters in that body. With the expiration of his Senatorial term he returned to the practice of his profession, becoming the head of one of the strongest firms in the State.

The political campaign of 1888 was one of the most memorable in the history of our country. The convention which assembled in Chicago in June and named Mr. Harrison as the chief standard bearer of the Republican party, was great in every partieular, and on this account, and the attitude it assumed upon the vital questions of the day, chief among which was the tariff, awoke a deep interest in the campaign throughout the Nation. Shortly after the nomination delegations began to visit Mr. Harrison at Indianapolis, his home. This movement became popular, and from all sections of the country societies, clubs and delegations journeyed thither to pay their respects to the distinguished statesman. The popularity of these was greatly increased on account of the remarkable speeches made by Mr. Harrison. He spoke daily all through the summer and autumn to these visiting delegations, and so varied, masterly and eloquent were his speeches that they at once placed him in the foremost rank of American orators and statesmen.

On account of his eloquence as a speaker and his power as a debater, he was called upon at an uncommonly early age to take part in the discussion of the great questions that then began to agitate the country. He was an uncompromising antislavery man, and was matched against some of the most eminent Democratic speakers of his State No man who felt the touch of his blade derired to be pitted with him again. With all his elogrence as an orator he never spoke for oratorical effect, but his words always went like bullets to the mark He is purely American in his ideas and is a spler did type of the American statesman. Gifted with quick perception, a logical mind and a ready tongue, he is one of the most distinguished impromptu speakers in the Nation. Many of these speeches sparkled with the rarest of eloquence and contained arguments of greatest weight. Many of his terse statements have already become aphorisms. Original in thought precise in logic, terse in statement, yet withal faultless in eloquence, he is recognized as the sound statesman and brillian orator or the day

Shadrach Bond-

HADRACH BOND, the first Governor of Illinois after its organization as a State, serving from 1818 to 1822, was born in Frederick County, Maryland, in the year 1773, and was raised a farmer on his father's plantation, receiving only a plain English education. He emigrated to this State in 1794, when it was a part of the "Northwest Territory," continuing in the vocation in which he had been brought up in his native State, in the "New Design," near Eagle Creek, in what is now Monroe County. He served several terms as a member of the General Assembly of Indiana Territory, after it was organized as such, and in 1812-14 he was a Delegate to the Twelfth and Thirteenth Congresses, taking his seat Dec. 3, 1812, and serving until Oct. 3, 1814. These were the times, the reader will recollect, when this Government had its last struggle with Great Britain. The year 1812 is also noted in the history of this State as that in which the first Territorial Legislature was held. It convened at Kaskaskia, Nov. 25, and adjourned Dec. 26, following.

While serving as Delegate to Congress, Mr. Bond was instrumental in procuring the right of pre-emption on the public domain. On the expiration of his term at Washington he was appointed Receiver of Public Moneys at Kaskaskia, then the capital of the Territory. In company with John G. Comyges, Thomas H. Harris, Charles Slade, Michael Jones, Warren Brown, Edward Humphries and Charles W Hunter, he became a proprietor of the site of the initial city of Cairo, which they hoped, from its favorable location at the junction of the two great rivers near the center of the Great West, would rapidly develop into a metropolis. To aid the enterprise, they obtained a special charter from the Legislature, incorporating both the City and the Bank of Cairo.

In 1818 Mr. Bond was elected the first Governor of the State of Illinois, being inaugurated Oct. 6 that year, which was several weeks before Illinois was actually admitted. The facts are these: In January, 1818, the Territorial Legislature sent a petition to Congress for the admission of Illinois as a State, Nathaniel Pope being then Delegate. The petition was granted, fixing the northern line of the State on the latitude of the southern extremity of Lake Michigan; but the bill was afterward so amended as to extend this line to its present latitude. In July a convention was called at Kaskaskia to draft a constitution, which, however, was not submitted to the people. By its provisions, supreme judges, pros ecuting attorneys, county and circuit judges, recorders and justices of the peace were all to be appointed by the Governor or elected by the Legislature. This constitution was accepted by Congress Dec. 30. At that time Illinois comprised but eleven counties, namely, Randolph, Madison, Gallatin, Johnson, Pope, Jackson, Crawford, Bond, Union, Washington and Franklin, the northern portion of the State being mainly in Madison County. Thus it appears that Mr. Bond was honored by the naming of a county before he was elected Governor. The present county of Bond is of small limitations, about 60 to 80 miles south of Springfield. For Lieutenant Governor the people chose Pierre Menard, a prominent and worthy Frenchman, after whom a county in this State is named. In this election there were no opposition candidates, as the popularity of these men had made their promotion to the chief offices of the State, even before the constitution was drafted, a foregone conclusion.

The principal points that excited the people in reference to political issues at this period were local or "internal improvements," as they were called, State banks, location of the capital, slavery and the personal characteristics of the proposed candidates. Mr. Bond represented the "Convention party," for introducing slavery into the State, supported by Elias Kent Kane, his Secretary of State, and John Mc-Lean, while Nathaniel Pope and John P. Cook led the anti-slavery element. The people, however, did not become very much excited over this issue until 1820, when the fimous Missouri Compromise was adopted by Congress, limiting slavery to the south of the parallel of 36° 30' except in Missouri. While this measure settled the great slavery controversy, so far as the average public sentiment was temporarily concerned, until 1854, when it was repealed under the leadership of Stephen A. Douglas, the issue as considered locally in this State was not decided until 1824, after a most furious campaign. (See sketch of Gov. Coles.) The ticket of 1818 was a compromise one, Bond representing (moderately) the pro-slavery sentiment and Menard the anti-slavery.

An awkward element in the State government under Gov. Bond's administration, was the imperfection of the State constitution. The Convention wished to have Elijah C. Berry for the first Auditor of Public Accounts, but, as it was believed that the new Governor would not appoint him to the office. the Convention declared in a schedule that "an auditor of public accounts, an attorney general and such other officers of the State as may be necessary, may be appointed by the General Assembly." The Constitution, as it stood, vested a very large appointing power in the Governor; but for the purpose of getting one man into office, a total change was made, and the power vested in the Legislature. Of this provision the Legislature took advantage, and declared that State's attorneys, canal commissioners, bank directors, etc., were all "officers of the State' and must therefore be appointed by itself independently of the Governor.

During Gov. Bond's administration a general law was passed for the incorporation of academies and towns, and one authorizing lotteries. The session of 1822 authorized the Governor to appoint commissioners, to act in conjunction with like commissioners appointed by the State of Indiana, to report on the practicability and expediency of improving the navigation of the Wabash River; also inland navigation generally. Many improvements were recommended, some of which have been feebly worked at even till the present day, those along the Wabash being of no value. Also, during Gov. Bond's term of office, the capital of the State was removed from Kaskaskia to Vandalia. In 1820 a law was passed by Congress authorizing this State to open a canal through the public lands. The State appointed commissioners to explore the route and prepare the necessary surveys and estimates, preparatory to its execution; but, being unable out of its own resources to defray the expenses of the undertaking, it was abandoned until some time after Congress made the grant of land for the purpose of its construction.

On the whole, Gov. Bond's administration was fairly good, not being open to severe criticism from any party. In 1824, two years after the expiration of his term of office, he was brought out as a candidate for Congress against the formidable John P. Cook, but received only 4,374 votes to 7,460 for the latter. Gov. Bond was no orator, but had made many fast friends by a judicious heatowment of his gubernatorial patronage, and these worked zealously for him in the campaign.

In 1827 ex-Gov. Bond was appointed by the Legislature, with Wm. P. McKee and Dr. Gershom Jayne, as Commissioners to locate a site for a penitentiary on the Mississippi at or near Alton.

Mr. Bond was of a benevolent and convivial disposition, a man of shrewd observation and clear appreciation of events. His person was erect, standing six feet in height, and after middle life became portly, weighing 200 pounds. His features were strongly masculine, complexion dark, hair jet and eyes hazel; was a favorite with the ladies. He died April 11, 1830, in peace and contentment

Edward Coles

DWARD COLES, second Governor of Illinois, 1823—
6, was born Dec. 15, 1786, in Albemarle Co., Va., on the old family estate called "Enniscorthy," on the Green Mountain. His father, John Coles, was a Colonel in the Revolutionary War. Having been fitted for college by private tutors, he was sent to Hampden Sidney, where he remained until the autumn of 1805, when he was removed to William and Mary College, at Williamsburg, Va. This college he left in the summer of 1807, a short time before the final and graduating examination. Among his classmates were Lieut. Gen. Scott, President John Tyler, Wnt. S. Archer, United States Senator from Virginia, and Justice Baldwin, of the United States Supreme Court. The President of the latter college, Bishop Madison, was a cousin of President James Madison, and that circumstance was the occasion of Mr. Coles becoming personally acquainted with the President and receiving a position as his private secretary, 1809–15.

The family of Coles was a prominent one in Virginia, and their mansion was the seat of the old-fashioned Virginian hospitaity. It was visited by such notables as Fatrick Henry, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, the Randolphs, Tazewell, Wirt, etc. At the age of 23, young Coles found himself heir to a plantation and a considerable number of slaves. Ever since his earlier college days his attention had been drawn to the question of slavery. He read everything on the subject that came in his way, and listened to lectures on the rights of man. The more he reflected upon the subject, the more impossible was it for him to reconcile the immortal declaration "that all men are born free and equal" with the practice of slave-holding. He resolved, therefore, to free his slaves the first opportunity, and even remove his residence to a free State. One reason which determined him to accept the appointment as private secretary to Mr. M dison was because he believed that through the acquaintances he could make at Washington he could better determine in what par, of the non-slaveholding portion of the Union he would prefer to settle.

The relations between Mr. Coles and President Madison, as well as Jefferson and other distinguished men, were of a very friendly character, arising from the similarity of their views on the question of slavery and their sympathy for each other in holding doctrines so much at variance with the prevailing sentiment in their own State.

In 1857, he resigned his secretaryship and spent a portion of the following autumn in exploring the Northwest Territory, for the purpose of finding a location and purchasing lands on which to settle his negroes. He traveled with a horse and buggy, with an extra man and horse for emergencies, through many parts of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, determining finally to settle in Illinois. At this time, however, a misunderstanding arose between our Government and Russia, and Mr. Coles was selected to repair to St. Petersburg on a special mission, bearing important papers concerning the matter at issue The result was a conviction of the Emperor (Alexander) of the error committed by his minister at Washington, and the consequent withdrawal of the the latter from the post. On his return, Mr. Coles visited other parts of Europe, especially Paris, where he was introduced to Gen. Lafayette.

In the spring of 1819, he removed with all his negroes from Virginia to Edwardsville, Ill., with the intention of giving them their liberty. He did not make known to them his intention until one beautiful morning in April, as they were descending the Ohio River. He lashed all the boats together and called all the negroes on deck and made them a short address, concluding his remarks by so expressing himself that by a turn of a sentence he proclaimed in the shortest and fullest manner that they were no longer slaves, but free as he was and were at liberty to proceed with him or go ashore at their pleasure. A description of the effect upon the negroes is best described in his own language:

"The effect upon them was electrical. They stared at me and then at each other, as if doubting the accuracy or reality of what they heard. In breathless silence they stood before me, unable to utter a word, but with countenances beaming with expression which no words could convey, and which no language can describe. As they began to see the truth of what they had heard, and realize their situation, there came on a kind of hysterical, giggling laugh. After a pause of intense and unutterable emotion, bathed in tears, and with tremulous voices, they gave vent to their gratitude and implored the blessing of God

Before landing he gave them a general certificate of freedom, and afterward conformed more particularly with the law of this State requiring that each individual should have a certificate. This act of Mr. Coles, all the more noble and heroic considering the overwhelming pro-slavery influences surrounding him, has challenged the admiration of every philanthropist of modern times.

March 5, 1819, President Monroe appointed Mr. Coles Registrar of the Land Office at Edwardsville. at that time one of the principal land offices in the State. While acting in this capacity and gaining many friends by his politeness and general intelligence, the greatest struggle that ever occurred in Illinois on the slavery question culminated in the furious contest characterizing the campaigns and elections of 1822-4. In the summer of 1823, when a new Governor was to be elected to succeed Mr. Bond, the pro-slavery element divided into factions, putting forward for the executive office Joseph Phillips, Chief Justice of the State, Thomas C. Browne and Gen. James B. Moore, of the State Militia. The anti-slavery element united upon Mr. Coles, and, after one of the most bitter campaigns, succeeded in electing him as Governor. His plurality over Judge Phillips was only 59 in a total vote of over 8,000. The Lieutenant Governor was elected by the slavery men. Mr. Coles' inauguration speech was marked by calmness, deliberation and such a wise expression of appropriate suggestions as to elicit the sanction of all judicious politicians. But he compromised not with evil. In his message to the Legislature, the seat of Government being then at Vandalia, he strongly urged the abrogation of the modified form of slavery which then existed in this State, contrary to the Ordinance of 1787. His position on this subject seems the more remarkable, when it is considered that he was a minority Governor, the population of Illinois being at that time almost exclusively from slave-holding States and by a large majority in favor of the perpetuation of that old relic of barbarism. The Legislature itself was, of course, a reflex of the popular sentiment, and a majority of them were led on by fiery men in denunciations of the conscientious Governor, and in curses loud and deep upon him and all his friends. Some of the public men, indeed, went so far as to head a sort of mob, or "shiveree" party, who visited the residence of the Governor and others at Vandalia and yelled and groaned and spat fire.

The Constitution, not establishing or permitting slavery in this State, was thought therefore to be defective by the slavery politicians, and they desired a State Convention to be elected, to devise and submit a new Constitution; and the dominant politics of the day was "Convention" and "anti-Convention." Both parties issued addresses to the people, Gov. Coles himself being the author of the address published by the latter party. This address revealed the schemes of the conspirators in a masterly nanner. It is difficult for us at this distant day to estimate the critical and extremely delicate situation in which the Governor was placed at that time.

Our hero maintained himself honorably and with supreme dignity throughout his administration, and in his honor a county in this State is named. He was truly a great man, and those who lived in this State during his sojourn here, like those who live at the base of the mountain, were too near to see and recognize the greatness that overshadowed them.

Mr. Coles was married Nov. 28, 1833, by Bishop De Lancey, to Miss Sally Logan Roberts, a daughter of Hugh Roberts, a descendant of Welsh ancestry, who came to this country with Wm. Penn in 1682.

After the expiration of his term of service, Gov. Coles continued his residence in Edwardsville, superintending his farm in the vicinity. He was fond of agriculture, and was the founder of the first agricultural society in the State. On account of ill health, however, and having no family to tie him down, he spent much of his time in Eastern cities. About 1832 he changed his residence to Philadelphia, where he died July 7, 1868, and is buried at Woodland, near that city.

Neman Edwards

INIAN EDWARDS, Governor from 1827 to 1830, was a son of Benjamin Edwards, and was born in Montgomery County, Maryland, in March, 1775. His domestic training was well fitted to give his mind strength, firmness and bocorable principles, and a good foundation was laid for the elevated character to which he afterwards attained. His parents were Baptists, and very strict in their moral principles. His education in early youth was in company with and partly under the tuition of Hon. Wm. Wirt, whom his father patronized, and who was more than two years older. An intimacy was thus formed between them which was lasting for life. He was further educated at Dickinson College, at Carlisle, Pa. He next commenced the study of law, but before completing his course he moved to Nelson County, Ky., to open a farm for his father and to purchase homes and locate lands for his brothers and sisters. Here he fell in the company of dissolute companions, and for several years led the life of a spendthrift. He was, however, elected to the Legislature of Kentucky as the Representative of Nelson County before he was 21 years of age, and was relected by an almost unanimous vote.

In 1798 he was licensed to practice law, and the following year was admitted to the Courts of Tennessee. About this time he left Nelson County for Russellville, in Logan County, broke away from his dissolute companions, commenced a reformation and devoted himself to severe and laborious study. He then began to rise rapidly in his profession, and soon became an eminent lawyer, and inside of four years he filled in succession the offices of Presiding Judge of the General Court, Circuit Judge, fourth Judge of the Court of Appeals and Chief Justice of the State, -all before he was 32 years of age! In addition, in 1802, he received a commission as Major of a battalion of Kentucky militia, and in 1804 was chosen a Presidential Elector, on the Jefferson and Clinton ticket. In 1806 he was a candidate for Congress, but withdrew on being promoted to the Court of Appeals.

Illinois was organized as a separate Territory in the spring of 1809, when Mr. Edwards, then Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals in Kentucky, received from President Madison the appointment as Governor of the new Territory, his commission bearing date April 24, 1809. Edwards arrived at Kaskaskia in June, and on the 11th of that month took the oath of office. At the same time he was appointed Superintendent of the United States Saline, this Government interest then developing into considerable proportions in Southern Illinois. Although during the first three years of his administration he had the power to make new counties and appoint all the officers, yet he always allowed the people of each county, by an informal vote, to select their own officers, both civil and military. The noted John J. Crittenden, afterward United States Senator from Kentucky, was appointed by Gev. Edwards to the office of Attorney General of the Territory, which office was accepted for a short time only.

The Indians in 1810 committing sundry depredations in the Territory, crossing the Mississippi from the Territory of Louisiana, a long correspondence followed between the respective Governors concerning the remedies, which ended in a council with the savages at Peoria in 1812, and a fresh interpretation of the treaties. Peoria was depopulated by these depredations, and was not re-settled for many years afterward.

As Gov. Edwards' term of office expired by law in 1812, he was re-appointed for another term of three years, and again in 1815 for a third term, serving until the organization of the State in the fall of 1818 and the inauguration of Gov. Bond. At this time ex-Gov. Edwards was sent to the United States Senate, his colleague being Jesse B. Thomas. As Senator, Mr. Edwards took a conspicuous part, and acquitted himself honorably in all the measures that came up in that body, being well posted, an able denater and a conscientious statesman. He thought seriously of resigning this situation in 1821, but was persuaded by his old friend, Wm. Wirt, and others to continue in office, which he did to the end of the term.

He was then appointed Minister to Mexico by President Monroe. About this time, it appears that Mr. Edwards saw suspicious signs in the conduct of Wm. H. Crawford, Secretary of the United States Treasury, and an ambitious candidate for the Presidency, and being implicated by the latter in some of his statements, he resigned his Mexican mission in order fully to investigate the charges. The result was the exculpation of Mr. Edwards.

Pro-slavery regulations, often termed "Black Laws," disgraced the statute books of both the Territory and the State of Illinois during the whole of his career in this commonwealth, and Mr. Edwards always maintained the doctrines of freedom, and was an important actor in the great struggle which ended in a victory for his party in 1824.

In 1826 7 the Winnebago and other Indians committed some depredations in the northern part of the State, and the white settlers, who desired the lands and wished to exasperate the savages into an evacuation of the country, magnified the misdemeanors of the aborigines and thereby produced a hostility between the races so great as to precipitate a little war, known in history as the "Winnebago War." A few chases and skirmishes were had, when Gen. Atkinson succeeded in capturing Red Bird, the Indian chief, and putting him to death, thus ending the contest, at least until the troubles commenced which ended in the "Black Hawk War" of 1832. In the interpretation of treaties and execution of their provisions Gov. Edwards had much vexatious work to do. The Indians kept themselves generally within the jurisdiction of Michigan Territory, and its Governor, Lewis Cass, was at a point so remote that ready correspondence with him was difficult or impossible. Gov. Edwards' administration, however, in regard to the protection of the Illinois frontier, seems to have been very efficient and satisfactory.

For a considerable portion of his time after his removal to Illinois, Gov. Edwards resided upon his farm near Kaskaskia, which he had well stocked with horses, cattle and sheep from Kentucky, also with fruit-trees, grape-vines and shrubbery. He established saw and grist-mills, and engaged extensively in mercantile business, having no less than eight or ten stores in this State and Missouri. Notwithstanding the arduous duties of his office, he nearly always purchased the goods himself with which to supply the stores. Although not a regular practitioner of medicine, he studied the healing art to a considerable extent, and took great pleasure in prescribing for, and taking care of, the sick, generally without charge. He was also liberal to the poor, several widows and ministers of the gospel becoming indebted to him even for their homes.

He married Miss Elvira Lane, of Maryland, in 1803, and they became the affectionate parents of several children, one of whom, especially, is welf known to the people of the "Prairie State," namely, Ninian Wirt Edwards, once the Superintendent of Public Instruction and still a resident of Springfield Gov. Edwards resided at and in the vicinity of Kaskaskia from 1809 to 1818; in Edwardsville (named after him) from that time to 1824; and from the latter date at Belleville, St. Clair County, until his death, July 20, 1833, of Asiatic cholera. Edwards County is also named in his honor.

John Anynold

HN REYNOLDS, Governor 1831-4, was born in Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, Feb. 26, 1788. His father, Robert Reynolds and his mother, nee Margaret Moore, were both natives of Ireland, from which country they emigrated to the United States in 1785, landing at Philadelphia. The senior Reynolds entertained an undying hostility to the British Government. When the subject of this sketch was about six months old, his parents emigrated with him to Tennessee, where many of their relatives had already located, at the base of the Copper Ridge Mountain, about 14 miles northeast of the present city of Knoxville. There they were exposed to Indian depredations, and were much molested by them. In 1794 they moved into the interior of the State. They were poor, and brought up their children to habits of manual industry.

In 1800 the family removed to Kaskaskia, Ill., with eight horses and two wagons, encountering many nardships on the way. Here young Reynolds passed the roost of his childhood, while his character began to develop, the most prominent traits of which were ambition and energy. He also adopted the principle and practice of total abstinence from intoxicating liquors. In 1807 the family made another removal, this time to the "Goshen Settlement," at the foot of the Mississippi bluffs three or four miles southwest of Edwardsville.

On arriving at his 20th year, Mr. Reynolds, seeing that he must look about for his own livelihood and not yet having determined what calling to pursue, concluded first to attend college, and he accordingly went to such an institution of learning, near Knoxville, Tenn., where he had relatives. Imagine his diffidence, when, after passing the first 20 years of his life without ever having seen a carpet, a papered wall or a Windsor chair, and never having lived in a shingle-roofed house, he suddenly ushered himself into the society of the wealthy in the vicinity of Knoxville! He attended college nearly two years, going through the principal Latin authors; but it seems that he, like the rest of the world in modern times, had but very little use for his Latin in after life. He always failed, indeed, to exhibit any good degree of literary discipline. He commenced the study of law in Knoxville, but a pulmonary trouble came on and compelled him to change his mode of life. Accordingly he returned home and recuperated, and in 1812 resumed his college and law studies at Knoxville. In the fall of 1812 he was admitted to the Bar at Kaskaskia. About this time he also learned the French language, which he practiced with pleasure in conversation with his family for many years. He regarded this language as being superior to all others for social intercourse.

From his services in the West, in the war of 1812, he obtained the sobriquet of the "Old Ranger." He was Orderly Sergeant, then Judge Advocate.

Mr. Reynolds opened his first law office in the winter and spring of 1814, in the French village of Cahokia, then the capital of St. Clair County.

In the fall of 1818 he was elected an Associate Justice upon the Supreme Bench by the General Assembly. In 1825 he entered more earnestly than ever into the practice of law, and the very next year was elected a member of the Legislature, where he acted independently of all cliques and private interests. In 1828 the Whigs and Democrats were for the first time distinctively organized as such in Illinois, and the usual party bitterness grew up and raged on all sides, while Mr. Reynolds preserved a indicial calmness and moderation. The real animus of the campaign was "Jackson" and "anti-Jackson," 'he former party carrying the State.

In August, 1830, Mr. Reynolds was elected Governor, amid great excitement. Installed in office, he did all within his power to advance the cause of education, internal improvements, the Illinois & Michigan Canal, the harbor at Chicago, settling the country, etc.; also recommended the winding up of the State Bank, as its affairs had become dangerously complicated. In his national politics, he was a moderate supporter of General Jackson. But the most celebrated event of his gubernateriai administration was the Black Hawk War, which occurred in 1832. He called out the militia and prosecuted the contest with commendable diligence, appearing in person on the battle-grounds during the most critical periods. He was recognized by the President as Major-General, and authorized by him to make treaties with the Indians. By the assistance of the general Government the war was terminated without much bloodshed, but after many serious fights. This war, as well as everything else, was materially retarded by the occurrence of Asiatic cholera in the West. This was its first appearance here, and was the next event in prominence during Gov. Reynolds' term.

South Carolina nullification coming up at this time, t was heartily condemned by both President Jackson and Gov. Reynolds, who took precisely the same grounds as the Unionists in the last war.

On the termination of his gubernatorial term in .834, Gov. Reynolds was elected a Member of Congress, still coesidering himself a backwoodsman, as re had scarcety been outside of the State since he became of age, and had spent nearly all his youthful days in the wildest region of the frontier. His first move in Congress was to adopt a resolution that in all elections made by the House for officers the votes should be given viva voce, each member in his place naming aloud the person for whom he votes. This created considerable heated discussion, but was essentially adopted, and remained the controlling principle for many years. The ex-Governor was scarcely absent from his seat a single day, during eight sessions of Congress, covering a period of seven years, and he never vacillated in a party vote; but he failed to get the Democratic party to foster his "National Road " scheme. He says, in "My Own Times" (a large autobiography he published), that it was only by rigid economy that he avoided insolvency while in Washington. During his sojourn in that city he was married, to a lady of the place.

In 1837, while out of Congress, and in company with a few others, he built the first railroad in the Mississippi Valley, namely, one about six miles long, leading from his coal mine in the Mississippi bluff to the bank of the river opposite St. Louis. Having not the means to purchase a locomotive, they operated it by horse-power. The next spring, however, the company sold out, at great sacrifice.

In 1839 the ex-Governor was appointed one of the Canal Commissioners, and authorized to borrow money to prosecute the enterprise. Accordingly, he repaired to Philadelphia and succeeding in obtaining a million dollars, which, however, was only a fourth of what was wanted. The same year he and his wife made at our of Europe. This year, also, Mr. Reynolds had the rather awkward little responsibility of introducing to President Van Buren the noted Mormon Prophet, Joseph Smith, as a "Latter-Day

In 1846 Gov. Reynolds was elected a member of the Legislature from St. Clair County, more particu larly for the purpose of obtaining a feasible charter for a macadamized road from Belleville to St. Louis, a distance of nearly 14 miles. This was immediately built, and was the first road of the kind in the State. He was again elected to the Legislature in 1852, when he was chosen Speaker of the House. In 1860, aged and infirm, he attended the National Democratic Convention at Charleston, S. C, as an anti-Douglas Delegate, where he received more attention from the Southern Delegates than any other member. He supported Breckenridge for the Presidency. After the October elections foreshadowed the success of Lincoln, he published an address urging the Democrats to rally to the support of Douglas. Immediately preceding and during the late war, his correspondence evinced a clear sympathy for the Southern secession, and about the first of March, 1861, he urged upon the Buchanan officials the seizure of the treasure and arms in the custom-house and arsenal at St. Louis. Mr. Reynolds was a rather talkative man, and apt in all the Western phrases and catchwords that ever gained currency, besides many cunning and odd ones of his own manufacture.

He was married twice, but had no children. He died in Belleville, in May, 1865, just after the close of the war.

Musel D. Ewing

Governor of Illinois Nov. 3 to 17, 1834, was a native of Kentucky, and probably of Scotch ancestry. He had a fine education, was a gentleman of polished manners and refined sentiment. In 1830 John Reynolds was elected Governor of the State, and Zadok Casey Lieutenant Governor, and for the principal events that followed, and the characteristics of the times, see sketch of Gov. Reynolds. The first we see in history concerning Mr. Ewing, informs us that he was a Receiver of Public Moreys at Vandalia soon after the organization of this State, and that the public moneys in his hands were deposited in various banks, as they are usually at the present day. In 1823 the State Bank was obbed, by which disaster Mr. Ewing lost a thousand-dollar deposit.

The subject of this sketch had a commission as colonel in the Black Hawk War, and in emergencies ne acted also as Major. In the summer of 1832, when twas rumored among the whites that Black Hawk and his men had encamped somewhere on Rock River, Gen. Henry was sent on a tour of reconnoisance, and with orders to drive the Indians from the State. After some opposition from his subordinate officers, Henry resolved to proceed up Rock River in search of the enemy. On the 19th of July, early in the morning, five baggage wagons, camp equipage and all heavy and cumbersome articles were piled up and left, so that the army might make speedy and forced marches. For some miles the travel was exceedingly bad, crossing swamps and the worst thickets; but the large, fresh trail gave life and animation to the Americans. Gen. Dodge and Col. Ewing were both acting as Majors, and composed the "spy corps" or vanguard of the army. It is supposed the army marched nearly 50 miles this day, and the Indian trail they followed became fresher, and was strewed with much property and trinkets of the red-skins that they had lost or thrown away to hasten their march. During the following night there was a terrific thunder-storm, and the soldiery, with all their appurtenances, were thoroughly drenched.

On approaching nearer the Indians the next day. Gen. Dodge and Major Ewing, each commanding a battalion of men, were placed in front to bring on the battle, but the savages were not overtaken this day Forced marches were continued until they reached. Wisconsin River, where a veritable battle ensued, resulting in the death of about 68 of Black Hawk's men. The next day they continued the chase, and as soon as he discovered the trail of the Indians leading toward the Mississippi, Mai, Ewing formed his battalion in order of battle and awaited the order of Gen. Henry. The latter soon appeared on the ground and ordered a charge, which directly resulted in chasing the red warriors across the great river. Maj. Ewing and his command proved particularly efficient in war, as it seems they were the chief actors in driving the main body of the Sacs and Foxes, including Black Hawk himself, across the Mississippi, while Gen. Atkinson, commander-in-chief of the expedition, with a body of the army, was hunting for them in another direction.

In the above affair Maj. Ewing is often referred to as a "General," which title he had derived from his connection with the militia.

It was in the latter part of the same year (1832) that Lieutenant Governor Casey was elected to Cougress and Gen. Ewing, who had been elected to the Senate, was chosen to preside over that body. At the August election of 1834, Gov. Reynolds was also elected to Congress, more than a year ahead of the time at which he could actually take his seat, as was then the law. His predecessor, Charles Slade, had just died of Asiatic cholera, soon after the election, and Gov. Reynolds was chosen to serve out his unexpired term. Accordingly he set out for Washington in November of that year to take his seat in Congress, and Gen. Ewing, by virtue of his office as President of the Senate, became Governor of the State of Illinois, his term covering only a period of 15 days, namely, from the 3d to the 17th days, inclusive, of November. On the 17th the Legislature met, and Gov. Ewing transmitted to that body his message, giving a statement of the condition of the affairs of the State at that time, and urging a continnance of the policy adopted by his predecessor; and on the same day Governor elect Joseph Duncan was sworn into office, thus relieving Mr. Ewing from the responsible situation. This is the only time that such a juncture has happened in the history of Illinois.

On the 29th of December, 1835, Gen. Ewing was elected a United States Senator to serve out the unexpired term of Elias Kent Kane, deceased. The latter gentleman was a very prominent figure in the early politics of Illinois, and a county in this State is named in his honor. The election of Gen. Ewing to the Senate was a protracted struggle. His competitors were James Semple, who afterwards held several important offices in this State, and Richard M. Young, afterward a United States Senator and a Supreme Judge and a man of vast influence. On the first ballot Mr. Semple had 25 votes, Young 19 and Ewing 18. On the eighth ballot Young was dropped; the ninth and tenth stood a tie; but on the 12th Ewing received 40, to Semple 37, and was accordingly declared elected. In 1837 Mr. Ewing received some votes for a continuance of his term in Congress, when Mr. Young, just referred to, was elected. In 1842 Mr. Ewing was elected State Auditor on the ticket with Gov. Ford.

Gen. Ewing was a gentleman of culture, a lawyer by profession, and was much in public life. In person he was above medium beight and of heavy build, with anburn hair, blue eyes, large-sized head and short face. He was genial, social, friendly and affable, with fair talent, though of no high degree of originality. He died March 25, 1846.

Joseph Duncan

OSEPH DUNCAN, Governor 1834-8, was born at Paris, Ky., Feb. 23, 1794. At the tender age of 19 years he enlisted in the war against Great Britain, and as a soldier he acquitted himself with credit. He was an Ensign under the dauntless Croghan at Lower Sandusky, or Fort Stephenson. In Illinois he first appeared in a public capacity as Major-General of the Militia, a position which his military fame had procured him. Subsequently he became a State Senator from Jackson County, and is honorably mentioned for introducing the first bill providing for a free-school system. In 1826, when the redoubtable John P. Cook, who had previously beaten such men as John McLean, Elias Kent Kane and ex-Gov. Bond, came up for the fourth time for Congress, Mr. Duncan was brought forward against him by his friends, greatly to the surprise of all the politicians. As yet he was but little known in the State. He was an original Jackson man at that time, being attached to his political fortune in admiration of the glory of his military achievements. His chances of success against Cook were generally regarded as hopeless. but he entered upon the campaign undaunted. His speeches, though short and devoid of ornament, were full of good sense. He made a diligent canvass of the State, Mr. Cook being hindered by the condition of his health. The most that was expected of Mr. Duncan, under the circumstances, was that he would obtain a respectable vote, but without defeating Mr Cook. The result of the campaign, however, was a source of surprise and amazement to both friends and foes, as Mr. Duncan came out 641 votes ahead! He received 6,321 votes, and Mr. Cook 5,680. Until this denouement, the violence of party feeling smoldering in the breasts of the people on account of the defeat of Jackson, was not duly appreciated. Aside from the great convention struggle of 1824, no other than mere local and personal considerations had ever before controlled an election in Illinois.

From the above date Mr. Duncan retained his seat in Congress until his election as Governor in August, 1834. The first and bloodless year of the Black Hawk War he was appointed by Gov. Revnolds to the position of Brigadier-General of the volunteers, and he conducted his brigade to Rock Island. But he was absent from the State, in Washington, during the gubernatorial campaign, and did not personally participate in it, but addressed circulars to his constituents. His election was, indeed, attributed to the circumstance of his absence, because his estrangement from Jackson, formerly his political idol, and also from the Democracy, largely in ascendency in the State, was complete; but while his defection was well known to his Whig friends. and even to the leading Jackson men of this State. the latter were unable to carry conviction of that fact to the masses, as mail and newspaper facilities at that day were far inferior to those of the present time. Of course the Governor was much abused afterward by the fossilized Jackson men who regarded party ties and affiliations as above all other issues that could arise; but he was doubtless sincere in his opposition to the old hero, as the latter nad vetoed several important western measures which were dear to Mr. Duncan. In his inaugural message he threw off the mask and took a bold stand against the course of the President. The measures the recommended in his message, however, were so desirable that the Legislature, although by a large majority consisting of Jackson men, could not refrain from endorsing them. These measures related mainly to larks and internal improvements.

It was while Mr. Duncan was Governor that the people of Illinois went whirling on with bank and internal improvement schemes that well nigh bank-rupted the State. The hard times of 1837 came on, and the disasters that attended the inauguration of these plans and the operation of the banks were mutually charged upon the two political parties. Had any one man autocratic power to introduce and carry on any one of these measures, he would probably have succeeded to the satisfaction of the public; but as many jealous men had hold of the same plow handle, no success followed and each blamed the other for the failure. In this great vortex Gov. Duncan was carried along, suffering the like derogation of character with his fellow citizens.

At the height of the excitement the Legislature "provided for "railroads from Galena to Cairo, Alton to Shawneetown, Alton to Mount Carmel, Alton to the eastern boundary of the State in the direction of Terre Haute, Quincy via Springfield to the Wabash, Bloomington to Pekin, and Peoria to Warsaw,-in all about 1,300 miles of road. It also provided for the improvement of the navigation of the Kaskaskia, Illinois, Great and Little Wabash and Rock Rivers; also as a placebo, $200,000 in money were to be disributed to the various counties wherein no improvements were ordered to be made as above. The estimate for the expenses for all these projects was blaced at a little over $10,000,000, which was not more than half enough! That would now be equal to saddling upon the State a debt of $225,000,000! It was sufficient to bankrupt the State several times over, even counting all the possible benefits.

One of the most exciting events that ever occurred in this fair State was the murder of Elijah P. Lovejoy in the fall of 1837, at Alton, during Mr. Duncan's term as Governor. Lovejoy was an "Abolitonist," editing the Observer at that place, and the proslavery slums there formed themselves into a mob, and after destroying successively three presses belonging to Mr. Lovejoy, surrounded the warehouse where the fourth press was stored away, endeavoring to destroy it, and where Lovejoy and his friends were entrenching themselves, and shot and killed the brave reformer!

About this time, also, the question of removing the State capital again came up, as the 20 years' limit for its existence at 'Vandalia was drawing to a close. There was, of course, considerable excitement over the matter, the two main points competing for it being Springfield and Peoria. The jealousy of the latter place is not even yet, 45 years afterward, fully allayed.

Gov. Duncan's term expired in 1838. In 1842 he was again proposed as a candidate for the Executive chair, this time by the Whig party, against Adam W. Snyder, of St. Clair County, the nominee of the Democrats. Charles W. Hunter was a third candidate for the same position. Mr. Snyder, however, died before the campaign had advanced very far, and his party substituted Thomas Ford, who was elected receiving 46,901 votes, to 38,584 for Duncan, and 909 for Hunter. The cause of Democratic success at this time is mainly attributed to the temporary support of the Mormons which they enjoyed, and the want of any knowledge, on the part of the masses, that Mr. Ford was opposed to any given policy entertained in the respective localities.

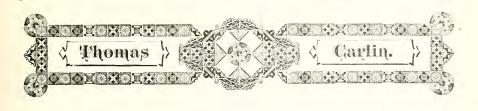

Gov. Duncan was a man of rather limited education, but with naturally fine abilities he profited greatly by his various public services, and gathered a store of knowledge regarding public affairs which served him a ready purpose. He possessed a clear judgment, decision, confidence in himself and moral courage to carry out his convictions of right. In his deportment he was well adapted to gain the admiration of the people. His intercourse with them was both affable and dignified. His portrait at the Governor's mansion, from which the accompanying was made, represents him as having a swarthy complexion, high check bones, broad forehead, piercing black eyes and straight black hair.

He was a liberal patron of the Illinois College at Jacksonville, a member of its Board of Trustees, and died, after a short illness, Jan. 15, 1844, a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church, leaving a wife but no children. Two children, born to them, had died in infancy.

The Jarlin

IOMAS CARLIN, the sixth Governor of the State of Illinois, serving from 1838 to 1842, was also a Kentuckian, being born near Frankfort, that State, July 18, 1789, of Irish paternity. The opportunities for an education being very meager in his native place, he, on approaching years of jud ment and maturity, applied himself to those branches of learning that seemed most important, and thus became a self-made man; and his taste for reading and study remained with him through life. In 1803 his father removed o Missouri, then a part of "New Spain," where he died in 1810.

In 1812 young Carlin came to Illinois and participated in all the "ranging" service incident to the war of that period, proving himself a soldier of undannted bravery. In 1814 he married Rebecca Huitt, and lived for four years on the bank of the Mississippi River, opposite the mouth of the Missoari, where he followed farming, and then removed to Greene County. He located the town site of Carreton, in that county, and in 1825 made a liberal donation of land for county building purposes. He was the first Sheriff of that county after its separate organization, and afterward was twice elected, as a Jackson Democrat, to the Illinois Senate. In the Black Hawk War he commanded a spy battalion, a post of considerable danger. In 1834 he was appointed by President Jackson to the position of Receiver of Public Moneys, and to fulfill the office more conveniently he removed to the city of Quincy.

While, in 1838, the unwieldy internal improvement system of the State was in full operation, with all its expensive machinery, amidst bank suspensions throughout the United States, a great stringency in the money market everywhere, and Illinois bonds forced to sale at a heavy discount, and the "hardest times" existing that the people of the Prairie State ever saw, the general election of State officers was approaching. Discreet men who had cherished the hope of a speedy subsidence of the public infatuation, met with disappointment. A Governor and Legislature were to be elected, and these were now looked forward to for a repeal of the ruinous State policy. But the grand scheme had not yet lost its dazzling influence upon the minds of the people. Time and experience had not yet fully demonstrated its utter absurdity. Hence the question of arresting its career of profligate expenditures did not become a leading one with the dominant party during the campaign, and most of the old members of the Leg islature were returned at this election.

Under these circumstances the Democrats, in State Convention assembled, nominated Mr. Carlin for the office of Governor, and S. H. Anderson for Lieutenant Governor, while the Whigs nominated Cyrus Edwards, brother of Ninian Edwards, formerly Governor, and W. H. Davidson. Edwards came out strongly for a continuance of the State pohcy, while Carlir remained non-committal. This was the first time that the two main political parties in this State were unembarrassed by any third party in the field. The result of the election was: Carlin, 35,573; Anderson, 30,335; Edwards, 29,629; and Davidson, 28,715.

Upon the meeting of the subsequent Legislature (1839), the retiring Governor (Duncan) in his message spoke in emphatic terms of the impolicy of the internal improvement system, presaging the evils threatened, and usged that body to do their utmost to correct the great error; yet, on the contrary, the Legislature not only decided to continue the policy but also added to its burden by voting more appropriations and ordering more improvements. Although the money market was still stringent, a further loan of $4,000,000 was ordered for the Illinois & Michigan Canal alone. Chicago at that time began to loom up and promise to be an important city, even the great emporium of the West, as it has since indeed came to be. Ex-Gov. Reynolds, an incompetent financier, was commissioned to effect the loan, and accordingly hastened to the East on this responsible errand, and negotiated the loans, at considerable sacrifice to the State. Besides this embarrassment ac Carlin's administration, the Legislature also declared that he had no authority to appoint a Secretary of State until a vacancy existed, and A. P. Field, a Whig, who had already held the post by appointment .hrough three administrations, was determined to keep the place a while longer, in spite of Gov. Carlin's preferences. 'The course of the Legislature in this regard, however, was finally sustained by the Supreme Court, in a quo warranto case brought up before it by John A. McClernand, whom the Governor had nominated for the office. Thereupon that dignified body was denounced as a "Whig Court!" endeavoring to establish the principle of life-tenure of office.

A new law was adopted re-organizing the Judiciary, and under it five additional Supreme Judges were elected by the Legislature, namely, Thomas Ford (afterward Governor), Sidney Breese, Walter B. Scates, Samuel H. Treat and Stephen A. Douglas—all Democrats.

It was during Cov. Carlin's administration that the noisy campaign of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" occurred, resulting in a Whig victory. This, however, did not affect Illinois politics very seriously.

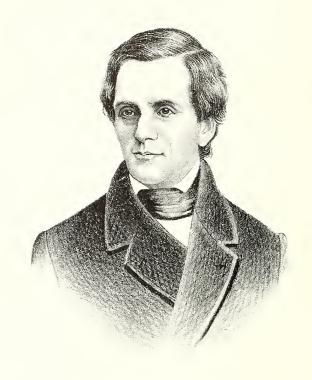

Another prominent event in the West during Gov. Carlin's term of office was the excitement caused by the Mcrmons and their removal from Independence, Mo., to Nauvoo, Ill., in 1840. At the same time they began to figure somewhat in State polirics. On account of their believing—as they thought, according to the New Testament—that they should have

"all things common," and that consequently "all the earth" and all that is upon it were the" Lord's" and therefore the property of his "saints," they were suspected, and correctly, too, of committing many of the deeds of larceny, robbery, etc., that were so rife throughout this country in those days. Hence a feeling of violence grew up between the Mormons and "anti-Mormons." In the State of Missouri the Mormons always supported the Democracy until they were driven out by the Democratic government, when they turned their support to the Whigs. They were becoming numerous, and in the Legislature of r840-1, therefore, it became a matter of great interest with both parties to conciliate these people. Through the agency of one John C. Bennett, a scamp, the Mormons succeeded in rushing through the Legislature (both parties not daring to oppose) a charter for the city of Nauvoo which virtually erected a hierarchy co-ordinate with the Federal Government itself. In the fall of 1841 the Governor of Missouri made a demand upon Gov. Carlin for the body of Joe Smith, the Mormon leader, as a fugitive from justice. Gov. Carlin issued the writ, but for some reason it was returned unserved. It was again issued in 1842, and Smith was arrested. but was either rescued by his followers or discharged by the municipal court on a writ of habeas corpus.

In December, 1841, the Democratic Convention nominated Adam W. Snyder, of Belleville, for Governor. As he had been, as a member of the Legislature, rather friendly to the Mormons, the latter naturally turned their support to the Democratic party. The next spring the Whigs nominated Ex-Gov. Duncan for the same office. In the meantime the Mormons began to grow more odious to the masses of the people, and the comparative prospects of the respective parties for success became very problematical. Mr. Snyder died in May, and Thomas Ford, a Supreme Judge, was substituted as a candidate, and was elected.

At the close of his gubernatorial term, Mr. Carlin removed back to his old home at Carrollton, where he spent the remainder of his life, as before his elevation to office, in agricultural pursuits. In 1849 he served out the unexpired term of J. D. Fry in the Illinois House of Representatives, and died Feb. 4. 1852, at his residence at Carrollton, leaving a wife and seven children.

Thomas Ford

HOMAS FORD, Governor from 1842 to 1846, and author of a very interesting history of Illinois, was born at Uniontown, Pa., in the year 1800. His mother, after the death of her first husband (Mr. Forquer), married Robert Ford, who was killed in 1802, by the Indians in the mountains of Pennsylvania. She was consequently left in indigent circumstances, with a large family, mostly girls. With a view to better her condition, she, in 1804, removed to Missouri, where it had been customary by the Spanish Government to give land to actual settlers; but upon her arrival at St. Louis she found the country ceded to the United States, and the liberal policy toward settlers changed by the new ownership. After some sickness to herself and family, she finally removed to Illinois, and settled some three miles south of Waterloo, but the following year moved nearer the Mississippi bluffs. Here young Ford received his first schooling, under the instructions of a Mr. Humphrey, for which he had to walk three miles. His mother, though lacking a thorough education, was a woman of superior mental endowments, joined to energy and determination of character. She inculcated in her children those high-toned principles which distinguished her sons in public life. She exercised a rigid economy to provide her children an education; but George Forquer, her oldest son (six years older than Thomas Ford), at an early age had to quit school to aid by his labor in the support of the family. He afterward became an eminent man in Illinois affairs, and but for his early death would probably have been elected to the United States Senate.

Young Ford, with somewhat better opportunities, received a better education, though limited to the curriculum of the common school of those pioneer times. His mind gave early promise of superior endowments, with an inclination for mathematics. His proficiency attracted the attention of Hon. Daniel P. Cook, who became his efficient patron and friend The latter gentleman was an eminent titinois statesman who, as a Member of Congress, obtained a grant of 300,000 acres of land to aid in completing the Illinois & Michigan Canal, and after whom the county of Cook was named. Through the advice of this gentleman, Mr. Ford turned his attention to the study of law; but Forquer, then merchandising, regarding his education defective, sent him to Transylvania University, where, however, he remained but one term, owing to Forquer's failure in business. On his return he alternated his law reading with teaching school for support.

In 1829 Gov. Edwards appointed him Prosecuting Attorney, and in 1831 he was re-appointed by Gov. Reynolds, and after that he was four times elected a Judge by the Legislature, without opposition, twice a Circuit Judge, once a Judge of Chicago, and as Associate Judge of the Suprem: Court, when, in 1841, the latter tribunal was re-organized by the addition of five Judges, all Democrats. Ford was assigned to the Ninth Judicial Circuit, and while in this capacity ne was holding Court in Ogle County he received a notice of his nomination by the Democratic Convention for the office of Governor. He immediately resigned his place and entered upon the canvass. In August, 1842, he was elected, and on the 8th of December following he was inaugurated.

All the offices which he had held were unsolicited by him. He received them upon the true Jeffersonan principle,-Never to ask and never to refuse office. Both as a lawyer and as a Judge he stood deservedly high, but his cast of intellect fitted him rather for a writer upon law than a practicing advocate in the courts. In the latter capacity he was void of the moving power of eloquence, so necessary to success with juries. As a Judge his opinions were round, lucid and able expositions of the law. In practice, he was a stranger to the tact, skill and insinuating address of the politician, but he saw through he arts of demagogues as well as any man. He was glain in his demeanor, so much so, indeed, that at one time after the expiration of his term of office, during a session of the Legislature, he was taken by a stranger to be a seeker for the position of doorkeeper, and was waited upon at his hotel near midnight by a knot of small office-seekers with the view of effecting a "combination!"

Mr. Ford had not the "brass" of the ordinary politician, nor that impetuosity which characterizes a political leader. He cared little for money, and hardly enough for a decent support. In person he was of small stature, slender, of dark complexion, with black hair, sharp features, deep-set eyes, a pointed, aquiline nose having a decided twist to one side, and a small mouth.

The three most important events in Gov. Ford's administration were the establishment of the high financial credit of the State, the "Mormon War" and he Mexican War.

In the first of these the Governor proved himself to be entinently wise. On coming into office he found the State badly paralyzed by the ruinous effects of the notorious "internal improvement" schemes of the preceding decade, with scarcely anything to show by way of "improvement." The enterprise that seemed to be getting ahead more than all the rest was the Illinois & Michigan Canal. As this promised to be the most important thoroughfare, feasible to the people, it was well under headway in its construction. Therefore the State policy was almost concentrated upon it, in order to rush it on to completion. The bonded indebtedness of the State was growing so large as to frighten the people, and they were about ready to entertain a proposition for repudiation. But the Governor had the foresight to recommend such measures as would maintain the public credit, for which every citizen to-day feels thankful.

But perhaps the Governor is remembered more for his connection with the Mormon troubles than for anything else; for it was during his term of office that the "Latter-Day Saints" became so strong at Nauvoo, built their temple there, increased their numbers throughout the country, committed misdemeanors, taught dangerous doctrines, suffered the loss of their leader, Jo Smith, by a violent death, were driven out of Nauvoo to the far West, etc. Having been a Judge for so many years previously, Mr. Ford of course was no a-committal concerning Mormon affairs, and was therefore claimed by both parties and also accused by each of sympathizing too greatly with the other side. Mormo usm claiming to be a system of religion, the Governor no doubt was "between two fires," and felt compelled to touch the matter rather "gingerly," and doubtless felt greatly relieved when that pestilential people left the State. Such complicated matters, especially when religion is mixed up with them, expose every person participating in them to criticism from all parties.

The Mexican War was begun in the spring of 1845, and was continued into the gubernatorial term of Mr. Ford's su .cessor. The Governor's connection with this war, however, was not conspicuous, as it was only administrative, commissioning officers, etc.

Ford's "History of Illinois" is a very readable and entertaining work, of 450 small octavo pages, and is destined to increase in value with the lapse of time. It exhibits a natural flow of compact and forcible thought, never failing to convey the nicest sense. In tracing with his trenchant pen the devious operations of the professional politician, in which he is inimitable, his account is open, perhaps, to the objection that all his contemporaries are treated as mere placeseckers, while many of them have since been judged by the people to be worthy statesmen. His writings seem slightly open to the criticism that they exhibit a little splenetic partiality against those of his contemporaries who were prominent during his term of office as Governor.

The death of Gov. Ford took place at Peoria, Ill., Nov. 2, 1850.

Sug & French

GUSTUS C. FRENCH, Governor of Illinois from 1846 to 1852, was born in the town of Hill, in the State of New Hampshire, Aug. 2, 1808. He was a descendant in the fourth generation of Nathaniel French, who emigrated from England in 1687 and settled in Saybury, Mass. In early life young French lost his father, but continued to receive instruction from an exemplary and Christian mother until he was 19 years old, when she also died, confiding to his care and trust four younger brothers and one sister. He discharged his trust with parental devotion. His education in early life was such mainly as a common school afforded. For a brief period he attended Dartmouth College, but from pecuniary causes and the care of his brothers and sister, he did not graduate. He subsequently read law, and was admitted to the Bar in 1831, and shortly afterward removed to Illinois, settling first at Albion, Edwards County, where he established himself in the practice of law. The following year he removed to Paris, Edgar County. Here he attained eminence in his profession, and entered public life by tepresenting that county in the Legislature. A strong attachment sprang up between him and Stephen A. Douglas.

In 1839, Mr. French was appointed Receiver of the United States Land Office at Palestine, Crawford County, at which place he was a resident when elevated to the gubernatorial chair. In 1844 he was a Presidential Elector, and as such he voted for James K. Polk.

The Democratic State Convention of 1846, meeting at Springfield Feb. 10, nominated Mr. French for Governor. Other Democratic candidates were Lyman Trumbull, John Calhoun (subsequently of Lecompton Constitution notoriety), Walter B. Scates, Richard M. Young and A. W. Cavarly,—an array of very able and prominent names. Trumbull was perhaps defeated in the Convention by the rumor that he was opposed to the Illinois and Michigan Canal, as he had been a year previously. For Lieutenant Governor J. B. Wells was chosen, while other candidates were Lewis Ross, Wm. McMurtty, Newton Cloud, J. B. Hamilton and W. W. Thompson. The resolutions declared strongly against the resuscitation of the old State Banks.

The Whigs, who were in a hopeless minority, held their convention June 8, at Peoria, and selected Thomas M. Kilpatrick, of Scott County, for Governor, and Gen. Nathaniel G. Wilcox, of Schuyler, for Lieutenant Governor.

In the campaign the latter exposed Mr. French's-record and connection with the passage of the internal improvement system, urging it against his election; but in the meantime the war with Mexico broke out, regarding which the Whig record was unpopular in this State. The war was the absorbing and dominating question of the period, sweeping every other political issue in its course. The election in August gave Mr. French 58,700 votes, and Kilpatrick only 36,775. Richard Eells, Abolitionist candidate for the same office, received 5,152 votes.

By the new Constitution of 1848, a new election for State officers was ordered in November of that year, before Gov. French's term was half out, and he was re-elected for the term of four years. He was therefore the incumbent for six consecutive years, the only Governor of this State who has ever served in that capacity so long at one time. As there was no organized opposition to his election, he received 67,453 votes, to 5,639 for Pierre Menard (son of the first Lieutenant Governor), 4,748 for Charles V. Dyer, 3,834 for W. L. D. Morrison, and 1,361 for James L. D. Morrison. But Wm. McMurtry, of Knox County, was elected Lieutenant Governor, in place of Joseph B. Wells, who was before elected and did not run again.

Governor French was inaugurated into office during the progress of the Mexican War, which closed during the summer of 1847, although the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo was not made until Feb. 2, 1848. The policy of Gov. French's party was committed to that war, but in connection with that affair he was, of course, only an administrative officer. During his term of office, Feb. 19, 1847, the Legislature, by special permission of Congress, declared that all Government lands sold to settlers should be immediately subject to State taxation; before this they were exempt for five years after sale. By this arrangement the revenue was materially increased. About the same time, the distribution of Government land warrants among the Mexican soldiers as bounty threw upon the market a great quantity of good lands, and this enhanced the settlement of the State. The same Legislature authorized, with the recommendation of the Governor, the sale of the Northern Cross Railroad (from Springfield to Meredosia, the first in the State and now a section of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific) It sold for $100,000 in bonds, although it had cost the State not less than a million. The salt wells and canal lands in the Saline reserve in Gallatin County, granted by the general Government to the State, were also authorized by the Governor to be sold, to apply on the State debt. In 1850, for the first time since 1839, the accruing State revenue, exclusive of specific appropriations, was sufficient to meet the current demands upon the The aggregate taxable property of the State at this time was over $100,000,000, and the population 851,470.

In 1849 the Legislature adopted the township organization law, which, however, proved defective, and was properly amended in 1851. At its session in the latter year, the General Assembly also passed a law to exempt homesteads from sale on executions. This beneficent measure had been repeatedly arged upon that body by Gov. French.

In 1850 some business men in St. Louis commenced to build a dike opposite the lower part of their city on the Illinois side, to keep the Mississippi in its channel near St. Louis, instead of breaking away from them as it sometimes threatened to do. This they undertook without permission from the Legislature or Executive authority of this State; and as many of the inhabitants there complained that the scheme would inundate and ruin much valuable land, there was a slight conflict of jurisdictions, resulting in favor of the St. Louis project; and since then a good site has existed there for a city (East St. Louis), and now a score of railroads center there.

It was in September, 1850, that Congress granted to this State nearly 3,000,000 acres of land in aid of the completion of the Illinois Central Railroad, which constituted the most important epoch in the railroad—we might say internal improvement—history of the State. The road was rushed on to completion, which accelerated the settlement of the interior of the State by a good class of industrious citizens, and by the charter a good income to the State Treasury is paid in from the earnings of the road.

In 1851 the Legislature passed a law authorizing free stock banks, which was the source of much legislative discussion for a number of years.

But we have not space further to particularize concerning legislation. Gov. French's administration was not marked by any feature to be criticised, while the country was settling up as never before.

In stature, Gov. French was of medium height, squarely built, light complexioned, with ruddy face and pleasant countenance. In manners he was plain and agreeable. By nature he was somewhat diffident, but he was often very outspoken in his convictions of duty. In public speech he was not an orator, but was chaste, earnest and persuasive. In business he was accurate and methodical, and in his administration he kept up the credit of the State.

He died in 1865, at his home in Lebanon, St. Glair Co., Pil.

JAMattison

EL A. MATTESON, Governor 1853-6, was born Aug. 8, 1808, in Jefferson County, New York, to which place his father had removed from Vermont three years before. His father was a farmer in fair circumstances, but a common English education was all that his only son received. Young Joel first tempted fortune as a small tradesman in Prescott, Canada, before he was of age. He returned from that place to his home, entered an academy, taught school, visited the principal Eastern cities, improved a farm his father had given him, made a tour in the South, worked there in building railroads, experienced a storm on the Gulf of Mexico, visited the gold diggings of Northern Georgia, and returned via Nashville to St. Louis and through Illinois to his father's home, when he married. In 1833, having sold his farm, he removed, with his wife and one child, to Illinois, and entered a claim on Government land near the head of Au Sable River, in what is now Kendall County. At that time there were not more than two neighbors within a range of ten miles of his place, and only three or four houses between him and Chicago. He opened a large farm, His family was boarded 12 miles away while he erected a house on his claim, sleeping, during this time, under a rude pole shed. Here his life was once placed in imminent peril by a huge prairie rattlesnake sharing his bed.

In 1835 he bought largely at the Government land sales. During the speculative real-estate mania which broke out in Chicago in 1836 and spread over the State, he sold his lands under the inflation of that period and removed to Joliet. In 1838 he became a heavy contractor on the Illinois & Michigan Canal. Upon the completion of his job in 1841, when hard times prevailed, business at a stand, contracts paid in State scrip; when all the public works except the canal were abandoned, the State offered for sale 700 tons of railroad iron, which was purchased by Mr. Matteson at a bargain. This he accepted, shipped and sold at Detroit, realizing a very handsome profit, enough to pay off all his canal debts and leave him a surplus of several thousand dollars. His enterprise next prompted him to start a woolen mill at Joliet, in which he prospered, and which, after successive enlargements, became an enormous establishment.

In 1842 he was first elected a State Senator, but, by a bungling apportionment, jchn Pearson, a Senator holding over, was found to be in the same district, and decided to be entitled to represent it. Matteson's seat was declared vacant. Pearson, however, with a nobleness difficult to appreciate in this day of greed for office, unwilling to represent his district under the circumstances, immediately resigned his unexpired term of two years. A bill was passed in a few hours ordering a new election, and in ten days' time Mr. Matteson was returned re-elected and took his seat as Senator. From his well-known capacity as a business man, he was made Chairman of the Committee on Finance, a position he held during this half and two full succeeding Senatorial terms, discharging its important duties with ability and faithfulness. Besides his extensive woolen-mill interest, when work was resumed on the canal under the new loan of $1,600,000 he again became a heavy contractor, and also subsequently operated largely in building railroads. Thus he showed himself a most energetic and thorough business man.

He was nominated for Governor by the Demoeratic State Convention which met at Springfield April 20, 1852. Other candidates before the Convention were D. L. Gregg and F. C. Sherman, of Cook; John Dement, of Lee; Thomas L. Harris, of Menard; Lewis W. Ross, of Fulton; and D. P. Bush, of Pike. Gustavus Koerner, of St. Clair, was nominated for Lieutenant Governor. For the same offices the Whigs nominated Edwin B, Webb and Dexter A. Knowlton. Mr. Matteson received 80,645 votes at the election, while Mr. Webb received 64,408. Matteson's forte was not on the stump; he had not cultivated the art of oily flattery, or the faculty of being all things to all men. His intellectual qualities took rather the direction of efficient executive ability. His turn consisted not so much in the adroit management of party, or the powerful advocacy of great governmental principles, as in those more solid and enduring operations which cause the physical development and advancement of a State, -of commerce and business enterprise, into which he labored with success to lead the people. As a politician he was just and liberal in his views, and both in official and private life he then stood untainted and free from blemish. As a man, in active benevolence, social virtues and all the amiable qualities of neighbor or ritizen, he had few superiors. His messages present a perspicuous array of facts as to the condition of the State, and are often couched in forcible and elegant diction.

The greatest excitement during his term of office was the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, by Congress, under the leadership of Stephen A. Douglas in 1854, when the bill was passed organizing the Territory of Kansas and Nebraska. A large portion of the Whig party of the North, through their bitter opposition to the Democratic party, naturally drifted into the doctrine of anti-slavery, and thus led to what was temporarily called the "Anti-Nebraska" party, while the followers of Douglas were known as "Nebraska or Douglas Democrats." It was during this embryo stage of the Republican party that Abraham Lincoln was brought forward as the "Anti-Nebraska" candidate for the United States Senatorship, while Gen. James Shields, the incumbent, was re-nominated by the Democrats. But after a few ballotings in the Legislature (1855), these men were dropped, and Lyman Trumbull, an Anti-Nebraska Democrat, was brought up by the former, and Mr. Matteson, then Governor, by the latter. On the 11th ballot Mr. Trumbull obtained one majority, and was accordingly declared elected. Before Gov. Matteson's term expired, the Republicans were fully organized as a national party, and in 1856 put into the field a full national and State ticket, carrying the State, but not the nation.

The Legislature of r855 passed two very important measures,—the present free-school system and a submission of the Maine liquor law to a vote of the people. The latter was defeated by a small majority of the popular vote.

During the four years of Gov. Matteson's administration the taxable wealth of the State was about trebled, from $137,818,079 to $349,951,272; the public debt was reduced from $17,398,985 to $12,843,-144; taxation was at the same time reduced, and the State resumed paying interest on its debt in New York as fast as it fell due; railroads were increased in their mileage from something less than 400 to about 3.000; and the population of Chicago was nearly doubled, and its commerce more than quadrupled.

Before closing this account, we regret that we have to say that Mr. Matteson, in all other respects an upright man and a good Governor, was implicated in a false re-issue of redeemed canal scrip, amounting to $224,182.66. By a suit in the Sangamon Circuit Court the State recovered the principal and all the interest excepting $27,500.

He died in the winter of 1872-3, at Chicago.

Jympt, Brasell

HLLIAM H. BISSELL, Governor 1857–60, was born April 25, 1811, in the State of New York, near Painted Post, Yates County.

His parents were obscure, honest, God-fearing people, who reared their children under the daily example of industry and frugality, according to the custom of that class of Eastern society. Mr. Bissell received a respectable but not thorough academical education. By assiduous application he acquired a knowledge of medicine, and in his early manhood came West and located in Monroe County, this State, where he engaged in the practice of that profession. But he was not enamored of his calling; he was swayed by a broader ambition, to such an extent that the mysteries of the healing art and its arduous duties failed to yield him further any charms. In a few years he discovered his choice of a profession to be a mistake, and when he approached the age of 30 he sought to begin anew. Dr. Bissell, no doubt unexpectedly to himself, discovered a singular facility and charm of speech, the exercise of which acquired for him a ready local notoriety. It soon came to be understood that he desired to abandon his profession and take up that of the law. During terms of Court he would spend his time at the county seat among the members of the Bar, who extended to him a ready welcome.

It was not strange, therefore, that he should drift into public life. In 1840 he was elected as a Democrat to the Legislature from Monroe County, and was an efficient member of that body. On his return home he qualified himself for admission to the Bar and speedily rose to the front rank as an advocate. His powers of oratory were captivating. With a pure diction, charming and inimitable gestures, clearness of statement, and a remarkable vein of sly hnmor, his efforts before a jury told with irresistible effect. He was chosen by the Legislature Prosecuting Attornes for the Circuit in which he lived, and in that position he fully discharged his duty to the State, gained the esteem of the Bar, and seldom failed to convict the offender of the law.

In stature he was somewhat tall and slender, and with a straight, military bearing, he presented a distinguished appearance. His complexion was dark, his head well poised, though not large, his address pleasant and manner winning. He was exemplary in his habits, a devoted husband and kind parent. He was twice married, the first time to Miss James, of Monroe County, by whom he had two children, both daughters. She died soon after the year 1840, and Mr. B. married for his second wife a daughter of Elias K. Kane, previously a United States Senator from this State. She survived him but a short time, and died without issue.

When the war with Mexico was declared in 1846, Mr. Bissell enlisted and was elected Colonel of his regiment, over Hon. Don Morrison, by an almost unanimous vote,—807 to 6. Considering the limited opportunities he had had, he evinced a high order of military talent. On the bloody field of Buena Vista he acquitted himself with intrepid and distinguished ability, contributing with his regiment, the Second Illinois, in no small degree toward saving the wavering fortunes of our arms during that long and fiercely contested battle.

After his return home, at the close of the war, he was elected to Congress, his opponents being the Hons. P. B. Fouke and Joseph Gillespie. He served two terms in Congress. He was an ardent politician. During the great contest of 1850 he voted in favor of the adjustment measures; but in 1854 he opposed the repeal of the Missouri Compromise act and therefore the Kansas-Nebraska bill of Douglas, and thus became identified with the nascent Republican party.

During his first Congressional term, while the Southern members were following their old practice of intimidating the North by bullying language, and claiming most of the credit for victories in the Mexican War, and Jefferson Davis claiming for the Mississippi troops all the credit for success at Buena Vista, Mr. Bissell bravely defended the Northern troops; whereupon Davis challenged Bissell to a duel, which was accepted. This matter was brought up against Bissell when he was candidate for Governor and during his term of office, as the Constitution of this State forbade any duelist from holding a State office.

In 1856, when the Republican party first put forth a candidate, John C. Fremont, for President of the United States, the same party nominated Mr. Bissell for Governor of Illinois, and John Wood, of Quincy, for Lieutenant Governor, while the Democrats nominated Hon. W. A. Richardson, of Adams County, for Governor, and Col. R. J. Hamilton, of Cook County, for Lieutenant Governor. The result of the election was a plurality of 4,729 votes over Richardson. The American, or Know-Nothing, party had a ticket in the field. The Legislature was nearly balanced, but was politically opposed to the Governor. His message to the Legislature was short and rather ordinary, and was criticised for expressing the supposed obligations of the people to the incorporators of the Illinois Central Railroad Company and for reopening the slavery question by allusions to the Kansas troubles. Late in the session an apportionment bill, based upon the State census of 1855, was passed, amid much partisan strife. The Governor at first signed the bill and then vetoed it. A furious debate followed, and the question whether the Governor had the authority to recall a signature was referred to the Courts, that of last resort deciding in favor of the Governor. Two years afterward another outrageous attempt was made for a re-apportionment and to gerrymander the State, but the Legislature failed to pass the bill over the veto of the Governor.

It was during Gov. Bissell's administration that the notorious canal scrip fraud was brought to light, implicating ex-Gov. Matteson and other prominent State officials. The principal and interest, aggregating $255,500, was all recovered by the State excepting $27,500. (See sketch of Gov. Matteson.)

In 1859 an attempt was discovered to fraudulently refund the Macalister and Stebbins bonds and thus rob the State Treasury of nearly a quarter of a million dollars. The State Government was implicated in this affair, and to this day remains unexplained or unatoned for. For the above, and other matters previously mentioned, Gov. Bissell has been severely criticised, and he has also been most shamefully libelled and slandered.

On account of exposure in the army, the remote cause of a nervous form of disease gained entrance into his system and eventually developed paraplegia, affecting his lower extremities, which, while it left his body in comparative health, deprived him of locomotion except by the aid of crutches. While he was generally hopeful of ultimate recovery, this mysterious disease pursued him, without once relaxing its stealthy hold, to the close of his life, March 18, 1860, over nine months before the expiration of his gubernatorial term, at the early age of 48 years. He died in the faith of the Roman Catholic Church, of which he had been a member since 1854.

John Mod

the first settler of Quincy, Ill., was born in the town of Sempronius (now Moravia), Cayuga Co., N. Y., Dec. 20, 1798. He was the second child and only son of Dr. Daniel Wood. His mother, nee Catherine Crause, was of German parentage, and died while he was an infant. Dr. Wood was a learned and skillful physician, of classical attainments and proficient in several modern lai.guages, who, after serving throughout the Revolutionary War as a Surgeon, settled on the land granted him by the Government, and resided there a respected and leading influence in his section until his death, at the ripe age of 92 years.

The subject of this sketch, impelled by the spirit of Western adventure then pervading everywhere, left his home, Nov. 2, 1818, and passed the succeeding winter in Cincinnati, Ohio. The following summer he pushed on to Illinois, landing at Shawneetown, and spent the fall and following winter in Calhoun County. In 1820, in company with Willard Keyes, he settled in Pike County, about 30 miles southeast of Quincy, where for the next two years he pursued farming. In 1821 he visited "the Bluffs" (as the present site of Quincy was called, then uninhabited) and, pleased with its prospects, soon after purchased a quarter-section of land near by, and in the following fall (1822) erected near the river a small cabin, 18 x 20 feet, the first building in Quincy, of which he then became the first and for some months the only occupant.

About this time he visited his old friends in Pike County, chief of whom was William Ross, the leading man in building up the village of Atlas, of that county, which was thought then to be the possible commencement of a city. One day they and others were traveling together over the country between the two points named, making observations on the comparative merits of the respective localities. On approaching the Mississippi near Mr. Wood's place. the latter told his companions to follow him and he would show them where he was going to build a city. They went about a mile off the main trail, to a high point, from which the view in every direction was most magnificent, as it had been for ages and as yet untouched by the hand of man. Before them swept by the majestic Father of Waters, yet unburdened by navigation. After Mr. Wood had expatiated at length on the advantages of the situation, Mr. Ross replied, "But it's too near Atlas ever to amount to anything!"

Atlas is still a cultivated farm, and Quincy is a city of over 30,000 population.

In 1824 Mr. Wood gave a newspaper notice, as the law then prescribed, of his intention to apply to the General Assembly for the formation of a new county. This was done the following winter, resulting in the establishment of the present Adams County. During the next summer Quincy was selected as the county seat, it and the vicinity then containing but four adult male residents and half that number of females. Since that period Mr. Wood resided at the place of his early adoption until his death, and far more than any other man was he identified with every measure of its progress and history, and almost continuously kept in public positions.

He was one of the early town Trustees, and after the place became a city he was often a member of the City Council, many times elected Mayor, in the face of a constant large opposition political majority. In 1850 he was elected to the State Senate. In 1856, on the organization of the Republican party, he was chosen Lieutenant Governor of the State, on the ticket with Wm. H. Bissell for Governor, and on the death of the latter, March 18, 1860, he succeeded to the Chief Executive chair, which he occupied until Gov. Yates was inaugurated nearly ten months afterward.

Nothing very marked characterized the administration of Gov. Wood. The great anti-slavery campaign of 1860, resulting in the election of the honest Illinoisan, Abraham Lincoln, to the Presidency of the United States, occurred during the short period while Mr. Wood was Governor, and the excitement and issues of that struggle dominated over every other consideration,—indeed, supplanted them in a great measure. The people of Illinois, during all that time, were passing the comparatively petty strifes under Bissell's administration to the overwhelming issue of preserving the whole nation from destruction.

In 1861 ex-Gov. Wood was one of the five Delegates from Illinois to the "Peace Convention" at Washington, and in April of the same year, on the breaking out of the Rebellion, he was appointed Quartermaster-General of the State, which position he held throughout the war. In 1864 he took command as Colonel of the 137th Ill. Vol. Inf., with whom he served until the period of enlistment expired.

Politically, Gov. Wood was always actively identified with the Whig and Republican parties. Few men have in personal experience comprehended so many surprising and advancing local changes as vested in the more than half century recollections of Gov. Wood. Sixty-four years ago a solitary settler on the "Bluffs," with no family, and no neighbor within a score of miles, the world of civilization away behind him, and the strolling red-man almost his only visitant, he lived to see growing around him, and under his auspices and aid, overspreading the wild hills and scraggy forest a teaming city, second only in size in the State, and surpassed nowhere in beauty, prosperity and promise; whose people recognize as with a single voice the proverbial honor and liberality that attach to the name and lengthened life of their pioneer settler, "the old Governor."

Gov. Wood was twice married,—first in January, 1826, to Ann M. Streeter, daughter of Joshua Streeter, formerly of Salem, Washington Co., N. Y. They had eight children. Mrs. W. died Oct. 8, 1863, and in June, 1865, Gov. Wood married Mrs. Mary A., widow of Rev. Joseph T. Holmes. Gov. Wood died June 4, 1880, at his residence in Quincy. Four of his eight children are now living, namely: Ann E., wife of Gen. John Tillson; Daniel C., who married Mary J. Abernethy; John, Jr., who married Josephine Skinner, and Joshua S., who married Annie Bradley. The last mentioned now resides at Atchison, Kansas, and all the rest are still at Quincy.

Rich, Yates

------

Governor," 1861-4, was born Jan. 18, 1818, on the banks of the Ohio River, at Warsaw, Gallatin Co., Ky. His father moved in 1831 to Illinois, and, after stopping for a time in Springfield, settled at Island Grove, Sangamon County. Here, after attending school, Richard joined Grove, Sangamon County. Here, after attending school, Richard joined the family. Subsequently he entered Illinois College at Jacksonville, where, in 1837, he graduated with first honors. He chose for his profession the law, the Hon. J. J. Hardin being his instructor. After admission to the Bar he soon rose to distinction as an advocate.

Gifted with a fluent and ready oratory, he soon appeared in the political hustings, and, being a passionate admirer of the great Whig leader of the West. Henry Clay, he joined his political fortunes to he party of his idol. In 1840 he engaged with great stdor in the exciting "hard cider" campaign for Carrison. Two years later he was elected to the Legislature from Morgan County, a Democratic stronghold. He served three or four terms in the Legislature, and such was the fascination of his oratory that by 1850 his large Congressional District, extending from Morgan and Sangamon Counties worth to include LaSalle, unanimously tendered him the Whig nomination for Congress. His Democratic opponent was Maj. Thomas L. Harris, a very popular man who had won distinction at the battle of Cerro Gordo, in the Mexican War, and who had peaten Hon. Stephen T. Logan for the same position, two years before, by a large majority. Yates was elected. Two years later he was re-elected, over John Calhoun.

It was during Yates second term in Congress that the great question of the repeal of the Missouri Compromise was agitated, and the bars laid down for reopening the dreaded anti-slavery question. He took strong grounds against the repeal, and thus became identified with the rising Republican party. Consequently he fell into the minority in his district, which was pro-slavery. Even then, in a third contest, he fell behind Major Harris only 200 votes, after the district had two years before given Pierce 2,000 majority for President.

The Republican State Convention of 1860 met at Decatur May o, and nominated for the office of Governor Mr. Yates, in preference to Hon. Norman B. Judd, of Chicago, and Leonard Swett, of Bloomington, two of the ablest men of the State, who were also candidates before the Convention. Francis A. Hoffman, of DuPage County, was nominated for Lieutenant Governor. This was the year when Mr. Lincoln was a candidate for President, a period remembered as characterized by the great whirlpool which precipitated the bloody War of the Rebellion. The Douglas Democrats nominated J. C. Allen of Crawford County, for Governor, and Lewis W. Ross, of Fulton County, for Lieutenant Governor. The Breckenridge Democrats and the Bell-Everett party had also full tickets in the field. After a most fearful campaign, the result of the election gave Mr. Yates 172,196 votes, and Mr. Allen 159,253. Mr. Yates received over a thousand more votes than did Mr. Lincoln himself.

Gov. Yates occupied the chair of State during the most critical period of our country's history. In the fate of the nation was involved that of each State. The life struggle of the former derived its sustenance from the loyalty of the latter; and Gov. Yates seemed to realize the situation, and proved himself both loyal and wise in upholding the Government. He had a deep hold upon the affections of the people, won by his moving eloquence and genial manners. Erect and symmetrical in person, of prepossessing appearance, with a winning address and a magnetic power, few men possessed more of the elements of popularity. His oratory was scholarly and captivating, his hearers hardly knowing why they were transported. He was social and convivial. In the latter respect he was ultimately carried too far.

The very creditable military efforts of this State during the War of the Rebellion, in putting into the field the enormous number of about 200,000 soldiers, were ever promptly and ably seconded by his excellency; and the was ambitious to deserve the title of "the soldier's friend." Immediately after the battle of Shiloh he repaired to the field of carnage to look after the wounded, and his appeals for aid were promptly responded to by the people. His proclamations calling for volunteers were impassionate appeals, urging upon the people the duties and requirements of patriotism; and his special message in 1863 to the Democratic Legislature of this State pleading for material aid for the sick and wounded soldiers of Illinois regiments, breathes a deep fervor of noble sentiment and feeling rarely equaled in beauty or felicity of expression. Generally his messages on political and civil affairs were able and comprehensive. During his administration, however, there were no civil events of an engrossing character, although two years of his time were replete with partisan quarrels of great bitterness. Military arrests, Knights of the Golden Circle, riot in Fulton County, attempted suppression of the Chicago Times and the usurping State Constitutional Convention of 1862, were the chief local topics that were exciting during the Governor's term. This Convention assembled Jan. 7, and at once took the high position that 'he law calling it was no longer binding, and that it had supreme power; that it represented a virtual assemblage of the whole people of the State, and was sovereign in the exercise of all power necessary to effect a peaceable revolution of the State Government and to the re-establishment of one for the "happiness, prosperity and freedom of the citizens," limited only by the Federal Constitution. Notwithstanding the law calling the Convention required its members to take an oath to support the Constitution of the State as well as that of the general Government, they utterly refused to take such oath. They also assumed legislative powers and passed several important "laws!" Interfering with the (then) present executive duties, Gov. Yates was provoked to tell them plainly that "he did not acknowledge the right of the Convention to instruct him in the performance of his duty."

In 1863 the Governor astonished the Democrats by "proroguing" their Legislature. This body, after a recess, met June 2, that year, and soon began to waste time upon various partisan resolutions; and, while the two houses were disagreeing upon the question of adjourning sine die, the Governor, having the authority in such cases, surprised them all by adjourning them "to the Saturday next preceding the first Monday in January, 1865!" This led to great excitement and confusion, and to a reference of the Governor's act to the Supreme Court, who decided in his favor. Then it was the Court's turn to receive abuse for weeks and months afterward.

During the autumn of 1864 a conspiracy was detected at Chicago which had for its object the liberation of the prisoners of war at Camp Douglas, the burning of the city and the inauguration of rebellion in the North. Gen. Sweet, who had charge of the camp at the time, first had his suspicions of danger aroused by a number of enigmatically worded letters which passed through the Camp postoffice. A detective afterward discovered that the rebel Gen. Marmaduke was in the city, under an assumed name, and he, with other rebel officers-Grenfell, Morgan, Cantrell, Buckner Morris, and Charles Walsh-was arrested, most of whom were convicted by a court-martial at Cincinnati and sentenced to imprisonment,-Grenfell to be hung. The sentence of the latter was afterward commuted to imprisonment for life, and all the others, after nine months' imprisonment, were pardoned.

In March, 1873, Gov. Yates was appointed a Government Director of the Union Pacific Railroad, in which office he continued until his decease, at St. Louis, Mo., on the 27th of November following.

R.J. Oglesly

ICHARD J. OGLESBY, Governor 1865–8, and re-elected in 1872 and 1884, was born July 25, 1824, in Oldham Co., Ky.,—the State which might be considered the "mother of Illinois Governors." Bereft of his parents at the tender age of eight years, his early education was neglected. When 12 years of age, and after he had worked a year and a half at the carpenter's trade, he removed with an uncle, Willis Oglesby, into whose care he had been committed, to Decatur, this State, where he continued his apprenticeship as a mechanic, working six months for Hon. E. O. Smith.

In 1844 he commenced studying law at Springfield, with Judge Silas Robbins, and read with him one year. He was admitted to the Bar in 1845, and commenced the practice of his chosen profession at Sullivan, the county seat of Moultrie County.

The next year the war with Mexico was commenced, and in June, 1846, Mr. Oglesby volunteered, was elected First Lieutenant of Co. C, Fourth Illinois Regiment of Volunteers, and participated in the battles of Vera Cruz and Cerro Gordo.

On his return he sought to perfect his law studies by attending a course of lectures at Louisville, but on the breaking out of the California "gold fever" in 1849, he crossed the plains and mountains to the new Eldorado, driving a six-mule team, with a company of eight men, Henry Prather being the leader.

In 1852 he returned home to Macon County, and was placed that year by the Whig party on the ticket of Presidential Electors. In 1856 he visited Europe, Asia and Africa, being absent 20 months. On his return home he resumed the practice of law, as a member of the firm of Gallagher, Wait & Oglesby. In 1858 he was the Republican nominee for the Lower House of Congress, but was defeated by the Hon, James C. Robinson, Democrat. In 1860 he was elected to the Illinois State Senate; and on the evening the returns of this election were coming in, Mr. Oglesby had a fisticuff encounter with "Cerro Gordo Williams," in which he came out victorious, and which was regarded as "the first fight of the Rebellion." The following spring, when the war had commenced in earnest, his ardent nature quickly responded to the demands of patriotism and he enlisted. The extra session of the Legislature elected him Colonel of the Eighth Illinois Infantry, the second one in the State raised to suppress the great Rebellion.

He was shortly entrusted with important commands. For a time he was stationed at Bird's Point and Cairo; in April he was promoted Brigadier General; at Fort Donelson his brigade was in the van, being stationed on the right of General Grant's army and the first brigade to be attacked. He lost 500 men before re-inforcements arrived. Many of these men were from Macon County. He was engaged in the battle of Corinth, and, in a brave charge at this place, was shot in the left lung with an ounce ball, and was carried from the field in expectation of immediate death. That rebel ball he carries to this day. On his partial recovery he was promoted as Major General, for gillantry, his commission to rank from November, 1862. In the spring of 1863 he was assigned to the command of the 16th Army Corps, but, owing to inability from the effects of his wound, he relinquished this command in July, that year. Gen. Grant, however, refused to accept his resignation, and he was detailed, in December following, to court-martial and try the Surgeon General of the Army at Washington, where he remained until May, 1864, when he returned home.

The Republican, or Union, State Convention of 1864 was held at Springfield, May 25, when Mr. Oglesby was nominated for the office of Governor, while other candidates before the Convention were Allen C. Fuller, of Boone, Jesse K. Dubois, of Sangamon, and John M. Palmer, of Macoupin. Wm. Bross, of Chicago, was nominated for Lieutenant Governor. On the Democratic State ticket were James C. Robinson, of Clark, for Governor, and S. Corning Judd, of Fulton, for Lieutenant Governor. The general election gave Gen. Oglesby a majority of about 31,000 votes. The Republicans had also a majority in both the Legislature and in the representation in Congress.

Gov. Oglesby was duly inaugurated Jan. 17, 1865. The day before the first time set for his installation death visited his home at Decatur, and took from it his only son, an intelligent and sprightly lad of six years, a great favorite of the bereaved parents. This caused the inauguration to be postponed a week.

The political events of the Legislative session of 1865 were the election of ex-Gov. Yates to the United States Senate, and the ratification of the 13th amendment to the Constitution of the United States, abolishing slavery. This session also signalized itself by repealing the notorious "black laws," part of which, although a dead letter, had held their place upon the statute books since 1819. Also, laws requiring the registration of voters, and establishing a State Board of Equalization, were passed by this Legislature. But the same body evinced that it was corruptly influenced by a mercenary lobby, as it adopted some bad legislation, over the Governor's veto, notably an amendment to a charter for a Chicago horse railway, granted in 1859 for 25 years, and now sought to be extended 99 years. As this measure was promptly passed over his veto by both branches of the Legislature, he deemed it useless further to attempt to check their headlong career. At this session no law of a general useful character or public interest was perfected, unless we count such the turning over of the canal to Chicago to be deepened. The session of 1867 was still more productive of private and special acts. Many omnibus bills were proposed, and some passed. The contests over the execution of the Industrial College, the Capital, the Southern Penitentiary, and the canal enlargement and Illinois River improvement, dominated everything else.

During the year 1872, it became evident that if the Republicans could re-elect Mr. Oglesby to the office of Governor, they could also elect him to the United States Senate, which they desired to do. Accordingly they re-nominated him for the Executive chair, and placed upon the ticket with him for Lieutenant Governor, John L. Beveridge, of Cook County. On the other side the Democrats put into the field Gustavus Koerner for Governor and John C. Black for Lieutenant Governor. The election gave the Republican ticket majorities ranging from 35,334 to 56,174,—the Democratic defection being caused mainly by their having an old-time Whig and Abolitionist, Horace Greeley, on the national ticket for President. According to the general understanding had beforehand, as soon as the Legislature met it elected Gov. Oglesby to the United States Senate, whereupon Mr. Beveridge became Governor. Senator Oglesby's term expired March 4, 1879, having served his party faithfully and exhibited an order of statesmanship beyond criticism.

During the campaign of 1884 Mr. Oglesby was nominated for a "third term" as Executive of the State of Illinois, against Carter H. Harrison, Mayor of Chicago, nominated by the Democrats. Both gentlemen "stumped" the State, and while the people elected a Legislature which was a tie on a joint ballot, as between the two parties, they gave the jovial "Dick" Oglesby a majority of 15,018 for Governor, and he was inaugurated Jan. 30, 1885. The Legislature did not fully organize until this date, on account of its equal division between the two main parties and the consequent desperate tactics of each party to checkmate the latter in the organization of the House.

Gov. Oglesby is a fine-appearing, affable man, with regular, well defined features and rotund face. In stature he is a little above medium height, of a large frame and somewhat fleshy. His physical appearance is striking and prepossessing, while his straightout, not to say bluff, manner and speech are well calculated favorably to impress the average masses. Ardent in feeling and strongly committed to the policies of his party, he intensifies Republicanism among Republicans, while at the same time his jovial, and liberal manner prevents those of the opposite party from hating him.

He is quite an effective stump orator. With vehement, passionate and scornful tone and gestures, tremendous physical power, which in speaking he exercises to the utmost; with frequent descents to the grotesque; and with abundant homely comparisons or frontier figures, expressed in the broadest vernacular and enforced with stentorian emphasis, he delights a promiscuous audience beyond measure,

Alush Paenen

HN Mc AULEY PALMER, Governor 1869–72, was born on Eagle Creek, Scott Co., Ky, Sept. 13, 1817. During his infancy, his father, who had been a soldier in the war of 1812, removed to Christian Co., Ky., where lands were cheap. Here the future Governor of the great Prairie State spent his childhood and received such meager schooling as the new and sparsely settled country afforded. To this he added materially by diligent reading, for which he evinced an early aptitude. His father, an ardent Jackson man, was also noted for his anti-slavery sentiments, which he thoroughly impressed upon his children. In 1831 he emigrated to Illinois, settling in Madison County. Here the labor of improving a farm was pursued for about two years, when the death of Mr. Palmer's mother broke up the family. About this time Alton College was opened, on the "manual labor" system, and in the spring of 1834 young Palmer, with his elder brother, Elihu, entered this school and remained 18 months. Next, for over three years, he tried variously coopering, peddling and school-teaching.

During the summer of 1838 he formed the acquaintance of Stephen A. Douglas, then making his first canvass for Congress. Young, eloquent and in political accord with Mr. Palmer, he won his confidence, fired his ambition and fixed his purpose. The following winter, while teaching near Canton, he began to devote his spare time to a desultory reading of law, and in the spring entered a law office at Carlinville, making his home with his elder brother, Elihu. (The latter was a learned clergyman, of considerable orginality of thought and doctrine.) On the next meeting of the Supreme Court he was admitted to the Bar, Douglas being one of his examiners. He was not immediately successful in his profession, and would have located elsewhere than Carlinville had he the requisite means. Thus his early poverty was a blessing in disguise, for to it he now attributes the success of his life.

From 1839 on, while he diligently pursued his profession, he participated more or less in local politics. In 1843 he became Probate Judge. In 1847 he was elected to the State Constitutional Convention, where he took a leading part. In 1852 he was elected to the State Senate, and at the special session of February, 1854, true to the anti-slavery sentiments bred in him, he took a firm stand in opposition to the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and when the Nebraska question became a party issue he refused to receive a re-nomination for the Senatorship at the hands of the Democracy, issuing a circular to that effect. A few weeks afterward however, hesitating to break with his party, he participated in a Congressional Convention which nomi-T. L. Harris against Richard Yates, and which unqualifiedly approved the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska act. But later in the campaign he made the plunge, ran for the Senate as an Anti-Nebraska Democrat, and was elected. The following winter ne put in nomination for the United States Senate Mr. Trumbull, and was one of the five steadfast men who voted for him until all the Whigs came to their support and elected their man.

In 1856 he was Chairman of the Republican State Convention at Bloomington. He ran for Congress in 1859, but was defeated. In 1860 he was Republican Presidential Elector for the State at large. In 1861 he was appointed one of the five Delegates (all Republicans) sent by Illinois to the peace congress at Washington.

When the civil conflict broke out, he offered his services to his country, and was elected Colonel of the 4th Ill. Vol. Inf., and participated in the engagements at Island No. 10; at Farmington, where he skillfully extricated his command from a dangerous position; at Stone River, where his division for several hours, Dec. 31, 1862, held the advance and stood like a rock, and for his gallantry there he was made Major General; at Chickamauga, where his and Van Cleve's divisions for two hours maintained their position when they were cut off by overpowering numbers. Under Gen. Sherman, he was assigned to the 14th Army Corps and participated in the Atlanta campaign. At Peach-Tree Creek his prudence did much to avert disaster. In February, 1865, Gen. Palmer was assigned to the military administration of Kentucky, which was a delicate post. That State was about half rebel and half Union, and those of the latter element were daily fretted by the loss of their slaves. He, who had been bred to the rules of common law, trembled at the contemplation of his extraordinary power over the persons and property of his fellow men, with which he was vested in his capacity as military Governor; and he exhibited great caution in the execution of the duties of his post.

Gen. Palmer was nominated for Governor of Illinois by the Republican State Convention which met at Peoria May 6, 1868, and his nomination would probably have been made by acclamation had he not persistently declared that he could not accept a candidature for the office. The result of the ensuing election gave Mr. Palmer a majority of 44,707 over John R. Eden, the Democratic nominee.

On the meeting of the Legislature in January, 1869, the first thing to arrest public attention was that portion of the Governor's message which took broad State's rights ground. This and some minor points, which were more in keeping with the Democratic sentiment, constituted the entering wedge for the criticisms and reproofs he afterward received from the Republican party, and ultimately resulted in his entire aleniation from the latter element. The Legislature just referred to was noted for the introduction of numerous bills in the interest of private parties, which were embarrassing to the Governor. Among the public acts passed was that which limited railroad charges for passenger travel to a maximum of three cents per mile; and it was passed over the Governor's veto. Also, they passed, over his veto, the "tax-grabbing law" to pay railroad subscriptions, the Chicago Lake Front bill, etc. The new State Constitution of 1870, far superior to the old, was a peaceful "revolution" which took place during Gov. Palmer's term of office. The suffering caused by the great Chicago Fire of October, 1871, was greatly alleviated by the prompt responses of his excellency.

Since the expiration of Gov. Palmers's term, he has been somewhat prominent in Illinois politics, and has been talked of by many, especially in the Democratic party, as the best man in the State for a United States Senator. His business during life has been that of the law, Few excel him in an accurate appreciation of the depth and scope of its principles. The great number of his able veto messages abundantly testify not only this but also a rare capacity to point them out. He is a logical and cogent reasoner and an interesting, forcible and convincing speaker, though not fluent or ornate. Without brilliancy, his dealings are rather with facts and ideas than with appeals to passions and prejudices. He is a patriot and a statesman of very high order. Physically he is above the medium height, of robust frame, ruddy complexion and sanguine-nervous temperament. He has a large cranial development, is vivacious, social in disposition, easy of approach, unostentatious in his habits of life, democratic in his habits and manners and is a true American in his fundamental principles of statesmanship.

John L. Beverily

OHN LOWRIE BEVER-IDGE, Governor 1873-6, was born in the town of Greenwich, Washington Co., N. Y., July 6, 1824. His parents were George and Ann Beveridge. His father's parents, Andrew and Isabel Beveridge, before their marriage emigrated from Scotland just before the Revolutionary War, settling in Washington County. His father was the eldest of eight brothers, the youngest of whom was 60 years of age when the first one of the number died. His mother's parents, James and Agnes Hoy, emigrated from Scotland at the close of the Revolutionary War, settling also in Washington Co., N. Y., with their first-born, whose "native land" was the wild ocean. His parents and grandparents lived beyond the time allotted to man, their average age being over 80 years. They belonged to the "Associate Church," a seceding Presbyterian body of America from the old Scotch school; and so rigid was the training of young Beveridge that he never heard a sermon from any other minister except that of his own denomination until he was in his 19th year. Later in life he became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which relation he still holds.

Mr. Beveridge received a good common-school education, but his parents, who could obtain a livelihood only by rigid economy and industry, could not send him away to college. He was raised upon a farm, and was in his 18th year when the family removed to De Kalb County, this State, when that section was very sparsely settled. Chicago had less than 7,000 inhabitants. In this wild West he continued as a farm laborer, teaching school during the winter months to supply the means of an education. In the fall of 1842 he attended one term at the academy at Granville, Putnam Co., Ill., and subsequently several terms at the Rock River Seminary at Mount Morris, Ogle Co., Ill., completing the academic course. At this time, the fall of 1845, his parents and brothers were anxious to have him go to college, even though he had not money sufficient; but, not willing to burden the family, he packed his trunk and with only $40 in money started South to seek his fortune

Poor, alone, without friends and influence, he thus entered upon the battle of life.

First, he taught school in Wilson, Overton and Jackson Cos., Tenn., in which experience he underwent considerable mental drill, both in book studies and in the ways of the world. He read law and was admitted to the Bar, in the South, but did not learn to love the institution of slavery, although he admired many features of Southern character. In December, 1847, he returned North, and Jan. 20, 1848, he married Miss Helen M. Judson, in the old Clark-Street M. E. church in Chicago, her father at that time being Pastor of the society there. In the spring of 1848 he returned with his wife to Tennessee, where his two children, Alla May and Philo Judson, were born.

In the fall of 1849, through the mismanagement of an associate, he lost what little he had accumulated and was left in debt. He soon managed to earn means to pay his debts, returned to De Kalb Co., Ill., and entered upon the practice of his profession at Sycamore, the county seat. On arrival from the South he had but one-quarter of a dollar in money, and scanty clothing and bedding for himself and family. He borrowed a little money, practiced law, worked in public offices, kept books for some of the business men of the town, and some railroad engineering, till the spring of 1854, when he removed to Evanston, 12 miles north of Chicago, a place then but recently laid out, under the supervision of the Northwestern University, a Methodist institution. Of the latter his father-in-law was then financial agent and business manager. Here Mr. Beveridge prospered, and the next year (1855) opened a law office in Chicago, where he found the battle somewhat hard; but he persevered with encouragement and increasing success.

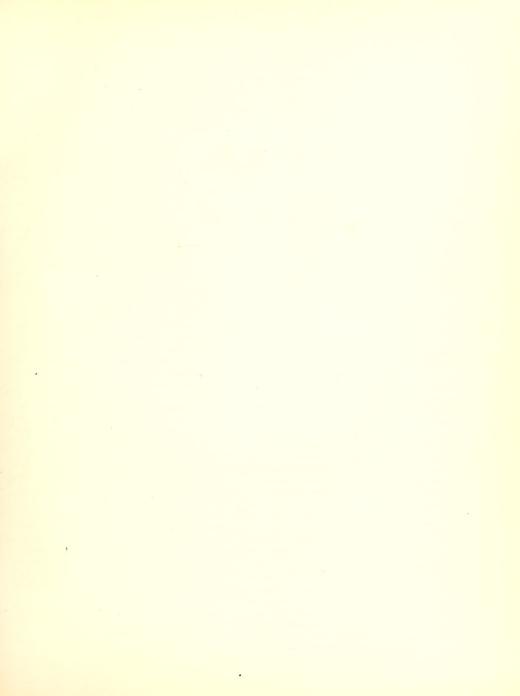

Aug. 12, 1861, his law partner, Gen. John F. Farnsworth, secured authority to raise a regiment of cavalry, and authorized Mr. Beveridge to raise a company for it. He succeeded in a few days in raising the company, of course enlisting himself along with it. The regiment rendezvoused at St. Charles, Ill., was mustered in Sept. 18, and on its organization Mr. B. was elected Second Major. It was attached, Oct. 11, to the Eighth Cavalry and to the Army of the Potomac. He served with the regiment until November, 1863, participating in some 40 battles and skirmishes: was at Fair Oaks, the seven days' fight around Richmond, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. He commanded the regiment the greater part of the summer of 1863, and it was while lying in camp this year that he originated the policy of encouraging recruits as well as the fighting capacity of the soldiery, by the wholesale furlough system It worked so well that many other officers adopted it. In the fall of this year he recruited another company, against heavy odds, in January, 1864, was commissioned Colonel of the 17th Ill. Cav., and skirmished around in Missouri, concluding with the reception of the surrender of Gen. Kirby Smith's army in Arkansas. In 1865 he commanded various sub-districts in the Southwest. He was mustered out Feb. 6, 1866, safe from the casualties of war and a stouter man than when he first enlisted. His men idolized him.

He then returned to Chicago, to practice law, with no library and no clientage, and no political experience except to help others into office. In the fall of 1866 he was elected Sheriff of Cook County, serving one term; next, until November, 1870, he practiced law and closed up the unfinished business of his office. He was then elected State Senator; in November, 1871, he was elected Congressman at large; in November, 1872, he was elected Lieutenant Governor on the ticket with Gov. Oglesby; the latter being elected to the U.S. Senate, Mr. Beveridge became Governor, Jan. 21, 1873. Thus, inside of a few weeks, he was Congressman at large, Lieutenant Governor and Governor. The principal events occurring during Gov. Beveridge's administration were: The completion of the revision of the statutes, begun in 1869; the partial success of the "farmers' movement;" "Haines' Legislature " and Illinois' exhibit at the Centennial.

Since the close of his gubernatorial term ex-Gov. Beveridge has been a member of the firm of Beveridge & Dewey, bankers and dealers in commercial paper at 71 Dearborn Street (McCormick Block), Chicago, and Since November, 1881, he has also been Assistant United States Treasurer: office in the Government Building. His residence is still at Evanston.

He has a brother and two sisters yet residing in De Kalb County—James H. Beveridge, Mrs. Jennet Henry and Mrs. Isabel French.

Moullow

HELBY M. CULLOM, Governor 1877-83, is the sixth child of the late Richard N. Cullom, and was born Nov. 22, 1829, in Wayne Co., Ky., where his father then resided, and whence both the Illinois and Tennessee branches of the family originated. In the following year the family emigrated to the vicinity of Washington, Tazewell Co., Ill., when that section was very sparsely settled. They located on Deer Creek, in a grove at the time occupied by a party of Indians, attracted there by the superior hunting and fishing afforded in that vicinity. The following winter was known as the "hard winter," the snow being very deep and lasting and the weather severely cold; and the family had to subsist mainly on boiled corn or hominy, and some wild game, for several weeks. In the course of time Mr. R. N. Cullom became a prominent citizen and was several times elected to the Legislature, both before and after the removal of the capital from Vandalia to Springfield. He died about 1873.

Until about 19 years of age young Cullom grew up to agricultural pursuits, attending school as he had opportunity during the winter. Within this time, owever, he spent several months teaching school.

and in the following summer he "broke prairie" with an ox team for the neighbors. With the money obtained by these various ventures, he undertook a course of study at the Rock River Seminary, a Methodist institution at Mt. Morris, Ogle Countybut the sudden change to the in-door life of a student told severely upon his health, and he was taken home, being considered in a hopeless condition. While at Mt. Morris he heard Hon. E. B. Washburne make his first speech.

On recovering health, Mr. Cullom concluded to study law, under the instruction of Abraham Lincoln, at Springfield, who had by this time attained some notoriety as an able lawyer; but the latter, being absent from his office most of the time, advised Mr. Cullom to enter the office of Stuart & Edwards. After about a year of study there, however, his health failed again, and he was obliged to return once more to out-door life. Accordingly he bought hogs for packing, for A. G. Tyng, in Peoria, and while he regained his health he gained in purse, netting $400 in a few weeks. Having been admitted to the Bar, he went to Springfield, where he was soon elected City Attorney, on the Anti-Nebraska ticket.

In 1856 he ran on the Fillmore ticket as a Presidential Elector, and, although failing to be elected as such, he was at the same time elected a Representative in the Legislature from Sangamon County, by a local coalition of the American and Republican parties. On the organization of the House, he received the vote of the Fillmore men for Speaker. Practicity law until 1860, he was again elected to the Legislature, as a Republican, while the county went Demoeratic on the Presidential ticket. In January following he was elected Speaker, probably the youngest man who had ever presided over an Illinois Legislature. After the session of 1861, he was a candidate for the State Constitutional Convention called for that year, but was defeated, and thus escaped the disgrace of being connected with that abortive party scheme to revolutionize the State Government. In 1862 he was a candidate for the State Senate, but was defeated. The same year, however, he was apnointed by President Lincoln on a Government Commission, in company with Gov. Boutwell of Massachusetts and Cnarles A. Dana, since of the New York Sun, to investigate the affairs of the Quartermaster's and Commissary Departments at Cairo. He devoted several months to this duty.

In 1864 he entered upon a larger political field, being nominated as the Republican candidate for Congress from the Eighth (Springfield) District, in opposition to the incumbent, John T. Stuart, who had been elected in 1862 by about 1,500 majority over Leonard Swett, then of Bloomington, now of Chicago. The result was the election of Mr. Cullom in November following by a majority of 1,785. In 1866 he was re-elected to Congress, over Dr. E. S. Fowler, by the magnificent majority of 4,103! In 1868 he was again a candidate, defeating the Hon. B. S. Edwards, another of his old preceptors, by 2,884 votes.

During his first term in Congress he served on the Committee on Foreign Affairs and Expenditures in the Treasury Department; in his second term, on the Committees on Foreign Affairs and on Territories; and in his third term he succeeded Mr. Ashley, of Ohio, to the Chairmanship of the latter. He introduced a bill in the House, to aid in the execution of law in Utah, which caused more consternation among the Mormons than any measure had previously, but which, though it passed the House, failed to pass the Senate.

The Republican Convention which met May 25, 1876, nominated Mr. Cullom for Governor, while the other contestant was Gov. Beveridge. For Lieutenant-Governor they nominated Andrew Shuman, editor of the Chicago Journal. For the same offices the Democrats, combining with the Anti-Monopolists, placed in nomination Lewis Steward, a wealthy farmer and manufacturer, and A. A. Glenn. The result of the election was rather close, Mr. Cullom obtaining only 6,800 majority. He was inaugurated Jan. 8, 1877.

Great depression prevailed in financial circles at this time, as a consequence of the heavy failures of 1873 and afterward, the effect of which had seemed to gather force from that time to the end of Gov. Cullom's first administration. This unspeculative period was not calculated to call forth any new issues, but the Governor's energies were at one time put to task to quell a spirit of insubordination that had been begun in Pittsburg, Pa., among the laboring classes, and transferred to Illinois at Chicago, East St. Louis and Braidwood, at which places laboring men for a short time refused to work or allow others to work. These disturbances were soon quelled and the wheels of industry again set in motion.

In May, 1880, Gov. Cullom was re-nominated by the Republicans, against Lyman Trumbull, by the Democrats; and although the former party was somewhat handicapped in the campaign by a zealous faction opposed to Grant for President and to Grant men for office generally, Mr. Cullom was re-elected by about 314,565, to 277,532 for the Democratic State ticket. The Greenback vote at the same time was about 27,000. Both Houses of the Legislature again became Republican, and no representative of the Greenback or Socialist parties were elected. Gov. Cullom was inaugurated Jan. 10, 1381. In his message he announced that the last dollar of the State debt had been provided for.

March 4, 1883, the term of David Davis as United States Senator from Illinois expired, and Gov. Cullon was chosen to succeed him. This promoted Lieutenant-Governor John M. Hamilton to the Governorship. Senator Cullom's term in the United States Senate will expire March 4, 1889.

As a practitioner of law Mr. C. has been a member of the firm of Cullom, Scholes & Mather, at Springfield; and he has also been President of the State National Bank.

He has been married twice,—the first time Dec. 112, 1855, to Miss Hannah Fisher, by whom he had two daughters; and the second time May 5, 1863, to Julia Fisher. Mrs. C is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with which religious body Mr. C. is also in sympathy.

John M. Familton

OHN MARSHALL HAMIL-

TON, Governor 1883–5, was born May 28, 1847, in a log house upon a farm about two miles from Richwood, Union County, Ohio. His father was Samuel Hamilton, the eldest son of Rev. Wm. Hamilton, who, together with his brother, the Rev. Samuel Hamilton, was among the early pioneer Methodist preachers in Ohio. The mother of the subject of this sketch was, before her marriage, Mrs. Nancy McMotris, who was born and raised in Fauquier or Loudoun County, Va., and related to the two large families of Youngs and Marshalls, well known in that commonwealth; and from the latter family name was derived the middle name of Gov. Hamilton.

In March, 1854, Mr. Hamilton's father sold out his little pioneer forest home in Union County, O., and, loading his few household effects and family (of six children) into two emigrant covered wagons, moved to Roberts Township, Marshall Co., Ill., being 21 days on the route. Swamps, unbridged streams and innumerable hardships and privations met them on their way. Their new home had been previously selected by the father. Here, after many long years of toil, they succeeded in paying for the land and waking a comfortable home. John was, of course, brought up to hard manual labor, with no schooling except three or four months in the year at a common country school. However, he evinced a capacity and taste for a high order of self-education, by studying or reading what books he could borrow, as the family had but very few in the house. Much of his study he prosecuted by the light of a log fire in the old-fashioned chimney place. The financial panic of 1857 caused the family to come near losing their home, to pay debts; but the father and two sons, William and John, "buckled to" and persevered in hard labor and economy until they redeemed their place from the mortgage.

When the tremendous excitement of the political campaign of 1860 reached the neighborhood of Roberts Township, young Hamilton, who had been brought up in the doctrine of anti-slavery, took a zealous part in favor of Lincoln's election. Making special efforts to procure a little money to buy a uniform, he joined a company of Lincoln Wide-Awakes at Magnolia, a village not far away. Directly after the ensuing election it became evident that trouble would ensue with the South, and this Wide-Awake company, like many others throughout the country, kept up its organization and transformed itself into a military company. During the ensuing summer they met often for drill and became proficient; but when they offered themselves for the war, young Hamilton was rejected on account of his youth, he being then but 14 years of age. During the winter of 1863-4 he attended an academy at Henry, Marshall County, and in the following May he again enlisted, for the fourth time, when he was placed in the 141st Iil. Vol Inf., a regiment then being raised at Elgin, Ill., for the roo-day service. He took with him 13 other lads from his neighborhood, for enlistment in the service. This regiment operated in Southwestern Kentucky, for about five months, under Gen. Paine.

The following winter, 1864-5, Mr. Hamilton taught school, and during the two college years 1865-7, he went through three years of the curriculum of the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. The third year he graduated, the fourth in a class of 46, in the classical department. In due time he received the degree of M. A. For a few months he was the Principal of Marshall "College" at Henry, an academy under the auspices of the M. E. Church. By this time he had commenced the study of law, and after earning some money as a temporary Professor of Latin at the Illinois Wesleyan University at Bloomington, he entered the law office of Weldon, Tipton & Benjamin, of that city. Each member of this firm has since been distinguished as a Judge. Admitted to the Bar in May, 1870, Mr. Hamilton was given an interest in the same firm, Tipton having been elected Judge. In October following he formed a partnership with J. H. Rowell, at that time Prosecuting Attorney. Their business was then small, but they increased it to very large proportions, practicing in all grades of courts, including even the U. S. Supreme Court, and this partnership continued unbroken until Feb. 6, 1883, when Mr. Hamilton was sworn in as Executive of Illinois. On the 4th of March following Mr. Rowell took his seat in Con-

In July, 1871. Mr. Humilton married Miss Helen M. Williams, the daughter of Prof. Wm. G. Williams, Professor of Greek in the Ohio Wesleyan University. Mr. and Mrs. H. have two daughters and one son.

In 1876 Mr. Hamilton was nominated by the Republicans for the State Senate, over other and older competitors. He took an active part "on the stump" in the campaign, for the success of his party, and was elected by a majority of 1,640 over his Democratic-Greenback opponent. In the Senate he served on the Committees on Judiciary, Revenue, State Institutions, Appropriations, Education, and on Miscellany; and during the contest for the election of a U. S. Senator, the Republicans endeavoring to re-elect John A. Logan, he voted for the war chief on every ballot, even alone when all the other Republicans had gone over to the Hon. E. B. Lawrence and the Democrats and Independents elected Judge David Davis. At this session, also, was passed the first Board of Health and Medical Practice act, of which Mr. Hamilton was a champion, against so much opposition that the bill was several times "laid on the table." Also, this session authorized the location and establishment of a southern penitentiary, which was fixed at Chester. In the session of r879 Mr. Hamilton was elected President fro ten. of the Senate, and was a zealous supporter of John A. Logan for the U. S. Senate, who was this time elected without any trouble.

In May, 1880, Mr. Hamilton was nominated on the Republican ticket for Lieutenant Governor, his principal competitors before the Convention being Hon, Wm. A. James, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives, Judge Robert Bell, of Wabash County, Hon. T. T. Fountain, of Perry County, and Hon. M. M. Saddler, of Marion County. He engaged actively in the campaign, and his ticket was elected by a majority of 41,200. As Lieutenant Governor, he presided almost continuously over the Senate in the 32d General Assembly and during the early days of the 33d, until he succeeded to the Governorship. When the Legislature of 1883 elected Gov. Cullom to the United States Senate, Lieut. Gov. Hamilton succeeded him, under the Constitution, taking the oath of office Feb. 6, 1883. He bravely met all the annoyances and embarrassments incidental upon taking up another's administration. The principal events with which Gov. Hamilton was connected as the Chief Executive of the State were, the mine disaster at Braidwood, the riots in St. Clair and Madison Counties in May, r883, the appropriations for the State militia, the adoption of the Harper high-license liquor law, the veto of a dangerous railroad bill, etc.

The Governor was a Delegate at large to the National Republican Convention at Chicago in June, 1884, where his first choice for President was John A. Logan, and second choice Chester A. Arthur; but he afterward zealously worked for the election of Mr. Blaine, true to his party.

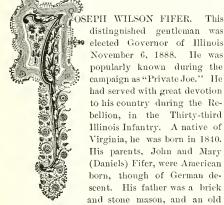

Mr. Hamilton's term as Governor expired Jan. 30, 1885, when the great favorite "Dick" Oglesby was inaugurated.

J. V. Figer

Henry Clay Whig in politics. John and Mary Fifer had nine children, of whom Joseph was the sixth, and naturally, with so large a family, it was all the father could do to keep the wolf from the door, to say nothing of giving his children anything like good educational advantages.

Joseph attended school for a while in Virgina, but it was not a good school, and when his father removed to the West, in 1857, Joseph had not advanced much further than the "First Reader." Our subject was sixteen then and suffered a great misfortune in the loss of his mother. After the death of Mrs. Fifer, which occurred in Missouri, the family returned to Virgina, but remained only a short time, as during the same year Mr. Fifer eame to Illinois. He settled in McLean County and started a brickyard. Here Joseph and his brothers were put to work. The elder Mr. Fifer soon bought a farm near Bloomington and began life as an agriculturist. Here Joe worked and attended the neighboring school. He alternated farm-work, and brick-laying, going to the district school for the succeeding few years. It was all work and no play for Joe, yet it by no means made a dull boy of him. All the time he was thinking of the great world outside, of which he had caught a glimpse when coming from Virginia, yet he did not know just how he was going to get out into it. He could not feel that the woods around the new farm and the log cabin, in which the family lived, were to hold him.

The opportunity to get out into the world was soon offered to young Joe. He traveled a dozen miles barefoot, in company with his brother George, and enlisted in Company C, Thirty-third Illinois Infantry, he being then twenty years old. In a few days, the regiment was sent to Camp Butler, and then over into Missouri, and saw some vigorous service there. After a second time helping to chase Price out of Missouri, the Thirty-third Regiment went down to Milliken's Bend, and for several weeks "Private Joe" worked on Grant's famous ditch. The regiment then joined the forces operating against Port Gibson and Vicksburg. Joe was on guard duty in the front ditches when the flag of surrender was run up on the 4th of July, and stuck the bayonet of his gun into the embankment and went into the city with the vanguard of Union soldiers.

The next day, July 5, the Thirty-third joined the force after Johnston, who had been threatening Grant's rear; and finally an assault was made on him at Jackson, Miss. In this charge "Private Joe" fell, terribly wounded. He was loading his gun, when a minie-ball struck him and passed entirely through his body. He was regarded as mortally wounded. His brother, George, who had been made a Lieutenant, proved to be the means of saving his life. The Surgeon told him that unless he had ice his brother could not live. It was fifty miles to the nearest point where ice could be obtained, and the roads were rough. A comrade, a McLean County man, who had been wounded, offered to make the trip. An ambulance was secured and the brother soldier started on the journey. He returned with the ice, but the trip, owing to the roughness of the road, was very hard on him. After a few months' careful nursing, Mr. Fifer was able to come home. The Thirty-third came home on a furlough, and when the boys were ready to return to the tented field, young Fifer was ready to go with them, for he was determined to finish his term of three years. He was mustered out in October, 1864, having been in the service three years and two months.

"Private Joe" eame out of the army a tall, tanned, and awkward young man of twenty-four. About all he possessed was ambition to be some-body—and pluck. Though at an age when most men have finished their college course, the young soldier saw that if he was to be anybody he must have an education. Yet he had no means to enable him to enter school as most young men do. He was determined to have an education, however, and that to him meant success. For the following four years he struggled with his books. He entered Wesleyan University January 1, 1865. He was not a brilliant student, being neither at the head nor at the foot of his class. He was in great earnest, however, studied hard and came forth with a well-stored and disciplined mind.

Immediately after being graduated, he entered an office at Bloomington as a law student. He had previously read law a little, and as he continued to work hard, with the spur of poverty and promptings of ambition ever with him, he was ready to hang out his professional shingle in 1869. Being trustworthy, he soon gathered about him some influential friends. In 1871 he was elected Corporation Counsel of Bloomington. In 1872 he was elected State's Attorney of McLean County. This office he held eight years, when he took his seat in the State Senate. He served for four years. His ability to perform abundance of hard work made him a most valued member of the Legislature.

Mr. Fifer was married in 1870 to Gertie, daughter of William J. Lewis, of Bloomington. Mr. Fifer is six feet in height and is spare, weighing only one hundred and fifty pounds. He has a swarthy complexion, keen black eyes, quick movement, and possesses a frank and sympathetic nature, and naturlly makes friends wherever he goes. During the late gubernatorial campaign his visits throughout the State proved a great power in his behalf. His faculty of winning the confidence and good wishes of those with whom he comes in personal contact is a source of great popularity, especially during a political battle. As a speaker he is fluent, his language is good, voice clear and agreeable, and manner forcible. His manifest earnestness in what he says, as well as his tact as a public speaker, and his eloquent and forceful language, make him a most valuable eampaign orator and a powerful pleader at the bar. At the Republican State Convention, held in May, 1888, Mr. Fifer was chosen as its candidate for Governor. He proved a popular nominee, and the name of "Private Joe" became familiar to everyone throughout the State. He waged a vigorous campaign, was elected by a good majority, and in due time assumed the duties of the Chief Executive of Illinois.

WINNEBAGO AND BOONE COUNTIES, ILLINOIS.

E time has arrived when it becomes the duty of the people of this county to perpetuate the names of their pioneers, to furnish a record of their early settlement, and relate the story of their progress. The civilization of our day, the enlightenment of the age and the duty that men of the present time owe to their ancestors, to themselves and to their posterity, demand that a record of their lives and deeds should be made. In biographical history is found a power to instruct man by precedent, to enliven the mental faculties, and to waft down the river of time a safe vessel in which the names and actions of the people who contributed to raise this country from its primitive state may be preserved. Surely and rapidly the great and aged men, who in their prime entered the wilderness and claimed the virgin soil as their heritage, are passing to their graves. The number remaining who can relate the incidents of the first days of settlement is becoming small indeed, so that an actual necessity exists for the collection and preservation of events without delay, before all the early settlers are cut down by the scythe of Time.

To be forgotten has been the great dread of mankind from remotest ages. All will be forgotten soon enough, in spite of their best works and the most earnest efforts of their friends to perserve the memory of their lives. The means employed to prevent oblivion and to perpetuate their memory has been in proportion to the amount of intelligence they possessed. The pyramids of Egypt were built to perpetuate the names and deeds of their great rulers. The exhumations made by the archeologists of Egypt from builed Memphis indicate a desire of those people to perpetuate the memory of their achievements The erection of the great obelisks were for the same purpose. Coming down to a later period, we find the Greeks and Romans erecting mausoleums and monuments, and carving out statues to chronicle their great achievements and carry them down the ages. It is also evident that the Mound-builders, in piling up their great mounds of earth, had but this ideato leave something to show that they had lived. All these works, though many of them costly in the extreme, give but a faint idea of the lives and characters of those whose memory they were intended to perpetuate, and scarcely anything of the masses of the people that then lived. The great pyramids and some of the obelisks remain objects only of curiosity; the mausoleums, monuments and statues are crumbling into dust.

It was left to modern ages to establish an intelligent, undecaying, immutable method of perpetuating a full history—immutable in that it is almost unlimited in extent and perpetual in its action; and this is through the art of printing.

To the present generation, however, we are indebted for the introduction of the admirable system of local biography. By this system every man, though he has not achieved what the world calls greatness, has the means to perpetuate his life, his history, through the coming ages.

The scythe of Time cuts down all; nothing of the physical man is left. The monument which his children or friends may erect to his memory in the cemetery will crumble into dust and pass away; but his life, his achievements, the work he has accomplished, which otherwise would be forgotten, is perpetuated by a record of this kind.

To preserve the lineaments of our companions we engrave their portraits, for the same reason we collect the attainable facts of their history. Nor do we think it necessary, as we speak only truth of them, to wait until they are dead, or until those who know them are gone: to do this we are ashamed only to publish to the world the history of those whose lives are unworthy of public record.

Loungly Goins Win Brown

ON, WILLIAM BROWN. In the death of the above-named gentleman, January 15th, 1891, Rockford lost one of its high-minded and public-spirited citizens, while from the bereaved family circle a loving husband and father was removed, leaving a void in their lives that not even his honored memory can fill. He received his early education in the common schools of Oneida County, N. Y., at which time were instilled into his mind the firm principles which characterized him through life. He was an able lawyer, upright and honest, a devoted member of the Methodist Church, and a strong advocate of temperance principles, being a total abstainer himself.

He was born in Cumberland, in the North of England, June 1, 1819. His father, Thomas Brown, was also a native of England. The latternamed gentleman in 1827, accompanied by his family, emigrated to America and landed at New York on the 20th of May. They resided for a few months in Albany, then removed to Oneida County, where the father purchased a farm near the village of North Western, and was for many years engaged in agricultural pursuits, but subsequently retired and moved to North Western. where his death occurred. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Morton, also a native of England, who spent her last years on the home farm in Oneida County.

Mr. William Brown, desiring to become a lawyer, began the study of that profession in Rome, N. Y., and in 1846, after having been admitted to the Bar, started for the growing West, choosing as his permanent abiding place the then village of Rockford. Mr. Brown began even with the world, but having little to do in a professional way for some time, accepted a situation the first winter as teacher in a district school. In 1817, he talked quite strongly of leaving Rockford, and went to Beloit with the intention of removing there, but was not sufficiently charmed with the outlook to do so.

In the election of 1847, Mr. Brown was chosen Justice of the Peace, and in speaking of the event later, remarked that he felt more thankful for that office than for any other to which he was afterward chosen. This grose from the fact that he was in need of something to do. In 1852, he was elected States Attorney for the district comprising Winnebago, Stephenson and Joe Daviess Counties, serving for a period of three years. At the expiration of that time, he was elected Mayor of Rockford, and in 1864 was sent to the Legislature on the Republican ticket. In 1857, he formed a partnership with William Lathrop, which connection existed for three years, when he took in as partner H. W. Taylor, with whom he was associated until 1870, at which time our subject was elected to the bench. He was first elected as Judge to fill the vacancy oceasioned by the promotion of Judge Sheldon to the Supreme Court, and was subsequently elected three full terms of six years each -making altogether a period of twenty years as Judge. He left a pure and untarnished record as an able and upright Judge, and by the judiciary of the State was greatly honored for his ability and talent. The old lawyers of the district, as well as the people, speak of him in the highest terms of commendation and love. He always enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the community, and was recognized as very painstaking and careful in the preparation of his decisions, which were regarded as able by the Supreme Court of the State.

Hon. William Brown and Miss Caroline 11. Miller, who was born in Livingston County, N. Y., were united in marriage, September 19th, 1850. Mrs. Brown was the daughter of the 11on. Horace and Hannah (Clark) Miller, for a further sketch of whom the reader is referred to the biography of William II. Miller, on another page of this work. Mrs. Brown still resides in Rockford where she is greatly beloved by all who know her She is the mother of three children who are respectively: Edward W., agent of the Illinois Central Railroad; Frank R., superintendent of the Nelson Knitting Co., and May, wife of H. W. Buckbee, florist and seedsman. A handsome and substantial office-building has just been erected to the memory of Judge Brown on South Main Street, Rockford, known as the William Brown Building.

EV. JOHN WILCOX, one of the prominent and wealthy agriculturists of Burritt Township, Winnebago County, was born in the parish of Laureath, Cornwall, England, December 7, 1825. John Wilcox's father was a native of the same parish, as was also his grandfather, Samuel Wilcox. The great-grandfather of our subject, Henry Wilcox, was the proprietor of a boarding-school in England and spent his entire life in the above-named parish.

Samuel Wilcox acquired a thorough education and for a time taught school in the parish of Lanreath. He was a surveyor by profession, and served in the position of Town Clerk for half a century, passing away when eighty-four years of age. His son, the father of our subject, on attaining manhood was placed in charge of a gentleman's farm in Laureath, having the entire management of the estate for thirty years. In 1850, resigning the position, he came to America and located in Winnebago County, where he, in partnership with his son John, purchased one hundred acres of land in the town of Burritt. He was accompanied hither by his son, our subject, and died at the home of his daughter. Mrs. Walter Searl, in his eighty-third year. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Stevens, a native of Looe, Cornwall County, and a daughter of William and Mary Stevens; she departed this life, after having attained the age of seventy-three years.

The seven children in the parental family were named, respectively: Samuel, William, Mary, Susan, Hannah, John and Maria, all of whom came to America, and one of whom, William, is at present residing in New Zealand. The original of this sketch attended school regularly from the age of seven to sixteen years, when he assisted his father on the home farm for three years and then received an appointment to a responsible position in the postoffice in London, the Rev. Richard Buller, the owner of a farm which his father superintended, signing his bonds. While in the post-office, John Wilcox had use of the books in the British Museum and other libraries, and, making the best of the opportunity thus given him, improved his mind by good reading. He became a member of the Congregational Church when nineteen years of age, and soon after going to London acted as a teacher in the Hoxton Academy Sabbath-school, which had a membership of one thousand scholars. He also joined two different lyceums, and thus participating in their debates and addressing the Sunday-school, accustomed himself to public speaking. Our subject remained in the post-office for live years, when he resigned, his superior officers, however, remonstrating against him taking such a course, promising to promote him if he would remain. Having determined upon coming to America, he was firm in his first decision, and set sail from Fowey, Cornwall, April 18, 1850, in the vessel "Adelaide," which landed in Quebec on the 24th of May.

Spending four weeks in Canada, Mr. Wilcox, looking for a permanent location for himself and parents, came to Winnebago County, purchasing, as before stated, a tract of land in company with his father, for which they paid $4 per acre. Fifty acres of the property were broken and fenced, and a small frame house was erected on the place. His father, mother and sister Maria later joined him in this county, when they began the work of cultivating and improving a farm. The first winter our subject taught school in Pecatonica Township, but later devoting his entire time and attention to agricultural pursuits, added to his acreage until his estate contained three hundred and forty-five acres, besides a farm of one hundred and eighty acres in Laona Township.

Mr. Wilcox has been prominently connected with the Congregational Church since his settlement in Winnebago County. The first Sunday after locating here, he attended church, and the minister failing to put in an appearance, at the urgent request of the people assembled he preached. Two years later he attended an association of Congregational ministers at Roscoe and was licensed to preach for three years, but prior to the expiration of that time he was ordained in Pecatonica Township by three preachers and has been actively engaged in spreading the Gospel since that time.

In 1857, our subject went to Iowa Falls, Hardin County, Iowa, to accept the pastorate of the Congregational Church at that place. His parents, however, needing his presence at home, he resigned the charge after one year and, with that exception, has been a resident of Burritt Township since first locating here in 1851. The farm upon which he makes his home is one of the finest in the township, it being improved with all the necessary buildings and farm machinery which go to make a first-class estate.

March 3, 1855, John Wilcox and Margaret Webber, who was born in the Parish of Combe. St. Nicholas, Somerset County, England, on the 4th of February, 1833, were united in marriage. The parents of Mrs. Wilcox. William and Mary Webber, were wealthy farmers. The whole family emigrated from England in Angust, 1849, and arrived in Rockton, this county, in October. They traveled by water from Bristol, England, to Milwaukee by means of sailing-vessels, canal boats and steamers, and from the Cream City came overland with teams to Winnebago County, where Mr. and Mrs. Webber purchased three improved farms of about six hundred acres, on one of which they made their home for forty years.

Mrs. Wilcox received a good education in both select and boarding schools in England, and also in the Beloit High School. She has two sisters and five brothers, all of whom are married and have families of their own, namely: Catherine, Mary Jane, William, John, Henry A., Herman J. F. and Thomas H. The father of Mrs. Wileox was born in Hamcock, Devon, March 26, 1801. and died at the home of our subject in Burritt Township, July 19, 1889. He was a son of William Webber, who was a large land-owner and was also a native of Devon, England. William Webber's mother, Margaret Brome, was born in Collumpton, Devon, England, where also Mary Webber was born, April 2, 1802. She bore the maiden name of Mary Hake, and departed this life April 6, 1886, in Rockton; she was a worthy, intelligent and refined lady, a faithful wife, a loving mother, and neighborly to all. Being a devout Episcopalian in England, she became identified with the Congregational Church in Rockton.

The father of Mrs. Wilcox was a man of sterling worth, untiring industry, strict economy, good judgment, and one truly honest and reliable in all the relations of life. He was a devout Christian and, desiring to spend his declining years in Burritt Township, there died in peace. Mrs. Wilcox was a member of the Congregational Sundayschool in Chard, England, and on coming to Rockford united with that denomination in 1855, and has ever filled the relations of a wife, mother and neighbor in a kind, Christian spirit, aiding her husband in every way in family, business, and religious duties. They have had family worship during the thirty-seven years of their married life. The two eldest brothers of Mrs. Wilcox invented, patented and manufactured the celebrated reaping machine which was distributed in this and adjoining counties. Three of her sons are the most rapid and the best shearers of sheep in Illinois, and perhaps in the United States, each of them having sheared from one hundred to one hundred and twenty animals in ten hours.

The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Wileox were John and Mary (Kenwood) Hale, the former a native of Ottery, St. Mary, Devonshire, England, where he was an active business man. The mother was also a native of that place, dying in middle life. They reared an excellent family of children, two sons, John and Thomas, becoming prominent wholesale merchants. One sister, with her husband, came to this county, and died in Rockton.

The seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. John Wilcox are, John Webber, William H., Mary S., Herbert H., Clarence L., George L. and Lillian M. In his political relations, our subject is a Republican.

OHN W. CASTLE, one of the wide-awake and enterprising young farmers residing on section 31, Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, has spent almost his entire life in this community. He is a representative of one of the pioneer families. His parents, John and Elizabeth (Rockingham) Castle, were both natives of England, and when young came to this country. They were married in Troy, N. Y., about 1848, and started at once for the West, traveling by rail to Chicago, and thence by team to Rockford. Mr. Castle rented a small farm near the city, and for some time worked by the day. He afterward removed to Shirland, and purchased sixty acres of land, upon which he built a house and began the improvement of a farm. After six years he sold out and went to Ogle County, where he operated a farm on shares for some time, after which he purchased an eighty-acre farm. Its boundaries he later extended until it comprised two hundred and fifty-five acres of good land, supplied with all the necessary buildings, and under a high state of cultivation. At length, he rented his farm in the autumn of 1889, and is now living a retired life in Monroe Center.

Our subject was the fourth child and second son in a family which numbered three sons and four daughters. They are as follows: Alice E., wife of John Blake, of De Kalb County; Mary Ann, wife of John Butterworth, of Boone County; George II., who resides in Ogle County; John W., of this sketch; Sarah Hannah, wife of John McLarty, who operates a farm adjoining the old homestead; Pheebe C., wife of William Fisher, of Cherry Valley Township; and Eber R., who is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Story County, Iowa. There are also eighteen grandchildren.

John W. Castle, whose name heads this record, was reared amid the wild scenes of frontier life in the usual manner of farmer lads. On attaining his majority, he chose as a companion and helpmate on life's journey Miss Mary Janet McDonald, of Beloit, Wis., daughter of Thomas and Mary A. (Gayton) McDonald. Her father was a volunteer in the late war, and died in the hospital at Fortress Monroe, W. Va., on the 1st of April, 1864, leaving a wife and three children, all of whom survive him. The union of our subject and his wife was celebrated on the 3d of March, 1885. They began their domestic life upon their present farm, and have one of the pleasant homes in the neighborhood. It is brightened by the presence of a little daughter, Bessie May, who was born May 30, 1888. Mrs. Castle is a member of the Methodist Church. Mr. Castle is a Republican in politics, and a valued citizen who gives his support and co-operation to every interest calculated to benefit the community and promote the general welfare.

LONZO HASKINS. Among the old and influential citizens of Boone County, Ill., we take pleasure in introducing to our readers Mr. Alonzo Haskins, who has been associated with all enterprises of interest in the county for many years. He was born in Cortland County, town of Truxton (now Cuyler), N. Y., on the 18th of November, 1814, and is a son of William H. and Lydia (Howard) Haskins, natives also of New York State. The paternal grandparents of our subject were natives of New England, but died in the Excelsior State when well advanced in years. William II. Haskins followed the occupation of a farmer, and died in Onondaga County, N. Y., when about ninety years of age. His wife died at the same place, when about seventy-two years of age. They were honest, industrious citizens, and prominent in their community. Of the three children born to their union only our subject survives.

From early boyhood our subject became familiar with the arduons duties of the farm, and when starting out for himself he selected that as his calling in life. His marriage with Miss Lavina Mc-Kiney on the 10th of September, 1835, brought to his home a helpmate to whose aid and co-operation he is much indebted for his success in life. She was also born in Cortland County, N. Y., August 20, 1813, and is a daughter of Charles and Lydia (Morse) McKiney, both natives of that State. Her mother passed her last days in Rockford, Ill. Mrs. Haskins' maternal grandfather, David Morse, was a Revolutionary soldier, and for services thus rendered received six hundred and forty acres of land in New York State, Cortland County. He also received a pension until his death. Mrs. Haskins was one of fourteen children, six of whom are vet living, all farmers and lumbermen.

Four children were born to our subject's marriage, viz: Teresa M., born in Onondaga County, N. Y., is the widow of Barnard Farnsworth, and now resides in Dakota; Lydia L., born in Onondaga County, N. Y., married L. Albert Drake, and is the mother of two children, one of whom, a daughter, married William Beach, and has a little girl. The Drakes were pioneer settlers of this State, and are industrious, upright citizens. Mr. Drake is working the home place for our subject, but owns a fine farm of eight hundred acres in Dakota. Edgar D. Haskins, also a native of Onondaga County, married Miss Hattie Turnure, and is the father of three children, a son and two daughters. Mary J., born in the same county, married B. B. Wells, and has two children. She makes her home in Belvidere.

L. Albert Drake enlisted in the Nmety-fifth Illinois Infantry, served about four years, and was promoted to the rank of First Lieutenant. He was a faithful soldier, and a brave and gallant officer. Edgar Haskins was in the light artillery, and served about a year. On coming to Boone County, Ill., our subject bought one hundred and seventy acres of land in Bonus Township, and on this there stood a small frame house in which Mr. Haskins and family lived for several years. He then built his present handsome residence, and has one of the finest farms in the township. He has now retired from the active duties of life, and his son-in-law carries on the farm. They have twenty-eight or thirty cows, a fine herd of Jerseys that rank with the linest in the county, and make a specialty of the dairy business. Mr. Haskins has been Director in the Agricultural Society, and he has also been on the State Committee of State Fairs, etc., and is active in all laudable enterprises.

HADDEUS DAVIS, one of the highly respected agriculturists of Guilford Township, Winnebago County, living on section 24, was born in the town of Southold, Canada, June 17, 1828. His grandfather, William Davis, was born in Connectient, whence he removed to the Empire State in an early day, and purchased a tract of land twelve miles from Albany. Twelve years later he went to Canada and spent his last days in Chippewa, where he died at the age of ninety-four.

The father of our subject, Thaddeus Davis, Sr., was born near Schenectady, N. Y., June 9, 1793, and was reared and married in the State of his nativity. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Catherine Kirkland. She was born in Scheneetady, N. Y., February 10, 1797, of Scotch parentage. On emigrating to Canada, Mr. Davis made the journey with ox-teams, cutting his way through the wilderness, and secured a tract of heavily timbered land in the town of Southold. He first built a log cabin and afterward replaced it by a frame residence. There were no railroads in the community in those days, no near markets and few settlers, but plenty of deer, bears and wolves. While the father worked at farm labor, the mother spun and wove cloth, dressing her children in homespun. 'Mr. Davis sold his farm in Canada in 1839, and came to Illinois, accompanied by his family. They brought with them their household goods and drove eattle and sheep. After six weeks of travel they arrived at their destination. Rockford was then a mere hamlet and the work of progress had hardly been begun. About a month later, Mr. Davis purchased a squatter's claim—the farm which our subject now occupies—upon which was a log cabin, while twenty acres of the land had been broken. Upon that farm he made his home until his death, as did the mother of our subject. They had a family of ten children, as follows: Catherine, Ann Eliza, David A., Robert C., Daniel H., Joseph S., Thaddeus, George R., Jacob and John.

The subject of this sketch was only eleven years old when, with his parents, he came to Illinois. He remembers well the incidents of the journey and the pioneer life in this county and shared with the family all the hardships and trials incident to the frontier. He continued to reside with his parents until their death and now owns the old homestead. He is an enterprising and successful farmer and by his industrious and persistent efforts has acquired a comfortable competence.

An important event in the life of Mr. Davis occurred on the 10th of December, 1856, when he wedded Mary A. McClary, a native of the Empire State. Four children grace their union and the family circle yet remains unbroken. In order of birth they are as follows: Alma M., wife of Asa B. Hammond; Thaddeus G., who wedded Mary E. Hart; Matie E. and Frank. In politics, Mr. Davis was formerly a Whig, but since the organization of the Republican party has affiliated with that body. Religiously, he is a member of the Methodist Church. He is held in high regard throughout this community, where the greater part of his life has been passed, and well deserves representation among the honored pioneers.

ILLIAM D. SWAIL. President of the People's Bank of Belvidere, is one of the leading business men of this city, and for a number of years has been connected with the moneyed interests of Boone County. He is now at the head of one of its most substantial moneyed institutions, and is recognized as one of the most prominent citizens of the community.

Our subject was born in Montreal Canada, December 17, 1830, and is a son of John and Esther (Hanna) Swail. The latter was a native of County Monaghan, Ireland. The father was born in Cumberland County, England, and was a son of William and Mary Swail. The grandparents were both natives of England and came to America about 1812. The grandfather purchased a farm at Mt. Royal, near Montreal, and there engaged in farming until his death. His old homestead is now owned and occupied by one of his grandsons. The father of our subject was reared upon that farm, but after attaining to man's estate, commanded a steam ferryboat across the St. Lawrence from Longueuil to Montreal. Later he settled upon a farm at Mt, Royal and there made his home until called to his final rest.

Mr. Swail of this sketch when quite young began to assist his father on the boat, and in 1853 entered the employ of the Government in the civil service, continuing two years. In 1855, he came to Belvidere and began dealing in real-estate and building. After a few years spent in that way, he next purchased land in Flora Township, and for a few years engaged quite extensively in farming, after which he returned to this city.

Mr. Swail has been twice married. In 1858, he was joined in wedlock with Sarah Loop, who was born in New York State, and died in February, 1860. He afterwards led to the marriage altar Louisa M. Benedict, a daughter of Rev. Timothy Benedict. The family numbers four children: Mary B., who is a graduate of the Northwestern University, and is now the wife of Rev. W. E. Wilkinson, who graduated from the same institution and is now a Methodist minister; John 11., Assistant Cashier in the bank; Louisa M., a student in the Northwestern University; and Carrie, wife of Russ Lambert, an attorney of the State of Washington.

Mr. Swail assisted in the organization of the Republican party in this county, and voted twice for President Lincoln and once for Gen. Grant. In 1872, he followed the lead of Summer, Greeley and other eminent Republicans and voted the liberal Republican ticket. Since that time he has affiliated with the Democratic party. He was the first Mayor of Belvidere after its organization as a city and has filled that position three terms. He has also served as its Postmaster for four years. He is one of the substantial men of Belvidere, and the busy and useful life which he has led has won him high regard.

REDRICK K. PRATT, one of the county's prosperous tillers of the soil, was born in Westmoreland, Cheshire County, N. 11., May 25, 1813, and is a son of Moses and Louisa (Daggett) Pratt, and the grandson of Josiah and Jane (Knapp) Pratt, both natives of New England, where they passed their entire life. Moses Pratt was one of eight children born to this estimable couple. He was also a native of Cheshire County, N. H., and remained there until twenty-one years of age, when, seeing a better chance for himself in the West, he started for Rockford, Ill., in May, 1836. He took up one hundred and sixty acres of Government land and remained there for five years, when he returned East. He first came to Illinois via the canal to Buffalo, thence to Detroit, and walked from there to his future home, a distance of about three hundred and fifty miles. This trip proved almost too much for him and he never fully recovered. His goods came on the next boat. As before mentioned, he returned to the East after a five years' stay in the wilds of Illinois. This was in 1841, and he drove a horse and a home-made jumper. He also carried his tools, so that, if necessary, he could shoe his jumper, and as he journeyed towards the rising sun he visited friends along the way. He was returning for his future wife, and on the 24th of March, 1842, he was married to Miss Louisa Daggett, who was also born in Cheshire County, N. 11. Her parents were Phineas and Mercy (Pierce) Daggett, the father a native of Massachusetts, but a pioneer of New Hampshire, where he received his final summons. He died at the age of seventy-seven years, and the mother passed away when about the same age, Mrs. Pratt was one of ten children, and is the only one now living. Phineas Daggett was the son of Asa Daggett, who was born in Massachusetts, but who died in New Hampshire.

Mr. Pratt farmed down East until 1855, after which he sold out and returned to this State, where he bought eighty acres of unimproved land, to which he subsequently added eighty acres more. On this he resided for twenty-five or thirty years, and died on the 15th of March, 1881, when seventy-one years of age. He was at one time a Democrat, but the latter part of his days he affiliated with the Republican party. His estimable wife is still living, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Frederick Pratt is one of the foremost farmers of the county, and is interested in all worthy movements. He was married on the 20th of January, 1875, to Miss Marion Turnure, daughter of Uriah and Laura (Cline) Turnure. She was born in Bonus, this county, February 17, 1855. To Mr. and Mrs. Pratt have been born two sons: Frank H., born November 25, 1877, is now attending the Belvidere High School, and Ralph T., born April 22, 1884, is at home. In politics, our subject has always athliated with the Republican party, but he is inclined to be independent. As an agriculturist, he ranks second to none in his township, and all his farming operations are condueted in a very superior and progressive way, as a glance over his well-kept farm will show. His home is bright and attractive, and is presided over by that refined lady and excellent housekeeper, his wife.

HARLES JESPERSON, foreman for the extensive milling establishment of J. G. Chick Milling Co., of Rockford, has been in this gentleman's employ for many years, and has held his present position for the past fifteen years. Under his able and efficient management, the business has achieved a large share of success, and is in a prosperous condition.

Mr. Jesperson came to Rockford in 1865, and has since been engaged in the milling business, first with E. Derwent for five years, and later, with Mr. Chick, with whom he has since remained. He is a skillful and practical miller, and thoroughly understands his business. He is interested in other business enterprises of the city, is a stock-holder in the Mechanies' Furniture Co., the Union Grocery Co., in which he is also a Director, and a stockholder in the Swedish Building and Loan Association. He has a good and comfortable home at No. 544 Union Street, and is a useful and substantial citizen.

Of Swedish nativity, Mr. Jesperson has inherited all the characteristics of that hardy class of people, and is thrifty, honest, whole-souled and intelligent. He was born in Wester Gothland Province, January 23, 1815, learned his trade there, and when twenty years of age, or in 1865, crossed the Atlantic to American soil. His father, Jasper Carlson, is a wood-carver by trade, and is a resident of Rockford at the present time. The latter was born and reared in Wester Gothland, Sweden, and although now seventy-two years of age, his mind is as clear and as well-balanced as ever. He was married in his native country to Miss Lizzie Samuelson, who died in 1871, when about fifty-seven years of age, in full communion with the Lutheran Church, in which he also holds membership.

Charles Jesperson, the second in order of birth of the children born to this worthy couple, was put on board a vessel and had his passage paid to Chicago by an uncle. He had but twenty-five cents in his pocket when he reached the Garden City, and he was obliged to work for a few days to get the means to carry him to Rockford, Ill. He was first married in this city, in the fall of 1866, to Miss Johanna Johnson, a native of Wester Gothland, Sweden, who came to the United States with her parents in 1863. Her father, Olf Johnson, is now eighty years of age and is a resident of Rockford, but the mother died in 1888. Both were members in good standing in the Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Jesperson was born in 1840, and died at ber home in Rockford in the fall of 1872, leaving one son, Gus, who is in the factories of Rockford. Mr. Jesperson took for his second wife Miss Johanna Friedberg, who was born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, September 1, 1848, and was nearly grown when she came with her brother, P. J. Friedberg, to the United States. The latter is now a cabinet-maker and stockholder of the Centennial Furniture Company, and resides at No. 124 Bremer Street. The parents died in Sweden, the father, Andrew Anderson, when about fifty-five years of age, and the mother, whose maiden name was Mary Jonson, when about forty years of age. They were Lutherans in their religious views.

Of the three children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jesperson, one, Walter, died when young. The others are: Joseph, born February 25, 1878, and Hilma S., November 21, 1883. Mr. Jesperson and family attend the First Lutheran Church in which they are members and active workers, and they are people much respected in the community. Mr. Jesperson is a sound Republican in his political views, and has been a member of the Board of Trustees for the past tifteen years.

NDREW BORG, a mason contractor and builder of Rockford, is one of the wellknown Swedish residents of this city. He was born on the 16th of June, 1839, in Sweden, and was the first of his people to come to the l'nited States. He learned his trade in Oskersham, and at the age of twenty-four years left that place, crossing the Atlantic in the summer of 1854, on a sailing-vessel. They encountered some very severe weather, the deck being swept and the mast carried away. For some time the crew and passengers were all exposed and for four days they were without food and water, twenty-four dying from exhaustion and being buried in the sea. After thirteen weeks and three days, Mr. Borg landed in New York City, August 15, 1854, and thence went to Chicago. He had lost his trunk, the contents of which were his chief possessions. He found himself a stranger in a strange land, with no one to whom to look for aid, but he started out bravely and soon found employment. After a year he decided to go to Kansas, but in passing through Rockford was so well pleased with the city that he has since made it his home.

Since coming to this country, Mr. Borg has been followed by a sister who is now living in Webster County, Iowa, and a brother who died in this city some years ago, after he was married. The father, Swan Larson, was a farmer and carpenter of Sweden and spent his entire life in that land. His death occurred at the age of eighty-two years. His wife, whose maiden name was Stena G. Anderson, is yet living at the age of eighty-two. Like her husband, she is a member of the Lutheran Church.

Three years after coming to this country, Mr. Borg returned to his native land and wedded Anna S. Carlson, who died nine days after she and her husband had returned to this country, of quick consumption, at the age of twenty-two years. He afterward wedded Ida M. Carlson, a sister of his first wife, and she died three years later of pneumonia, at the age of twenty-two, leaving one daughter, Selma E., now the wife of Frank Sager, a clerk in Sawyer's drug store of this city. Mr. Borg was the third time married, in Rockford, the lady of his choice being Anna S. Booman, who was born in Sweden on the 4th of August, 1852, and came to Rockford in 1864 with her parents, who have since moved to Valley Springs, S. Dak., where they now reside, both being about sixty years of age. They are also members of the Lutheran Church.

Mr. and Mrs Borg have a family of four children and have also lost four. Edward is a bookkeeper for the Skandia Coal Company of this city; Albert A., Esther L. and Hulbert are still at home. Albert, Olivia and Victoria, twins, and Esther, are all deceased. The parents are members of the Zion Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Borg is a Trustee. He exercises his right of franchise in the support of the Republican party. The year after coming to Rockford, he began business as a mason contractor and builder and has erected many buildings in the city. He now owns a good brick residence at No. 406 Sixth Street and has an interest in the flats and residence at the corner of Fourth Avenue and Seventh Street. He is one of the stockholders in the Skandia Plow Company and a stockholder and Director in the Skandia Brick Company, also a Director in the Union Grocery Store. Mr. Borg has been the means of inducing many of his Swedish neighbors to locate in this county and is a leader among his country-men. His business career has been a successful one and he is now numbered among the well-to-do citizens of Rockford.

AVID PRYSE, who owns and operates two hundred and twenty acres of well improved land on section 15, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, is a native of Wales. He was born on the 14th of May, 1831, in Montgomeryshire, and is a son of James Pryse, who was born in the same county. His grandparents also spent their entire lives there. The family had long been residents of Wales. Many of its members spell the name Price.

The father was reared and married in Montgomeryshire, Miss Margaret Davis becoming his wife. They never left the land of their nativity, but three of their sons emigrated to the United States: David, Edward and James.

Our subject received no special advantages in his youth, in fact, at the early age of seven he began to earn his own livelihood and has since been dependent upon his own resources. He continued to make his home in the land of his birth until 1850. when, with the hope of bettering his financial condition, in the autumn of that year he sailed from Liverpool to America, as a passenger on board the "Patrick Henry." After a voyage of seven weeks and three days, the vessel dropped anchor in the harbor of New York and Mr. Pryse landed on American soil. He went to Oneida County, N. Y., where he engaged in farming for five years, and then came to Illinois in 1855. With the money he had saved, he rented a farm in Guilford Township, and after five years, in 1860 made a purchase of fifty-seven acres of wild land, which is now included within his present farm. As his financial resources have increased, he has added to his landed possession from time to time, until he now owns two hundred and twenty agrees of valuable land.

Ere coming to the West, Mr. Pryse was married in Oneida County, on the 18th of March, 1854, to Miss Winnefred M. Jones, who was born in the north of Wales, in October, 1830, and came to America at the age of eighteen years. She died September 10, 1884, leaving a family of six children: Richard J., Ellen, Margaret, Mary, Fannie and Frank.

Mr. Pryse is one of the worthy citizens of this community, who takes an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare and upbuilding of the town and county and the promotion of its leading enterprises. He is also a self-made man and for his success in life deserves no little credit, as he has steadily worked his way upward to a position of which he may well be proud. His life in many respects is well worthy of emulation and has won him the confidence and high regard of those with whom he has been brought in contact.

188 SARAH ROGERS, the daughter of John II. and Elizabeth (Cotton) Rogers well known as pioneers of Winnebago County, is at the present time residing in Pecatonica village. She is a woman of much eapacity, is kind in heart and manner, cheerfully giving assistance where needed and charitably inclined toward all, a worthy type of the pioneer daughters of Winnebago County, who were important instruments in its upbuilding.

The father of our subject was born in Norfolk, Conn., in 1804, where he was married to Miss Elizabeth Cotton in 1828. Desiring to see and know something of the Western country, he came to this county in 1845 and entered a claim of eighty acres of Government land. The mother of our subject was also born in Norfolk, Conn., one year later than her worthy husband, and died in Pecatonica when sixty-eight years of age. The father of Miss Rogers died in the same place when in his sixty-seventh year.

The paternal grandparents of our subject were natives of the Nutmeg State, as were also the Cotton family. John H. Rogers was a blacksmith by trade, which line of business he followed for some years, at the same time teaching writing school during the winter evenings. He filled the position of Postmaster of Seward at a time when the place was known as Vanceboro. In politics, he was a Republican and with his wife a member of the Congregational Church.

Two uncles of our subject participated in the late war, one of whom was wounded in the battle of Chickamanga.

Miss Sarah Rogers has always resided at home, and in 1867 opened a millinery establishment which she conducted successfully until five years ago, when she opened up in the shoe and wall paper business. Her education was received in the graded and High Schools of Pecatonica, and at the present time she is a working member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and belongs to various missionary societies. She is a charter member of the Women's Relief Corps and in all respects takes an active part in all good works. She is a member of the Chantauqua Society and was engaged for several terms in teaching school in this county, in which occupation her sister Eunice was also engaged.

Miss Rogers' father came by wagon to Albany, N. Y., thence by the Eric Canal to Buffalo, by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and overland to this county. He was a gentleman beloved by all, kindhearted, charitable and honorable, and possessed of agreeable manners and jovial, friendly nature. Miss Rogers is one of the leaders in social life in the village, and her intelligence and grace add to the attractions of her hospitable dwelling.

HILIP STALL, who is one of the most enterprising farmers of Le Roy Township Boone County, owns and occupies a fine homestead and stands high in the estimation of the people in this vicinity. He was born June 22, 1817, in Maine, and is a son of Jacob Stall, a stone mason and stone entter by trade. He followed that occupation during most of his life, although during his later years he became a miller and owned a farm of one hundred acres, which was carried on by his family.

The lady who became the mother of our subject prior to her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Wineapaw, a native of Knox County. Me. She reared a family of eight children and lost four in infancy. The elder Mr. Stall died in his eighty-eighth year, having been married nearly sixty-eight years. The family are all deceased, with the exception of our subject and a sister, Lucinda, now Mrs. Burton, of Maine. Philip was the sixth in order of birth, his brothers and sisters being Elizabeth, Charles, Edward, William, and Moses and Aaron, twins, who received their names from the old family physician when born.

Our subject left home when nineteen years of age, going East to Bangor, and two years later came to Illinois and purchased a quarter-section of land in Lee County. This he sold two years thereafter and came to Boone County, where, in 1857, he bought eighty acres of his present farm, for which he paid $10 per acre. He has since purchased forty acres.

In 1857, Miss Frances, daughter of William R. and Mary (Moore) Millard and our subject were united in marriage. Both parents were natives of Pennsylvania and eame West to Lee County, this State, in October, 1838, making the journey from Columbia County by means of a horse team. In the spring of 1841, Mr. and Mrs. Millard eame to Boone County, Le Roy Township, purchasing a farm of one hundred and twenty acres, to which he later added until his estate on section 35 included two hundred and forty acres.

Mr. and Mrs. Stall have buried seven children and have one son living, Charles M., who was born in March, 1878. Those deceased are William, Elmer, Mary, Sylvia. Edgar, Katie and Altha L. Our subject has been engaged in mixed farming, and by persistent industry has cleared his entire estate and erected thereon suitable buildings, not the least among which is his comfortable farm residence which was erected in 1869. Two years later he built his main barn, 10x48 feet, with eighteenfoot posts to which he has since added as he found it necessary. In religious matters, the family of our subject belongs to the Methodist Church and, in politics, Mr. Stall has voted the Republican ticket since Lincoln filled the Presidential chair.

David Daniels, now in Iowa, William R. Millard and our subject are the only survivors who voted here in 1843.

He of whom we write has a dairy of from ten to fifteen cows and ships as many as fifty head of hogs per year. His place is well stocked with a good grade of horses, and from his stock-raising interests he reaps handsome returns. His property, which, it will be remembered, cost Mr. Stall $10 per aere, is now worth $70. Mrs. Stall's mother departed this life in March, 1891, when eighty-four years of age, and her father, who is still living, is seventynine years of age.

RSEMUS HYDE, deceased, was for a number of years one of the most prosperous farmers of Bonus Township, Boone County, with whose agricultural developments he was closely associated and helped to make of the county one of the finest farming regions in the State. He was born in July, 1819, and departed this life at his home when fifty-two years of age.

Our subject was the son of Heman and Polly Hyde, of English descent and the heirs to large fortunes which, on account of insufficient proofs, they were unable to secure. The lady, Miss Permelia Rork, to whom our subject was married July 12, 1837, was born in Essex County, N. Y., June 18, 1818. She was the daughter of John and Elizabeth Rork, who were born in Ireland, of Scotch-English parents. The father and mother emigrated to the United States, and after residing for a time in New York, moved to Racine, Wis., where their deaths occurred at the respective ages of eighty and seventy-five years. Mrs. Hyde on her mother's side is related to the old family of McCibbons, her grandmother bearing that name. They were also related to the McCauleys and could trace their ancestry back on one side to the celebrated poet, Burns. The father of Mrs. Hyde was an Orangeman, and after coming to this country participated in the war of 1812.

To our subject and his wife have been born nine children, five of whom are living: Deett was born in New York State, is married and lives in Le Mars, lowa; William was born April 16, 1844, is also married and the father of three children; Alice was born April 15, 1846, is the wife of Robert Porter and the mother of five children; Julius A. was born April 12, 1852, is residing at home and works the old farm; Lucia was born January 12, 1855, is married and has three children. Julius A. interests himself in politics and is a leader of the Prohibition party in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. Hyde came to this county in 1842. where our subject rented land for eight years, having but $2.50 when he came here. He made different purchases, until at the time of his death he left an estate of four hundred and forty-two acres to his heirs, leaving besides a name which will ever be held in loving remembrance. He landed in the county with only twenty shillings in his pocket, and as winter was coming on, he was engaged in teaming that season to and from Chicago. His widow still owns sixty-nine acres of the original homestead, which she is cultivating in a most intelligent manner. Since fifteen years of age, she has been an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which denomination her husband was also a member and a liberal contribntor. She is an excellent woman, and aids all worthy objects in a most substantial manner and is loved by all her numerous friends and acquaintances. She is in the possession of a comfortable property and devotes her time to helping others.

tharles L. SMITH owns and operates a valuable farm of seventy-two acres adjoining the city limits of Belvidere on the northwest. Every foot of his land is under a high state of cultivation and the well tilled fields yield to him a golden tribute for the care and labor he bestows upon them. The neat appearance of the place indicates his thrift, and the many improvements there seen stand as monuments to his enterprise.

Our subject was born in Windham County, Vt., February 28, 1829. His father, Hiram Smith, was born in Chesterfield, N. H., spent his boyhood days in the Granite State, and after his marriage removed to Windham, Vt., where he bought a tract of land and made his home for a few years. He then returned to Westmoreland, N. 11., where he spent the remainder of his life. He married Olive Arnold, who spent almost her entire life in Westmoreland. Her father, Col. Arnold, was a tanner and farmer residing in that place.

Our subject was a lad of but seven summers when his parents became residents of the Granite State, where his education was acquired. At the age of ten, he commenced to earn his own living and worked by the day, month or year in New Hampshire until be was nineteen years of age, when he went to Upton, Worcester County, Mass., where he was employed at carpentering for a year. His next place of residence was in Milford, Mass., where he was employed in a boot factory for three years. He remained in the Bay State until 1852, when, on the 5th of January, he sailed from New York and after thirty days landed in San Francisco, whence he went to Stockton, Cal., which was then a very small place. He engaged in teaming from there to the mines, from forty-live to seventyfive miles distant. At that time the price of freighting was from $2 to $25 per hundred pounds. Provisions were very high in the mines, flour selling at $45 per barrel. He there remained for six years, when he returned to Milford, where he spent the three succeeding years of his life. He then again went to California, where he once more engaged in teaming until 1864, when he returned to the East.

Soon after his return, Mr. Smith was united in marriage with Mrs. Luella (Wheeler) Bates, and their union has been blessed with one child, Clinton C. The lady also had a daughter by her former marriage, Addie L. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are worthy people, highly respected by all. He is a member of the Universalist Church, and his wife is a member of the Presbyterian Church. They have been residents of this county since December, 1864, when, coming to the West, Mr. Smith purchased a farm half a mile west of Belvidere, upon which they made their home for seven years. He then sold out and removed to the village, where he lived for three and a half years, after which he purchased the farm which he now owns and occupies

Faithfully yours John Lake

OHN LAKE, President of the Rockford Fire Insurance Company, is well known as one of the early settlers of Rockford; and as one of its foremost business men, who has for many years thoroughly identified himself with its best interests, his far-reaching enterprise, aptitude for affairs, and broad public spirit being potent in extending its commerce and in advancing its welfare in various directions, his name is inseparably linked with its rise and progress from a small, insignificant settlement to a beautiful and prosperous city. During the busy and eventful years of the half century and more that he has lived here, he has acquired wealth that places him among the most substantial citizens of Winnebago County, and he has built up one of the most stately and elegant homes within its borders.

John Lake was born March 27, 1821, on Blackford Farm, Selworthy Parish, England, said farm then being in the possession of his paternal grandfather, who was a farmer, dairyman, miller, maltster and a dealer in all kinds of seeds. In the latter part of his life he lost a large portion of his property, partly through reverses in business, and possibly a part of it by bad management. His family consisted of four sons and one daughter, all of whom died soon after they arrived at age, with the exception of James, the eldest, and Thomas, the youngest, both of whom emigrated to America, the first with his family settling at St. Johns. New Brunswick, and the latter in the United States. William Lake, the father of our subject, was also born on the old Blackford Farm, his birth occurring in the year 1798. He died there in the opening years of his manhood, at the age of twenty-two years, and thus early closed a promising career. lle married when only twenty years old, the maiden name of his wife being Gould. She was a farmer's daughter, born at Cutcombe, in the parish of Cutcombe. Her mother died leaving eleven children, and as her father soon married again, she sought a home as a servant girl at Blackford Farm. She was subsequently married to the father of our subject, and they continued to make the farm their home until his untimely death.

lle of whom we write was but six months old when his father died, and as his mother married again a year later, he was reared by his grandmother in the home of his birth, she and he being the only ones of the name of Lake living in that part of England, up to the time he came to this country. He was given excellent educational advantages in a private school kept by Mr. Robert Taylor, which he attended until he was fourteen. At that age he commenced to earn his own living by working on a farm, being thus employed the intervening two years before he came hither. He was eleven years of age when his uncte Thomas became a citizen of this Republic, and the boyish imagination of our subject followed him in his voyage across unknown seas to the far-away, strange country whither he had gone, and he wished that he too might go there in search of fortune's favors, for the spirit of adventure, inherent in every true Englishman's breast, was his by right of birth. He treasured up his determination to try life in this land of promise until he was of suitable age to put it into execution, and in the month of May, 1836, he disclosed his plans to his mother and foster-parent (his grandmother), telling them that he would like to do as his uncle Thomas had done, seek a home in the United States. They strenuously opposed his purpose, but he told them, that although he did not wish to disobey them, he had firmly resolved to go a year from that time. In May, 1837, he again broached the subject of his emigration, and was met with the same opposition. He informed his mother and foster-mother that he wished very much to obtain their consent, but he should go in any case. When they saw that further persuasion was useless, they reluctantly gave in, and sadly made preparations for his setting forth into the great world, giving him such necessary aid for his journey as was in their power.

The first week in May, 1837, our subject started out on his travels from the pleasant English home that had given him shelter from his birth, and alone, but with a brave heart and a steady purpose, he faced the unknown future and the perils of an ocean voyage never to be forgotten while memory holds sway. From Minchead he went on a schooner to Bristol, where he secured passage for Philadelphia on the "Severn," a sailing-vessel loaded with iron, and carrying about forty other passengers beside himself. In mid-ocean a dreadful storm was encountered, which lasted for five days, and it seemed impossible that the gallant ship could outweather such a tempest. Often great seas would break on deck, and the bowsprit, foremast and bulwarks were broken and washed overboard. When the fearful storm was at its beight, young Lake requested the officer to permit him to remain on deck, and he allowed him to do so on condition that he would secure himself to the main-mast, which he did with a rope that lay near, and from six o'clock in the morning until late in the evening be remained in that position without a particle of food, watching with mingled feelings of awe the sublime spectacle of the conflict of the elements with Old Ocean. As darkness enveloped what seemed to be a doomed ship, the storm abated, and at sunrise there was not wind sufficient to move the sails, and a dead calm of four days ensued.

Mr. Lake landed in Philadelphia in the latter part of June, seven weeks from the day he left old England. He was at the time sixteen years and three months of age, and was a bright, active lad, with plenty of mother-wit and other essentials to make the life that lay before him a success, if he chose to do so. His destination was Illinois, where he intended to join his uncle Thomas. From the Quaker City he crossed Pennsylvania, and went over the Alleghanies by rail and canal, passing through Johnstown, which was so nearly erased from the face of the earth by the awful flood of recent years, and through many another place, whose very name he has forgotten, and on to Pittsburg, where he embarked on a river steamer for the West. Arriving at Rockport, a small river town on the Ohio below Louisville, he was taken sick with a fever, and had to remain there until November. In the meantime, he received a letter from his uncle, who was then living in Rockford. and as soon as he was able he resumed his interrupted journey down the Ohio and up the Mississippi to Fulton, Ill. Thence he traveled on foot through marsh and swamp, and over what seemed to him endless prairies, to Sterling, and from there proceeded on the west side of the river to Rockford, where he arrived about the 1st of December. 1837, "completely worn out, physically, mentally and financially," as he himself expresses it.

In the spring he had recuperated sufficiently to work on a farm, at which he was employed three years. At the end of that time, he apprenticed himself to Mr. Thomas Thatcher, a joiner, earpenter and architect. A year with that gentleman, with wages of $5 a month and board, and he had acquired all his instructor could impart, and was prepared to set up for himself in the same line, thus showing how soon he had eaught the dash and energy of the Western spirit. He not only worked out by the day as a carpenter, but engaged as a contractor, doing business by himself until the winter of 1852-53, when he formed a partnership with Mr. P. Howes, to engage in the lumber trade. The yard was where the East Rockford passenger station of the Chicago & North western Railway now stands, which was at that time called the Chicago & Galena Railway, and which had been completed to the east side of Rock River, on the 20th of August, 1852. On the 20th of August, 1853, the railway bridge was completed across that river, and our subject and his partner removed their lumber to a yard on the west side, near the present station of the Northwestern Railway, continuing together until the summer of 1856, when they sold their business to a Mr. Free-

In November of that year, the prosperous young Westerner, whose course we have thus far followed with interest, revisited his old home at Blackford Farm, nearly twenty years having passed by with their many chances and changes since he had last crossed its threshold, a penniless lad on his way to the New World. Returning again to this country in February, 1857, in the early spring, he once more went into the lumber business, having his stand on the corner of Third and State Streets, on the same ground now occupied by the Rockford Coal & Lumber Company. Mr. Howes, his old partner, had an interest with him for a year, and then their connection was dissolved, in the fall of 1859, by the sale of the stock to Cook & Bro., lumber dealers on the west side of the river. In the spring of 1853, Mr. Lake made arrangements to take charge of the late Mr. Henry Fisher's yard, on the west side of the river, and, in the summer of the same year, formed a partnership with that gentleman, which was continued until March, 1867. In May of that year, after closing out his interest with Mr. Fisher, he again visited England, and extended his tour while abroad to Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland and portions of Germany, returning home in the fall. In the spring of 1868, he formed a five-years' partnership with the Hon. Seely Perry, who was doing a lumber business on the ground formerly occupied by our subject, and where Mr. Perry is still carrying on the same business. In the spring of 1874, they terminated their partnership, and in June Mr. Lake again indulged his fondness for travel, and revisited England, Scotland and France, and three times since he has made the same journey, in the summers of 1877, 1889 and 1891, his eldest daughter accompanying him across the ocean on his last trip. He has not altogether confined his travels to European countries, but has spent a winter on the Pacific Coast, going to California in May, 1885, with his wife and niece, and staying there until the following April.

Our subject is a man of fine physique and good presence, is possessed of business acumen and executive ability in a rare degree, and has made his influence felt in various directions. He has filled various positions of trust, and his official record is without blemish, as he has always acted for the best interests of those concerned, without regard to self, and has discharged his duties faithfully, fearlessly and with a clear conscience. He has been connected with the Rockford Fire Insurance Company since its inception. This company procured its charter in 1866, and Mr. Lake was elected its first Vice-president, and acted in that capacity until January, 1886, when he became the choice of the Board of Directors for President of the company, vice Dr. R. P. Lane, who had resigned at the close of 1885. This is one of the leading insurance companies of the West, and as its presiding officer, our subject's safe and wise policy in the management of its affairs strengthens the reputation it has acquired for stability. For ten years, ending in 1883, Mr. Lake served the Second Ward of the city as Alderman, and the same ward as Supervisor a part of that time. From 1877 to 1878, he was Chairman of the Board of Education. He is prominent in social circles as one of the leading members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and was Grand Master of the Grand Lodge and Representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the United States for six consecutive years.

Mr. Lake was married, October 11, 1819, to Miss Almeda M. Danley, whose parents, Cornelius and Sarah Danley, were farmers and pioneers of the town of Harlem, Winnebago County. Mrs. Lake has co-operated with her husband in the making of a true home in their handsome residence at No. 1211 East State Street, and its hospitalities are well known to their many friends. Of the seven children born to our subject and his wife, three died in infancy. The following is the record of the four that survive: Sarah E., born September 26, 1850, married William H. Crocker, of Evanston, 1H., August 21, 1884; Jennie E., born February 2, 1854, married Charles M. Clark, of Rockford, October 21, 1871; Alice M., born March 23, 1861, married William M. Prentice, of Rockford, December 18, 1878; Frank L., born April 5, 1865, married Jessie E. Shirley, of Rockford, May 5, 1886.

Mr. Lake is a man of wide experience, a keen observer of men and affairs, with a mind broadened by travel and contact with the world, and he is an interesting conversationalist, possessing a varied fund of information. Though retaining a strong affection for his native land, he is loyal to the country of his adoption, and a thorough American in his habits and views of life. He has not only watched with pleasure the development of this city, his chosen home, with which his personal interests are so closely bound, but he has witnessed with pride and delight the wonderful growth of these United States in the course of half a century, In a chat with the biographer concerning his past life, he spoke eloquently of the great changes that had taken place, of the discoveries and inventions that have revolutionized the world since he became a citizen of this republic. Speaking of the grand progress made in human affairs, he said:

"In June, 1892, it will be fifty-five years since I landed in Philadelphia. What changes in all the varied affairs of human life since that time! When we sailed down the River Severn from Bristol, on our voyage to the United States, I remember seeing on the docks in process of construction, the 'Great Western.' the first steamship of any importance that crossed the Atlantic to New York. Compare that slow and unwieldy craft with the doating palaces that are now nearly every day in the year crossing and recrossing from one country to the other!

"Instead of seven weeks, the journey of over three thousand miles is now accomplished in less than six days, and the passengers are provided with all the luxuries afforded by the best hotels in New York or Chicago. Postage to Europe was then twenty-five cents, and now a letter is carried across the occan for five cents. Telegraph, telephone, electric railways and machinery of various kinds, propelled by steam or electricity, have come into general use only within a comparatively short time.

"In 1837, the United States had a population of about sixteen millions; soon its inhabitants will be numbered by seventy millions. Then Chicago could boast of but four thousand one hundred and seventy souls; now the latest census gives it nearly one million three hundred thousand inhabitants. When I came here, the country west of the Mississippi River was inhabited mainly by Indians and wild beasts to the shores of the Pacific; now six railroads cross the then supposed impassable Rocky and Sierra Nevada Mountains, and what was once called the 'Great-American Desert,' has been made to blossom like the rose, and is the home of a contented and prosperous people. Then the genius of an Edison had not been thought or dreamed of. What will be the experience of the human race during the next fifty-five years? Many who now live will see, but for us of the olden-time, it is not for us to know."

DWARD II. MARSII, attorney at law, realestate dealer, money loaner and Notary Public, is one of the enterprising and wide-awake young business men of Rockford. His office is now located at No. 418 East State Street. He has the honor of being a native of this city, his birth having occurred here in 1860, and a representative of one of its pioneer families. His father, J. B. Marsh, is proprietor of a large furniture establishment on East State Street. He has been a resident of this city for nearly forty years and his life has been spent in carrying on the business which his father, Horace Marsh, who is now deceased, established here at an early day. The family came from Connecticut to Illinois and have since resided at Rockford. J. B. Marsh was married, in this city, to Miss Amanda Work, a native of Ohio, who came to Rockford when a young lady. This couple are among the prominent residents of the city where they so long resided and have a wide acquaintance among its best people. Their two children are now living: our subject and Fannie, who resides with her parents.

Edward H. Marsh acquired his literary education in the public schools of Rockford, after which he fitted himself for the practice of law in the State University in Ann Arbor, Mich., from which he was graduated in the Class of '82. In 1884, he opened an office in his native city and has here since engaged in practice. He has also been connected with many of the leading industries and enterprises of Rockford. At this writing, he is Secretary of the H. W. Price Improvement Company, proprietors of the North End Division, a property embracing more than six hundred acres of land. It is well located and supplied with street car and railroad lines and a number of important factories are going up, while some are already in operation. The land is high, lying near the Rock River, which affords it a natural surface drainage. The lots are well located and elegantly laid out for building purposes and sell from $200 to $600 a piece, being already in good demand. There is also upon this division a schoolhouse, furnished with all the accommodations of the city.

Mr. Marsh is also connected with other leading enterprises and gives liberally to those interests calculated to promote the city's growth. He is both public-spirited and progessive, and is a valued citizen of the community. He is now serving as attorney for the Swedish Building and Loan Association and other corporations and has been two years City Attorney and has served as Supervisor of the Sixth Ward. Every public trust reposed in him is faithfully discharged, and he has proved a competent officer. Socially, he is a member of the Knights of Pythias and Woodman lodges, and is a Mason. In polities, he is a stalwart Republican and has served as Chairman of the County Central Committee. Mr. Marsh is enterprising and industrious and is a young man who will no doubt win great success in life.

REDRICK NUGREN has been a resident of Rockford since the fall of 1868, and is a well-known mechanic of the city, whose sketch we feel assured will prove of interest to many of our readers. A native of Sweden, he was born on the 19th of September, 1813, and is a son of Johnas Anderson, who spent his entire life in his native province in Sweden, engaged in agricultural pursuits, and was called to the home beyond at the age of seventy-six years. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Johnson, is yet living on the old homestead at the age of seventyfour. She is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, to which her husband also belonged for many years. One daughter of the family resides in this country, Christina, wife of Johans Trupd, a mechanic of Rockford.

Mr. Nugren spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his parents' home, but on attaining his majority, he bade good-bye to friends and native land and set sail for America to try his fortune in the New World, of whose privileges and advantages he had heard such favorable reports. He sailed from Gottenburg, and after seventeen days spent upon the broad Atlantic, he arrived in New York, whence he journeyed Westward by land, reaching Rockford on the 16th of November, 1868. With the exception of a few months spent in California, he has since resided in this city. After locating here, he learned the trade of a cabinet-maker, to which he has devoted his entire energy. Since 1879, he has been a stockholder in the Central Furniture Company and is also one of its Directors and works in the factory.

Mr. Nugren was joined in wedlock, in this city, to Miss Mary Casya, who was born in the same province as her husband, and when a young lady emigrated to this country in 1870, since which time Rockford has been her home. Her parents never left their native land. Her father, a member of the Lutheran Church, died in Sweden at an advanced age. His wife, who is now sixty-four years of age, is also a consistent member of the Lutheran Church.

The union of Mr. and Mrs. Nugren has been blessed with a family of five children, but Charles is now deceased. The four yet living are Anna M., Alma J., Fredrica W. and Esther. The family reside at their pleasant home at No. 303 Bluff Street, which was built under the direction of our subject. He is a skilled workman in the line of his trade and has become a well-to-do citizen, owing to his industry and good management. He came to this country empty-handed but has made the most of his opportunities and the result is shown in his present prosperity.

ORACE FOOTE, one of the old pioneers of Winnebago County, having come here as early as 1837, is now living retired in the city of Rockford. He hailed from New York, his birth having occurred in Burlington, Otsego County, December 27, 1811. Burnice Foote, his father, was born in Bernardstown, Franklin County, Mass., in 1766. The latternamed gentleman was reared and given a good education and remained in his native State until 1800, at which time he started for the then Far West, locating in Burlington, Otsego County, N. Y. He opened a public house at Burlington Green, which was located on the stage route leading from Albany to Cooperstown. After being employed as "mine host" for a few years, the elder Mr. Foote purchased land near the Green, upon which he resided and farmed until his decease in January, 1831.

Miss Melinda Field was the maiden name of our subject's mother, her birth occurring in Northfield, Franklin County, Mass. She survived her husband many years, and died at the home of the original of this sketch in 1862, at the advanced age of ninety-two years. She became the mother of six children: Harriet, who died at the age of sixty-five years; Horatio, when ninety-one years; Lucius, at ninety, Feronia, at seventy-seven, and Hiram at the age of eighty-one. Our subject, who is the youngest member of the family, is the only one now living, and he is the only one among the sons of the family who did not become a minister in the Congregational Church.

Horace Foote was reared to man's estate and given a good education in Burlington, the schools being conducted on the subscription plan. were no railroads or canals in the vicinity of his home, and the nearest market was at Utica, ninety miles distant. Our subject continued his residence in Burlington until 1837, when he started for this State, accompanied by his mother, the trip being made overland with a team to Oberlin, Ohio, where a brother and sister were attending college, and where also his brother Horatio was located. The mother remaining in that city, our subject, with Horatio, came on to Winnebago County, they being delegated by other families of the East, including Dr. A. M. Catlin, Deacon J. W. Baker, and Deaeon Tyler, to select a desirable location. At that time Rockford contained but few families and the greater portion of the land was still owned by the Government. Mr. Foote and his brother purchased a "squatter's" elaim to a large tract of land two and one-half miles up the river to Roekford, and after buying the claim, Horatio returned to Oberlin to notify the other families. subject remained here during the winter and erected on the land three log houses and two log barns.

Early in 1838, the family of our subject located on the above-mentioned tract, and, as before stated, the brothers being preachers were very busy attending to their professional duties, and consequently the management of the farm devolved upon our subject. He improved a farm, erected thereon good buildings, and continued to reside there until 1888, then removed to Rockford where he has since lived retired.

Miss Harriet M. Batchelder became the wife of our subject in 1843; she was born in New Hampshire in 1826, and bore her husband six children, three of whom are living: Mary C., Nellie T., and Henry M. Mrs. Foote passed away January 16, 1867.

ALLIAM D. CORNWELL, County Treasurer of Boone County, was born in Brantford, Ontario, Canada, on the 27th of March, 1833. His father, Gabriel D. Cornwell, was, it is thought, born in York State, and was an infant when his parents moved to Canada. He was there reared and married, and continued to make that his home until 1815, and then, in company with his wife and eight children, came to Illinois. They started from their home in Canada with six teams, and drove to St. Joseph, Mich., where they embarked on a steamer and crossed Lake Michigan to Chicago. Then with their teams they came to Belvidere, at a time when the country was very sparsely settled, and Belvidere was but a small village on the northern side of the river. Mr. Cornwell secured a tract of land in what is now Caledonia Township, erected a good frame house and at once began the improvement of a farm. He resided on that place until the decease of his wife, when he made his home with a daughter in Le Roy Township, until his decease, dving February 7. 1885.

Our subject's mother bore the maiden name of Margaret Day; she was born in Canada and died on the home farm in 1877, having become the mother of eight children. William D. was twelve years of age when he came to the Prairie State with his parents, and has witnessed almost the entire growth and development of this section. He assisted on the home farm until fifteen years of age, and then served an apprenticeship of three years at the mason's trade. In 1857, he located on a farm which he still owns in Caledonia Township, hiring the work done on his estate and continuing to work at his trade until 1867. In that year, he went to Caledonia and engaged in the lumbering business. Four years later, Mr. Cornwell went to Colorado, and for four years worked at his trade in Pueblo and Denver. Returning to this county, he resided on the farm, the operation of which he superintended, and worked at his trade until 1890, since which time he has been a resident of Belvidere.

The lady to whom our subject was married in 1857 was Miss Catherine, daughter of William Chappel, who was born in England, and on coming to America, located in Genesee County, N. Y., where he resided for many years, and where Mrs. Cornwell was born. In 1856, her father came to Illinois and located in Caledonia Township. The maiden name of his wife was Mary A. Getten, also a native of England.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornwell have reared a family of one child, Adella, who was born December 1, 1859, married, December 25, 1879, Walter Bruner, and departed this life April 14, 1881, leaving one child, William Howard. They have an adopted daughter, Jennie, who is the wife of James Preston, of Walworth County, Wis., and the mother of two children: Ruel and Ralph.

Our subject is a Republican in politics, and in 1890 was elected to his present responsible position of Treasurer of Boone County. With his wife, he is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and personally is a very genial gentleman, having a host of warm friends in this county.

NDREW N. NOLING, of Rockford, first opened his eyes to the light of day on the 5th of April, 1839, in Wester Gothland, Sweden. He is the eldest child of the family, and was the first to come to America. A sketch of his parents is given in connection with the history of L. M. Noling, on another page of this work. No event of special importance occurred during the childhood of our subject. When it was time to enter upon a business eareer, he chose cabinetmaking as the trade which he wished to follow, and served a full apprenticeship in that line.

In Sweden, Mr. Noling was united in marriage to Miss Johanna Johnson, who came with her husband to this country, and died at their home in Rockford, in 1874. She was a good Christian woman, and may friends mourned her loss. One child preceded her to the final home, Hilda, who died in youth, and three are yet living. Frederick A., the eldest, is a carver in the employ of the Central Furniture Company of this city; Jennie O. occupies the position of book-keeper with the Star Laundry Company; and J. William is also a carver of the Central Furniture Company.

Mr. Noling came to Rockford in 1868. He sailed from Gottenburg to New York City on one of the steamers of the Inman Line, and reached his destination in May of that year. He did not tarry long in the Eastern metropolis, but at once made his way to Chicago, and on the 6th of June arrived in Rockford, where he has since resided. In the years which have followed, he has been connected in one way or another with the various furniture faetories of this city. He is now a stockholder in the Union Grocery Company, and one of the large stockholders and directors in the Central Furniture Company, in which he also works as a cabinetmaker. He was one of the first men to help organize the latter company. He has been very successful since eoming to this country, and has acquired a competence which numbers him among the well-todo Swedish residents of Rockford.

Mr. Noling was a second time married, in this eity, this time to Miss Anna K. Swenson, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, June 10, 1847. Her parents died in their native land when she was about eighteen years of age. Her father, Swan Nelson, was a farmer, and was called to rest at the age of fifty. His wife, whose maiden name was Helen Johnson, died about two years later. They were members of the Lutheran Church. In the family were five children: John and Mary are both married, and reside in Sweden; Christina is a resident of Kansas; and Sophia makes her home in Rockford. The two latter are also married. Mrs. Noling crossed the Atlantic in 1874, reaching Rockford on the 17th of July, and on the 14th of April, 1875, gave her hand in marriage to our subject. Their union has been blessed with two children, who are yet living: Martin Norman and Esther A. They lost four children: Charles A., Oscar M., Oscar E. and A. Lillie, all of whom died in childhood. The parents are members of the First Lutheran Church. They reside at No. 305 Almon Street, where they have a beautiful home which was built by Mr. Noling. This worthy couple have many friends in the community, and are people of sterling worth, deserving the high esteem in which they are held.

RAMEL A. RICHARDSON. The Wisconsin Lumber Company was organized in January, 1886, as an incorporated institution, and since that time has carried on a large and lucrative business, with Mr. Richardson as President and Manager. The company carries a complete line of hard and soft lumber and house-building supplies, and, possessing large resources and facilities, occupies a position high among the leading enterprises of this character in Winnebago County. The practical management of the business is placed in the hands of Mr. Richardson, who is thoroughly experienced in all its details and attends to its operations in a manner which secures the maintenance of the high standard of quality for which the firm is celebrated, while his reliable business methods have secured for the firm an enviable place in the confidence of the people.

Before speaking more minutely of the life of our subject, it will doubtless be of interest to the reader to mention a few facts in regard to the career of his father, Hiram, who died near the city of Rockford, January 13, 1885. As early as 1836, he sought a home in Guilford Township, Winnebago County, where he secured a "squatter's" claim to new land, of which he gained possession when it came into market. At that time the county was in its infancy, and only two years before, Mr. Kent had erected a sawmill in the city of Rockford (then a mere hamlet). He was one of the first settlers in Guilford Township, and, without any capital, but with plenty of energy, he set to work clearing his land and improving a farm.

The nearest market in those early days was the mimportant little village of Chicago, which offered little inducements to the early settlers. Mr. Richardson, while he was there trading, saw a man offered a lot where the court house now stands in exchange for a Seth Thomas clock, he declining without a moment's hesitation. He declining without a moment's hesitation. He aided in putting up the first frame house creeted in Rockford and made on his farm some brick, which was used in the construction of the first brick buildings of the city. Success erowned his efforts and he became well known as a prosperous farmer and prominent old settler. A man of quiet disposition, reserved and modest, he always worked for the good of the community and was a member of the Old Settlers' Society.

Mr. Richardson, Sr., came hither from Orange County, Vt., where he was born August 24, 1818. His parents died when he was a mere lad and he became self-supporting at an early age. In Winnebago County, this State, he was united in marriage with Miss Lucetta Thurston, who was born in New Hampshire, July 27, 1819. She still survives, making her home with her sons in Rockford. The only children of this family are Charles A. and O. A., both residents of Rockford.

The younger of the two sons, our subject, was born in Rockford, October 27, 1846, and here has spent his entire life. He early developed business qualities of no ordinary character and for some time was manager of a lumber company, of which he became owner in 1873. He remained in that connection until January, 1886, when the company was merged into the Wisconsin Lumber Company. Mr. Richardson also takes an interest in other corporations and institutions of Rockford. In polities, he is a Republican of the most pronounced type.

The lady who became the wife of our subject, September 27, 1870, bore the maiden name of Emma Regan, and was born and reared in Rockford. Her father, Marshall H. Regan, came to Illinois in the early '10s and engaged in the lumber business at Rockford until his death, in 1875. He was twice married, the mother of Mrs. Richardson being killed in a railroad accident at South Bend, Ind., in 1857, when in the prime of life. Her eldest daughter Mary lost her life in the same manner. The second wife of Mr. Regan was a Miss Stewart and still survives, her home being in Rockford.

Yours truly Ingalls Carleton

Sincerely yours Any Carleton.

In their religious connections, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson are members of the First Baptist Church of Rockford, and he is serving as Deacon. They are the parents of six children, as follows: Mabel, who graduated from Mt. Carroll Seminary; Harry D., who was educated at the Northwestern University, of Evanston, is a promising young man; Lillian M. is a student in Mt. Carroll Seminary; Alfred G., Raymond O. and Ethel Emma Pearl are at home and attend the city schools.

ON. INGALLS CARLETON. Probably in the history of Winnebago County no more worthy representative can be found of what can be accomplished by energy, integrity and well-directed efforts, than is so strikingly exemplified in the successful life of this gentleman. Since 1877, he has made his home in Rockford, where he owns and occupies an elegant residence on East State, corner of Summit Street. He has been engaged in the real-estate business since 1868, having dealt largely in land both in Winnebago County and elsewhere. At present, he has extensive interests in Sioux Falls, Dak., and the country immediately surrounding that city.

A native of Vermont, Mr. Carleton was born in Marshfield, Washington County, March 30, 1824, and is a lineal descendant of Gen. Carleton. His paternal grandfather, Jeremiah Carleton, was born in Lyndeborough, N. H., and followed farming pursuits in his native State, removing thence with teams to Barre, Vt., and settling in the wilderness. From a tract of timber land he cleared a farm, which remained his home until death ealled him hence. A grandson now owns the old homestead, one of the most attractive places in the Green Mountain State.

The grandmother of our subject, whose maiden name was Mary Edwards, was of New England birth and was descended from the famous Dr. Edwards. She reared seven children, whose names were Jeremiah, Silas, Noah, David, Hiram, Deborah and Mary, respectively. The only surviving members of the family are Hiram and Deborah. Jeremiah, father of our subject, was born in Barre, Washington County, Vt., in 1800, and was reared in his native place, there receiving his education. In his youth he removed to Nashua, N. H., where he learned the trade of a blacksmith. After following his trade for a while, he purchased a farm near Marshfield. Before railroads had been introduced into that section of the country, Burlington was the principal market and depot of supplies, to which the farmers hauled their grain and returned home with articles procured in exchange. Jeremiah Carleton followed the calling of a farmer until his death in 1881. His wife, Betsey (Robey) Carleton, a native of Nashua, N. H., long preceded him in death, passing away in Marshfield, Vt., in 1836, at the age of thirty-six. Her father, Philip Abbott Robey, was born in the old town of Dunstable, N. H., and, until a few years ago, the house was standing in which he was born. He served during the Revolutionary War and was an active participant in the battle of Ticonderoga. He married Lucy Proctor and settled in Cavandish, Vt., now called Proctorville.

The boyhood days of our subject were passed in a comparatively uneventful manner. At the age of eighteen, he commenced teaching and continued in that way during three winter terms, being engaged in farming the remainder of the year. He also dealt in live-stock, buying in Marshfield and the neighboring villages, and selling at Brighton and Cambridge, Mass. In 1856, he came to Illinois and bought one hundred and twenty acres in Rockton Township, Winnebago County. In the fall of the same year, he returned to Vermont and spent the winter, but in the spring came again to Rockton, where he formed a partnership with the Hon. G. H. Hollister and engaged in the grain business. The firm built a flouring-mill, which they operated in connection with the grain business until 1868, meeting with success as the result of judicious dealings and commendable perseverance. In the year mentioned, Mr. Carleton sold out his interest in the business and embarked in the realestate enterprises, which have since engaged his attention.

In June, 1869, Mr. Carleton was married to Miss Amy Lawrence, who was born in Rockton, Winnebago County. She belongs to the well-known New England family of that name, who were identified with the early history of Massachusetts. The Lawrence family is of English descent and some of its members settled in New England during the Colonial period. They bore a conspicuous part in the history and development of that part of the country and as lawyers, jurists, soldiers and business men, stood in the front rank of American citizenship. The grandfather of Mrs. Carleton, John Lawrence, was a farmer of the old Bay State and spent his last days in Groton, Middlesex County, where his son Luther was born.

The last-named was reared and educated in Groton, whence, in 1837, he removed to Illinois and became one of the early settlers of Rockton. The journey to this county was made by stage and railroad to Albany, thence via Erie Canal to Buffalo, from there across the Lakes to Detroit, where he procured ox-teams and made an overland trip to Belvidere, Ill. At that time Northern Illinois was very sparsely settled, and deer and other wild game were plentiful. All the land in this section of the country was still owned by the Government, the surveys not yet being completed. He made a claim to a tract near Belvidere and when the land came into market, made the purchase from the Government. He was single on coming to Illinois and did not at once make a permanent settlement, but finally located at Rockton, operating a flouring-mill for some years, but was retired from active business cares for some time prior to his death in March, 1891.

The mother of Mrs. Carleton, whose maiden name was Adelia Loomer, was born in Rome, N. Y., the daughter of Loring and Mary Loomer, and died in 1869. Loring Loomer was a native of Great Barrington, Mass., his grandfather, a wealthy aristocrat, moving thence from Virginia, sacrificing a beautiful home during the war. Mrs. Adelia Lawrence reared four children, namely: Mary M., Harriet, Amy and Frances. Mr. and Mrs. Carleton have one son, Leonard Ingalls. In his politics, Mr. Carleton was formerly a Whig and joined the Republican party at the time of its formation, since which time he has been an ardent supporter of its principles. He was twice elected to represent the town of Marshfield in the Vermont State Legislature. He was a member at the time the State House was burned and served during the extra session which was called to make appropriations for a new State House. He has been instrumental in moulding the opinions of his fellow-citizens, among whom his opinion carries great weight, and is justly regarded as a man of honorable principles and unusual ability. The attention of the reader is invited to the lithographic portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Carleton presented in this connection.

OHN PILCHER, Jr., who was for many years a leading farmer of Caledonia Township, and is now living in Belvidere, claims England as the land of his birth. He was born in Kent County, March 15, 1841, and is a son of John Pilcher, also a native of Kent County, as were the grandparents. The father was reared upon a farm, and followed agricultural pursuits in his native land until April, 1851, when, with his wife and our subject, he sailed from London, England, to New York, where he arrived after a voyage of five weeks. He went at once to Fairfield County, Ohio, where he made his home until 1855, when he came to Boone County, and located in Belvidere. He here worked at the mason's trade, and engaged in drilling wells until 1865, when he bought land in the town of Bonus, and engaged in farming for twelve years, when he returned to Belvidere and devoted his energies to gardening. He now resides in Hillsboro, N. H. His wife died in this city, leaving three children; John of this sketch; Irene, wife of William B. Chilvers; and Eliza A., wife of Charles S. Dana.

Our subject was a lad of ten years when he came with his parents to the United States. He attended private school in Kent County, and afterward was a student in the public schools of Lancaster, Ohio, and of Belvidere. When not in school, he was employed on the farm, and continued to engage in agricultural pursuits until 1862, when, on the 23d of March, he enlisted in Company E, Sixty-fifth Illinois Infantry. He was made a prisoner at Harper's Ferry the following September, and with others was parolled, and was in camp at Chicago until exchanged. At the siege of Knoxville, in 1863, he was severely wounded and incapacitated for further active duty. He continued in service until the expiration of his term, when he was honorably discharged in March, 1865.

As soon as possible, Mr. Pilcher returned home, and resumed farming. After his marriage, he rented land for four years, and then purchased a farm in Caledonia Township, to the cultivation and improvement of which he devoted his energies until 1891, when he sold out and came to Belvidere. He purchased property in the city, and has there since made his home. As a companion and helpmate on life's journey he chose Miss Ida A. Kipp, a native of the Empire State, and a daughter of Abraham and Clarissa Kipp. Their union was celebrated in 1871, and unto them was born a daughter, Cora Edith. The mother died April 8, 1885, and her death was deeply regretted by many friends.

Mr. Pilcher is a member of the Second Baptist Church, and socially, is connected with S. A. Hurlbut Post No. 164, G. A. R., while his daughter is a member of the Ladies' Aid Society, S. of V. He is recognized as one of the substantial citizens of the community, and for his success in life deserves great credit, as it is due entirely to his own efforts.

RVILL P. THOMAS. A pleasantly located and fertile tract of land on section 7, Owen Township. Winnebago County, is owned and occupied by the subject of this sketch, who is giving his time and attention to agricultural pursuits. He is an old resident of the county, having come here in 1867, and has consequently been an important factor in the growth and development of this section.

William M. Thomas, the father of our subject, was born in Pennsylvania, as was also his father, Moses Thomas, whom tradition says was a descendant of one of three brothers who came from Wales to America in Colonial times. The grandfather followed the occupation of a farmer and resided in Wayne County, Pa. The father of our subject was married in the Keystone State, where he resided until 1838, and then, coming overland with his wife and three children to Winnebago County, made the trip via the Lakes to Chicago and thence by team to Rockford. Making a claim to a tract of Government land now included in Rockton Township, Mr. Thomas erected a log cabin and began the work of subduing nature, clearing and breaking land. In 1881, he sold this tract and removed to Rockton where he died in July, 1882. His wife, who was born in Wayne County, Pa., was known in her maidenhood as Eliza Conkling.

The original of this sketch does not remember the overland trip to this county, as he was very young at the time, but the hardships through which the family passed in developing the new home have made a lasting impressiom upon his mind. For some time deer, wolves and other kinds of animals were very plentiful, and as there were no railroads, Chicago and the lead mines in the vicinity of Galena were the nearest markets.

In 1858, Mr. Thomas of this sketch started with others for Pike's Peak, the party crossing the Mississippi River at Fulton and the Missouri at Plattsmouth, but, hearing discouraging reports from people who were returning from that region, they concluded to come home, and from that time until 1862 our subject was engaged in farming with his brother, John C. On the outbreak of the Civil War, he was enlisted in Company F, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry and served his country bravely until the close of the war, having participated with his regiment in many of the important battles and campaigns, among which were Perryville, Stone River and the march with Sherman to Atlanta. He also fought at Chattanooga, Jonesville, Spring Hill, Franklin and Nashville.

He of whom we write in 1867 purchased the farm upon which he now resides and where he has been a continuous resident, with the exception of the year 1870, which he spent in Kansas. The fall of 1870, he was united in marriage with Alice A. Carr. Mrs. Thomas was born in Livingston County, N. Y., and was a daughter of John Carr, who was born on the banks of Crooked Lake, that State. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Thomas, William Carr, was born either in New York or New England, and was a farmer by occupation.

spending his last days on his farm in Crooked Lake. The maiden name of her grandmother was Ann Mattison; she was also a native of the Empire State. The father of Mrs. Thomas came to Illinois in 1855, and resided in Rockton and Owen Townships, this county, until 1872, when they removed to Wisconsin, purchasing a farm near Beloit, where they made their home. The maiden name of his wife was Irene F. Bibbins, daughter of Smith and Angeline (Fargo) Bibbins. The three children comprising the household of our subject are William O., John L. and Dora A. In politics, he is a straightforward Republican.

RUNDAGE CORBY WILLIAMS. Among the gentlemen prominent in business in Rockford there is, perhaps, no one more worthy of mention than Mr. Williams, whose birth occurred at Vernon, Essex County, N. J., September 2, 1832. His father, Aaron Williams, was also a native of that county, while his grandfather, Joseph Williams, hailed from Connecticut and was a lineal descendant of Roger Williams. The grandfather removed to New Jersey, where he resided on a farm in Essex County until his decease. His wife, it is believed, was also a native of Connecticut and spent her last years on the Essex County farm.

Aaron Williams was given a good education in his native county, and on learning the trade of a shoemaker was engaged in that business in Binghampton, N. Y., for a number of years. He later came to Rockford on a visit in the fall of 1881 and departed this life at the home of our subject, January 30 of the following year, when seventyone years of age. His wife, who was born in Essex County, N. J., was prior to her marriage known as Miss Rebecca Corby, being the daughter of Ezekiel and Rebecca Corby, natives of the abovenamed State. On the death of her husband, Mrs. Williams returned to Binghampton, in the summer of 1882, and, residing with a daughter for a time, later went to Yonkers on a visit to another daughter, departing this life at the home of one of her children in Rensselaerville May 16, 1856, in her seventy-fourth year.

Six sons and five daughters were included in the parental family, and our subject was but eighteen months old when his father and mother removed to Binghampton, N. Y., the journey being made overland by teams. There he received a good education, and when eighteen years old began to learn the trade of a carpenter, serving an apprenticeship of a year and a half. He worked at journey work during the summers and taught school in the winter. Later, going to New York City, he did journey work for a time, and in 1855 was similarly engaged for two years at Seranton, Pa., losing his wages at that time on account of the great financial erash, which caused all kinds of business to be suspended. B. C. Williams then went to the town of Lathrop, Susquehanna County, that State, and was given employment at cutting logs and firewood through the winter, and in April of the following year returned to Binghampton where he resided until July 20. Then coming to Illinois, our subject located at Warrenton, Du Page County, working in the harvest field for a few weeks, when he became employed at his trade, his first work there being the building of the Methodist Episcopal Church. After having framed and raised the steeple, and before it was completed, the staging fell, thus precipitating Mr. Williams to the ground, sixty feet below, by which fall he was severely injured.

In 1862, he of whom we write went to Chicago where he was employed at working at his trade, and in 1864 had charge of the erection of the Government corral on State Street, which extended from Twenty-fourth to Twenty-sixth Street. In the fall of 1864, our subject raised a company of mechanics for the United States service, and after the battle of Nashville went to St. Louis, where he was mustered into service. He was then sent to Nashville, being assigned to duty in the Eighth Tennessee Regiment, with which he remained until May, 1865, when he received his honorable discharge and returned home. Removing his family to the Garden City, our subject took charge of a sash, door and blind factory, which he managed until 1871 and then, on account of ill-health, came to

Your Truly, J. A. Johnson Winnebago County, purchasing a farm in New Milford Township, which he operated for four years. Then disposing of his tract, he moved into the city of Rockford and bought property, to the improvement and management of which he devotes his entire time and attention.

In Hyde Park, Pa., in the year 1857, Brundage C. Williams and Mary E. Lathrop were united in marriage. The lady was born in Lathrop, that State, while her father, Elijah, was a native of Unadilla, Otsego County, N. Y., where her grandfather was one of the pioneers and an extensive land-owner. Elijah Lathrop went to the Keystone State when a young man, where he met and married Jemima Mack, a native of Connecticut. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Williams was named Elijah Mack, and had his birth in Connecticut, of Scotch parents. He removed from that State to Pennsylvania, where he purchased a tract of timber land and resided until his decease. The father of Mrs. Williams was also a farmer and with his wife lies buried in the cemetery in Buckeye near Lathrop.

Our subject is an ardent advocate of temperance principles and is actively connected with the Prohibition Club. He is very public-spirited and liberal, having improved and donated Williams' Park to that city.

OHN A. JOHNSON. The gentleman whose portrait is presented on the opposite page is one of the prominent business men of Rockford, having for eighteen years been connected with some of the leading enterprises of the city. A native of Sweden, he was born in Jonkoping, January 26, 1845, and is a son of Samuel E. and Catrina Johnson. The father was born May 13, 1820, and the mother September 18, 1816, and both are still living. They are kindly, generous people and are members of the Lutheran Church. They emigrated to this country June 14, 1854, sailing from Gottenburg to Liverpool, England, and thence to the United States, landing August 20, in Philadelphia, where they resided two years. In May, 1857, they removed to Chicago, and afterward went to Kane County, HL, settling on a farm between St. Charles and Elgin. December 29, 1863, the father enlisted in Company B, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, and served with valor until he was honorably discharged, September 10, 1865.

Our subject is the eldest of the three sons of the family yet living. One brother, Charles A., married Miss Matilda Johnson and is foreman in one of the departments of the Elgin Watch Factory. William, a machinist in the Rockford Watch factory, wedded Anna Sandine. The first nine years of his life our subject spent in his native land, after which he came with his parents to America. His education was acquired in the publie schools, after which he learned the trade of a mechanic with his father, who is a successful gunsmith, as well as farmer. He then worked at model and pattern making in Elgin for a time, and in September, 1868, entered the watch factory of that city. In 1872, he went to Chicago, where he was employed by the Cornell Watch Company until April, 1874, when he arrived in Rockford, where he has since made his home.

Since coming to this city, Mr. Johnson was joined in wedlock with Miss Ida Trusbury, March 16, 1886. She was born in Pecatonica, September 22, 1858, and spenther maidenhood days in this county. Her parents, Adam and Johanna Trusbury, are natives of Sweden, and now reside in Rockford, where they are surrounded by all the comforts of life. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are pleasantly located in a nice residence at No. 503 South Second Street, and their home is brightened by the presence of their daughter, Beulah B.

In polities, Mr. Johnson is a stalwart Republican, warmly advocating the principles of that party although he has never been an office-sceker. In 1874, on the organization of the Rockford Watch Company, he became one of its employes, signing a contract with them for five years, and is the only one that has now been continuously with the company during those eighteen years. He now occupies the position of master mechanic and is one of the stockholders. He also owns interests in other enterprises, including the Rockford Manufacturing Company, of which he is President.

He is a stockholder and director of the Forest City Furniture Company, a stockholder and Vicepresident of the Home Building and Loan Association and of the Excelsior Furniture Company.

Since coming to Rockford, Mr. Johnson has been one of its leading and influential Swedish business men and is well and favorably known for his progressive and enterprising spirit and the upright life which he has led. He may well be termed a self-made man for he started out in the world empty-handed and has by his own efforts overcome all the obstacles and disadvantages in his path and worked his way upward to a position of which he may well be proud.

ENRY FISH. Now in the twilight of a well-spent life, this gentleman is living retired at his pleasant homestead in Manches-(6) ter Township, Boone County. A life filled with varied and ofttimes thrilling incidents-his birthplace in Edinburg, Scotland, his childhood and early manhood passed in England, and his mature years amid the primeval scenes of an uncultivated and uncivilized country, where Indians and wild game abounded and few improvements had been made—the record of such a life, if told in its completeness, would make a volume of interesting reading. It is not our privilege to place it before our readers in its entirety. As we may not follow every curve of a river, but can only trace its general outlines from its source to the sea, so while we may not narrate every incident in the life of Mr. Fish, we can, notwithstanding, relate the principal events which have marked and characterized his career.

The father of our subject, William Fish, was born in England, and married Miss Catherine Chisholm, a native of Inverness, in the Highlands of Scotland. For twenty-one years he was a soldier in the Scotch army, participating in many heavy engagements and experiencing all the hardships of active service under the British flag. His wife accompanied him on his marches, and was in Egypt with him. On one occasion, when the army was surprised at breakfast and compelled to march at once, in the hasty breaking up of eamp she was left behind with her infant child, and followed on foot. Fortunately, she was overtaken by an officer, who kindly took the child with him, while she followed on foot for three days before she came up to the army, stopping at night at the most convenient place. One night she was refused lodgings in an inn, and, thinking she could sleep near by, lay down for the night under the sign. In the morning, to her surprise, she found she had slept by the post, and beneath the corpse on the gibbet.

A life pensioner of the English Government, Mr. Fish, Sr., attained an advanced age and died in Norfolk County, England, when nearly an octogenarian. His wife passed away in England in the year 1842. Their family comprised the following children: Neil, Archibald, Henry, James, Alexander, Kate, Ann and Mary. Henry was born in Edinburg, Scotland, in 1807, and passed his childhood in England. There he learned the trade of a carpenter, and was employed by Sir Jacob Astley. When about twenty-one years old, he was married, in May, 1829, to Miss Elizabeth P. Cooper, of England, and they lived together in mutual helpfulness until death called the loving wife hence, March 5, 1890, at the age of eighty-three.

In 1831, accompanied by his wife and two children, Mr. Fish emigrated to the United States, landing in New York after a voyage of six weeks. He worked at his trade for a few years in New York and Utica, and then, homesick for a sight of his native land, and in poor health, he returned to England and visited for about one year. Shortly after his return to this country, he resolved to seek a home in the Far West, and, with his wife and children, came to Illinois in November, 1813, the journey being made by canal and lake to Chicago, and thence by open wagon to Manchester, Arriving here, he paid William Clark $150 for the claim which he had pre-empted on section 10, and at once went to the land office, secured a deed, and settled on the place.

The years that have come and gone since settlement was made on the farm have brought their sorrows and joys, their prosperity and adversity, their sunshine and clouds, but through them all they have been sustained by mutual love and devotion. A large family of children gathered around the fireside, and ten of the number still survive, namely: Henry, Edmund Y., William C., Elizabeth, Archibald C., Cyrus, Alexander J., Mary A., Caroline R. and Franklin B., the last three named having been born in Illinois. One son and one daughter are buried in New York. Four of the sons are unmarried, but the others have established homes of their own. Mr. Fish is justly proud of his children, his fourteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Elizabeth married William File, of Canada, who died in 1889, leaving one son and three daughters, all of whom are married. In the spring of 1890, Mrs. File came to the old home to care for her father, who has been considerably troubled of late years with rheumatism and is now in feeble health. Her children are: Rebecca E., who married Alpheus C. Barker, a farmer near Belvidere; Eugenia E., who married Edwin Collins, of Kansas; William Edward, who married Janette Patterson and cultivates his mother's farm in Manchester Township; and Josephine, the wife of John E. Wells, who resides on the old homestead and is operating its one hundred and fifty-five acres. In his political belief, Mr. Fish was first a Whig and later a Republican. He east his vote for William Henry Harrison for President and one of his most highlyprized souvenirs is the badge which he wore at the funeral of that great general.

EONARD S. LONGCOR was born in Belvidere, Ill., August 22, 1815. His father, Samuel, was born in Dundee, Yates County, N. Y., October 25, 1813. His grandfather, who likewise bore the name of Leonard, was a native of New York, and spent his entire life in his native State, where he followed the occupation of a farmer. He married Miss Ann Thompson, who was born in New York, and was of Scotch descent. Mrs. Longcor became a widow, and was married a second time, and with her husband, Melvin Schenck, removed to Illinois. They were among the first members of the First Baptist Church of Belvidere, and spent their declining years in Belvidere Township. Anton Longeor, the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was a native of Germany, and there married a Miss Strubles. On coming to America, they settled in New York State.

Samuel Longcor, father of Leonard S., was married to Miss Malinda Smith, January 7, 1835. In 1840, he came to Illinois, accompanied by his wife and three children, coming via the Lakes to Detroit, at which point he bought a team and pursued the rest of the journey overland to Boone County. At that time Belvidere was but a small hamlet. Being a practical mechanic, Mr. Longcor at once engaged in the manufacture of wagons, and later, of carriages. After a few years he turned his attention exclusively to the manufacture of steel plows.

In the early history of Illinois, there were no plows that would scour in the difficult prairie soil. Being possessed of an inventive genius, Mr. Longcor, after repeated efforts, invented a plow which proved a complete success. The superiority of his plow, which was called the "Diamond Plow," became widely known. He was awarded a silver medal at the Mechanics' Institute, held in Chicago in 1852, for the best stirring plow. While a resident of the State of New York, he was elected an officer of the State militia. His commission, which bears the date of September 1, 1836, and the silver medal are highly prized as heirlooms. He has always been a public spirited citizen, and in his business life, has ever had the confidence of his acquaintances.

In the early days of Belvidere, Mr. Longcor aided greatly in the erection of a Methodist Church edifice. A few years ago he made a gift to the city of Belvidere of a valuable building lot, upon which was erected the present city hall, which is used for council meetings, public library and postoffice. January 4, 1849, he was made a Master Mason, and has ever since been a highly respected member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, F. & A. M. For the past few years he has lived a retired life. His wife was born in Steuben County, N. Y., April 14, 1814, and died in Belvidere, August 21, 1891, Ann, Mary, Leonard S., John C., Jane, Sarah, Kate and Lydia.

Addison N. Longeor enlisted in Company B, Fifteenth Illinois Infantry, early in 1861, and served as First Lieutenant, having command of the company for nine months. In 1862, he was detailed by the Adjutant General for the recruiting service. Soon after the battle of Shiloh, he was ordered to join his regiment. He participated in the siege of Corinth, and the battle of the Hatchie, besides in many other engagements, and died in the service, at Waterford, Miss., January 5, 1863, at the age of twenty-seven years. Jane Longeor died September 20, 1885.

Leonard S. Longcor, the subject of this sketch, was born and educated in Belvidere, where he afterward engaged in business with his father, whose mechanical genius he inherited. He was successful as a manufacturer of steel plows. A few years later he turned his attention to his present business, that of real-estate and loans. June 23, 1870, he was married, in Belvidere, to Miss Juliet G. Ticknor, who was born in Prattville, Ala., July 2, 1812. The parents of Mrs. Longcor, Simon B. and Harriet L. (Luce) Ticknor, were natives of Connecticut. Mrs. Harriet L. Ticknor became a widow and married for her second husband Joseph Goodrich, of Alabama. They removed to Illinois in 1858, where she still resides, her husband having died June 6, 1389.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard S. Longcor have two children living, Willard T. and Harriet G., and lost their first-born in infancy. The son was born August 17, 1872, and the daughter, September 21, 1877. Willard T. was graduated from the North Belvidere High School in the Class of '90. The following year he became a student in the Northwestern Military Academy at Highland Park, Ill., and was elected President of the Senior Class, graduating with high honors in 1892. His record is thus:

Second in deportment.

Warrant as staff officer, with rank of Sergeant-Major.

Scholarship in Wheaton College, for highest record in scholarship.

Best record in marksmanship of the rifle team—having made forty-nine out of a possible fifty.

Diploma, classical course.

Gold medal, for best oration, delivered in best manner.

Gold medal, for highest record in scholarship.

Commission as Brevet Second Lientenant, Illinois State Militia, from Gov. Fifer.

Lieut. Longeor is aiming high, and we predict that he will hit his mark. He has not yet decided what college he will next attend—probably Lake Forest University.

Good for Lieut. Will. T. Longeor!

Aune 8, 1892, Gov. Fifer commissioned him Brevet Lieutenant, Illinois State Militia. The following letter speaks for itself:

Headquarters Northwestern Military Academy,
Highland Park, Ill., April 13, 1892.
L. S. Longcon, Belyndere, Ill.

Dear Sir;—At General Orders yesterday, Willard was made Sergeant-Major of the Battalion, and assigned to Commandant's staff, a place which I think he has fairly earned by his gentlemanly conduct, loyalty to the school, and faithful discharge of his duties, both academic and military.

Yours truly,

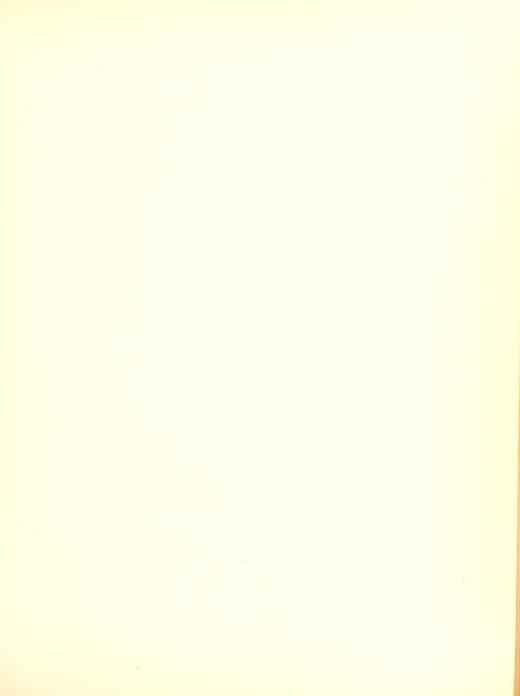

H. P. DAVIDSON, Col. and Pres.

UGUST HAEGG, Superintendent of the

II. W. Price Glove Works and President of the Excelsior Furniture Company, of which he was a promoter and is now a stockholder, was born in Smolen, Sweden, on the 22d of January, 1848. His parents, S. J. and Charlotta (Lielstrom) Haegg, have ever been residents of Eksjo, Sweden, and the father is now seventy-one years of age. They have been members of the Lutheran Church all their lives. Of the eleven children born to this worthy couple, eight are still living, three in this country and five in Sweden.

August Haegg was just of age when he landed in this country and came immediately to Roekford, Ill., of which city he has been a resident ever since, with the exception of about two years. Shortly after locating in Rockford, he became connected with the glove manufactory and for a time was associated with T. Munthe. Later Mr. Haegg became the superintendent of the tannery and factory and has filled that position for the last tifteen years. He has under him one hundred and fifty employes and is a man abundantly qualified for that position. He is a practical glove-maker, as well as tanner, and all the goods are made from stock that is tanned at this place. The business is located at the corner of Peach and Wyman Streets, and is a flourishing institution. He is also interested in other enterprises and is a Director and stockholder of the Building and Loan Association, incorporated in 1883, with a capital of $5,000,000.

The original of this sketch was one of the first of the family to come to the United States, he and his brother, Otto W., having emigrated here in the spring of 1869, and in this country the former learned the business he is now following. He was married, in Rockford, to Miss Christina L. Jernberg, who was born in North Sweden and came to this country in 1869, with her parents, who settled in Michigan for a short time. Later they came to Rockford and here the father, J. E. Jernberg, died. The mother is still living. (For further particulars of the parents see sketch of Gus Jernberg.) Mrs. Haegg was educated principally in Michigan and is a lady of more than ordinary ability. To Mr and Mrs. Haegg have been born two children: Norma A. and Henry E. In politics, Mr. Heagg supports the views of the Republican party. He and his wife are worthy members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church.

LFRED P. WELLS, Secretary and Treasurer of the George S. Haskell Seed Company, is a native of the Empire State, but was educated in Vermont, Connecticut, and at Cambridge, Mass. The family is of English descent. His grandfather, the Rev. William Wells, was a native of England, and a dissenter from the English Church. In 1793, with his wife and children, he emigrated to this country, settling in Brattleboro, Vt., where he continued in active service as a minister for twenty years, and there made his home until his death in 1827, at the age of eighty-three. He was a personal friend of the well-known Priestly, and was assisted by the well-known English philanthropist, John Howard, in securing his early education. Many of his sermons were placed in the Rev. Dr. Sprague's "Annals of the American pulpit," which are noted for their logic and intelligence. The wife of the Rev. Mr. Wells was an English lady, Jane Hancox, who died at her home in Brattleboro, Vt., at an advanced age.

The father of our subject, Alfred Wells, was born in Worcestershire, England, and was the seventh in a family of eight children, all of whom were born in England, reared in this country, and are now deceased. Alfred became a farmer of Mexico, N. Y., and died at his home in that place in his sixty-sixth year. He was a prominent citizen of the community, and highly respected. He wedded Mary Childs, a native of New York, who survived her husband a few years, and departed this life in Mexico. In the family were six children, but our subject and a sister living in Mexico, N. Y., are now the only surviving members.

Alfred P. Wells, whose name heads this record, was married in Massachusetts, to Miss Martha Kilbourn, who was born, reared and educated in Berkshire County, that State. By this union have been born five children, all yet living: Martha F., a stenographer and cashier in a wholesale house of Chicago; Fred K., a member of and book-keeper for a gas stove manufacturing company of Chicago, wedded Miss Anna Hansler; Ellen M. is the wife of William J. Burr, of the firm of Burr Brothers, leading grocers of Rockford; Julia F. and E. Howard are at home.

Mr. Wells has had a varied experience as a merchant, book-keeper and banker. He came to Rockford twenty-three years ago, and the first year of his residence here he was connected with the Rockford Woolen Mills. From the spring of 1871 until the fall of 1876, he was assistant cashier of the Rockford National Bank, and in 1877 was elected City Clerk, which office he filled for two years. During the succeeding four years, he was cashier of the Emerson, Talcott Manufacturing Company, and in 1883, became connected with Mr. Haskell in the seed business. Mr. Haskell had carried on trade in that line since 1865, and in 1889, when the Haskell Seed Company was organized, was made President, holding the office until his death. He was a native of this city, and a man of prominence here for many years. He was particularly well known in the seed trade all over the country, and for nearly fifteen years did an almost exclusive wholesale trade. As before stated, the company was organized in 1889, with a capital stock of $30,000. Mr. Wells then became a stockholder, and was elected Secretary and Treasurer, and, since the death of Mr. Haskell, has also been manager. This is one of the leading industries of the city, and the business is now in a thriving condition.

Mr. Wells is also interested in other concerns, is one of the directors of the Forest City Insurance Company, also of the Rockford Silver Plate Company, is a stockholder of the Rockford Electric Manufacturing Company, which manufactures electric machinery, and is connected with other leading industries. He is a well-known business man of sterling worth, and his public and private life are alike above reproach. He holds membership with the Star of the East Lodge No. 166, of Rockford, and he and his wife attend the Christian Union Church.

OBERT F. ARDERY, one of the enterprising and progressive agriculturists of Le Roy Township, Boone County, is the owner of two hundred and seventy acres of arable land. He devotes the greater portion of his time to the raising of cereals, harvesting as high as three thousand bushels of oats and four thousand bushels of corn per year. He keeps a dairy of twenty-live cows and has about fifteen head of a good breed of horses on his place.

Born in Ogdensburg, N. Y., July 28, 1848, our subject is the son of James Ardery, who had his birth on the Atlantic ocean while en route to the New World from England. The grandparents of our subject were of English and Scotch-Irish descent respectively, and came to America in 1807. They were farmers and reared a family of two daughters and two sons, living to attain a ripe old age. The mother passed away in 1854 or 1855, when very old.

The father of our subject was a weaver by trade which was the business of his father, but later in life became a farmer in St. Lawrence County, N. Y. The lady whom he chose as his wife was Agnes Montgomery, also a native of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and who, in 1852, accompanied her husband to McHenry County, this State. The elder Mr. Ardery purchased eighty acres of land in McHenry County, on which they settled and resided until 1858, in which year the father went to California in company with a Mr. Kibby, for whom he drove a number of horses and a herd of horned cattle. They were on the way from May until October, during which time they had a pleasant and successful trip. Mr. Ardery bought a vineyard in the Golden State and in 1861 was joined by his family. They had sold their farm in Illinois, and resided in California, where the mother died, in June, 1889, and the father followed to the land beyond the next October, the latter being in his eighty-fourth year.

Of the ten children comprising the parental family, seven were living at the death of their parents, viz: George M.; Margaret, Mrs. George R. Ford, who died in San Francisco, in February, 1891, leaving one son; our subject was the next in order of birth; Alex M., who resides at Carson City, Nev., is a train dispatcher and the master of transportation; James resides at Virginia City, Nev., where he is an engineer among the silver mines; Agnes, and Sarah. Those deceased are William, who died in Nevada, in 1872; Eliza, Mrs. S. W. Hammond, whose decease occurred in Blaine, this State, in 1888, and John, who passed away at Capron, in 1887.

He of whom we write accompanied his parents on their removal to California, and attended school at Placerville until he was seventeen years of age. He then left home and worked on a peach ranch for a year and a half, for which he received $20 per month. On account of ague, however, he returned to Placerville, and, in December, 1866, in company with his brother John, made his way back to Illinois via the Nicaragua route. He rode across the Isthmus on a donkey, which he found to be a very slow and tedious way of traveling, and did not even stop to pluck the tropical fruits which hung in tempting clusters from the trees. He arrived in Capron January 16, 1867, and the following fall went to Beloit to learn the machinist trade of O. E. Merrill & Co. Having mastered that line of work, in December, 1869, he returned to Virginia City, Nev., and there followed his trade for six years, during which time he was very successful, being engineer for the Bonanza mine the entire period.

In the fall of 1874, Mr. Ardery of this sketch returned by way of the railroad to Blaine, this State, and the succeeding year purchased one hundred and ninety acres of land, for which he paid $8,650 in cash, the most of which he made while plying his trade in the West. The lady to whom our subject was married, February 21, 1877, was Miss Ella, daughter of Philo and Diana (Head) Conyes. She was born in Le Roy Township, while her parents had their birth in Genesee County, N. Y.; they are now living retired in Capron where they are classed among the well-to-do citizens. The two children born to our subject and his wife are Claude Earl, who had his birth October 27, 1879, and Alta, who was born November 4, 1888.

Mr. Ardery for a period of seven years served as Assessor of this township, and was elected to be Supervisor in 1892. He is a Republican in politics, and, in social matters, a Master Mason, Knight Templar and Odd Fellow. Mr. and Mrs. Ardery visited California in 1887, when they had a most enjoyable and profitable trip. He is a gentleman whose character and abilities give him the respect of the community, and his enterprise and progressive ideas place him in the front rank among business men.

OHN ALLEN. There is scarcely a line of business that is not represented in Rockford, where commercial and manufacturing enterprises seem equally prominent. The business in which the subject of this sketch is engaged is that of the manufacture of artificial stone, in which branch he has been more than ordinarily successful. A native of England, Mr. Allen was born in the village of Probus, Cornwall County, England, October 8, 1821, where his father, Thomas, and his grandfather, Henry Allen, were natives. The latter-named gentleman was a stonemason by trade and spent his entire life in Probus.

The father of our subject also followed the trade of a stonemason, and died in his native town in 1841. He had married Margaret Secomb, the daughter of Samuel and Joanna Secomb. She departed this life in Probus, of which place she was a native, in 1843.

The parental family included ten children, viz.: Samuel, Elizabeth, Mary, John, Mary 2d, Henry, Emma, Edwin, Richard and William. Samuel, Elizabeth, John, Edwin, William, Emma, Mary, and Richard, all came to America and made their home in the Prairie State. Samuel served during the late war as a member of Company D, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, and was killed in the battle of Little Fort, S. C.; the other members of the family are still living.

John Allen was reared in his native land and, learning his father's trade, was employed in that line of work until 1849, when on the 4th of June he set sail from Falmouth, with his wife and four children, in the vessel "Priscilla." The party landed at Quebee after a voyage of seven weeks, and from that place came directly to Illinois, via the St. Lawrence River to Montreal, and then by way of land to Kingston, where they embarked on a lake vessel which conveyed them to Queenstown Heights. From there they went to Niagara Falls, by boat to Buffalo, and then by way of the Lakes to Chicago, from which city they came overland to Rockford, which latter trip consumed three days. On his arrival in this city, our subject at once found work at his trade, and after being in the employ of a gentleman for three months, started in business for himself as a contractor. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company C, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, and going South with his regiment, served his country until the spring of 1863, when he was honorably discharged on account of disability.

Returning from the war, Mr. Allen, as soon as able, resumed business as a contractor. The past few years, however, he has been engaged in the manufacture of artificial stone, which is used in the construction of the fronts of buildings, sidewalks, etc. He is doing an extensive business in that line, from which he reaps a handsome income.

John Allen and Miss Jane Whitford were united in marriage in 1843. The lady is a native of the same parish as is our subject, and has borne her husband four children, living: Celia, Mary, Harry and Charles. The eldest daughter married Fred Wheat, who is Assistant Postmaster in Rockford and has been connected with the United States Postal Service for a period of twenty-four years. Mary is Mrs. C. B. Sears and resides in Wyoming. Harry makes his home in Rockford; and Charles in Colorado. Mr. Allen is a prominent Grand Army man and is a member of Nevius Post No. 1.

RVIN KIBBE. This well-to-do agriculturist of Owen Township, Winnebago County, has by energy and perseverance, united with economy and good judgment, secured a good estate, which he is engaged in cultivating in a most profitable manner. Born May 25, 1827, in Jefferson County, N. Y., he is a son of Eli Kibbe, also a native of that State, where his grandfather, according to the best information at hand, was born and followed the occupation of a farmer.

Eli Kibbe was reared on a farm in New York, and, on removing from Jefferson County, lived in the vicinity of Canadaville until 1835, when he went to Cattaraugus County, where he purchased a tract of land and resided until the fall of 1814. At that date, accompanied by his wife and two children, the elder Mr. Kibbe came to Illinois, making the entire journey with a team to Winnebago County. Locating in what is now Harlem Township, he resided there for a time, then removed to Harrison Township, and thence to Owen Township, where he departed this life at the home of our subject. The maiden name of his wife was Abigal Mitchell; she was born in Oneida County, N. Y., and also departed this life at the home of our subject.

Arvin Kibbe came to Illinois in 1844 with his parents, at a time when the land in this vicinity sold for $1.25 per acre. There being no railroads in the neighborhood, the farm products were hauled to Chicago and Milwaukee, the principal markets. Mr. Kibbe located upon his present farm in 1882, which his persistent industry has brought to a good state of cultivation.

February 22, 1853, our subject and Matilda Steward were united in marriage. Mrs. Kibbe was born in Southold, Province of Ontario, Canada, and was the daughter of William and Sophia Steward, for a further history of whom we refer the reader to the sketch of Alanson Steward. The five children comprising the household of our subject and his wife are William E., Laura S., Charles E., Eva L. and Harry E. The eldest son married Iva Jones; Laura, who is the wife of Edward Turney, has three children: Olive, Ola and Ora; Charles married Annie Bingham and is the father of two sons: Harry and Earl; Eva is Mrs. John Rice and is the mother of one daughter, Lena; Lula M., the youngest child of our subject, died July 5, 1887, when fifteen years of age. Mrs. Kibbe is a member of the United Brethren Church and, in polities, our subject votes with the Republican party.

ALFRED EKBACK, Superintendent of the Seandia Brick Company, of Rockford, is another worthy American citizen of Winnebago County. He was born in Sweden, January 2, 1818, and is a son of Gustaf and Catherine (Hockinson) Ekback. His parents are still living at the ages of seventy and seventy-two years, respectively. Our subject is the second of five children, four of whom are now living: John, who married Miss Jennie Grant, of Rockford, is a watchman in the Chick's Flouring Mills; Helen, wife of Mr. Jurgeson, who is in the service of the Street Railway Company of Chicago; Charles, who married Abetena Wyman, is employed by the Scandia Plow Company; and Sophia, deceased, was the wife of John Pherson.

The subject of this sketch was reared to manhood upon his father's farm and at the age of nineteen, in company with his brother, crossed the Atlantic to America, in 1867, and has since made his home in Rockford. He began life in this country as a farmer of New Milford Township, and to agricultural pursuits devoted his energies until he embarked in the manufacture of brick. For the past few years, he has been Superintendent of the Scandia Brick Company, whose factory is located near the city limits of Rockford on the east. They employ about twenty-live men and make about three million brick annually. We thus see that they have a good trade, and the company has been operated successfully for some time.

In this city, Mr. Ekback led to the marriage altar Miss Emma Lindstrom, who was born and reared in the same locality as her husband, and when a young lady came to this country, the fourth of her family to cross the Atlantie. She is a daughter of Peter and Martha (Olson) Lindstrom. natives of Smoland, Sweden. There the father engaged in farming and wagon-making up to his death, which occurred at the age of seventy-live years. His widow, who is yet living on the old homestead, is now about eighty years of age. The family were all members of the Lutheran Church. To the First Lutheran Church of Rockford Mr. and and Mrs. Ekback both belong, as do also their children. They have become the parents of seven children, one of whom, Esther, died aged two years. Those who still survive are Theodore, who is in the employ of the Seandia Brick Company; Anna, Ellen, Esther, Martha and Hilda. In politics, Mr. Ekback is a Republican. He is a successful business man, who came to this country empty-handed and by his own efforts has worked his way upward until he is now possessed of a comfortable competence.

AMES J. BURLINGAME, a prominent farmer of Harrison Township, was born in Morgan County, Ohio, August 7, 1819. He is the son of Josiah Burlingame and the grandson of Richard Burlingame, who was born at Situate, R. I., on the 27th of March, 1794. The latter's wife was Patience (Calvin) Burlingame, and they were the parents of two sons and four daughters, all of whom reached adult years. When quite aged people, Richard Burlingame and his wife removed to Ohio, whither their son Josiah had removed when a young man, and there this worthy old couple passed away, she at the age of sixtythree, and he five years later, when seventy-one years of age. He had followed agricultural pursuits all his life. They were characteristic Quakers, leading a retired life and unswerving in their religious faith.

Josiah Burlingame was also a native of Rhode Island, born July 4, 1791, but removed to Morgan County, Ohio, when a young man, or about 1814, and was one of the earliest pioneers. His wife, whose maiden name was Sarah Noble, and who was born October 13, 1793, of the marriage of John and Martha (Hindman) Noble, came with her parents to Morgan County about the same time, They were soon married and commenced housekeeping in the woods. Both were well educated and Mr. Burlingame taught school from 1814 until 1850. being considered a very successful educator. He had studied medicine and surgery but was too sensitive and nervous to succeed at the latter, though he did assist in many amputations. With much hard work and labor on his part and that of his estimable wife, he succeeded in clearing three hundred acres of the heavy timber with which the farm was covered, and one hundred acres of this is considered the best of the fertile bottom lands. Mr. and Mrs. Burlingame reared twelve children, nine sons and three daughters, to become heads of families. Two daughters-Sarah, who married Samuel Hull, and Mary, the wife of George Tuttle-died when about fifty years of age, and each left two children. A son, Samuel, was killed by the cars, as was also his wife, while walking on the railroad track. They were sixty-eight and seventy years of age, respectively. Two sons were in the Civil War. Of this family there are still living eight sons and one daughter: Stephen, born June 1, 1816, a farmer of Indiana; James J., our subject; Charles, born in 1821, an attorney in St. Charles County, Mo.; Serrel, born in February, 1825, a surveyor for many years in Nebraska; Jabez, born in September, 1826, a farmer of Warren County, Iowa; George W., born January 31, 1829, a merehant in sight of the old home in Ohio; Benjamin F., born in October, 1830, a farmer and a shoe merchant in the same town as George W.; and Lydia, born February 15, 1837, who married James Warren, of Noble County, Noble Township, Ohio, both county and township being named for Grandfather Noble. These children all have small families, except Serrel, who is the father of fourteen children by one wife.

Our subject was married in Manchester Township, July 5, 1850, to Miss Prudence S. Mules, a native of Barustable, England, born in 1826, and the daughter of John and Susan (Summerwell) Mules, who came to this country and settled in Genesee County, N. Y., when Mrs. Burlingame was about ten years of age. Her parents were quite wealthy, and after remaining in Stafford for some time removed to Manchester Township, this county, in 1850. Our subject had received a good collegiate education, as had also his brothers and sisters, and was a graduate of the Old School College in Cincinnati. He practiced medicine before coming to Boone County, Ill., and for ten years after he reached this State he had a large practice which proved too much for him and he gave it up, devoting his time to agricultural pursuits. He first built a brick house on one aere at the corner east of section 27, in 1849, and about two years later, he bought one hundred and twenty acres, to which he added one hundred and eighty acres still later. At that time he paid about $10 per aere for wild land with no improvements of any kind. He soon erected a good, substantial building on his farm, moved into it, and there he and his capable and estimable wife resided until 1887, when they removed to Clinton Junction, Wis., purchasing a nice home and one acre in the central part of the village. They deeded the farm to their son, Serrel Burlingame. This move was made for his wife who was suffering with cancer, but she died there on the 5fth of June, 1890, and is buried in the family burying ground in the village of Blaine. A fine monument, creeted by her bereaved husband, marks her last resting place, and there rests beside her her two little children, twins, a son and daughter, who died in infancy. She was an Episcopalian in her religious belief. She left two children, Atta E., now Mrs. Maynard M. Murray, whose husband is a farmer near Clinton Junction, Wis., and Serrel, who married Maria Parker, of Manchester Township, this county, a daughter of Edwin and Elizabeth (Stockwell) Parker. They have four bright little daughters, of whom Mr. Burlingame is justly proud.

Soon after the death of his wife, Mr. Burlingame returned to the old farm, and resides with his son. He is now seventy-three years of age but has kept his age well for he looks very little over sixty years of age. He was Township Treasurer for twenty-five consecutive years and has served the township in other offices, although he has refused many.

OHN M. MASON, a representative business man of Rockford, is engaged in the general bakery business at No. 505 East State Street, where he has earried on business for the past eight years, succeeding his father, who started a bakery in this city in 1858. The latter, Robert Mason by name, was a native of Scotland, born and reared near Edinburg, and came of Lowland Scotch stock. He became familiar with his trade in his native country, and was married there to Miss Ann Murdock, who came of similar stock. Early in the '50s, he and his wife sailed for this country, were six weeks on the ocean, and landed in New York City, where they remained for some time. Later, they removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, where Mr. Mason was in business for some time, and in 1854 they came to Rockford. He immediately established his State Street Bakery and devoted the remainder of his life to his business. He died when fifty-nine years of age. He was one of the old and prominent settlers and a good business man. In religion, he was a Congregationalist, and in polities, a stanch Republican. His wife, who died when about middle age, was also a member of the Congregational Church, and a good, true wife and mother. Their two children, our subject and Anna, are the only members of the family living, and both reside in Rockford. The latter is single.

John M. Mason first saw the light in Rockford, on the 2d of April, 1857, and here he attained his growth and secured a good practical education. He learned his trade under his father and succeeded him after his death. He was married in this city to Miss Alice A. Cox, who was born in Rockford, September 17, 1863, and who is the daughter of Henry and Ann (Rew) Cox. Both parents are living at the present time and have a good home on Fifth Avenue, this city. Mr. Cox is a commercial traveler for the Rockford Baking Company. He and his wife are natives of England, but were married in Rockford, where they have since made their home. They have become the parents of eight children, seven of whom are yet living. Mrs. Mason being the eldest and only one now married.

Mr, and Mrs. Mason have a pleasant home at No. 609 East State Street, and are surrounded by many warm friends. He is a stockholder in the Rockford Baking Company and Rockford Plow Company. He is an active Republican in politics, and he and Mrs. Mason are regular attendants at the Christian Union Church. They have had no children.

ACOB S. DODD, deceased, was a native of New Jersey, born November 17, 1811, and died near Newark, of that State, on the 2d of April, 1884. He was reared in his native State, and began work for himself by entering a large leather manufactory owned by Mr. Halsey, of Newark. After this he was engaged in the leather business, either directly or indirectly, for a number of years, but subsequently retired to a small farm just out of the city, where most of the time he was engaged as a dairyman until his death. This home was familiarly known as the Lyon Farm.

Mr. Dodd's parents were natives also of New Jersey, and the family tree shows that they were honorable and much respected people. Our subject was a prominent man in his community and a leading member and elder in the Presbyterian Church of his city. He was well informed, was a leader in local affairs, and for a number of years was a Director in Newark Evergreen Cemetery. Just prior to his death, he was elected to the office of Justice of the Peace. He left two children: William V. Dodd, an employe in the well-known leather house of Halsey & Co., of Newark, married Miss Mary Osborne, of New Jersey. The other child was a daughter, Phobe, who became the wife of Fred Crain, who is now living on the old Dodd homestead.

In the fall of 1881, Mrs. Dodd, wife of our subject, returned to her old home in Rockford, whither she had come in 1841, and where she is the owner of much valuable property. She was born near Rochester, Monroe County, N. Y., June 4, 1818, and her maiden name was Emily G. Bond. Her parents, Abner and Mary (Gould) Bond, were natives of New Jersey, and came of English and German descent, respectively. They were married in their native State, and after the birth of six children they removed to near Rochester. N. Y., when that city was but a hamlet. There the remainder of their children were born, thirteen in all, five sons and six daughters having grown to maturity, and three are now living. There Mr. and Mrs. Bond improved a good home, and there Mr. Bond died on the 3d of April, 1840, when seventy-four years of age. He was a man of excellent character, and for many years was a Deacon in the Presbyterian Church. His wife, who survived him, came to Rockford with her daughter, Mrs. Dodd, and died here February 6, 1868, lacking only one month of being ninety-live years of age, her birth having occurred March 30, 1773. She held to the belief of the Presbyterian Church all her life, and was a most loving and devoted mother. Her mind was clear and strong up to the very last.

Mrs. Dodd was first married in Rochester, N. Y., July 25, 1841, to Mr. Albert Sanford, a native of New Haven, Conn., born May 4, 1818. He passed his boyhood days in that State, and, when a young man, entered land in Illinois. Later, he returned to Rochester and was married to Miss Bond, whom he had known in Rockford, and they then returned to the last-named city. This was in 1844, and they located on property that has since increased in value very much. Mr. Sanford died September 23, 1851, when only thirty-six years of age. He was a promising man, and was well known among the old settlers of Rockford. His marriage resulted in the birth of two children. Edgar A. and another, both of whom died young. Mr. Sanford died in full communion with the Second Congregational Church of Rockford. He was a Whig in politics.

Mrs. Dodd, who still survives her husband, is now about seventy-four years of age, but has kept her years well, being still active and ambitious. She is possessed of many excellent virtues, and is surrounded by a large circle of friends. She is an active member of the Second Congregational Church.

ILES G. KEYES now makes his home on a portion of the old homestead which he purchased from his father in 1874. His birth occurred November 18, 1812, in Northumberland, Saratoga County, N. Y., where his father, Archibald Keyes, was also born, July 26, 1808. The grandfather of our subject hailed from New Hampshire, having been born February 21, 1771, in Acworth, while his father, Capt. William Keyes, was born in October, 1740, in Ashford, Conn. He in turn was a son of Ephraim Keyes, who was born July 5, 1715, in Connecticut, and was a son of Elias Keyes, born October 17, 1692, in Chelmsford, Mass. He was a son of Solomon Keyes, also a native of the Bay State, being born June 21, 1665, and the son of Solomon Keyes, who was the first ancestor of the family in America. The latternamed gentleman was married in Newburyport, Mass., October 2, 1653, to Frances Grant. He located in that part of Chelmsford, Mass., now included in the town of Westford, where he died March 28, 1702, his wife departing this life six years later.

Solomon Keyes, the son of the above-named couple, who was the next in line as far as is known, spent his entire life in Massachusetts. The next in order of birth was his son, Ehas, who, after his marriage and the birth of two children, removed to Ashford, Conn., where he passed the remainder of his life. His son, Lieut, Ephraim Keyes, married Sarah Watkins, and after her death was united in marriage to Mrs. Glazier, a widow lady of Rockingham, N. H. The family removed from Ashford to Aeworth, the same State, in 1769, where they were early settlers. There Lieut. Keyes died, September 6, 1802. The next in line was his son, Capt. William Keyes, who went to Aeworth, in 1767, and was the first settler of that place. He was accompanied on the journey by his wife and one child, and departed this life April 21, 1813. The maiden name of his wife was Hannah Searborough. Capt. Keyes received his title while serving in the Revolutionary War.

Frederick Keyes, the grandfather of our subject, in 1776 removed to Northumberland, Saratoga County, N. Y. He was at one time engaged in the lumber business at Argyle, Washington County, that State, and later removed to near Ballston. He was a patriot in the War of 1812 and died near Syracuse, September 12, 1834. The grandmother of our subject was prior to her marriage Rachel Jacobs; her decease occurred January 29, 1840. The next in line is the father of our subject, who was reared and educated in his native town, and on attaining mature years purchased a tract of land in Northumberland and was engaged in farming during the summer season and in the winter carried on the trade of lumbering. In 1845, he started with his wife and two children for Illinois, coming overland from Chicago to this county and fording the river at Rockford.

Archibald Keyes, on making this county his home, moved into a house with his brother-in-law, William Fowler, who located here in 1811. He remained with him for a twelvemonth, during the year having secured a tract of Government land, including the northwest quarter of section 18, in what is now Rockford Township, and erected thereon a frame house. Into that the family moved in 1846 and have since been residents of the farm. Mr. Keyes was married, June 18, 1831, to Elizabeth Clark, who was born in New York and died October 22, 1878. The father of our subject was then married to Hannah Wise. The three ehildren born of his first union were John, who married Mary C. Hemingway, and now resides at Pomona, Los Augeles County, Cal.; Miles, our subject; and a daughter, who died in New York.

Gillert Moodsuet

The original of this sketch was in his third year when brought to this county by his parents. On attaining his majority, in partnership with his brother, he purchased the stock, tools, etc., of his father and carried on the farm until 1867, when the connection was dissolved. Our subject, however, continued farming alone until 1879, when, in July of that year, he went West to lowa, and lived for two years and a half in Floyd County. Then disposing of his interests in the Hawkeye State, he returned to the old homestead and lived with his father until 1871, at which time he became proprietor of a portion of the estate and has since resided upon it.

February 5, 1879, Miss Emma Chapman, who was born in Addison, Steuben County, N. Y., became the wife of our subject. She was a daughter of Silas H. Chapman, whose native place was Pitcher, Chenango County, that State, while his father, William Chapman, was born in England, and on coming to America located in the Empire State, where he purchased a large farm in the town of Pitcher and spent the remainder of his days. His wife, who before her marriage was Polly Baker, was born in that State, where her decease also occurred. The father of Mrs. Keyes was a lad of eleven years on the death of his father, and was bound out to learn a trade, but did not complete his apprenticeship as he embarked as a sailor on the Lakes. After his marriage, he settled on a farm near Addison, where he made his home until 1863, and then enlisted in defense of his country in a New York Cavalry Regiment. He served for a period of eleven months, when he received his honorable discharge for injuries received from being thrown from his horse. He resided in New York State until 1870, and then, coming to Winnebago County, lived in Harrison, Owen and Seward Townships until 1885, when he went to Gray County, Kan., and there made his home until 1891. That year, he removed to Emporia, where he now resides. His wife was Miss Abigail (Higgins) Chapman and was also born in Addison. She was the daughter of Simeon and Adeline (Haskins) Higgins, the former of whom now lives in Tioga County, and the latter is deceased. Mrs. Keyes is one of a family of eight children, namely: Emma, Albert, George, Kittie, Frank, Mary, Charles and Ira.

To our subject and his wife have been born three children: Archibald, Nina and Ethel. In politics, our subject is a Republican, and his wife is a member of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church.

ON. GILBERT WOODRIFF, President of the Rockford National Bank, President of the Forest City Insurance Company and of the Forest City Furniture Company, was born on a farm two and one-half miles from Watertown, Jefferson County, N. Y., November 20, 1817. His grandfather, Jonah Woodruff, was, it is supposed, a native of Connecticut, whence he removed to Jefferson County, N. Y., and was a pioneer there. He purchased a tract of timber land two and one-half miles from Watertown, and, clearing a farm from the wilderness, resided upon it until his death.

At the time of the removal to the Empire State, Frederick Woodruff, who was born in Connecticut, was nine years old, and in the new home he grew to manhood, amid surroundings of a primitive nature. For many years after the settlement of the family in Jefferson County there were no railroads in New York State, and after the canal was completed all merchandise was brought from New York via Erie and Oswego Canal to Oswego, and thence by lake to Sackett's Harbor, and from there by team to Watertown. Farm products were transported to the seaboard by way of the lake, canal and rivers.

The old homestead was purchased by Frederick Woodruff, who was actively engaged in farming there until 1838, when he sold out and removed to Watertown. He spent his last days in that village, dying in 1853. His wife, whose manden name was Lodema Andrus, was born in Litchfield, Oneida County, N. Y., and died at Geneva, Hl. Gilbert, son of this worthy couple, received a good education in his native village and started out for himself in 1838, in which year he paid his first visit to Illinois. In his journey hither he followed the most convenient and expeditious route at that time, which was by stage to Sackett's Harbor, then by boat to Lewiston, from there by rail to Niagara Falls, down the Niagara River to Buffalo, and thence by lake to Detroit.

At that time there was a railroad extending from Detroit to Ypsilanti. The rails were of wood with a strap of iron on the top and the road was of a very temporary nature. From Ypsilanti Mr. Woodruff proceeded by stage via Michigan City to Joliet, then a village of about five hundred inhabitants. He engaged to clerk in his brother's grocery store, where he remained until the spring of 1839, and then started on his return East, going by way of stage to Chicago. At that time the now populous city had about four thousand people and the principal part of the business was done on Lake and Water Streets. From Chicago Mr. Woodruff went by way of the Lakes to New York State and, soon after his arrival in Watertown, embarked in the grocery business in a small way, finally acquiring an extensive and lucrative trade.

In 1857, Mr. Woodruff removed West to Dubuque, Iowa, where he was interested in a flouring-mill, also in the real-estate and loan business. One year later he came to Rockford, where he has since resided, prominently identified with the city's best interests. He was a charter member of the Rockford National Bank, and has served as President since its organization. When the Forest City Insurance Company was organized in 1873, he became its President, and has since occupied that responsible and honorable position. In addition to these duties, he has served as President of the Forest City Furniture Company since 1875, he having organized the same and erected the buildings. In politics, he has been a stanch Republican since the organization of the party and has been called upon by his fellow-citizens to occapy official positions of trust, having served two terms as Alderman, representing the Second Ward, and also as Mayor during 1874-75.

In April, 1842, Mr. Woodruff and Miss Naney Fay were united in marriage. Mrs. Naney Woodruff was born in Watertown, N. Y., daughter of Henry and Almira Fay, and was called hence by death in 1877. Five children were born of the union: Sarah, who married Marcus S. Parmelee; Volney D.; Emma, wife of Charles Keith; William; and Alice, now Mrs. R. M. Emerson. The second marriage of Mr. Woodruff united him with Miss Augusta A. Todd, a native of Hamilton, Canada, and took place in 1879. The position occupied by the family in society is an enviable one, and the various members of the household possess the cultured refinement which makes them influential and popular.

Soon after coming to Rockford, Mr. Woodruff purchased a farm, which at a later date he platted in town lots, and it is now known as Woodruff's Addition. These lots he sold at a reasonable price, giving the purchasers their own time to pay for them, and also loaning them money with which to creet houses. It is not strange, therefore, that he is perhaps the most popular citizen of Rockford, to the progress of which he has contributed so ceaselessly of his ability and means. Always and everywhere he is the same unswerying champion of justice and right, and by industry and application has won the highest admiration for his intellectual ability and attainments.

In connection with this biographical notice will be found a lithographic portrait of Mr. Woodruff.

ATHAN II. WOOSTER was born in New Haven, Conn., in the town of Oxford, De-Legember 25, 1821, and is now one of the old and much-esteemed citizens of Boone County, Ill. He has been identified with the interests of this county for many years and is one of the oldest living Justices in the State, having served continuously for nearly thirty-five years. He is doubtless the third, if not the second, oldest Justice of the Peace in Illinois. He is of English descent and traces his ancestry back to three brothers, Englishmen, who came to America at a very early date and one of whom settled in Massachusetts, another in New Hampshire and the other in Connecticut. One of our subject's uncles was a General in the War of 1812.

Our subject is a son of Washburn and Betsey

(Chatfield) Wooster. Washburn Wooster was born in the "Nutmeg State," and was a farmer the principal part of his life. For some time, he was in the sawmill business in Connecticut getting out ship timber, but agriculture was his chosen occupation. He came to this State about the year 1810 and died in Mellenry County when seventy-two or three years of age. His parents were natives of Connecticut and died in that State when quite aged people. All his ancestors were farmers so far Our subject's mother, Mrs. Betsey (Chatfield) Wooster, was also born in Connecticut and passed her last days in MeHenry County, Ill., her death occurring when about eighty years of age. Her parents were natives of Connecticut and in that State were contented to pass their entire Nathan H. Wooster came to this county with his parents in October, 1840, and settled in Le Roy Township, where he took up eighty acres of land. On this he erected a rude log cabin in which he lived for several years, and then built a good frame dwelling. Our subject remained at home until his marriage, on the 4th of October, 18-14, to Miss Abigail A. Hovey, who was born in Franklin County, N. Y., May 30, 1827. He then took up his residence with his father-in law, Richard C. Hovey. Mr. Hovey was born in New Hampshire, as was also his wife, Abigail (Kimball) Hovey, and their nuptials were celebrated there. Later in life they removed to New York State, and in 1838 came to Boone County, from Ohio, where they had resided for about six years. They first settled in Le Roy Township, where Mr. Hovey took up one hundred and sixty acres and on which he built a log house. A number of years later, he built a frame house and here he died when seventy-eight years of age. His wife passed away when about eighty-four years of age. They were the parents of twelve children, seven now living, so far as known.

There were seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wooster, but one died when four years of age. The remainder are named as follows: Laura E., born in Boone Township, Boone County, November 15, 1845, married John M. Conley, and has lost two children; Mary J., born in Boone Township, this county, November 18, 1847, married John H.

Landon and has one child; George J., also a native of Boone Township, was born December 27, 1819, and married Miss Helen Nichols, who bore him three children; John W., born in McHenry County, this State, April 15, 1852, married Miss Carrie E. Adams; Nathan H., Jr., born in Le Roy Township, this county, May 19, 1854, married Miss Elmina T. Cramer, and is the father of two children; and Minnie E., born in Boone Township, this county, March 27, 1870. The one deceased was Cora M., who was born in Boone Township, October 22, 1864, and died four years later. The children are all well educated and a number have taught school. Miss Minnie has been engaged in educational work since 1887, and for two years has been in the primary department of the schools in Capron. Auother daughter, Miss Mary J., is quite a worker in Eastern Star Lodge, of Newton, Kan., and has been Worthy Matron of that lodge.

I'p to the time of his marriage, our subject remained at home, and then took up one hundred and sixty acres, on which the village of Capron is now standing, and on this creeted a small, rude, log house, 10x12 feet, in which he and his wife lived for seven years. After this they were in Mc-Henry County for two years and then returned to Le Roy Township, this county, where our subject worked his father's farm, also eighty acres of his own. In 1856, Mr. Wooster sold out all his property in that township and bought eighty acres where he now lives, on which stood a small house. About twenty-five years ago, he creeted his present residence and he was the first inhabitant of the town of Capron.

Our subject has held a number of local offices in the township and has ever been one of the prominent men of the same. He was elected Justice of the Peace the first or second year after coming to Capron, in 1855, and was Associate Justice for four years. He has also held the position of Collector and Trustee, and numerous other positions. He was a Democrat up to 1851 and then voted for J. C. Fremont, since which time he has voted the straight Republican ticket. His first Presidential vote was east for J. K. Polk. He has been a delegate to different county conventions and has ever been an enterprising and public-spirited citizen.

When on the farm our subject engaged in general farming and when he first settled in this county all his marketing was done at Chicago, but later he went to Kenosha, Wis., also. Mr. Wooster is practically retired from the active duties of life but he attends to some official business yet. He is an honest, upright citizen and has a host of warm friends. Mr. Wooster was a soldier in the late war, enlisting in the one Hundred and Forty-second Illinois Infantry, Company C, and was Orderly Sergeant.

ON. HORACE W. TAYLOR, Master in Chancery, is probably one of the most prominent citizens of Rockford, where he is carrying on a successful practice of law. He was born in the town of Granby, Hampshire County, Mass., February 1, 1823, and is the son of Willard N. Taylor, whose birth occurred on the same farm as did that of his son.

The great-grandfather of our subject was one of the very early settlers of Granby, Mass., where he spent his days on a farm, which estate is now owned and occupied by his great-great-grandson. The grandfather of our subject, Levi Taylor, spent his entire life on that farm, which was in his possession during his lifetime. The maiden name of his wife was Sarah Smith, a lifelong resident of Granby.

The father of the gentleman whose name we give above was reared to agricultural pursuits, being an occupant of the old homestead spoken of above, where he spent his entire life, dying in his forty-eighth year. The maiden name of his wife was Sarah Cook, also a native of Granby, and a daughter of Perez Cook, who, as far as is known, was a native of that place, and departed this life after having attained the advanced age of ninety years. The mother of our subject died on the old home farm and hore her husband a family of eleven children, seven of whom grew to maturity and live are now living.

Our subject received his education in the public schools of Granby, and when reaching his fifteenth year, he was apprenticed to his brother-in-law, David Cook, to learn the trade of a blacksmith, the contract being that he should serve him until reaching his majority. His health failing, however, he abandoned that line of work and when twenty years of age became a student at the Amherst Academy, preparing himself for college, and in 1844 entered Amherst College, from which institution he was graduated in the Class of '18. Our subject then engaged in teaching in the Bay State for the two succeeding years, at the expiration of which time he went to Baltimore and was similarly employed in a ladies' seminary until 1857. During his period as a teacher, he devoted all his spare time to study of law and in 1857 came to Rockford, where he was admitted to the Bar in the fall of that year and at once opened an office and commenced practice.

Miss Ama A. Robinson, who was a native of Entield, Hampshire County, Mass., became the wife of our subject in April, 1854, the ceremony being solemnized in Cineinnati, Ohio, by the Rev. J. J. Blaisdell, now Prof. Blaisdell, of Beloit College, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor are the parents of two children: Agnes and Ama S. The former is now Mrs. J. R. Crocker, of Chicago, and the mother of three children: Sidney W., Florence A. and Horace T. Our subject and his wife have lost two sons: Frank Willard, who died in 1862, aged sixteen months, and Willard Robinson, whose decease occurred at the age of nineteen years, in 1882. Ama S. was a student in Oberlin College in the Class of '92.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor and their youngest daughter are active members of the Second Congregational Church. In political views, our subject is a thorough Republican, having voted that ticket since the formation of the party. His interest in educational affairs has caused Lim to be placed on the School Board, where he did effective work for a number of years. Mrs. Taylor was appointed by the Mayor a member of the School Board in 1891; she and Mrs. Clark were the first ladies ever appointed on the School Board in Rockford. Our subject was elected to the State Legislature in 1878 and voted for John A. Logan for Senator. He was appointed Master in Chancery in 1866 by Judge Sheldon. He resigned in 1872, but was re-appointed to that position four years later by Judge Brown and has occupied the office continuously since, numbering twenty-two years, and during that long period only once have his findings been set aside, but the Court of Appeals overruled the findings of the Circuit Court and ordered his report confirmed. He is very popular and a most efficient official. In 1860, he formed a partnership with the Hon. William Brown, which continued until Mr. Brown was elected Judge. One of the distinguishing characteristics of our subject is the possession of quickness of mind and talent, and disciplined in the stern school of experience, he is thus prepared to meet every emergency with a steady and ready hand.

RCHIBALD M. CATLIN, M. D. The original of the portrait on the opposite page is without doubt the oldest physician in the State of Illinois to-day, having been mactive practice in Rockford for the past sixty years. He was born in that part of Litchfield which is now Winfield, Herkimer County, N. Y., September 8, 1801. Roger Catlin, his father, was a native of Connecticut, as was also his father, Roger Catlin, Sr., who was a soldier in the Revolutionary War.

The latter-named gentleman was of English aneestry and removed from his native State to New York, where he passed his last days in Herkimer County. His son, the father of our subject, was reared and married in the Nutmeg State, and later became one of the pioneers of Herkimer County, N. Y., where he purchased a tract of timber land in what is now the town of Winfield. He there erected a log house, in which our subject was born, and which consisted of but one room on the ground floor and one room above. It was located in the center of the township, at the junction of five roads, and as he was often obliged to entertain travelers to different parts of the county, Mr. Catlin later established an hotel. As there was no church in the vicinity, meetings were often held at his home until a building could be crected upon the ground donated by Mr. Catlin. He later erected a good frame hotel and continued to act as "mine host," at the same time superintending the operation of his farm until his death, which occurred in 1813. The maiden name of his wife was Sarah Clark; she was born in Connecticut and was the daughter of Deacon Clark, a pioneer of South Tompkins County, N. Y. After the death of her husband, the mother of our subject was a second time married, and departed this life in Winfield, N. Y.

The original of this sketch was but twelve years old on the death of his father and remained with his mother on the old home farm until her second marriage. He then resided in the town of Plainfield with an uncle, whom he assisted in the farm work in summers and attended school during the winter season. He continued to be thus employed until 1820, at which time he started with a company of friends to the then Far West. As there were then neither railroads nor canals in the vicinity of his home, he walked to Olean Point and from there went down the Allegany River to Pittsburg, thence by way of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to St. Louis, which was then nothing more than a village. He was accompanied by a comrade, Amos Noble, and was in Missouri when that Territory was admitted into the Union as a State. Later, he came to Madison County, Ill., where he resided for a twelvemonth and then, going to Missouri, was engaged in the lead mines until 1823, when he returned to New York. His desire had been to fit himself for a physician, and having read medicine previous to coming West, he devoted his time and attention to that study, attending lectures at Fairfield Medical College in Herkimer County. He later read under Dr. Clark of Winfield, then, going to Castleton, Vt., attended a course of lectures at the college there in the winter of 1825-26. In January of that year, he again became a student of Fairfield College, from which institution he was graduated with the Class of '27.

Soon after receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine, our subject commenced the practice of his profession in partnership with Dr. Nathan Harwood of Winfield, N. Y., with whom he continued for five years. At the expiration of that time, he went to Chester, Geauga County, Ohio, where he practiced medicine until 1832; then removing to Lorain County, he resided there until 1838, the date of his advent into Rockford. The present enterprising city was at that time little more than a hamlet, and the surrounding country, which was very sparsely settled, was owned by the Government. Dr. Catlin purchased property on the East side where he built a home. He has been actively engaged in the practice of his profession for the past sixty years, and, as before stated, is without doubt the oldest physician in the State.

In 1828, Miss Miranda Harwood, who was born in Winfield, N. Y., became the wife of our subject. She was the daughter of Dr. Nathan Harwood and departed this life in 1816, after having become the mother of three children, two of whom, Benjamin and Edward P., are living. Dr. Catlin was married the second time in 1817, his wife being Sarah Morrill, who was a native of Meriden, N. II., and a daughter of Deacon Daniel Morrill. To them were born two daughters: Mary, deceased, and Alice.

In early life a Whig, Dr. Catlin now votes the straight Republican ticket. He acted as President of the first medical society ever organized in Winnebago County, where he is regarded as one of the most prominent and skillful physicians. With his wife, he is a member of the First Congregational Church, and his life in this community has been such that he will be held in loving remembrance long after he shall have passed away.

OURTLAND MANDEVILLE. This gentleman, who has for many years been associated with the business men of Rockford, and who has been largely instrumental in the upbuilding of the city, became a resident of this county when fifteen years of age, and while aiding in the work of developing this section he has acquired a comfortable property and can now take his case in his cozy home at No. 802 Montague Street.

The subject of this review was born August 20, 1821, in Cayuga County, N. Y., being the son of Michael Mandeville, whom it is thought had his birth near Newbury, that State. Jacob Mandeville, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of the Empire State, and on removing to Cayuga County, became one of the pioneers there, clearing a farm from the wilderness and making that place his home until his decease. His wife, who was known prior to her marriage as Sarah Clark, was born in the above-named State. Her father was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and soon after her marriage to the father of our subject, the young couple moved to what is now Darien Township, Genesee County, where Mr. Mandeville bought a tract of land on which was located a log house, and three acres of which were cleared. Disposing of that estate a few years later, he removed to a farm six miles away, on which there was a mill, distillery and tannery, which he operated for a few years, when he became interested in a cabinet factory.

In 1838, visiting Winnebago County, this State, the father of our subject removed hither the following year, and as most of the land was owned by the Government, he rented a farm until 1841, when he purchased a tract four miles southwest of Rockford. Remaining upon that farm until 1858, he then divided the property among his children, and moved into the city, where he was the owner of two lots on South Main Street-the land now occupied by the William Brown Block. After a residence of one year in Rockford, Michael Mandeville spent a like period on the old farm, and finally returning to the city, lived retired in his home on Montague Street until 1887. His wife, Elsie Maria Corey, was the daughter of James and Deborah (Rathbun) Corey, and was born in Vermont. She became the mother of six children, and departed this life at her home in Rockford six years prior to the decease of her husband.

Conribind Mandeville was the third in order of birth of the parental family, his brothers and sisters being Henry. Jane, Horton, Philona and Edward. He came here when fifteen years of age and has consequently been an interesting witness of the marvelous growth of the county, having contributed his full share in bringing it to its present condition. He remembers that in those early days the grain was hauled to the Chicago markets by team, and deer and other wild game could be had for the shooting. He made his home with his parents until his twenty-first birthday when he operated a farm on his own account, which had been given him by his father. In 1854, he went to Iowa, and in Bradford, Chickasaw County, bought a large tract of land and resided there until 1860, when he disposed of his interests in the Hawkeye State and then, returning to this county, carried on the home farm for the two succeeding years. Coming to Rockford at the expiration of that time, our subject lived here until 1861, when, in company with his brother Horton, he became the proprietor of a stock farm in Laona Township, which they successfully operated for four years. He has been a resident of Rockford since that time, where his reputation is one of which any man might well be proud, providing, as in his case, the character is equal to the opinions of men.

HARLES A. CROSBY operates one hundred and seventy acres of land on section 11, New Milford Township, Winnebago County, and is one of the practical and progressive agriculturists of this community. He was born on the farm which is still his home in March, 1861, and is a son of George H., and Mary W. (Wood) Crosby. The father was born in New Hampshire in December, 1831, and the mother was a native of Connecticut. The grandfather, Alpheus A. Crosby, was a native of New York, and a blacksmith by trade. At an early day he came West with his family of six children and located in Rockford, and opened a smithy. His death occurred in that city at an advanced age, his wife passing away a few years previous. About 1850, he purchased one hundred acres of land for $3,000, upon which was a small house and barn, while about eighty acres were under cultivation.

The father of our subject had acquired a fair education, and was a well-informed man. He was serving as Supervisor at the time of his death, having held the office for some years, and was also Assessor for some time. Among his fellow-townsmen he was recognized as a prominent citizen. He left three children: Charles A., of this sketch;

Laura M. and Hattie E. The last-named is the wife of Henry K. Hall, of Rockford.

In the usual manner of farmer lads, our subject was reared to manhood, no event of special importance occurring during his youth. In December, 1883, he led to the marriage altar Miss Alpharetta J. Cipplery, of Monroe Center, Ogle County, and a daughter of David A. and Martha Maria Cipplery, both of whom were natives of Rensselaer County, N. Y., from whence they emigrated to Illinois in the spring of 1862. Her father was a farmer and is now a grain-dealer in Monroe. Mr. and Mrs. Crosby have three living children: Daisy File, born April 14, 1886; Elsie May, February 18, 1888; and Leo Arthur, August 3, 1890. They have lost an infant son, Charles.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Crosby is independent, voting for the man whom he thinks best qualified for the office. He devotes his time and attention to general farming, and as the result has met with signal success in his business career. In addition to his home farm he has an interest in eighty acres on section 5, and the two tracts yield a good income. Himself and wife have a wide acquaintance in this community, where their entire lives have been passed, and well deserve a representation in their native county.

ERBERT R. PARKER, a well-to-do agriculturist, now living retired at No. 103 North Prospect Street, Rockford, was born in Vienna, Oneida County, N. Y., May 12, 1834. His father, the Hon. Linus Parker, was a native of Litchfield, Conn., where also his father, Eli, as far as is known, was born. The grandfather removed to New York, and died in the western part of the State, where also his wife, who was known prior to her marriage as Joanna Stoddard, departed this life.

The Hon. Linus Parker was a young man when his father removed to the Empire State, the journey being made overland with teams. He became the proprietor of a tract of land in Vienna and built an hotel on the road leading from Rome westward.

In addition to operating as "mine host," he superintended the cultivation of the farm, and was also Director in the bank at Rome. He was very prominent in local affairs, and was for many years Postmaster of Vienna. In politics, he was a Democrat, and served two terms in the New York Assembly, in which State he later disposed of his interests, coming to Winnebago County in 1852, purchasing an improved farm in Harlem Township, where his death occurred November 15, 1876, when eightyseven years of age. The maiden name of his wife was Lutia Sherman, a native of Massachusetts, and the daughter of Joshua and Naomi (Munger) Sherman. Mrs. Parker departed this life at Vienna, N. Y., in 1811. The place which the father of our subject bought on coming to this county was known as the Simonds Homestead and the house into which he moved, and where the family resided until coming to Rockford, is the oldest in the county. It is located on the road leading from Beloit to Belvidere, and was for many years a publie house and well known as Buckhorn Tavern.

The original of this sketch was educated in Vienna, N. Y., and accompanied his parents on their removal to Illinois, at a time when the western terminus of the railroad was on the eastern side of the Rock River. Herbert R. resided with his father until his marriage, when he located on the old homestead in Harlem and there lived for a number of years. In 1891, he removed to his present home at No. 103 Prospect Street, which was erected that year.

The lady who became the wife of our subject, December 9, 1865, was, prior to that event, Miss Sarah Kilburn, a native of Annsville, Oneida County, N. Y. Her father, Shaler Samuel Kilburn, was one of the pioneers of Winnebago County, and had his birth in Massachusetts. He is the son of Capt. Shaler Samuel Kilburn, a sea captain, who died when the father of Mrs. Parker was an infant. The latter was young when his mother went to New York State, where he was reared and married in Oneida County, making his home there until 1846, when he came to this county and purchased a tract of wild land, on which was located a log cabin. He resided with his brother-in-law for a time and during the interim creected a dwelling on his own land, where his death occurred in January, 1885. The maiden name of Mrs. Parker's mother was Mary Bartholemew; she was the daughter of Eliakim and Annie (Simonds) Bartholemew, and is living at the present time in Rockford.

To Mr. and Mrs. Parker have been born six children: Whitman, deceased; Mary, Lutia, Joanna, Lizzie and Herbert. Mrs. Parker and her daughter Mary are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

OHN WRIGHT. This name is familiar among the agriculturists of Winnebago County, as belonging to one of its most industrious citizens and a man who occupies a high position in business circles. He has been the architect of his own fortune, making his way in the world from a modest beginning, and has proven a fine example of the results of patient industry, a wise economy and good judgment.

He of whom we write was born in Yorkshire, England, November 12, 1829. He is a son of William and Jane Wright, who emigrated to this country in 1832, and, settling in New York State, lived fourteen years near Genesee. In 1846, they came to Winnebago County, where the father took up a large tract of land. There he died in his eightieth year. His wife passed away in Rockford in January, 1891.

Mr. Wright of this sketch remained with his parents until twenty-five years of age, when he was married to Matilda C. Hutchins, who was born in the town of Kendall, Orleans County, N. Y., June 10, 1835. She was the daughter of Osman and Lydia (Davis) Hutchins, the former of whom was a son of John S. Hutchins, the former of whom was a son of John S. Hutchins, his birth occurring in 1773, in Massachusetts, and his death in Quebec, Canada, at the advanced age of ninety-three years. Mrs. Lydia Hutchins died in this county, in her forty-third year.

Mrs. Matilda Wright came of a family prominent in the early history of New York, and after her marriage to our subject, in 1853, they lived on the Wright farm for ten or fifteen years, when they purchased property south of their present place of residence. They later sold that land and bought in Ogle County, which land Mr. Wright later traded for a farm in Seward Township, and in 1870 became the owner of his present farm, which is embellished with all the needful farm buildings, not the least among which is his comfortable residence.

Cordially Yours,
Thenry Sherrill

To Mr. and Mrs. John Wright have been born seven children, five of whom are living, namely: George A., whose birth occurred February 8, 1855, is married and the father of five children; Alta J., who was born April 28, 1861, is married and has three children; Elizabeth who was born December 8, 1863, has one son; James R., born January 16, 1873, works the old home farm; and Lena A., whose birth occurred August 10, 1877, is also at home. Those deceased are Charles O. and Lottie B. In their religious belief, Mr. and Mrs. Wright are members of the Presbyterian Church. Our subject gives his entire time to carrying on his farm and, in politics, he is a stanch adherent of the Republican party, easting his first vote for Fremont.

ROF. HENRY J. SHERRILL. It has been truly said that a good education is the best inheritance that parents can leave their children. Riches may take to themselves wings and fly away, but a good education will last through life. Prof. Henry J. Sherrill, whose portrait accompanies this sketch, was born in Lebanon, Madison County, N. Y., on the 28th of April, 1824, and from early youth he enjoyed good educational advantages. His parents, Samuel R. and Nancy (Upham) Sherrill, were natives, respectively, of Massachusetts and New York, the father born in Berkshire County, February 22, 1794, and the mother on the 7th of June, 1796.

When a young man, Samuel Sherrill went to the Empire State, and, after settling in Madison County, engaged in the shoc business, which he carried on in connection with tanning for thirty years. He then retired from business and came West, making his home with his son until his death, on the 28th of March, 1872. He was of Irish descent and was a man of ability and good judgment. His wife died in her native State in 1866. Her people were pioneers of the Empire State, and her mother was twelve years of age at the time the Indians burned Cherry Valley, that State. Her grandfather was a clergyman and a man of considerable prominence as were also many others of that name, the Uphams being well known in New York State as refined and accomplished people.

Prof. Sherrill was one of four children born to his parents, but he and a sister, Mrs. N. A. Gilbert, of St. Paul, Minn., are the only ones now living. He remained at home until eighteen years of age, and up to that time attended school in the country and town. He then began teaching during the winter months and attended school during the summer seasons until the age of twenty-one, when he entered the New York Normal at Albany. After graduating at that institution, he began teaching at Eaton, N. Y., where he remained four years, after which he taught in Kingsboro Academy one term. Later he followed teaching four years at Forestville, N. Y. On the 31st of July, 1854, he was married to Miss Jennic A. Briggs, a native of that city, born December 19, 1823. Mrs. Sherrill was the daughter of Giles and Orricl (Allen) Briggs, natives of New York, where both died at an advanced age. She became the mother of two children, Willie H., deceased, and Frank Allen, and died in St. Louis, Mo., on the 10th of March, 1868. Frank A., who was born on the 19th of November, 1862, in Hamilton, N. Y., was graduated from the University at Champaign, Ill., and is now a draughtsman in the iron works at Indianapolis. He married Miss Minnie, daughter of M. C. Woodruff, of Dubuque, Iowa.

On the 23d of Deember, 1873, Prof. Sherrill married Mrs. Alice J. Seaver, a native of Aurora, N. Y., born July 13, 1813, and the daughter of Martin C. and Sarah M. (Woodruff) Bentley. Mr. Bentley was a native of Vermont, born on the 1st of January, 1805, and is now a resident of Boone County, Ill. As may be seen, he is quite aged but he enjoys unusually good health. His wife was born in New York but passed her last days in this county. Of the eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, five are still living. Mrs. Sherrill's first marriage united her with Mr. William Seaver, who was born March 10, 1842, in Darien, Wisconsin, whither his parents removed from New York State. He died on the 30th of September, 1866, from siekness contracted in the army. He was in Company K, 2d Wisconsin Cavalry, and left Wisconsin University to enter the army, enlisting from Walworth County of that State and serving about two years.

Our subject's second marriage resulted in the birth of one child, a daughter, Jennie Bentley, who was born in Belvidere Township, Boone County, Ill., July 22, 1877. She has studied in the schools of Belvidere, and is now receiving instruction under the personal supervision of her able and distinguished father. After his first marriage, Prof. Sherrill engaged in the book business in Hamilton, Canada, for about three years and then engaged as Principal of the schools of Hamilton, N. Y., where he continued for nearly ten years. From there he came to this county and at once took charge of the North Belyidere school, but he was not allowed to remain long in this position, for one year later, his unusual ability as an instructor being recognized, he accepted a position in St. Louis, Mo., which he filled with credit for nearly two years. The climate not agreeing with him, he took the advice of his physician and left that city.

In 1868, Prof. Sherrill returned to Belvidere, where the people gladly welcomed him, and the same fall was made Principal of the North Belvidere school, where he remained until 1883. He then resigned and practically retired, or would have done so had not his fellow-citizens called so loudly for his services that he could not refuse, and in consequence was elected County Superintendent, which position he filled as only Prof. Sherrill could, until the arduous duties of the office forced him into retirement. For nearly fifty years, he has been prominent as a public educator, and some of the profoundest thinkers, deepest reasoners and brainiest men of the West attribute their success in life to his teachings. The genial urbanity and native politeness of his manners engage and captivate the good-will and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact, and his pleasing address and gentle suavity draw the heart and affections of his students magnetically toward him, securing their closest attention, easy control and ardent interest in their studies. The untiring energy, unflagging zeal and ceaseless devotion be manifests for the promotion of educational improvements are highly appreciated.

One of the favors shown this most esteemed and worthy eitizen was in his election as an honorary member of the celebrated Colgate University of Hamilton, N. Y., with the title of A. M., in 1859. Few, indeed, have obtained that honor and distinction. Prof. and Mrs. Sherrill are honored and active members of the Belvidere Presbyterian Church, and he has been Elder for many years. Politically, he is a stanch Republican. Mrs. Sherrill, a pleasing and refined lady, is a member of nearly all the ladies' societies and her brilliancy and rare accomplishments fit her in an admirable manner for the different positions with which her sisterworkers favor her. Rarely does one meet with a more refined, intelligent and happy family than gathers under Prof. Sherrill's roof. For many years his home has been on his splendid farm just outside the city limits of Belvidere, a most beautiful place, which might well be called "Villa Content."

EORGE W. LEVINGS, who is residing on a beautiful farm just west of the city of Rockford, has his dwelling located on Montague Street. The farm is supplied with good, substantial frame buildings and Mr. Levings has planted fruit and shade trees, which make the estate one of the most beautiful in the county. He was born in New York City, June 25, 1839, while his father, Peter Levings, was born in the town of Northeast, Dutchess County, that State. From there the elder Mr. Levings went to New York City, where he was engaged in the mercantile business at the corner of Greenwich and Veasy Streets. In 1812, however, on account of ill health he disposed of his interests there and came to Illinois, locating in Winnebago County at a time when the settlements were mostly confined to the timber and streams.

The father of our subject located a tract of Government land in what is now Winnebago Township, and erected thereon a house, in which the family resided during the time he was employed in clearing and improving a new farm. Soon after locating here, he formed a partnership with Alfred Sanford and opened the first meat market in Rockford. There being no railroads here, for some years he hauled his grain to Chicago, one hundred miles distant, to market. In 1876, he disposed of his property in Winnebago Township and, coming to Rockford, lived retired until his decease. His wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Ann Nunn, was born in Liverpool, England, and also departed this life in Rockford.

The five children comprising the parental family were Harriet E., who married B. F. Pease; George W., Thomas G., Maggie and Alfred. The latter is a practicing physician in Milwaukee. Thomas G. served as a member of Company I, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, during the late war, and Mrs. Pease, who was a member of the Christian Commission, was taken to the front at Vicksburg in the interest of that organization.

George W. Levings was three years old when brought to this State by his parents, receiving his education in Winnebago and in the first school ever erected in Rockford. He resided with his parents until reaching his majority, when he was employed on different kinds of work in the city until 1863. In the fall of that year, he became a member of Company I, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, enlisting for a service of three years and participating with his regiment in all its marches, campaigns and battles. He received his honorable discharge in June, 1865, and on returning home spent the time until 1866 in Rockford, when he went to Chicago and was engaged in the fruit trade for two years. At the end of that time, he bought and shipped live-stock from Rockford, being thus engaged for three years, and then became the proprietor of a farm in Winnebago Township. operating it for six years, when he purchased the tract he has improved in his present farm. The estate of our subject is finely cultivated and by a proper rotation of crops yields a handsome income.

Nellie V. Stranahan became the wife of Mr. Levings in 1869. She was born in Ohio and is the daughter of Carlisle and Harriet (Humphrey)

Stranahan. Being very young when her mother died, she was adopted into a family named Kunball, whose name she bore, and was reared at their home in Elgin, Ill—During the late war, she went South in the interest of the American Missionary Society, as a teacher of the freedmen, and was at Memphis at the time of Forest's raid. She continued in the service until 1869, during that time teaching in Memphis, Mobile and other points.

To our subject and his wife have been born five children: Frank, Annie E., Nellie F., Ralph S. and Golden W. Mr. Levings is a member of Nevins Post No. 1, G. A. R., and is also connected with the order of Modern Woodmen of America. He casts his vote and influence in favor of Republican principles and candidates and is held in high esteem by all who know him. Mrs. Levings is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Rockford.

ON, WILSON H. CRANDELL, M. D., who died at his home in Durand October 1, 1855, was a gentleman whose long residence in (0) Winnebago County, together with his active participation in worthy measures for the development of his community, made him prominent both socially and in the ranks of his profession. It has been said that there are two kinds of education, one which is received at school, and the other, more important, which we give ourselves. Dr. Crandell was fortunate in gaining each kind of training, and, as a result, his character was rounded out and developed, while he acquired those habits of perseverance and energy which are so essential in any profession.

Born in Nassau, N. Y., June 14, 1805, our subject was the son of Nathan R. and Rebeeca (Arnold) Crandell. His early life was passed on the farm and as an employe in a glass factory. He came West in early life and, entering Rush Medical College at Chicago, received his degree of Doctor of Medicine from that institution. He first practiced medicine near the Garden City, and was later established at Freeport.

In 1845, Dr. Crandell made his advent into Winnebago County, at which time he located in what is now Laona Township, and gave his attention to his profession. A few years thereafter, he removed to what is now Durand Township, and, purchasing a tract of land, resided upon it until his death in 1855. He had an extensive practice, many of his patients living beyond Rockford, and even as far as Beloit. He represented his district in the State Legislature in 1848, during which time he formulated and secured the passage of the law establishing township organization. In politics, he always voted the Whig ticket, and occupied a conspicuous place in local affairs. He was a member of the Free-will Baptist Church and gave liberally of his means to its support.

June 6, 1829, our subject and Miss Sophia M. Elmore, who was born in New Lebanon, N. Y., July 13, 1804, were united in marriage. She departed this life September 4, 1843, leaving no family. April 9, 1845, the Doctor was married to Eliza Randall, who had her birth August 3, 1817, in Pompey, N. Y. She was the daughter of Joshua and Sarah (Smith) Randall, also natives of the Empire State. Mrs. Crandell emigrated with her mother to Wayne County, Mich., riding from Detroit to their home, twenty miles, over a corduroy road. In 1838, she came to this State, and in Laona Township made her home with her sister, Ruama, who had married William II. Stevens. Mrs. Crandell remained with her sister two years when, her brother William coming to this county, she made her home with him until her marriage with our subject.

Dr. and Mrs. Crandell had born to them three children: Edwin Elmore, who was born Angust 24, 1846, died September 15, 1852; Emily, who was born March 22, 1852, married Andrew Blake and resides at Colorado Springs, where Mr. Blake is engaged in the hardware business; Harriet, born April 10, 1854, became the wife of Addison Barningham, and departed this life January 13, 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Blake, of Colorado Springs, have four children: Arthur, Maud Lillian, Clarence 11, and Worthington G.

Dr. Crandell at his death left considerable property, and his wife, who carried on the farm for a number of years later, sold it and built a residence in Durand. She has given her daughter quite a little fortune, and still has in her possession a handsome competency. She is a most excellent and charitable lady and the doer of many kindly deeds known only to their objects.

EMUS W. GRIPPEN. Throughout Winnebago County there are doubtless few citizens who have not been personally acquainted with this venerable resident of Winnebago, who has aided in the development of the resources of the county, and during the late war contributed his self-sacrificing efforts to the preservation of the Union. He is a native of New York, and was born in Woodstock, Madison County, April 13, 1806. His father, Jesse, was a farmer in New Lebanon, N. Y., and also followed the same occupation in Woodstock, where he secured a tract of timber land, cleared a farm, and made his home until about 1815.

In the above-mentioned year, Jesse Grippen removed to Nelson Township, and afterward to Smithfield Township, whence, about 1818, he proceeded to Oncida County and purchased a tract of wild timber land in the town of Florence, where he cleared a farm from the wilderness, and remained for a number of years. Later he settled in the town of Vienna, where he bought property and where he was bereaved by the death of his wife, Rachel (Stevens) Grippen, who was probably a native of the Empire State. After her death, he came, West to Hillsdale County, Mich., where he died at the home of a daughter in the town of Reading.

At a very early age, the subject of our sketch commenced to be self-supporting, and learned the trade of a moulder at Taberg, Oncida County, where he remained until 1845. Then coming West by way of Erie Canal to Buffalo, thence on a propellor across the Lakes to Sheboygan, Wis., he proceeded on foot with his brother-in-law, Luther Miller, and made the overland journey to Rockford, where he selected a tract of Government land in what is now Winnebago Township, on the northwest quarter of section 31. During the summer he erected a small frame house, and broke and fenced forty acres of land. In the fall he returned East for his family, and, coming hither the second time, was met at Chicago by his brother-inlaw with an ox-team, and by that primitive mode of travel the family was conveyed to their future home. For some years there was no railroad in the county, and Chicago was the nearest market and depot for supplies.

Until the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Grippen continued actively engaged in farming, and then enlisted, September 1, 1861, as a private in Company G, Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry, serving two years, being promoted to Second, and later to First Lieutenant, as the reward of meritorious service. He then resigned on account of disability, and returned home. In August, 1864, he re-enlisted in Company D, One Hundred and Fortysixth Illinois Infantry, and served until the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged, July 8, 1865. In his second, as in his first term of service, he enlisted as a private and was promoted to the position of Second, and afterward First Lieutenant. He participated in many of the most bloody conflicts of the war, and was always in the front in the thickest of the fight, proving his patriotism during all the horrors of war.

In 1866, Mr. Grippen removed to the village of Winnebago, where he has since resided, and where he owns eighty acres, the value of which is constantly increasing. His first marriage united him to Miss Lydia Miller, who was born in Oneida County, N. Y., and died in Winnebago, January 25, 1866, Afterward Mr. Grippen was married, October 22, 1868, to Miss Margaret L., daughter of William and Jane (Smith) Wallace, and a native of Franklin County, Ind. Her parents came to Illinois about 1853, and the father died in Olney in 1885; the mother still survives and makes her home in Winnebago Township, with her daughter, Mrs. Vansen.

Six children were born of the first union of Mr. Grippen, namely: Nancy, who married John Herring; Ezra; Maria, wife of William Tryan; Delia, who became the wife of Hampton Sloan; Mary, Mrs. Wallace Gorham; and Spencer. Ezra served in Company C, Seventy-ninth Illinois Infantry, during some months of the Civil War. Mr. Grippen is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R. About the time of his removal from the Empire State. the Congregational Church, North and South, was divided on the question of slavery, and after settling in Illinois, he and Mr. Miller offered the Rev. Mr. Hodges, the minister of the Congregational Church in Oneida County, N. Y., a tract of land if he would come West and preach at some convenient point. The offer was accepted, and the minister shortly after his arrival organized the First Congregational Church in Winnebago, with seven members, the only survivors at present being Mrs. Elizabeth Holt and our subject. A few years after the organization, a stone church was erected on section 21, and after the railroad was built in the county, and the village of Winnebago was established, the old building was abandoned, and the Presbyterian Church of Winnebago became its natural successor.

Throughout the community where they reside, Mr. and Mrs. Grippen are highly esteemed, and their generosity and kindliness of heart are well known and appreciated. They are the parents of two children, who now survive, namely: Jennie Belle, who married Heman Hoyt; and Demus W., Jr.

EWIS SHIRLEY, Jr., one of the early settlers now residing in Flora Township, Boone County, was born in LaPorte County, Ind., January 12, 1833. He is a son of Lewis Shirginia or Pennsylvania. He removed from the Keystone State to Ohio, and after residing there a few years, in about 1825 removed farther Westward to La Porte County, Ind., where he was one of the early settlers. He located on Doore Prairie, and securing a tract of Government land, at once erected the log house in which our subject was born. His son, Adam K., was the first white child born in this county.

The father of our subject resided in Indiana until 1835, then, in company with his wife and seven children, he made the journey overland with teams to Illinois, and located in Winnebago County before it was organized. Indians were still in the vicinity, and deer, bear and other wild animals were plentiful, and roamed at will over the country, Mr. Shirley selected Government land both in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, and Flora Township, this county. He erected a log house on the former, the roof being formed of rived clapboards, and for a time the cabin did not even boast of a floor, and in lieu of a door a blanket was hung across an opening in the wall. There was plenty of water on the farm, and Mr. Shirley building a saw and grist mill, operated these in addition to carrying on his estate. He resided in Cherry Valley, with the exception of about two years when he was in California, until his decease, December 6, 1872.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Julia Keith; she was born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Peter Keith, and departed this life on the home farm in 1837. After her death, our subject's father chose for his second wife, Miss Mary O'Hara, who died in 1887. The seven children born of his first union were Silas, Mary, Jane, Adam, Lewis, Charles W. and Elizabeth.

Lewis Shirley, Jr., was two years of age when brought to Illinois by his parents, and remembers well the incidents of pioneer life here. He attended the first school ever taught in this section, the temple of learning being a log house with slab seat set on common wooden pins for legs. Holes were bored in the wall, pins inserted, and a slab laid on to serve for the larger scholars to write on. When but a mere boy, he used to go to Chicago with his father, the latter leading off with a team, and our subject following with another, loaded with wheat which sometimes would only bring forty-two cents per bushel.

In 1859, he of whom we write went to California, making the entire journey overland with oxteams. At that time there were no white settlements on the plains, and the buffalo and antelopes were numerous. After five months' travel, he arrived in the Golden State, and for a short time was engaged in mining, then began dealing in wood. He remained there about five years, at the end of which time he returned home and resumed farming. In 1864, Mr. Shirley located on the farm which he now owns and occupies, which was a portion of the land which his father entered from the Government. In addition to farming, he has engaged quite extensively in the wood business, in which undertaking he has been very successful. His estate is one of the finest in the county, containing five hundred and seventy-five well-improved acres.

November 3, 1864, Miss Leah Ream became the wife of our subject. She was a native of the Keystone State, and departed this life February 28, 1876. The second wife of Mr. Shirley, to whom he was married March 14, 1880, was Sophia Z. Smith, a native of Carroll County, Ohio, her birth occurring July 21, 1841. Her father, James Smith. was born near Hoboken, N. J., where also his father, Hector Smith, was born, and, it is supposed, spent his entire tife. The maiden name of the grandmother of Mrs. Shirley was Sophia, daughter of Amby Clark, who also had her birth in the abovenamed State and town. After the death of her husband, she went to Ohio with her children, and from there to lows, where her decease occurred in Fayette County.

The father of Mrs. Shirley was sixteen years of age when the family removed to Ohio and located in Franklin County. In 1837, he removed to Carroll County and purchased a tract of timber land near Carrollton. Making his home in that place until 1854, he again made his way Westward, in company with his wife and five children, this time making his home in Fayette County, lowa. One of the children died on the way. Mr. Smith located land in what is now Smithfield Township, and when the township was organized, it was named in his honor. The family moved into a log cabin until a more substantial structure could be erected for them, the father having to go thirty miles distant to have lumber sawed. He improved his land, upon which he has resided, with the exception of a few years spent in Fayette, since locating

The parents of Mrs. Shirley were married in Carroll County, Ohio, in 1837, the mother's maiden name being May J. Morrison. She was born in Pennsylvania, and was the daughter of John and Jane (Montgomery) Morrison. They have been married nearly fifty-five years, and have reared a family of six children: Jane, John M., Rose A., James II., and Charles F., all of whom are hving, with the exception of John M. Mrs. Shirley was given a good education, and when fifteen years of age, entered the lowa University at Fayette, where she fitted herself as a teacher, which occupation she followed for twenty years. By her union with our subject, one son has been born, James Lewis, born January 23, 1884. Mr. Shirley, by his first marriage, became the father of six children: Celestia E., Carrie A., Roswell R. and Adelbert W. Flora E., the second child, died when thirteen years of age, and Gertrude, the fifth in order of birth, departed this life in her seventh year.

ARTIN P. WHITESIDE, who at present occupies a pleasant home in Rockford, was born in Chautanqua County, N. Y., August 23, 1822. His father, Robertson Whiteside, was a native of Washington County, that State, where he was reared to farming pursuits in the town of Cambridge. The grandfather of our subject, John Whiteside, lived and died in that place.

He of whom we write is the younger of two sons born to his parents, his brother, William P., being a resident of Chautauqua, living on the banks of that beautiful lake at Whiteside Point. where his father located on a farm of one hundred and thirty acres in 1836. After a residence there of some years, the elder Mr. Whiteside removed to Mayville, the county seat, where he died in his eightieth year. His widow, prior to her marriage, was Maria Prendergast; she was born in 1798, in Rensselaer County, N. Y., and departed this life when seventy-eight years old. Her father was Martin Prendergast, of Chautauqua County, where he was Judge for many years. This family was one of the leading and wealthy residents of Jamestown. N. Y., which place was named in honor of James Prendergast, who there owned a large estate, a portion of which was timber land. There he erected mills, manufactured lumber, putting in the first gangsaw in that section, if not the first in the United States. William Prendergast, better known as Colonel, was in active service during the Revolutionary War, after which he located on a farm.

The gentleman of whom we write was given a good academic education, and in 1844 was married to a most worthy and estimable lady, who bore the name of Sarah Holmes. She was born October 6, 1824, in Oneida County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Seth W. Holmes, of Salisbury, Conn., whose birth occurred in 1799, and who departed this life at Paw Paw, Lee County, Ill., in 1864, His wife was Sallie Stone, who was also born in Connecticut in 1802, in the town of Litchfield, and, like her husband, passed away in Paw Paw, in 1856.

Our subject and his only brother were merchants at Mayville, N. Y., for a number of years. They erected a saw and grist mill, and did a large and paying business, which they sold out in order to come West. Locating in Paw Paw, this State, in 1852, they invested in farming lands, their estate comprising five hundred fertile acres. The father of Mrs. Whiteside owned in Lee County ten or twelve farms, which estate he left to his three daughters; the sisters of Mrs. Whiteside being Pheebe, Mrs. Martin Prendergast, of Chautauqua, N. Y.; and Helen, Mrs. John Dickson, who resides at Racine, Wis.

To Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside have been born two sons: Henry R., whose birth occurred April 6, 1853; and John W., who was born October 4, 1857. The latter-named gentleman is a physician at Bessemer, Mich., and in partnership with other physicians, manages a hospital. He was graduated from the Rush Medical College at Chicago, in the Class of '82, and was one of the few members whose standing admitted him to the hospital that year. Henry resides in Chicago, and, in connection with the Board of Trade, is conducting a grain ensampler's business.

Our subject and his wife came to Rockford in 1886, where they purchased the Kimball Place, just west of Haskell Avenue. There they planted and grew a fine vineyard, from which they gathered annually four tons of grapes. They subsequently sold these grounds for building lots, on which they erected in 1883 a pleasant residence. A year later, however, they removed to the home which will no doubt be their dwelling place until they shall be called to their final reward. It is located at No. 503 Rockton Avenue, where their kindly natures lead them to make life pleasant for others, and their influence in the community is always felt for good.

ILLIAM RICE. In point of energy, enterprise and determination, the subject of this sketch is looked upon as one of the leading men of Rockford Township, Winnebago County. He is what may be properly termed a "hustler," in the broadest sense of the term, and is genial and generous, one who is a universal favorite in both social and business circles. He is mostly interested in agricultural pursuits, and is the possessor of a large number of acres of land in this township.

The original of this sketch had his birth in Solon, Cortland County, N. Y., on the 4th of July, 1827. His worthy father, who bore the name of William Rice, was born in New England, and there reared. He went to Cortland County, N. Y., when a young man, and there bought a tract of timber land, clearing a splendid farm from the wilderness.

There were no railroads nor canals built in New York State for several years after his advent there, and the people lived off the products of their own farms, the women spinning and carding and making homespun clothes for their families. The father of our subject lived on the home farm with his parents until the year 1850, when he removed to Pennsylvania. After a few years' residence in the latter-named State, he again came to Cortland County and resided with his son, our subject, until his death, which took place in 1863.

The beloved mother of our subject bore the maiden name of Theodosia Thornton; she was a native of New York State, and died on the home farm in Cortland County. She reared to man and woman's estate six children, named as follows: Almon, Jason, Phabe, Joseph, Betsey and William. Our subject is the youngest of the children born to his parents, and was reared and educated in his native State and county, and resided under the parental roof until he was seventeen years of age. At that age he started out for himself in life, and commenced by working on a farm for $7 per month, and later received $10 a month. In this way he carned and saved enough money to help him get a good start. His father gave him sixty acres of land in the township of Cincinnatus, Cortland County, when he reached his majority, and on this place was an old log house with a frame addition, a small barn, two and one-third acres being improved. On this place our subject lived for only one year, when he traded with his father for the old homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, paying his father $2,500 besides. Here he lived until 1859, when he journeyed to the Prairie State, and settled in West Point Township, Stephenson County, purchasing a tract of one hundred and sixty acres on which he made his home until 1868.

In the year mentioned above, William Rice, the subject of this life history, sold his land in Stephenson County and came to the city of Rockford, buying property in the same, and also a fine farm of one hundred and eighty-two acres adjoining the city. He has since then purchased other lands, and now owns a farm which comprises two hundred and forty-eight broad and fertile acres, besides one hundred and thirty-eight acres adjoining the city, which has been his home for the past two years. On this place he is actively and prosperously engaged in tilling the soil, and raising some cattle, which are of the best grades, and he is a splendid example of what may be accomplished by a persistent, sagacious and economical man. He owns an acre of valuable land in the city, which is as yet vaeant.

To the wife who has contributed her quota to his prosperity, presides with grace and true hospitality over his home, and makes his interest her own, Mr. Rice was united in marriage in 1818. Mrs. Rice was born in the Empire State, a daughter of Andrew and Matilda (Fuller) Coleman. Mrs. Rice was known in her maidenhood as Nancy Coleman, and has become the mother of the following children, viz: Vinton B., Tilla L. Hattie your Imly 6 OUptin L., Kittie G., Opal A., Lena L. and Willie A. (Starr A., who was the second child, died when seven years and seven months old.)

The life record of our subject is an honor to him and an example to the youth of the present generation. He is gifted with a strong, ctear mind, tenacity of purpose and far-seeing sagacity, which have enabled him to control his business affairs to the best advantage, so that he has become well-to-do. He is liberal in the use of his money, showing that he has not labored merely for himself. In his political views, he is a stanch Democrat. In their religious views they are liberal, and not connected with any church.

HARLES O. UPTON. An honorable place among the citizens of Rockford is occupied by the President of the Manufacturers' National Bank, whose portrait is presented on the opposite page. Nearly forty years has Mr. Upton been a resident of this city, and by his business energy, integrity and public spirit, ably contributes to its prosperity and growth. Affable, clear-headed, a financier of safe discretion, in him and his estimable wife, a lady of much grace and dignity of presence and character, may be recognized that refined type of manners and morals, deeply rooted in austere New England virtues, amelioriated by Western influences, whose prevalence gives a high tone to the atmosphere of Rockford.

Charles Oscar Upton, youngest son of Amos and Hannah (Plint) Upton, was born in North Reading, Mass., September 17, 1832. He is of the sixth generation from his ancestor, John Upton, who came to Massachusetts from the original hôme of the family across the waters about the year 1652. Having been in his boyhood and early youth duly disciplined and instructed in the district schools, then in vogue in his native vitlage, our subject was later enrolled as a student of Lawrence Academy in the neighboring town of Groton, and for a brief time enjoyed the advantages afforded by that institution for higher learning. Returning to the shelter of the parental roof, and entering into business, he began to think of marriage and a home of his own.

The marriage of Charles O. Upton and Catherine Elizabeth, daughter of Col. Jacob S, and Catherine (Foster) Rayner, took place at the home of the bride's parents in North Reading, Mass., March 26, 1855, and their wedding journey was the trip to the new home in the great Prairie State. The children born of the union are as follows: Florence L., born August 31, 1858, married Lyon Playfair Ross, who died February 23, 1889, leaving two children; Nellie R., born in 1861, died in 1863, aged two years and three months; Clyde W., born January 20, 1861, is at home; and Lucy J., born March 31, 1866, was married at the family residence on North Court Street, November 19, 1891, to Fred King Tribou. Liberal in their religious views, sympathizing with the progressive teachings of the Rev. Dr. Kerr, and enjoying his faithful ministrations, Mr. and Mrs Upton are active members of the Christian Union Church.

When Mr. Upton came to Rockford in September, 1854, it was then an unimportant village. But the struggling town which he found by the River Rock has given way to the handsome, modern city of to-day, and in this development he has played no unimportant part as a solid and trustworthy man and sagacious tinancier, who has erected one of the most attractive residences in the city, founded a solid and reliable banking institution, and otherwise vigorously aided in pushing forward the material interests of city and county, besides bearing an honorable part in the guidance of public affairs. For a number of years he successfully conducted business, and engaged largely in buying and shipping live stock.

The Second National Bank of Rockford was organized in 1864, and Mr. Upton was made one of its Directors. He was connected with that bank twenty years, and the last two was Vice-President. In 1889, he organized the Manufacturers' National Bank, was elected its President, and still holds that office. Under his careful supervision, the affairs of the bank, which already occupies an important position in the monetary circles of the State, are in a flourishing condition, and a steady and constantly increasing business denotes the high favor in which it is held by the people. Mr. Upton is also a Director in the Rockford Burial Case Company.

Soon after he became a resident of Rockford, Mr. I'pton's fellow-citizens called upon him to help administer the local government, and he has held various offices of trust, executing his public duties with the same force, tact, business acumen and system that have always characterized his management of his private business. He served four years as a member of the City Council (being one of the committee of three that built the water works), was on the County Board of Supervisors three terms, and was Treasurer of Rockford two years. He has been permanently connected with the Agricultural Society as one of its leading members for many years, having served two terms as President, the same length of time as Vice-President, and is now Treasurer of the Association. A true Republican in politics, he east his first vote for John C. Fremont and has stood firmly by his party ever since the early days of its organization.

EORGE THOMAS WHEELER, an early settler in Boone County, is now living a retired life in the village of Poplar Grove. He was born in Hamburg, Eric County, N. Y., August 14, 1828, and is a son of Thomas Wheeler, whose native place was Massachusetts. The latternamed gentleman was reared and married in the Bay State and from there removed to Eric County, N. Y., where he was one of the early settlers in the town of Colden. Later, he settled in Hamburg, where he followed the trade of blacksmithing and remained until his decease in 1829.

Miss Martha Buxton, the maiden name of our subject's mother, was born in Rhode Island and, surviving her husband many years, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Webster, in Poplar Grove. He of whom we write was reared in his native town, where he resided until 1848, and then came by the way of the Lakes to Chicago, and thence by teams to this county. Here he entered a quarter-section of Government land in what is now Boone Township, which was said to be the last piece of Government land in this locality. He paid for this property with a soldier's land warrant, which cost him $140. The estate was placed under most excellent cultivation, and five years later Mr. Wheeler sold out and purchased a tract one mile south of Poplar Grove. He made that place his home for ten years, at the end of which time he became the proprietor of an estate two and one-half miles southeast in the same township, which he occupied until 1888, the year in which he moved to Poplar Grove.

November 25, 1857, Miss Harriet Ball and our subject were united in marriage. They have become the parents of three children: Frank, Helen M. and Blanch. The father of Mrs. Wheeler, Edward Ball, was born in Northboro, Worcester County, Mass., in June, 1807. His father, who was also named Edward, it is thought, was born on the same farm as his son and was descended from one of four brothers who came to America from England in an early day and located in what has since been known as Ball's Hill.

Grandfather Ball was a farmer and spent his entire life in Northboro. The maiden name of his wife was Sophia Puffer, the daughter of Reuben Puffer, who was a preacher and many years pastor of the Congregational Church in Berlin, where he spent his last years. The grandmother of Mrs. Wheeler died at the home of her daughter in Northboro, Mass. Edward Ball was reared and married in the above-named place and, being the only son, inherited the old home farm, upon which he resided until 1856, the date of his coming to Illinois. He located on a farm in Boone Township, which consisted of two hundred and forty acres, and resided there until his death in June, 1889. The lady to whom he was married. in March, 1835, was Miss Harriet, daughter of Thomas Hapgood. She was born in Marlboro, Middlesex County, Mass., January 4, 1817. Her father was a son of Thomas Hapgood, Sr., who was of early English ancestry and married Lucy Wood. The grandfather of Mrs. Wheeler was a carpenter and died in Marlboro. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Witt, who was born in what is now Hudson, Mass., and was the daughter of Ebenezer and Catherine (Goodenow) Witt. The mother of Mrs. Wheeler is still living and makes her home in Poplar Grove. In his political relations, our subject is a stanch Democrat.

of Alneer Bros., dealers in all kinds of seeds and plants, with headquarters at No. 710 South Fourth Street, is one of the progressive young business men of the city, and is upright and honorable in all his business transactions. He has a very pleasant home at No. 710 Kishwaukee Street, and his brother Alfred, who is the junior member of the firm, resides at No. 703 of the same street. They began business in a small way in 1883, but met with so much success and encouragement that they gradnally increased their business, until they are now classed among the flourishing and most reliable seed merchants of the State.

Our subject came to this city in the year 1869, was engaged with a seed merchant here for some time, and subsequently he and his brother began business on their own account. They have a large trade all over the United States, the result of their upright conduct in dealing with patrons and their manner of advertising with fine illustrated catalogues. They make it a point to give a buyer just what he buys, and no misrepresentation of goods is allowed. Buyers may feel assured that their orders will be filled with as good seeds, and at as reasonable prices, as though they were present. Their present quarters are found to be inadequate for their large and increasing business. They are now considering plans for a large and handsome block to be erected for them, the entire building to be used by them, in which to conduct their large seed and plant business.

Charles G. Alneer was originally from Sweden, born in Wester Gothland Province, December 23, 1856, and came with the family to America in 1869. They came immediately to Rockford, Ill., and there the father is still living, and on the 22d of December, 1891, was seventy-three years old. He has been a tiller of the soil all his life.

The mother, whose maiden name was Anna Lindstrom, died in 1874, when fifty-five years of age. She was a Lutheran in her religious belief, and her husband is a member of that church.

Our subject was the sixth child and the eldest son living of nine children born to his parents, of whom five are living, all of whom are residents of Rockford except one daughter, Carrie, who resides in Chicago. The others are: Mary, wife of Charles A. Anderson, who is in the employ of the Forest City Furniture Company; Eva, widow of John Ekeberg, who was formerly a cabinet-maker, resides at No. 1014 Sixth Avenue, and Alfred (his partner in business) married Matilda Stockenberg, of Rockford. To Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Alneer have been born two children, May and Raymond. Charles G., our subject, was married in this city to Miss Eva Carlson, a native of Sweden, who came alone to the States in 1875, leaving her parents, who still reside in that country. To Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Alneer have been born two children, both sons: C. Arthur and Walter II. He and his wife hold membership in the First Lutheran Church.

ANSOM BEECHER. It is probable that no resident of Winnebago Township is more widely known than Mr. Beecher, a retired farmer residing on section 21. He was born in Putnam, Washington County, N. Y., January 22, 1821, and was a son of Isaac Beecher, whose birth occurred in Connecticut in 1799. The grandfather of our subject, David Beecher, it is believed was also a native of the Nutmeg State, where he was married to a Miss Hawkins. He later removed to Vermont, in 1807, and was one of the pioneers of Rutland County, purchasing a tract of land in the town of Castleton, in addition to which he kept a public house. He later emigrated to New York State and settled in Putnam Township. After the decease of his wife he returned to Connecticut, where he died.

The father of our subject was eight years of age when his parents removed to Vermont, and there resided until reaching his majority, when he went to Putnam, Washington County, N. Y., and located upon a tract of land which his father had previously purchased. In 1826, he removed to Genesee County, buying timber land from the Holland Purchase Company, upon which he moved his family the following year, making the trip by the way of the Champlain and Eric Canal, Mr. Beecher resided in Pembroke for five years and then returning to Putnam, purchased a farm about one mile from his father's residence, and which was beautifully located on Lake George. After a stay of five years he sold out and returned to Vermont, and lived for nine years in Castleton. In 1816, Isaac Beecher came to Illinois and secured a tract of Government land five miles south of Yorkville, Kendall County. At the expiration of that time, he made his advent into Winnebago County, purchasing land in what is now Winnebago Township, and a few years later he moved to Nebraska, locating in York County, where he purchased a home and resided until his decease, September 19, 1883. The maiden name of his wife was Minerva Gorham, whose birth occurred in Fairfield, Vt., in January, 1799. She was the daughter of Hezekiah Gorham, and departed this life in York, Neb., in February, 1890, at the age of ninety-one years.

Ransom Beecher was the eldest of the four children born to his parents, his brothers and sisters being Charles, Betsey R., and Daniel I. He of whom we write was fifteen years of age when his parents moved to Vermont, prior to this time, however, receiving a good education in the pioneer schools of his native place. He remembers that his mother did all the cooking for the family in an old-fashioned fireplace, and carded, spun and wove the material for her children's clothes.

Our subject started out in the world for himself in 1845, and the following year came to Illinois with the family, where he entered a tract of Government land, which was located about five miles south of Yorkville. The first two years after his settlement here, Chicago was the nearest market for grain, which was conveyed thither by means of ox-teams. When the Michigan & Illinois Canal was completed, Morris, fourteen miles away, was the nearest market, though he frequently went to Joliet or Lockport, twenty miles away. In 1853, he sold his land, one hundred acres, sixty of which he had broken and fenced, for $10 per acre. He then came to Winnebago Township, and, with his brother Charles, bought two hundred acres of land at $15 per acre, which was located on section 33. The brothers continued together for a twelvemonth, when they divided the estate, each taking one hundred acres, and farmed until 1863, when our subject sold his portion and became the owner of a tract on sections 13 and 21, of the same township. There they resided until 1878, when he rented the farm and removed to Winnebago village, where he lived for five years, at the end of which time he returned to the farm and spent the following two years. Mr. Beecher then rented his estate and bought his pleasant home on section 21, where he is living retired.

March 12, 1841, our subject and Sarah A. Drake, a native of Castleton, Vt., were united in marriage. They are the parents of two children, Sarah E. and Inez. E., the former of whom married George Hollenbeck and is the mother of four children, namely: William R., Frank, Ettle A., and Artha. Inez married William T. Speaker, and has four children: Clifford, Faith, Ethel, and an infant not yet named. Mr. Beecher votes the Republican ticket, and is greatly respected in this locality.

ILLIAM II. SPICER, a native-born citizen of Winnebago County, had his birth in Seward Township, August 1, 1864. He is a son of George W. Spicer, whose birth occurred August 4, 1818, in Yates County. N. Y., where he resided until 1844, which was the date of his advent into this county.

Here the elder Mr. Spicer took up the land which is the present abiding-place of our subject, and which contains two hundred acres of finely-developed property. The mother of our subject was, prior to her marriage, Lucy L. Hawkins; she also was born in the Empire State, and is now residing in Iowa with a son and daughter. Her parents were from Germany, and passed away in New York State when Mrs. Spicer was very young.

The paternal grandfather of our subject came from England to this country in an early day and died near Rockford, this State. Grandmother Spicer was a native of Ireland, and spent her last days with our subject. George W. Spicer died in this county November 27, 1884.

He of whom we write had seven brothers and sisters, one of the former dying when thirteen years of age. He was married, December 10, 1890, to Miss Abbie Albertus, who was born in Ridott, Stephenson County, this State, May 3, 1865. She was a daughter of Peter and Tillie Albertus, who emigrated from Germany and located in the above-named county about forty years ago. The father died in his sixty-sixth year and his wife still lives on the old homestead near Freeport. They were the parents of ten children, eight of whom are living.

William H. Spicer and his wife have one child, a daughter, Lucy A., who was born October 4, 1891. Like his father before him, our subject is a Republican in politics, and is looked upon as one of the representative citizens of Seward Township. In company with one brother and his mother, he bought out the heirs of the old homestead, upon which he is residing and which he is cultivating with signal success.

HARLES E. BROWN. This gentleman, who owned a fine farm of sixty-one and one-half acres, located one half mile from Rockford, during the "boom" of 1890 sold all of his tract but seven acres, on which he is residing at the present time. He is also the proprietor of an excellent estate of three hundred and twenty-five acres in Owen Township, Winnebago County, which is operated by his son.

September 15, 1841, the birth of our subject occurred in Jersey County, this State. He was one of eleven children born to Mowry and Lucy (Pease) Brown, the former a native of Rhode Island. His grandfather, Joseph Brown, followed farming pursuits in his native State (Rhode Island), where he passed the greater part of his life, although his death occurred at the home of the father of our subject in Illinois. Mowry Brown was reared and educated in his native town and, when choosing an occupation for himself, learned the carpenter's trade, soon after which he came to the Prairie State, and located near Alton, following his trade until 1838.

At that date, Mowry Brown made his advent into Winnebago County, when most of the land in this section was owned by the Government and the city of Rockford was little more than a hamlet. He prosecuted his trade in Rockford for a time, then entering a tract of land in what is now Owen Township, erected thereon a log cabin and made that place his home for a number of years. As there were no railroads in this locality, and Chicago was the nearest market, all the farm products were conveyed thither by means of ox-teams. Mr. Brown carried on the carpenter's trade, at the same time superintending the improvement of his new home where he resided until his death.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Lucy Pease. She was born in Medina County, N. Y., and now resides on the old homestead in Owen Township. She was on a visit in Jersey County, this State, when our subject was born, and as he was an infant when his mother returned to Winnebago County, he very naturally feels that he is a native of this place. He has been a permanent resident of this county and has witnessed its entire growth and development. In his early days he attended the pioneer log schoolhouse, which was furnished in the most primitive manner. On attaining his seventeenth year, in company with his brother George he rented a tract of land in Owen Township and engaged in farming. They also purchased a threshing-machine which they operated with extraordinary success for a number of years, and continued to work together until about six years previous to the marriage of our subject. After celebrating that important event, Mr. Brown became a fireman on an engine running on the Atlanta & Great Western Railroad, and was thus engaged for a twelvemonth, when he located on a tract of land which he had purchased in Owen Township. He cultivated the soil for four years, then disposing of his estate, was employed in manufacturing brick in company with his father and brother, operating together for nine years.

Believing agriculture to be the most profitable business in which he could engage, Mr. Brown purchased two hundred and forty acres of land in Owen Township, where he cultivated the soil for six years, and then became proprietor of the sixty-one and one-half acres located one-half mile from Rockford and which has been mentioned above.

December 27, 1864. Mr. Brown was married to Miss Frances Mary Burritt, a native of Auburn, Caynga County, N. Y. She was one of seven children born to Charles and Laura (Remington) Burritt, the former a native of Bridgeport, Conn. Her paternal grandparents. Eben and Polly Burritt, were natives of the Nutmeg State, whence they removed to New York State and located in the town of Sennett, where the grandfather bought a tract of timber land and followed farming pursuits until his demise.

In early manhood, Charles Burritt, father of Mrs. Brown, removed to New York State, where he purchased a farm in Ira, Cayuga County, and there resided for a few years. Later, disposing of his estate, he embarked in the hardware business in Weedsport, and remained thus engaged until 1855, when he came to Illinois and settled on a tract of partially-improved land in Owen Township, Winnebago County. There he continued to cultivate his land and improve the farm for many years. He departed this life at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brown. His wife, whose maiden name was Laura Remington, was, it is thought, a native of Connecticut. She removed to New York with her parents at an early day and died on the home farm in Owen Township, Winnebago County, With her husband, she was a faithful member of the Second Congregational Church,

The six children born to Mr. Brown and his estimable wife are named as follows: Harry W., Nellie L., Mabel F., Mowry C., Ralph E. and Maude E. Harry W. married Miss Fannie M. Johns and they are the parents of two children: Orville and Aurilla. In political matters, Mr. Brown atfiliates with the Republican party and is known as one of the most public-spirited citizens of the community. He and his wife are devoted members of the Christian Union Church and are people of high social standing in Rockford and vicinity.

In connection with this biographical notice, the reader will notice a lithographic portrait of Mr. Brown on another page.

HARLES COMLY. A traveler through Winnebago County sees many attractive homes, not only in the thriving towns, but in the agricultural districts, the evidences of enterprise crowned with success being plentiful on every hand. In Seward Township stands a substantial farm residence, around which good barns and other outbuildings cluster and well-tilled acres stretch. Everything about the place wears an air of neatness and order and evidences of good taste, which mark the occupants as people of intelligence, thrift and culture. Investigation shows the estate to be owned by Charles Comby and operated by his son Edwin. The household comprises three generations and the marvelous memory of which our subject is possessed at his advanced years is a cause for selfeongratulation.

The gentleman whose life it is our purpose to ontline in these brief paragraphs was born in Milton, Northumberland County, Pa., October 22, 1814. He is a son of Thomas and Catherine (Hunter) Comly, the former of whom was born August 17, 1789, in Chester County, that State. He was the son of Ezra and Hannah (Wedell) Comly, and a decendant of one Henry Comly, who came to this country from England in company with William Penn, in 1682. Henry Comly was married, August 17, 1695, to Miss Agnes Heaton.

Thomas Wedell emigrated from England to the United States in 1700 and was married, April 9, 1705, to Rebecca Williams. The mother of our subject was born July 6, 1796, in Northumberland County, Pa., and spent her last days in Lycoming County, that State, her decease occurring when seventy-six years of age. Ezra Comly was a lumber merchant and died in Northumberland County, Pa., when eighty years of age, his wife's decease occurring at the same place when in her eightyfourth year. The grandfather of our subject was a son of Henry and Agnes (Heaton) Comly.

The mother of our subject was the daughter of David and Isabella (Patterson) Hunter, the former of whom was a native of Ireland and died when sixty-eight years of age in Lycoming County, Pa., leaving a wife and seven children. The mother, Isabella Hunter, was a native of the Keystone State, and her demise occurred in Lycoming County, at the age of sixty-six years. The Pattersons were of Scotch-Irish descent, while the Comlys are among old and prominent families of the United States.

Charles Comly of this sketch remained at home until twenty-two years of age, when, December 8, 1856, he was married in Union County, Pa., to Miss Ludwig. His wife was born in Berks County, that State, January 5, 1816, and is the daughter of Abram and Hannah (Bower) Ludwig, natives of Pennsylvania, whose decease occurred in La Porte County, Ind., at the respective ages of seventy-eight and eighty years. The parents of Mrs. Comly were of German descent and old residents of Pennsylvania.

After his marriage, our subject worked by the month for four years, and then rented for three years, when he was enabled to purchase sixty-four acres of good land in Pennsylvania, which he cultivated and resided upon until 1854. Then, disposing of his acreage, Mr. Comly came to Winnebago County and located on his present farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres, which was partially improved at the time it came into his possession. As before stated, the excellent buildings on the farm have been the work of his enterprise, and, in every sense of the word, he may be considered a model and modern farmer.

To Mr. and Mrs. Charles Comly have been born ten children, one of whom is deceased. Those hving are Isabella, who was born August 1, 1840, and is married and the mother of five children; Caroline, born May 23, 1842, is married and has seven children; Hanna M., who was born December 23, 1844, is married and has a family of four children; Catherine, born November 18, 1815, is married and has one child; Mary, born September 9, 1847, is married and the mother of five children; Thomas, who was born April 22, 1819, is single; Abraham L., born September 18, 1852, is the father of two children; Charles II., born January 27, 1856, has one son; John B., who was born May 5, 1860, is a physician and resides in lowa; Edwin D., born May 14, 1863, married Miss Jennie Lincoln, and is the father of a son and daughter. His wife was born May 28, 1867, and is a daughter of William and Lucy Lincoln. Our subject and his wife have four great-grandchildren. The family are prominent citizens of the county and were originally Quakers. Mr. Comly has a nephew who was a soldier in the late war and who carried a ball over twenty-two years.

EORGE VICKERS, now living retired in the village of Poplar Grove, was for many years a prominent farmer in Caledonia Township, Boone County. He came hither at an early day and has been instrumental in the general upbuilding and perfecting of this section of country. He has been the architect of his own fortune, seeming to possess all the qualities necessary to prosperity, and is now living in a pleasant home that promises to be a haven of rest and peace in his declining years.

He of whom we write was born in Lancashire, England, February 8, 1817. His father, George Vickers, was also a native of that shire, and his grandparents, George and Isabelle Vickers, spent their entire lives in England.

The former-named gentleman was engaged in the slate quarries of Lancashire, and in early manhood was married to Frances Benson, also a native of that portion of England. The maternal grandparents of our subject, Robert and Ann Benson, became the parents of four children who came to America, namely: Robert and Joseph, who located in this county; James, who is now residing in Sioux County, Iowa, and the mother of our subject.

George Vickers was reared on a farm in his native county, residing at home until 1843, when he came to America, setting sail from Liverpool, April 15, in the vessel "Ohio" and landing on the shores of the New World on the 18th of May. He came directly to Belvidere by way of the Hudson River, Erie Canal and the Lakes to Chicago, thence overland by team to this county, where he arrived on the 7th of June. At that time Belvidere was a small village on the north side of the river, and the greater portion of the land in the county was in the possession of the Government. His means being very limited, our subject immediately found employment and engaged to work out by the month on farms, and in that manner saved enough money to enable him to rent land. In 1848, he purchased eighty aeres in LcRoy Township and, erecting a log house on the place, commenced the work of clearing and improving his property. There were no railroads in the vicinity for some time and Wankegan was the nearest market and depot for supplies. Our subject lived on that place until 1853, when he sold out and purchased in Caledonia Township and there he made his home until 1887, the date of his removal to Poplar Grove, February 15, 1810, George Vickers and Ellen, daughter of James and Mary (Steele) Postlethwait, were united in marriage. Mrs. Vickers became the mother of seven children, who are respectively, Mary, Mrs. Marshall; George, William Robert, John S., Joseph; Frances E., Mrs. John Hartley, and Frank. The wife and mother departed this life in 1883, mourned by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Politically, our subject has been prominently identified with the Democratic party, and is a man of whom it is said that his word is as good as his note.

EORGE PFENSTIEL, who is now living a retired life at No. 506 North Third Street, has made his home in Rockford since 1862, and is one of the worthy citizens that Germany has furnished to Winnebago County. He was born in Prussia, September 21, 1831, and is a son of Millet Pfenstiel, who died in his native land at the age of seventy-one years. His mother has also passed away and the only surviving members of the family are our subject and his brother Casper, who is also living a retired life in Rockford.

Mr. Pfenstiel spent the days of his boyhood and youth in the Fatherland, and in 1860 bade goodbye to his old home, sailing from Bremen on the 17th of November. On reaching his destination, he secured employment at whatever he could find to do whereby he might earn an honest dollar. After eighteen months he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, and a year later came to Rockford. To various enterprises he has devoted his attention since locating in this city, among which was the livery business. His undertakings being successful, he accumulated quite a valuable property which now enables him to live a retired life. He owns some good farming land in Illinois and some city property, including a large brewery.

The lady who is now Mrs. Pfenstiel was formerly Mrs. Charlotte Croneman. She was born near Berlin, on the 17th of May, 1829, and is a daughter of Frederick and Louisa (Loudwig) Bleger, natives of Prussia. Her father there began life as a miller and followed that occupation until called to his linal rest at the age of fifty-five. His wife died at the age of thirty-two years. Both were members of the Lutheran Church. The grandfather, Christ J. Bleger, served as a soldier under Napoleon Bonaparte. Of the family a sister of Mrs. Pfenstiel is deceased, Mrs. Amelia Kahloff. Two brothers, Henry and Rudolph, are yet residents of Germany.

The wife of our subject acquired a good education in her native tongue, and was the first of her family to come to this country. She crossed the Atlantic alone in 1856, from Bremen to New York City, and spent some months in the latter place. In the early part of 1857, she came to Rockford, and the following year was married to Theodore Croneman, a native of Hamburg, Germany, who came to this country in 1856. After his marriage, he continued business in this city as a cabinet-maker for three years, and then went into the furniture business with A. C. Burpee, that connection continuing for twelve years. His death occurred in 1871, at the age of forty-one years. He was one of the prominent German business men of Mours Greeky J.W.Wolven Rockford, and a Democrat in politics. He held membership with the Germania Society, and was a member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. and Mrs. Pfenstiel also belong to the Lutheran Church, and, in his political affiliations, he is a Republican. His close attention to business, enterprise and good management won for him a handsome competence and he is now enabled to live retired, resting in the enjoyment of the fruits of former toil. He has the respect of his many acquaintances and has a large circle of friends in this community.

OHN W. WOLVEN. If a man's true character may be determined by the opinion of those around him, that of Mr. Wolven is irreproachable. By his habits of industry and prudence, he has built up a good home for himself and family, and acquired a competence for his declining years. He is progressive in his ideas, liberal and public-spirited, and in noting his surroundings and the respect in which he is held in Pecatonica, where he resides, it must be admitted that he is in the possession of a large share of all that makes life desirable.

The original of this sketch was born September 4, 1830, in Greene County, N. Y., and is the son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Story) Wolven, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania in 1800, and died in Upper Canada, in the prime of life. His wife, Elizabeth Story, had her birth November 6, 1810, in Greene County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Benjamin and Hannah Story, who spent their last days in Minnesota. Her father was very old at his death, and was widely known throughout his community as one of the honored pioneers.

Mr. Wolven of this sketch was one in a family of four children, and remained at home until 1845, his mother in the meantime having removed to Racine, Wis., where he hired out for $4 per month. He was thus employed for six weeks, and then engaged with an uncle for a year, at the end of which time he secured a position as cook on a lake vessel at $15 per month. He continued in that line of work for two years, when he returned home and spent the winter with his mother, who had married a second time, and was residing in Sheboygan, Wis. John W. then spent the following two years with his uncle, Silas Wright, working on a farm summers, and going to school winters.

Having saved a sum sufficient to buy two yoke of cattle, our subject, in the spring of 1815, borrowed enough money to purchase two more voke. and, in company with another man, was engaged in breaking prairie. Continuing so employed for a twelvemonth, Mr. Wolven operated alone during the year 1850, and the following spring came to Winnebago County, where he had purchased land the year previous for $150, it being a soldier's claim. After sinking his money in the land, he was very much discouraged by having his uncle tell him that the property was worthless. But with a determination to succeed, and with his habits of industry and thrift, he managed his affairs so wisely that he soon took an honorable place among the farmers of his community.

Upon first locating on his new property, Mr. Wolven had $2.50 in his pocket, four yoke of eattle, a wagon and plow, and was obliged to pay $1.50 per week for board for himself and dog. The $2.50 spoken of, he had earned by hauling wheat from Bloomfield to Kenosha, Wis., a distance of fifty miles. When that money was gone, he was so fortunate as to get a job at breaking prairie, his pay being an order on the store in Freeport. He next broke twelve acres for a Mr. William Moore, for which he received an old eow, and from that time on had plenty to do. He later engaged to work in a harvest field where an old Smith reaper was in operation. His duty was to pitch grain off the reaper, which should have been the work of two men, and as a compensation for his labors, reeeived $1.50 a day. In the fall Mr. Wolven cut and stored wild hav and then started for Pecatonica and hired out with his four yoke of cattle on the railroad.

October 1, 1855, Miss Juliet Martin, who was born June 12, 1836, in New York, became the wrfe of our subject. She was a daughter of David and Hannah Martin, who located in this section in the '30s, and died in Seward Township, this county. Mrs. Juliet Wolven departed this life November 11, 1879, leaving a family of four children, three of whom are living: Edwin J., Jessie and Georgie, twins.

The second marriage of our subject occurred August 10, 1881, at which time Miss Ida, daughter of Charles and Matilda Lamb, became his wife. The lady was born in 1859, in Minnesota, where her parents were pioneers, and are still residing there. Mr. Wolven has accumulated a handsome property in both farms and city lands, and it is his desire to lead a retired life in the village, but his keen knowledge of business and public enterprise make him a man much sought after. He is at the head of the Pecatonica shoe factory, is interested m a large creamery, and otherwise takes an active part in business circles, and bids fair to reach a still higher place than that which he has already attained. In politics, he is a strong Republican, and is the incumbent of the office of Supervisor, which he has held for several years, and, by his intelligence and good judgment, has benefited the community.

OHN M. KERN. As a practical tailor of the highest skill, Mr. Kern has no superior in the city, and for excellence of workmanship and artistic skill and finish, he has carned a well-deserved reputation. He has followed his trade ever since he reached mature years and with such substantial results that he is now the owner of a fine home at No. 512 Hill Street, and another fine house on that block. He has been a resident of Rockford since 1869, and has ever followed his trade, part of the time on his own account, but most of the time has been employed by different tailoring establishments.

He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, May 6, 1833, and was well educated in the schools of his native country. He served an apprenticeship at his trade, and in 1847, he and a brother and sister took passage for the United States, arriving in New York City in May of that year. They went immediately to Detroit, Mich., where the brother is now living, engaged as a cabinet-maker, but the sister, Catherine, died in Detroit two weeks later, of cholera. From Detroit our subject went to Ontario, Canada, but later returned to the States and became a resident of Illinois.

His marriage to Miss Sophia Nelson, a native of Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, born February 13, 1841, was solemnized in Geneva, Ill., and to them have been born nine children who are as follows: Georgie, who was accidentally drowned in Rock River when eight years of age; Albert, who died when young; Charles C., a farmer of Ogle County, Ill., who married Miss Mary Hancock; Emma P. married Edward Rayney, who is a finisher in a piano factory of Chicago; Julia O., married Edward Lorden, and now resides at home: Anna II., at home, is a seamstress and dressmaker; Amanda M., Victor E., and Mabel L., at home. After the death of her father, Mrs. Kern, her mother, two sisters and a brother came to the United States and settled in Geneva, Ill., where the mother and brother died. The three sisters then came to Rockford, and one of them, Mrs. Lawn Anderson, afterwards died in Elgin. The only sister now living is Mrs. Andrew Hollem, of Rockford.

Mr. and Mrs. Kern are identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, in politics, he is independent. He and his wife are classed among the best citizens of Rockford and have a host of warm friends.

ELVEY K. BLODGETT, Treasurer and stockholder of the Coon Creek Cheese Factory, is at present residing in Rockton Township, Winnebago County, where he has a large dairy farm. He had his birth m Beloit, Wis., June 10, 1838, and was the first white male child born there. His father, S. K. Blodgett, Sr., was born in the Empire State in 1812, where he was reared to farming pursuits.

The grandfather of our subject, Caleb Blodgett, was a native of New York State and came West to Beloit, Wis., in 1835, from Ohio where he resided for some time. His death occurred in Beloit in 1842, at the age of fifty-five years. He had been twice married and was the father of ten children by his first union. The mother of our subject bore the maiden name of Mahala Norris, a native of Pennsylvania; she met and married Mr. Blodgett in Ohio and removed with him to Beloit in 1840, where her husband was engaged in farming and stockraising for five years. Later he came to Winnebago County, and in Rockton Township bought a tract of land on section 22 for which he traded stock. He resided here for about eight years and was extensively engaged in stock-raising, having at one time as many as three hundred head. In 1848, however, he returned to Beloit and was engaged in the butchering business, which, like all his previous ventures, proved very successful. He continued in that line until 1853, when he crossed the plains with a team in company with others, his partner on the journey-being Abram Rivers. He was absent from home about twelve months and, returning by the Panama route, again engaged in the grain and stock business in Beloit. Five or six years later, he established as miller and at the end of eight years was enabled to retire with a handsome competence. His life was quite eventful as he was a pioneer of three States, to say nothing of California, but his energy and indomitable will earried him through many hardships, and resulted in his attaining a high place among his fellow-men. He left at his death an estate of thirteen hundred acres and much personal property, dying in the spring of 1881 when sixty-nine years of age.

Our subject was the second of his father's family, and had a brother and two sisters. Eleanor died when nine years of age, and those living are William, who is engaged in the milling business in Beloit; Selvey K., our subject, and Sabra II., now Mrs. F. S. Fenton, also residing in Beloit, whose husband is a retired druggist. The mother of our subject died in the fall of 1885 in her seventy-third year.

He of whom we write passed the years from eight to eighteen attending school in Beloit, at the end of which time he engaged in the milling business with his father. He continued to be thus employed for seven years, when on account of impaired health he crossed the plains to California, where he worked in the mines, and was engaged in the stock business for two years. Returning home at the expiration of that time, he came with his father to Winnebago County, and located upon the tract which is his present abiding-place and which was then owned by his father.

Mr. Blodgett of this sketch was married in the winter of 1870 to Miss Helen M. Bullis of Avon, Wis., and to them were born two daughters: Ella and Delia. Mrs. Helen Blodgett departed this life in April, 1871, when only twenty-four years of age, and our subject later married Miss Adeline Miller, of Rockton, this State. To them have been granted a family of five children: Harry. Elmer, May, Emma and Selvey, the eldest thirteen and the youngest six years of age. Mrs. Blodgett passed to the land beyond in August, 1887, in her thirty-second year.

The original of this sketch is not interested in politics other than to east his vote for Democratic candidates. His second wife was a devoted member of the Congregational Church, but he rather leans toward Methodist principles. Mr. Blodgett is a stock-raiser, and has made a specialty of raising mules for the past twenty years, and has made a reputation throughout this part of the State. He also has on his place fine Durham cattle, and though he has experimented in other breeds, they are his favorites. As before stated, he is a stockholder in the Coon Creek Cheese Factory and keeps on his place about fifty milch cows. At one time he built a creamery on his own farm which was later abandoned. With his house, which is a most comfortable dwelling, large and ample barns, sheds and other outbuildings, he has quite a village of his own, which is beautifully located a short distance from the public highway. His influence is felt for good in the community, where he is respected for his sterling character and true neighborly kindness.

ILLIAM F. PELLEY was born on the farm he now owns and occupies in Rockford Township, Winnebago County, January 8, 1849. His father, John Pelley, was one of the pioneers of this county, having come hither at an early day from London, England, where the grandparents of our subject spent their entire lives.

John Pelley entered the naval service of the British army when seventeen years of age, and after serving a period of seven years, came to America in company with his brothers, Stephen, Joseph and George, the two former locating near Waterloo. Iowa, and the latter in Newfoundland. The elder Mr. Pelley made his home in Canada, where he met and married Amy Bodine, a native of the Dominion. Her parents, Abram and Zillah Bodine, hailed from Pennsylvania, where they were well-to-do residents.

The father of our subject came with his family to Winnebago County, making the journey overland with an ox-team. His means being very limited at that time, he sought and found employment in a stone quarry during the winter season at twenty-five cents per day and the rest of the year was employed on a farm. When he came to Rockford, the surrounding country was sparsely settled, and wild animals roamed at will where the city is now located. In 1815, he purchased eighty acres of the land now included in the farm owned by our subject, paying for the tract $450. He was very successful in his operations and at the time of his decease was the owner of one hundred and thirty-five acres, clear of all indebtedness. Mr. Pelley died in March, 1876, and his good wife, who survived him a number of years, passed away in 1881. Five of their children are now living: Orrin, Sarah, John T., William F. and Mary.

William F. Pelley was reared and educated in his native town and commenced very young to assist his father on the farm. When the latter first came to the county, Chicago was the nearest market, and as there were no railroads in the vicinity, the entire trip of one hundred miles was made by ox-teams. After the death of his parents, our subject bought the interest of the other heirs in the homestead which he now owns and occupies.

January 8, 1877, Mr. Pelley and Nora Nolen were united in marriage. The lady was born in the town of Allegany, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., and is a daughter of James Nolen, a native of County Wexford, Ireland. His brother Walter and sisters, Ellen and Ann, were the only members of his father's family to come to America. The father of Mrs. Pelley followed the trade of a tanner in Allegany for about twenty years, and on coming to Rockford in 1867, resided here for two years and then purchased a farm in Ogle County, where his death occurred in March, 1869. The maiden name of his wife was Nora Delaney, a native of Dublin, Ireland, and the daughter of Thomas Delaney; she died on the home farm. Mrs. Pelley and her sister, Mrs. P. D. Murphy, are the only members of the family living. Our subject and his wife have five children: John W., James Francis, Mary Amy, Maggie E. and Lillie E.

TOWARD II. DAVIS, a member of the firm of E. II. Davis & Co., upholsterers and dealers in furniture, with business quarters at No. 329 South Main Street, is a young man of push, enterprise and reliability, and one who has standing in business and social circles. This company consists of our subject and his father, John II. Davis, and has been in operation in this city for the past fourteen years. Both gentlemen are popularly known in business circles, and the house is one of the most reliable, responsible, substantial and representative in its line in the city. The senior Davis is an expert in all matters pertaining to his business, while the junior member of the firm combines his vigor and ability with the ripe experience of his father to form a firm of commanding influence, wide popularity and solid worth.

Edward II, Davis was born in this city on the 1st of March, 1850, and from an early age was trained to the business of an upholsterer. He is of Welsh descent, his paternal great-great-grandfather being a Welsh tailor who died after coming to America. The latter's son and the great-grandfather of our subject, David Davis, was a native of New Hampshire and during his youth experienced many hardships and much ill usage. At one time, when about fourteen years of age, he was treated with so much harshness and cruelty that he enlisted in the Revolutionary War, and was in many of the prominent engagements against the British. During the time he was in service he was taken sick with the small-pox. His early advantage for obtaining an education being very meager, he tried to get some schooling without an instructor and learned to read after he was married. He persevered in his studies and became a profound thinker, a great reasoner and a man of fine intellect. He had a most retentive memory and retained it until his death when eighty-eight years of age. He owned a good farm and passed the last years of his life in comfort and happiness.

His son and the grandfather of Edward II. Davis (our subject), John Davis, was a native of New Hampshire and a farmer of Cornish where he passed his entire life, dying when seventy-two years of age. He had married a Connecticut lady, a Miss Hannah Brown, who came of English ancestry, and who preceded him to the grave.

John H. Davis, Jr., father of our subject, was born in New Hampshire, March 9, 1820, and was educated in Kimbal Union Academy, where he was prepared to enter college. He was a teacher of penmanship for a number of years before he came West, and was married in his native town to Miss Sarah Edmonson, a native of Cornish, N. H., and of New England stock. In 1849, Mr. Davis and his young bride emigrated to Illinois and settled in Chicago for a short time. They later took passage for Rockford and after a long and tiresome journey landed in that city. Mr. Davis began learning the carpenter and cabinet-maker's trade, and worked in the first furniture factory in the city. He also assisted in putting in the old dam on the Rock River at this place, and some of the old houses now standing were built by him. Mr. Davis has lived a quiet, uneventful life, and for the past fifteen years has been very successful. He is an Independent Democrat in his political views. He lost the sharer of his joys and sorrows, his worthy wife, in 1855, when she was about middle age. She was the mother of two children: Edward II. (our subject), and Dannie, who became the wife of Alfred La Point, a machinist and mechanic in the Forest City Furniture Factory, this city.

Mr. Davistook for his second wife Miss Mary Case, a native of New York, of New Jersey parentage. She died young, leaving two children: John, who married a Miss Maine and now resides in Chicago, and Sarah, who became the wife of Fred Pfamstiel, a barber of Rockford. Mr. Davis' third marriage was to Angeline La Point, a native of Milwaukee, whose parents were from New York State. Her father, John LaPoint, built the first house in Milwaukee, and was a pioneer of that city. He came to Rockford in 1855, and here his death occurred a number of years later. His wife had passed away a number of years before. She was a native of Troy, N. Y. Mr. LaPoint was a sash, door and blind manufacturer in Rockford for many years. Mr. and Mrs. John H. Davis have no children by this union. They are intelligent and much esteemed people.

Our subject has been a resident of Rockford all his life and was wedded in this city to Miss Fannie Green, also of Rockford. He is a fine musician and for years was one of the old Forest City Band, the same being known as the Berdea & Davis Orchestra, which was the oldest band in the city and the leading one for years. It is now extinct, however. Mr. Davis and his estimable lady reside at No. 1002 Grant Avenue, where they have a very nice, tasty home.

EBASTIAN FICKES, a retired agriculturist and a gentleman of broad and comprehensive experience and observation, is at present residing in the village of Shirland, which has been his place of residence for the past twelve years. He is a native of Pennsylvania, having been born in Cumberland County, in 1818. He is a son of Abraham Fickes, also a native of the Keystone State, who removed in 1833 to Summit County, Ohio, where he made his home until 1846, the date of his advent into Winnebago County.

The father of our subject was accompanied to this State by our subject and his bride, he having been married in 1844 to Miss Caroline Seely, a native of Summit County, Ohio. The young couple located upon an eighty-acre tract of land which Mr. Fickes sold in a few years, and became the owner of a quarter-section adjoining that property. His wife died in 1863, leaving a son, Miles.

The second marriage of our subject, which was celebrated in 1870, united him with Mrs. Sarah (Fitch) Case, the daughter of Abner Fitch, of Conneeticut, who was born in 1790 and died while residing in Chautauqua County, N. Y., in 1873. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Eunice Brownell, had her birth in Bennington, Vt., and her death occurred in Stockton, N. Y., in 1862, at the age of three-score and ten years. Their family included thirteen children, five sons and eight daughters, seven of whom are still living. Blackman Fitch, a brother of our subject's wife, was a volunteer soldier from Chautauqua County in Company E. One Hundred and Fifty-fourth New York Infantry, and served through the entire struggle. He was with "Old Tecumseh" on his march through Georgia, at which time he received a slight flesh wound. He is at present residing in Chautauqua County, where he is held in high esteem. A sister of Mrs. Fickes, Mrs. Eliza Hunt, resides at Grand Rapids, Mich., where her son is engaged with a barrel and stave company.

The paternal grandparents of our subject were Martin and Betsey (Michel) Fickes, both natives of Adams County, Pa. The maiden name of our subject's mother was Betsey Wonder, a native of York County, Pa., and the daughter of Sebastian and Sarah (Day) Wonder. They became the parents of three sons and nine daughters, and departed this life at the respective ages of fifty-four and eighty-four years, the father dying in York County, Pa., and the mother in Venango County, that State.

The parental family of our subject numbered ten children, one of whom died when very young. Mr. Fiekes comes of a hearty, athletic race, and he and his son Miles, though not sporting men, have won considerable fame in their community for their marvelous strength. The son is a prominent farmer in Shirland Township, yet is a famous sprinter, and could he have traveled would seldom have found his equal for running one hundred yards. He is married to Miss Eva Kimball, of Winnebago County.

The original of this sketch resided at home until twenty-five years of age, and as the result of a life of industry and prudence is the proud possessor of an excellent estate of two hundred and forty-five acres, in addition to which he has a comfortable residence and several lots in the village. He has been an active member and liberal supporter of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and likewise generously contributes to all measures that promise to be for the advantage and improvement of that portion of the country in which he lives.

Mrs. Fickes became the mother of a son and daughter by her first husband: Carrie, Mrs. Frank Morgan, of Rockford, and Charles W. of the same place.

ARREN E. FYLER. Probably in the history of the representative business enterprises of Durand, no more worthy example can be found of what may be accomplished by energy, integrity and well-directed efforts, than is so the interprise conducted by Mr. Fyler, dealer in grain, and representing that business in Durand.

A resident of Winnebago County since 1861, Mr. Fyler removed hither from Oswego County, N. Y., where he was born March 26, 1846. He is the son of Lorenzo and Cordelia (Wiltse) Fyler, and in 1861 accompanied the other members of the parental family to Roscoe, Ill., where his father is engaged in the drug business. The childhood days of our subject were passed on a farm, and when not occupied with his school duties, he was industriously aiding in tilling the soil and improving March 8, 1864, he came to the home place. Durand, where he was employed as clerk for Andrew Ashton, a general merchant, for three years, and for one year afterward he had charge of a wholesale notion wagon.

After spending one year in Chicago, where he had charge of a roofing factory, Mr. Fyler returned to Winnebago County, and for three years ran a notion wagon, after which he again entered the employ of Andrew Ashton. In 1882, he associated Peter Patterson as partner, and under the firm name of Patterson & Fyler, engaged in a general mercantile business, also dealing in grain and live stock. Their freight charges amounted to $6,500 annually, and their business was extensive and lucrative.

In 1884, Mr. Fyler engaged in the grain trade alone and one year later settled on a farm, which he cultivated for a time. In 1887, he went to Omaha, where for several months he was employed by an abstract firm. From that city he proceeded to Plymouth, Iowa, where he had charge of a store for about six months. Returning to Durand, he traded property for the elevator, which he still owns, and has ever since been successfully engaged in the grain trade.

January 21, 1874, Mr. Fyler and Miss Charlotte G., daughter of D. E. Adams, were united in marriage. They are the parents of three children, namely: Katie, who died at the age of six months, Mabel, who is at home, and Frank, who died when five years old. In his political belief, Mr. Fyler is a Republican, and has been called by his fellowcitizens to occupy positions of trust, having served as Supervisor of Durand and in other local offices. He is a Thirty-second Degree Mason, and a member of Durand Lodge No. 30, F. & A. M., of which he is Master; Freeport Chapter No. 23, R. A. M.; Freeport Commandery No. 7, K. T., and Freeport Consistory, Scottish Rite. He and his amiable wife are highly esteemed for their fine personal traits of character, and occupy a warm place in the regard of the people among whom they have spent the greater portion of their lives.

cessful professional men of Rockford, there is probably no one more perfectly in sympathy with that public spirit which has contributed to the progress of the city than the subject of this biographical notice. Persevering and energetic in whatever direction his efforts have been turned, material success is not the greatest of his achievements, for he has gained what is even better—the highest respect of the best men of the State and the confidence of all who know him.

The office of this skillful physician and surgeon is located at No. 107 N. West Street, and the Doctor has made his home in Rockford since 1878, enjoying a large and lucrative practice. Prior to locating here, he practiced his profession at Beloit, Wis., for eight years and also spent some time as a practitioner in Ogle County, this State, at Oregon and Byron, commencing at the former place in 1852, after graduating in the medical department of the State University of Iowa at Keokuk. During the years of his practice, he has made his profession financially remunerative and has won a warm place in the esteem of his patients.

Before mentioning more fully the events of importance in the life of Dr. Helm, it may not be amiss to record briefly a few facts with reference to his parentage. Woodhull Helm, his father, was familiarly known as Captain, on account of service in the State militia. He was born in Orange County, N. Y., in 1777, and belonged to a pioneer family of the Empire State, whose lineage was raced to England and Ireland. A nephew of our subject, J. C. Helm, Supreme Judge of Colorado, has shown, from facts which he has gathered, that the family in England had a coat of arms, and its members were prominent in that country.

Capt. Helm by a former marriage became the father of two sons and one daughter, now deceased. Miss Lucy Ruggles, of Worcester County, Mass., whose ancestors had been American citizens through several generations and figured prominently in the Revolutionary War, became the third wife of Capt. Helm. Six children were born of this union, all deceased but our subject and Alfred. The latter went to California in 1851, operated there as a miner and later published a paper for some years. He is now a resident of Carson City, Nev., and has been Clerk of the Supreme Court of that State.

In 1835, Capt. Helm brought his family to Illinois and settled in Jersey County, whence two years later he removed to Ogle County and entered Government land, locating upon it when it came into market. There he died in 1845, when sixty-eight years old. His wife survived him several years and attained to the advanced age of eighty-four years, passing away in Tama County, Iowa. This worthy couple were faithful members of the Congregational Church, and were highly esteemed wherever they were known.

It was during the residence of his parents in Schoharie County, N. Y., in 1829, that Clinton Helm was born. He was yet young when he accompanied his parents to Illinois, and his education was principally gained in the academy at Rockford. In this city, he commenced to read medicine under Dr. Lucius Clark, a skilled physician whose reputation was extended throughout the surrounding country. His studies were afterward prosecuted with diligence at Keokuk, where he completed the course of lectures.

The marriage of Dr. Helm united him with Miss Hannah S., daughter of David R. and Polly (Moore) Poyneer, of French descent. Her parents came West in middle life and settled in Iowa, where they spent their closing years and died when quite old. Their two sons still reside in the Hawkeye State. Edward being engaged as a grocer and Alfred, the present Lieutenant-Governor of the State. Mrs. Helm was highly educated in her native State, Connecticut, and was an efficient and successful teacher prior to her marriage. She is a lady of superior intelligence and active, benevolent spirit, and is a faithful member of the Second Congregational Church, to which the Doctor also belongs.

Dr. and Mrs. Helm are the parents of six children, as follows: Minnie E., wife of E. J. White, a real-estate agent of Chicago; Lucy G., who married Allen R. Rea, of Rockford, manager of Barnes Manufacturing Compuny; Clinton, who married Miss Jennie Sacket, of this city, and resides on Walnut Street in Rockford, where he follows the profession of dentistry; F. Eva, formerly a teacher but now at home, whose ability as an artist, and especially in the use of the air-brush in portrait work, has won the commendation of able crities; Harry S., superintendent of the flouring mills at Jamestown, N. Dak.; Willis C., who is in the Hale Elevator Works. The children are well educated, and Eva and Willis are college graduates.

During the late war, Dr. Helm was appointed by Gov. Yates Surgeon of the Ninety-second Illinois Infantry, September 4, 1862, and was with his regiment in all its marches and battles until September 20, 1863, at Chattanooga, Tenn. He was then taken prisoner by the rebels and east into Libby Prison, where he endured all the terrible experiences of that place for two months. He was exchanged November 24 and realizes that it was his early exchange alone which saved his life. During the last year of his service, he was on the staff of Gen. Killpatrick, when he was often exposed to the enemy's fire and stood close by his commanding officer, who received several wounds. June 21, 1865, he was honorably discharged and returned to his home with a war record of which his friends may justly be proud. Brave and courageous, no danger harmed him and he shrank from no peril however imminent it might seem. He is a member of G. L. Nevins Post No. 1, G. A. R. and is a stanch Republican in his political belief.

OHN BACKUS, deceased, was born in Catskill, N. Y., in 1814, and came of an old New England family of English descent. He learned the tinner's trade in New York City, and when a young man went to New Jersey. It was while residing in the Empire State that he married Miss Theodosia G. Patterson, who was born in Northumberland County, Pa. She lost her parents when very young and has no recollection of them. She was only seven years old when she was taken to Steuben County, N. Y., where she was carefully reared and educated. When quite young, she became a teacher, but gave up that profession on her marriage.

It was in 1854 that Mr. Backus and his wife came to the West and made a settlement in Winnebago County, Ill., where he secured a farm two miles from the city limits of Rockford. There he made his home for some years, but afterward went to Chicago, where he resided for six years. On his return to this county, he located in Rockford, where he continued to make his home until his death. He lived an upright and worthy life, true to every trust reposed in him, and was a consistent and faithful member of the Methodist Church. In politics, he was a supporter of Republican principles, but never sought or desired political preferment for himself. He passed away at his home on Grant Avenue in 1880, respected by all who knew him.

Mrs. Backus was a true helpmate to her husband. Since his death her life has been devoted to the promotion of all interests calculated to advance the general welfare. She has been conneeted with various religious movements and moral reforms, and is a prominent temperance worker, being President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of this city, which has a membership of two hundred. She has many times served as its delegate to the State conventions, and was twice a delegate to the National convention. The poor and needy find in her a true friend and, prompted by her benevolent spirit, she has given liberally of her means to worthy charities. The Court Street Methodist Church finds in her a faithful and active member, and her good works have made her well known and greatly beloved throughout this community.

Hon. Isaae Foote, great-grandfather of our subject, was the next in direct descent. He was born in Colchester, Conn., January 4, 1745, and in 1795 removed to New York, locating in what is now the town of Smyrna, Chenango County. He secured the organization of that county, while serving as a member of the State Legislature in 1798. He was appointed the first Judge of the Court of Common Pleas and General Sessions. In 1800, he was elected State Senator for four years. In 1806, he resigned his position of Judge and retired to private life. He died on his farm in the town of Smyrna, February 26, 1812, at the age of ninety-seven. His wife was Mary Kellogg, a daughter of Jonathan Kellogg. She was born May 30, 1768, and died at the age of eighty-two years. Their children reached the ages of fifty-three, seventy-five, ninety-two, ninety-three and ninety-eight years, respectively.

Isaac Foote, grandfather of our subject, was born in Stafford, Conn., April 18, 1776. Throughout his life he followed farming. He went to New York and was appointed agent for the sale of the Lawrence and Livingston lands. He served as Constable, Collector, Deputy Sheriff and Sheriff, and was a prominent citizen of the community. He spent his last years in the village of Norwich. In politics, he was a Whig, was a member of the Congregational Church and enjoyed the confidence and high esteem of the public. Justin Foote, father of the Doctor, was reared and educated in Smyrna, N. Y., and made farming his life work. While assisting in raising a building, he met his death by accident, June 19, 1834. His wife bore the maiden name of Irene Warner, and was a daughter of Samuel Warner. After the death of Mr. Foote, she became the wife of Horatio Seymour, Esq., of Alexander, N. Y. Her last days were spent in the home of our subject. She reared five children: Harriet E., who died at the age of twenty-one; Fannie Irene, who was a student in Alexander College, and died at the age of seventeen: Justin Hiel, who was engaged in merchandising in Belvidere and died at the age of twentyfour; and Samuel, who resides in Scranton, Pa.

The Doctor was the second in order of birth. He was reared in his native county, and acquired an academic education, after which he turned his attention to the study of medicine, and for six years was a student with Dr. Hyde, Professor of Surgery in the Syracuse Medical College. He graduated from the Buffalo Medical College in the Class of '5t, receiving his diploma from Millard Fillmore, then President of the United States and Chancellor of the college. He was engaged for a year with his preceptor and then went to Newark Valley, where he remained until 1854, when he came to Belvidere and has here been in active practice continuously since.

In July, 1853, Dr. Foote married Martha E. Up De Graff, who was born in Vestal, Broome County, N. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he has been an Elder since 1856. He has always been a worker in the Sabbath-school and was its Superintendent for ten years. Few men are more widely known in this community than Dr. Foote and none are held in higher regard, his upright life having won him the esteem of all with whom he has come in contact.

ILLIAM C. PRATT, dealer in fruits and confectioneries at No. 415 East State Street, Rockford, is a native of Vermont. He was born in Manchester, Remington County, in 1838, and is descended from an old family of the Green Mountain State. His father, Chester Pratt, was born in Marlboro, Vt., reared to manhood upon a farm and in New York wedded Miss Almira Collins, a native of Cambridge, N. Y. They settled in New York, where Mr. Pratt followed farming until his death, at the age of fifty-six years. His wife was afterward twice married and is now living in Brooklyn, Jackson County, Mich., at the age of seventy years. William is the eldest of four children; Warren W., a soldier in a Michigan regiment, was wounded and taken prisoner and died on the field of battle, while lying in a tent that had been prepared for him. He had been roped in a blanket and in its folds died. He was then only sixteen years of age. The sisters, Mrs. Betsy Hatch and Mrs. Julia Frances Shepherdson, reside in Windsor and Brattleboro, Vt., respectively.

Under the parental roof our subject spent the days of his boyhood, and when a young man emigrated Westward, locating in Rockford. Near this city he married Julia F. Spink, who was born and reared in the Empire State and came to Illinois in 1853, with her parents, Robert and Julia (Warner) Spink. The mother died at the age of eighty-two years, and the father is still hving at the age of eighty-three, and resides with Mrs. Pratt. They have been life-long members of the Methodist Church and are consistent Christian people, highly respected by all who know them. They have one son, Andrew C., who is now a farmer of Scott Township, Ogle County. Mrs. Pratt is their only living daughter. She is a cultured and intelligent lady, and for a number of years before her marriage engaged in teaching. She has become the mother of three children: Andrew A., who is engaged in business with his father; Robert W., who wedded Myrtie E. Lewis, of Rockford, and is also in his father's employ; and Fannie, who is at home.

On coming to this city in 1851, Mr. Pratt engaged in teaming for some time, afterwards sold goods for Mr. Leonard and later, as a partner of Mr. Burroughs, engaged in business on his own account in that line for two years. At length, he became a dealer in fruits and confectioneries, and for eighteen years has devoted his energies to that business. He carries fruits of all kinds and a large line of confectionery, ice-creams, ices, etc., which he serves in the most beautiful style. He does both a wholesale and retail business and is enjoying a large trade. He is a pleasant, genial gentleman, who has many friends in the community, and his wife is also held in high regard. They are both members of the Centennial Methodist Church, and Mr. Pratt belongs to Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M.

OBERT McCULLOCII, one of the early settlers of Winnebago County and a prominent citizen of Rockford Township, was born in Ross-shire, Scotland. His father, William, was born in the same shire, was a farmer by occupation, and spent his entire life in the land of his birth. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Mary Falconer. She was born in Ross-shire, the daughter of Robert and Kate (McNeil) Falconer, and spent her entire life in her native land.

When orphaned by the death of his father, our subject was but an infant, and was afterward cared for by his mother and an uncle, whom he assisted on the farm as soon as he was old enough. He remained in Scotland until 1847, then went to Liverpool and took passage on the sailing-vessel "Kalamathew," landing in New York and coming thence directly to Winnebago County, via the Hudson River to Albany and Eric Canal to Buffalo, then by the Lakes to Chicago, and from there overland with a team to Winnebago County. The journey from Liverpool occupied two months, and on reaching his destination he was in very limited circumstances.

For a time Mr. McCulloch made his home with his uncle, Robert Falconer, by whom he was employed by the day and month on the farm. He was very industrious, saved his earnings and finally was enabled to purchase the land included in his present farm. There were a few acres broken at the time and this constituted the entire improvement. He has erected a nice set of frame buildings, planted fruit, shade and ornamental trees, and otherwise improved the property, until it is considered one of the best places in the township.

In January, 1857, Mr. McCulloch was united in marriage with Ellen Thompson, who was born in Campbelltown, Argyleshire, Scotland. Her parents, John and Mary Thompson, were natives of Argyleshire, where the father was reared, married and died. The mother, who survived him a number of years, came to America in 1854 and spent her last years in Winnebago County. Mrs. McCulloch came to America with her two brothers, John and Robert Thompson, in the fall of 1853. They embarked at Greenock in the sailing-vessel "Charlotte Harrison," and landed in New York after a voyage of seven weeks and three days. They proceeded immediately to Marietta, Washington County, Ohio, arriving there July 7th, and remaining in that city until the spring of 1855, when they came to Winnebago County. Mr. and Mrs. McCulloch have seven children living, namely: John, Mary, Katie, Daniel, Hugh, Henry and Charles. The members of the family are highly esteemed socially and their position is among the most refined and intelligent in the community.

OHN G. EINOR, night engineer in the Nelson Knitting Factory and a stockholder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, resides at No. 128 Bremer Street, Rockford, where he has a comfortable home. He was born in West Gothland, Sweden, October 10, 1848, and was the first of the family to come to this country. His father, Charles Teck, died in 1880, at the age of fifty years. At the age of eighteen, he entered the service of his country, and was an efficient private in the regular army throughout his entire life. He fought for Alsace and Lorraine against Germany in 1848, and saw some considerable hard service, but was never wounded. His wife, Mrs. Johannah (Olson) Johnson, for Teck was the army name of her husband, came to this country in 1881, and now makes her home with her children in Chicago and Rockford. She is now seventytwo years of age, but the infirmities generally accompanying declining years rest lightly upon her. With the Lutheran Church she holds membership, as did Mr. Teek. Our subject is the only son in a family of four children. One sister, Matilda, is the wife of Aug. Johnson, a farmer of Sweden; Anna is the wife of Berhard Johnson, a dealer in ink in Chicago; and Minuie is the wife of Fritz Carlson, a shipping clerk for Marshall Field & Co., of that city.

We now take up the personal history of Mr. Einor, whose early life passed nneventfully in his native land. At the age of twenty-three years, in 1871, he first crossed the Atlantic to America, making a location in Putnam County, N. Y., where he was employed as an iron miner for some time. In that county, in 1873, he married Miss Jennie Lendgren, who was born and reared in West Gothland, Sweden, her birth occurring Febrnary 22, 1844. Her parents, Joseph and Kisa (Anderson) Lendgren, were also natives of the same locality, and there the father spent his entire life as a farmer. He was called to his final rest at the age of seventy-two years. His wife is still living at about the same age and makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Einor. In the family were six children, two of whom reside in Sweden: Christina, wife of Alfred Cling, a farmer; and Swan Lendgren, a shoemaker, who wedded Johanna Johnson. Those living in this country are Charles, who married Charlotta Anderson and is a shoemaker in the employ of Mr. Englemire, of this city; Sophia, wife of Joel Hoagland, a cabinet-maker with the Co-operative Furniture Company; and Amanda, wife of Godfred Lind.

After his marriage, having spent four and a half years in this country, Mr. Einor returned with his young bride to Sweden, where they made their home until 1880. That year witnessed their second arrival in this country. They located in Chicago, where Mr. Einor followed his trade for eighteen months, when he came to Rockford and has since been variously employed. He is an expert mechanic as well as engineer. As his financial resources have increased, he has made judicious investments and is now in comfortable circumstances. The Einor family numbers three interesting children, daughters: Amanda F., who is a graduate of the Rockford Business College and is now employed as a stenographer by the City Clerk; Anna E., who is also a graduate of that college; and Minnie F., the youngest. The parents are both members of the Lutheran Church, in the work of which they take an active interest, Mrs. Einor serving as a teacher in the Sunday-school. In politics, Mr. Einor is a Republican and a highly respected citizen.

OCKWOOD SAGER, M. D., a promising physician and surgeon located on the corner of Main and Morgan Streets, Rockford, has been engaged in active practice here since 1879, which year he graduated from Rush Medical College, Chicago. He was born at Belvidere, Boone County, in 1856, and is a son of Abraham Sager, who still resides at that place. The latter-named gentleman was born at Chester, N. Y., and is a son of Garret Sager, also a native of that State, who later came to Illinois and died in Belvidere when eighty-seven years of age. He was well-to-do financially and spent the last thirty years of his life retired from any active work. being a large land-owner in Boone County. He was very prominent in his locality in New York and was a member of the State Legislature, being elected on the Democratic ticket.

The grandmother of him of whom we write was born in Greene County, N. Y., near her husband's old home. She departed this life in Belvidere, shortly after his decease, at an advanced age. She came of a very prominent family in the Empire State, who are well known in political and social circles. The father of our subject grew to manhood in Greene County, N. Y., and was there married to Mary Dean, whose parents were farmers of that county, of which place they were natives for several generations back. Soon after his marriage Abraham Sager came to Illinois and settled at Belvidere, where the father was in business for a number of years. He also became the proprietor of a large landed estate, upon which he made his home for six or seven years on account of failing health.

Dr. Sager is the eldest of the three children comprising the parental family. His brother William is a member of the firm of Sager & Baker, located at No. 54 North Clinton Street, Chicago, where they do a large wholesale business in hardware and are also the Western branch for the Co-operative Stove Company of Cleveland. His sister May makes her home with her parents in Belvidere. The original of this sketch was married, in Rockford, to Miss Agnes Dow, who was born in this city in 1862. She received an excellent education in the city and High Schools and is a daughter of Charles and Mary Dow, natives of Scotland, who, on coming to America, located on a farm not far from Rockford. There the father improved a splendid estate and lived until his decease, which was the result of typhoid fever when in middle life. The home farm is now owned by the eldest son, Charles Dow. The mother after the death of her husband came to Rockford and resided until her decease, in 1887, after having attained to the age of lifty-nine years. Mrs. Sager is one of a family of ten children, four sons and six daughters.

In his political relations, our subject is a Republican, and, socially, is identified with the Chapter Lodge No. 24, F. & A. M., and also the Blue Lodge of the Fifth Ward. He is a member of the Encampment and Canton of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and his knowledge and skill in medical science and all matters pertaining to the health of the body have given him an assured position among the intelligent and learned physicians of the State. He is regarded with the highest respect, not only throughout the community where his later years have been spent, but in other places where he has an extended acquaintance.

ORATIO STONE, President of the Roekford Hospital Association, has spent his life in doing good to others, and in upholding the rights of all. He is a man of large means and of a charitable disposition, and is known as the largest contributor to the hospital and Rockford Seminary. As a prominent citizen of Roekford, his life sketch and the accompanying portrait will be of especial interest.

Horatio Stone was born in the town of Framingham, Middlesex County, Mass., May 27, 1813. His father, Abner Stone, was also a native of that town and State, where the grandfather of our subject, who also bore the name of Abner Stone, was born and reared to agricultural pursuits. The latternamed gentleman was the proprietor of a flour and sawmill at Saxonville which he operated in connection with his farm pursuits, his home being in that place until his death.

The first ancestor of our subject in America emigrated from England in 1635, and located in Cambridge, Mass. He was accompanied hither by his son John, they buying land of the Indians in Framingham, where they erected a saw and flour mill. The son of John Stone was named Daniel, and was born in 1644. He also had a son named John. Following him the line of descent is traced as follows: Daniel, born in 1707; Abner in 1751; Abner, Jr., in 1777; and Horatio in 1813. Five of the above-named were born, lived and died in Framingham. The history of Framingham, published by the Rev. Josiah H. Temple in 1887, contains the fac-simile of the signatures of Indians to a deed bearing the date of May 15, 1656. The paternal grandmother of our subject, whose maiden name was Persis Moore, was born in Boston, Mass., and died in Framingham, that State.

The original of this sketch was reared and educated in his native township, and, on attaining his sixteenth year, engaged as clerk in a general store in Framingham. Four years later, he succeeded his brother in the ownership of the store, and continued in that line of business very successfully for seven years. He then removed to Boston and established a retail grocery store, later engaging in the wholesale trade. In 1872–73, he made another removal, this time making his home in Concord, Mass., where he led a retired life until 1881, at which date he came to Rockford, which has since been his abiding-place.

Miss Eliza A. Heald, who was born in Concord, Mass., in 1807, became the wife of our subject in 1837. She was the daughter of Hon. Thomas Heald, who was born in New Ipswich, N. H. He was a finely educated gentleman, a graduate of Dartmouth College, and practiced law in Concord, Mass. Several years prior to the outbreak of the Civil War, he moved to Alabama, where he was appointed Associate Judge of the Supreme Court of that State and there spent the remaining years of his life. His wife, Elizabeth (Lock) Heald, was born in Hopkinton, Mass., and departed this life in New Ipswich, N. H.

In their religious connections, Mr. and Mrs. Stone were members of the Central Congregational Church in Boston, and, on coming to Rockford, united with the Second Congregational Clurch. Their wedded life was one of mutual happiness and helpfulness, until terminated by the death of Mrs. Stone, in February, 1881. Mr. Stone has always been distinguished for prudence, foresight and discretion in business affairs. His sense of honor is great, and his name is used as a synonym for justice and disinterestedness of purpose. He enjoys the respect of all who know him and has a large number of warm, personal friends.

AMUEL DERSTINE, now living retired at No. 1001 South Main Street, Rockford, is enjoying the fruits of his early toil and industry. He is an old resident of this city, having made his advent here in 1856, and at once entered the employ of Emerson Tallcott & Co., founders, with whom he remained for twenty-seven years, his good work and tidelity to his employers making him a most desirable man.

Mr. Derstine was born near Harrisburg, Dauphin County, Pa., November 30, 1829, and is the son of Michael Derstine, also a native of that place. The family came of good old Pennsylvania Dutch stock and were noted for their longevity. Michael Derstine learned the trade of a blacksmith in his native State, operating an establishment of his own for many years. Later, he went to Bellefonte, that State, and was employed in a stove factory, dying in 1816, when lifty-two years of age. He had been a hard-working, industrious man and was well respected in the community. In religious matters, he was a member of the Dutch Reformed Church, and voted the Whig ticket in politics.

The parents of our subject were married in Dauphin County, Pa., the maiden name of the mother being Margaret Schaffer. She was a native of that county, of Dutch parents, and was a true helpmate to her husband in all his undertakings. She departed this life in Bellefonte, Pa., in 1879, when in her seventieth year. Like her husband, she was a member of the Dutch Reformed Church. The father of our subject had a local reputation as a musician and on the outbreak of the War of 1812, he joined a company as a musician but, being only fifteen or sixteen years old, his father induced him to return home.

He of whom we write is the first son and second child of the six children comprising the parental household, all of whom are living, with the exception of the eldest. Samuel, on attaining mature years, was married in Bellefonte, Pa., to Miss Susan Fye, who was born in Centre County, that State. in 1828. Mrs. Derstine departed this life at her home in Rockford, April 19, 1885, firm in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which she was an active member. She had formerly been connected, however, with the Lutheran denomination in Pennsylvania. The six children born to our subject and his wife are: Michael L., who died when four years of age, and Charles II., deceased when one year old; Mary, the wife of John Lindsay, a grocery dealer, in this city; David W., a mechanic, makes his home with his father and married Miss Fannie Higbee, who is a native of this county; Ellen R. is the wife of H. B. Bussing, an implement manufacturer; Minnie C. is the wife of P. II. Barrett, who keeps a first-class restaurant on State Street. Mr. Derstine, in politics, votes with the Republican party.

RS. LOUISA BLACKINTON. In narrating the lives of the many prominent citizens of Winnebago County, we find no one more worthy of mention than Mrs. Louisa Blackinton, who has been a resident of the county since 1845, when she came here with her parents. They came from the East, and after arriving in this county, settled in Roscoe, where the mother died, in 1878, at the age of seventy-two and the father in 1888, when eighty years of age. They left two sons and three daughters.

Mrs. Blackinton was born in New York, in June, 1832, and her maiden name was Louisa Garlick. After emigrating to Illinois with her parents, she was married to Henry II. Blackinton, a native of Ohio, born in November, 1822. When a young man, or in 1843, Mr. Blackinton and his parents, Jesse and Olive (Noble) Blackinton, who were natives of New England, where the family manufactured cloth, came by boat to Chicago and then with teams made their way to Winnebago County, where Mr. and Mrs. Blackinton had three older sons living. These sons had located in the county in 1836 and had taken up land, but as they had been unfortunate in land title in Ohio, where they had resided for some time after leaving the East, they had very little means to assist them along after reaching this State. The present home of Mrs. Blackinton was the original home of her husband in Illinois, and there were also forty acres of land in Harlem Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry II. Blackinton became the parents of five children, one daughter, Lydia, having died when four years of age. Those living are: Harriet A., now the wife of Charles Kerr; James II., who lost a part of his right hand in the Rockford Burial Case Factory and has since been engaged in bee culture, for which he has a decided taste; Fred C., at home with his mother, manages the farm, and Ruby L. is the wife of William Lovesee, who is a substantial farmer in the township.

Mrs. Blackinton has five grandchildren. Her husband died on the 20th of June, 1886, of cancer of the stomach, when about sixty-four years of age. He was prominently identified with the public affairs of the county, and was universally esteemed for his many excellent qualities of mind and heart. He held the office of Supervisor two terms, Assessor four years and was School Trustee and Director, constantly, for many years. In all the positions of trust and responsibility held by Mr. Blackinton, he displayed excellent judgment and unusual ability in discharging the duties of the same. In politics, he advocated the principles of the Republican party and was an active worker for his party. In religion, he was a Methodist, being an official member of that church many years, and he was a liberal supporter and contributor to all enterprises worthy of patronage. He left his widow a good home and a fair competency. She has also been an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for years and is a lady well known and esteemed in the community. She is possessed of much business ability, and, with her youngest son, is managing the home place.

RUMAN L. CLEVELAND, who is engaged in general farming and also carries on the dairy business on section 1, New Milford Township, Winnebago County, has the honor of being a native of this State. He was born in August, 1854, and is a son of Eli T. and Corrinna (Lewis) Cleveland. The mother was born in Orangeville, N. Y., March 9, 1822, and was a daughter of Truman Lewis, a native of New Hartford, Conn., who was born November 5, 1784, and died in Warsaw, Ill., September 15, 1865, at the age of eighty-one years. He married Lucy Porter, who was born March 26, 1795, and was a daughter of Seth and Sarah (Cowles) Porter. She was ealled to her final rest in Rockford, December 13, 1866, at the age of seventy-one years.

The parents of our subject were married in Weathersfield, N. Y., October 1, 1851, and in the spring of the following year emigrated Westward, casting their lot with the early settlers of Winnebago County. The father had previously been in Illinois, and for a year had followed farming in Cherry Valley Township. He now bought a quartersection of land in Seward Township, where he made his home for eighteen years. There his wife departed this life, leaving two sons and two daughters: Almon M., a resident of Storm Lake, Iowa; Truman, of this sketch; Lucy A., wife of A. T. Van Alstine, of Chicago; and Laura A., wife of W. L. Gregory, of Rockford. Mr. Cleveland afterward rented his land and removed to Rockford with his children in the spring of 1878. He built a home on Seminary Street and engaged in the hardware business on West State Street for some time, but is now living a retired life.

Under the parental roof our subject was reared to manhood, and his educational advantages were those afforded by the common schools. He was married in his present home on the 15th of March, 1876, to Miss Ida May Nichols, daughter of Philander C. and Sarah F. (Godbe) Nichols. Her father was born in Casenovia, N. Y., February 18, 1818, and her mother in Dighton, Mass., March 15, 1816. They were married in Bristol, N. Y., May 25, 1813, and removed to Illinois in 1849. Six years later, Mr. Nichols purchased and located upon a farm of forty acres, the present home of our subject. His death occurred December 22, 1873, at the age of fifty-five years, and his wife passed away August 13, 1890, in the seventy-fifth year of her age. Both were members of the Centermal Methodist Church, and the father long served as a School Director. They had lost one daughter, Alice Amelia, who died July 30, 1851, at the age of five years.

Mrs. Cleveland is the only surviving child. She was born and reared in the house which is still her home, and acquired a good education, attending the Seminary of Rockford. By her marriage she has a little son, Leroy Nichols, who was born March 25, 1881. The parents are both members of the Centennial Methodist Church, and in social circles rank high.

The Cleveland farm comprises one hundred and fifty acres of land under a high state of cultivation and well improved. Upon it our subject has erected good buildings and added all the accessories of a model farm. In connection with general farming, he keeps sixteen cows for dairy purposes, and sells the milk to Rockford dealers. In polities, he votes with the Republican party, but has never been an office-seeker, preferring to devote his entire time and attention to his business, in which he has met with signal success.

ENSON KLUMPH. A notable example of the enterprise, industry and self-reliance of the early Illinois pioneer, is furnished by the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch and who is one of the octogenarian eitizens of Boone County. During the early days of its settlement, he came hither and established a home in LeRoy Township, where he has lived and labored for almost a half century. He has done excellent service in subduing the wilderness and bringing it into its present splendid condition, socially and morally.

A native of Warren, Herkimer County, N. Y., Mr. Klumph was born November 30, 1804, the son of Jacob and Catherine (Bowhall) Klumph. The family of which he is a member trace their ancestry to Germany, where one Thomas Klumph was born and reared. He came to America prior to the Revolutionary War, as a soldier in the French army, and for a long time was held as prisoner of war by the Indians. Finally, he was ransomed by Gov. Provost, of Canada, and afterward became agent and secretary for that famous gentleman, who, as a token of appreciation for his valuable services in his behalf, presented him with a farm near Otsego Lake, Otsego County, N. Y. There he died at the age of four-score and nine. His wife, whose maiden name was Peggy Davis, was a school teacher in Albany in the early days of its history.

During the lifetime of Grandfather Klumph, some Frenchmen went out hunting, and returned to the camp with some of the flesh of an Indian horse, which they called "buffalo" meat, and from that incident the name of the city of Buffalo originated. The father of our subject, Jacob Klumph, was a farmer in Chautauqua County, N. Y., where he died at an advanced age. His wife survived many years and passed away in Le Roy Township in 1878. Their children numbered six, four of whom came to Illinois—Joseph, Augustus and Alfred coming in 1840-42 and our subject in 1835.

In Chautauqua County, N. Y., Mr. Klumph was united in marriage with Miss Chloe Hutchins of that county, and the young couple settled in the Empire State, where three children were born to them. Their journey to Illinois was made by steamer to Chicago and thence overland to Boone County, where a tract of land was purchased from the Government, consisting of eighty acres. Mr. Klumph still retains in his possession the parchment deed he then secured. The most of his active life has been passed in farming, although for about five years he was employed in a mill near Fredoma, N. Y.

Mr. Klumph was bereaved in 1873 by the death of his wife at their home in LeRoy Township, when sixty-three years old. Their children were: Caroline, who married Renben Miller, and died leaving six children; Alexander, a farmer near the old homestead, married Elizabeth Cromer, a native of Ohio, and they have six children; and Clarinda, who cares for her father in his old age and tenderly ministers to his comfort. Alexander was one of the valiant boys in blue, who enlisted in the service of his country during the Civil War. He was a member of Company K, Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, Capt. A. Schellenger commanding.

R. ROBERT POLK LANE, deceased, was one of Rockford's most prominent citizens, and this work would be incomplete without his portrait and life sketch. He was born in Hopewell, Iron Works, Bedford County, Pa., February 21, 1818, and came of English ancestry, being a descendant of a highly respected family which was established in America prior to the Revolutionary War. The progenitor of the family in the United States was William Lane, who, on coming to this country, purchased land on which the greater part of Philadelphia is now located, and made a fortune of probably $2,000,000. He came from England. The next in line was James Lane. who grew to manhood in Pennsylvania and succeeded to the business established by his father, the Hopewell Iron Works. He afterward met with reverses, and this loss greatly affected our subject.

Dr. Lane was only thirteen years old when his father lost his property. He was forced to begin life for himself. When a young man, he went to Washington, Pa., where he began the study of medicine under his mother's brother, Dr. John Wishard, of Edinburgh, Scotland. At length, after thorough preparation, he completed the course and entered upon a successful practice in Washington, where he continued to reside until the year 1851, when, with his wife and children, he came to Rockford, and from that time until his death was widely known as one of the leading and most prominent business men of the city. He devoted his first years almost entirely to the practice of medicine, and with the competence acquired thereby made investments in real estate in this and Ogle Counties. He became owner of eleven hundred aeres of valuable and highly improved land, which is yet in the possession of the family.

The Doctor was married, in Zanesville, Ohio, to Miss Mary Brice, who was born and reared in Pennsylvania and is descended from English ancestry. She is an intimate friend of James G. Blaine. Her education was acquired in a female college in Ohio, and she is a cultured and refined lady. Since her husband's death, she has resided at different times in Rockford and Chicago. She holds membership with the Episcopal Church, and her friends throughout this community are many. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Lane were born three children: James B., now living in Rochelle; Nannie L., wife of R. L. Davis, who resides at No. 185 Dearborn Avenue, Chicago, and is an ex-director and a member of the Board of Trade of that city; and W. Stewart, who resides in the Rockford home which was built by his father some years ago. It is located at No. 508 North Church Street, and is one of the largest residences of the city. Stewart also has the management and is lessee of the eleven hundred acres of land in Ogle County which his father purchased. He is a man of good business ability, enterprising and successful, and is a worthy son of his honored father.

Probably no man in Rockford was more prominently connected with her business interests than Dr. Lane. He was one of the organizers of the Second National Bank of Rockford in 1861; was one of its largest stockholders and President of the bank from 1864 to 1881, continuously, when he resigned to accept the presidency of the Rockford Insurance Company. Probably the most important work in his life, however, was the organization of the Rockford Water Power Company in 1853. He became its President and gave his personal attention to the construction of the dam across the river. In 1866, he was made Treasurer of the Rockford Insurance Company, and later became its President and Manager. He was also a heavy stockholder in the Graham Cotton Mills, which are still in active operation, and, with others, he was instrumental in securing the establishment of the J. P. Manny Manufacturing Company at this place. In company with G. A. Sanford, he established the gas works, and was connected with many other enterprises, giving his support to everything calculated to benefit the community. He was truly a public-spirited and progressive citizen, and was well fitted to be a leader among the people.

In politics, the Doctor was a stalwart Republican and during the late war was President of the Union League Club of Rockford, a society of most pronounced Unionists. He was also an active worker in the Episcopal Church, of which he was Senior Warden for forty years. His life was indeed a busy and useful one, devoted to the interests of the public, and friends were almost numberless. He was a man of fine personal presence and of remarkable suavity. He had a gentleness and tenderness of manner and a sympathy with the personal troubles of others that won him the greatest confidence of his fellow-citizens. After several years of sickness and some months of intense suffering, which he bore without a murmur, he passed away a little before noon on the 7th of March, 1891. His fellow-townsmen had learned to love him, and his loss to the community will long be felt and his memory revered for years to come.

ENRY C. SHEDD is a member of the firm of Putnam & Shedd, dealers in furniture, who carry an elegant line of goods and have their place of business located at No. 821 South Main Street and No. 306 Morgan Street, the latter building being their warehouse and repair shop. Mr. Shedd became a partner of Mr. Putnam in March, 1891, having been four years prior to that time foreman of the Union Foundry, of which enterprise he was one of the twelve stockholders and the original promoter. He disposed of his interest in that line on engaging in his present work, since which time he has been more than ordinarily successful.

Mr. Sheed of this sketch came to Rockford in 1856, when a youth of sixteen years, and here learned the trade of a molder in the shops of Emerson, Talcott & Co., with whom he was employed until within a few years ago. He has taken an active part in all matters that pertain to the upbuilding of the city, and although taking no part in political affairs as regards office holding, yet always easts his vote at elections. Our subject came to this county from Canada, where he passed the years of his early life. He was born in Warsaw, Wyoming County, N. Y., June 19, 1810, and is the son of David Shedd, a native of Vermont. The father was a journeyman molder, and removed with our subject to Pittsburg, Pa., where he remained for a time, and then made his home in Warsaw, N. Y., where he was engaged in the same line of work. Mr. Shedd then went to Canada, and in Galt, Province of Ontario, acted as foreman for four years of the Fisher & Lutz Foundry. He, however, came to Rockford in 1856, where, as before stated, he was employed in the Emerson, Talcott Company. After leaving their shops, the father of our subject became a workman in the foundry of F. H. Manney, and was thus employed until 1877, when he retired from active work of any kind and departed this life at his home in Rockford, in 1880, at the advanced age of seventy-one years. In his political relations he voted in early life the Whig ticket and on the organization of the Republican party joined its ranks. His wife, who survives him, is seventyfive years of age. Her maiden name was Vallonia Putnam, her birth occurring in the Empire State, and she is of Hungarian descent. She is quite a physician and has an extended reputation in this county. She is a Spiritualist in belief, which faith was also held by her husband.

Henry C. Shedd of this sketch, and Mrs. Frank Trumbull of this city, are the only members of the parental family living. A sister, Mrs. Helen Proctor, is now deceased. Our subject was married first in Eric County, N. Y., to Miss Elizabeth Bigelow; she died in Rockford April 24, 1873, and her only child, Helen, died June 8, of that year, when six weeks old. The present wife of our subject bore the maiden name of Ida Crawford, a native of Eric County, N. Y.

SCAR NELSON, Vice-president and general Superintendent of the Forest City Knitting Company of Rockford, has the honor of being a native citizen of this place. He was born June 16, 1860, and is the third son of John Nelson, late one of the most prominent men of Rockford. In the family are five sons and one daughter: William, who is represented elsewhere in this work; Frithiof, who is Secretary and Treasurer of the Forest City Knitting Company, and a Director and stockholder of the Nelson Knitting Company, the Hotel Company, the Manufacturers' National Bank, and other enterprises; J. Frank, who is also a stockholder in most of those concerns, and Anna. The two youngest sons and Anna reside at home with their widowed mother.

Our subject acquired a good education in the eity schools and the Business College of Rockford, and since attaining to man's estate has been prominently connected with the business industries of the city. As before stated, he is Vice-president and general Superintendent of the Forest City Knitting Company, one of the leading enterprises in the east side. The factory is located on Catherine Street and Nelson Boulevard and began operations in January, 1892. They employ between two hundred and three hundred hands and make a fine grade of hosiery, the best in the market. Already they have been forced to work at night in order to supply the demand, which is already large and constantly increasing. Mr. Nelson is also a stockholder in the Nelson Knitting Company, a stockholder and Director in the Rockford Mitten and Hosiery Company and a stockholder of the Nelson Hotel Building.

In Rockford, Mr. Nelson was united in marriage with Miss Emma Nelson, who was born in Minnesota, and was there reared and educated. Her parents are both now deceased. They were natives of Sweden and after their marriage came to this country, locating in Minnesota. Unto our subject and his wife have been born one son, John A. They have a beautiful and commodious home recently erected at No.702 Seminary Street-the finest residence on the east side. Mrs. Nelson is a member of the First Lutheran Church. Mr. Nelson is a Thirty-second Degree Mason. He belongs to the Commandery of Rockford, the Consistory of Freeport and the Shrine of Chicago. In politics, he is a stalwart Republican but has never sought or desired public office, preferring to devote his entire time and attention to his business interests. He is an energetic and progressive business man and the success with which he has already met argues well for the future. He carries forward to a successful completion whatever he undertakes, and the Forest City Knitting Company, of which he is now at the head, indicates his excellent ability as a manager.

ETER PETERSON. The entire life of Mr. Peterson has been one unmarked by any unusual occurrence outside of the chosen channels to which he has so diligently and attentively given his time and attention.

Born in central Norway in August, 1813, he began to learn the shoemaker trade when fifteen years of age, and followed this in his native country until 1871, when he crossed the ocean to America, being the first of his family to undertake the long voyage. He landed at Quebec, Canada, but shortly afterward came to the States and to Rockford. Hl. In this city he has resided ever since, with the exception of a few years spent in Oregon, whither he went for his health, and he is classed among the city's hardworking and esteemed citizens.

Shortly after locating in Rockford, Mr. Peterson invested in property there and this has increased in value until it is now worth many thousand dollars. He is also the owner of stock in different concerns in the city and has ever been public-spirited and enterprising. He owns a comfortable residence at No. 310 South Main Street.

He was married in Norway to Miss Ellen Anderson, who was born and reared in the same neighborhood as her husband, and whose parents passed their entire lives there. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Peterson. Both are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Peterson is identified with the Republican party in polities.

Our subject has one brother, Henry Peterson, who is now in this country, and an upholsterer in Chicago. He is single. A sister, Hannah, now resides in South Rockford. The parents passed their entire lives in Norway and died when about sixty years of age. The father, Peter Larson, followed agricultural pursuits for a livelihood. He and his worthy companion both held membership in the Lutheran Church.

RS. HORACE COLE. It can not be expected in a work of this kind, where but brief biographical sketches of prominent citizens of the county are mentioned, that justice can be done this much esteemed and venerable lady, and yet she has been identified with the county so long, and her name is so familiar to all, that it is no more than just to dwell upon her career, not as empty words of praise, but the plain statement of still plainer truth.

Mrs. Cole was born in Litchfield County, Conn., on the 27th of May, 1795, and was the daughter of Joseph and Dianthy (Mott) Frisby, both Connecticut people and farmers. Her lather died in Vernon, N. Y., in his ninetieth year. He was twice married and became the father of three children by his first union and five by his second, the latter marriage being to the mother of Mrs. Cole. Mrs. Frisby remained a widow thirty-six years, and with her daughter, Mrs. Cole, came West from Erie County, Pa. The latter was married in Westmoreland, N. Y., March 11, 1813. to Mr. Horace Cole, who was a weaver, but never followed his trade after his marriage. He was in the War of 1812, was Orderly Sergeant, and was in the battle of Sackett's Harbor. After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Cole resided for fourteen years at Prattsburgh, N. Y., but moved from there to Chantanqua County, and thence to Eric County, Pa. Later, or in 1846, they came to Roscoe, resided in the village for two years, and then settled on the farm of one hundred and forty acres which has been Mrs. Cole's home ever since. Her husband passed away in May, 1862, when about seventy years of age. He had never had a strong constitution, but was well educated and thoroughly posted on all subjects. In his younger days he had been a Whig in politics, but later he became a stanch Republican. In his religious views he was a Congregationalist, and was an active official of that church.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole became the parents of eleven children, five of whom are now living: Abigail, now the widow of Amos Tuttle, resides in Roscoe; Hiram B., a farmer in New Milford Township; Seth B., a lawyer and for many years a judge in New York, now resides on the Hudson River; Edwin D., a single man, owns the home place and eares for his mother, and Sarah C. is now Mrs. W. H. Bernard, her husband a Congregational minister of Miles, lowa. The children deceased are an infant daughter, unnamed: William died at the age of five years. Theodore G. died at Magnolia, Wis., January 20 1857, when thirty-three years of age. He was a missionary to Africa, going to Liberia, and thence to the Congo Country Three years later, he returned, the climate being too severe for him, and died with an abcess on the liver. His mission was successful, but cost his life. He left a widow who had accompanied him to Africa. Another daughter of Mrs. Cole, Nancy, aged seventeen years, returned to Prattsburgh to attend school under her brother, Seth B. Cole, who was Principal of that Academy for fourteen years, and there died.

Edwin D. Cole, who is residing on the home place as above mentioned, is one of the representative agriculturists of the county, and a man of much energy and determination. He cared for his parents, and assumed the management and responsibility of carrying on the farm at the age of sixteen. He is a faithful and tender son and a man much esteemed in the community. During the first ten years of his experience on the farm, he had to market his crops at Chicago and Milwaukee, and later at Belvidere, going with teams, and often selling his wheat (the principal erop for market) for fifty cents per bushel. The father had entered forty acres of this one hundred and forty acres, and purchased the balance at $4.25 per aere. Forty acres are in timber, but the remainder is under cultivation. Mr. Cole makes no specialty of any certain branch of farm work, but is a good general farmer, raising such stock as hogs, cattle and horses. He would try and raise sheep were it not for the depredations of the wolves, which are very numerous yet in that county. His venerable mother is a grand old lady, and, though feeble in body, is still bright in mind, remembering distinctly many interesting events that have occurred in her long pilgrimage. On the 27th of May, 1892, she was ninety-seven years old.

S. HULSE. In reviewing the various branches of industrial and commercial en-terprise in the city of Rockford, it is our desire to mention in this volume only those houses which are thoroughly representative in the particular line of business in which they are engaged. In following out this intention, we know of no enterprise of the city more worthy of special mention than that of the J. S. Hulse Hardware Co., organized in January, 1890, with Guy P. Cobb, President. This representative establishment is located at No. 117 South Main Street, and a complete stock of all kinds of heavy and light hardware is carried. The premises cover a ground area of 22x130 feet, and are well arranged for the line of business conducted. Of the magnitude, variety and character of the stock carried, it would be impossible to speak too highly. In every department, the facilities of the house are of the highest character for enabling it to offer the best quality of goods to the public at the lowest prices.

Mr. Hulse, who is the Secretary and Treasurer of this vast enterprise, and a man well qualified for that responsible position, is a native of Winnebago County, Ill., born in Winnebago Township, on the 12th of October, 1846. He was educated in his native county, and from 1865 until 1870 he was in the hardware business in Chicago. He subsequently engaged in the same business in Pecatonica, this county, continued this for twelve years, and then had all his stock destroyed by fire. Since then he has been a resident of Rockford, and one of its most successful and prosperous business men.

His father, Henry Hulse, was born near Springfield, Clarke County, Ohio, in 1818, and was of German descent, his father, Henry Hulse, Sr., being a native of Germany. The senior Henry Hulse, with a brother, John, left their native land for America when young men, and early in the present century. They resided for some time in New York State, but subsequently Henry Hulse removed to Clarke County, Ohio, and from there with his wife and family to Illinois early in the '30s. The trip was made overland with teams, when the country was sparsely settled, and they located on Government land in Winnebago Township. This family was among the very first to settle in the county west of Rockford, and there were very few settlers between that city and Belvidere, in fact, there were very few between that city and Chicago, while westward from the Rock River the country was wild and unbroken. A cousin of our subject, John Elliott, was the first white child born in the county. He is now deceased, but lived to mature years, served through a part of the Rebellion, and was a married man. His death occurred in the army, while a member of the Seventh Illinois Cavalry, Our subject's grandfather, Henry Hulse, Sr., died at his old home in Pecatonica Township, when sixty-eight years of age, and was a man whose character was above reproach. He was the father of fifteen children, all of whom he lived to see grow up and marry. One son and four daughters are still living. He had been married four times, and his last wife died in this county.

Henry Hulse, Jr., was trained to farm life at an early age, and when still a single man eame with his family to Hlinois. His mother, whose maiden name was Priscilla Sweet, and who was born and reared in the Buckeye State, died there when in the prime of life. Henry was married, in Hlinois, to Miss Susan Glynn, who was a native of the Emerald Isle, but who came to the United States and Winnebago County, Ill., when young. Following their marriage, Henry Hulse, Jr., and wife settled on a farm in Pecatonica Township, resided there for a number of years, and after the birth of all their children, took a trip West. Mr. Hulse died in Dubuque, Iowa, in 1849, when forty-one years of age. He was a good citizen, and a man well respected. He was a Whig in his political principles. The wife and mother is now Mrs. James Turner, of Maple Grove, S. Dak., and although seventy-eight years of age, enjoys perfect health. Her husband is a retired farmer.

Our subject is the youngest of three children now living. The eldest child, Kate C., married Zeno Campbell, an old settler and farmer of Pecatonica Township. Another sister, Priscilla, married Henry Akester, a business man of Dexter, Iowa. After our subject reached man's estate, but before he became of age (1863), he enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Illinois Infantry, Company E, under Col. McChesney and Capt. H. J. Milligan, and was out nearly two years. He was with the Army of the West, chiefly with his regiment after Gen. Forest, and escaped unhurt. Returning to Illinois, he has since been actively engaged in the hardware business, with which he is thoroughly familiar. He is a prominent member of the G. L. Nevins Post No. 1, G. A. R., but was formerly of Ellis Post, Pecatonica, No. 320, G. A. R. being Adjutant of the Post for a number of years. He takes a leading part in political affairs, and is a strong advocate of the principles of the Republican party. While a resident of Pecatonica, he generally headed the Republican delegation from his town and township, and was an active worker for his party.

He was married, in this county, to Miss M. Nettie Kendrick, who was one of New Hampshire's daughters, and who came West to this county when a small girl. Her people were early settlers and prominent people of Winnebago County, and her father, Henry Kendrick, is now retired, and a resident of the West. He is an own cousin of President Franklin Pierce.

Mr. and Mrs. Hulse are prominent and active young people of this city, and believe in progress and development, taking a deep interest in all movements that tend to build up the city. They are the parents of two children: Blanche E., a book-keeper for her father, and the wife of J. F. Huffman, who is a stockholder and Director for the Hulse Hardware Company, resides at a nice home on State Street; and Nina E. is a refined, intelligent young lady, and resides at home. Both are well educated.

XLVESTER TRIPP for many years was busily engaged in agricultural pursuits, but is now living a retired life at his pleasant home in Belvidere. He was born in the village of Worle, Somerset County, England, October 16, 1816. The paternal grandfather, John Tripp, spent his entire life in that locality, and the maternal grandparents, Richard and Elizabeth (Batty) Laney, lived in the same county. John Tripp, the father of our subject, was born and reared in Somersetshire, and throughout life followed the occupation of farming in pursuit of fortune. He married Betsy Laney, who, like her husband, never left her native land. They had a family of eleven children, of whom the following came to America: Eliza, Louisa, Harriet, Sidney, Edwin L. and Sylvester.

The subject of this sketch was reared to manhood upon his father's farm, no event of special importance occurring during his childhood. On attaining his majority, he was married, May 7, 1841, to Sarah Rowles, a native of Somersetshire, England, and a daughter of Joseph and Sarah Rowles. She had one sister, who came to America, Mary, who wedded Henry Griffin, and died at their home in Rogers Park, Ill. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Tripp were born two children. Edward, the son, married Hattie Manchester and has two sons, Charles and Stephen. Ellen became the wife of Edgar Teeple, and is the mother of two daughters: Sarah and Blanche L. She also lost one child, Jessie, who died at the age of two and a half years.

The year 1852 witnessed the emigration of Mr. Tripp and his family to America. He sailed from Bristol in April of that year and after a voyage of thirty-seven days landed at New York, from whence he came directly to Illinois, locating in what is now Belvidere Township, Boone County. He purchased a tract of partially improved land and gave his attention exclusively to agricultural pursuits until 1885, when he sold his farm and came to Belvidere, where he has since lived a retired life. Himself and wife are members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Tripp has been a member of that church since childhood, and his parents before him. When he was fifteen years old he was confirmed by the Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells to the Episcopal Church. In politics, Mr. Tripp is a Republican. Fair and honest in all his business dealings, his industrious and persevering efforts were rewarded with prosperity, and he is now enjoying a comfortable competence.

ILLET S. HAIGHT, who is engaged in farming on section 28, New Milford Township, Winnebago County, was born in Westchester County, N. Y., May 3, 1824, and is descended from a family of English origin. His grandparents, Samuel and Phæbe (Young) Haight, were born and reared in the same county and were members of the Society of Friends. His parents, Moses and Hannah (Sutton) Haight, were natives of the same locality.

In 1841, the father purchased and with his family removed to a farm of one hundred and forty acres near Mt. Morris, where he resided until the autumn of 1852, when he came to New Milford Township, this county, and purchased one hundred and sixty acres of arable land and thirty acres of timber land. He bought it at $16.50 per acre, but it is now worth $100. His death occurred in 1858, at the age of sixty-four years. He left a widow and four sons: Willet and Stephen L., twins, Elias and Samuel E. Stephen died in New Milford Township, in May, 1882, at the age of lifty-eight years, leaving a wife and four children. His wife survived him five years. Elias died September 4, 1886, at the age of fifty-four years in Portland, Ore., and his remains were brought back to New Milford for burial. His wife and two sons are still living. The parents of our subject were well-informed people, gave their children good educational advantages and reared them to habits of industry and sobriety. Not one of the sons ever used intoxicants or profane language. Two were church members and were Republicans in politics.

Mr. Haight was married on a farm adjoining his present home, April 7, 1857, his union being with Miss Agnes, daughter of Samuel and Adelia (Austin) Ramsey. They began their domestic life on the old homestead, a mile north of New Milford, and a year later rented the Ramsey farm, which Mr. Haight operated until August 12, 1862, when he enlisted for the late war in Company A, Twelfth Illinois Cavalry. He participated in a number of important engagements and on the first day of the battle of Gettysburg was seriously wounded in the jaw. After being in the hospital for some time he received his discharge, September 24, 1863.

On his return to the North, Mr. Haight settled upon his present farm on section 28, New Milford Township, and has since engaged in its operation. It comprises two hundred and four acres, for which he paid $8,000. Since that he has made many improvements, having erected a comfortable residence, a barn, ice house and other buildings. In connection with general farming, he has engaged quite extensively in the dairy business and in raising hogs. He has led a busy and useful life and as the result has acquired a comfortable competence. He has served as Town Collector for six years but has never given much attention to political affairs. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Church and have the high regard of all with whom they have been brought in contact.

AMUEL ELI HOISINGTON, son of Horace and Priscilla Hoisington, is a worthy representative of one of the pioneer families of Winnebago County and comes of a prominent New England family. His parents emigrated Westward in May, 1846, and his birth occurred on the 29th of November, 1858. He received good educational advantages and was reared on a farm near his present home. On the 6th of October, 1884, he married Miss Hattie Clayton, of Stillman Valley, a daughter of Joseph and Harriet (Norton) Clayton. Her father was born near Springfield, Mass., in November, 1813. His father was a New England farmer and had twenty-three children. About 1837, Mr. Clayton had his name changed from Phineas Crouch to James Monroe Clayton. He yet resides in Stillman Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoisington settled on their present farm October 15, 1881 He now owns and operates one hundred and seventy-one acres, under a high state of cultivation and well improved with a good residence and other buildings. In connection with general farming, he carries on the dairy business, keeping thirty cows for this purpose, and also buys cream and milk which he ships to Chicago and Rockford. He is a man of good business ability and has won success in his undertakings. In politics, be was a Republican until 1881, since which time he has voted with the Prohibition party. Himself and wife are members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. They have an interesting family of four children: Herbert A., Homer L., Lucy L. and Florence, ANIEL CARNEY. Among the prominent and enterprising farmers of Rockford Township, Winnebago County, none have a more beautiful home than he whose biographical sketch we take pleasure in here giving. In 1890, when the "boom" struck the city, he sold a portion of his estate, which adjoined the city, reserving only five aeres for himself.

Marbletown, Ulster County, N. Y., was the native place of our subject, where also his father, Andrew Carney, was born, and where Daniel Carney, the grandfather of our subject, spent his last days. The father of him of whom we write was reared on the home farm and passed the remainder of his life in his native county. The maiden name of his wife was Laney Greene; she also died in Marbletown.

Daniel Carney resided with his parents until reaching his twelfth year, spending the following two and one-half years on the farm of an old couple, where he received his board and clothing in exchange for his services. He then commenced boating on the Delaware & Hudson Canal, being thus engaged a part of three seasons, after which he was employed in teaming across the mountains from Ellenville to Middletown. Later, he drove a stage from Ellenville to Kingston, and remained a resident of the Empire State until 1815, which was the date of his advent into Illinois, coming hither via the canal to Buffalo, and thence by way of the Lakes to Chicago.

In that early day there were no railroads in this State, the people being conveyed to and from different points by means of a stage coach. Mr. Carney was at once employed by Frink & Walker, the owners of many different stage lines in the Northwest, his route at first lying between Rockford and Chicago. He then went to Galena and drove a stage to Elizabeth, and afterward from Galena to Shabbona Grove, and then to Dixon. He was thus employed in different parts of the Prairie State until 1818, when he made a permanent settlement in Rockford, then little more than a haulet.

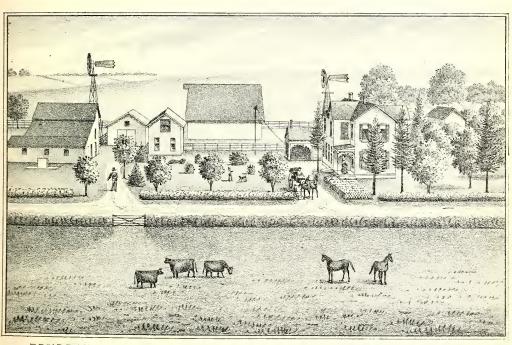

Forming a partnership with Dudley Redfield, Mr. Carney was engaged in the livery business for fourteen months, then, disposing of his interest, engaged in teaming from Rockford to Elgin, Chicago, Milwaukee, and points in Wisconsin two hundred miles distant. He was engaged in this kind of work for two years and then established a dray line, which was the first of the kind in Rockford, and after two years in that business became the first expressman in the city. He was very successful in that undertaking, and continued thus for fifteen years.

Mr. Carney has always been a great lover of fine horses and his experience in training them has led him to be a good judge of horseflesh. He owned and drove the first horse in Rockford whose record was 2:30, and also had in his possession the first stallion to make that record. He owns and now has under training several fine animals, and is thoroughly in love with his work.

In 1849, our subject was married to Jane Ann

RESIDENCE OF PALMER PICKARD, SEC. 21, HARLEM TP, WINNEBAGO CO, ILL.

Huntley, who was born in New York State, but was reared to womanhood in Michigan. She has two children living: Harry II., who makes his home in lowa, and D. Fay, who is the assistant of his father. Julia died when thirty years of age, and Ann passed away in infancy.

On another page will be noticed a view of the attractive homestead of Mr. Carney.

ORACE E. HOISINGTON, residing on section 31, New Milford Township, has long been a resident of Winnebago County. He was born in Genesee County, N. Y., April 15, 1823, and is a son of Horace Hoisington, Sr., who was born in Vermont and died in New Milford in February, 1877, at the age of eighty-eight years. He married Gracia Maria Steele, a native of the Green Mountain State, who died in Genesee County, N. Y., when our subject was a small child. She left two sons and three daughters: Emily, wife of Bradford Clark, who died in Vermont at the age of twenty-six years; Elias, now of Nebraska; Eliza Ann, wife of Bradford Clark, who died in Vermont at the age of forty years, leaving three sons; Horace E., of this sketch; and Gracia Maria, wife of Carl Vose, of Danville, Ill.

Our subject was married in his native county, April 15, 1846, to Miss Priscilla Peck, daughter of Eli and Nancy (Smith) Peck, pioneer settlers of Saratoga County, N. Y. Her grandfather was a Revolutionary soldier, was captured by the British and while on one of the prison boats in New York Harbor, his toes were frozen off. Four of his brothers and his father aided in the struggle for independence and only two of the sons survived. The wedding trip of Mr. Hoisington and his bride consisted of a Westward journey to Illinois. They located in Guilford Township, this county, and after six months removed to Monroe, Ogle County, where our subject purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land for $900, one hundred acres being covered with timber. For fourteen years Mr. Hoisington resided upon that farm and there built a good home. In those early days his nearest market was Chicago and the family bore many of the hardships and privations of pioneer life. About 1859, he sold that farm and removed to his present home, where he purchased one hundred acres of land at $25 per acre.

Into our subject and his wife were born five children: Lucy Ann, who became the wife of William A. Johnston, died at the age of twenty-five. Her husband is now serving his third term as a Supreme Judge of Kansas. Emily died at the age of fourteen years; Julia Ann is the wife of Peter Kinner, a farmer of Washington County, N. Y.; Eli is the next younger; and Gracia Maria, is at home with her father. The mother died January 19, 1886, at the age of sixty-four years. She was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, to which Mr. Hoisington also belongs. They aided in organizing the church at Lynnville, Ogle County, in 1845. It was formed by people from the Methodist, the Free-will Baptist and other churches, but the Close-communion Baptist and Presbyterians would not affiliate. Mr. Hoisington aided in organizing the Republican party in Monroe Township, and attended the first county convention For many years he was prominent in that party, but is now a Prohibitionist.

RBA Z. CAMPBELL. No finer farm is to be found in Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, than that owned and occupied by the subject of this sketch, and which is located on section 3. In fact, it is justly considered one of the finest places in the county, as it is under the most thorough tillage and the buildings upon it are of the best class in construction and design.

A native of Durand Township, this county, our subject is a son of David and Erixna (Barker) Campbell, and was born November 27, 1852. The father was a native of Grand Isle, Vt., and was twenty years of age when coming to this county. His birth occurred March 24, 1815, and his marriage to Miss Barker, who is also a native of the Green Mountain State, was celebrated February 16, 1840. Mrs. Campbell departed this life in Durand Township when sixty-nine years of age, having been born February 10, 1823. She was the daughter of Asa and Molly (Mars) Barker, natives of New England and of Scotch descent. Asa died in Laona Township, Winnebago County, May 14, 1865, having been born May 30, 1781. His wife, who was born November 24, of the same year, also died in the above place, September 6, 1861. They were the parents of eleven children.

The father of our subject is the only one living of a family of twelve children. Deciding to see something more of the Western country, he came on foot from Lockport, Pa., to La Porte, Ind., thence overland by team to Pecatonica. Here he pre-empted one hundred and sixty acres of land and marketed the products therefrom in the mining districts of Wisconsin and Chicago. David Campbell is one of the few pioneers left who came here as early as 1836, and has consequently been an eye-witness of the wonderful growth and development of this section.

Arba Z. Campbell was one of six children born to his parents, four of whom are living, as follows: Adeline, who was born June 30, 1847, is married and has three children; Louis L. who was born in 1858, is also married and has four children; Zeno A., who was born January 14, 1843, died October 31, 1891, leaving a wife and three children. Our subject remained at home until reaching his nineteenth year, when he cultivated rented property for a short time and then purchased a tract of land, to which he added from time to time until he is now the possessor of a magnificent estate of five hundred and sixty-seven acres.

Miss Eliza C. Hulse, who was born in Pecatonica Township, April 1, 1856, became the wife of our subject July 28, 1872. She is the daughter of P. and Elizabeth (Woodruff) Hulse, the former of whom was born in Clarke County, Ohio, and came to Illinois in a very early day. He located on a farm in this township, where his demise occurred when forty years of age. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Campbell, Henry Hulse, departed this life when sixty years of age; his wife, Mary Hulse, died in Salina, Kan., when in her seventieth year. The mother of Mrs. Campbell was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, and reared six children, all of whom are living, as follows: Mary M., who was born May 3, 1850; Enos S., January 31, 1852; Mrs. Campbell; Jasper J., August 18, 1858; Ella L., September 7, 1860; and William H., November 5, 1864.

To Mr. and Mrs. Campbell have been born five children, four of whom are living: Ward D., whose birth occurred February 7, 1873, is attending college at Rockford; Burt P. was born December 25, 1877; Homer W., March 27, 1880; Floss A., March 25, 1885; and Starr H., who was born January 3, 1876, died February 5, 1877. Mr. Campbell, as before stated, has one of the finest farms in Northern Illinois, and, with his estimable wife, is most highly respected in this community. They have a beautiful home and a happy and intelligent family of children.

He of whom we write is engaged in mixed farming, devoting his attention principally to breeding stock. In polities, he is a Democrat, to which party he gives his support at the polls.

OHN ANDREWS. Among the prominent representative citizens of Rockford we are gratified to present the name of Mr. Andrews whose success here has certainly entitled him to consideration and whose constancy in every line of business and thrift have added greatly to the value of Winnebago County. Our subject was very fortunate in purchasing land adjoining the city, and as the years passed by and the property advanced in value, he, of course, became wealthy. His home is pleasantly located on the corner of School Street and Central Avenue, and bears every indication of the intelligence and culture of its inmates, being furnished with a splendid library which attests the family to be people of education.

John Andrews was born April 1, 1831, in Mt. Vernon, Posey County, Ind., and is the son of Anson S. Andrews, a native of Connecticut. The father when a young man went to New York City, where he was engaged in the mercantile business, but, on account of failing health, abandoned that branch of work, and emigrating to Indiana, became one of the early settlers of Posey County. He there bought a claim to a tract of land which he later entered from the Government, and by persistent industry and good management, had the pleasure of soon seeing it put under excellent cultivation, and resided there until his death.

Miss Elizabeth Butler, our subject's mother, was born in Massachusetts, and departed this life at the home of Mr. Andrews, in Rockford. She was the mother of the following three children: John; Harriet, who became the wife of James Hinkley, and resides in Rockford; and Seth, who lives in Baraboo, Wis. He of whom we write attended the school in his native county, which was conducted on the subscription plan, and when quite young began to assist his father in operating a farm, He remained at home until the death of his father, which occurred when he was about twenty-three years of age, and at that time assumed the management of the farm. His father had been interested in a general store and flouring-mill, which were operated on the co-operative plan, and on his decease, Mr. Andrews devoted a portion of his time to the store and mill.

In 1857, our subject came to Washington County, this State, in company with his brother-in-law, James Hinkley, purchasing a tract of land on which they planted an orchard of eighty acres. The following year Mr. Andrews located upon the place, but two years after rented the farm and removed to Lincoln, and in the fall of 1861 came to Winnebago County. Here he purchased a block of land in the city and the following year became the proprietor of a farm one mile west of the city limits but did not move upon the place, continuing to reside in the home which he first purchased until 1889. In 1876, our subject bought forty acres adjoining his first purchase, to which he added, two years later, one hundred and nine acres, eighty of which joined the city. In 1880, he purchased one hundred and twenty-six acres, which connected with the eighty-acre tract above mentioned, and in 1885 sold the first eighty acres with the forty acres adjoining it, and again in 1889 sold a tract of fifteen acres. In January, 1890, Mr. Andrews disposed of sixty acres of his property to B. A. Knight, the originator of the "boom" in this city.

The remainder of the farm he still has in his possession, and it is improved with all that goes to make up a first-class estate.

September 21, 1858, John Andrews and Miss Mirinda Piper, who was born in this State, were united in marriage. The lady is the daughter of the Rev. Beverly Piper and has borne her husband three sons: Charles N., Harry B., and Ernest J. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews attend the Christian Church, and, in politics, the former casts the weight of his vote and influence with the Republican party.

ILLIAM A. PHELPS. The record of the life of this pioneer farmer of Winnebago County furnishes interesting facts for the perusal of his fellow-men. In the fall of 1849, accompanied by his estimable wife, he settled on a farm in Rockton Township, comprising one hundred and thirty acres, for which he paid $1,040. The place was improved by a small barn and a log house, to which a frame addition had been erected, while the land was scarcely changed from the primeval condition of nature.

As he had only $448 in his possession, Mr. Phelps was compelled to go in debt for his farm, and during the first winter of his residence upon it, chopped wood in exchange for one bushel of wheat per day, the wheat bringing thirty-five cents per bushel. He hauled his first crop of wheat to the lead mines near Galena, and received as compensation $2.50 per barrel for the flour which was made in Beloit. From the first, he was indefatigable in his efforts to acquire an independence, and success crowned his exertions, as it usually does, when with perseverance is combined excellent judgment.

The original purchase was added to until Mr. Phelps now owns six hundred and fifty-seven acres of fertile land. In 1857, he erected a substantial frame house, which he remodeled and enlarged in 1883, making it one of the most commodious and pleasant residences in the county. Other buildings were erected as the convenience of the farmer demanded, until the place was transformed in its appearance and embellishments.

In that part of Allegany County now known as Wyoming County, N. Y., Mr. Phelps was born April 6, 1825. He is one of ten children born to James and Phobe (Resigue) Phelps, natives of Schoharie County, N. Y. Five children died in infancy, and Austin died in Alexander, N. Y., at the age of sixty-four, dropping dead while leading a prayer meeting; James Harvey, who was a volunteer during the late war, died in a hospital at Annapolis, Md., in 1863. The only surviving members of the family are William A., Lovisa and Louisa. The father died in 1844, at his home in Cattaraugus County, while his wife passed away eighteen years after his demise.

At the age of twenty-three, our subject was married to Miss Mary Jane Lippitt. Her parents, Dr. John W. and Almira (Joeelyn) Lippitt, natives of New York, removed to Illinois in 1837, when she was a child of eleven years. Arriving in Chicago on the overland journey to Winnebago County, an elder sister, Maria, jumped out of the wagon on what is now Clark Street, and sank so deep in the mud that it required considerable effort to extrieate her. Dr. Lippitt had purchased, during a previous visit to Winnebago County, one-half section of land, for which he gave in payment one pair of horses, $80 in cash and his note for $40. Returning to the land, he found the claim was worthless, owing to the Government having given it as a reservation for half-breeds. Accordingly, he crossed the Pecatonica River and purchased a claim to another half-section of land, where a permanent home was established. In 1810, the wife and mother passed away, leaving three daughters and one son; Maria Louisa, Mary Jane, Francis and Ann Phidelia. The only son died of heart disease at the age of twenty-seven; the three daughters still survive. Dr. Lippitt married a second time, choosing as his wife Mrs. Almira Warren, and they became the parents of five children. He died in 1861, and his widow departed hence eight months after his demise.

On removing West in 1849, Mr. and Mrs. Phelps settled on the farm which they have since occupied. They became the parents of eight children, as follows: Byron W.; Mary Fidelia, the wife of Frank P. Miller, of Latham, this State; Ella Viola, who died June 16, 1868; William H., who is farming a portion of the old homestead; Carey E., dealer in grain and stock in Rockton; Hattie E., who married A. M. Wilson, of Thomson, Ill.; George H., who is still with his parents; and Rosa L., the wife of George Peppers, who assists in cultivating the old homestead. Mr. and Mrs. Phelps are justly proud of, and devoted to, their ten grandchildren. In their religious belief, they are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Politically, Mr. Phelps was a Republican until 1881, and since that year has adhered to the principles of the Prohibition party. He is President of the Co-operative Cheese Factory, and gave the land on which the building was erected. His son is Director in this factory, which has been in successful operation for two seasons, making about sixty-eight thousand pounds of choice cream cheese which is consumed at the home markets. Our subject has been Steward of the Methodist Episeopal Church for twenty-five years, and has been Superintendent of the Sunday-school for about eight years.

USTAVE SANDEHN, the well-known clerk and manager of the cloak department of the Stewart Company Dry Goods House, one of the leading houses of the city, has been with that company, though it has changed names, since 1881. He was formerly with Mr. Withrow of this city for one year. In 1877, he began as a clerk with P. L. Cable & Co., of Cable, Ill., and since then he has successfully followed that business. For ten years he was in the cloak department for Stewart & Co., and for three years he has been manager of that department. He is a stockholder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, is an honorable and straightforward young man, and possesses rare business abilities. He owns a fine home, nicely located on one of the best residence streets of the city, and is a favorite in the community.

Mr. Sandehn came to this country in 1876, from Sweden, his native country, where his birth occurred in Jonkoping City on the 3d of June, 1861. He was well educated in the High Schools of his Neurs Very Truly DA Peterson native city, and was a student of English, French, German and his own language. While still a boy, he accompanied his parents to this country, whither many of their relatives and friends had preceded them, and the family located in Galway, for one year. Later they came to Rockford.

The father, Charles A. Saudehn, was born in Smoland, Sweden, and was a tailor from boyhood up. He died in Rockford in February, 1889, when fifty-five years of age, following his wife to the grave, her death having occurred in January, 1889, when forty-nine years of age. Both were worthy members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church of Rockford. Of the nine children born to their marriage, six are dead. One daughter, Olive H., born August 10, 1861, died July 7, 1890; the rest died in infancy; one son, Harold, is residing with our subject, and is in the city schools, and a daughter, Anna, became the wife of William A. Johnson, a machinist, with the Rockford Watch Company.

The original of our sketch was married in Rockford, August 7, 1888, to Miss Caroline Johnson, the second daughter of A. C. Johnson (see sketch). She was born in Rockford, May 27, 1864, received her scholastic training in this city, and is a bright, intelligent lady. The fruits of this union have been two sons: Carl H., and Casper Wilhelm. Mr. and Mrs. Sandehn attend the First Lutheran Church of Rockford, in which they have been members for some time, and, in politics, he is a supporter of the Republican party.

A. PETERSON. The Swedish-Americans are well represented in Rockford and have been effective in promoting the growth of the city, especially in the way of building up large and substantial manufactures. They are a steady, industrious class of people, employ in the aggregate several thousand men, and through their labors have enhanced the value of property in East Rockford. Probably no one has done more for the city than Mr. Peterson, whose portrait is shown on the opposite page, and who is identified with many of the most important industries of Rockford

Among the furniture companies largely directed by Mr. Peterson, we may mention the following: Union, Excelsior, Co-Operative, Standard, Mantel, Central, and Chair and Furniture Company. He is also closely connected with the Royal Sewing Machine Company, Skandia Plow Company and Skandia Coal Company. He is officially connected with various organizations, being Secretary and Treasurer of the Rockford Union Furniture Company: President of the Rockford Co-Operative Furniture Company; President of the Skandia Shoe Manufacturing Company; President of the Swedish Building & Loan Association: Vice-President of the Third National Bank; President of the Skandia Plow Company; Vice-President of the Rockford Poster & Printing Company; and Chairman of the Peterson Land Association.

Mr. Peterson was born in Ving Vestergotland, Province of Smoland, Sweden, September 8, 1848. and was only two years old when his parents emigrated to this country, taking passage at Gottenburg in a sailing-vessel and after a voyage of several weeks landing in New York City. Continuing their journey Westward, they finally reached Winnebago County, where they settled on a farm in Cherry Valley. In that township, the lad grew to a stalwart manhood, and soon afterward his natural business qualifications brought him to Rockford, where his fidelity and ability were recognized and he was in demand for the best places of trust in the gift of various corporations. With no capital but energy and perseverance, he has arisen from a position of poverty in his boyhood to a foremost place among the wealthy citizens of Rockford, and although only in life's prime has accumulated a large fortune.

As he possesses keen discernment, Mr. Peterson was quick to see the advantages of Rockford as a furniture manufacturing point, and also the benefits that would accrue from the co-operative plan. Having planned, he resolutely proceeded to execute, and is now interested and an active manager in more factories than any resident of the place, which has the full average quota of energetic business men. He is largely interested in property in East Rockford, especially in Sunrise Addition and Furnitureville, and has improved the city by erecting a large number of residences. In his political belief, he is an adherent of the principles of the Republican party and gives to its candidates his influence and ballot. In his religions tendencies, he is devoted to the faith of his father, who was a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church. He is social by nature, but the demands of his business are so great as to prevent him from identifying himself with any secret or social organizations.

ORAH BRIGGS, a retired farmer, and one of the old and much respected settlers of Winnebago County, Ill., owes his nativity to Johnstown, Fulton County, N. Y., and was born April 8, 1811. His parents, Korah and Elizabeth (Scarboro) Briggs, were natives of the same place, and the father followed the arduous duties of a farmer. To their union were born three children, two daughters and a son, the latter being our subject, who was but an infant when his father died, Eight years later, the mother, too, passed away, when but a young woman. One besides our subject of the above-mentioned children is now living. Anna, who became Mrs. John Stevens, and resides in Minnesota.

Our subject was reared on a farm in Fulton County and after reaching mature years was married in Johnstown, of that county, to Miss Thankful A. Bonfey, a native of the same place, born October 20, 1815, their nuptials being celebrated on the 14th of January, 1841. She was the daughter of Barnabas Bonfey, of Utiea, N. Y., and the granddaughter of Barnabas Bonfey, of France, who came to this country with Gen. La Favette, as a surgeon, and died in Oneida County, Winfield Township, N. Y., in 1822, when very old. Barnabas Bonfey, Jr., who was a cabinet-maker by trade in Johnstown village, died in New York State when over ninety years of age, and his wife, whose maiden name was Mary Smith, died there five years later, when ninety-one years of age.

In the spring of 1812, Mr. Briggs came West prospecting, worked considerably at his trade, and purchased eighty acres in the township of Harlem. The following spring, after a noted winter of deep snows and very cold weather, Mr. Briggs brought his family to his home in Harlem Township. Two years later, he sold this farm and purchased ninetytwo acres in section 8 (1811), paying $6.40 per acre for it. He could have purchased Government land near by for $1.25 per acre, but this he took on a debt. Later he purchased five acres of timber and paid for this $500. In the spring of 1815, Mr. Briggs moved his family on his farm and into a very rude, open log cabin, the same having been the original claim cabin. They then had but one child, the eldest, Barnabas D., who is now a resident blacksmith of Roscoe. In this primitive log cabin, with new and strange surroundings, Mr. Briggs and his thrifty and economical wife began gradually to gather around them everything necessary for a comfortable home. They resided on this farm until August, 1891, when they moved to Roscoe, where they recently purchased a very pleasant home. Their grandson, Charles O. Briggs, is renting the farm. Mr. Briggs erected a good stone house on his farm in 1810, and in 1857 he built a good frame barn. Since then he has erected good substantial buildings on his place, as he needed them, and his fine farm is now worth at least $60 per aere.

The competency which this genial and contented old couple are now enjoying has been gained by many years of industry and economy on the part of both. They are the parents of a family of four children, and lost one son, Korah J., who enlisted as a volunteer in the Civil War (one of the last call), and was in the Eighth Illinois Cavalry for one year. He died at Fairfax Court House, March 15, 1865, when twenty-one years of age. Another son, Barnabas B., was in the army, going out at the first call for troops, but after serving for five months was discharged on account of sickness. The remaining children are as follows: Barnabas D.; John Q., a merchant at Houston, Minn.; and Mary Elizabeth, now Mrs. E. W. Dyer, of San Diego, Cal., engaged with an orange grove. Mr. and Mrs. Briggs have twelve grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. They have both been members of the Congregational Church since youth, and are highly esteemed by all. Mr. Briggs advocated the principles of the Democratic party from early youth and his last Presidential vote in that party was for Franklin Pierce. Mrs. Briggs converted him to Republicanism, since which time he has voted the straight Republican ticket. This much esteemed couple are the oldest of the early settlers of Roscoe, and both are nearing the eightieth mile-stone.

NCIL WIXON occupies a farm on section 19, Bonus Township, Boone County, which is sufficiently large to afford a comfortable maintenance. He makes a specialty of breeding stock and has one of the largest dairy farms in this section. He is numbered among that class who have been the architects of their own fortunes and is counted among the substantial residents of Boone County.

A native of Carmel, Putnam County, N. Y., our subject was born May 24, 1838, and is a son of Bethel H. and Esther (Hill) Wixon, the former of whom was also a native of Putnam County and a farmer by occupation. In 1855, he decided to come West, and, in company with his wife and two children, located in Boone County, where he purchased a quarter-section of land and resided until his decease, when seventy-seven years of age. Our subject had an uncle on his mother's side who was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. His parents made their home with him until their demise; the mother, who was born March 8, 1801, died October 1, 1861, and the father, whose birth occurred September 18, 1805, passed away August 18, 1882.

Mr. Wixon of this sketch was married November 10, 1860, to Miss Julia Hart, who was born in the same place as our subject, January 10, 1830. She was the daughter of Eleazer and Rebecca (Barrett) Hart, also natives of the Empire State. The father died in his native place when seventy-two years of age, and the mother is still living and makes her home in Connecticut.

To Mr. and Mrs. Wixon have been born three children: Noah A., whose birth occurred February 27, 1861, married Miss Fannie Phillips and is engaged in farming; Nellie, who was born September 3, 1873, and Lillie, who was born December 8, 1875, still reside at home. After his marriage, he of whom we write resided at home until the death of his father, when he purchased the interest of the other heirs in the homestead, which comprises one hundred and sixty acres. In addition to that, he owns a portion of one hundred and fifty acres which he purchased in company with his son. As before stated, he has the finest dairy farm in the county and reaps a handsome income from that branch of agriculture.

Our subject and his wife are members of the Baptist Church, with which denomination Mr. Wixon has been connected for thirty-five years. One brother of Mrs. Wixon was a brave soldier in the late war, and her maternal grandfather was a Revolutionary patriot. Mr. Wixon is a Republican in politics, but is not interested in public affairs other than to cast his vote for the man whom he considers will best fill the office. With his wife, he is held in respect by their many warm friends throughout the county.

DWIN W. McCOLLOM. The student of human nature is always deeply interested in tracing the career of one who has fought his way up to a position of prominence and financial success by dint of pluck, push and energy, and who has, notwithstanding the struggles of his youth, maintained a well-earned reputation for uprightness and just consideration of the rights of others. Such has been the career of the gentleman whose name introduces these paragraphs. His farm of one hundred and twenty acres, which he purchased in 1876, has been brought to a high state of cultivation and embellished with a first-class set of farm buildings. It is not only one of the best in Le Roy Township, but does not suffer by comparison with any of the same size in Boone County.

The father of our subject, James A. McCollom, was born in New Hampshire in 1803, and in his early manhood came to Michigan, where he was married to Lucetta Walker, who, like himself, was a native of the Granite State, born in 1813. She had emigrated from her native place to Michigan in 1821, with her parents, the trip being made overland to Buffalo, and thence by the Lakes to Detroit, where Mr. Walker died in 1856. His widow passed away two years later at Amboy. III.

After their marriage, which took place at Farmington, Mich., in 1832, James A. McCollom and his wife resided in Indiana until the spring of 1836, when they removed to Illinois and settled on a farm near Sycamore, De Kalb County. They entered from the Government a farm comprising about one hundred and twenty acres, forty acres of which were heavily timbered land, and cleared the place, which they improved with all needed buildings. They cut down and saved the ash and basswood lumber, some of which they brought to Boone County and used in flooring their house.

On coming to Boone County in 1848, Mr. Mc Collum, Sr., purchased eighty acres near Capron, paying $300 for the place, which was unimproved. At his death, which occurred in 1868, he left his widow an estate of ninety-one acres of unincumbered land. He and his wife reared five daughters and three sons, and lost a child during their residence in De Kalb County. The others are Lucetta and James A., twins; Edwin W., of this sketch; Martha R., who died at Le Roy, in 1882, at the age of forty-three years; Addie P.; Lozie A., Ella and Watson L. James A., Jr., enlisted in 1861, at Dixon, as a member of the Thirteenth Illinois Infantry, and was mortally wounded at Lingo Gap. Ga., in November, 1863, at the age of twenty-eight years. He was buried in the National Cemetery at that place.

Edwin W. McCollom was born in De Kalb County, Ill., in 1837, and was a lad of eleven years when he accompanied his parents to Boone County. Nothing eventful occurred in his life until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he enlisted, in 1861, as a member of Company F, Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry, being mustered in at Galena Ill. He served eighteen months with valor, and, at the expiration of his term of enlistment, was honorably discharged. He returned to his home in Le Roy Township, and resumed the farming operations which had engaged his attention prior to the war.

In October, 1873, at Sharon, Wis., Mr. McCollum was united in marriage to Miss Clarisa Langdon, of Le Roy. She is the daughter of B. F. and Dorothy (Guiles) Langdon, natives, respectively, of Ohio and Wyoming County, N. Y., but now residing in Sharon, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. McCollom are the parents of five children: Della, Lillian, Ray F., Ruby E. and Edna L. The children are bright and intelligent and are receiving good educations in the schools of the district. Mr. McCollom and his wife take an active interest in all progressive and philanthropic measures and are prominent in social circles of the community.

MEON LEVI COVEY, a lumber-dealer of Belvidere, has been prominently connected with the business interests of this city since t863, and is recognized as a leader in business circles. He was born near Mayville, Chautauqua County, N. Y., February 1, 1834, and is a son of Stephen Covey, a native of Vermont, who, when a young man, went to the Empire State. Settling in Chautauqua County, he purchased a tract of land near Mayville and engaged in the manufacture of shingles until 1839, when with his wife and four children he started for Illinois. After three weeks they arrived at Belvidere, which at that time was a mere hamlet, while the surrounding country was still in the possession of the Government and was but sparsely settled. Mr. Covey spent the winter in Belvidere and in the spring rented a farm, upon which he made his home until 1841, when he purchased a tract of land at Poplar Grove. A log house and a few aeres of broken land constituted the improvements at the time. He there resided until 1850, when he sold and purchased on the west line of the same township, but again sold in 1853 and bought a farm in Boone Township, where he made his home for four years. Once again purchasing, he became the owner of a farm in Caledonia Township, upon which he made his home until his death August 21, 1885. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Susan Jenner, was born in Moriah, Essex County,

your Indy Willam Halley

N. Y., July 1, 1810, and was a daughter of Stephen and Betsy (Mather) Jenner. She died at her home in Caledonia Township, in Angust, 1882, leaving five children: Henry, Eliza, S. L., Edwin and Ellen. Alonzo died three weeks after the arrival of the family in Belvidere, at the age of three years.

Our subject was only five years old when he came to Illinois with his parents, yet he remembers distinctly many incidents of the journey and of pioneer life here. He acquired his education in a log schoolhouse, in one end of which was a huge fireplace, the flames roaring upward through an earth and stick chimney. The seats were made of slabs on wooden pins, and on two sides of the room a log board was laid on wooden pins inserted into the logs and served as a writing desk for the larger scholars. Mr. Covey remained with his parents until fourteen years of age and then began to learn the blacksmith's trade, serving an apprenticeship of four years, but as he did not like the occupation, he returned to the farm and at the time of his marriage purchased land of his father and engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1863.

It was in 1853 that Mr. Covey and Miss Eliza Webster were joined in wedlock. The lady was born in Hamburg, N. Y., and was a daughter of William and Esther Webster. She died in June, 1873, leaving a son, George, who married Cecelia Haskin and they have a little daughter. Cecelia. In 1875, Mr. Covey married Elizabeth Porter, a native of Garden Prairie, Boone County, Ill., and a daughter of Thomas Porter. They have one daughter, Lottic.

In 1863, Mr. Covey left the farm, came to Belvidere and embarked in the lumber business, which he carried on for three years, and then engaged in buying and shipping stock until 1881. His next venture was in the grocery trade, which he carried on for three years, when he sold out to resume the lumber business, which he has continued up to the present time. He is an enterprising and industrious man and, as a result, his business career has been a successful one. In politics, he has been a life-long Republican and has served two years as Deputy Sheriff, and for three terms was the efficient Sheriff of the county. At the present time he is a member of the School Board. He has been alike true to every public duty and every private trust and has won the confidence and esteem of the entire community.

ILLIAM HALLEY, a native of Newbury, Orange County, Vt., was born June 29, 1842. David Halley, his father, was a native of Fifeshire, Scotland, where his father, William Halley, was also born, and on coming to America located in Vermont. The great-grandfather of our subject on his mother's side, David Webster, was also born in Scotland and emigrated to America at an early day, residing for a few years in Vermont. He then removed to Wisconsin, where he was one of the pioneers of Winnebago County, and died at his home near Oshkosh, in his ninety-seventh year. At one time, himself, his son, grandson and great-grandson, the latter a lad of sixteen years, all bound wheat in the same field.

The paternal grandfather of our subject made two or three trips across the ocean and on the last voyage, some of the passengers having ship fever, the vessel was in consequence quarantined at Montreal, and while attempting to land there William Halley fell from the vessel and was drowned in the St. Lawrence River. His wife bore the maiden name of Mary Mackey, and was also a native of Scotland, where her decease occurred.

David Halley was about twenty years of age when he came to America, and, learning the trade of a shoemaker, acted as foreman in a factory at Lynn, Mass., for some time. Later, he bought land and engaged in farming in Newbury, Vt., residing there until 1866, which was the date of his removal to Illmois. Settling in Owen Township, Mr. Halley resided there until his decease. He had been married to Isabel Webster, of Fifeshire, Scotland, the daughter of David and Agnes (Sharp) Webster. She is still living and residing on the old home farm.

The original of this sketch received a fair education and remained at home until 1864, when he came to Illinois and was employed on a farm for two years. He then rented land for a time, and in the year 1868, going to Blackhawk County, Iowa, farmed for four years in Lincoln Township. Disposing of that tract, he again purchased in this county, and here made his home until 1883, at which time he purchased the farm where he is now residing. His estate includes three hundred and ten acres of excellent and rich soil.

January 29, 1871, Mr. Halley was married to Elizabeth Simpson, a native of Burritt Township, and a daughter of David Simpson, of Forfarshire, Scotland. Her paternal grandfather, John Simpson, spent his entire life in that country. The father of Mrs. Halley was married in Scotland, and, on coming to America in 1843, lived for three years in Rockford, at the end of which time he located in Burritt Township on a tract of Government land, and there resided until his death. Her mother was also a native of Forfarshire, Scotland, and bore the name of Jane Archer. She was a daughter of George and Margaret (Smith) Archer and is residing with her children. She bore her husband six children, namely: George, Margaret, Jane, Rebecca, Martha and Mrs. Halley, twins. The parents of our subject also reared six children: William, Marion, David, Robert, Agnes and Edward.

Our subject and his wife have been granted a family of six children, who bear the names of David, William Henry, Frank E., Isabel, George and Jennie. Mrs. Halley is a member of the Presbyterian Church at Winnebago. In politics, our subject votes independently. In connection with his biographical notice will be found a portrait of Mr. Halley.

ON. J. STANLEY BROWNE, editor in chief of the Morning Star of Rockford, has held that position since its inception, March 10, 1888. The staff consists of R. B. Johnson, eity editor, and Frank Edmison, reporter. The sheet is strictly Democratic, and is a strong advocate of Cleveland. It is very influential in its party, being the only avowed Democratic paper in Winnebago County. It has a large eirculation, its columns being perused by thousands of readers. It affords pleasure to the biographical writer to incorporate in this volume the sketch of the genial editor-in-chief, who demonstrates the fact that editors, like poets, are born, not made. The qualities which make a successful journalist are inbred, and no amount of study can supply the lack of a keenness of observation, acute perceptions of the tastes of the public, and accurate judgment on matters treated in various depart ments of a newspaper.

The Morning Star is a seven-column, eight-paged paper, issued daily, and be it said to the credit of the management, that nearly all the workmen who were employed in its publication at the beginning are still on the force. Mr. Browne has had considerable experience in the newspaper line in New York State, having been employed on the Albany Argus. While thus engaged, he took an active part in politics, and prior to reaching his majority stumped the State for Tilden, in the eampaign of 1876, also making speeches in Indiana and Ohio. He was later twice elected on the Democratic ticket to the New York Legislature from Otsego County, in which he had previously served as page, messenger and reporter. He was very prominent in local affairs, and previous to the time above spoken of, was Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, and was Secretary for a period of five years to Lieut.-Gov. Dorscheimer, during the time Tilden was Governor, and consequently became intimately acquainted with that gentleman and many other prominent men of the Legislature. His political record in the Empire State was a brilliant one, but his "Star" finally settled in the West, where he has since given his best efforts to making it rank among the best in Northern Illinois. He is a forcible writer, and while in politics had the reputation of being an eloquent speaker. While in the Legislature he was the youngest man in the assembly, in which he was an active worker, and was also a prominent member of the congressional and State conventions.

The Hon, Mr. Browne has made a success of all his undertakings. He was born in Albany, N. Y., thirty-seven years ago, where he received his education in the city schools. Becoming interested in early life in newspaper work, he was carrier boy, when quite young, for the papers of that city. It will thus be readily seen that through his persistent industry and good judgment, he has attained to his present high standing among his brethren in the newspaper world, and it is his ambition to go on until he shall have attained to the topmost round of the ladder of fame. His parents lived and died in New York State, where they were well-to-do and honored citizens.

Our subject, since coming to Illinois, has made many political speeches in Winnebago County, in behalf of his party. He was married in his native State to Miss Tallmadge, who was born in Otsego County, where she was given an excellent education in the public schools. She is a most intelligent and refined lady and a leader in the social circles of Rockford. Her father was a soldier in the Rebellion, and her grandfather was a patriot in the Revolutionary War. In her religious belief, she is a Methodist.

Socially, our subject is a member of the Order of Elks, Lodge No. 64, of Rockford, and, in polities, is a straight out-and-out Democrat.

YRUS D. FOX, who resides on a farm on sections 9 and 10, Roscoe Township, Winnebago County, has been a resident of this county since pioneer days. He has been an eye-witness to almost the entire growth of the county, has aided in its development and done all in his power for its upbulding and advancement. To the early settlers a debt of gratitude is due which can never be repaid, but we can honor them as the founders of the county.

Mr. Fox was born in Parkman, Geauga County, Ohio, August 28, 1821. His grandfather, Israel Fox, was one of the old New Englanders who opposed the Puritans in their oppression of the Quakers. He was a farmer and one of the first to grow the Weathersfield onion, which became an important industry in his locality. He spent the most of his life in New England and died at the home of his children in Mentor, Ohio, in 1836, at the age of ninety-three years. Our subject remembers him as an old man making whistles and squirtguns for his grandchildren.

Samuel Fox, father of Cyrus, was born in Glastonbury, Conn., May 3, 1791, and died in Paris, Meeosta County, Mich., in 1885, at the age of ninety-three years. His second wife, the mother of our subject, was Hannah Daniels, of Koenstreet, N. II., a daughter of Aaron Daniels, one of the pioneers of Mentor, Ohio. Our subject had four own brothers and three sisters: Abigail, Delana, Abner, Samuel, Laura, Sidney and Amos. Four died in infancy and all have now passed away. Delana, wife of Sanbern Rawso, a pioneer of Michigan, died in Coldwater, that State, at the age of seventy-one years. Samuel Fox had thirteen children by his three wives. Two sons, Sidney and Abraham, were volunteer soldiers in the Fourth Cavalry of Michigan, the former doing duty at Fortress Monroe. Sidney was one of fourteen who captured Jeff Davis. He is a farmer and a mechanic of Central Kansas and the only survivor of the family except our subject.

Cyrns Fox was a lad of fourteen summers when his mother died, and at that age he began earning his own livelihood. He afterward joined his family in Manhattan, Ohio, and assisted his father in running an hotel for three years. At the age of seventeen, he left home and from the wages earned the first year paid his father $100 for his time. He worked on a farm that was the home of President Garfield and in that vicinity until twenty-four years of age, when he engaged in teaching. As a companion on life's journey, he chose Miss Lucy N., daughter of Phineas and Esther (Gore) Nichols. They were married in Perry, Lake County, Ohio, March 16, 1845, and a year later they came to what is now Roseoe, locating on their present farm on sections 9 and 10, Roscoe Township. Those pioneer days were very happy. In a little log cabin with their first baby they lived, and though many privations were to be endured, time passed merrily. Mr. Fox's first landed possessions consisted of eighty acres, a gift from his wife's father, and another eighty acres, which he purchased at $4 per acre. He also bought an adjoining forty-acre tract at $25 per aere. Both he and his wife were taken ill after coming here and had it not been for the faithful nursing of friends they would have died. They had lost one of their twin babies while en route for Hlinois but reared four children. The twins, Esther Louisa and Lucy Eliza, were born January 7, 1846; Mary Delana was born in Roscoe, December 23, 1851; Cyrus M. was born November 26, 1855; and Lucy E., now the wife of Herbert S. Power, was born April 5, 1863.

In 1891, Mr. Fox was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who died on the 22d of December, at the age of seventy-two years and was laid to rest in a cemetery near by. She was a life-long member of the Baptist Church and Mr. Fox and the children also belong to the same congregation. The latter have all settled on farms near the patental home. In politics, Mr. Fox is a Democrat and one of the honored citizens of the community.

AVID SAMPLE is at present residing on an excellent farm comprising one hundred and sixty acres, located on section 34. Owen Township, Winnebago County. The entire acreage is under the best methods of improvement and cultivation, its proprietor having erected all the suitable buildings on the place, planted fruit and shade trees, and in many other ways has added to its beauty and value. He ranks among the best agriculturists in the township, where he is looked upon as an upright and honest citizen.

Born in Shaler Township, Allegheny County, Pa., July 6, 1843, our subject is a son of William Sample, whose birth occurred on the same farm as did that of our subject, July 28, 1800. The paternal grandfather of him of whom we write, James Sample, was a native of Cumberland County, Pa., his birth occurring March 25, 1756. He was of Scotch ancestry and served during the Revolutionary War, under Gen. Washington. He located in Allegheny County at the cessation of hostilities, and, securing a tract of Government land in Shaler Township, began the work of redeeming it from its original wildness. Mr. Sample was captain of a company of militia men and while on duty his wife and children were taken prisoners by the Indians but were rescued the same night by a squaw to whom the grandfather of our subject had given clothing. While the Indians were having a war dance, the squaw secured a canoe and released the prisoners.

The direct progenitor of our subject was reared an agriculturist and resided on the farm where he was born seventy-one years. He later removed to Sharpsburg, where his death occurred in 1891, at the advanced age of ninety-one years. He had married Jane Anderson, also a native of Pennsylvania, where her birth occurred January 16, 1807. Mrs. Sample departed this life in Sharpsburg in 1882; she was the daughter of Robert and Christiana Anderson, and became the mother of eight children, namely: Robert A., James, John, Martha, William Hayes, Margaret J., David and Elizabeth A.

He of whom we write was educated in his native town and resided on the home farm until the outbreak of the Civil War when he enlisted, July 1, 1861, in Company A, Sixty-second Pennsylvania Infantry, and was mustered into service at Pittsburg. From there the company went to Harrisburg, where they remained for two weeks and then spent a like period in Baltimore. Later, they went to Washington, D. C., and after a stay there of a month, were sent to Arlington Heights, and went into winter quarters near Falls Church. In the spring of 1862, the Sixty-second Infantry marched to Fairfax Courthouse, but were quickly ordered to Alexandria and there took transports for Fortress Monroe and after a short time spent there marched to Big Bethel and later to Yorktown. Our subject participated with his regiment in the battle and siege of that place and at Hanover Courthouse, Mechanicsville, Gaines Mills and Malvern Hills. In the latter battle, he was severely wounded in the right arm and hip and was taken to the hospital at Bedloe's Island. As soon as he was sufficiently recovered, he started to join his regiment, but instead of being allowed to do so was placed on detached duty at Ft. Hamilton. He later joined his regiment just in time to participate in the battle of Mine Run, and after that was employed in guarding the railroad from Manassas to Bealeton Station until starting with Gen. Grant on the Wilderness campaign. Mr. Sample was discharged in July, 1864, his term of service having expired, and returning home again resumed farming on the old homestead until 1871. The following five years were spent in traveling, and in 1876 our subject bought the farm which he now owns and occupies, which comprises the northwest quarter of section 34.

In 1876, Miss Milinda Steward became the wife of our subject. She was born in Owen Township, and is the daughter of James and Mary Steward. By her union with our subject have been born three children, Steward, Ross and Leota. In his political relations, our subject is a strong Republican, and being a Grand Army man is prominently connected with Nevins Post No. 1, G. A. R., at Rockford. He is also a member of the Farmers' Mutual Benevolent Association. Mr. Sample has in his possession the clock that ticked in his grandfather's old log house nearly one hundred years ago. It reaches from the floor nearly to the ceiling and is in fine repair, keeping correct time.

SMAN S. NICHOLS, who formerly resided on a good farm in Bonus Township, Boone County, but is at present living in Garden Prairie, had his birth in Crown Point, Essex County, N. Y., September 28, 1830. His parents were John and Asenath D. (Edmonds) Nichols, the former of whom died in Michigan when sixty-three years of age. The mother of our subject was also a native of New Hampshire and died at the home of her son in Kansas in her eightieth year.

He of whom we write was one of a family of ten children, six of whom are living. His brother Orrin was a member of the Eleventh Michigan Infantry during the late war and was killed at the battle of Stone River, taving enlisted in the three-years' service. Osman S., March 22, 1859, was married to Miss Emma Koon, a native of Steuben County, N. Y., where her birth occurred May 6, 1838. She was the daughter of Alanson and Marilla (Wells) Koon, natives of Albany County, N. Y., and who died after coming to Hillsdale County, Mich., at the respective ages of sixty-eight and sixty-one years. Mrs. Nichols had seven brothers and sisters, five of whom are living. She is of German and Welsh ancestry, while our subject is descended from the English.

To Mr. and Mrs. Nichols have been born four children, only two of whom are living, namely, Nellie M., who was born October 12, 1861, and married John W. Kiester, whose birth occurred near Orangeville, Stephenson County, this State; he is Principal of the Garden Prairie High School, and received his education in the University of Madison, Wis., and at Carthage, Ill. Mrs. Kiester was educated at the Jennings Seminary at Aurora, Ill., and is the mother of one son, Glenn S., who was born July 19, 1891. Eugene Nichols, the second child of our subject, was born October 31, 1863, and married Essie McCuen, by whom he has become the father of one son, Roland O., whose birth occurred June 29, 1891. Mr. Nichols is engaged in general merchandising in Rush Center, Rush County, Kan., and was given a good education in Aurora.

He of whom we write went to California in 1853, where he was engaged in mining and farming for five years. He was a lad of eleven years when he left home and engaged to work for an uncle, with whom he remained until reaching his majority, receiving at that time $100 in money. Soon after his marriage, he located on the farm in Bonus Township, which he had purchased a short time before, and upon which he resided until October, 1890, when he purchased town property and erected a beautiful residence which cost $2,000. He now rents the old farm and is living in retirement in the village of Garden Prairie.

He of whom we write east his first Presidential vote for Franklin Pierce, and since the election of President Grant has voted with the Republican party. He has been an incumbent of various local offices, having been School Director and Supervisor, and was President of the Township Board in 1885. He was also School Treasurer for a number of years, and at the present time is Justice of the Peace.

Charles Nichols, the brother of our subject, was a soldier in the Civil War; his father took part in the battle of Plattsburg, and his grandfathers on both sides of the house were patriots in the Revolutionary War.

*HOMAS ROBBINS, who is engaged in mixed farming at his pleasant home on section 20, LeRoy Township, Boone County, keeps about twenty-five dairy cows on his place, marketing the product at a creamery a short distance from his home. He was born in Franklin County, Ohio, in 1833, and is a son of Mathias Robbins, who had his birth July 27,1796, in Columbia County, Pa. The grandfather of our subject, Thomas Robbins, was a farmer in England and, on emigrating to America, came in an early day to Pennsylvania. He came to the New World in company with six brothers, who made their homes in as many different States. The wife of Grandfather Robbins, previous to her marriage, was Elizabeth Cline, of German birth. To them were born a family of six sons and two daughters, only one of whom is living.

Mathias Robbins was married in the Keystone State to Sarah Conder and went to Franklin County, Ohio, in 1820 with his wife and three children. He was a tailor by trade, which line of business he followed for fourteen years in Wood County, and in the fall of 1848 came to Illinois, being accompanied by his family of seven children, his eldest daughters following in 1854. Mr. Robbins purchased forty acres of land in Le Roy Township, to which he soon added eighty acres, and tive or six years thereafter bought another forty acres which comprises his present home of one hundred and sixty acres.

The mother of our subject died when he was a lad of ten years and his father passed away August 12, 1884, in his eighty-sixth year. The parents reared a family of ten children, of whom two sons and five daughters are still surviving.

He of whom we write was married to Amanda, daughter of Russel and Mary(Ash) Creveling. She bore him two children: William Russel and Bertha May, and departed this life November 5, 1873 in her thirtieth year. March 31, 1875, Mr. Robbins chose for his second wife Miss Susan, daughter of William and Mary (Moore) Millard, natives of Pennsylvania, whose sketch will be found on another page of this volume.

Our subject is engaged in general farming, in which calling he is more than ordinarily successful. In politics, he votes the Republican ticket and occupies a high place among his fellow-townsmen. When the family of Mathias Robbins removed from Pennsylvania to Ohio in 1820, they made the journey with a team of horses and later, in 1848, came to the Prairie State in the same manner, making over a thousand miles' journeying in this way.

AVID WILLIAM McMASTER. A travcler journeying along the highways of Bonus Township, Boone County, must be well pleased with the appearance of the farms which greet his eye. Among the most neatly cultivated and richly producing of them all we are pleased to mention that of Mr. McMaster. He was born July 3, 1818, in Chenango County, N. Y., and is a son of Daniel and Mary (Campbell) McMaster, the former of whom was born, lived and died in the Empire State.

The paternal grandparents of our subject came from Scotland and passed their last days in New York. He of whom we write remained at home until sixteen years of age, when he engaged to work out on farms by the month until 1813, at which time he made his advent into Boone County. He took up a tract of eighty acres of Government land which is his present abiding-place.

The lady to whom our subject was married in October, 1831, was Phoebe Green, who was born in Oswego, N. Y., and was the daughter of Horace R. Green. Her father was also a native of that State and died after coming to Boone County. Mrs. McMaster was one in a family of five children, three of whom are yet living, and departed this life in her forty-sixth year. To herself and husband were born seven children, the two eldest of whom are deceased; Alfred, who resides in Iowa, is a farmer, is married and has four children; Clara is single; Matilda is married to Benjamin S. Herbert and resides in Bonus Township; Cephas II. works the old homestead, is married to Florence Reed and has one son; Phosa L., a music teacher, is at home. The children have all been given good educations in Belvidere and Freeport schools and are attendants at the Presbyterian Church, in which denomination our subject's father was Deacon for many years and one of the pillars of the church.

The political views of Mr. McMaster bring him into affiliations with the Republican party, though previous to the election of Lincoln he voted the Democratic ticket. He has taken an interest in forwarding educational affairs of his township and for a number of years was School Director and Highway Commissioner. The beautiful farm upon which he resides speaks forth the praises of the man whose systematic hand and thorough industry have brought it to its present prosperous and prolific condition.

YLVESTER B. COFFIN, is a native-born resident of Roscoe Township. Winnebago County, Ill., his birth occurring January 6, 1844, and almost his entire life has been identified with the growth and evolution of social, political and natural life in this State. He is the son of Henderson W. Coffin, and the grandson of Edward Coffin, who was born in the Empire State, and who followed the occupation of a farmer all his life. The latter was married in his native State to Miss Petten, a native of New York State, and they became the parents of five sons and six daughters. Both grandparents died at an advanced age.

Henderson W. Coffin was born in Oneida County, N. Y., in 1813, and was married in that State to Miss Harriet Kanier, of Buffalo, N. Y. There they remained until the fall of 1837, when they determined to seek fame and fortune in the Far West, and with teams they made the journey to Illinois, which State was then but sparsely settled. Mr. Coffin had but very little means to assist him along and he and his thrifty and economical wife experienced many hardships and privations in getting a start. The first night he spent in Winnebago County, Mr. Coffin purchased one-half section of land, giving his only cow, which he had driven from York State, his gun, his watch, and $320 in a note for this tract. Mr. and Mrs. Coffin had a great struggle to keep and pay for this land but they finally obtained a Government lease for all but about eighty acres. This farm of two hundred and forty acres is now owned by their son Fletcher.

Mr. Henderson W. Coffin was a brick-maker by trade and his first brickyard was started in 1810, west of Beloit. He subsequently purchased more land for brickyards, becoming the owner of twenty-eight acres in Roscoe where the depot now stands, and this land is now owned by his daughter. He gave the land for the depot. He and Thomas Baldwin, an early settler, walked from Rockford to near Beloit, carried their tools, and built a house, taking four trees standing for posts. Three days later they had finished it and were back in Rockford. Mr. Coffin had men working for him for fifty cents a day and two meals, some walking six miles to and from their work. Many of them owned their own farms but wanted ready money. Mr. Coffin's trade was more to him than wealth, and men of means, able to buy him out several times, worked for him at fifty cents a day. At that time men cradled grain for twenty-five cents an acre. Mr. Coffin died in August, 1875, when not quite sixty-three years of age. His widow is now residing in Rockford, on Morgan Street. He built the first elevator at the Roscoe depot. This worthy couple reared eleven children: Agnes, Julia M., S. B. (our subject), Esther, William Henry, Horace A., Fletcher, Mary Jane, E. B., Alfred II. and Ruby H. Of these, Horace died at the age of forty years and Mary Jane, Mrs. W. B. Scott, died when thirty-six years of age. The remainder are living and well-informed people, atthough they had but common-school advantages.

Sylvester Coffin remained at home, engaged in business with his father, until twenty-nine years of age, when he married Miss Anna Addey, a native of England, and the daughter of Thomas Addey. who came from his native country to Canada in 1851, and from there to Illinois the following year. In 1878, our subject sold out his grain elevator at Roscoe and began tilling the soil on his first farm. one of the many his father had owned, the latter being the owner at one time of eleven hundred acres. Sylvester has since erected a good frame house, large and comfortable out-buildings, and is progressive and enterprising. In connection with farming, he is also engaged in stock-raising to some extent. Of his marriage has been born two daughters, now fourteen and ten years of age, respectively. Mr. Cottin has been a Prohibitionist for the past twenty-two years, and he and his wife are members of the Methodist Church.

H. PALMER has been connected with the Palmer Hardware Company as an active member since 1872. This is one of the leading enterprises of the city and, in connection with the general hardware business, they manufacture large quantities of tinware. Their establishment is located on the corner of East State and Second Streets. The business was founded in 1856 by a brother of our subject, T. F. Palmer, who is now a resident of Eugene, Ore., and for one year it was carried on under the firm title of Peek & Palmer. Later, the firm became Wingate & Palmer, and in 1874 assumed the style of T. F. Palmer & Co., and later it was incorporated as the Palmer Hardware Company, with T. F. Palmer as President and E. M. Holmes, Secretary and Treasurer. On the former selling out, J. R. Moxley became President, Mr. Holmes continuing as Secretary, while W. H. Palmer and J. W. Hale are active members of the company. These four gentlemen represent the entire business interests of the firm. From the day on which it was estabhshed, the business has constantly increased, until, as before stated, it is one of the most important enterprises of Rockford.

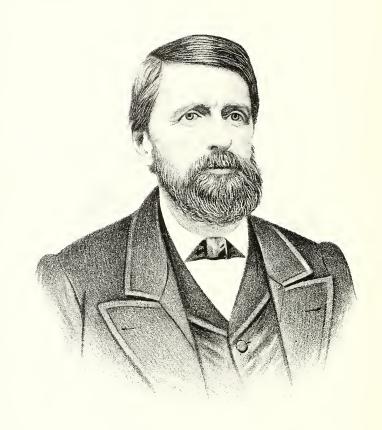

W. H. Palmer, whose name heads this sketch, was born in Pittsford, Rutland County, Vt., in 1838, and there acquired his education. At about the time he attained his majority, he went to Malone, N. Y., where he established a clothing store as a member of the firm of J. N. and W. H. Palmer. After three years, a disastrous fire broke out in the city and, with others, they lost their entire property. The gentlemen returned to their native county and our subject spent a few years in the Green Mountain State, after which he emigrated Westward, locating in Rockford.

Our subject possesses many of the best characteristics of his ancestors—the Scotch. His father, T. H. Palmer, was born in Kelso, Scotland, and when a young man, with two brothers and a sister, crossed the broad Atlantic, locating in Philadelphia, Pa., where the brothers established a printing-office and engaged in business for some time. After a few years one brother and the sister died. The other brother went South, was married and died after the birth of one son, who is yet living. T. H. Palmer left Philadelphia and went to Vermont, where he soon afterward wedded Joanna T. Fenton, who was born and reared in the Green Mountain State. They located on a farm, but Mr. Palmer gave his attention to his profession, that of an educator. He was Superintendent of public schools in Vermont for several years and a prominent man in that State. He died at the age of seventy-six years, and his wife passed away at the age of seventy-two. Both were consistent members of the Congregational Church, and the husband was a Whig and a stanch Abolitionist until the organization of the Republican party, when he joined its ranks.

Our subject was carefully reared by his parents and in Pittsford, Vt., after attaining to mature years, he wedded Louisa J. North, who was born in Springfield, Mass., and a daughter of Walter and Betsy (Carpenter) North, both natives of the Bay State. Her father was employed in the armory of Springfield until about middle life, when he became connected with a manufacturing company. His death occurred in Springfield at the age of seventy years. His father was also in the Government employ in the Armory of Springfield for many years. The family were members of the Episcopal Church in early life, but afterwards joined the Congregational Church.

DA Jomh

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Palmer were born three daughters: Helen F. and Florence A., graduates of the Rockford High School, and Grace L., who is still a student. The eldest daughter is now a teacher of recognized ability in the ward school. The mother, who was a consistent member of the Congregational Church, was called to the home beyond on the 1st of July, 1886, at the age of forty-four, dying in Wisconsin. She was a faithful and loying wife, a devoted mother, and won the esteem of all who knew her.

During the late war, Mr. Palmer enlisted, in 1861, for nine months' service as a private of Company G, Twelfth Vermont Infantry. He participated in the battle of Gettysburg and other engagements, and after a year's service was honorably discharged. He is now a member of Nevins Post No. 1, G. A. R., and is a stalwart advocate of Republican principles. His duties of citizenship are ever faithfully performed and he is a sagacious and far-sighted business man, who by his own efforts has achieved a signal success in life.

AVID A. TOMB. This successful contractor and builder of Rockford, who has resided here since the spring of 1886, was born in Armagh, Pa., and is a son of John and Fannie (Shaw) Tomb. His father lived and died in Indiana County, Pa., passing away at the age of eighty years. He was a farmer and followed that occupation throughout his entire life. His wife died in the same county on the home farm when about sixty-five years of age. Both were members of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church.

Our subject was reared and educated in the village of his birth and when sixteen years of age began to learn the trade of a cabinet-maker, and also a carpenter and joiner, serving a five years' apprenticeship. He then began work on his own account, and has since followed his trade successfully. He is a practical and skilled workman and hence there has always been a demand for his labor. He has traveled extensively as a builder, both in the South and West, having worked in many towns and cities in Iowa and Kansas, and spent five years at his work in Chicago. He built the court house in El Paso, Tex., and wherever he has gone has won a high reputation for skill. He returned to Illinois in 1861, but afterwards spent some years in the South. He came from Mexico to Rockford in the spring of 1886, and since that time has been actively engaged as a contractor and builder, putting up some excellent buildings in this city. A good workman in this line is ever in demand, and hence he has received a liberal patronage.

In Mendota, Ill., in the spring of 1861, Mr. Tomb was married to Miss Agnes Peters, who was born on the Emerald Isle, and when a small child came with her brothers to this country. Her parents lived and died in Ireland. One child graces their union, Frankie, who is now the wife of George Wilson, a boot and shoe dealer in La Salle and a successful merchant. They have two children: George and Arnold. Although Mr. and Mrs. Tomb have resided in Rockford for a comparatively short period, they have made many friends in this city, and their sterling worth easily wins them high regard. He is a straightforward, upright business man who ever faithfully performs his part of a contract, and has thus won an enviable reputation in business circles. He now has a pleasant home at No. 910 South Court Street.

TEPHEN DELOS GREGORY, who resides on section 33, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, was born on the 2d of March, 1834, on a farm on the dividing line between Niagara and Orleans Counties, N. Y. His grandparents were Samuel and Lorena Gregory, natives of Connecticut and of English descent. His father, Samuel Gregory, was born in Danbury, Conn., and when a young man removed to New York, where he was married. In the fall of 1835, he made a visit to Winnebago County, Ill., and located a claim in what is now Rockford. He then returned for his wife and two children and came on to the new home. They lived in a log cabin in the midst of a wild and unbroken tract of land. There was no mill nearer than Ottawa, and the deer roamed over the prairie where the city of Rockford now stands. Mr. Gregory improved his farm, which he sold after some years and purchased land in Cherry Valley Township. Sometime afterwards he went to Rockford and subsequently returned to Niagara County, N. Y., where he made his home until his death. His remains were brought back and interred in the Rockford cemetery. wife, who bore the maiden name of Joanna Bateman, was born in the Empire State and died on the farm in Cherry Valley Township. They were both consistent Methodists and were members of the first Methodist Class of Rockford, which was organized at the home of Rev. William Royal with five members-Daniel and Mary Beers, Mrs. Enoch and Mr. and Mrs. Gregory.

Our subject was the eldest of seven children, the other members of the family being Delia A., John Clark, Samuel H., James B., Adelaide, and Edna J. Mr. Gregory of this sketch was only two years old when with his parents he eame to Illinois. He attended the first school ever taught in Rockford, it being held on the block bounded by East State, Second, Third and Walnut Streets and was taught by Miss Brown. As soon as old enough to handle the plow, he began farming, and at the age of eight went to Chicago with his father, each taking a load of grain to market.

On the 6th of November, 1862, Mr. Gregory married Charlotte Arabella Matson, who was born in Ashtabula County, Ohio, and is a daughter of Norman Matson, a son of William and Temperance (Taylor) Matson. He learned the trade of a plasterer and removed from New York to Ashtabula County, Ohio, whence, in 1846, he came to Illinois, locating in Winnebago County after the war, but after a year and a half he returned to Ohio, where he is yet living. He served in the Fifty-second Illinois Infantry during the late war and was a faithful soldier. His wife was Charlotte Viets, a native of Ohio, and a daughter of Rosswell and Arabella Viets. She died in Ottawa in 1860.

Soon after his marriage, Mr Gregory rented his father's farm for two years, then bought a farm in Cherry Valley Township, upon which he resided until 1867, when he removed to his present farm, three miles east of the city limits. He there has a pleasant home and a valuable tract of land yields to him a golden tribute. Six children gather around the fire side: Frank Albert, Katie M., Charles D., Lottie B., J. Herbert and Irvin. The parents and the five older children are members of the Centennial Methodist Church and the family ranks high in social circles, while the Gregory household is the abode of hospitality. In politics, Mr. Gregory is a Republican.

RANK G. HOGLAND. Among the leading business men of Rockford, the subject of this sketch takes a prominent place, having from small beginnings reached his present strong financial position through hard work, perseverance and pluck. Born in that cold and far-away country, Sweden, Wester Gothland Province, February 6, 1863, he was the youngest of a family of five children, all of whom are now residents of the United States. His father, August Hogland, left his native country for this in the latter part of the '60s, and as soon as he had accumulated sufficient means, or in 1870, he sent for his wife and children. They joined him in Chicago, and there the parents reside at the present time, the father sixty-nine, and the mother sixty-seven years of age. They are prominent people in North Chicago, and are exemplary members of the Swedish Lutheran Church of that city. One child was born after coming to this country. The children are as follows: John II., a practicing attorney of Chieago, Ill., was married in that city; Edward C., a cutter in a merchant tailoring establishment of Chicago, married Miss Ida Landgren, of Chicago; Charles II, is single, and a Justice of the Peace of North Chicago; Frank G., our subject; and Oscar, who is associated with our subject in the insurance business located at No. 329 East State Street, and does the elerical work.

The subject of this sketch is one of the pushing, progressive young men of Rockford, and is as popular socially as he is successful in business. He is at present the popular and capable City Clerk, and the efficient manner in which he has discharged the duties of this office abundantly testifies as to the wisdom of the people's choice. He is also President of the Star Furniture Company, Vicepresident of the Skandia Furniture Company, and Vice-president of the West End Furniture Company, being the first stockholder in two of these. He is also a stockholder in a number of other enterprises, including the Mechanics' Furniture Company, Rockford Mantel and Furniture Company, the Royal Sewing Machine Company, and the Rockford Desk and Furniture Company. He is interested in the Peterson Land Company, also in other syndicates, and in the Posten Publishing Company of Rockford. If there is one enterprise among the many with which he is connected that Mr. Hogland takes special interest in, it is that of the Hogland Insurance Agency, which was organized three years ago. He was the chief promoter, and is now the sole proprietor, doing a strictly local insurance business, and meeting with remarkable success.

Mr. Hogland is a man of thorough understanding of public affairs, and is independent in his political views. He is now filling his first term as City Clerk, as before mentioned. In his religious views, he is a Lutheran, and a member of the Church Board of the First Swedish Lutheran Church of Rockford. He has been a Director of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city for many years, and, in short, is a live, energetic young man who is interested in all measures for the advancement and progress of the city.

Miss Emma M. Alander, who became his wife in Chicago, was originally from Wester Gothland, Sweden, born May 22, 1864, and was quite young when she came with her parents to this country in 1870. They settled in Chicago, but later came to Rockford, in which city the mother received her final summons, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hogland, in 1887, when sixty-three years of age. The father is still living, is sixty-four years of age, and also makes his home with his daughter. He was a member of the First Lutheran Church, and his wife also held membership in that church. His son, Alfred A., is foreman of the music department of the Kimball Organ Company, Chicago. The latter wedded Miss Emily Barnard, of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Hogland are among the representative people of Rockford, and their home possesses many comforts, and is pleasantly situated. Their marriage has been blessed by the birth of one child, Lillian Florence.

EWIS B. GREGORY, one of the well-to-do and prominent citizens of Rockford, now living a retired life, was born in Seneea County, N. Y., March 28, 1820, and comes of an old New England family. His grandfather, Samuel Gregory, was a native of Connecticut, and there spent his entire life as a farmer, dying at an advanced age. The family was founded in America many years prior to the Revolutionary War. The wife of Samuel Gregory, a Connecticut lady, survived him some years, and died at the home of one of her children, at the age of eighty-seven, Both were active members of the Methodist Church.

The Rev. Harry Gregory, father of our subject, was born in the town of Danbury, Conn., and reared among the hills of that neighborhood. When a young man, he went to Seneca County, N. Y., becoming a farmer of Ovid Township, and there married Hannah Barnum, a native of that county. After some years, they removed to Niagara County, N. Y., where Mr. Gregory began preaching as a Methodist minister, and from that time until his death engaged in Gospel work. He died in Canandaigua, N. Y., in 1879, at the age of eighty-four years. He had fought in the War of 1812, and was a strong Abolitionist, taking an active part in the suppression of slavery. He voted first with the Whig party, and afterward became a stalwart Republican. His wife died in New York about twenty years before the death of her husband. They were the parents of eight children, four of whom are yet living, and are married.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who was yet quite young when his parents removed to Lockport. Later he went with the family to Lima, Livingston County, N. Y., where he acquired a seminary education, and became a teacher. He there followed that profession for some years before coming Westward. He was a young man of twenty-two years when he arrived in Rockford. Here he engaged in teaching for about two and a half years, and then became interested in the crection of the lirst sawmill built on the Rock River at this place, and the construction of the first dam. He has taken quite an active part in the upbuilding and development of the city, and his name is inseparably connected with its history. He is now laying out in lots the land which he purchased here in 1845. He has been associated with some of the leading enterprises of Rockford, and is now a stockholder and Director of the Burial Case Company, and a stockholder and Vice-president of the Air Brush Company, which was established some ten years ago, and is now doing an extensive business, having gained a wide reputation. Although business has largely occupied his attention, Mr. Gregory has yet found time to devote to those interests which are calculated for the moral benefit of the city. He has long been an advocate of temperance principles, and now votes with the Prohibition party.

Mr. Gregory was married, in Rockford, to Miss Lucy E. Spafford, who was born in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., December 18, 1831, was educated in the Rockford Seminary, and died at her home in this city, July 2, 1888. Her parents were Dan and Julia (Galloway) Spafford, early settlers of Rockford, of 1844. Her father was a printer here for many years, and was well known among the pioneers of the county. "Uncle Dan" and "Aunt Julia" were household words with many, and they had the love and esteem of all who knew them. Mrs. Spafford was an Episcopalian. Both lived to an advanced age.

Mrs. Gregory was one of quite a large family. She was a cultured and refined lady, highly esteemed for her many excellencies of character, and was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Ather death she left five children, and one son, Charles, had died in infancy. The living are Edward, a member of the firm of Springer & Gregory, plumbers and pump manufacturers. He married Eveline Chancy, and after her death wedded Laura J. Potter. Carrol S., who was educated in Beloit, Wis., and is now a plumber of that city, married Jennie Waterman; Dr. Lewis L., who married Sarah Throckmorton, is a prominent physician of Chicago; Kittie C. is the wife of George N. Safford, a leading lumberman of Rockford; George B., who completes the family, is a clerk and book-keeper for the Love Manufacturing Company. The Gregory family is well and favorably known in Rockford, and the father is one of its leading and influential citizens. He now resides at No. 304 South First Street, where he has a comfortable home and is practically living a retired life.

HARLES O. AND GUSTAVE E. EMERSON are members of the firm of Emerson. Winquist & Co., general blacksmiths, horseshoers, and wagon and carriage repairers and manufacturers, located at No. 904 Fifth Avenue, where they have a large and well-arranged building for their business, 65x66 feet, recently erected by themselves.

These brothers have been residents of the United States since 1869, when they came with their parents, and as a family located at Attica, Ind. A year later, the father, Jonas Emerson, died, when about forty years of age. He pursued the calling of an agriculturist, and was fairly successful in this occupation. He was a member of the State Church. The wife and mother is still living, and finds a comfortable home with her children in Rockford. She is now sixty-four years of age, and a member of the Swedish Mission Church. Of the six children born to her marriage, three sons and three daughters, one, John A., died a few days after landing in this country. Another child, Augusta, died a few years later at Lafayette, Ind. The eldest living is Emma, wife of William 11, Hallen, of Little Rock, Ark.; Mary C. became the wife of James L. Peterson, and now resides in this city, her husband being a contractor and builder.

G. E. Emerson, of this notice, has resided in Rockford since December 24, 1890, and came from Chicago, where he had followed his trade, learned in Lafayette, Ind. Since their residence in this city, they have become equal stockholders in the Mantel and Furniture Company, and are practical and experienced young business men.

Our subjects are natives of Jonkoping Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, the former born in 1861, and the latter September 17, 1863. Charles O. Emerson is a skilled wood-worker by trade. He wedded Miss Huldah Johnson, of Lafayette, Ind., and they have a bright little daughter, Ruth O. Gustave E. is a single man, and is also a skillful workman. Both the Emerson boys are noted for their integrity, ability and enterprise, and are very popular and respected in business circles. They are ardent supporters of the Republican party, in their political views. The entire family holds membership in the Swedish Mission Church.

ARRY DOOLITTLE, who was born October 24, 1815, in Boston, Eric County, N. Y., is now a well-known farmer of Guilford Township, Winnebago County, residing on section 11. His parents, Calvin and Susanna (Cary) Doolittle, were natives of New York and of English extraction. On emigrating Westward at an early day they settled in Marion County, Mich., and two years afterwards came to Harlem, Ill., locating on Government land which had not yet come into the market and was still unsurveyed.

Our subject had come to Illinois two years previous, and in the spring of 1835 made a squatter's claim of about two hundred and twenty acres of land in what is now Harlem Township, near the mouth of Willow Creek. He located upon this land and commenced its improvement. In May, 1838, he was united in marriage with Catherine Stedman, a native of Massachusetts, and a daughter of Austin and Sarah (Burbank) Stedman, both of whom were from New England. Her father died when she was an infant and her mother afterward removed to Cattarangus County, N. Y., where Mrs. Doolittle spent the days of her maidenhood. They came to Illinois in 1838, and Mrs. Stedman died in this State at the age of seventy, leaving a small family.

In 1856, Mr. Doolittle sold his farm in Harlem

Township for $30 per acre and bought a farm of one hundred and lifty acres on section 11, Gnilford Township, for which he paid about $20 per acre. The log cabin upon it was soon replaced by a commodious residence, good barns were built, other improvements made, and two hundred and forty acres were added to the estate. At present he owns a finely-improved and valuable farm of one hundred and twelve acres, in addition to which he has a quarter-section of land in Cerro Gordo County, Iowa. He is now practically living a retired life, in the enjoyment of a rest which he has so truly carned and richly deserves. He spends his time at his home and with his children.

The Doolittle family numbered five sons and five daughters, of whom three are now deceased: Calvin, who died at the age of three and a half years; Sarah, who died on her thirteenth birthday; and Julia, who became the wife of A, J. Turner, and died at the age of thirty-five, leaving a son who was killed at Niger Wells, Arizona, and a daughter. The living are Mary C., now Mrs. Beamer; Philetus W.; Elizabeth S., wife of E. B. Fuller, who resides on the Iowa farm; Amzi L.; Edward; Austin, of California, and Laura, wife of A. C. Ketchum, of Michigan. The mother of this family died January 12, 1882. She was a most estimable lady and had many warm friends throughout the community. Mr. Doolittle is a well-known citizen of Winnebago County, where he has so long made his home. He is numbered among its honored pioneers, for more than half a century has passed since he located within its borders.

The portrait of Mr. Doolittle accompanies this sketch of his life.

UMPHREY S. JENNISON. In giving honor to whom honor is due, we should not neglect II. S. Jennison, who began life empty-handed and has accumulated a good property by dint of energetic and well-directed efforts. He is living at the present time in Durand, where he is retired from business of any kind, and where he has a neat home, well supplied with all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. Our subject is a pioneer of Winnebago County, having located in what is now Laona Township in the spring of 1855, and has thus been an eye-witness to the wonderful development of this section, in the bringing about of which he has been no unimportant factor.

Born in Swanton, Vt., June 15, 1823, he of whom we write is the son of Joseph and Theoda (Barber) Jennison, natives of New England. The parents were farmers, and the father, who was born March 15, 1791, died in January, 1856. mother of our subject survived her husband many years and departed this life in Howard County, lows, in 1889, at the advanced age of ninety-one years. William Jennison, grandfather of our subject, was born April 12, 1758, in Massachusetts, and married Sarah Sumner, who was born May 6, 1761, in the same State. They were the parents of nine children, viz: Elizabeth, Joseph S., Nahum E., Charles H., William D., Israel S., Sarah S., Daniel W. and Erastus G. They were the parents of nine children, viz: Roswell, Hepsibah, Achoah, Giles, Theoda, Laura, Theophilus, Jesse and Diana.

The seven children included in the parental family were: Caroline, who was born in 1821, and died in 1812; our subject, who is the second in order of birth; Samuel W., whose birth occurred October 16, 1825, is a farmer and wheelwright, making his home in Sheldon, Vt.; Sarah S., who was born December 26, 1827, was married to George S. Humphrey S. Jennison was reared on the home farm, and April 6, 1816, was married to Calista J. Olds. The lady was born in St. Albans, Vt., February 12, 1825, and is the daughter of Elias and Abigail (Orcurtt) Olds, natives of New England. Her father was a farmer and after marriage resided in Vermont, where the decease of both parents occurred in Swanton. Elias Olds was born February 23, 1778, and died January 19, 1869; his wife, who was born March 29, 1789, died April 8, 1847. Mrs. Jennison was one in a family of six children: Louisa, whose birth occurred Januuary 24, 1811, was married to Henry Sharp and died at Defiance, Ohio, September 10, 1834; Caroline, who was born March 10, 1813, became the wife of Henry L, Brainard and died in St. Albans, Vt., July 11, 1882; Roxa, who was born June 15, 1815, married Henry Sharp and makes her home in Ft. After his marriage, our subject owned and located on a farm in Franklin County, Vt., where he made his home until 1855, at which time he concluded to try his fortune in the West, and, upon locating in Illinois, settled in Laona Township. His first purchase of land consisted of eighty acres, which he improved and later sold. In 1857, he became the owner of one hundred and eighty acres in the same township, which he improved and lived upon until 1881. That year he sold his farm to his son and, removing to Durand, has since lived retired in a pleasant home.

Mr. and Mrs. Jennison are the parents of four children: Charles H., who was born February 11, 1850, married Rebecca Winchester and resides in Riceville, Iowa, being the father of four children: Myrton S., Blanch, Harry and Bessic. Louise S., who was born October 31, 1855, was the wife of Edward Norton, of Laona, and had a family of four children: Herbert, Arthur. Carrie and Milburn; she died May 6, 1892. Carrie E., who was born March 25, 1860, is now Mrs. Archibaid Morgan and makes her home in Howard County, Iowa, where she also has a family of three children: Louise. Mildred and Fred. Mattie O., who was born December 3, 1861, married Frank Sheik.

In his political relations, Mr. Jennison, though formerly a Republican, now votes with the Prohibition party. His wife, who is a member of the Congregational Church, is a most amiable and kind-hearted lady, making a happy home for her husband. Our subject, who has accumulated a handsome property, is generous with his means, ever ready to do a favor, and is well liked by his neighbors.

connected with the institutions of Rockford as one of its leading business men, associated with the lumber interests of the place under the firm title of Woodruff & Maguire, and carrying on an extensive and lucrative business, is the gentleman whose name introduces these paragraphs. He first came to this city in 1851, and after spending some years in the employ of different companies, went to Pecatonica and established a lumber yard in the latter part of the '50s, remaining thus engaged until after the close of the Rebellion.

In 1865, Mr. Woodruff returned to Rockford and most of the ensuing years has been engaged in business as a lumber dealer, his stock consisting of a full line of hard and soft lumber and house-building supplies. He is also closely identified with other important organizations of the city, being President of the Forest City Electric Light and Power Company; Vice-President of the Second National Bank; Director in the Rockford Fire Insurance Company; Director in the Rockford Shoe Company, and the Rockford Tack Company, and President of the Rockford Plow Company, besides being a stockholder in various other corporations of the city.

To learn more fully the important events in the life of a gentleman who is so prominently connected with the best interests of Rockford, will be interesting and useful to the reader. Mr. Woodruff was born in New Marlborough, Berkshire County, Mass., June 21, 1826. His grandfather, John Woodruff, removed with his wife and children from Connecticut to the hills of Berkshire County, where he was an early settler and operated as a farmer. Members of the Woodruff family were soldiers in the War of 1812.

At the time of the removal to Massachusetts,

Elisha Woodruff, father of our subject, was a lad of six years, and he grew to manhood amid the scenes of Berkshire County. After his marriage, which united him with Miss Phoebe Lewis, a worthy lady of German descent, he settled on a Massachusetts farm and devoted his attention to tilling the soil. When their children were grown to mature years, the father and mother came West to Rockford, where they spent their last days, both passing away at the age of seventy-three, his death occurring in the fall of 1869, and her decease taking place in the winter of 1865. They were members of the Congregational Church, and active workers in religious causes.

The boyhood days of our subject were passed in a comparatively uneventful manner, and when he reached man's estate, he was married in his native county to Miss Emeline Beach. Mrs. Woodruff was born and reared in Berkshire County, Mass., the daughter of Deacon Gideon Beach, a prominent member of the Congregational Church, and a farmer of Berkshire County, where his entire life was passed. After his death, his widow removed to Illinois and spent her last days with her daughter, Emeline, in Rockford, her death occurring when she was about four-score. Two of her children survive: Mrs. Woodruff, and Mrs. Julia Underwood, of Berkshire County, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff are actively identified with the Congregational Church as faithful members, and are prominent in the social circles of the city.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Woodruff is an advocate of the Prohibition party and its principles. He has served as Alderman of the Fourth Ward, and has been called by his fellow-citizens to other positions of trust and honor. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Adella M., wife of George W. Magnire, of the firm of Woodruff & Maguire, lumber dealers; and George L., who married Fannie Stevens and lives in Rockford, where he is a Director in, and Assistant Cashier of, the Second National Bank. Mr. Maguire, our subject's son-in-law and partner, was born and reared in Vermont, and has resided in this city since 1854. He is Director in the following companies: Rockford Insurance Company; Hess & Hopkins Leather Company; Rockford Tack Company; John P. Manny Mower Company; and he is prominently associated with the foremost interests of the city.

During the Civil War, Mr. Maguire enlisted in the service of the country as a member of Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry, under Col. W. II. L. Wallace and Capt. W. L. Nevins, commanding. Company D was the second company raised in the State, and the first in the city and county to offer service to the Government. For three months the regiment participated actively in various engagements, and at the expiration of the term of enlistment, was honorably discharged. Returning home, Mr. Maguire again enlisted as a member of Company K, First Illinois Cavalry, which was Gen. Steele's body-guard on special detached service, remaining in that capacity for almost two years. After the battle of Lexington, the company was discharged, Mr. Maguire having served as a commissioned officer. He re-enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Forty-sixth Illinois Infantry. and served as Captain until the close of the war. when he was honorably discharged. He is now an active member of the G. L. Nevins Post No. 1, G. A. R., at Rockford.

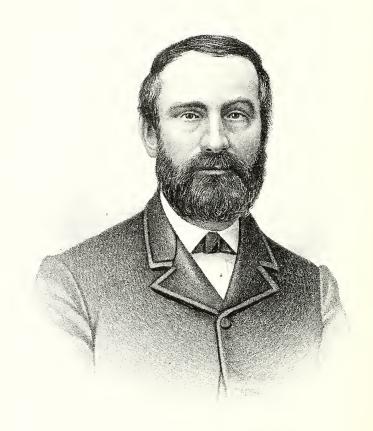

ILLIAM McKINLEY, who is numbered among the honored early settlers of Winnebago County, is now living a retired life at No. 6053 North Horseman Street, Rockford. He was born in Adams County, Pa., January 16, 1816, and was reared at Ft. Deposit, Md., until sixteen years of age, when he came to Illinois, settling in Madison County about the time of the Indian war, in which the red men were commanded by Black Hawk. He was employed in a lumber office from 1851 until 1856, in Rockford, and in the latter year was elected Township and City Collector. In 1858, with what money he had made, he went to Missouri, invested in land in Benton County and began making a home. But about two years later, it was found out that he had voted for Abraham Lincoln, and he was waited upon by the vigilance committee and told that he was no longer wanted in the county or State. So, leaving all his possessions, he and his wife and children, with a wagon and mule team, started to return to Illinois with only $5 in money. His funds gave out and he did not know what to do, but found a friend in the banker of Macomb, Ill., who, although he was a stranger, loaned him money to buy food for his family. At length he arrived in Rockford, and has since been numbered among its valued and prominent citizens.

In Madison County, Ill., Mr. McKinley wedded Miss Matilda A. Waller, a native of Kentucky, who went to Madison County at an early day. their marriage, they removed to Jo Daviess County, and subsequently settled in Owen Township, Winnebago County, where Mr. McKinley engaged in farming. His wife died in middle life, leaving three children: John R. died from a wound received at Kenesaw Mountain, while fighting for the Union. He was a recruiting member of the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. He bore much painful sickness, and his death occurred at Chattanooga. Mary E. is now the wife of J. F. Woodring, a resident of Waverly, lowa; and L. J., who wedded Miss Mary Kirby, is a farmer of Green County, Wis.

Mr. McKinley was again married, his second union being with Miss Mercy L. Nichols. She was born and reared in Batavia, N. Y., and when a young lady came to the West. She proved a true and faithful helpmate to her husband, and her death, which occurred in February, 1885, was sadly mourned. She was the mother of six children, one of whom died in infancy. The living are: Frances, widow of Edward Minard, of Rockford: Alice, wife of W. R. Keyt, a contractor and builder of this city; Eva L., at home; Bertha R., who formerly engaged in teaching, but is now clerking in the dry goods house of J. W. Fish; Cora, wife of Harry S. Crandall, a grocery clerk of Rockford, and Edith A., wife of George A. Bruner, of Waterloo, Iowa.

Mr. McKinley is a member of the Methodist Church, to which his wives also belonged. After his return to Rockford, he engaged in buying and shipping grain from 1863 until 1871, as a partner of J. B. Agard. He subsequently purchased a grocery store on State Street, where he carried on business successfully for thirteen years, since which time he has lived a retired life. He is a stanch supporter of the Prohibition party, and is a faithful worker and active member of the Methodist Church, with which he has been officially connected for more than forty years. To its support he has contributed liberally, and has done much for its growth and upbuilding. His life has been well and worthily spent, and he has thereby won the confidence and high regard of all with whom he has come in contact. For many long years he has been identified with the history of this community, and is well deserving of a representation in this volume.

OHN SPRAGUE. As one of the well-to-do agriculturists of Boone County, who materially contributed to develop its rich agricultural resources, and as an early settler of Flora Township, where he built up for himself and family a desirable home, Mr. Sprague is well worthy of representation in this volume, and we are pleased to invite the reader's attention to his portrait and the following brief account of his life Oneida County, N. Y., was his birthplace, the date thereof being March 7, 1834. His father, Eleazer Sprague, was for a number of years a resident of Batavia, where he kept an hotel. He later emigrated to Michigan and resided for a time near Grand Rapids. His next removal was to this county, where he resided for a twelvemonth, and then took up his abode in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, where he was residing at the time of his decease.

Our subject's mother, who was known in her maidenhood as Emily Burleigh, was born in Bethany, Genesee County, N. Y., on the 4th of December, 1806, and departed this life at the home of our subject. John, of this sketch, was about fifteen years of age when his parents moved to Michigan, and two years later he started out in the world on his own responsibility. He was variously engaged, and, being industrious and economical, invested his money in Wiseonsin land and thus acquired a good start in life. In 1861, he came to Boone County and, locating in Flora Township, purchased eighty acres of land on section 22, which was his home for a number of years. He then sold that tract and became the proprietor of the estate where his family now reside and where his demise occurred in 1884.

The lady to whom our subject was married September 25, 1866, was Martha J., daughter of Isaae Swain. She was born in Lockport, Niagara County, N. Y., while her father had his birth in Pennsylvania. The latter-named gentleman was a son of Isaae Swain, Sr., who was born in England, where he was reared and married, and on coming to America settled in the Keystone State. From there, he removed to Niagara County, N. Y., and died on his farm fourteen miles from the Falls.

The father of Mrs. Sprague was reared in Pennsylvania and when a young man went to New York State and after marriage located upon a farm in Niagara County for which he paid $5 per aere. He cleared and improved a part of it which was his abiding place until 1840; then, with his wife and seven children, he came via the Lakes to Chicago, thence by team to McHenry County, this State. He entered a tract of Government land in Marengo Township, and erecting a log house on the place there established his family. The products of his farm were hauled by ox-teams to Chicago to market. He erected a good and substantial set of buildings on his estate, where his death occurred. Mrs. Sprague's mother was a native of New York State and died on the home farm in Marengo Township.

To our subject and his wife have been born five children: Maud, Edna, Gertrude, Alberta, and Pearl.

NGUS McLEAN. We are pleased to give in this volume many sketches of estimable Scottish-American citizens, who have done much excellent work in helping to develop the various resources of the county. There are sterling qualities about the nationality that fit them for almost any occupation. Mr. McLean was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, in 1827, and his parents, Duncan and Margaret (Johnson) McLean.

were natives of that country also. There the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits, and followed this occupation all his life. He died there when ninety-two years of age, but the mother died when about middle age. Of the eight children born to them, four were sons and four daughters: Margaret married in Scotland; John, at St. Lous, Mo.; Mary died young; Dunean died young; Agnes is married, and resides in Scotland; Angus, our subject; Donald was a volunteer in the army, and among the missing; and Katie married in Scotland.

The subject of this sketch grew to manhood in his native country, and when starting out to fight life's battles for himself, he very naturally selected the business to which he had been reared, agriculture, and has never regretted his choice for he has been unusually successful. He was married, in his native country, to Miss B. McIntyre, of the same place, and in 1858, led by the promises of the great prairies of this country, he and his family crossed the wide waters to American soil. They had very little to start with, but the desire to have a home stirred them up to great exertion, and after coming here Mr. MeLean worked by the month for six years. In this time they had accumulated $800, and then bought the farm they had rented the first year, paying $30 per acre for two hundred acres. The comfortable mode of life which he and his family are at the present time able to enjoy is entirely due to the indomitable perseverance and energy of Mr. McLean and his industrious wife, for, as mentioned before, they had very little to commence with, in fact, what little they had was hardly worth mentioning.

Mr. and Mrs. McLean have seven living children, but lost a son, John, at the age of twenty-five. He was injured by the railroad ears in the fall of 1884, and died from the effects. The living children are as follows: Duncan B., born in 1858; Daniel B., born in 1860, now resides in Nebraska; Angus was born in 1862; Peter, in 1861; David, in 1866; Hugh, in 1869, and Barbara, in 1873. All the children are either at home or very near, and are industrious and upright. They have all received good educational advantages and are well thought of by all. The family hold membership in the Presbyterian Church. In politics, Mr.

McLean is a Republican but not a strict partisan. He is engaged in general farming and raises hogs, sheep, horses and cattle. He keeps about twenty good cows and sells milk to the creamery. Of the cereals, he raises barley, rye, corn, oats, but no wheat. He is successful and progressive and one of the foremost farmers of his township.

ILLIAM H. WAIT. This representative citizen of Spring Township, Boone County, was born in Warren, Greene County, N. Y., October 28, 1820, and is the son of Henry and Polly (Warren) Wait. The father, who was born in Rutland County, Vt., came to this section as early as 1816, and died at the home of his son-inlaw, George Reed, aged ninety-one years. Mrs. Wait, who was also a native of the same place as was her husband, died in this county at the age of eighty-one years. The grandparents of our subject, on both sides of the house, were natives of Vermont, and reared large families of children.

William II. Wait, when twenty-two years of age, came West and took up one hundred and sixty acres of wild land in Spring Township. The trip hither was made from Pennsylvania overland with team, and when arriving here, our subject had but seventy-five cents in money. He crected a house on his farm, in which the family, who followed him two years thereafter, lived for seven years.

He of whom we write was married February 22, 1855, to Miss Nancy C. Kellogg, who was born in Rutland County, Vt., May 15, 1836. She was the daughter of Orlando Kellogg, also a native of Vermont, who emigrated to this county in 1846. The father later went to Iowa, where his decease occurred when seventy-eight years of age, and his good wife, who survived him a number of years, passed away at the home of her granddaughter, in this county, in her eighty-second year. To Mr. and Mrs. Wait have been born eight children, seven of whom are living, as follows: Scott A., who is married and has two children; Henry W., now deceased; Judson C., who is married and the father of five children; George R., who has one child, Fred; Lillie M., who married H. McDougal, has one child: William W., and Gracie, at home. The children were given good educations in the schools of Belvidere.

Our subject lived on the old home farm after his marriage until about twenty-seven years ago when he traded for other property. He is now the proprietor of nine hundred acres of excellent land and has the largest farm in this part of Illinois. He is practically retired from active life and is enjoying to the fullest extent the comforts which his life of industry has enabled him to provide. In addition to his country estate, he owns considerable real estate in lowa.

A Republican in politics, Mr. Wait east his first Presidential vote for Harrison, in 1844. He has been the incumbent of various local offices, all of which he filled in a most desirable manner. Mrs. Wait departed this life March 8, 1891, firm in the faith of the Free-will Baptist Church. Our subject has so thoroughly systematized his business that all his land is now in the hands of good cash renters. He has ever been kind and hospitable in his home to all comers, the house is open and a hearty welcome is extended. He is a genial, wholesculed man who is well informed on the events of the day, and who has many friends in all classes of society.

ANIEL W. TICKNOR, who became a resident of Rockford in May, 1816, is now living retired on a farm in the southwestern part of the city. Thirty years of his residence here have been spent in the mercantile business, he successfully conducting an auction and commission store. Mr. Ticknor had his birth in New Lebanon, Columbia County, N. Y., December 29, 1820, while his father, Oran Ticknor, was born in New Barrington, Mass., where also his father, Elijah, was a native.

The grandfather of our subject removed from the Bay State to New Lebanon about 1800, and there passed the remainder of his life. Oran Ticknor was a wagon-maker by trade, which he followed for a time, and then engaged in the mercantile business in New Lebanon for many years. From there he removed to Cayuga County, N. Y., in 1836, and located in the town of Sempronius; he later traded his real estate and business for a farm, and was occupied in its cultivation for a number of years. Selling out, the father of our subject purchased another farm near Homer, upon which he lived until 1860, at which time he also disposed of it, and, coming to Rockford, purchased a home on North Court Street, where his death occurred in 1876, at the age of eighty-four years.

The mother of our subject was known in her maidenhood as Abigail Orton; she was born in Connecticut, and survived her husband six months. her death occurring when she had attained the age of eighty-three. She became the mother of the following-named children: Sylvanus, Daniel W., Sallie M., James S., Horatio, Aurora, Elijah, Abigail and Betsey (twins), and Phineas R. Daniel W., of this sketch, received his education in the Empire State, and at the age of eighteen commenced teaching school, being so employed for seven winter terms in New York State. In May, 1846, he came to Rockford via canal and lake to Milwaukee, being accompanied hither by his brother, James S., they walking from the Cream City to Rockford. This now thriving place contained but fifteen hundred inhabitants, and one public school building in the city, the location being the southeastern corner of the public square.

Immediately upon arriving in Rockford, Mr. Ticknor accepted the position of teacher of the school, and taught for three years, having one hundred and twenty-five pupils the last term. In the spring of 1849, he established a drug and grocery business on the west side, and, after conducting a successful business for five years, sold out and became the proprietor of a book store, in connection with his brother James. Mr. Ticknor later purchased a farm, on which he is now living retired from active life.

In the fall of 1848, Daniel W. Ticknor and Miss Charlotte W. Weyburn were united in marriage. The lady was born in Genesee, N. Y., and departed this life in Rockford in 1853. Two years later our subject was married to Alzira Andrews, also a native of the Empire State, having been born near Auburn, Cayuga County. The three children born of this union are Charlotte, Lizzie May and Herbert. Mr. Ticknor became the father of two children by his first marriage, Lewis and Alfred. With his wife he is a member of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, and, in politics, votes the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Ticknor expects to remove soon to a magnificent new residence among the maples at the corner of Elm Street and Independence Avenue, and here will spend the remainder of his days.

RUMAN BUCK, for a number of years one of the progressive and well-to-do agriculturists of Flora Township, Boone County, departed this life at his home, January 26, 1877. He was born in Otsego County, N. Y., May 22, 1811, and was the son of Joseph S. Buck, a native of Vermont. The father of our subject removed from his native State to New York and thence to Eric County, Pa., where he owned a farm and resided until his decease, at the advanced age of eighty-six years. His wife, prior to her marriage, was known as Miss Betsey Eastwood; she was also a native of the Green Mountain State, and, like her husband, departed this life in Eric County.

Truman Buck was a young man when his parents removed to Pennsylvania, where he was married and located upon a farm in Eric County, which he cultivated until 1853, the date of his advent into Illinois. Making his home in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, he was identified with the interests of that community for two years, and then removed to the farm where his decease occurred.

September 3, 1835, Miss Eliza Drown, who was born in Rose, Wayne County, N. Y., August 15, 1817, became the wife of our subject. She was the daughter of Solomon Drown, a native of Parsonsfield. Me., in which State his father, John Drown, was also born. The grandfather of Mrs. Buck moved to New York State and thence to Pennsylvania, and departed this life in Eric County. His wife was Mrs. Sarah (Ayres) Drown, also a native of Maine. Mrs. Buck died May 30, 1892.

Solomon Drown was married in the Pine Tree State, and about 1816 removed to New York State, which was his home until 1832, when he took up his abode in Washington Township, Eric County, Pa. Five years later, he traveled West to Ohio, and in Seneca County owned a farm upon which he resided at the time of his death. His wife, who, prior to her marriage, was Elizabeth Hatch, also had her birth in Maine, and died in the town of Rose, N. Y.

The eight children who were granted to our subject and his wife are as follows: Elizabeth L., Mrs. Henry R. Van Epps, resides in Peoria; Mary J., who is united in marriage with Abial L. Adams makes her home on her father's old homestead; Eliza, the next in order of birth, is deceased; Joseph S. is a resident of Chicago; William Perry is living in Cherry Valley; Emma, Mrs. George H. Grummon, is a resident of this township, where also Clinton W. lives, and Horace, at present residing in Pocahontas County, Iowa. Mr. Buck is a member of the Free-will Baptist Church, as was Mrs. Buck before her death. Since coming to Illinois, our subject has voted the Republican tieket.

ONATHAN HUSTON KIRK, one of the honored pioneers of Winnebago County has resided upon his present farm on section 3, Guilford Township, for about forty-seven years. He was born in Nottingham Township, Chester County, Pa., August 31, 1817. His father, Jonathan Kirk, was born in Cecil County, Md., and was a son of Ehsha and Mary (Allen) Kirk. The grandparents of our subject were Quakers, and died in that faith. His father was reared in his native county, and when a young man went to Chester County, Pa., where he married Elizabeth Thompson, who was born in Nottingham Township, and was the daughter of William and Elizabeth (Huston) Thompson He settled on land which his wife had inherited and there resided until 1823, when, with two or three other enterprising men, he started for the West, and made a location in Washtenaw County, Mich., before the State was even organized as a Territory. He built a log cabin, the first building in Ypsilanti, and erected the first mill at that place. In 1827, he bought a tract of land in Dixborough, and moved his family thereon. The year 1829 he contracted to build a mill at Coldwater, which he completed early in the following year. Soon afterward he was taken ill and died. The mother of our subject had died in Pennsylvania in 1821, after which the father wedded Hannah Thomas, a native of Steuben County, N. Y. After his death, she became the wife of Samuel Hicks, and in 1835 came to Winnebago County, locating in Guilford Township. She afterward went to Wisconsin, where her death occurred.

Our subject was only four years old when his mother died, and he then went to live with his uncle Joseph, with whom he remained until 1827, when he went to Michigan. After his father's death, he began earning his own livelihood, working by the month at breaking land at $7. He continued to reside in Michigan until 1836, when he started for Illinois, arriving in Winnebago County in March. He found a sparsely settled region; nearly all of the land was owned by the Government, deer and other wild game were found in abundance, and the life which Mr. Kirk here lived was that of a true pioneer. After a short time he entered a claim, and when the land came into market purchased it at the land sales in Galena, in 1839. He located on the place in 1845, and it has since been his home.

In July, 1844, Mr. Kirk wedded Marcella Dennis, who was born in Yarmouth, Canada, March 18, 1819. Her father, Ezekiel Dennis, was born in New Jersey, and his father, Obediah Dennis, was a native of the same State and of English descent. The grandfather, soon after the Revolutionary War, removed to Canada. His son Ezekiel was then only three years old, and in that country was reared and educated. He married Rachel Moore, who was born in Nova Scotia, and was the daughter of Thomas and Esther Moore. She died in the town of Yarmouth, when Mrs. Kirk was quite young. After his marriage, Mr. Dennis removed to Yarmouth, becoming one of its early settlers, and purchased a tract of timber land, upon which he built a log cabin and there made his home until 1836, when he sold out and started with his family for the Territory of Michigan, making the journey by team. He settled in St. Joseph, where he resided until 1842, which year witnessed his arrival in what is now Guilford Township, Winnebago County. He improved the farm which he there occupied, but afterward left it and spent his last days in Olmstead County, Minn.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Kirk were born five children: Mary E., Ellen M., Henry F., William H., and Emma M. Mary E. and Henry F. are dead. The family is well worthy of mention in this volume, and the parents are among the most prominent pioneers of the county, few having longer been residents of this community. Mr. Kirk has borne an active part in the advancement and upbuilding of the community. He has been honored with a number of offices of trust, has served as School Trustee, Assessor and for twenty years represented Guilford Township in the County Board of Supervisors. In politics, he was first a Whig, but since the organization of the Republican party has been one of its stalwart supporters.

OMER L. BOWEN, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Flora Township, Boone County, was born in Newport, Herkimer County, N. Y., on the 9th of March, 1839. His father, William S. Bowen, was born in Oneida County, N. Y., February 5, 1814, and the grandfather was an early settler of Deerfield Township, that county. He followed farming and died in 1849, at the age of sixty-seven. William Bowen was reared in the usual manner of farmer's sons, and was joined in wedlock with Maria Rix, a native of Herkimer County and a daughter of Theophilus Rix, who was born in Connecticut. He became a pioneer of the town of Fairfield, Herkimer County, and in the midst of the wilderness cleared a farm, upon which he resided until 1857, when he emigrated to Belvidere, Ill. His death occurred in that city in his one hundredth year. After his marriage. William Bowen purchased a tract of land bordering on West Canada Creek, in the town of Newport, Herkimer County, and here resided until his death in 1850. His wife departed this life on the home farm May 12, 1813, at the age of twenty-seven years.

Our subject was only four years old when his mother died. He was reared by his maternal grandparents and acquired his early education in the district schools, after which he attended Fairfield Academy. With his grandparents he came to Illinois in 1857, and began working by the month until his marriage, when he settled upon the farm that is yet his home. It is a highly-improved tract of one hundred and fifty-five acres, and, with the exception of twenty acres of timber land, the entire amount is under a high state of cultivation.

On the 14th of September, 1859, Mr. Bowen wedded Laura M. Rice, who was born on the farm which is yet her home, July 12, 1841. Her father, Waite Rice, was born in Barkhamsted, Litchfield County, Conn., June 3, 1814, and for some years was overseer in the Collins Axe Factory. At an early day he came to Illinois and is numbered among the honored pioneers of Boone County, having located here in 1839. The farm upon which our subject now resides he entered from the Government. He was well known in this community as a man of sterling worth, and served as Justice of the Peace in Flora Township, His death occurred April 6, 1848. His wife bore the maiden name of Laura Case. She was born in Litchfield County, Conn., April 5, 1811, and & still living, a resident of Belvidere. She has been a second time married, her husband being Flavel Smith.

Mrs. Bowen spent the days of her maidenhood on the home farm and attended the old pioneer schools built of logs with slab seats, puncheon thors and huge tire-places. To her husband she has been a faithful companion and helpmate. They have one daughter, Nellic, now the wife of Fred Hall, by whom she has one son, Homer. They live in Belvidere.

In politics, Mr. Bowen is a Republican, and socially, is a member of Flora Camp No. 621, M. W. A. Himself and wife are members of Royal Neighbor Chapter, M. W. A., and of Excelsior Lodge No. 2654, Patrons of Industry. He was one of the original members of the Creamery Company, formed in 1882, and has been Treasurer since its organization. The products of this creamery are of the best repute, and the business has been a paying one since the beginning.

HARLES J. ROSENQUIST, a retired farmer of Rockford, Ill. The following is a brief sketch of the career of Mr. Rosenquist, a man whose present substantial position in life has been reached entirely through his perseverance, and the facts connected with his agricultural operations, and their results, only show what a person with courage and enlightened views can accomplish.

He first saw the light of day in Kalmar Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, October 22, 1841, and as he grew up learned the trade of carpenter. When twenty-five years of age, he came to the United States, located in Rockford, Ill., and with very little means to back him, began the struggle for a livelihood. He followed carpentering for some time and also worked as a day laborer for a number of years, thus accumulating sufficient means to invest in land. He owns a good farm of eighty acres in Cherry Valley Township, all well cultivated, and on which are good substantial buildings, etc. Since his residence in this county, he has resided part of the time in Rockford, where he has a wide circle of friends, and where he is highly esteemed. His house, which he built himself, is located at No. 1103 Charles Street, and is large and comfortable.

Shortly after settling in this county, Mr. Rosenquist was joined by two brothers. Allen A. and F. August. The father, Charles Johnston, died when our subject was but twelve years of age. He was in the prime of life and was a farmer by occupation. His wife died about twenty years later, when sixty years of age. Her maiden name was Lena S. Donaldson. Both were natives of Sweden.

Charles J. Rosenquist selected as his life's companion Miss Emily G. Johnson, a native of Kalmar Lan, Sweden, and their union was solemnized in Rockford, Ill., in 1870. To them were born two children: Gustave A. and Jennie F., both of whom died young. Mr. and Mrs. Rosenquist are members of the First Lutheran Church, and he is a Republican in politics.

Mrs. Rosenquist came to the United States in 1869 with a sister, Huldah M., who became the wife of Gustave Johnson. The latter is a prominent lumberman of Chicago. Mr. Rosenquist is the only member of his family now in this city, and Mrs. Rosenquist has no other relative in this country. Her father, John Jacobson, died in Sweden when sixty-nine years of age. He was a farmer all his life. His wife, whose name was formerly Anna F. Carlson, died when a little past seventy. During their entire lives they had been exemplary members of the Lutheran Church, and were well known in their native place.

NDREW WIIITING. The gentleman of whom we shall attempt to give a biographical sketch in outline, is one of the old pioneers of Boone County, owning and occupying a fine estate of three hundred acres located on sections 22, 26 and 27. He is a man who has attained considerable prominence in his locality, by reason of his intelligence and progressive tendencies and also by his genial and frank ways.

Born in Guiiford, Piscataquis County, Me., November 9, 1831, our subject is a son of Charles Whiting, a native of Lincoln, Mass. The grandfather of our subject, Gaylen Whiting, was born in Hingham, that State, where were also born his father, Daniel, the great-grandfather of our subject; his father, also named Daniel, the great-greatgrandfather; his father, Samuel, the great-greatgreat-grandfather; and his father, James, Sr., the great-great-great-grandfather. James Whiting, the first of that name to come to America, was a native of England and was married in Hingham in the year 1647, and, as far as known, passed his last days there. His son James was born in 1651; James' son Samuel in 1685; Samuel's son Daniel in 1722; and Daniel's son Daniel in 1745. But little is known of his descendants until we come to Gaylen Whiting, the grandfather of our subject, who married Rachel Prouty and for some years made his home in Lincoln, Mass. On removing to North Brookfield, that State, he engaged in farming and departed this life in that place. He was born in 1766.

Charles Whiting was born in 1802, and was reared in North Brookfield, and from there went to Maine and locating in Piscataquis County, purchased a tract of timber land and engaged in farming until 1838, at which time he came to Illinois, and during the winter of that year lived one and one-half miles northwest of Belvidere.

In the spring of 1839, the father of our subject purchased a claim to a tract of Government land in the same township, on which there was one acre fenced and a log house and stable. Mr. Whiting rented land to work that year, during which time he traded his claim for one in Caledonia Township, to which he removed the following fall. When the land came into the market, he entered his claim and made his home on his purchase until his death, March 19, 1883, when eighty-one years old. The lady to whom he was married was Elvira Woodward, a native of Garland, Piscataquis County, Me., and the daughter of Oliver and Sallie (Heron) Woodward. She departed this life three years previous to the death of her husband in 1881.

Andrew Whiting was a lad of seven years when he came to the Prairie State with his parents, and in that early day the county was very sparsely settled and gave but little promise of its wonderful development. There were no railroads in the vicinity and for many years the farmers did all their marketing at Chicago. Our subject remained under the parental roof until his marriage, in 1854, to Mary A. Kyes, when he located on a portion of the old homestead, and in 1882 settled on the original home farm. His estate comprises three hundred acres, which is excellently improved with all the buildings and machinery which go to make up a first-class farm. Mr. Whiting is a man of character and ability, and is enjoying a just meed of influence and standing in the community, and knows that he has reached this point from a boyhood which promised nothing except through his own right hand and sturdy heart.

Mrs. Whiting was born in Loraine County, Ohio, and is the daughter of Samuel and Mercy (Dailey) Kyes. She has become the mother of three children: Charles O., William A. and Ephraim A. Mr. and Mrs. Whiting are members of the Congregational Church, and in his political affiliations our subject has strong confidence in the future of the Republican party.

RANK GILMORE. Among the native-born residents of Winnebago County who have made their mark in the farming community, we are pleased to mention Mr. Gilmore, who is at present residing on a good farm located on section 34, Owen Township. He was born June 22. 1858, a son of William Gilmore, whose birth occurred in Fifeshire, Scotland, February 2, 1826, and who in turn was a son of William and Ann (Halley) Gilmore. The father was a lad of six years when he accompanied his parents to America, they making settlement in Newbury, Vt., where he was reared to manhood and resided until 1853, which was the date of his advent into Winnebago County.

The father of our subject had borrowed money to pay his way to the Prairie State, and upon arriving in Rockford he had but two cents in his pocket, and, to add to his misfortune, was in debt. He worked by the day, and being very industrious and economical, saved a sufficient sum to pay the entire amount of his indebtedness. Very soon thereafter, he and his brother John borrowed sufficient money with which to purchase thirty acres of Government land in Owen Township, the price of the land being $37.50. Through industry and perseverance he was prospered in his undertakings and became widely known as a successful and enterprising farmer as well as an upright and honorable citizen. At the time of his death, which occurred in 1891, he was probably the wealthiest farmer in Winnebago County.

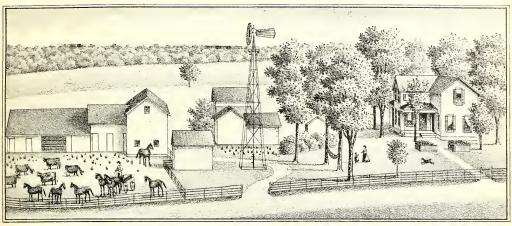

In 1857, William Gilmore was united in marriage with Jane Mack, who was born in Hesse-Cassel, Germany. Her father dying when she was quite young, she accompanied her unele, John Roseback, to America. Her marriage was a happy and congenial union, and six children came to bless the home, namely: Frank, Warren, Fred, Willis, Annie and Nettie. About 1878, the family located on the farm which still remains the home of the widowed mother and the three youngest children.

Frank Gilmore, of this sketch, passed his youth in a comparatively uneventful manner, and having been reared to the calling of a farmer, naturally chose that as an occupation through life. Like his father, he possesses the industrious and enterprising nature which almost invariably brings their fortunate possessor material success. In January, 1889, he established a home of his own, his wife being Julia, daughter of Decius Peckham, and a native of Michigan. They are the parents of two children: Grace and William. On another page of this volume will be noticed a view of the attractive residence of Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore, which, with the inviting rural surroundings, bespeaks the thrift and refined tastes of the owner.

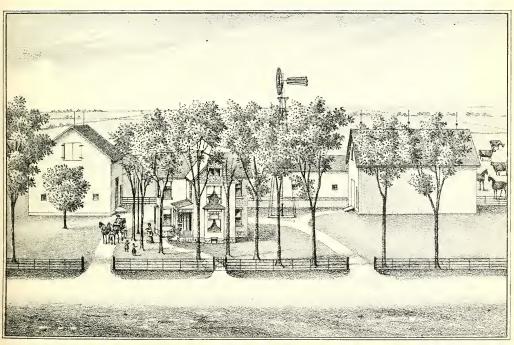

NDREW JOHNSON, a prosperous and enterprising young farmer, operates two hundred and forty-seven acres of valuable land on section 18, Cherry Valley Township, and is a representative of one of the pioneer families of Winnebago County. His father, John Johnson, was born in Sweden, in March, 1820, and with his first wife came to this country in the spring of 1850, sailing from his native shores in April. The voyage was a long and dangerous one, the vessel not reaching this country until six months later.

For many generations back the Johnson family were farming people. The father of our subject buried his first wife in Rockford. She died soon after locating here, leaving one son, John, who died at the age of nine years. Mr. Johnson was afterward again married, his second wife being the mother of Andrew. They have buried four children: Mary, who died at the age of sixteen years; Andrew (first), who died in childhood, and two infant sons. The living children are Albert, Ida and Andrew.

For about three years, the parents resided in Rockford and then settled upon a farm in Ogle County, where the succeeding thirteen years of their life were passed. Mr. Johnson then sold out and located upon a part of the farm which is now the property of our subject and his father. He first purchased eighty acres of wild land, to which he afterward added as time passed until he became the owner of a fine and valuable farm of two hundred and forty-seven acres. It was improved with a good dwelling, barns and all the other accessories. This our subject owns in connection with his father.

In 1876, John Johnson laid aside all business cares and is now living a retired life at No. 210 Sixth Street, Rockford. He has reached the advanced age of seventy-one years, and his wife is sixty-five years of age. They are both adherents of the Lutheran faith, belonging to the First Lutheran Church of Rockford. In politics, Mr. Johnson is a Republican.

Under the paternal roof, our subject was reared to manhood in the usual manner of farmer lads. He shared in the experiences of frontier life and aided in the arduous task of developing a new farm. His education was acquired in the district schools of the neighborhood and he is a well-informed man. The excellent farm which he now owns yields him a golden tribute for the care and labor he bestows upon it and he is a prosperous citizen. He follows in the commendable footsteps of his father and is a stalwart advocate of Republican principles. He is also a member of the Lutheran Church.

In May, 1889, in Rock Island, Mr. Johnson led to the marriage altar Miss Emma Lindgren, of that city, daughter of John and Anna (Frederickson) Lindgren, natives of Sweden, who emigrated to this country when their daughter was a maiden of only seven summers. The union of our subject and his wife has been blessed with one daughter, Edith L., who was born February 17, 1890, and is the life and joy of this happy home. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson rank high in social circles and have many warm friends throughout the community.

The family residence, a view of which with the rural surroundings appears on another page, is an attractive abode, and the farm is one of the most highly cultivated in the county.

YLVESTER G. ATWOOD, a resident farmer of Harlem Township, Winnebago County, living on section 30, was born in the town of Washington, Berkshire County, Mass., May 5, 1835, and is a son of Phineas and Hulda (Haskell) Atwood, mention of whom is made in the sketch of David Atwood on another page of this work. The father was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church for a number of years. Our subject spent the first ten years of his life in the Bay State and then came with his parents to Illinois. Although so young, he remembers many incidents of the journey, which was made by way of the canal and the Great Lakes to Chicago, where they arrived five weeks after leaving home. There the father purchased a team and wagon, and in that way they proceeded on their way to Winnebago County, which they found to be a sparsely settled region and most of the people were in very limited circumstances. Chicago and Milwaukee were the principal markets and there were many hardships and privations to be endured in those early days by the pioneers, to whom a debt of gratitude is due for what they have done for the county and its upbuilding. Sylvester Atwood shared with the family in the experiences of frontier life. He aided in the arduous task of developing a new farm, and resided with his parents until his marriage.

On the 8th of October, 1863, he led to the marriage altar Lydia Rosecrans, a native of Troy. N. Y., and a daughter of Henry and Maria (Carey) Rosecrans. Her father was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., and was a son of James Rosecrans, a wheelwight by trade, who followed that business throughout his entire life. His wife bore the maiden name of Mary Townsend. The father of Mrs. Atwood learned the trade of a pattern-maker and at the time of his marriage settled in Troy, N. Y., where he engaged in business throughout the remainder of his life. He wedded Miss Carey, who was born in the town of Richmond, near Troy, and was a daughter of Abram Carey. She died in Harlem Township, at the home of her daughter, in 1881, at the age of eighty-live years.

The union of Mr. and Mrs. Atwood was blessed with three children: Willie G., born May 20, 1865; M. Belle, May 19, 1874; and Gay Maud, April 8, 1877. They began their domestic life upon the farm which is still their home and many happy years have there been passed. Mr. Atwood has been very successful as a farmer and now owns and operates two hundred and sixty-five acres of arable land in Harlem and Guilford Townships, the greater part of which is under a high state of cultivation, while many improvements of both a useful and ornamental character indicate the thrift and enterprise of the owner, who is regarded as one of the practical and progressive agriculturists of the community as well as a representative citizen. In politics, he is independent, giving his support to the man whom he thinks best qualified to fill the office, regardless of party affiliations. He is a member of the Masonic order, also a member of the Patrons of Husbandry and was Master of the order for six years and is Overseer of the State organization.

NDREW C. LONG, who is numbered among the early settlers of Rockford of 1862, and has been identified with the growth and upbuilding of the city since that time, was born on the 12th of November, 1837, in Sweden. His parents died in that country, both being about fifty-five years of age when called to their final rest. Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth in the land of his birth and there learned the shoemaker's trade. In 1857, at the age of twenty years, he bade goodbye to his old home and in company with his sister Emeline sailed for Boston, Mass., where they arrived after a voyage of seven weeks and two days. They came on at once to the West and the sister has since married Mr. Hilliard, by whom she has two children. The brother of our subject, Aaron, has since come to this country and resides with Andrew. These three are the only surviving members of the family.

Mr. Long whose name heads this record was united in marriage, in Rockford, with Miss Anna H. Bowman, who was born not far from Gottenburg, Sweden, on the 6th of April, 1844, and when a child of eight summers was brought by her parents to America in 1852, the family sailing to New York City, where they arrived after a voyage of six weeks. They came on at once to Illinois, settling in St. Charles, and in the autumn of the same year the husband and father, Andrew Bowman, died. He was then about fifty years of age. His wife afterward married Robert Welton and is again a widow. She makes her home in Rockford with her daughter, Mrs. Long, and is yet an active and intelligent old lady of eighty years. She has been a life-long member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, to which Mr. Bowman also belonged. One of her sons, P. G. Bowman, is still living in Rockford; and Eva C., widow of the late John Nelson, the inventor, resides on Seminary Street of this city.

For three years after coming to this country, Andrew Long resided in Geneva and St. Charles, Ill., and afterward made his home in Chicago. At length he came to Rockford in 1862, and this city has since been his place of residence. He was then in limited circumstances but he began work at his trade of shoe-making and prosperity has attended his efforts here, so that he is now in comfortable circumstances, having by his own industry, good management and enterprise won a handsome competence. He now owns a pleasant home at No. 607 Seventh Avenue. Himself and wife are among the oldest members of the First Lutheran Church of this city, to which most of their children also belong, and take an active part in its work and upbuilding. In politics, he is a Republican but has never had the inclination or found the time from his business to devote to office-seeking.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Long numbers six children: Frank E., who married Ida Holmberg, is now a book-keeper in the Manufacturers' National Bank, of this city; Charles W. is employed in the Nelson Knitting Factory; Anton C. is a clerk in B. R. Waldo's book store; Anna Genevieve is at home; Minnie S. is in attendance at the Deaf-mute Institute of Jacksonville; and E. Florence completes the family.

OHN C. TRIPP, one of the prominent and highly respected citizens of Winnebago County, residing on section 36, Harlem Township, was born in Little Falls, N. Y., March 27, 1833. His grandfather, Stephen Tripp, was a native of Dutchess County and a farmer by occupation. He removed to Saratoga County and after some years went to Herkimer County, locating near Little Falls. He spent his last days in the town of Winfield. His wife bore the maiden name of Jemima Mosher and was a native of Saratoga County. She came to Illmois and passed away in Caledonia Township, Boone County.

The father of our subject, Noah Tripp, was born in Saratoga County and learned the trade of a shoemaker and weaver, following those occupations in Herkimer County until 1836. The succeeding ten years of his life were spent in Oswego County, and in 1846 he came to Illinois accompanied by his three children. On his arrival in this State, he pre-empted a tract of Government land in what is now Caledonia Township, Boone County, and at once built a log cabin and began the development of a farm. After some years, he sold out and came to Harlem Township, this county, where he bought a home and spent his remaining days. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Sarah Allen, was born in the town of Winfield, Herkimer County, N. Y., and died in 1843, in Schroeppel, Oswego County, N. Y. Her father, Ebenezer Allen, was a native of Massachusetts and served under Gen. Putnam in the Revolutionary War. From his native State he removed to Danbury, Conn., where he married Hulda Stuart, who was born in Edinburg, Scotland, and died in Oswego County, N. Y., at the advanced age of ninety-five years. Immediately after their marriage, they removed to the Empire State, locating in the town of Winfield. Some years later, they went to Oswego County, where Mr. Allen bought a farm, upon which he lived throughout the remainder of his life.

We now take up the personal history of our subject who was a lad of thirteen years when he came to Hlinois, thus spending almost his entire life here. Under the parental roof he remained until attaining his majority, and during a portion of that time had operated a part of his father's farm on shares. He cut the oats with a cradle and then hauled them to Rockford, where he received ten cents per bushel for his grain. At the age of twenty-one, he began working by the month as a farm hand and was thus employed until 1857; he also ran a breaking team, when he operated his father's farm for two years. On the 16th of February, 1859, he started on a journey across the plains to Pike's Peak, but before reaching that place he learned that the prospects were not good, and with others pushed on to California, where he engaged in mining until late in the autumn of 1867, when he started homeward by way of the Nicaragua route. In the spring of 1868, he settled on the farm which he now owns and occupies, and to its improvement has since devoted his energies.

Mr. Tripp has been twice married. In 1868, he wedded Mary E. Tofflemire, who was born in Canada and was a daughter of Jonas and Sally (Anderson) Tofflemire, pioneers of Harlem Township of 1837. She died December 17, 1882, and on the 2d of May. 1885, Mr. Tripp was united in marriage with Clara Nelson, a native of Sweden, who came with her two brothers to America. They have two children: Mary E. and Joseph C.

Mr. and Mrs. Tripp are members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, in which he is an Elder, and take an active part in its work and upbuilding. Our subject has taken considerable interest in the Sabbath-school and is President of the county work. In politics, he is a stalwart Republican and a member of several local societies. He has been President of the Argyle Creamery Association since its organization in March, 1885; is President of the Society of Patrons of Industry; is a member of Harmony Grange No. 957, and of the Mutual Aid Society. He also holds membership with Argyle Association No. 2249, and is Treasurer of the State Association, and is President of the Argyle Association of Mutual and Social Improvement. He is an honored member of these various organizations and, as stated in the beginning of this record, Mr. Tripp is one of the leading and influential citizens of Winnebago County, where he is widely and favorably known.

OHN J. BUCKLAND, a successful boot and shoe dealer at No. 309 Kishwakee Street, Rockford, where he has been engaged in business since 1876, was born in Carlshaeun Province, Blaken, Sweden, May 3, 1834, and was the first of the family to come to America. He secured a good education in the city schools and when yet under age came to this country, landing in New York City after a nine-weeks' occan voyage.

In the early part of the year 1859, he went to Denver, Col., which city then consisted of a couple of shanties, and there Mr. Buckland was offered a block in the center of that great city in exchange for a mule that he owned. He saw no money in the trade at the time, and shortly afterward he. with over sixty others, went up in the mountains on a gold exploring expedition. After stopping for a short time at Mt. McGregor Mines, the whole party decided to go farther up the mountain, and with only ten days' rations they started out. They ventured too far away and were lost for twenty days. They suffered untold agonies from hunger, having nothing for days but raw meat without salt, and some of the time were nnable to get that. After four days of fasting, they had decided to sacrifice a mule, when one of the party killed an elk. They were so nearly starved that they could hardly wait for their portion, and very little meat was left on the bones after they had dined. After that, a deer was occasionally killed, but they were half starved all the time. At one time the captain of the company gave each about two or three pounds of meat and instructed them not to eat their portion until the day closed. The men were so hungry, however, that when evening came all had devoured their share, except the captain, who had a very small piece left. It was in this way that the company got back to Denver. This is, in part, a review of Mr. Buckland's experience in going to Pike's Peak. He was afflicted with the mountain fever when first starting out and for three days had to be steadied on his mule by ropes. It was he and his partner, a Mr. Lewis, of Kanka-kee, Ill., from which place they started, who discovered the McGregor claim or diggings, now the site of Central City, Colo. Mr. Buckland was the only Swede in the company.

In the latter part of 1859, our subject returned to Illinois, and located in Rockford. In the fall of 1861, he enlisted in the Union Army, from this city, in the Silver Spar Battery, and served in the Fifteenth Army Corps, under Gen. Sherman, but later under Gen. Logan. He participated in twenty-seven active engagements, besides numerous skirmishes, and was never absent from duty. He was in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Arkansas Post, Hot Springs, Jackson, Vicksburg and other intermediate places, Memphis, and was with Sherman in his march to the sca. He was honorably discharged in June, 1865, after four years of hard service. He was slightly wounded at one time.

In 1866, after returning to Rockford, Mr. Buekland went West again, and spent four and a half years as a miner in Montana, after which he returned to Rockford. Later he went to Jackson County, Minn., took up a soldier's claim, and tried farming for four years. However, the grasshoppers "jumped his claim" so often that he gave up trying to till the soil, and returned to Rockford, where he has carried on the boot and shoe business since. He has been very successful in this venture and has a large and increasing trade. He also owns some valuable property in Rockford and is a stockholder of the Rockford Manufacturing Company, a thriving institution.

Mr. Buckland's parents, Jonas and Ellen (Pearson) Swensen, passed their entire days in Sweden, the father dying when eighty-two years of age, and the mother at the age of sixty. Both were members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. The father followed the occupation of a farmer. Of the fourteen children born to them, ten sons and four daughters, five are now living and all are married: Swen, resides in Sweden, and is a baker; Otto is a goldsmith in Copenhagen; Joseph is a resident of Rockford, and Mrs. John Jacobson (see biography).

Our subject was married in Winnebago County, Ill., to Miss Susan Colwell, a native of this county, Cherry Valley Township, born December 29, 1845. She has never lived out of the county, except for a few years in Minnesota. Her parents were natives of the State of Maryland, but came to Winnebago County in the latter part of the '30s, and were among the first settlers. They located on a farm in Cherry Valley and there the father, Benjamin Colwell, died when eighty-three years of age. His wife lived to be quite old but died of a cancer when seventy years of age. They were the parents of a large family of children, seven of whom are living now, five sons and two daughters, and all are in comfortable circumstances.

Mr. and Mrs. Buckland are the parents of four children: Myrtle D., educated in the city schools; Charles E., also educated in the city schools; Izora at home and Zinia E., at home. Mr. Buckland and wife are well known and universally respected in Rockford. Politically, he is a sound Republican, and socially, he is a Master Mason, and a charter member of G. L. Nevins Post, G. A. R., No. 1.

OSEPH II. FAKE. The results of unflagging perseverance, prudent economy and good habits, probably find no better exponent in Boone County than in the abovenamed gentleman, who is residing on his excellent farm on section 7, Flora Township. He is universally popular in both business and social circles and is possessed of more than ordinary ability, together with the energy and enterprise which seldom fail to win.

Our subject was born December 5, 1819, in Rensselaer County, N. Y., and is a son of John Fake, also a native of that State. The grandfather of our subject was born in Germany and, as far as is known, is the only member of the family who came to America. He located in Rensselaer County, N Y., when a young man, where he purchased a farm and resided until his decease.

John Fake was reared in his native State and died in February, 1825, in Rensselaer County. The lady whom he chose as his second wife was the mother of our subject and bore the maiden name of Susanna See. She was born January 10, 1793, in the Empire State and died in Brunswick, Rensselaer County, December 31, 1882, in her ninetieth year.

He of whom we write was five years of age when his father died and he continued to make his home with his mother until reaching mature years. After his marriage, he purchased a flax mill in Rensselaer County, and in addition to operating it conducted a farm which he rented. He made his home in Rensselaer County until 1853, at which time he came to Illinois, which he had visited in 1847, and had then purchased eighty acres of Government land in Winnebago County. In 1853, he bought forty-five acres adjoining his original tract, for which he paid $15 per acre. There was a log house on the place and in that Mr. Fake made his home for about two years, when he built a good frame house in which he lived until 1859, when he sold his estate and purchased property near his home, which was his abidingplace until 1867, when he rented his farm and purchased a portion of the farm where he now resides. His estate comprises one hundred and seventy-five acres and is well improved with all the necessary buildings which make of it a first-class farm.

January 27, 1846, Joseph II. Fake and Miss Sarah A. Lane were united in marriage. The lady was born in Pittstown, Rensselaer County, N. Y., October 4, 1822, and died November 22, 1886. They have no children but have reared two: Sarah Elizabeth, who was married, December 18, 1869, to Fred B. Tyers, and is residing in Washington, D. C., having a family of six children; and Thomas C. Cramer.

Mrs. Fake joined the Methodist Episcopal Church before her marriage and our subject became a member of that body in 1852. He has officiated as Class-leader, and at the present time is Trustee. He takes a deep interest in politics and is a member of the Republican party. He is self-made in the true sense of that term and has been so long and closely connected with the interests of Boone County that we are glad to be able to represent him on the pages of this volume. While a resident of Winnebago County, Mr. Fake was elected Justice of the Peace for three terms.

ARLTON W. SHELDON. Whilst history is philosophy illustrated, biography is the lamp of experience to encourage and guide us in the paths of success, or deter us from the road to ruin. The preservation of the facts, therefore, making up the lives of prominent men, is not only a source of gratification to personal friends, but a foundation of information to all, serving as guide-boards by the wayside, or beacon lights to the way-farer who would achieve fortune or distinction in like walks of life. In Mr. Sheldon, who is engaged in the practice of law and a general loan and insurance business, we find a gentleman who has won, unaided, the leading position he holds to-day among the prominent citizens of Rockford.

The original of this sketch was born in Victor, Ontario County, N. Y., March 14, 1828, and is the son of Gad Sheldon, a native of New England. His father, Deacon Ezra Sheldon, was, from the best information at hand, also a native of New England, and engaged in the mercantile business. He spent the last year of his life at the home of his son, Ezra, at Mendon, Monroe County, N. Y. The maiden name of his wife was Sallie Perry. She was a native of New England and the mother of three children, namely: Ezra, Asaph and Gad.

The father of our subject was a young man when locating in Ontario County, where he purchased a farm in Victor and made the place his home until 1834, at which time he removed to South Bristol, that county. He there became the owner of a good estate, and cultivated the soil until his decease, which occurred in 1883, at the age of eighty-seven years. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Eunice Hosford. She was born, it is supposed, in Genesce County, N. Y. Her father, the grandfather of our subject, was a patriot in the Revolutionary War, and died after having attained the advanced age of nmety-two years. His good wife departed this life at about the same age.

Gad Sheldon was a soldier in the War of 1812, and reared a family of six children, namely: Mary E., Alexander, Charles H., Carlton W., Porter and Ogilvie L. Mary E. married William Doty and is now deceased; Alexander, an attorney, who practiced at Jamestown, N. Y., was a member of the New York State Legislature, and is now deceased. Charles is a real-estate dealer at Rochester, N. Y., and Porter, who for a time practiced the profession of law in Rockford, succeeded his brother Alexander in Jamestown, N. Y., where he is residing at the present time. He is very prominent in public affairs, and served as Representative in Congress Ogilvie went to the Territory from his district. of Kansas in 1854, making a location in the town of Burlingame. He also served as a member of the Territorial Legislature, and at the time of his decease was a member of the State Senate.

Carlton W. Sheldon, of this sketch, prosecuted his primary studies in the public schools of Victor and South Bristol, N. V. He spent a year as a student of East Bloomfield Academy when Prof. S. W. Clark, author of "Clark's Grammar," was its principal. In 1851, he came to Illinois by the railroad to Buffalo, then by way of the Lakes to Kenosha, Wis., where he secured a team, which conveyed him to McHenry County. That same fall he engaged to teach the school at Woodstock, which position he held during the fall, winter and spring terms, spending his leisure moments in reading law, which profession it was his determination to follow.

August 12, 1852, the gentleman whose name heads this sketch made his advent into Rockford, and at once entered the law office of Col. Jasen Marsh. He was a faithful student, and in the fall of that year was admitted to the Bar, and, opening an office, was actively engaged in the practice of law until 1869, when he entered the employ of the Rockford Insurance Company as Adjuster. He traveled in the interest of that company for five years, then, in 1874, organized the Forest City Insurance Company, being elected its Secretary. He discharged the duties of that responsible position conscientiously for five years, when he resigned and again engaged in the practice of law.

Mr. Sheldon was united in marriage, December 20, 1855, to Harriet J. Hathaway, who was born in Grafton, Mass., and was a daughter of Leonard and Caroline (Thompson) Hathaway. Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon have been blessed by the birth of four children: Charles E., George P., Dora E. and Ethel A. In all the country there is no more ardent, consistent Republican, no man of better impulses and strict integrity than Mr. Sheldon. Independent in his religious views, benevolent and kind, a good neighbor and a kind father and husband, he is entitled to and possesses the confidence of his neighbors and friends.

EORGE BRADLEY. Each succeeding year witnesses marked improvements in the thriving eity of Rockford, particularly in the way of handsome business blocks, residences, etc., and in all these structures there is the blending of the artistic with the utilitarian in modern architecture.

Among those who have acquired reputations as skillful architects, and who is one of the leading men in this line in Northern Illinois, as well as the oldest in Rockford, is George Bradley. The firm has been George Bradley & Son for eleven years and is located in the Stewart Building, where they occupy three floors. They have drawn designs for more than one thousand of the most substantial and modern residences of the city, besides many public buildings, including schoolhouses, churches, etc.

Mr. Bradley has been a resident of Rockford since May, 1855, and has since given his entire time to his business. He is a practical man of experience, thoroughly trained, and well qualified for executing all work appertaining to his profession, and has demonstrated all over the city and surrounding sections, by the numerous buildings which have been erected from his designs, that he knows his business thoroughly. Our subject was formerly a resident of Dixon, Ill., when that place was small, but only remained there one year. He has witnessed the marvelous growth of Rockford, and has ever been forward in advancing any movement that had for its object the prosperity and development of the city.

Born in Dover, Kent County, England, in 1825, Mr. Bradley was but seven years of age when his parents, in 1832, crossed the ocean to America. They were forty-seven days on the water, but finally landed in Boston, Mass., where they remained a short time. From there they went to West Newbury, Essex County, of that State, and there the parents and a brother and four sisters received their final summons.

The father, William Bradley, was a native of Kent County, England, and came of an old and prominent English famity, generally sailors or soldiers. He grew to manhood there and served fourteen years in the English navy, the last year as Shipmaster in the East India navy. After coming to this country, he withdrew from a seafaring life and engaged in tilling the soil. He was born in 1796, and died when forty-nine years of age. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Carlton, was born in 1800, and died in 1852. They were members of the Episcopal Church.

George Bradley is the only surviving member of his immediate family, and his boyhood and youth were spent on the farm in Essex County. This farm is now a part of the large tract of land owned by Maj. Ben Perley Poore, who was a particular friend and crony of our subject. After growing up, the latter was married in Haverhill, that county, to Miss Mary J. Burham, who was born in the Quaker settlement of New Hampshire, and who was of old New England stock. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley attend the Christian Union Church and are highly esteemed in the community. They became the parents of seven children, two deceased: George W. died when young, and Mary E. died at the age of four years. Those living are: Frances J., wife of Andrew Sheratt, secretary and treasurer of the Forest City Insurance Company; Emily A., wife of William D. Dow, a eommercial traveler located at Butte City, Mont.; Ella L., wife of Frank McKinney, of the firm of Clark & McKinney, hardware dealers, at Rockford; Charles W., a practical architect since the age of twelve years, and who, since seventeen years of age has been with his father, is a promising young man. He married Miss Carrie D. Smith, of White Water, Wis., where she was reared and educated, and they now reside on West Mulberry Street, Rockford. Edwin B. resides in Rockford and does business with the Berlin Manufacturing Company, of Beloit, Wis.; he married Miss Emma Cotton, of Rockford. Mr. Bradley and sons are independent in their political views.

ORTON A. BROWN, a retired farmer residing on West State Street, Rockford, was born in Oneida County, N. Y., in 1842, and is of English descent. grandfather, Thomas Brown, Sr., was born in England and married Miss Mary Morton, a native of that country. After all their children were born and the eldest daughter was married, they emigrated to this country, in 1829, the married daughter continuing to reside in her native land. They sailed from Liverpool and after a pleasant voyage arrived at New York. A year later, Mr. Brown settled on a farm in Oneida County, N. Y., where his death occurred in 1855, at the age of eighty-one years. His wife died in 1843, when sixty years of age. They were members of the Episcopal Church in England, but after coming to this country became active members in the Methodist Church.

Thomas Brown, Jr., the father of our subject, was born in Cumberland County, England, in 1811, and at the age of fifteen accompanied his parents on their emigration to America. On the farm which his father had purchased in Oneida County, he was reared, and after attaining to man's estate wedded Alma Fuller, a native of Oneida County, who belonged to an old Connecticut family. Her grandfather removed to Oneida County in an early day and improved what was known as Fuller's Hollow. Her people were among the prominent and leading citizens of that community. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Brown resided upon their farm in Oneida County until they emigrated to Illinois, becoming pioneer settlers of Burritt Township, Winnebago County. Mr. Brown secured one hundred and sixty acres of land from the Government, developed therefrom a fine farm and became one of the leading citizens of the community. He made the first wagon road north of Winnebago Village, and was one of the organizers of the Methodist Church, in which he continued a faithful worker until his death in June, 1890. He was first a Whig and afterward a stanch Republican in politics. Throughout the community, he had a wide acquaintance, and the noble, upright life which he lived won him the high regard of all. His death occurred at the home of our subject, and his wife also died at the home of her son in October, 1888. Their only daughter died at the age of twenty years, and our subject is now the only surviving member of the family. Thomas Brown was a brother of the late Judge William Brown, a very prominent citizen of Rockford.

In the usual manner of farmer lads, our subject was reared to manhood, and after he had attained his majority wedded Jane Houghton, who was born and reared in Durand Township, this county, and is a daughter of Robert Houghton, now deceased. Her mother still resides in Pecatonica Township at an advanced age. Eight children have been born unto our subject and his wife, six of whom are yet living: Mary, Agnes, Etta, Alma, Bessie and Horace. Thomas and Nellie are both deceased.

Mr. Brown is numbered among the carly settlers of this county and for many years was one of its successful farmers. He located in Burritt Township in 1853, and there engaged in agricultural pursuits, and also in stock-raising and dairying. He kept an average of thirty cows and at the same time fed cattle. He yet owns four hundred and twenty acres of valuable land, a part of which is his father's old homestead. He has led a busy and useful life and the success which has crowned his efforts is well deserved. Having acquired a handsome competence, he decided to live a retired life, and about a year since came to Rockford, where he now makes his home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Brown are members of the Presbyterian Church and are bighly respected people. Their home is a pleasant residence, surrounded by commodious grounds, where hospitality abounds and where their friends are always sure of a hearty welcome.

MH Trom

RS. JULIA (KELLEY) TURNER, one of the earliest settlers of Winnebago County. now residing on section 29, Guilford Township, was born in Ireland on the 27th of December, 1814. Her father, Jeremiah Kelley, was also a native of the Emerald Isle and the grandfather, John Kelley, there spent his entire life. Her father was married, in Ireland, to Miss Mary Twemey, and in 1817 came to this country accompanied by his wife and three children. He settled in St. Albans, Vt., where he purchased land and engaged in farming for a number of years, after which he removed to Rochester, Monroe County. In that place, he rented land and engaged in farming for some time. Later he removed to Wisconsin and settled ten miles west of Milwaukee. After a short time spent there, he came to Winnebago County and his last days were passed in Guilford Township.

Our subject was a child of three summers, when, with her parents, she came to America. May 10, 1839, she gave her hand in marriage to Melger II. Turner, who was born September 3, 1818, in the Empire State and was a son of James and Nancy (Thomas) Turner. The days of his boyhood and youth were spent in his native county, where he resided until 1839. He then removed to Illinois, accompanied by his bride and his parents.

The removal was made by way of the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes to Chicago, where Mr. Turner bought a yoke of oxen and a wagon, and thus equipped, the journey was completed to Winnebago County. The year previous, Mr. Turner, Sr., had purchased a "squatter's" claim on section 29, Guilford Township. Upon it was a log cabin, into which the family moved. At that time, all the land was owned by the Government; deer and all kinds of wild game were plentiful and the work of progress and civilization seemed scarcely begun, Mr. Turner added a room to the cabin and occupied it with his father's family until the latter built a home of his own. A few years later, Mr. Turner erected a substantial brick residence, which his widow still occupies, and there made his home until his death. He passed away December 10, 1881, respected by all who knew him. He was one of the representative farmers of the community and an honored pioneer, and his portrait in another page is a valued addition to this volume.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Turner were born two children but the only son, William, died at the age of twelve and a half years. Mary is the wife of Nathan W. Watkins, who occupies an adjoining farm, and their son, William E., resides with his grandmother and manages her farm. Mrs. Turner is a most estimable lady, held in high regard by all who know her, and has a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the community.

EVER JOHNSON has passed the uneventful life of a farmer, and has continued steadily to pursue "the even tenor of his way," and is now classed among the prosperous and progressive farmers of Manchester Township. Although of foreign birth, a native of Norway, he has been a resident of this country since a small boy and takes as much interest in the progress and development of the same as any nativeborn citizen. His birth occurred on the 26th of November, 1845, and his father, John Johnson, was born in the same place in 1804 or 1808. The father was a farmer and was married in his native country, in 1832, to Miss Engebor Peters, also of that country. After the birth of their children, ten in number, and in the spring of 1850, this ambitions couple determined to cross the ocean to America and make a home in the "land of the free," After reaching New York, they went to Chicago via canal and Lakes. Mr. Johnson brought his family to Manchester Township, quartered them with friends, and returned to Chicago for employment, remaining there for a number of months. They were possessed of considerable means for those days and they soon purchased one hundred and twenty acres of land with small improvements, for which they paid $8 per acre. The house was a good log building and in this they lived for many years before Mr. Johnson erected the main part of his present commodious and comfortable dwelling. He died in the fall of 1875, when seventy years of age, and his wife too passed away about three months later, when sixty-six years of age. They had lost three children: Emily, born in 1833, died in Mississippi in 1866 leaving her husband, M. A. Brown, and three children; L. B., a twin brother of Mrs. Brown, died in Chicago in 1872. He was engaged in business on the vessels there and when on a recreation trip he was accidentally drowned. He was only thirtynine years of age and was a prosperous young business man, leaving his wife and three daughters in very comfortable circumstances, all the fruits of his own labors. Ann, born in 1840, became Mrs. William Seaver, and died in Manchester Township in 1872, when but thirty-two years of age. She left her husband with four sons and one daughter. The living members of the family are: A. P., Susan, Peter, Nels; Sever, our subject, and his twin sister, Betsy; Hannah, John and Etta C. A. P. and Nels are manufacturers of furniture in Chicago, and have been in business there for many years. They started in a small way on Green Street soon after the war, and their business has increased until now they have the largest chair factory in the United States. All the members of this family were well educated.

Our subject has followed agricultural pursuits all his life and married a farmer's daughter, Miss Betsy Seaver, May 25, 1882, Her parents, Knudt and Thora Seaver, were both Norwegians, who came to the States at an early day. Mrs. Johnson was born in Manchester Township in 1859. After marriage, our subject and wife settled on the old homestead and are now the owners of one hundred and seventy-seven acres of good, productive land, with ample barns, outbuildings, etc. His barn was the first one erected in the neighborhood and was built by his father from timber that grew on the farm. One barn, 30x50 feet, has the stable in the basement. Mr. Johnson is engaged in general farming and in connection raises a great many hogs, selling from forty to fifty head each year. He keeps from thirty to forty head of horses and horned cattle, and also about twelve cows. He and Mrs. Johnson hold membership in the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

AMUEL KIRK. Lives of public-spirited and successful citizens furnish examples which should encourage others to greater efforts and nobler deeds; and among those who are building for themselves monuments that will outlast shafts of granite or statues in bronze, may be mentioned Mr. Kirk, who, amid comforts accumulated by his unremitting exertions, and surrounded by the evidences of the love of his family, the respect of his acquaintances and the confidence of his friends, is tranquilly passing the twilight of his life at his pleasant home in Pecatonica.

The father of our subject, Samuel Kirk, Sr., was the son of Thomas Kirk and was born in Northamptonshire, England, where he was also reared and married. In 185t, he emigrated to America with his wife and three sons (two sons having come hither previously) and located in Rockford, where he engaged in teaming for three years. Thence removing to Seward Township, Winnebago County, he purchased a quarter-section of land, and upon the home he there established resided until his death at the age of sixty-five years. His wife passed away at the age of seventy-eight years, ten months and sixteen days.

Born in Northamptonshire, England, April 24, 1836, our subject was a lad of about fifteen years when he came to America. He aided his father in teaming at Rockford and afterward accompanied him to the farm in Seward Township. After farming for three years in Winnebago Township, he returned to Seward, where he operated and cultivated a tract of land until he retired from farming pursuits and removed to Pecatonica. His labors resulted in the accumulation of a considerable amount of this world's goods, through the exercise of good judgment and integrity. Meanwhile he has ever maintained a deep interest in religious work, is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, prominent in its councils, and has served as Class-leader and Steward for thirty years. His political affiliations are with the Prohibition party and he takes an active part in public affairs.

In 1858, Mr. Kirk was united in marriage with Miss Ann Faulkner, who was born November 9, 1840. She is the daughter of John and Mary Faulkner, of whom see sketch elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Kirk are the parents of the following-named children: William, born in Seward Township, December 24, 1862, married Emma Logan, who died October 2, 1888, leaving one son. Howard R., born August 15, 1888; Elizabeth A., born September 5, 1864, married Seigel Buesingay and has two children living; Charles, born in Windbago Township, December 20, 1866; and Fannie, born in the same township, April 7, 1868, married Charles Eddy.

ONRAD A. NEWMAN. a successful and prominent designer and draughtsman, employed by the Union Furniture Company and the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company, was born in Sweden, March 31, 1860. His father died before he was born. His mother afterward became the wife of Mr. Moberg, and with her family came to the United States, locating in Rockford, where she is still living at the age of sixty-four years. Her second husband died some years ago. He was a member of the Methodist Church, to which Mrs. Moberg also belongs.

Our subject was a lad of eight summers when, with the family, he crossed the broad Atlantic. Almost his entire life, therefore, has been spent in this city and of much of its growth and development he has been an eye-witness. His education was here acquired in the public schools and he became a carver in the employ of the Union Furniture Company, with which he remained for fifteen years. In the meantime, he gained a reputation as a draughtsman and designer and for some time has given the latter profession his closest attention. He has always been regarded as a skilled workman, and it is said by some of the leading stockholders of the companies by which he is employed, that much of their success is due to the designing of Mr. Newman and his skilled work. He has been associated with the Union Furniture Company for some seven years, and with the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company for the past three years. He is also a stockholder and Director in both.

In Sheridan, Ill., Mr. Newman was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Mary Rasmusson, who was born in Chicago, in 1868, and when quite young went with her parents to La Salle County. In Sheridan, her education was acquired and the days of her maidenhood were passed. Her parents were both natives of Norway. Her father, J. Rasmusson, who is now well advanced in years, is a shoe dealer of Sheridan. Her mother was called to the home beyond some years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Newman are the proud parents of four interesting children, three sons and one daughter: Earl A., Lyle W., Jennie V. and Ray II. Our subject and his wife hold membership with the Swedish Methodist Church and are actively interested in its growth and upbuilding. Mr. Newman is a Prohibitionist in politics. The cause of temperance finds in him a warm friend and he is an earnest advocate of everything calculated to promote the moral, social and educational interests of the city. His life has been well and worthily spent in the interests of his business and his family and he holds a high rank among his fellowtownsmen, as an upright and straightforward business man, who deserves the confidence of the community.

EORGE II. HOLMES, who ranks among the well-to-do and progressive farmers of Rockford Township, is at present residing on section 21, where he is engaged in the successful enlitivation of a fine tract of land. He is a native of the county, having been born in Rockford, February 23, 1844. He is a son of Hollis II. Holmes, one of the pioneers of this section, who it is thought was born in the town of Northeast. Putnam County, N. Y., April 15, 1810. He was very young when his parents moved across the line into Connecticut where he was reared and educated.

The father of our subject was a shoemaker by trade, and from Connecticut went to Canada, where he was engaged in the leather business at 8t. Thomas. In 1839, accompanied by his wife, he came to Winnebago County, making the removal with teams. He at once located in Rockford, which was at that time little more than a hamlet, and opened the first extensive boot and shoe store in the place. He continued in that line of business until 1846, when, on account of ill-health, he sold out and purchased a farm adjoining the city on the east, which is now included in the suburb known as "Highlands." Mr. Holmes there established a nursery, which was the first in the county, and which he conducted until his decease in 1859.

Our subject's mother bore the maiden name of Sarah Moore. She was born in Sparta, County of Elgin, Province of Ontario, Canada. She departed this life on the home farm in 1885, having become the mother of three children: George II., Edward M. and Frank E. A sketch of both brothers will appear on another page of this work. The elder Mr. Holmes was, in early life, a Whig in politics, but later joined the Republican ranks. He was elected County Treasurer in 1846, serving a period of three years.

George H. Holmes received his education in Rockford, and, after the decease of his father, continued in the nursery business until 1862. In June of that year, he enlisted for three months in Company A, Sixty-seventh Illinois Infantry, and served with his regiment until the 6th of October following. He returned home, and May 11, 1861, enlisted in the United States naval service and served for one year on the gunboat "Undine." Again returning home, our subject resumed his business as a nursery-man until 1890, when the old home farm was sold and platted into city lots, which was known as the "Highlands," the most beautiful suburb of Rockford.

After the marriage of our subject in December, 1890, at which time Miss Alice Herrick became his wife, he located on the old Herrick homestead, where he resides at the present time. Mrs. Holmes was born on the farm which is her present abiding-place, and is a daughter of Ephraim Abbott Herrick, a native of Andover, Essex County, Mass., where he was reared and resided until 1839. that date he came to Illinois, made a claim to a tract of Government land on the east half of the southeast quarter of section 36, and when the land came into market purchased it at $1.25 per acre. He erected a log house on the place and commenced its improvement. His father was associated with him in the ownership and cultivation of the property, and together they erected good buildings and resided on the place until the death of Mr. Herrick in January, 1881. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Holmes was Lovina Stevens. She was born in Lennox, Madison County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Noah and Lois (Walker) Stevens. She is still residing on the old homestead.

Our subject, socially, is a member of Nevins Post No. I, G. A. R.

AMUEL CUNNINGHAM is a man widely-known for his integrity, honesty and uprightness, always contributing liberally to every good cause and striving to suppress evil. He is at present residing on a splendid farm, pleasantly located two miles northwest of the city in Rockford Township, which is supplied with good buildings and well equipped with the most practical modern machinery.

Our subject was born in Peterboro, Hillsboro County, N. II., August 15, 1815, and is a son of James Cunningham, who was also a native of that place, as was also his father, James Cunningham, Sr. The great-grandfather of our subject, Thomas Cunningham, was born in the North of Ireland, of Scotch parents, and on emigrating to America settled in Londonderry, N. H. He later removed to Peterboro, about 1735, where he was one of the earliest settlers. He secured a tract of timber land in the southern part of the town and made that place his home until his decease, after having reared a family of three sons and three daughters.

The grandfather of our subject was reared to farming pursuits, which ealling he followed throughout his entire life. He became the owner of a tract of timber land, located one mile from the old homestead, which he cleared and improved, making his home there until his decease. He was widely and favorably known in the community and was a patriot in the Revolutionary War. The maiden name of his wife was Sarah Nay, who, as far as is known, was also born in Peterboro. She became the mother of a family of live sons and two daughters, and departed this life on the old home farm.

The direct progenitor of our subject remained with his parents until reaching mature years, when he went to Maine, making that State his home for a time, and on returning to Peterboro lived on the old homestead until 1838. In that year, he came West to Winnebago County, and purchased a claim four miles from Rockford. He later entered a tract from the Government, which he improved and resided upon for a number of years. when, moving to Rockford, he purchased a home on what is now the site of the Second Congregational Church, and there resided until his death. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Sarah Morrison Cunningham. She was born in Peterboro, N. H., and was a daughter of Capt. Samuel and Susan (Carter) Cunningham, She came West to Winnebago County in 1839, and, surviving her husband a few years, died at the home of her son, Benjamin F.

The five sons included in the parental family were Isaac N., James P., Thomas, Samuel, William and Benjamin F. Isaac N. came to Winnebago County in the year 1836, and was the second Sheriff of the county; he departed this life in Rockford. James P. is a graduate of Bowdoin College and for a number of years practiced medicine at Huntsville, Ala.; he is also deceased, departing this life at Peterboro, N. II., when in his twenty-ninth year. Thomas located at Manchester. Coffee County, Tenn., where his decease occurred. William went to California in 1852 and is at the present time residing in San Francisco. Benjamin F. is a prominent resident of Rockford Township.

Samuel Cunningham was reared and educated in his native town and remembers distinctly when there were no railroads near his home and Boston, which was the nearest market, was sixty miles away. He remained under the parental roof until reaching his sixteenth year, at which time he commenced clerking in an hotel. Later he was engaged in driving a stage from Keene to Boston, and in 1839, desiring to learn more of the Western country, came to Illinois, where he was met at Chicago by his brother William, who with his team conveyed them to Winnebago County. At that time, Rockford was little more than a hamlet and the surrounding country was owned mostly by the Government. Deer and wild game were plentiful and prairie chickens and quails would often come to the door of their cabin to be fed. Mr. Cunningham lived with his father, who had also come to this county, for two years and then purchased a tract of Government land in what is now Winnebago Township. There he erected a good frame house, improved the land and resided there until 1863, when he disposed of his estate and purchased the old homestead of his father. He made that place his home for the succeeding thirteen years, when he also disposed of it and became the owner of the place where he is at present residing.

June 12, 1839, our subject was married to Emily Cutter, who was born in Goshen, Sullivan County N. H., February 24, 1816. She was the daughter of John Cutter, who was born in Cheshire County, N. H., October 31, 1788. His father, also named John Cutter, was born at Woburn, Mass., April 16, 1765, and was married to Abigail Demary, of Rindge, who was the daughter of John and Rebecca (Corneille) Demary, both of whom were natives of Boston and of French parentage. The grandfather of Mrs, Cunningham removed from Massachusetts to Jaffrey, N. H., in 1789. He was a leading member of the Universalist Church at that place, where he passed the remainder of his life. The father of Mrs. Cunningham learned the trade of a tanner from his father, and after his marriage removed to Goshen, where, in addition to carrying on his trade he operated a farm. He departed this life on the 5th of February, 1829. Mrs. Cunningham's mother in girlhood was Betsey Crosby, a native of Jaffrey and the daughter of Capt. Alphens and Elizabeth (Gilmore) Crosby. She survived her husband for a number of years and died at Plymouth, N. II.

Mrs. Cunningham was twelve years old on the death of her father, and was then taken into the home of an uncle. She commenced teaching school at the age of twenty-one years, which profession she followed until her marriage.

Two sons have been born to our subject and his estimable wife: James C., whose birth occurred November 21, 1848, died in his nineteenth year. John A., who was born August 27, 1851, died in his twenty-seventh year; he had married Elizabeth Hollenbeck and was the father of two children, John Clement and Katie Emily, the latter of whom is deceased. In politics, our subject is a Republican, voting the Whig ticket previous to the formation of that party. In official matters, he served as Assessor of Winnebago Township for thirteen years and was Supervisor for two terms. In 1841, he was elected a member of the Board of County Commissioners and in every position fulfilled the duties imposed upon him in a most creditable manner.

VGUST LUNDBERG, one of the wide-awake, thorough-going business men of Rockford, is a stockholder and Director of the Excelsior Manufacturing Company, of that city; also President and stockholder of the Globe Clothing Company, which was started in 1890 with a capital stock of $50,000, most of which has already been paid up, and he is also interested in other enterprises. He has been a stockholder of the former company since 1882, and is now foreman of the upholstering department.

Like many of the representative business men of Rockford, Mr. Lundberg is a Swede, his birth oecurring in Wester Gothland Province on the 29th of November, 1841, and in that country he learned his trade. He came to the United States in 1870, located in Chicago, and was the first of the family to venture on American soil. Since then he has been joined by three sisters: Mrs. Matilda Anderson, Mrs. Charlotte Matterson, Mrs. Caroline Talstrom, and a half sister, Miss Christina Carlson, all now of Chicago.

The parents, Carl and Johanna (Anderson) Lundberg, died in Sweden, when seventy-five and sixtytwo years of age, respectively. The father had been twice married, his first wife being the mother of our subject. He followed the occupation of a tiller of the soil all his life, and met with substantial results in this pursuit. The second wife resides in Sweden, and is well along in years. She is a member of the State Church, as was also her husband and his first wife.

August Lundberg was the third in order of birth of the children born to his parents, and was a single man when he came to this country. He was married in Chicago to Miss Gustava Carlson, a native of Sweden, born October 28, 1815. He subsequently followed the trade of upholsterer in Chicago for twelve years, being overseer of the upholstery department of the Sherwood School Manufacturing Company for some time. From there he came to Rockford, and has been identified with the business interests of the eity ever since.

Of the nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lundberg, only two are now living, Anna O. and Lillie M., both at home. The remainder of the children died when under ten years of age. Mr. Lundberg and his wife hold membership in the Mission Lutheran Church, and he has been one of the Church Trustees for some time. He is a Republican in politics.

Mrs. Lundberg is now the only one of her family in America. She was preceded to this country by a brother, Swans Carlson, who died recently in California. Her father died in Sweden, and her mother still makes her home in that country.

RS. MARION (MONTGOMERY) GREEN-LEE, who resides on section 1, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, April 27, 1838. Her father, James Montgomery, was born in the same locality, and his father, Robert Montgomery, was probably born on the same farm. He was a farmer, and spent his entire life in Scotland. He married Jane Griffln, who likewise never left her native land.

James Montgomery was reared to manhood on his father's farm, and after attaining to mature years wedded Jane Caldwell, a native of Argyleshire, and a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Howie) Caldwell. In 1842, with his wife and seven children, he emigrated to America. The vessel in which he took passage weighed anchor on the 4th of June and reached the harbor of New York on the 4th of July. With his family he at once started Westward, traveling by way of the Eric Canal and the Great Lakes to Chicago, where he procured a team and came on to Winnebago County. He secured a tract of Government land in what is now Harlem Township, purchasing a farm in connection with his brother-in-law, Daniel Smith. They moved into a log building which had formerly been used as a distillery, and after three years Mr. Montgomery sold his interest in that place and bought the farm upon which Mrs. Greenlee now resides. It was a tract of wild land, upon which not a furrow had been turned or an improvement made, but he at once built a house and engaged in the cultivation and improvement of the land until his death. His wife was not long permitted to enjoy her new home in America, as she was called to her final rest in January, 1843. Six children of the family are now living: Elizabeth, Robert, James, Mary, Marion and John. Jane died in 1883.

Mrs. Greenlee was a child of only four summers when her parents crossed the broad Atlantic, and has but little recollection of any other than her adopted land. She remembers well her early life among the wild scenes of the frontier here, and well deserves mention among the pioneers of the county. She resided with her father until his death, her husband having previously purchased the old homestead. It was in March, 1861, that she gave her hand in marriage to Robert Greenlee, a native of Argyleshire, Scotland, and a son of Robert and Mary (Mitchell) Greenlee. With his parents, he came to America when a young man twenty-three years of age, and throughout his entire life followed the occupation of farming. He was a successful business man and an upright and honorable citizen, and his death, which occurred in 1874, was a loss to the entire community, as well as to his immediate family.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Greenlee were born three children, who are yet living: Elizabeth is the wife of Peter Greenlee, and they have two children: Edith M. and Robert L. The sons of the family, Robert and James, are still at home, and operate and earry on the farm for their mother. Mrs. Greenlee and her children are all members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, and they are a highly respected family, held in warm regard by their many friends throughout the community.

EORGE GLEASMAN, deceased, was born in West Leyden, Lewis County, N. Y., June 30, 1840. His father, Godfrey Gleasman, was born on the banks of the River Rhone, in Germany, where he was reared to man's estate, being one of a family of four sons, who came to America: Godfrey, Valentine, George and David. The father of our subject was married in Germany, and on emigrating to the New World, first settled in West Leyden, N. Y., and later lived in Rome.

In 1862, Godfrey Gleasman enlisted in a New York Regiment, and was killed in the battle of Antietam, in which conflict his brother George was also killed. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Henrietta Smininger; she came to Illinois in 1857, and spent her last days in Rockton, Winnebago County. Our subject was reared and educated in New York State, and previous to his marriage settled on the farm which his family now occupies, on section 1, Owen Township, Winnebago County. There he was actively engaged in its cultivation until January 1, 1890, when he departed this life. The estate is one of the finest in the county, and contains four hundred well-improved acres, and good buildings have been erected on the place, which is supplied with all needful machinery. It is managed by the older sons of our subject, Edwin and Charles. The other members of the family are Mina, Katie, Ratie, Alice, Abbie and Frank. George is deceased.

Miss Sarah Lake, who was born March 18, 1845, in Owen Township, became the wife of our subject. She is the daughter of Hiram Lake, who was a native of Canada, while it is thought her grandfather, who bore the name of John Lake, was born in the Empire State, whence he removed to Canada, and lived for a time near Kingston. Later he purchased a farm near Orino, where he made his home until 1814, at which time he came to Illinois, and for a short time resided in Winnebago County. He, however, returned to Canada, where his decease occurred. He had married Sarah Stover, who departed this life in Iowa while on a visit to her daughter, but was brought back and buried in Rockford, Ill.

The father of Mrs. Gleasman followed his trade of a carpenter in Canada, in addition to which he added the occupation of farming, and lived there until 1811, when he came via the Lakes to Chicago, thence by team to Winnebago County. He purchased a tract of land on section 12, Owen Township, on which was a partially completed house made of sod. He immediately commenced the work of improving his land, upon which he resided until his decease, October 16, 1872. The maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Thompson; she was born in England, and was the daughter of Richardson and Ann (Greene) Thompson, also natives of that country. Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson died on the home farm March 20, 1888. She reared two of her three children: Rachel married Albert Hullett, and Sarah became Mrs. Gleasman, of this sketch. Our subject and his estimable wife became members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Rockford, in 1882. Their eldest son, Edwin, married Lissic Trueman. The father of Mrs. Gleasman was the first Justice of the Peace elected in Owen Township, which honorable position he held until his death.

EORGE M. TAFT, one of the leading agriculturists of the township, if not the county, makes quite a specialty of stock-raising and has a large flock of Shropshire sheep that will compare favorably with any in the county. Like most of his neighbor farmers, he keeps many cows, and sends his milk to the creamery. He is wide-awake and thorough-going and has made a success of his occupation.

Mr. Taft was born in Roseoe Township, this county, on the 6th of February, 1855, but his parents, Levi M. and Electa (Gregory) Taft, were natives af the Empire State, the former born in 1817 and the latter in 1814 Grandfather Taft was a native either of Vermont or New Hampshire, and removed to New York State when his son Levi was but six years of age. Still later he removed to the Western Reserve, Ohio, near Ashtabula, where he died at an advanced age, leaving a family of children. He was a life-long farmer and was in comfortable circumstances. Mrs. Taft's father, Samuel Gregory, was a native New Yorker, and followed farming all his life. He was killed by a run-away team, when in the prime of life, and left a family of eight children.

Levi Taft, father of our subject, was but twenty years of age when he came to Rockford, Winnebago County, and he entered a tract of about two hundred acres in section 6, on which he built a log house, and in which house his wife taught school. They buried two children in infancy; Helen died when eighteen years of age, and our subject is the only one now living. The latter was reared to farm labor, and was given excellent opportunities for getting an education, but he neglected his advantages. He selected his wife in the person of Miss Cora Carpenter, of Roscoe, and their nuptials were celebrated on the 23d of November, 1876. Her parents, Newton and Almira (Reynolds) Carpenter, of Herkimer County, N. Y., came West in 1852, and the father followed his trade, that of earpenter and joiner. He was one of the '49ers who went to California during the gold fever excitement, going by way of the Isthmus, and returning by the same route in 1851. The following year he came to Illinois, and, in company with his unele, Henderson Coffin, purchased a farm. He then returned to New York for his wife, whom he married in the year 1851, and brought back with him to Illinois, locating in Roscoe. He built an elevator, and for many years ran his grain warehouse, and was also railroad agent for some time. He rented his farm but subsequently sold his part of the same to Mr. Coffin, and purchased one hundred acres a mile and a half east of the Roscoe depot. This land still belongs to the family. Mr.

Pours Goldman american Fair Co Rockford yes. Carpenter died on the 24th of March, 1884, when fifty-eight years of age, leaving a widow and one child, now Mrs. Taft. Mrs. Carpenter died February 15, 1887, when sixty-three years of age.

Our subject and wife have three living children: Helen, born August 30, 1877, and Edith and Edna (twins), born November 24, 1883. These are bright children and Helen attends the Roscoe school, while the two younger are in the district school. Mr. and Mrs. Taft lost two children: Merrill died November 9, 1884, when little over three years of age, and Marshall died August 2, 1888, when also a little over three years old. The living children are receiving good educational advantages and are being thoroughly drilled in music. Mr. Taft is a Republican but not enthusiastic in politics.

OUIS GOLDMAN, proprietor of the American Fair at Rockford, located at Nos. 517, 519, 521 and 523 Seventh Street, is a native of Prussia. His birth occurred in 1854, and he was reared to manhood in his native country, acquiring his education in the public schools. After attaining to mature years, he was married to Miss Betsy Max, who was born and reared near the home of her husband. Her father, Charles Max, is still living in Prussia, but his wife died in middle life. The father of our subject is also yet living and makes his home in Chicago. He came of old Hebrew stock and has always been a member of the Jewish Church, to which his wife also belonged. She died in her native land.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldman crossed the Atlantic to America in 1870, landing at New York City, where they resided for a time and then removed to Chicago, where they spent some years previous to coming to Rockford. Their home has been blessed by the presence of six children: Dora and Lotta, who are clerking in their father's store; Harry, who is now a student in the High School of Rockford; Etta, Ella and Lillie, all yet at home.

While residing in Chicago, Mr. Goldman was engaged in the mercantile business for twelve years. At length, he came to Rockford and in 1886 established a dry-goods store on East State Street.

where he carried on business until removing to his present location at Nos. 517 to 523 Seventh Street. The American Fair, one of the leading stores in the city, contains a large and well-assorted stock of dry-goods, clothing, furniture, carpets, boots and shoes, etc., and receives a liberal patronage. The store occupied is 80x80 feet and is well stocked. From the beginning, Mr. Goldman has received a good trade and is now doing an excellent business, which yields him a handsome income.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldman began their domestic life without a dollar's capital, but their united efforts, enterprise, industry, and good management have proved important factors in their success and they have steadily worked their way upward until their possessions now aggregate more than $100,000. They are both members of the Jewish Church and are well-known and prominent people in this community, taking an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of Rockford and its advancement. On another page will be noticed a portrait of Mr. Goldman.

ARWIN W. ALLEN, of Belvidere, is a native of the Empire State. His grandfather, Isaac Allen, was born in Rhode Island, April 29, 1768, and was a son of Nehemiah and Abigail Allen. He removed from his native State to New York, becoming one of the pioneers of Herkimer County, and in the midst of the forest developed a farm, upon which he made his home for many years. He came to Illinois in 1852, and spent his last days in Boone County, His wife, who bore the maiden name of Lydia Brown, died in Newport, N. Y.

John F. Allen, father of our subject, was born in Rhode Island in 1792, and was quite young when his parents went to New York. He was there reared, and married Phebe Brown, a native of Rhode Island, and a daughter of Christopher and Ruby (Fenner) Brown. With his wife he removed to Oneida County, and purchased a partially improved farm, but after some years returned to Herkimer County. Emigrating Westward in 1852, he purchased a tract of land in Belvidere Township, Boone County, where he engaged in farming until his death, May 22, 1859. His wife died March 17, 1878, in Belvidere. They were the parents of two sons, Darwin W. and Isaac B.

In the usual manner of farmer lads our subject was reared to manhood and in the Empire State he made his home until 1850, when he came to Illinois and east in his lot with the early settlers of Flora Township, Boone County. At that time Elgin was the nearest railroad station and Belvidere was but a small village. His father and John Kohoon bought forty acres of land and platted it as an addition to the city. On this land was a small frame house and barn and the former continued to be the home of our subject until 1860, when he sold and bought land near the city, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1866, when he came to Belvidere, and since that time has resided at the corner of Pearl and Allen Streets.

On the 3d of December, 1838. Mr. Allen was joined in wedlock with Mary Rix, a native of Connecticut, and a daughter of Theophilus and Polly (Meech) Rix. She died in 1860, and for his second wife he chose Ruth Foster, who was born in New Portland, Somerset County, Me., in March, 1834. Her father, Leighton Foster, was born in Limerick, Me., and was a son of Benjamin Foster, a farmer in that locality, who married Hannah Bartlett, a native of Kittery, York County. They removed to New Portland and afterward to Dover, Me. The father of Mrs. Allen was reared in the former place and there married Clarissa Ricker, a native of New Portland, and a daughter of Levi and Rebecca (Merryfield) Ricker. A few years after their marriage they went to Dover, Me., and in 1852 emigrated to Illinois. Mr. Foster purchased a farm in Flora Township, Boone County, where he lived until 1864, when he moved to Belvidere, where he made his home until 1881; he then removed to Bremer County, Iowa, and is still a resident of Waverly. His wife died October 14, 1889, leaving three children: Ruth, John R. and Seth L. John R. died May 25, 1891.

By his first marriage, Mr. Allen had two children: Frances, who is now the wife of Joseph W. Harper and has four children: Irvin, Mary, Bertha and Joseph Francis; and John R., who is married and has one son. There is also an adopted daughter, Lizzie C., who has resided with our subject and his wife since she was ten years of age. This worthy couple are widely and favorably known throughout the community, being held in high regard for their sterling worth. In politics, Mr. Allen is a stanch Republican and has been a patron of the Chicago Journal for over thirty years.

HLLIAM II. MUNN is numbered among the industrious and thrifty members of the farming community of Flora Township, Boone County, where he has an excellent farm that is under good tillage and yields a comfortable income. He was born in Whitestown, Oneida County, N. Y., December 28, 1830, and is a son of James Munn, who, like his father, also named James, had his birth in East Kent, England.

The grandfather of our subject was reared and married in England and in 1830 came to the United States and located in Lyons, Wayne County, N. Y., where he spent his last days. The grandmother of our subject prior to her marriage was Elizabeth Kingsnorth and was born in East Kent and died at the home of a daughter in Whitestown, N. Y. She reared a family of eight children, viz: John, James, Alfred, George, Mary, Celia, Jane and Thomas.

The father of him of whom we write was reared on a farm and in 1827, accompanied by his wife and five children, came to America, setting sail from London on the brig "Emily" in July and landing in New York in September after a voyage of ten weeks. He went via the Hudson River and Eric Canal to Whitestown and for several years was engaged in teaming for the Oriskany Manufacturing Company. He then purchased a farm in Whitestown, which he cultivated until 1858, the date of his advent into Boone County. Here he owned and occupied a farm in Flora Township, where his decease occurred April 22, 1866.

Our subject's mother, Sarah (Kingsnorth) Munn, was also born in East Kent, England, and spent her last years in the town of Marcy, Oncida County, N. Y., dying in the year 1851. The parental family included five children, namely: James, George, Alfred, our subject and Edward. William II. was reared and educated in his native town and when old enough to do for himself commenced working in a woolen factory. He was thus occupied for seven years and then followed farming in Oncida County until 1858, when he made the overland trip to this place and settled upon the farm which he now occupies. It bears excellent improvements and is pleasantly located two miles from Belvidere.

In 1852, William H. Munn was united in marriage with Mary A. Barnes, who also had her birth in East Kent, England, and was a daughter of Richard Barnes, also a native of the British Isles. In 1810, her father came to America on a prospecting tour and after remaining in the States for four months returned to England, and, in October, 1841, accompanied by his family, sailed from London in the ship "St. James," and landed at Castle Garden after a voyage of six weeks. He first located in Vernon, Oneida County, where he resided on the farm until 1866, at which time he came to this county and engaged in farming in Belvidere Township. He traded property several different times and the last years of his life were spent in Belvidere, where he died in May, 1887. Mr. Barnes was twice married, the maiden name of his first wife, who was the mother of Mrs. Munn. was Elizabeth Baldock; she was born in the same county as her husband, in England, and died in Vernon in 1843, after having become the mother of three children.

OHN R. LINN. Quite a number of the most highly-esteemed citizens of Rockford are retired farmers, who have accumulated a competence by well-directed efforts, and in their old age are enjoying the fruits of the labors of earlier years. A fine representative of this class is the subject of this biographical notice, who owns and occupies a cozy and attractive residence at No. 904 Ferguson Street. He came to this city in 1879, from Byron Township, Ogle County, where he had commenced farming operations in 1867, at which time he settled on the farm now owned by his son James, and there operated both as a general farmer and stock-raiser.

In Perry County, Pa., Mr. Linn was born, February 24, 1817. His father, John Linn, was a native of the same place as himself and opened up a new farm in Sayille Township, building upon the place a house, where he spent the remainder of his life and where he passed away at the age of sixty-two years. His wife was Miss Mary Ross, who was born in Perry County, and, like himself, was descended from Scotch ancestry. She died on the old homestead two years after the decease of her husband, at the age of fifty years. The parents of our subject were members of the Presbyterian Church and had a family of ten children, eight daughters and two sons, all of whom married and reared children.

The first marriage of our subject united him with Miss Margaret 1. McKee, a native of Franklin County, Pa., who was descended from Scotch ancestors. She was born in 1809, and died in Ogle County, in 1874, leaving three children: John, who married Miss Mary Adams, of Stephenson County, Ill., now resides in Genesco, this State, where formerly he was pastor of the Presbyterian Church. He is a graduate of Cannonsburg College and Princeton University and a man of great eloquence and learning. Mary E. is the wife of Mathew Bull, a farmer in Byron Township, Ogle County; James purchased the farm formerly owned by his father in Ogle County, but makes his home in Chicago, and was an employe of the Chicago Fireplace Company, at No. 224 Wabash Avenue. He married Miss Anna Jones, of Ogle County. He is now in the employ of the Central West Advertising Bureau.

About 1876, Mr. Linn and Miss Ann L. McClure were united in marriage in Perry County, Pa., and their wedded life was terminated three years afterward by the death of the wife. The last marriage of Mr. Lynn united him with Miss Mary E., Wilson, who was born and reared in Ohio. During some years she followed the profession of a teacher and was also a missionary among the Indians on the frontier and a teacher in their schools. She is a lady of great ability and kindliness of heart and is a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church, to which Mr. Linn also belongs. In his political belief, he is a firm Republican.

Prior to coming to Illinois, Mr. Lynn engaged in merchandising at Perryville, Juniata County, Pa., for eleven years, and afterward was for three years Steward and Overseer of the farm of the Pennsylvania Agricultural College, of Centre County, embracing four hundred acres. In that way he acquired a knowledge of that great educacational institution of Pennsylvania, and on severing his connection with it he removed to Illinois. He is now living quietly and comfortably, and is interested in all causes that are progressive, notably the cause of temperance and sobriety.

IONEL W. RICHARDSON, who is living a retired life in Roscoe, is numbered among the early settlers of Winnebago County, having made his home in this place since 1851. For many years he was one of its most prominent business men and a valued citizen of the community. His life record is as follows:

He was born on the 17th of January, 1828, in Johnstown, Montgomery County, N. Y., and is a son of Benjamin and Judith (Mason) Richardson. Both were natives of Spencer, Worcester County, Mass., the father born February 27, 1782, and the mother February 9, 1790. The paternal grandfather, Joseph Richardson, was a farmer of East Brookfield, Mass. He married Esther Lammon, of that place, who died leaving two sons: Benjamin and Joseph. He then wedded Priscilla Hincherd, and they had three sons and a daughter. Mr. Richardson lived to an advanced age and died in West Camp, N. Y. The parents of our subject were married January 3, 1807, and resided in Spencer and Warren, Mass., for thirteen years, when they removed to Johnstown, N. Y. The death of the father occurred in Fultonville, N. Y., in 1838, at the age of fifty-six years. By trade he was a blacksmith and followed that occupation throughout his entire life. He left six sons and six daughters and, with one exception, all grew to mature years. In 1814, Mrs. Richardson removed to Massachusetts and two years later came to Roscoe, 1ll. Her children. Benjamin, George W., Julia and husband started Westward in the spring of 1836 and spent one summer in Bertrand, Mich., during which time the daughter died. In the fall the brothers came on to Roscoe, where they arrived in September. One sister, Judith, now the wife of Jeremiah L. Brown, came to Illinois in 1837, settling in Genoa, De Kalb County, and the mother with Sarah P. and William arrived in Roscoe in 1816, as before stated.

It was in 1853 that our subject came to the West. He spent the first sixteen years of his life in the county of his nativity and then removed to Worcester, Mass., whence he came to Illinois on a visit. The following spring he made a permanent settlement, and has since been a resident of the town of Roscoe. In the East, he had engaged in elerking for two years, and was then employed in a wire factory in Worcester and Cherry Valley, Mass., from 1846 until 1852. The two succeeding years were spent in running a portable engine in Dunkirk, N. Y. On coming to Roscoe, he embarked in the manufacture of plows and wagons in company with his brother William, and continued in that line of business until 1870. During that time he invented and patented the Diamond Plow, the first successful cast-steel plow ever manufactured. It was manufactured in Rockford, and W. H. Gregory became Mr. Richardson's partner in that business, the connection continuing until 1878. From that time our subject was engaged in buying and shipping grain and stock until 1886, when his elevator was burned, and for the past six years, he has lived a retired life.

On the 7th of November, 1854, in Worcester, Mass., Mr. Richardson wedded Maria L. Jones of that place, daughter of John and Sylvia (Day) Jones. She died in Roscoe, September 1, 1881, at the age of forty-seven years. They had buried an infant son. Mr. Richardson was again married, February 1, 1883, this union being with Mrs. Isabella Jones Richardson, widow of James Richardson. They have an adopted daughter, Sarah Priscilla, the namesake and youngest child of Mr.

Yours Truley D. Howes

Richardson's youngest sister. This worthy couple are widely and favorably known throughout the community in which they make their home. Our subject is numbered among the honored pioneers of Roscoe, and is now enjoying a rest which he has so truly carned and richly deserves.

HINEAS HOWES. It has been customary to speak of men who have raised themselves to honorable stations in life without the aid of wealth or influential friends, as "self-made." Such an one is our subject, who started out in life with nothing but his strong hands and his determination to succeed. And that his desire has been accomplished is noted by the fact that he is one of the most prominent and progressive citizens of Rockford. In his life we find an excellent example for young men just embarking in the field of activity, showing what may be gained by honesty, prudence and industry. In his youth he enjoyed few advantages, but relied solely upon his efforts and his conduct to win for him success, not in the sense of accumulating wealth, but in doing good to others, in serving others well, and in winning their respect.

The original of this sketch, and of the accompanying portrait, is one of the pioneers of Rockford. He was born in the town of Southeast, Putnam County, N. Y., September 25, 1817. His father, Job Howes, was, it is thought, born in Schoharie, N. Y., and was of early English ancestry. The latter-named gentleman always followed agricultural pursuits and spent his last years in Putnam County, N. Y. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Elizabeth Eggleston, and departed this life in the above-named county.

Phineas Howes was reared and educated in his native town and when seventeen years of age entered upon an apprenticeship of three years at the carpenter's and joiner's trade. He was then employed as a "jour" and remained in the Empire State until 1839, when he came to the Prairie State via the most expeditious route at that time, sailing up the Hudson River to Albany, thence on the Erie Canal to Buffalo, where he embarked on a lake steamer which conveyed him to Chicago. From that then small city of but a few thousand people, Mr. Howes was given the permission to ride with a gentleman who was coming to Rockford, and landed in this city with but twentyfive cents in his pocket.

Rockford was at that time a very small place, the surrounding country being owned by the Government, and deer and other wild game being very plentiful. Mr. Holmes was very desirous to secure work and better his condition in life, and soon found employment at his trade. Being very industrious and economical, he saved a portion of his meagre earnings and was soon enabled to purchase a lot in the village and a claim to a tract of Government land, located in what is now Cherry Valley Township. When the land came into market, he with others started with a team of horses and a wagon to the land office at Galena. They provided themselves with provisions and cooking ntensils, camping out and preparing their meals on the way.

In the fall of 1839, Mr. Howes erected the first frame house ever built in Rockford. This structure is still standing on East State Street. Our subject worked at his trade for a few years, then engaged in the lumber business with John Lake, the partnership continuing about fifteen years. Since that time his attention has been chiefly employed in looking after his private interests, and he is one of the wealthy and prominent residents of the city.

Miss Maria Barnum became the wife of our subject in October, 1839. Mrs. Howes was born in Danbury, Fairfield County, Conn., in February, 1811, and was the daughter of Daniel and Lorana Barnum, (further reference to whom will be found in the sketch of D. H. Barnum). The ceremony which made them one was solemnized at the home of Miss Barnum in Cherry Valley Township, and their wedding trip consisted of a ride with a pair of oxen and wagon from Cherry Valley to Rockford. They commenced housekeeping in the dwelling above mentioned before the doors or windows were put in, and all their furniture was home-made. Mr. Howes was very prosperous and the structure was soon replaced by a comfortable and convenient dwelling, in which they resided for many years. Mrs. Howes departed this life December 10, 1877. She was the mother of three children, namely: Ellen C. (deceased) who was the wife of Charles Chamberlain; Cora is Mrs. Harry C.Woolsey and has three children: Maria, Ella and Ralph; Herbert H. died when thirty-five years old.

He of whom we write cast his first Presidential vote for Andrew Jackson and has ever since sympathized with the Democratic party. He is a man who combines strictness of moral principles with energy and decision of character. He has made profitable investments, become interested in remunerative enterprises, won honorable success in business and secured a competency as a product of personal industry and good judgment put forth in a field wisely selected. He is a careful business man, ever adhering to the dictates of his conscience in matters both of a public and private nature.

AVID KEYT. There are many beautiful residences in Rockford, whose elegance of finish and superiority of design attract the admiration of the visitor to the city, but among the number there is probably none which so impresses the beholder as an ideal home as the charming residence of Mr. Keyt. Situated just south of the city and occupying ample grounds, handsomely laid out and adorned with shade and ornamental trees, its exterior appearance indicates that it is the abode of a family of taste and means, while the interior furnishings prove the cultured tastes of the inmates.

A native of Ohio, Mr. Keyt was born in Piqua, Miami County, September 20, 1826. His father, John, was born in New Jersey, and learned the carpenter's trade in New York City, whence he removed to Ohio at an early day, residing for a time in Cincinnati. Then he went to Piqua and built a house for Col. H. D. Johnson, Indian Agent at that place. He remained there until 1850, meanwhile carrying on his trade as carpenter and builder, and then went to California via the 1sthmus of Panama. His death occurred in the Golden State during the following year.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Margaret Widney, and she was born in Pennsylvania, being the niece of Col. II. D. Johnson. She spent her last years in Piqua, and died in the spring of 1857. She was the mother of eight children, who attained to mature years, viz.: Elizabeth, Mary A., John W., James R., David, Caroline, Stephen and Sarah J. David was reared in Piqua, and when eighteen years old commenced work with his father. In the spring before he attained his majority, he began in business for himself as contractor and builder, continuing at Piqua until 1857, when he came to Rockford and established in business here.

The first work secured by Mr. Keyt in Rockford was the erection of the Second Congregational Church, which was done so satisfactorily that afterward he had all the business he could attend to. Up to the time of his retirement, in 1888, many of the finest buildings, both public and private, in the city were built by him. The Gazette of April, 1888, in giving a resume of his work, remarked that Mr. Keyt had undoubtedly erected more buildings than any other contractor in the city. He built both the Centennial and Court Street Methodist Episcopal Churches, the latter of which he also designed. With a material mind for the contemplation of mechanical designs, and with the early training of his father, he soon developed a taste for architectural design and ornamentation. He has attained a name second to none as a superintendent and builder, and so long as he actively engaged in his trade, his interior finish and decoration were surpassed by none, equalled by few.

In 1817 Mr. Keyt was married to Miss Lydia A. Sawyer, who was born in Dayton, Montgomery County, Ohio. Her parents, Uriah and Sarah Sawyer, natives of Massachusetts and Ohio, respectively, were people of worth and highly esteemed in their community. Mrs. Lydia Keyt died in 1861, and twelve years later Mr. Keyt formed a second matrimonial alliance, his wife being Mrs. Charlotte (Leonard) Skinner, a native of Milton, Chittenden County, Vt. The father of Mrs. Keyt, Benjamin Leonard, Jr., was born in Raynham, Mass., and his father, Benjamin, was born in the same house, as was also his father. The house was built of bricks brought from England.

The great-grandfather of Mrs. Keyt was an emplove in the iron works at Raynham and spent his entire life in that town. Her grandfather was also an iron worker, and lived and died in Raynham. His wife, whose maiden name was Judith McCumber, was of Scotch ancestry. Benjamin Leonard, Jr., went to Vermont when a young man, settling in the town of Ludlow, and was there married. Afterward he moved to Milton, residing there until 1850, and then came to Illinois, via Lake Champlain to Whitehall, then by the railroad and Erie Canal to Buffalo, and from that place by the Lakes The journey from Chicago to Elgin to Chicago. by railroad and from there to Rockford by team, occupied three weeks, and upon his arrival here he bought a tract of land in Burritt Township, improved a farm and resided there until the death of his wife. He then removed to Wisconsin and spent his closing years in the home of his son at Lake Mills, Jefferson County.

The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Keyt was Lucy Colburn Chandler, and she was a native of Chester, Vt. Her father, Thomas Chandler, Jr., was, it is thought, born in the same town, and his father, who bore the same name as himself, was the first Supreme Judge of Vermont. The grandfather of Mrs. Keyt was reared and educated in his native village, where he spent his entire life, and followed literary pursuits during much of his time, being a man of splendid information. His wife, who was known in maidenhood as Asenath Adams, was a member of the same family to which John Adams belonged. She came to Illinois when quite old, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Short, in Seward Township, Winnebago County. The mother of Mrs. Keyt died on the home farm in Burritt Township.

In 1851, the marriage of Charlotte Leonard and James B. Skinner was solemnized. He was born in Barre Center, N. Y., and was the son of Stephen and Sophia (Butler) Skinner He came to Rockford with his parents in 1839, and from that time until his death made his home on West Main Street. Learning the trade of a blacksmith, he carried on his trade in connection with the manufacture of agricultural implements for many years. He invented several very useful farm implements, including the Skinner Gang Plow, a sulky plow, and walking and riding cultivator. He formed a partnership with C. C. Briggs and I. A. Enoch, and transacted an extensive business in the manufacture of agricultural implements, and continued actively engaged in business until his death, in 1872, aged forty-eight years.

Mr. Keyt has one daughter living, Clara, wife of James II. Rhodes, of Chicago, and she has one child, Blanche E. Mrs. Keyt has two children: Mary C. and Fannie S. The first-named married Albert Gray and they have three children: Lillian, Winifred and J. Wilber. Fannie S. became the wife of C. F. Henry, of whom see sketch elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Keyt are members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and, politically, he is a Republican, and east his first vote for Zachary Taylor. The parents of Mrs. Keyt reared ten of their thirteen children: Clarissa A., Maria L., Caroline A., Henrietta L., Fannie A., Harriet A., Charlotte W., Lucretia M., Marcia A., and Levi B. All of these but Clarissa are now living.

RANK L. MOORE. There is probably not within the limits of Flora Township, Boone County, a more thorough or substantial farmer than Mr. Moore, who is successfully operating a choice tract of land on section 3. He was born in Preble, Cortland County, N. Y., December 9, 1842, while his father, Samuel Moore, was a native of Peterboro, N. H.

The father of our subject was a lad of six years when his parents removed to the Empire State, where he was reared and married. In company with his brother Eben, he purchased a tract of land in Preble, where he was engaged in farming until 1852. At that date coming to this county, the elder Mr. Moore lived in Flora Township for two years, then disposing of his property removed to Rock County, Wis., where he owned a farm which he cultivated until 1868. Preferring to live in Boone County, Mr. Moore returned to Flora Township and bought the farm which is in the possession of our subject and where he resided until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Skeal, a native of New York State, where she spent her entire life.

Frank L. Moore was an only child of his parents, with whom he resided until their decease. His farm is pleasantly located two and one-quarter miles from Belvidere and is well equipped with all the buildings and machinery which stamp him as a progressive and enterprising agriculturist. He was married in 1867 to Emily Gray, who was born in Corinth, Me., April 29, 1842. By their union has been born one daughter, Florence, who is now the wife of Lewis Hawkey.

Hartwell Gray, the father of Mrs. Moore, was born November 29, 1811, in the town of China, Kennebee County, Me., where his father, Jonathan Gray, was one of the early settlers. The latternamed gentleman purchased a tract of land on Deer Hill, which he cultivated until his decease in 1821. The lady to whom he was married was known as Annie Gray; she departed this life in Corinth in 1854.

Mrs. Moore's father was a lad of seven years when his parents died, and four years later he started out to earn his own living, being employed on farms until eighteen years of age. Later, he worked in the lumber regions, continuing to be thus occupied until his marriage. He then purchased a farm in Corinth, which he made his home until 1866, and then coming to Belvidere purchased a farm two and one-half miles from that city. He is now living retired and enjoying the results of an industrious life.

The parents of Mrs. Moore were married February 12, 1840, her mother, who was born in New London, N. H., November 21, 1824, bearing the name of Adeline Gile. Her father, David Gile, was born in the same town and was a son of Jacob and Pheebe (Martin) Gile. He followed the life of a farmer and on removing to Lower Massachusetts resided there some years, when he came to Chicago and died at the home of his daughter in 1882. The grandmother of Mrs. Moore, Emily Gape, was a native of New London, N. H. Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell Gray reared a family of nine children, viz: Olive, Emily, Hiram, Jennie, Carrie, Sarah, Dayton, Nellie and Cora.

11.1.1AM FROHNING, a successful dealer in wines, liquors, etc., doing business at No. 319 East State Street, Rockford, claims Westphalia, Prussia, as the land of his nativity. He was born in 1854, and when quite young came to this country with his parents, who were also natives of Germmy. After coming to this county, they located on a farm near Rockford, where they spent the remainder of their lives, Mr. Frohning following agricultural pursuits. They both died in 1851, about three weeks after coming to America.

Our subject is the youngest of their family. He acquired his education in the city schools of Rockford and spent his boyhood days under the parental roof. As a companion and helpmate on life's journey, he chose Miss Rosa Schoon, a native of Wisconsin, there reared and educated. When a young lady she came to Rockford. Her parents were of German birth, and crossed the broad Atlantic in the early '50s, locating on a farm near Milwankec, Wis., where they spent the remainder of their lives, dying when well advanced in years. They were Lutherans in religious belief, as were also the parents of Mr. Frolining.

As before stated, our subject is engaged in business at No. 319 East State Street, where he has a large stock of wines and liquors. His establishment is fitted up with a most elaborate bar and lunch-room and there he has carried on business since June, 1888, having a liberal patronage from the wealthier class of Rockford's citizens. He takes quite an active part in public affairs, being interested in all that pertains to the welfare and upbuilding of this city and the advancement of its leading industries.

In his political attiliations, Mr. Frohning is a Democrat, which party he has supported since attaining his majority, but has never been an officeseeker. He takes considerable interest in civic societies and is a member of the Independent Order of Red Men, and the Independent Order of Knights and Ladies of Honor. Himself and wrfe are both members of the Latheran Church, to the support of which he contributes liberally. They have a pleasant and comfortable residence, situated at No. 302 Walnut Street, which is the abode of hospitality, and the light and joy of their home is their little son, William, Jr., now five years of age.

in Rockford, is of English birth. His father, Thomas Johns, came to this complete landed in America, and his death occurred at the age of seventy-six years of a facial cancer. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Lightfoot, reached the advanced age of eighty-two years. They were both members of the Methodist Church.

Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth in England, and at the age of twenty-two sailed on a lumber ship to Quebec, Canada, where he arrived after a voyage of six weeks. lle came on at once to Illinois and spent three years in Rockford, engaged in the butchering business. He then returned to his native land, and in Cornwall, married Jane A. Hocken, who was there born, and, like her husband, was of pure Cornish descent. Their wedding tour consisted of their voyage and journey to this country, ten weeks being required at that time to cross the broad Atlantic. The parents of Mrs. Johns never left their native land. The father, John Hocken, was accidentally killed by the premature discharge of a gun when forty-two years of age. His wife survived him some time and died in her seventy-eighth year. They were members of the Independent Church of England. their family were ten children, of whom Mrs. Johns was the second in order of birth.

Our subject and his wife have now lived and labored together for forty years, and their efforts have been rewarded with prosperity. Their union has been blessed with eight children, seven of whom are yet living. Emma became the wife of Walter H. Morey, of Spencer, Iowa, and died leaving five sons; Nathaniel wedded Minnie Safford, and resides on a farm in Rockford Township; Will R. married Carrie Rowe and resides near the city; Nellie is the wife of John D. Safford, an agriculturist of Rockford Township; Frank wedded Ada Sauber, and follows farming in Owen Township; Minnie is the wife of Henry E. Sauber, who is connected with a furniture company of Rockford; Flora H. and Albert C. reside at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Johns began their domestic life upon a farm, and for some years prior to removing to this city made their home in Rockford Township, where our subject carried on agriculture and stock-raising. He now owns five hundred and forty acres of valuable land near the city, all of which is highly improved and yields him an excellent income. It is supplied with good buildings and all the accessories of a model farm. The land is underlaid with a fine stone quarry, which has been successfully worked by Mr. Johns, and proved a good source of revenue to him. By his industry and enterprise in former years, he has acquired a handsome competence which now enables him to live a retired life, enjoying the rest which he has so truly earned and richly deserves.

In connection with this sketch of the life of Mr. Johns will be found his lithographic portrait.

OHN HERMAN LYNN. In reviewing the various enterprises that contributed toward making Rockford one of the great leading business centers of this country, it is interesting to note the advance made in each industry, and among these none demand a higher order of business ability, or more finely cultivated and artistic taste, than does the manufacture of furniture. The well-known and popular West End Furniture Company was established in July, 1890, and is the largest and leading enterprise of the kind in the city. The factory is spacious and supplied with the latest improved machinery and appliances, affording employment for about one hundred and thirty hands in the different departments, where the most original and stylish designs are originated. This concern is now on a solid and substantial footing and manufactures almost exclusively bookcases and ladies' desks, of which they have all styles and designs. Under the control of such men as Austin Colton, President, F. G. Hoagland, Vice-President and Mr. Lynn as Secretary and Treasurer, the business cannot fail.

Mr. Lynn, who has been a stockholder and Director in the above-mentioned enterprise from its inception, and is now its most able and efficient Secretary and Treasurer, has given his entire attention to the business, which is capitalized at $50,000. He has held his present position for about a year, and is a young, energetic, business man. He has been a resident of Rockford since 1871 and was here reared and educated. He learned the baker's trade, but later engaged in the fruit and confectionery business for some time. After this he was engaged in the grocery business with P. Heagg and still later was commercial traveler for the Star Furniture Company. Just before he became Secretary and Treasurer of the present business, he was commercial traveler for the Skandia Shoe Company.

Born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, on the 18th of April, 1858, he remained in his native country until 1869, and then came with his parents to this country. They settled in the south part of Winnebago County and there the father tilled the soil until the year 1871, when he was filled with a great desire to go still further Westward. The parents, with part of the children, emigrated to Clay County, Neb., and there settled on a farm, which they soon had well cultivated and improved. There the father, John Lynn, who was a man of sterling character and an honorable, upright citizen, passed away, his death ocenrring in 1888, at the age of fifty-two years. He had ever been a Lutheran in religion, and a Republican in politics. The companion of his joys and sorrows, his worthy wife, is still living and finds a pleasant and comfortable home with our subject. She is now seventy-one years of age and has ever been an earnest believer in the Lutheran doctrine. Their children, four in number, are as follows: Alexander, a farmer of Dodge County, Iowa, married Miss Sarah Marker: Eda makes her home with our subject; John Herman (our subject), and Matilda, wife of Charles Anderson, a farmer of Clay County, Neb.

When the family moved to Nebraska, our subject came to Rockford and engaged in various enterprises as above mentioned. He has been a resident of this city for the most part ever since and is acknowledged by all to be a young man of much business acumen. Believing, as the best and truest of men do, that it is not best for man to live alone, he was married in Rockford to Miss Anna Pherson, who was also of Swedish nativity, born January 27, 1859. In the year 1868, she came to the United States with her parents, Ingvar and Christina (Hockson) Pherson, and settled with them in Rockford. The parents are both living at the present time and are now quite aged people. Mr. Pherson is a machinist for Emerson, Talcott & Co. He and Mrs. Pherson attend the Zion Lutheran Church, in which they have been members for years. Their family consisted of seven children, six of whom are yet living and four married. Mrs. Lynn, the third in order of birth of these children, is a most excellent lady and is possessed of many admirable traits of character. She and Mr. Lynn are members of the Zion Lutheran Church, and Mr. Lynn is a member of the church board. He is a Republican in politics. They have one little girl, Effle E.

ILLIAM McCULLOUGH, a prominent and substantial farmer of Harrison Township, Winnebago County, Ill., is a native of this county, born where he now resides on the 8th of December, 1847. His father, John Alexander McCullough, was born in the North of Ireland on the 1st of March, 1818, and was brought to America by his parents when six years of age. John McCullough's father was William McCullough, and his mother, Eliza Drummond, came from the North of Ireland. William McCullough was born in Scotland and was a schoolmate of Robert Burns. He was a well-educated gentleman and came of wealthy ancestors who lost the most of their property during the troubles there. He lived to be ninety-seven years of age and was buried in Ypsilanti, Mich., about 1863. His wife died in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., when quite aged, and was the mother of two sons and tive or six daughters.

William McCullough was one of eight children, the eldest, the first daughter, dying when young. The children who grew to adult years were as follows: James, a farmer of Alexandria, S. Dak., is the giant of the family, stands six feet and five inches, and weighs two hundred and ten pounds. He is known in Harrison as the "Baby of the Woods." He was a volunteer from Guilford Township, in the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, and entered as a private in Company B, under Capt. Munhall. William, our subject; Margaret died on the old homestead when eighteen years of age; Anna, widow of James Dobson, resides in South Dakota; Mary, Mrs. Perry L. Smith, resides in Chicago; Jeanette, Mrs. Charles Winright of South Dakota; David, also of South Dakota, and a farmer and Register of Deeds at Howard City.

Our subject was married June 11, 1885, to Miss Margaret Nangle, of Newark, Wis., daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Strow) Naugle, who were from Pennsylvania, but who came to Wisconsin in 1849. This union has resulted in the birth of three children: Fanny May, born May 4, 1886; Mary Alice, May 11, 1888, and Luther William on the 7th of January, 1890. Mr. McCullough has ever been a resident of his present farm and is known far and wide as a wide-a-wake, thorough-going agriculturist. He is the owner of one hundred and ninety-eight acres, all but thirty-eight acres, which he has since added, being the old homestead. He has made many improvements in the old place in the last few years and in 1884 he built a fine barn, 32x60 feet. Since then he has erected a corn house, wagon and tool house, horse barn, hen house and many other necessary improvements. added to the house his father built, and enlarged it very much, making a very comfortable and attractive home. In connection with his farming industry, Mr. McCullough raises considerable stock and has on his place at all times about fifteen head of horses. His Morgan stallion, "Stanton," is a splendid animal. He also has thirty head of horned eattle which include a dozen good cows and he sells annually an average of twenty-live hogs. Mr. McCullough votes with the Republican party but is not a strict partisan. Mrs. McCullough is a Baptist, but Mr. McCullough comes of good Preshyterian ancestors.

MOS C. HARRIS. A list of the old settlers of this section would be incomplete without the above name, which is borne by one of the most intelligent and public-spirited citizens of the village of Winnebago, where he has lived retired from farm life since 1881. He is a son of Solomon Harris, and was born in Berne, Albany County, N. Y., February 1, 1834. The father was also a native of the Empire State, and the grandfather was, from the best information at hand, named Jeremiah; he was a farmer of Berne, where his decease occurred.

Solomon Harris removed from Albany to Cayuga County, and, locating in the town of Ira, was engaged in farming several years. His decease occurred, however, August 23, 1851, in Elmira. His wife, prior to her marriage, was Rebecca Cowel, a native of the same State where he had his birth; she died May 9, 1816, in Cayuga County, when in her fiftieth year. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Amos Cowel, was a farmer, and died in Cato, N. V. He had married Betsey Mills, with whom he spent many years of happy married life.

He of whom we write resided with his parents until reaching his majority, when he commenced life on his own account even with the world. He worked out on farms by the month in Cayuga County, and in 1855 emigrated West to Illinois, making permanent location in this county. Rockford was at that time little more than a hamlet, and it was there that Mr. Harris was employed in a machine shop for three years. During that time, however, he purchased a tract of wild prairie land in Winnebago Township, and in 1858 located on the place and engaged in farming until 1881, when, as before stated, he came to Winnebago village. In 1891, he erected his pleasant home where he and his good wife make welcome their numerous friends and acquaintances.

In Cayuga County, N. Y., our subject and Miss Mary Kellogg were united in marriage in the year 1858. The lady was born in the town of Schaghticoke Point, N. Y., October 12, 1833, and is a daughter of Joseph Kellogg, a native of Connecticut, who went to New York State when a young man and was there married. The father of Mrs. Harris was a blacksmith by trade and in Cayuga County erected a shop and followed his trade until coming to this county, where his decease occurred in Winnebago village.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Angeline Holmes; she also had her birth in Schaghticoke Point and departed this lite in Winnebago Township. One child, Steward IL. was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harris June 8, 1860, and died in September, 1882. Our subject and his wife are devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and have many friends among the people where they have lived so many years.

DWIN S. ALEXANDER, a retired merehant of Belvidere, is a native of Covington, Fountain County, Ind., and one of five children born unto James and Sarah (Mitchell) Alexander. His grandfather, William Alexander, was a pioneer of the Territory of Indiana, and for many years engaged in farming in Fountain County, James was born and reared in that county and married Sarah Mitchell, a native of Pennsylvania, whose parents, Thomas and Hester (Cowell) Mitchell, were also born in the Keystone State. They were pioneers of Indiana and came to Boone County in 1836. Mr. Mitchell died at the home of his son in Neosha Falls, Kan., and his wife died at the home of their daughter in Ontonagon, Mich.

It was in 1839 that James Alexander visited Boone County, and purchased a tract of land in what is now Bonus Township. He then returned to Indiana, and two years later brought his family to the new home. He at once began the improvement and cultivation of his land, and upon that farm made his home until within a short time of his death. The last year of his life was spent in Indiana, and he there passed away in September, 1888. His wife died in Harvard, August 25, 1875. Their four children who grew to mature years are Edwin S., Frances M., Serena M. and Elisha J.

Our subject was only fourteen months old when his parents came to Illinois, and amid the wild scenes of frontier life the days of his boyhood and youth were passed. During the winter season he attended school and in the summer months aided in the labors of the farm until twenty years of age. During the three succeeding years of his life, he carried on farming for himself, but continued to make his home with his parents until 1862, when he embarked in the grain and lumber business in Poplar Grove. After ten years spent in that line, he engaged in merchandising, carrying a stock of dry-goods and groceries. He was first a partner of W. S. Webster, and later was associated with Woodward Brothers until 1880, when he disposed of his interest in the store and again engaged in dealing in grain for a year. Removing to Waunakee, Wis., he was there a dealer in live stock and grain for five years, when he returned to Poplar Grove, where he made his home until 1886. In that year he came to Belvidere and has since lived retired.

In January, 1870, Mr. Alexander was united in marriage with Eliza Bailey. Her great-grandfather, Levi Bailey, was a native of Westchester County, N. Y., followed farming and at one time was a large slave-holder, but voted for emancipation. He married Betsy Smith, and became a large landowner of Putnam County, N. Y. He was also one of its prominent eitizens and represented his district in the State Legislature. The grandfather, Levi Bailey, learned the trade of harness-making, which he followed for some years, and then operated a farm which he had inherited until his death. He married Priscilla Thompson, a native of Putnam County, and a daughter of James and Priscilla (Cole) Thompson. Her father served as General in the State militia. Daniel Bailey was educated in his native town and at the age of fourteen began earning his own livelihood. On attaining his majority, he went to Westchester County, where he bought a farm and made his home for seven years. In 1854, he came to Boone County, and, purchasing one hundred acres of land in Belvidere Township, engaged in farming and stockraising. He has been very successful and now owns more than seven hundred acres of land. Upon his farm he resided until 1888, since which time he has made his home in Belvidere. He was married, in 1842, to Emeline, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Banker) Agor, and a native of Putnam County, N. Y., born July 25, 1822. They have three children: Theodore, Spencer and Eliza.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander and their daughter, Elora B., their only child, occupy a pleasant home in Belvidere, and its hospitable doors are ever open to their many friends. In politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles, and socially, is a member of Poplar Grove Lodge, A. O. U. W.

ARTIN McCOY. In the early settlement of Winnebago County, Ill., Mr. McCoy bore a prominent part in developing and opening the way for civilization, and is one of the old and much esteemed citizens. He was born in the Keystone State, his birth occurring in Huntingdon County, in 1813, and he is the son of Jonathan McCoy, who was born in the North of Ireland, or on the ocean en route to America in 1788. The grandfather of our subject, George Mc-Coy, was born in the North of Ireland, and came to Alexandria, Pa., about 1788. He was the father of four children; George, Jane, Mary and Jonathan. The mother of these children died at the ripe age of eighty-four years. Their daughter Mary was wed by Matthew Simpson, at Spruce Creek Iron Works, and the latter's son, Matthew Simpson, was one of the most cloquent and successful preachers in America, and was noted far and wide as a most gifted Methodist divine. He became an eminent bishop, and was a long time chaplain of the United States Senate.

Jonathan McCoy, father of our subject, was married, when twenty-two years of age, to Miss Isabella Houck, of his own neighborhood. After marriage they settled in their native place, and there reared a large family of children. They were the parents of eight sons and four daughters, but one, Washington, died in infancy. The others were as follows: William, who died a few years ago; Martin, our subject; Ellen became the wife of J. G. Gunterman, and died in Madison County, Ill: James is an extensive farmer near Blue Mound, Ill.; Hezekiah, a large railroad contractor and a very wealthy man, is a druggist of Salt Lake City: Jane, now Mrs. McNickle, resides in Milwaukee; Elizabeth, a young lady, died near Troy, Ill.: John, who resides in Lebanon, Ill., is a wealthy ranchman, owning many ranches in Texas; Dorsey, who is overseer for a large nail factory in Milwaukee, Wis., began the trade when thirteen years of age, and now at the age of sixty-nine years, is in charge of the works, and has been for many years, at a large salary; Thomas is a farmer of Macon County, Ill., and is in very good circumstances, owning land in Dakota; and Mary is the widow of Elder Palmer, an able Baptist minister of Southern Illinois, near Cairo. The latter was a brother of Hon, John M. Palmer, who was an expert linguist, being master of seven languages.

Martin McCoy, our subject, came to Southern Illinois in 1834, resided there for a little over four years, and in April, 1838, he came to Rockford. He was married on the 30th of March, 1837, in Smoothe Prairie, Ill., seven miles east of Alton, to Miss Sarah Chandler, a native of North Carolina. and the following year he and his bride started for Winnebago County by the river from Alton. He left his wife at Savannah, and walked from there to Cranes' Grove, and then went by stage to Rockford. He walked from there to Harlem, and thence over to Harrison Precinct for his brother-in-law's two yoke of oxen. With these he returned to Savannah for his family and goods. He made the trip of one hundred and twenty miles in one week, and came on with his goods, wife and young babe, Ellen, who was three months old. This was in the month of April, and they were caught in a heavy rain storm which drenched his wife, child and goods, and stalled his team in the quicksand. This was but one of the many trials that beset the pathway of these young pioneers. The roads were new and with the load of household goods, for they had plenty along with them, made the trip a very tedious one. Very thankful were they when they reached Rockford on the 17th of April. In order to cross Rock River, however, Mr. McCoy was obliged to wade the stream, which was waist deep, and set up stakes as landmarks, after which he returned for his team and precious load.

He first settled opposite Latham, on a half-section of land that Henry Chandler had located, and they improved forty acres, and put in a crop. They resided there two seasons, and then settled on Mr. McCoy's present homestead, where they erected a shanty, and immediately began making improvements on their future home. Of this, one hundred and sixty acres were in timber, and Mr. McCoy sold eighty agres to David Penfield, and got a Mr. Thompson, of Roscoe, to deed the other eighty acres for thirty acres. In 1843 or 1814, Mr. Mc-Coy took a pre-emption of eighty acres where he now lives, and on this he built a log house, 16x16 feet, with a good shingle roof. Later he built a 10x16 addition to this, and still later another addition of 10x10 feet. He resided ten years in this house before he built a frame house. He sold his land at Latham, and with the proceeds paid for his homestead of eighty acres. In 1872, he bought eighty acres of the land just north of him which had been shorn of the timber, and for this paid $1,700. Of this, sixty acres are of the very finest soil, producing immense crops, and twenty acres are in timber, good size, all grown since then. Mr. McCoy owns one hundred and eighty-five acres, of which forty acres are choice pasture land, forty-five aeres timber, and the balance is in a high state of cultivation.

Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. McCoy, all daughters: Jane died in infaney; Naney, now Mrs. A. P. Doolittle, is at home with her father; Mary, a lovely young woman of eighteen years, died of typhoid fever; and Estella is now Mrs. A. N. Rockstead, her husband a photographer of Rockford. Mrs. Doolittle and Mrs. Rockstead each have a son. Mr. McCoy buried his devoted and much beloved wife on the 30th of June, 1887, she being sixty-nine years of age, and but for the company of his daughter, his home would be desolate indeed. Mr. McCoy enjoys comparatively good health for his years. He has five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. He keeps many eattle and eight cows, sending his butter to consumers in Milwaukee, Wis. He also sells from thirty to forty fine hogs each year.

Our subject has always voted the Republican ticket since the birth of that party, though not a strict partisan. He has never sought official positions, but has held the office of Justice of the Peace. Assessor, etc. He has been a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church since sixteen years of age, and his departed wife was also a faithful Christian. Our subject has been a Master Mason many years, and knows Masonry to be a grand institution for suffering humanity.

YLVESTER GAGE. We herewith present the sketch of a prominent farmer of Boone Township, whose home is located on section 11. He is a native of Herkimer tion 11. He is a native of Herkimer County, N. Y., and was born on the 29th of December, 1838. His father, Alfred Gage, was also a native of the above-named county, where he was a farmer. In 1849, the elder Mr. Gage went West to California via the Nicaragua route, and died in the Golden State, in 1862, leaving a wife and three children in the East. The maiden name of our subject's mother was Parmelia Gregg, the daughter of Joseph Gregg, a carpenter of Sandusky, Ohio. The brother and sister of our subject were Seymour and Elizabeth, the family of five having been broken into by the death of Eliab and Mary Ann.

He of whom we write was given fair school advantages, and when fifteen years of age started out to earn his own living. In 1860, he was married to Elizabeth Ann, a daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Clark) Berry. Mr. Gage never served an apprenticeship to the carpenter's trade, but one day meeting with a Mr. Pearce, who offered him $2.25 per day to work for him at that trade, he accepted the position and happened always to do the right thing required of him, thus making a success of that line of business. In the spring of 1875, Mr. and Mrs. Gage emigrated to Ingham County, Mich., where they remained for two years, at the end of which time they came to Illinois and located in Capron, whither a brother of Mrs. Gage had settled in the '50s. They lived there for a twelvemonth, when our subject purchased a small farm of eleven acres. Previous to coming West, he purchased a farm for $500 in this State, which he sold a few years later for $1,800, and with that amount came West. They have a snug little farm and keep on their place five cows, marketing the milk at the creamery one-half mile distant. Mr. Gage is still working at his trade of a carpenter and is employed in the construction of some of the finest residences and stores in the place.

Our subject is a stanch Democrat and interested in the upbuilding of his community. His mother died in Litchfield, N. Y., in the summer of 1889, when eighty five years of age. Mrs. Gage's father died in Herkimer County, N. Y., December 2, 1857, when sixty-three years of age, leaving a widow and six children, namely: Thomas F., a carpenter at Capron; Robert C., of Fulton County, Mo.; William W., residing at Ilion, N. Y.; Edward M., who makes his home in Kent County, Mich.; and Ann E. George M. died when thirty-six years of age. The parents of Mrs. Gage were natives of England and emigrated to the New World in 1828, being sixty-three days on the ocean. Grandfather Gregg was a patriot in the War of 1812 and did brave and active service during that period.

SCAR FAVOR. The present popular Postmaster of Rockton was appointed to that office in the fall of 1889, and he enjoys the entire confidence of all with whom he has dealings. He is a native of this county, having been born October 18, 1841, in Rockton Township, and was reared to manhood on his father's farm in Owen Township, Winnebago County.

Wadley Favor, the father of our subject, was born in New Hampshire in 1806 and is a son of Moses Favor, a farmer in the Granite State, where he lived and died in his seventieth year, having reared seven children. His son Wadley in 1832 emigrated to Canada, where he was employed as manager in a stove foundry for six years at Normandale. At the expiration of that time, he came to Rockford and was soon engaged in farming near the city, at the same time making claim to eighty acres of Government land in Owen Township. In 1845, he located upon that tract with his family, moving into a rude log house which had been hurriedly erected, and died September 2, 1889. The mother is still living.

The lady to whom Wadley Favor was married in 1842 bore the maiden name of Mary Bryning. On coming to the new home in Winnebago County, the parents began housekeeping in a primitive way and here reared their family. In 1855, Mr. Favor erected a substantial residence and added one hundred acres to his estate, all of which is still in the family. The greater portion of it lies on section 5, and it is one of the most thoroughly tilled farms in Rockton Township. In 1860, a large barn, 30x10 feet, was built, to which he later added another large structure. Their eldest child, who bore the name of Axie, died April 6, 1889 at the age of forty-five years. Those living are our subject and his brother Walter, who is engaged in the drug business in Rockford.

Oscar Favor was reared on the home farm which he left in 1869, and was married to Mary Bligh, of Rockton. Her parents were natives of New York and pioneers of Winnebago County, this State. They bore the names of Alpheus B. and Almira (Weird) Bligh, respectively, and passed away in this county at the respectively ages of fifty-seven and seventy-seven years. The only son born to our subject and his wife, Oscar Bligh, died in April, 1882, when three years of age.

Our subject operated a fine farm and was extensively engaged in the dairy business for some twelve years, disposing of it to engage in the grain and stock trade, which he followed for six years in Rockton. In 1889, being appointed to his present office, he has since given his entire attention to the duties of that position. He is a true-blue Republican, as was his father before him, and while in the grain business was made Constable of his township, and for six years was Assessor and for three years served as School Trustee. He was appointed administrator of his father's estate and likewise of his father-in-law's property, which he manages in the most satisfactory manner. In every relation of life he is most cordially esteemed by those who know him, as is indicated by the fact that he has been placed by his party in numerous official positions.

HOMAS LIDDLE. This successful horticularity of Owen Township has on his estate the largest and finest orchard in the county of Winnebago, and has a wide reputation as a thrifty farmer and upright citizen. He resides on the farm which was improved by his wife's father and which comprises one hundred and sixty acres, on which improvements of a substantial order have been placed and conveniently arranged buildings have been crected. The most conspicuous structure is the family residence, a pleasant rural abode, a view of which is presented on another page.

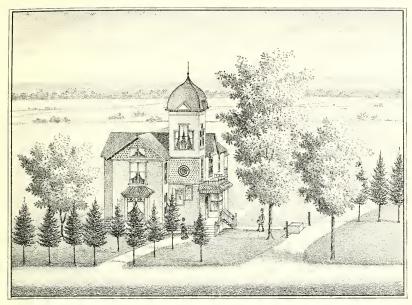

Tracing the lineage of Mr. Liddle back through several generations, we find that his great-grandfather, a native of Scotland, emigrated to the North of England and there spent his last years. The great-grandfather of our subject was a silver miner near Wolsingham, where he spent his entire life. Grandfather George Liddle was born in England, and his son, likewise named George, was a native of Durham County, there engaging in his younger days as a miner and in his later life as a miller and farmer. In 1852, he emigrated to America and resided at the Wadsworth homestead in the Genesee Valley, N. Y., one year. From that place he came to Rockford and followed the business of draying for one year, after which he bought a farm in Owen Township and followed agricultural pursuits until his death,

The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Jane Clay, was born in Durham County, England, the daughter of George and Hannah Clay, and died on the old homestead in Owen Township, after having reared to maturity eight sons and four daughters. The member of this family in whom we are particularly interested is Thomas, who was born in Durham County, England, April 6, 1827, and was reared on a farm in his native country. At the age of seventeen, he commenced railroading on the Wear Valley Railroad, in which capacity, as well as in farming, he was occupied until he emigrated to America in 1851.

In that year Mr. Liddle set sail from Liverpool on the vessel "Corsica," which was wrecked on the coast of Newfoundland, all his possessions being lost excepting the clothes which he wore. He was taken in a life boat to Cape Ray, and four days later brought to St. Johns, New Brunswick, whence, two weeks afterward, he sailed for New York, landing in that city in June. Thence he proceeded to the Wadsworth homestead in the Genesee Valley, where he remained until 1852 and then came to Rockford, where he was engaged on the Chicago & Galena Union Railroad. During the five years in which he was in the employ of the company, he was industrious and economical and was thus enabled to engage in farming. Some years before leaving the railroad business, he purchased a farm in Owen Township together with his brothers, where he resided until the Civil War, and then bought his present prop-

April 6, 1862, Mr. Liddle was married to Miss Minerva Chapman, who was born in Cayuga County, N. Y., October 1, 1839. Her father, Edom Chapman, was born in New York State. Her grandfather, Jeremiah Chapman, was, it is thought, born in England and emigrated to America, where he spent his last years on a farm in Putnam County. Grandmother Chapman, whose maiden name was Mary Barger, died on the old homestead in Putnam County. The father of Mrs. Liddle learned the trade of a carriage-maker and painter, and resided in Cayuga County for a short time after his marriage, coming in 1842 to Hlinois and purchasing a tract of wild prairie land in Owen Township. Three years later his family joined him. Afterward he bought another farm in the same township, where he resided until death. His wife, Gertrude (Jones) Chapman, was born in York State, the daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (Updyke) Jones, and died on the home farm. Mr. and Mrs. Liddle have three children: Jed, Ada and Arden. Ada married William Kelley and has two children, Lucy and Mary. In his political affiliations, Mr. Liddle is a Republican and is public-spirited and enterprising.

RANCIS E. WILLOUGHBY. Among the residents of Rockford Township, Winnebago County, none are more worthy of representation by the biographical writer than Mr. Willoughby and his wife, who are held in high esteem by all who know them. The farm which they own and occupy is one of the finest in the locality and a visitor would find upon it every necessary and convenient structure, which gives to the premises an air of prosperity and comfort.

The ancestors of our subject are such that their descendants can refer to them with pride, the various families furnishing men and women of intelligence and ability. John B. Willoughby, the father of our subject, was born in Westchester County, N. Y., January 16, 1802. His father, Bliss Willoughby, was, it is thought, born in Connecticut, and, as tradition has it, there were three brothers named Willoughby, natives of England, and members of Queen Anne's Life Guards, who, after the death of Queen Anne, came to America, one of them settling in Vermont, another in Massachusetts and the third, who is said to be the ancestor of our subject, making his home in Connecticut. All three served in the Revolutionary War.

The grandfather of our subject removed from Connecticut to Westchester County, N. Y., and from there to Chenango County, where he was one of the pioneers of Preston. Purchasing a tract of timber land, he set about improving his farm, and as there were no railroads or markets nearer than the Hudson River, was put to the great inconvenience of conveying the products of his farm many miles by means of ox-teams. Times being hard, he was unable to meet the payments on his land and was thus compelled to abandon it, moving to Oxford Township, where he rented property for a time, until he was enabled to purchase an improved farm, upon which he resided until his death. The maiden name of his wife was Fanny Patten. served for a period of six months in the Revolutionary War, and upon his discharge received $50 in Continental money, $10 of which he was compelled to pay for a square meal.

John Willoughby, the father of our subject, was reared in New York State, where he learned the trade of a stone mason, and for a time was employed in building locks on the Lackawanna Canal. After his marriage, he located on the old homestead, which he operated until his decease. He married Nancy Shapley, who was born in Oxford, Chenango County, N. Y., and was the daughter of David Shapley. Mrs. Willoughby still resides on the home farm in Oxford, being in her eighty-sixth year. She is the mother of three children: Francis E., William Darwin and John H. The latter died in Coventry, Chenango County.

The original of this sketch received a good education in the schools of his native town and continued to reside under the parental roof until 1855, which was the date of his advent into Illinois. Locating in Ogle County, he purchased a tract of eighty acres of wild prairie land in Linville Township, paying therefor $11 per acre.

He soon traded, however, for one hundred and sixty acres in the same township, where he made his home until 1866, and then came to Winnebago County, becoming the proprietor of one hundred and ninety-three and one-half acres of land, located one-half mile from the city limits of Rockford. He was actively engaged in cultivating his farm until 1890, when the "boom" struck the city, and Mr. Willoughby platted one hundred and eight acres of his land. That year he erected a handsome residence, a view of which is shown on another page, which is furnished and finished in modern style.

February 6, 1857, Miss Janett E. Root, who was born in Oxford, N. Y., became the wife of our subject. To them have been born a family of five children: Augusta E., Edgar C., Arthur B., John II. and Frank. Augusta married Warren O. Eddy, by whom she has two children: Flora and Alice. Arthur married Catharine Ernst, and is the father of three children: Hazel Grace, Lyra, and Arthur Fletcher. Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby are members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church. In polities, our subject east his first yote for Franklin Pierce, and now votes the Prohibition ticket. He was for many years a leading member of the Grange, being a charter member of Whig Hill Grange, and for fourteen months was manager of the co-operative store in Rockford.

OHN A. BOWMAN, Secretary of the Royal Sewing Machine Company and also a Director and stockholder, is a native of Sweden, his birth having occurred in the Province of Smoland, January 22, 1860. His parents, S. A. and Anna G. (Anderson) Bowman, were natives of the same province, where they were married and began their domestic life, the father following the occupation of mining. After the birth of all their children, the family came to the United States, in 1869, sailing from England in May of that year, and landing in New York, whence they came to Rockford, III. They afterward removed to Michigan, and in 1873, to Valley Spring, S. Dak., which was then a new and unbroken country. The parents are still living on a farm near that place and are prosperous and enterprising people. They have lived to see all the improvements made in Minnehalia County and are numbered among its honored pioneers. The parents are both members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and have reached the ages of sixty-three and sixty-four years, respectively.

Our subject is the third of four children who are yet living. One sister, Sophia, is the wife of Andrew Borg, whose sketch is elsewhere in this work; Hilma is the wife of Charles Olander, and Emelia is the wife of O. Peterson. The two latter reside upon farms in Mmnehaha County, S. Dak.

When a lad of ten summers, Mr. Bowman of this sketch went with his family to Marquette County, Mich., and three years later removed to Valley Springs, S. Dak., where he was reared and began business as a general merchant, there making his home until 1889, when he came to Rockford. While a resident of Minnehaha County, he was joined in wedlock with Miss Hannah Hetland, who was born in Norway, September 17, 1863, and is a daughter of Stephen and Margaret (Larson) Hetland, also natives of Norway, who emigrated with their children to this country in 1872. They located in Morris, Ill., and in 1879 removed to South Dakota, locating on Government land in Minnehaha County, where the parents still reside upon the farm which they improved. Their family numbered six children. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Bowman have been born three children: A. Leland, Chester A. and Blanche M.

The parents are members of the Zion Lutheran Church and are prominent young Swedish people of this locality, ranking high in social circles. Mr. Bowman is a Republican in politics. Since coming to this city, he has been closely connected with its business interests. The Royal Sewing Machine Company was organized in July, 1891, with a capital stock of $100,000, and began to operate the following May. They employ about one hundred men and have a capacity of about two hundred and fifty. They manufacture a good machine and have a constantly growing business. Our subject is Secretary of the company and is also a stockholder in the new Swedish paper of this city. He owns a half-interest in the three-story brick block at Nos. 501 and 503 Seventh Street, and also in the three-story brick block at Nos. 505 and 507 Seventh Street. Mr Bowman is President of the local board of the Loan and Investment Company of North America, located at Chicago.

RANGE R. GORHAM. In giving honor to whom honor is due, we should not neglect O. R. Gorham, who began life empty-handed and has accumulated a good property by dint of energetic and well-directed efforts. His home is located on the corner of North Church and Napoleon Street, Rockford. Born in Pittsford, Rutland County, Yt., July 13, 1837, he is the son of Alonzo Gorham, whose birth occurred August 15, 1801, in Poultney, that State.

The paternal grandfather of our subject, Seth Gorham, was a native of New Fairfield, Conn., and of English ancestry. He removed from that State to Vermont, where he followed the blacksmith's trade in Poultney. In those days all the nails were made by hand and our subject now has some in his possession which he drew from a building in Poultney in 1883, and which had been made by his grandfather. Seth Gorham resided in the abovenamed place for a number of years and then went to Whipple Hollow, near Rutland, where he followed farming in addition to his trade and resided until his death. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, in which struggle he received a scalp wound. The maiden name of his wife was Amelia Dunks, and her decease occurred on the home farm near Rutland.

Alonzo Gorham was reared a farmer boy, and being a natural mechanic, during the winter season followed various trades. Purchasing land in Pittsford, he lived upon it until 1844, at which time he came to Illinois and located three miles southwest of Rockford. The following year he was joined by his family, and lived on rented property for three years, when he became the owner of a tract in Winnebago Township, on which he erected a frame house, which before its completion was destroyed by a cyclone, on the 31st of May, 1851. Immediately rebuilding the structure, he resided in it until 1882, and then selling his farm, went to California, and made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Hannah L. Weldon. Five years later, he returned to this county, and in 1887 came to Rockford, where his decease occurred in May of that year. The maiden name of his wife was Mercy Humphrey; she was also born in Rutland, Vt., and was a daughter of Joseph Humphrey. Her decease occurred on the 8th of August, 1866.

The six children of the parental household were Hannah, who married the Rev. S. R. Weldon, and makes her home in Santa Barbara, Cal.; Wallace A., who lives at Spirit Lake, Iowa; Laura J., who became Mrs. Col. H. C. Forbes, resides at Champaign, Ill.; Orange R. was the next in order of birth; Merey Diana, who is the wife of Dr. H. N. Caner, of Los Angeles, Cal.; and Charles W., who lives in Santa Barbara, that State. Col. Forbes led a part of the army during the Grierson Raid in Mississippi, going with about one hundred others on a reconnoitering expedition. They were lost from the command, and, riding night and day, suddenly came upon a huge body of rebels in camp. It was, of course, expected that they would at once be surrounded, but the Colonel, adopting a bold ruse, raised the white flag, and, galloping into the camp of the rebels, told them he had come to demand their surrender, saying at the same time that he would withdraw and give them two hours' time in which to return an answer. He did withdraw and with his whole command made his escape.

Orange R. Gorham was a lad of eight years when he came to this State with his parents. He received his early education in the district schools of Winnebago County, which was advanced by an attendance at the Rockford City schools, and the Cedarville Academy in Stephenson County. Soon after reaching his majority, he purchased a farm in Winnebago Township and was engaged in farming for a number of years, during which time he bought and sold several different estates. Upon the death of his cousin, M. L. Gorham, in 1876, he managed his estate for fifteen years, at the same time superintending his own farm. He continued his residence in Winnebago Township till 1887. when he came to Rockford and has since been identified with the city's interests.

In 1886, he of whom we write became a member of the firm of Holland, Ferguson & Company. makers of abstracts and dealers in loans and real estate. This connection lasted until 1890, since which time Mr. Gorham has carried on an extensive business on his own account. March 11, 1862, he was married to Mary McDowell, and to them have been born five children: Frank F., William L., Charles M., Annie L., and Mary M. Mr. and Mrs. Gorham are members of the Congregational Church in Winnebago, and, in polities, our subject votes the straight Republican ticket. For six or seven years he served on the County Board of Supervisors, and was appointed Notary Public in 1890. In social matters he is a member of Rock River Council No. 29, Royal Arcanum.

Mrs. Gorham's father, the Hon. William McDowell, was born in Frederick County, Va., March 27, 1795. He is the son of William McDowell, whose birth occurred in County Cavan, Ireland, of Scotch ancestry. The latter-named gentleman was left an orphan at an early age, and was reared in the home of an unele, with whom he remained until coming to America when a young man. Joining his brother John in South Carolina, the grandfather of our subject, soon after coming to America, commenced preaching, which profession he followed in many different States. He was married in Carlisle, Pa., to Rachael McClintock, the daughter of Samuel McClintock. The young couple located in Sayannah, Ga., where Mr. McDowell was engaged for a few years in the mercantile business, whence he removed to Newton, Frederick County, Va., and for ten years followed that same trade. About 1807, he went to Chillicothe, Ohio, where he was one of the early settlers, and after a residence there of two years, removed to a farm eleven miles northwest of Deer Creek. Later, he returned to Chillicothe and was engaged in the practice of medicine until his decease, which occurred in November, 1841; his good wife preceded him to the better land in 1831.

When the father of Mrs. Gorham was two years of age, his parents went to Chillicothe, where he attended the pioneer school of Ross County. When his parents resided on the farm he was a pupil in the old log schoolhouse, whose home-made furniture hore a striking contrast to the convenient and comfortable temples of learning of to-day. There were no nails in the construction of the house, they being very expensive, as one and one-quarter bushels of wheat were exchanged for a pound of nails. Mr. McDowell later attended an academy at Chillicothe, and when fifteen years of age began clerking in a store, and two years later commenced the study of medicine, but was not enabled to graduate. After his marriage, he located on his father's farm in Ross County, which he cultivated for three years, and then engaged in the manufacture of soap and candles in Chillicothe. In 1842. the father of Mrs. Gorham started overland to Wisconsin, but the roads being in a very bad condition, he returned to Cincinnati, where he boarded a vessel, and went by the Ohio, Mississippi and Illinois Rivers to Peru, thence by teams to Green County, Wis., He there purchased a tract of land. erected a log house, and fenced and cultivated his farm, making it his home for many years. He later divided the greater part of it among his children, and at the present time he and his wife make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Gorham.

The maiden name of Mrs. Gorham's mother was Ann Eliza Clingman, and her marriage with Mr. McDowell occurred January 5, 1830. She was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, February 13, 1811, and is the daughter of George W. and Mary Bright Clingman, natives, respectively, of Pennsylvania and New Jersey. They are the parents of four children: Washington C., Charles, Mary and Annie, Mr. McDowell cast his first Presidential vote for Henry Clay, but now votes the Republican ticket. He served as Town Clerk of Chillicothe and while in Wisconsin was very prominent in local affairs. In 1844, he was nominated on the Whig ticket for the Territorial Senate, but was defeated. During the years 1848 and 1863, he was a member of the Constitutional Convention, and was honored with the position of County Treasurer in 1863-64. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church when eighteen years of age, and afterward became a Swedenborgian in belief, to which faith he still gives allegiance.

SCAR L. FREDRIKSEN. It is universally conceded that the distribution of food products constitutes the most important factor in the long list of a city's industries, and such being the case, the grocer must be accorded the palm as the most important contributor to the development of this fact, his wares covering almost every article of daily consumption known to man. This branch of mercantile activity is admirably represented by the popular and well-appointed establishment of Fredriksen & Anderson, located at No. 411 East State Street, Rockford, where they have conducted business under the present firm title since May, 1890. The business is conducted with vigor and push, and patrons are accorded prompt and courteous service, while the stock is constantly being replenished and kept choice and attractive.

Mr. Fredriksen is another of the many prominent citizens of the county who are of foreign birth, and first saw the light of day in Skorbes Lan,

Jour Touly Leve Forms

Sweden, October 1, 1867. In May, 1876, he came to the United States with his parents, August A. and Anna (Swenson) Fredriksen, and the family resided in Moline, Ill., for three years. From there they moved to Chicago, thence to Woodstock and, finally, to Rockford, where the parents reside at the present time. The father has followed agricultural pursuits as a livelihood and by his energy and industry has been unusually successful. He and Mrs. Fredriksen are now about fifty-three years of age and are prominent members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, in which he is an official. In politics, he affiliates with the Republican party. Their seven children are all living, as follows: A. W., a clerk in Rockford; Oscar L.; August L., a farmer at home; Charles S., George, Hilma and Anna, at home.

Our subject has resided in Rockford for ten years, and six years of that time he has devoted his attention to the grocery business. He was for some time with O. B. Harding, a successful dealer, and later a member of the firm of O. W. Heagg & Co., remaining with the same until the present firm was established. He is one of the most thorough-going, wide-awake young business men of Rockford, and his entire attention is given to his business. His partner, Mr. Anderson, is also active and enterprising and has been a resident of the city for about twelve years. In religion, Mr. Fredriksen is a Lutheran and, in politics, a Republican.

SAAC TOMS, one of the pioneers of Roekford, now residing on section 27, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, was born in Essex County, N. J., December 21, 1809. His grandfather, Lewis Toms, was of English descent, and spent his last days in New Jersey. There Isaac Toms, father of our subject, was born and reared, and learned the trade of a earpenter, which he followed in Essex County until his death in 1809, a few months before the birth of our subject. His wife bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Henderson, and was born in Essex County. Her father, Robert Henderson, a native of Scotland, was drafted into the British army during the Revolutionary War, and came to America. He settled in New Jersey, but afterward removed to Canada, where he spent his last days. Mrs. Toms resided in her native State until 1816, when, with her family, she removed to Canada, and there passed the remainder of her iife.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who in his youth learned the trade of a carpenter. After a few years in company with his brother, he purchased a farm in Canada, upon which he resided until 1837, when he came to Illinois. He started on foot with all of his worldly possessions in a bundle, and the first night met a young man en route for Michigan on a horse. They traveled together, riding by turns to Branch County, Mich., whence our subject walked to Rockford, then a collection of a few log cabins.

The surrounding country was all owned by the Government, and the work of civilization had hardly been begun. Mr. Toms was first employed in building a dam across Kent Creek, and in the spring of 1838, went to Ogle County, where he was employed at various labors until 1840, when he returned to Rockford, and two years later purchased the land included in his present farm. It was then a tract of wild prairie, upon which not a furrow had been turned, or an improvement made, but as time has passed, it has become one of the finest farms of the community. The home is a fine brick residence, in the rear of which are a commodious barn and other outbuildings. An orchard has been planted, shade and ornamental trees have been set out, and the place will compare favorably with any farm of Winnebago County.

In 1865, Mr. Toms was united in marriage to Martha A. Dodge, a native of Mt. Vernon, N. II. Her father, Charles Dodge, was born in New Boston, that State, and was a son of Amma and Luey (Fowler) Dodge, who spent their entire lives in the Granite State. Charles Dodge was reared and maried in Boston, and after his marriage settled in Mt. Vernon, where he made his home until 1830. He then removed to Lowell, Mass., where his death occurred two years later. He married Alice McClary, a native of Windham, N. II. Her father, John McClary, was born in the North of Ireland, of Scotch parentage, and after his marriage spent his entire life in New Hampshire. He and his wife were Presbyterians, and he served as Deacon for many years. Mrs. Dodge survived her husband some time, and spent the last four years of her lite in Lexington, her death occurring while on a visit to her daughter in Methuen, Mass.

Mrs. Toms resided in Lowell until 1856, after which she spent two years in Davenport, Iowa, two years in St. Louis. Mo., and then resided in Chicago until 1862, when she came to this county. She is a member of the Congregational Church, and a most estimable lady. Mr. Toms was first a Whig, and is now a Republican. He voted for William Henry Harrison, and east his last vote for Benjamin Harrison, the illustrious grandson of the Tippecanoe hero. He is a prominent and representative farmer of Guilford Township, and his portrait on another page is a valuable addition to the volume.

LONZO MAREAN, a successful farmer residing on section 11, Flora Township, Boone County, was born in the town of Maine, Broome County, N. Y., September 25, 1821. Tradition says that the first ancestor of the family to come to America was Dorman Marean, who emigrated from Normandy, France, in 1636, and spent his last years in the Colony of Massachusetts. He was followed by William, Thomas, Sr., and Thomas, Jr., the last-named being the grandfather of our subject. He was born in Boston, Mass., October 17, 1753, and emigrated to Canaan. N. Y., whence he removed to Broome County. in 1776. Purchasing a tract of timber land, he hewed out a farm in the midst of the forest and made it his home until his death. His wife, Esther Patterson, was born January 10, 1756, and spent her last years in Broome County.

The father of our subject, John Marean, bought a tract of land in the town of Maine, upon which he resided until 1836. He married Electa Caswell, a native of Herkimer County, and a daughter of Timothy and Mercey (Short) Caswell. In 1836, he went to Orleans County, accompanied by his wife and three children, and located in the town of Carlton. The year 1816 witnessed their emigration to Boone County, Ill., and Mr. Marean made his home in Belvidere and Flora Townships, until his death in 1861. His wife long survived him, passing away Mareh 27, 1892, at the advanced age of nearly ninety years. They had a family of five children: Alonzo, Sarah, Thomas, Charles and Roxy M.

Our subject spent the first fourteen years of his life in the county of his nativity and then went with the family to Orleans County. He resided with his parents until their death. On the 9th of February, 1816, he started for Illinois with a team and wagon and made the entire journey overland, reaching his destination on the 4th of March. For some years he rented a farm in Belvidere Township and in those days experienced all the hardships and privations of frontier life. After two years, he bought a tract of wild land, now included within his present farm, at $2.50 per acre, and three years afterward made a purchase of forty acres at $10 per acre. In 1850, he built upon the land and the farm has been his home continuously since. He now owns a tract of one hundred and twenty acres, all of which are under a high state of cultivation and well improved. Good buildings have been erected, fruit and shade trees have been set out and many other improvements made, such as are found upon a model farm.

On the 1st of October, 1854, Mr. Marean led to the marriage altar Miss Sttira M. Robinson, a native of Guilford, Me., and a daughter of Elijah and Deborah (Cochran) Robinson, who are mentioned in the sketch of A. W. Robinson on another page of this work. Four children grace their union: Jennie, now the wife of James E. Munn, by whom she has one child, Wayne. John E. married Elizabeth Rote and they have a daughter, Minnie. Clara is the wife of S. P. Teeple and the mother of one child, Glenn. Fred A. completes the family.

In his political afilliations, Mr. Marean is a Republican, but has never sought official preferement. He is a well-informed man, both politically and otherwise, and is recognized as one of the substantial and enterprising agriculturists of this commutal nity. He may well be termed a self-made man, for his success in life is entirely due to his own efforts. He had no capital when he started out for himself, but his industry, enterprise and good management have won him a comfortable competence. In 1881, our subject met with a serious loss, having two large barns destroyed by lightning, one 28x10, and the other 38x50, losing six head of cows. three hundred bushels of corn and oats and twenty tons of hay.

EV. LAWRENCE A. JOHNSTON is probably the most prominent elergyman in the city of Rockford, having charge of the First Lutheran (Swedish) Church in this place. As a pastor he gets very near to his people, and has ever sought to develop the highest type of the social life of the church. He has made himself the personal friend of each member of his congregation, sympathizing with them in trouble and joyful with them in their gladness.

He delivered his first sermon here in September, 1886, and has since been devoted to his church, which has the largest Swedish congregation in this country. The church necessarily must be very large, has a seating capacity of two thousand people, and is a beautiful edifice, the interior being Gothic in style. A $3,500 pipe organ adds still further to the beauty and grandeur of this building. The attendance is about three thousand and the communicants are now two thousand. When he first came to this city, there were about eleven hundred members and since then many others have been added to the church. Mr. Johnston has labored zealously in his ministerial duties and has interested his congregation in church work. They have a parochial school, which was started in 1890, and which has a capacity for two hundred students. This is located on Kishwakee Street, and four teachers are employed in the summer months. This school does not in any way conflict with the public schools.

The Rev. Mr. Johnston was originally from Warren County, Pa., born August 12, 1855, and he there grew to manhood, receiving his early education in a Normal of that State. Later, or in 1871, he entered the Augustana College at Paxton, Ill., and the next year followed the college to Rock Island, Ill., graduating in 1879. He afterward graduated from the seminary of the same place with the Class of '81. He was ordained at the Synodical meeting held at Lindsborg, Kan., in 1881, with Dr. Carlson, formerly of Andover, Ill., as presiding officer, and his first service as an ordained minister was in Des Moines, Iowa, where he had eight hundred members and six hundred communicants.

He began to preach in the spring of 1881, and has since been an ardent worker for the church. He has filled the pulpit at Wicker Park, Chicago; was assistant as a student under Dr. Carlson, of Andover, III.; was one year at Cambridge, III., and another year at Attica, Ind. Aside from his collegiate education, he received private instruction in music, and was a teacher for some time while a resident of Rock Island and Moline, III.

Our subject came of Swedish parentage, his father, Frederick J. Jonson, being a native of Jonkoping Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden. The latter learned the trade of a carpenter and mechanic, and in May, 1846, he and a brother, Carl M., emigrated to the United States. The former was married at that time but the latter was single. They resided in Buffalo, N. Y., for two years, and then Fredrick Johnson (spelled without the t used by our subject) commenced working at his trade. He started out in Buffalo, N. Y., with about twentyfive cents, but success smiled upon him and he accumulated considerable property. He is still living, is seventy-three years of age, and has been smart and active until recently. His home near Chandler's Valley is a well-known resort for his many warm friends of Warren County, Pa. All his life he has been a devoted worker for the Swedish Lutheran Church and has been Deacon for many years. He is a prominent local politician and has ever advocated the principles of the Republican party. He is also deeply interested in educational affairs, has been a hard student all his life, and is a self-educated man. He is an able and extensive writer for local and State Swedish papers, and is a worthy and esteemed man. His life companion, whom he married in Sweden, and whose maiden name was Charlotte, has stood by his side through all the trials and tribulations of life, and is a woman of true Christian spirit. She lost her parents when a small child and was reared by her grandmother.

The Rev. Mr. Johnston was one of six children born to his parents and two are now at home: Frank A. and Florence M. Three are residing in Jamestown, N. Y.: Frederica L., Sarah J., and Manley E. The latter married a Swedish lady.

The subject of this sketch was married in Rock Island, Ill., to Miss Anna S. Lindgren, a native of Wester Gothland, Sweden, born September 16, 1859, and who came to the United States with her parents, J. P. and Christina Lindgren, when eleven years of age. The parents settled in the State of Mississippi, but later came up the Mississippi River and located at Rock Island, Ill., where they now make their home. Mr. Lindgren is a mechanic and he and his wife are still enjoying excellent health. Both are adherents of the Swedish Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Johnston, wife of our subject, was educated in the public schools of Rock Island, and was a musical student for two years. Two children have been born to her marriage: Edith E., and Arnold V., both bright and beautiful children.

PTON D. BROGUNIER, deceased, was for some years a prominent citizen of Rockford. He was born in Hagerstown, Md., January 22, 1829, and was a son of John and Susan (Cook) Brogunier. His father was of French descent, and both were of good families. They lived and died in Hagerstown, the father passing away at the age of eighty years, while his wife was called to her final rest at the age of seventy. He was a member of the German Reformed Church, and she held membership with the Lutheran Church. In their family were nine children, of whom three sons and three daughters are yet living, and are married.

Under the parental roof our subject was reared to manhood, and in his native city learned the carpenter's trade, serving an apprenticeship at the age of sixteen years. When a young man, he came to Illinois, and in Ogle County engaged in carpentering until the time of the gold excitement at Pike's Peak, when he started for that place. On reaching Missouri, however, he decided to go no further, and in Lexington, that State, spent a few years. On his return to Illinois, in 1862, he located in Rockford, and from that time until his death was a resident of this city. He became a prominent contractor, and for years carried on a successful business.

Mr. Brogunier, on the 3d of August, 1865, in Pine Creek Township, Ogle County, led to the marriage altar Ann C. Mumma, a native of that county, born July 10, 1812. Her parents were Elias A. and Susanna (Miller) Mumma, natives of Washington County, Md., where they were reared and married. After the birth of five of their children, they emigrated to Ogle County, Ill., locating in Pine Creek Township, where Mr. Mumma improved and developed a farm, making it his home until his death, on the 12th of June, 1885. He was born April 4, 1809. His wife, who was born February 20, 1809, died on the old homestead, May 25, 1869. They were prominent members of the German Baptist Church, and were worthy and valued citizens and had a host of friends in Ogle County, where they were numbered among the honored pioneers. The wife of our subject was reared on her father's farm and was a true helpmate and faithful companion to him.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Brogunier were born three sons: William H., a watch-maker, who for years was employed in the Rockford Watch Factory, but now working for the electric light company, married Minnie Hyer; Harry E. is a skilled mechanic and painter and Charles F. is an ambitious young man yet attending the public schools.

The death of Mr. Brogunier occurred at his home at No. 1009 West State Street, February 12, 1890, when past the age of sixty-one years. He was a valued citizen, public-spirited and progressive, and a man whose many excellencies of character won him the high regard of all with whom he came m contact. In his political affiliations, he was a Republican. Since the death of her husband,

Boners Isuly Lea E, Crown

Mrs. Brogunier has resided at the old home. She owns some fine property on West State Street, and has a competence amply sufficient to keep her through her remaining days. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church and a true Christian lady, who has the warm regard and esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances in this community.

RA E. CROWE. A stranger would not be in Winnebago County long without hearing the name which stands at the head of this biographical notice, and he would soon learn that it is the cognomen of a representative citizen of Durand Township. As a native-born citizen of the county and one of its most highly respected residents, we are pleased to invite the attention of the reader to his portrait, and the following brief account of his life career.

Born on Christmas Day, 1845, our subject is the son of Edward and Mary (Cody) Crowe, natives of County Wexford, Ireland, and born in 1814. His father learned the trade of a ship carpenter, which he followed with fair success. In 1832, he was married to Mary, the daughter of James and Mary (Murphy) Cody. She was a child of nine years when she accompanied her uncle, James Murphy, to Quebec, Canada, where her brothers James and Robert were living. After their marriage, the parents of our subject resided in Canada until 1837, when they removed to the States and located in Steuben County, N. Y., Mr. Crowe there aiding in the construction of the New York & Erie Railroad.

In 1843, Edward Crowe came West to Chicago, and in the fall of the same year proceeded to Grand Haven, Mich., where he engaged in lumbering during the winter. In the spring of the following year, he went to Milwankee, Wis., and shortly afterward located in Winnebago County. Here he purchased forty acres of unimproved land, on section 27, Durand Township, and upon that place made his home until his decease, June 19, 1848. His wife survived him many years, passing away June, 20, 1885.

The parental family comprised five children, namely: John, who was born in Quebec, March 18, 1835, and resides in Durand Township; Mary, whose birth occurred in Steuben County, N. Y., in 1837, and who died in her fourth year; James, who was born in Steuben County, and died in infancy; Robert, who was born in Broome County, N. Y., and died in infancy; and Ira E., who was born in Winnebago County. The parents were members of the Roman Catholic Church, and were upright and industrious.

Ira E. Crowe was reared to farm pursuits, receiving his education in the district schools, and at Durand Seminary. He remained at home until reaching mature years, when, in 1875, he was married to Mary Ann Horigan. The lady was a daughter of Patrick and Alice (McCormick) Horigan. and was born in Westchester County, N. Y., April 13, 1853. Her parents were natives of County Kilkenny and County Antrim, Ireland, respectively and in early life came to the United States, and were married in New York City, March 28, 1852. They became the parents of two children: Mrs. Crowe and Albert, who was born November 25, 1860. They came to Illinois in 1858, and, locating in Harrison Township, this county, the father rented a tract of land, upon which he resided until 1860. He then took up his abode on one hundred and eighty-one acres in Durand Township, which is his present place of residence. They are members of the Roman Catholic Church.

After his marriage, Mr. Crowe located upon his present property which he had purchased six years previously. He is now the possessor of a splendid estate, numbering four hundred and eighty-one acres, one hundred and sixty-one of which are included in the home farm and the remainder located in Humboldt County, Iowa. His family includes six children: Edward G., born July 13, 1876; Mary A., July 1, 1879, died November 9, of that year; John A., born July 8, 1881; Merton P., May 31, 1885; Anna Belle, October 3, 1886; and Irene, August 19, 1888, died live days later.

Although leaning toward Democratic principles, our subject is not confined to party lines but votes for the best man. He has held the position of School Director for a number of years and is also occupying a like position in the Durand Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company. In January, 1865, our subject enlisted and was mustered into service in Company G, One Hundred and Fiftythird Illinois Infantry. The company was organized at Camp Fry, Chicago, and was ordered to Tullahoma, Tenn., where Mr. Crowe was hospital clerk, and was serving in that capacity at the time of his discharge, in August, 1865. He is a member of Ellis Post No. 320, G. A. R., at Pecatonica. He is Secretary of the Patrons of Industry of Durand Center, No. 2456, and is also Secretary of the Anti-Horse Thief Association of Durand. With his wife, he is a member of the Roman Catholic Church, and occupies a high position socially in this community.

EWIS NICHOLS, who resides on section 9, Roscoe Township, Winnebago County, claims New York as the State of his nativity. He was born in Coventry, Chenango County, February 7, 1817. His parents, Phineas and Esther (Gore) Nichols, were both natives of the Green Mountain State, and immediately after their marriage emigrated to New York, settling in Chenango County about 1810. After fifteen years, they sold their farm and removed to Chautauqua County, where they resided for eleven years, when, again selling out, they moved to Lake County, Ohio, in 1837. Mr. Nichols purchased an improved farm and made a pleasant home. The first of the family to come to Illinois was Ira, the eldest son, who emigrated in the fall of 1837. Our subject and his father came in the fall of 1838, and the latter purchased three hundred and twenty acres of land two miles east of Belvidere. They then returned to Ohio, and Lewis came with his sister and brotherin-law to the claim which had been purchased.

It was in 1840 that Mr. Niehols of this sketch removed to an unimproved farm in Roscoe Township, which has since been his home. It then comprised one hundred and sixty acres but now has an area double that amount. He has made farming his life occupation and has succeeded admirably in that undertaking. The well-tilled fields and many improvements indicate the thrift and enterprise of the owner. His labors have not been without their reward, for he has prospered and is now numbered among the substantial farmers of the community.

Mr. Nichols was first married in Perry, Ohio, to Miss Maria J. Goewey and unto them was born one son, Daniel P., now farming near the old homestead. He was again married, July 15, 1873, his second union being with Elizabeth Streeter Vanderear, widow of Isaac Vanderear. By her first marriage, she had one child, Elizabeth, now the wife of Charles Lawrence, of Los Angeles, Cal. The name of this lady is often attached to able articles, both poetry and prose, found in the periodicals of the day, and she has sent her mother many rare and beautiful gifts from that far Western land

Mr. Nichols has served two terms as Township Assessor and has filled other official positions, ever discharging his duties in a prompt and efficient manner. He has ever taken an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the community and is a public-spirited and progressive citizen, widely and favorably known in this community, where he has so long made his home. He has been an eye-witness of the growth and upbuilding of the county and has aided greatly in its development

OBERT II. COTTON. A long course of persevering industry and prudent management on the part of the gentleman above named has resulted in the accumulation of a competence which has enabled him to retire from the toils of life and spend his declining years in ease and enjoyment. He was born in Monongalia County, Va., January 15, 1811, and is a son of James Cotton, a native of New Jersey, where his father, also named James Cotton, was born. The great-grandfather of our subject was a native of Belfast, Ireland, of Scotch ancestry, who came to America in the early Colonial times, spending the remainder of his days in New Jersey.

The grandfather of our subject was a farmer by occupation and, on removing from his native State, made his home in Monongalia County, Va., where he was among the earliest settlers. There he purchased a tract of timber land and industriously set about clearing and improving his estate, being accidentally killed by the falling of a tree in 1806. He was a patriot of the Revolutionary War, serving through all that struggle. The maiden name of his wife was Achsa Galloway; she was also a native of New Jersey, and departed this life while residing on the home farm in Virginia.

James Cotton, the father of our subject, was very young when his parents made their home in Virginia, where he grew to man's estate and married. He became the proprietor of a tract of timber land with a small clearing upon it and a log house, which was the birthplace of our subject. He was a hard-working and economical man and succeeded in accumulating a handsome estate, upon which he resided until 1822. Then, disposing of his acreage, he removed to Pennsylvania, locating in Greene County, where he made his home until coming to Illinois, at which time he settled in Henry County; his death occurred at the home of his son, R. Il. Cotton, in 1871.

Jemimah Chalfant, the mother of our subject, was born in Monongalia County, Va., and was a daughter of Solomon Chalfant, whose birth occurred in Newcastle, Del. The father was very young when his parents removed to the Old Dominion, and when reaching mature years he served seven years under Gen. Washington, participating in the battles of Brandywine, Stony Point and numerous other prominent engagements. He spent the winter at Valley Forge, made memorable in history for the sufferings which the soldiers endured, and had the pleasure of secing Cornwallis surrender his sword at Yorktown. His wife was a Miss Eaton, and he passed his last years in Monongalia County. Our subject now has in his possession a $6 note of Continental money which was paid his grandfather in remuneration for his services in the Revolutionary War. The mother of our subject died in Greene County, Pa., after having borne her husband eight children, viz: Elizabeth, Robert H., Achsa. Eaton, James, Solomon, David and Lydia.

The original of this sketch was a lad of cleven years when his parents removed to the Keystone State. When attaining his sixteenth year, desiring to earn money of his own, he commenced clerking in a general store in Waynesburg, which position he held about eight years. At the end of that time, having been very economical, he had laid by a sum sufficient to enable him to engage in business on his own account, and, making his home in that place, he carried on a successful trade until 1839, which was the date of his removal into Washington County. He was then appointed Superintendent of a general agency for the Jerome Clock Company, and later for Seth Thomas, of Plymouth, Conn. He continued as Mr. Thomas' representative in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois, his headquarters being at Zanesville until 1851, which was the date of his advent into Rockford. This now prosperous city was little more than a hamlet at that early day, there being no railroads nearer than Elgin. Mr. Cotton purchased a farm close to the city, upon which he resided for two years, when he moved into the village and engaged in the real-estate and mercantile business for six years. In the spring of 1861, at the outbreak of the Civil War, he was appointed Superintendent in the Chief Quartermaster's Department, being first stationed at Rollo, Mo. From that place he was sent to Ft. Donelson, arriving there the day the fort surrendered. Later, he went to Shiloh, being there at the time of that famous battle. He was stationed at different places and continued in the service of his country until February, 1866. Returning to the peaceful pursuits of life, Mr. Cotton opened a boarding and sale stable in Chicago, in which line of business he continued until 1871. since which time he has lived retired from active

The first marriage of our subject occurred in Greene County, Pa., June 24, 1834, at which time Miss Margaret Hager became his wife. Mrs. Cotton was born in Washington, Pa., and was the daughter of Nicholas and Charlotte (Drake) Hager, natives, respectively, of Pennsylvania and

New Jersey. His good wife departed this life in September, 1878, and our subject was united, in March, 1883, to Mrs. Harriet (Trowbridge) Platt, who was born in New Haven, Conn., and was a daughter of Eli and Lue (Lines) Trowbridge. The parents of Mrs. Cotton were natives of the Nutmeg State, where they spent their entire lives. Previous to her union with our subject she had been married to John Platt, a native of Connecticut, who came to Illinois in 1836, and for one year resided in Alton, after which he came to Rockford. Mr. Platt purchased land in the city, where he erected a small board house and engaged in the mercantile business, being one of the first merchants of the then village. He continued so employed for two years, then became the owner of a tract of land a few miles from Pecatonica, where he erected a log house and for six or seven years was engaged in cultivating the soil. At the expiration of that time, he disposed of his property and returned to Rockford, where he was a public-spirited and progressive citizen until his death, in 1881.

Mr. Cotton of this sketch by his first marriage became the father of five children, viz: James A., who is a resident of Rockford; Lizzie, Mrs. William Brittan, died in the year 1858, leaving one child, named Lizzie, who is the wife of William F. Woodruff; Christian E. resides in Columbus, Ohio; Nicholas is deceased; and Gilbert P., who is a graduate of West Point, is Captain of Battery H, First Artillery in the United States Regular Army. He has recently been appointed Commissioner by the Government to go to Honduras in the interests of the World's Fair.

Mrs. Cotton stands very high in church circles, being one of the charter members of the Second Congregational Church at Rockford. Our worthy subject became a member of the Masonic fraternity while residing in Ohio, and was a charter member of Cyprus Encampment, organized at Zanesville, Ohio, in 1848, of which organization he was elected Captain General. At the time of leaving the Buckeye State, he occupied the honorable position of Grand Generalissimo for the State. In politics, he was in early life a Whig and was a delegate to the Pittsburg Convention in 1836, that nominated William Henry Harrison. He has voted for the following Presidents: Henry Clay, William Henry Harrison, Winfield Scott, John C. Fremont, Abraham Lincoln, H. S. Grant, R. B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, James G. Blame and Benjamin Harrison. When Mr. Cotton shall have passed away to enjoy the recompense due his long and useful life, his memory will still live and his honorable and successful career will stand forth as a fitting example of what can be done by earnest and constant effort.

ATRICK 11. WALSH, an extensive dealer in flour, feed, hay, straw, wood, etc., is located at No. 404 West Elm Street, Rockford, where he has been conducting a successful business since 1888. Since 1854, when he east in his lot with the citizens of this enterprising place, he has been closely connected with its best interests and has made it his home, with the exception of three years during which he was in the service of the Union, and one year spent in Chicago. He established the business in 1885, although prior to that time he had been occupied along that line of work for fourteen years.

The father of our subject, Patrick Walsh, was born in County Mayo, Ireland, and grew to man's estate in the Emerald Isle, where he was united in marriage with Miss Ann Boyle. After the birth of one child, they came to America in the '30s, the voyage being made in a sailing-vessel from Liverpool to New York City. Some years later, they made settlement in the Province of Ontario, Canada, whence two years afterward they returned to the States and resided in Pennsylvania for a time, going from there to the State of New York. The father first followed the calling of a farmer and then worked on the York & Eric Railroad, his first home being in La Grange and later abode in Buffalo.

In 1854, removal was made from the Empire State via the Lakes to Chicago and from there to Scales Mound. Ill., whence two years afterward the lamily removed to Rockford. There the father died, January 23, 1891, at the advanced age of eighty-four years. Some four years before his demise, his wife had departed this life at the age of sixty-five years. They were members of the Catholic Church and he was a Democrat in his political belief. During the residence of the family in Canada, the subject of our sketch was born, November 26, 1845. He removed with his parents to the States and was a small child when he accompanied them to Rockford, where he has since made his home.

April 12, 1862, our subject enlisted as a member of Company K, Sixty-fifth Illinois Infantry, and with his regiment marched to the front. After the capture of the Union forces at Harper's Ferry, he was parolled, and came to Chicago, where he was later exchanged and began service under Gen. Burnside in Kentucky. After trying to keep Morgan from making his raid into Indiana and Ohio, he accompanied his regiment across the Cumberland Mountains and came in contact with the Rebels at Knoxville, Tenn. After participating in several skirmishes, the company veteranized and later joined Sherman in his Atlanta campaign at Kingston, Ga., aiding him in the great battle at Atlanta and afterward assisting Gen. Thomas in the defense of Nashville. They fought Gen. Hood at Columbus, Tenn., and Franklin, as well as at Nashville, participating in the capture of Ft. Fisher, Wilmington, Goldboro and Raleigh. In May, 1865, they were honorably mustered out, after a service of more than three years.

After the close of the war, Mr. Walsh at once resumed his business pursuits, in which he has met with success. He is a resident of the Fifth Ward and has taken an active part in local politics, being a stanch Republican, although he never allows his adherence to party to blind him to the best interests of the community. Socially, he is a member of G. L. Nevins Post No. 1, G. A. R.

The lady who became the wife of our subject was Miss Mary Linch, and was born in England in 1843. After the death of her father there, she emigrated to this country in 1862 and settled with her mother in Rockford. Mr. and Mrs. Walsh are the parents of ten children, three of whom are deceased: an infant, May and Violet. Margaret became the wife of Thomas Nooman and resides in Rockford; J. F. assists his father in his store; H. L. is also at home and clerks for his father; Walter I., Maude, Garland, and Nora are receiving splendid educations in the schools of Rockford and are bright and intelligent young people. The religious home of the family is in the Catholic Church and their position in social circles is prominent.

ILLIAM MAYES. This gentleman ranks among the enterprising and well-to-do citizens of Rockford, where he owns a pleasant home. He was born in Mifflin County, Pa., December 10, 1815, but grew to manhood in Perry County. His father, James Mayes, died some months before the birth of our subject, leaving his wife five children. The maiden name of his mother was Rebecca Latta, a native of Adams County, Pa. She died in 1839 in Miami County, Ohio, whither the family had removed in 1831.

The original of this sketch was given a good education, and when nineteen years of age engaged as a tanner and currier in company with two brothers who were well established in that line of business. He was thus engaged for nine years, when he abandoned that occupation and became a farmer. Mr. Mayes was united in marriage in 1838, at Piqua, Ohio, to Margaret Elliott. The lady was born in Perry County, Pa., in April, 1817, and soon after her marriage with our subject located on a tarm in the Buckeye State, where they resided until 1856. Selling out, Mr. Mayes came to Winnebago County, and became the proprietor of one hundred and sixty acres located five and one-half miles north of Rockford, which was known as the Woolery Farm. He immediately set about the work of further improving the place and paid $25 for a There Mr. and Mrs. Mayes lived for a period of twenty-two years. The lady was the daughter of Charles and Jane (Mitchell) Elliott, natives of Pennsylvania, who went to Ohio in an early day.

The following children were born unto our subject and his wife: Mary Jane, who died in Owen Township in June, 1856, when seventeen years of age; Charles William in March, 1862, when three and a half years old; James O. died at Manchester, lowa, on the 19th of January, 1887, aged forty years, leaving a wife and five children; Rebecca, now Mrs. John W. Parker, resides near Charles City, Iowa; Frances D. lives at home with her parents: Charles William was taken with the scarlet fever when the snow was so deep and the weather so intensely cold that they could not get medical aid, and he died within a few days; James was a volunteer from Rockford in Company I, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, enlisting near the close of the war, when not eighteen years of age. Mrs. Mayes departed this life March 17, 1892.

He of whom we write has been Deacon in the First Presbyterian Church, and also Elder of that denomination, for many years, with which society his wife was also connected. Mr. Mayes, in 1872, purchased eight lots on Rockton Avenue, equal to two acres, for $1,500. He has since sold all but one, on which he erected a good home in 1879, receiving by the transaction more than twice what the property cost. He has been very prominent in local affairs, and served as Assessor of Owen Township, School Trustee and Commissioner of Highways for many years. Formerly a Republican, he now yotes the Prohibition ticket.

EORGE S. HASKELL, deceased, was not only a prominent resident of Rockford and Winnebago County, but was widely known throughout Illinois, and was held in the highest regard by all. He was a native of this city, born in 1838. Three years previous, his father, Dr. Haskell, had come to Rockford and here spent an active and useful life, dying in 1871, at the age of seventy-four years. He was born in Maine, edueated at Dartmouth College, and was one of the prominent residents of this city for years. Of the First Baptist Church he was one of the founders and at his death it lost one of its best members and the county one of its most valued citizens. In Massachusetts, he married Miss Eunice Prescott Edwards, of the Bay State, a descendant of the old Massachusetts family of Edwards. She now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Henry Kimball, of Rockford, and although eighty-eight years of age is still bright and active. For some years, she has been a member of the Christian Union Church.

Our subject acquired his early education in the schools of his native city, and afterward was a student in the State University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Later, he was a resident of that State for five years, during which time he had charge of his father's large fruit farm in the township of Bedford, five miles from Battle Creek. When this was sold, he returned to Rockford in the fall of 1864, and soon afterward established a retail seed house, his business increasing until it assumed extensive proportions. At length, however, financial reverses overtook him and, unable to carry on business alone, the George S. Haskell Seed Company was incorporated. He was made President and Manager, continuing as such until his death. He was one of the best known seed men in the country. He imported largely from European countries, particularly Germany and France, and did an extensive wholesale business. He did a large business in California, where he became well known as a seed-grower and dealer and contractor. some years, he had a propagating and testing seed farm in Rockford, and so fast did his business increase that he became known throughout the country as a leading horticulturist and agriculturist. For some years, he was president of the State Board of Agriculture, his term of service expiring in January prior to his death.

Mr. Haskell took a very prominent part in local affairs, was Treasurer and Secretary of the County Board of Agriculture for several years and was long connected with the National Board of Seed Men, being one of its official members for years. He met with them at many annual conventions and his opinions were received as authority in most cases.

In 1859, in Bedford, Mich., Mr. Haskell was united in marriage with Miss Lydia E. Howell, who was born near Lansing, Mich., in 1813, and was educated in Battle Creek, and at a young ladies' seminary in Kalamazoo. She is a cultured lady, a prominent member of the leading societies of the city and a member of the Congregational Church. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Haskell were born two children:

George Edwards, who was a graduate of the Rockford High School, and a most promising young man, had just begun to help his father in business, when in 1879 his death occurred at the age of nineteen years. Mark Traey died in 1882, also at the age of nineteen years. He had never had very robust health but his loss was no less a blow to his parents, who were thus deprived of their two sons.

In polities, Mr. Haskell took quite a prominent part as a stanch Republican and often attended the State and national conventions. For years, he served as City Alderman from the Fourth Ward. He was a leading Knight Templar, a prominent worker in the order and was the founder of the Crusader Commandery, of Rockford, one of the best societies in Northern Illinois. Although not a member of a church, he lived an upright, honorable life, true to every trust, and had the confidence of all. He was a public-spirited man in the best sense of that word and ever ready to aid in the advancement of enterprises calculated to promote the general welfare. For nearly a year before his death, he suffered from an attack of la grippe until death brought release on the 12th of August, 1890. lle was buried with all Masonic honors and the State Agricultural Board as a whole also attended his funeral. A man of worth had passed away and many friends shared with the family in their deep loss. Mrs. Haskell still resides at her pleasant and elegant home at No. 802 North Court Street, which was built by her husband in 1884. She is a most estimable lady and has the high regard of all with whom she has been brought in contact.

UGUST LIND. In Rockford are many important manufactories, and among these should be mentioned that under the control of the Rockford Manufacturing Company, of which our subject is Secretary and Manager. This company was incorporated in September, 1889, with a capital stock of $200,000, and began business early in the following year. They furnish employment to from seventy-five to one hundred and twenty-five men, many of whom are stockholders in the company. The products of this factory are farming implements, among the most important of which is the well-known Farm King Plow and the Imperial Corn Planter. On the organization of the company, the following officers were elected and still hold their respective positions: J. A. Johnson, President; L. M. Noling, Vice-President; August Lind, Secretary and Manager; A. P. Floberg, Treasurer; and J. Herva Jones, Superintendent.

Mr. Lind was born in Sweden on the 28th of July, 1854, and is a son of Andrew and Katie Lind. In 1866, the parents determined to come with their family to America, and the 4th of May saw them carry out their resolution, for on that day they embarked at Gottenburg and sailing by way of Hull and Liverpool, England, at length arrived in New York, but in that harbor the vessel was quarantined, as there were many cases of eholera on board. For seven weeks they were held there, and during that time the father siekened and died, being one of about one hundred and fifty out of the seven hundred on board who fell vietims to that dread disease. He was buried on the shore of the Atlantic. His death occurred at the age of forty-nine years. When the quarantine was raised from the vessel, the mother with her two children landed and at length came to Rockford, but she is now living near Ft. Dodge, Iowa. She was born in December, 1818. Like her husband, she was a member of the Lutheran Church and is an estimable lady.

Our subject was only eleven years of age when he came to this country and owing to the death of his father has since been dependent upon his own resources. In his youth, he learned the moulder's trade, which he followed for some time, when he engaged in the hardware business for three years, and for two years was in the retail eoal business, when he accepted the position which he now holds.

An important event in the life of Mr. Lind oeeurred in this city—his marriage with Miss Augusta Anderson, one of Rockford's fair daughters, born on the 25th of November, 1855. Her father, John Anderson, was born, reared and married in Sweden, became a shoemaker by trade, and throughout his life has followed that occupation. He now makes his home in this city at the age of seventy-three years. His wife was called to her final rest some years ago. He belongs to the Swedish Lutheran Church. Mrs. Lind spent the days of her maidenhood under the parental roof, remaining at home until she gave her hand in marriage to our subject. Their union has been blessed with four children but Alice died at the age of five years. The living are Emily C., Raymond and Mary O.

Mr. and Mrs. Lind hold membership with the First Lutheran Church, of which he is Sceretary of the Board of Trustees. In politics, he is a Republican, but has never been an office-seeker. He is one of the Directors of the Public Library, and is a public-spirited and progressive citizen, who takes an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the community and its upbuilding.

ELS G. STOCKENBERG owns and operates a good farm on section 11, New Milford Township, upon which he has made his home for fourteen years, although he has resided in Winnebago County since coming to this country in 1868. He was born in the Province of Smoland, Sweden, November 8, 1826, and was reared in that country, where his parents spent their entire lives. His father, John Stockenberg, was a farmer, and died at the age of forty-four years, when his son was a lad of lifteen. The following year our subject enlisted in the regular army, and served some sixteen years as a brave and fatthful private soldier.

In his native province, Mr. Stockenberg was united in marriage with Miss Helen Olsen, who was born and reared in the same locality as her husband. Her purents also spent their entire lives in their native land, passing away when about the age of seventy-seven years. They were members of the Lutheran Church. The young couple began domestic life upon a farm in their native land, but at the same time Mr. Stockenberg served in the army during most of the year. All of their children were born in Sweden, and in May, 1868, with their family they emigrated to America, crossing the Atlantic in the steamer "City of Paris," which dropped anchor in the harbor of New York, and from thence they came at once to Rockford. Mr. Stockenberg had two sisters already living in this country: Mrs. Jonas Anderson, of Rockford, and Christina, who is now living in Chicago. His wife, however, is the only member of her family that has ever sought a home in the New World.

Five children have been born unto our subject and his wife, one son and four daughters: Mary, wife of John Olson, whose sketch is presented on another page of this work; John and Emma at home: Anna, wife of C. A. Lindblade, whose history is also given in this work, and Tilda, wife of Alfred Alner. This family is well and favorably known throughout the community, where they have resided for many years, and where they have a large circle of friends and acquaintances. In politics, Mr. Stockenberg is a Republican, having supported that party since he became an American citizen. The farm which he operates comprises seventyseven acres of good land under a high state of cultivation and well improved, its neat appearance giving evidence of the thrift and enterprise of the owner. He engages in general farming, and the success which has crowned his efforts is well deserved. He has had no occasion to regret his emigration to this country, for he has here met with prosperity and found a pleasant home.

B. LOUCKS established business in Rockford in February, 1891, with A. F. Tyler, as dealers in flour, feed, hay, straw, etc. He had been connected with Mr. Shick in the flour and feed trade for ten years and thus learned the business, with which he is now thoroughly familiar. He came to Rockford in May, 1880, from St. Lawrence County, N. Y. His birth, however, occurred in the Province of Ontario, Canada, in 1862. He was one of seven children born unto Nelson and Catherine (Utman) Loucks. His father was born in Canada, of Canadian parentage and German ancestry, and after attaining mature years wedded Miss Utman, a native of the Empire State, born in Morley, St. Lawrence County, where she was reared and educated. They were married, however, in the Province of Ontario, where they resided for some time, removing to New York when our subject was a lad of six summers. Five years later, the death of Mr. Loneks occurred at his home in St. Lawrence County. His wife is still living and makes her home in Rockford. She is now about sixty years of age, but her years rest lightly upon her and she is yet enjoying excellent health. With the Methodist Church she holds membership and is a noble Christian lady who has the love and esteem of all who know her.

As before stated, the family numbers seven children. Two brothers, George I. and J. E., are now residents of California, the former residing upon a ranch, the latter engaging in railroading; our subject is the next in order of birth; Jennie, Charles and Bert, all reside with their mother.

Mr. Loucks of this sketch also makes his home with his mother. He is a wide-awake and enterprising young man, possessed of good business ability, and in his business venture is meeting with a well-deserved prosperity. His trade will no doubt rapidly increase, for he is ambitious and energetic, which qualifies are always sure to win success. In polities, he is a warm supporter of Republican principles, but has never been an office-seeker. Mr. Loucks is both widely and favorably known in this community, has already won a good place in the ranks of business men and well deserves representation among Rockford's best citizens.

BEL CHASE GLEASON, a well-known and representative farmer of Guilford Township, Winnebago County, living on section 25, was born in the town of Rowe. Franklin County, Mass. October 9, 1812. His grandparents, Jonas and Lucy (Harwood) Gleason, were among the early settlers of the town of Rowe, where the grandfather spent his last days. The grandmother died in Williamstown. Berkshire County, Mass.

Jesse Gleason, father of our subject, commenced to teach in his early manhood and followed that profession for a number of years. In 1820, he removed to Bennington County, Vt., where he engaged in farming and teaching, and there made his home until 1837, which year witnessed his arrival in Illinois. He spent his last days with our subject, and died May 24, 1844. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Chase, was born in Massachusetts, and was a daughter of David and Judah Chase, and a granddaughter of Abel Chase. Her death occurred December 12, 1868. She reared nine children: Moses William, Mary, Jesse A., Eliza, Sannel W., Juhet, Caroline and Ephraim Curtis. Mary is living in Marengo, Ill.; Ephraim C. is in Chicago; and Juliet resides with our subject on the home farm. They are the only ones now living.

Abel C. Gleason was a lad of eight summers when with his parents he removed to Vermont. He was educated in Powell, that State, and in Williamstown, Mass., and resided with his parents until 1832, when he went to South Adams, Mass. There he was employed on a farm until 1835, when he started for Illinois. At that time Chicago was a small village, and all of the land in that vicinity was owned by the Government. He made a claim to a tract of Government land, where Warrenville, Du Page County, now stands.

In September of the above-mentioned year, Mr. Gleason paid his first visit to Winnebago County, which was then unorganized and attached to Jo Daviess County for judicial purposes. He came here for the purpose of assisting and building a sawmill in what is now Belvidere Township, Boone County, and, in the spring of 1836, made a claim, now included in his present farm. The same year, in company with his brother Moses William, he built a blacksmith shop at Newburg, the first at that place and one of the first in the county, and he there also built a home which he made his place of residence until 1810. The brothers were associated in the ownership and improvement of the farm until the death of Moses. They bore all the hardships and privations of pioneer life, and our subject has been an eye-witness of the entire growth of Winnebago County. He has resided upon his present farm for more than half a century, securing it before the land was surveyed.

In connection with this sketch will be noticed a portrait of Mr. Gleason. He is recognized as a self-made man, who from an humble position has worked his way upward to one of affluence and has now a handsome competence, and one of the finest farms in the community. He is respected for his sterling worth and is held in high regard by all with whom he has been brought in contact. In politics, he is a Republican, and has served as a member of the County Board of Supervisors. He and his sister Juliet still reside on the old farm which has so long been his home.

NDREW J. ANDERSON. In the new jewelry store of Mr. Anderson, opened to the public in December, 1891, we find the most important and praiseworthy additions to the conveniences for trading in this city. Its foundation may be said to mark a new era of enterprise in retail trade, and its meritorious example will be an inducement for others to follow, in the direction of the adventuresome and intelligent spirit displayed herein, and which is the root of all successful advance.

Mr. Anderson has been a resident of the United States since the age of five years, and was a resident of Elgin. Ill., for some time, learning the trade of a watchmaker in that city when a young boy. Since then he has given his entire time and attention to that business. He came to Rockford in 1876 and for many years was in the employ of the Rockford Watch Company, being foreman of the motion department for about ten years. He is a very skillful workman and thoroughly understands his business. He is a stockholder in the Druggists' Union Company of Rockford.

He was originally from Sweden, born February 17, 1849, and came from Gottenburg to Boston with his parents five years later. The parents settled on a good farm six miles west of Elgin, and there they live retired from the active duties of life, with their son, Charles J., who now owns the farm. The father, John Anderson, was seventy-one years of age in January, 1892, and the mother, whose maiden name was Anna Anderson, was seventy-one years of age in the same month.

They are members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, Mr. Anderson having been officially connected with the same for many years. They are good, quiet, old people and are highly esteemed in the community. Seven children were born to their union; five are living and all are married.

The subject of this notice was the eldest of the above-mentioned children. He was married in Rockford to Miss Alexandra G. Matson, who was born in Rockford on the 21st of April, 1864, and who was reared and educated in the city schools. Her parents were both natives of Sweden, and the father, Benjamin Matson, who came to this country when a young man, is yet living in Rockford and is now fifty-five years of age. He was a turner by trade. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are members of the First Lutheran Church of the city, and are the parents of three interesting children: Ethel A., Rosa L. and Emmert J.

ARL P. HAEGG. Among the many enterprises necessary to complete the commercial resources of a town or city, none is of more importance than that of the grocer, as being one of the main factors in the furnishing of our food supplies. Prominent in this trade is the establishment of Haegg & Lynn, located at No. 706 Seventh Street, where the firm does a flourishing business and carries a full line of staple and fancy groceries. Messrs, Haegg & Lynn are young, energetie and enterprising business men, full of push and perseverance that secure success in whatever is undertaken. Mr. Haegg has had practical experience in this line and was formerly a member of the grocery firm of Haegg Bros., which had an existence of seven years.

Our subject was born in Sweden, on the 19th of May, 1860, and received a good practical education in his native country. He came to the United States in 1881, and is the youngest of three brothers, now residents of Rockford. He has been prominently identified with the business interests of the city since his residence here and has been unusually successful.

He was married in Rockford to Miss Emily Soderstrom, a native of Sweden, born in Oster Gothland, September 21, 1862, and to them were born three children: Edna, who died young; Martha and Hattie. Mrs. Haegg passed her youth and early womanhood in the land of her birth and there seemed a fair education. She was three years of age when her mother died and fifteen when her father passed away. Afterward she came alone to the States, following two brothers who are now in the lumber business in Arkansas. Mr. and Mrs. Haegg affiliate with the Zion Lutheran Church, and, in politics, he is a warm supporter of the Republican party.

ILLIAM L. BURR is now living a retired life at his palatial residence situated on the corner of Winnebago and Chestnut Streets, Rockford. The life record of this worthy gentleman is as follows: He was born in 1831, on his father's farm in Mohickan Township, Wayne County, now Ashland County, Ohio, and is a son of James Burr, a native of Vermont. His grandfather, Asel Burr, was also a native of that State, in which he spent his entire life, a farmer and miller living near Burr's Pond, which still bears his name. James Burr grew to manhood upon the farm and served his country during the latter part of the War of 1812. He married Miss Polly Smith, who was also born and reared in the Green Mountain State. Her parents were natives of New England, and at an early day emigrated to Ohio, locating on a farm in Wayne County. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Burr also became residents of Wayne County, and spent the remainder of their lives upon a farm in that locality. They were quiet, unassuming people, highly respected by all who knew them. Mr. Burr died at the age of eighty-four years and his wife was called to her final rest when sixty-eight years of age. In their family were three sons and three daughters who are yet living, the sisters being residents of Iowa, while the brothers of Mr. Burr make their homes in Wisconsin,

When a young man of seventeen years, our subject started out in life for himself and sought the West as the scene of his future labors, lle boarded a steamer at Cleveland, Ohio, bound for Milwaukee, the last vessel to make the trip during that season. They encountered very severe weather and burely escaped destruction. Capt. Applebee, who was in command and had been in charge of the vessel for twenty years, remarked that he had never known such a storm, but at length the dangers were passed and harbor was reached in safety. Mr. Burr began learning the jeweler's trade, at which he worked in Milwaukee, Waukegan and Chicago. He was also a resident of Beaver Dam, Wis., for twelve years, engaging in the jewelry business at that place, after which he removed to Winona, Minn., where the succeeding twenty-one years of his life were passed. He spent eight years in that city as a jeweler, doing a good business, and then removing to a farm near by, he devoted his energies to agricultural pursuits for some time. By the exercise of good business principles, industry, perseverance and good management, he succeeded in acquiring a handsome competence, and at length determined to live a retired life, so, securing a home in Rockford, he came to this city in 1888, and for the past four years has lived at his pleasant home on Winnebago Street.

The lady who bears the name of Mrs. Burr was in her maidenhood Miss Lusetta I. McClure, and was born and reared in Wooster, Wayne County, Ohio, where her marriage was celebrated. Her parents there resided for many years and her mother still makes her home in Wooster. The father, Jonathan McClure, died at the age of sixty years. He was a hardware merchant.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Burr have been born ten children: W. J., the eldest, is a member of the firm of Burr Brothers, the most extensive and successful grocery men of Rockford, located at No. 121 South Main Street and No. 405 East State Street. He married Helen Wells, of Rockford. Mary G. is the wife of Theodore Baker, a furniture dealer of Winona, Minn.; Charles D., who married Grace Swits, is a member of the firm of Burr Brothers; Frank R. is also connected with that firm; Mattie F, is at home; Edwin L. and Addison M. are both salesmen in their brothers' store; Fred is now book-keeper for Burr Brothers; Lee II, and Jennie M. are still under the parental roof. Mrs. Burr and her children are members of the Second Congregational Church of Rockford. Mr. Burr is a Republican, as are all of his sons who have attained to man's estate. As before stated, he is living a retired life, and is regarded as one of the leading citizens of Rockford, and the respect of the entire community is tendered him.

OLOMON WHEELER, one of the early settlers of Winnebago County, now living retired in his pleasant home in Rockford, was born in Jay, Essex County, N. Y., February 28, 1806. His father, David Wheeler, was born in New England, August 22, 1783, and was one of the early settlers of Essex County. He purchased a farm in the town of Jay and resided there until 1815, when he sold and removed to Cortland. This was before there were any railroads or canals in the United States, and the removal was consequently made with teams. After a residence of two years in Cortland, he removed to Tompkins County, where he died July 25, 1824. He was married, September 20, 1803, to Eunice Stewart; she was born August 31, 1780, and came to Illinois with her son, our subject, in 1816, and departed this life at his home January 12, 1862.

The original of this sketch was about eleven years old when his parents removed to Tompkins County, and when very young he began to earn his own living, receiving as his first wages $5 per month. When the Erie Canal was completed, he bought boats and engaged in freighting between Ithaca and Albany, in which business he continued until 1836, when he farmed for ten years in Yates County, when he sold and came to Illinois, via the Erie Canal to Buffalo, where he embarked on a steamer for Chicago, and thence by team to Winnebago County. He had visited his brother in this county the previous year and at that time bought four hundred and eighty acres of land located in what is now Guilford Township. There was a large barn on the place and a brick house in process of construction at the time it came into his possession.

He at once commenced to make further improvements on the place, and as there were no railroads in the vicinity for a number of years, like other farmers he was obliged to haul his farm products to Chicago to market, the round trip consuming five or six days. Solomon Wheeler purchased other land until his estate included six hundred broad acres. He resided there until 1856, when he disposed of his tract and came to Rockford to engage in the lumber business, which he carried on profitably for ten years. Since that time he has been retired in his pleasant home on the West Side. His dwelling is a commodious brick structure, with an acre and a quarter of ground, in the heart of the city.

Our subject was married, January 12, 1829, to Alice Babcock; she was born in Lansing, Cayuga County, N. Y., June 16, 1806, and died December 11, 1871. The following children were born of that marriage: David Hilton, President of Allegany College at Meadville, Pa., is a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church: Homer Edwin resides in Rockford; Phebe Louise married Charles II. Brownell and died December 19, 1872; Ennice A, died September 23, 1851; and Horace D., February 15, 1851; Helen Cornelia married the Rev. D. J. Holmes; Mary A. became Mrs. George Feakins; J. resides at home; Frances died in infancy; Martin L. is an attorney in Chicago; and Emily Frances is Professor of Modern Languages in the Northwestern University. Our subject has twenty grandchildren living and twelve great-grandchildren.

Mr. Wheeler was a second time married, October 1, 1878, when Miss Mary E. Nash became his wife. She was born in Weston, Fairfield County, Conn., and was a daughter of David Nash, also born in the above-named county and who for a number of years taught in a private school in Weston, Conn. He then removed to New York City to accept the position of Principal in one of the schools, and continued in that capacity until his decease in August, 1843. The maiden name of his wife was Sally Lockwood; she was also born in Weston, Conn., and was the daughter of Reuben Lockwood, who, it is thought, was a native of the Nutneg State and of English parents. He was a farmer and died in the above-named place. The maiden name of his wife, the grandmother of Mrs. Wheeler, was Elizabeth Raymond; she was the daughter of a Revolutionary soldier, and died on the home farm in Weston. The mother of Mrs. Wheeler resided in New York City until 1850, thence removed to Norwalk, where her decease occurred in 1870.

Mr. Wheeler joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1836, and has been a constant member of the same ever since, of which denomination his first wife was also a member. The present wife of our subject has been a member of that church since 1850. In early life a Whig, our subject voted the Republican ticket until the formation of the Prohibition party, since which time he has been a thorough advocate of its principles.

UST HOLM. The sons of Sweden are well represented in Winnebago County, and although with characteristic modesty they do not aspire to brilliancy in the forum, yet they hold conspicuous places in many pursuits which make that county a substantial star in the galaxy of Illinois' many interesting counties. The gentleman whose portrait appears on the opposite page is a prominent contractor at Rockford, and one of its foremost citizens.

Born in Oester Gothland, Sweden, July 5, 1852, Mr. Holm learned his trade there under the supervision of his father. He was married in that country to Miss Alfina Olson, who was a native of the same province, born December 25, 1849. Shortly afterward, he and his young wife crossed the ocean to America, landed in New York City, where they remained a short time, and thence, in 1880, came to Rockford, Ill. Since then Mr. Holm has erected many of the best residences in Rockford, and has met with well-deserved success. He owns a good home on Twelfth Street, at No. 1,602 Fourth Avenue, also other property on that street, and is a stockholder and Director in the Globe Clothing Company, and the American Furniture Factory, of Rockford.

Peter Joneson, his father, is still living in Sweden, and has followed earpentering all his life. He is now seventy-three years of age. The mother, whose maiden name was Christina Carolena, died when about fifty-six years of age. Like the majority of Swedes, they were Lutherans in their religious views. Three of their sons are in this country and one in Sweden.

Mrs. Holm's father, Andrew Olson, left his native country for this, and died here on the 12th of October, 1889, when seventy-one years of age. His wife is still living at the age of sixty-three years, and resides with her only daughter, Mrs. Holm. Her maiden name was Johanna Johnson, and she has been an active member of the Lutheran Church all her life. Her husband was also identified with that church.

Mr. and Mrs. Holm are members of the Mission Church. In politics, the former is a Republican. Their union has been blessed by the birth of seven children, four now living: Karl D., Gust P., Huldah A. and Martin S., the last two twins. Those deceased are: Martin, Carl and David.

R. IRA L. ANDREWS, who is engaged in the practice of dentistry in Rockford, is one of the oldest dental surgeons of this city in years of continuous practice, having located here in 1869. For a year he was alone in business and then became connected with a well-known dentist of this city now deceased, Dr. C. B. Rising, who for years had stood at the head of his profession in Rockford. The partnership was continued until the death of Dr. Rising, in August, 1875. He was one of the most prominent men of the community, respected by all for his well-known honesty and straightforwardness. His word was as good as his bond and in the payment of a debt he was scrupulously exact. At the end of each month he would draw up a check for the entire amount of indebtedness against him. His true worth made him honored, and his friend, Dr. Andrews, is always ready to pay a tribute to his memory.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who was born in Chenango County, N. Y., in 1825. His father was a native of Connecticut and came of one of the old and respected New England families. The paternal grandfather served as a drummer-boy in the Revolutionary War and the father of the Doctor fought in the War of 1812. He became a farmer, and in Danbury, Conn., married Roxanna Holcomb, a native of that State, also descended from one of the old New England families. Soon after their marriage, they emigrated to New York, where Mr. Andrews began to develop and improve a new farm in Chenango County, where he spent the remainder of his days, dying at the age of sixty-five years. He was a man highly respected by all who knew him. In polities, he was a Whig and, in religious belief, was a Baptist. His wife, who was also a member of that church, had reached the age of three-score years and ten when called to her final rest, about ten years after the death of her husband.

Our subject is the youngest of ten children, of whom three sons are yet living. He was reared to manhood upon his father's farm, and acquired his education in the common schools. In 1856, he left home and went to Binghampton, Broome County, N. Y., where he made his home for five years, being engaged in the wagon supply business. He afterward went to Milton, Pa., from whence he came to Rockford in 1869. In Milton, he was united in marriage with Miss Martha Goodlander, who was born and reared in Northumberland County, Pa., her people being early settlers of that community, and of German descent. Mrs. Andrews has proved to her husband a true and loving wife and faithful helpmate, and is a lady held in high esteem by all who know her, for her many excellencies of character.

The Doctor and his wife have a pleasant and beautiful home at No. 412 North Main Street, where hospitality abides and good-will reigns supreme. They are both members of the Court Street Methodist Church, and take an active interest in its welfare. In politics, the Doctor was a Republican from 1856 until 1884, since which time he has supported the Prohibition party. He is a stockholder in the People's Bank, also in the Rockford Watch Company. His success in the line of his profession has been excellent, and from the beginning he has had an excellent patronage, which has increased as the years have gone by, bringing with it a handsome competence, which places him in comfortable circumstances. Pleasant and genial in manner, he has many friends among the best people of Rockford.

RANK B. TRAHERN. There are few of the citizens of Rockford who are not personally acquainted with this gentleman, whose home has been in this city since 1818, and who has contributed his best efforts toward its advancement along the lines of education, morality, philanthropy and public improvements. Now retired from active labors, he makes his home at No. 308 Kent Street, in the cozy residence which he has gained by his unaided exertions.

On coming West with his brother, W. D., our subject engaged in manufacturing threshing machines for a time, but afterward withdrew from the firm and became foreman of the establishment. In 1883, he organized the Rockford Brass Works, which in 1890 was changed into a stock company confined to himself and sons. At present, the eldest son, D. E., is President of the company, and H. R., the younger son, Secretary, while our subject occupies the posttion of Treasurer. The business of the corporation is principally carried on by the sons, and bronze and brass castings, aluminum and copper castings are manufactured in large quantities, and shipped to different markets.

The boyhood days of our subject were passed in Knox County, Ohio, where he was born February 16, 1829. His father, Samuel, was a native of Virginia and belonged to an old Virginia family descended from English ancestors. He married Miss Susan Brown, in Loudoun County, Va., whose father, Daniel, was an early settler of Knox County, Ohio. After the birth of one child, Samuel Trahern and his wife came West to Knox County, Ohio, where, in 1825, they commenced to operate as members of the farming community of that new country. He died at the age of seventy-eight and she passed away when forty-seven. In their religious connections they were members of the Quaker Church.

Until he was nineteen, Frank B. Trahern remained under the parental roof, since which time his home has been in Illinois. He was married in Walworth County, Wis., to Miss Martha Reader, who was born in New York State, and in 1837, when four years old, accompanied her parents, John and Elizabeth Reader, to Walworth County, Wis., where they entered land from the Government and commenced life as pioneers. Mr. Reader was one of the first organizers and supporters of the Baptist Church in that county, and remained in its fellowship until he died at the age of seventyeight. His home was the favorite resort of ministers of early days and he was prominent as a Deacon and liberal contributor to religious causes. His wife, who was likewise a member of the Baptist Church, died at the age of seventy.

Mr. and Mrs. Trahern are the parents of two children, namely: Delbert E., who married Miss Sadie Johnson, and now lives at No. 209 Fourth Street, Rockford; and Harvey R., who chose as his wife Miss Ada Keeney, and resides at No. 607 Kent Street, Rockford. In his political belief, our subject is a stanch adherent to the principles of the Republican party, and is a generous contributor to the support of the Baptist Church, of which his wife is an active member. The social position occupied by the family is a prominent one and they are highly esteemed wherever known.

RS. MARY A. (FARMER) CLARK, the widow of John Clark, is at present residing on and operating the farm left her by the death of her husband in 1881. It is pleasantly located on section 5, Owen Township, Winnebago County, and by being intelligently tilled nets a handsome income. Mrs. Clark was born in Newborough, Vt., November 25, 1837, while her father, Thomas Farmer, one of the pioneers of this county, was born in Edinboro, Scotland, July 10, 1815. The grandfather of our subject, Thomas Farmer, was also a native of Scotland, his birth occurring September 30, 1785. He learned the trade of a stone-mason, which occupation he followed until 1840, when he came to America and spent his last years with the father of Mrs. Clark, dying February 26, 1841.

The grandmother of our subject bore the maiden name of Janet Gurley, and was also a native of Scotland, where her decease occurred. With her husband, she was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Clark has in her possession the old family Bible which her grandfather brought to America. Her father emigrated to this country together with his brother William, the latter of whom settled in Hamilton, Canada.

The father of Mrs. Clark received his education in Scotland, and when nineteen years of age emigrated to the New World. Having learned the trade of a mason in Edinboro, he followed that occupation in Newborough, Vt., until 1839, when, with his wife and two children, he came to Illinois, traveling by way of canals and lakes to Chicago, thence by team to Rockford. The land in this locality sold at $1.25 per acre and the few settlers then living here were located in the timber and along the streams. Mr. Farmer selected a tract of Government land in what is now Owen Township, upon which he erected a log house and there resided for a number of years with his family. Deer, wolves and other kinds of wild game were very plentiful in the vicinity, and as there were no railroads in this locality for a number of years, Mr. Farmer hauled the products of his estate to the Chicago market. He was very successful as an agriculturist and added to his estate from time to time until he became one of the largest landowners in the county. After being industriously engaged on the farm for many years, he moved to Rockford and lived retired until his death, October 9, 1880.

Margaret Halley was the maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Clark; she was born in Markineh, Fifeshire, Scotland, her parents being Wilham and Mary (Markey) Halley. The grandfather made three voyages to America and on the last trip fell from the boat at Montreal and was drowned in the St. Lawrence River. His wife spent her entire life in Scotland.

The original of this sketch was an infant when brought to this county with her parents, where she was reared and educated and when twenty-five years of age married Edward Marshall, who was a native of England. He came to America when a young man and was engaged in farming until his decease in 1866. Mrs. Marshall, as she was then known, was married three years later to John Clark, who was also a native of England and a half-brother of Mr Marshall. He departed this life in 1881, since which time his widow has carried on the farm with signal success. She has one son by her first marriage who bears the name of Oscar. The five children born of her second union are Maggie, Robert B., Kittie, John and Edna. The eldest daughter is a teacher in the public schools, where she is meeting with more than ordinary success, and Oscar, who married Elizabeth Griffith, resides in Louisiana. Mrs Clark is a conscientious member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and is greatly respected in her community.

HARLES A. HULT, Secretary and Treasurer of the Co-operative Furniture Company, was born in Smoland, Sweden, August 29, 1864. Both of his parents died in Smoland. His father, Swan Hult, followed farming throughout his life and passed away at about the age of seventy years. His wife died some years previous. They were life-long members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Their family numbered four children, all of whom are now living in this country: J. S., who resides in Holdredge, Neb., married a Swedish lady of Stanton, Iowa; Christina is the wife of A. M. Casperson, who lives in Burlington, Iowa; Tillie M. is the wife of James W. Quick, of Burlington, Iowa; and C. A. completes the family.

Our subject came to this country with a sister in 1873, when only about nine years of age, and joined an older brother and sister who had previously emigrated to this country. He is a self-made man, his success in life being entirely due to his own efforts. He was reared in Burlington, Iowa, and acquired his education in that city at the Bushnell University and at Elliott's Business College. His residence in Rockford dates from 1886. For some time after locating in this city, he was connected with the coal, wood and feed business of D. A. Elmore in the capacity of book-keeper. For nearly four years he has now been interested in the Cooperative Furniture Company, filling the position of Secretary and Treasurer. The factory is located at the corner of Railroad Avenue and Ninth Street and they employ between one hundred and thirty and one hundred and fifty men, doing a large and successful business which is constantly increasing.

Mr. Hult was united in marriage, in Rockford, with Miss Mary L. Danielson, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, on the 7th of September, 1863, and came to the United States in the early part of 1884. Her parents are still living in Sweden and are now past middle life. Mrs. Hult was the first of the family to cross the Atlantic but has since been joined by her sister Emily. Mr. and Mrs. Hult are prominent young Swedish people of this city, well and favorably known in the community where they reside. Their union has been blessed with one child, Leslie P.

In his political additations, Mr. Hult is a supporter of Republican principles. He is yet a young man and has the energy of youth. He is also progressive and industrious and will undoubtedly make for himself a successful career, his life already giving evidence of that fact. Socially, he is a member of Social Lodge No. 140, and Encamp-No. 44, I. O. O. F., and is Past Noble Grand.

ENNIS TOLLEFSON, for over half a century a resident of Manchester Township, Boone County, was born in Norway, February 28, 1806. He is classed among the most successful farmers of the vicinity and is the proprietor of a splendid estate which is well improved in every particular. He is the son of Tollef Larson, a farmer of Norway, who reared a family of fourteen children, and departed this life in his native country at an advanced age.

The lady to whom our subject was married, in 1810, was Anna Rosseland; she died August 31, 1886, in her sixty-eighth year. Our subject came to America in 1836, and was followed by Miss Rosseland one year later, soon after which they were married. They were industrious and hardworking people and accumulated for themselves a handsome fortune. Mr. Tollefson is very generous with his means and within the last few years has made some large bequests. His present farm was entered from the Government, and the high state of cultivation and improvement which it is under, the good brick residence and the ample barns and outbuildings, represent many years of toil and privation.

Lars Tollefson, grand-nephew of our subject, has been conducting the home farm since 1887. He was married to Anna Erikson January 7, 1888, the lady being the daughter of John and Axlaine Erikson. They have become the parents of three children, two of whom died in infancy. Their infant son, who was born January 11, 1891, bears the name of Tennis Albert. He of whom we write on coming to the New World stopped for a time at the home of a brother in New York State near Rochester. He is, probably, the first Norwegian settler in Boone County and the oldest resident of Manchester Township. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran Norwegian Church, to the support of which they are liberal contributors, Mr. Tollefson takes but little part in politics other than to cast a Republican vote at elections. He has been more than ordinarily successful in all his undertakings, and his ability and character are such as to earn for him the esteem and regard of all who know him.

OSEPH W. IRVINE. Prominent among the industries carried on in Rockford is the manufacture of boots and shoes, as represented by the Rockford Boot and Shoe Manufactory. This enterprise was established about ten years ago, and is one of the flourishing institutions of the city.

Mr. Irvine, Vice-president of this vast concern, has retired from active business and now resides quietly at his comfortable home in this city. He has been a resident of Rockford since October, 1869. For many years he was connected with the Emerson, Talcott Manufacturing Company, one of the best known organizations of the State, and especially in this part of Illinois. He was also with the Wilkins Knitting Factory, but subsequently sold out his interest and retired from active labor. He is a stockholder in other corporations, including the Silver Plate Manufacturing Company, the Rockford Watch-Case Company, the Rockford Overalls Company, and at times has been officially connected with some of them, and has been a promoter of most of them.

He came to Rockford from Rockvale Township, Ogle County, Ill., and was engaged for about thirty years there as a successful farmer. He has been a resident of this State for fifty-six years, and during that time he has made his home in Ogle and Winnebago Counties, living to see the wonderful advancement made during half a century. While in Ogle County, he took and improved a large tract of Government land, and has spent his life very actively as a farmer and business man.

He was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, in 1819, but most of his early life was spent in Later he moved to Toronto, Canada, where he subsequently followed clerking in a store. He is a son of the Rev. Alexander Irvine, a native of Perthshire, Scotland, who was a descendant of an old and prominent Scotch family. The latter was but four years of age when he came with his parents, William and Marjorie (Stuart) Irvine, to America and settled with them in York State. William Irvine resided in the Empire State until his death. His wife, who survived him, finally went to Canada and died when over eighty years of She was a very bright, intelligent lady, and was a descendant of the royal family. She and her husband were members of the Presbyterian Church.

Alexander Irvine grew to manhood and was married in York State to Miss Clarissa Harrington, a native of that State and of Yankee origin. After marriage, they moved to Canada, where two children, our subject and a daughter, were born. Shortly afterward the family returned to New York, and when our subject was twelve years of age, they went back to Canada, where they remained a few years. In 1836 they returned to the States and settled on the Rock River, near Byron, Ogle County, opening up a claim in Rockvale Township. There the father's death occurred about 1840, when in the prime of life. The mother followed him to the grave during the Rebeilion, when sixty-two years of age. Both held membership in the Methodist Church.

The original of this sketch was the second of eight children born to his parents, four sons and four daughters, three sons and two daughters now living. He was educated in the schools of Ogle County, and after reaching his majority wedded Miss Electa Parsons, a native of the Old Bay State, where she was educated. She came West when a young woman and died on her husband's farm in Ogle County, when in the prime of life. an excellent wife and a devoted mother. Of this union were born five children: Edwin, a railroad mail agent, residing in Rockford, married Miss Mina Underwood: Ellen C, became the wife of William Warburton, a farmer of Buchanan County, Iowa; Mary P. is the wife of Christian Burkholder, a dealer in agricultural implements in Sterling; W. Henry is a painter in the West; and one younger, who died in infancy.

Mr. Irvine's second marriage occurred in Ogle County and united him with Rebecca W. Waggoner, a native of Union County, born on the banks of the Susquehanna River, June 23, 1829, and the daughter of Henry R. and Elsie (Woods) Waggoner, natives of Northumberland County, Pa. Her father was of Pennsylvania-Dutch stock, and her mother of Irish descent. They were married in Northumberland County, and Mr. Waggoner began life as a mechanic. In 1848, he moved with his family to Ogle County, Ill., and settled on a farm in Rockvale Township. After the death of his wife, he married Mrs. Margaret Hensel, and moved to Mt. Morris, this State, where he received his final summons when nearly seventy-five years of age, dying March 5, 1869. His wife is still living and is quite old.

Mrs. Irvine was one of seven living children, all married but one, and all prosperous. Mr. and Mrs. Irvine have had five children: C. Francis, a commercial man residing in Rockford; George L., Secretary and Treasurer of the Rockford Overalls Manufacturing Company; Elsie M., wife of C. E. Sovereign, novelty manufacturer; and two who died in infancy. The members of the Irvine family, for the most part, belong to the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Irvine and his sons are worthy Republicans in politics.

The portrait of Mr. Irvine is presented on another page.

11.LIAM II. FITCH, M. D., is one of the native-born citizens of Rockford, who have contributed their ablest efforts to the progress of the city and labored unceasingly in its behalf. He has been remarkably successful in his profession, his skill having won for him a foremost place among the citizens of Winnebago County and, in fact, throughout the entire northern part of the State. For more than twenty years he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Rockford, having come hither in the fall of 1870, and opened an office, which he has since conducted.

For the duties of professional life Dr. Fitch was thoroughly prepared by a splendid literary education received in Beloit College, and by a course of medical lectures at the Chicago Medical College, where he graduated in 1868. At that time, he received the second honors of his class, the first honors being gained by Dr. Nicholas Senn, of Chicago, one of the most celebrated surgeons of the world. After a short visit to Rockford, the young Doctor went on a tour to the Old World, and spent two years in the medical schools of Europe, most of the time being devoted to study at Vienna. Thus completely equipped for a professional life by a profound theoretical knowledge of therapeutics, he crossed the Atlantic to the country of his birth, and immediately secured a large practice in the city where he still resides.

The Doctor is Trustee of the Illinois Eye & Ear Infirmary, located in Chicago on West Adams Street, a splendid institution for the treatment of these special diseases and under the support of the State. He is a member of the State Medical Society, the National Medical Association, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and he meets with these various societies regularly. He is a Trustee of the Rockford Seminary, an institution of prominence in the West, and one of the oldest educational centers in the county.

The father of our subject was John Fitch, an early settler in Winnebago County, who came hither in 1837, entered Government land in Cherry Valley, this county, and began life here amid primitive surroundings, his first home being in a log cabin. It was his good fortune to live until the dense forests and uncultivated wastes of land were transformed into splendidly improved farms and the sites of thriving villages. He had come to this county from Groton, Mass., his birthplace, and his journey Westward was made by the most expeditious route known at that time, being by canal to Buffalo, thence by the Lakes to Chicago, and from there in a small one-horse "prairie schooner" to Winnebago County, then very sparsely settled.

The farm owned by John Fitch was on the main thoroughfare between Chicago and Galena, and his house became the lodging place for travelers en route for the farther West, often as many as one hundred and fifty persons stopping on his premises with their wagons and teams. He was thus not only enabled to sell his produce, but gained an acquaintance with many of the Western pioneers, a number of whom found homes on the golden shores of California. It was not long before he had erected a substantial house and outbuildings, and, as he was practical and thrifty, belonging to the best type of Massachusetts farmers, he kept many years in advance of his neighbors.

Genial and sociable in disposition, Mr. Fitch, Sr., made friends with all whom he met and became the host of a well-known country inn between Belvidere and Rockford. He was progressive and took a leading part in all matters regarding education. When schools were few in Massachusetts as governess, and she taught his children at his home. He admitted any of the neighboring children who wished to come, and many took advantage of the offer, as "I'ncle John" Fitch paid all the expenses. As a Whig and Abolitionist, he took a prominent part in public matters, and during his later years was a stanch Republican. In religious matters, he was identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Cherry Valley, but on coming to Rockford, in 1861, united with the Second Congregational Church, and remained in that connection as long as he lived. His death occurred here in the year 188f, at the age of seventy-five years, and was sincerely mourned by all who knew him. A man of remarkable thrift, he acquired a line property, of which his children became heirs, and through their judicious management the value of their heritage has been increased. Mr. and Mrs. John Fitch were present at the dedication of the first church built in Rockford.

Three months after the death of John Fitch, his wife departed this life, aged seventy-four years. She was formerly Miss Lucy Sawtelle, and was a native of Vermont, coming of worthy New England stock. In her religious connection, she was a member of the Congregational Church, and was a lady of lovely disposition and noble character, The only survivors of the family of five children are the Doctor and Elizabeth. One brother, Dr. L. P., graduated from the Beloit (Wis.) College and the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, later entering the army as Surgeon, and serving in Gen. Schofield's Department for about three years. Afterward he became a prominent physician of Charles City, Iowa, where his death occurred, and where his widow still lives.

During the late war, our subject served as a member of the Fortieth Wisconsin Infantry, and bravely defended the Stars and Stripes. His marriage, which took place in Allegheny, Pa., in 1887, united him with Miss Catherine Kountz, who was there born. Her father, Commodore Kountz, was at one time the largest private owner of steam vessels in the United States, his steamers plying the waters of the Mississipp, Missouri and Ohio Rivers, and doing a large business during war times. At present he lives retired, and is passing his declining days in comfort and affluence. One of the vessels which he owned was known as the "Crystal Palace," and was the finest passenger steamer which was ever on the Ohio River.

The education which Mrs. Fitch received in Pennsylvania was of a superior order, and she is a refined, accomplished lady, and especially talented as a musician. She and the Doctor are members of the Second Congregational Church and prominent in the best circles of the city. They are the parents of two children: William K. and Catharine.

HERMAN COMINGS. Having retired from the active proprietorship of agricultural interests, the gentleman of whom we write makes his home in Rockford. He was born in the town of Berkshire, Franklin County, Vt., December 17, 1818, while his father, Samuel Comings, was a native of Windsor, N. H., and of Scotch ancestry. He was one of the first settlers in Berkshire, where he cleared a tract of college land, erected a log house and commenced the work of improving a farm. As there were no railroads or canals in the vicinity for many years after his settlement there, the father of our subject hauled the products of the farm to the nearest markets, returning with the necessary articles for the family. He improved a large portion of the land, creeted thereon first-class buildings, and for a number of years made that place his home. Then disposing of this farm, Mr. Comings lived with a son-in-law until going to Wisconsin, where he spent his last years with his son Harvey. The mother of our subject was known in her maidenhood as Miss Martha Aikens, her birth occurring in Canada.

Sherman Comings of this sketch attended the district schools in his youth and on reaching his lifteenth year learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, which line he followed for six years, and then turned his attention to that of a millwright. He prosecuted that business in Vermont until 1848, and on emigrating to Wisconsin was accompanied by his wife, brother Harvey and family.

The family came with teams to Burlington, thence by way of Lake Champlain to the canal of that name and, going to Troy, came by way of the Erie Canal to Buffalo, where they took passage on the steamer "Empire State." At Conneaut the vessel foundered and the passengers were all transferred to the steamer "Michigan," which conveyed them to Milwaukee, where they were shipped on the steamer "Sheboygan." On landing, Mr. Comings and family hired a team to take them to Linden Township, sixteen miles distant, the latter part of the way following an Indian trail. There our subject purchased a claim to a tract of Government land, which was heavily timbered, and four acres of which were cleared; a log house constituted the only other improvement. He worked at his trade of a millwright, at the same time superintending the improvements of his farm, which he put under excellent cultivation. For some time, standing timber was of no value, and when it was found necessary to cut it, the logs were rolled together and burned. Mr. Comings did all his marketing and farm work by the aid of oxen, and remembers going ten miles away in order to buy iron to iron a cart, the woodwork of which vehicle he made from timber grown on his own land, and which he continued to use as long as he resided in Wisconsin.

In 1867, our subject sold his farm in the Badger State and came to Winnebago County, purchasing a farm three miles south of the city of Rockford, which is most beautifully located on the Rock River. Soon after settling here, he staited a creamery, being one of the pioneers in that business, and shipping the products of his dairy to St. Louis. Mr. Comings resided on the above farm until 1891, when he moved into the city and is now enjoying the fruits of former years of industry and toil.

The lady who became the wife of our subject, December 31, 1810, bore the maiden name of Elmina E. Stone. Her birth occurred in Berkshire, Vt., and she is the daughter of James and Lucinda (Danforth) Stone. The two children born to them are Arthur F. and Everett S., the former of whom is a practicing physician in Rockford, and Everett S. is editor of a first-class paper devoted to poultry and gardening. Mr. and Mrs. Comings are members of the Second Congregational Society, and, in politics, our subject has voted the Republican ticket since the organization of the party.

IRAM SNOW is the proprietor of extensive pickling works, located on the east bank of the Rock River, one mile east of the city limits of Rockford. He engaged in this business in 1881, and uses the products of from fifty to seventy-five acres each year. He is a native of the Green Mountain State, his birth occurring February 17, 1830. His father, Ira Snow, was also born there, whence he removed in 1831 to Ohio, via team to Troy, and then by way of the Erie Canal to Buffalo, where he embarked on a lake steamer to Huron. Ohio. There he rented an hotel and was employed as "mine host" until 1842, when he again started Westward, arriving in Chicago on the 3d of July.

While residing in the Garden City, the father of our subject kept the hotel known as the Franklin House, located on La Salle Street, between Lake and Water Streets. At that time Chicago contained but eight thousand inhabitants, and the surrounding country being sparsely settled, deer and wild animals roamed where the city now extends. Mr. Snow, after two years in the hotel business, was engaged in teaming between Chicago and Galena for a twelvemonth, at the end of which time he entered a tract of Government land in the town of Wheeler, twenty-two miles northwest of Chicago, and at once commenced the improvement of his farm, upon which he resided until his decease.

The mother of our subject prior to her marriage was Rebecca Daggett, also a native of Vermont. Her husband was in early days a Whig in politics, but later voted the Republican ticket. He was the first Highway Commissioner in the town of Wheeler and in 1856 was appointed Deputy Sheriff, which position he held for fourteen years.

Hiram Snow of this sketch was one in a family of five children, his brothers and sisters being Rebecca, William, Alonzo and Mary. He was a lad of twelve years when his parents removed to Chicago and is one of the few early settlers of that city now living, and can relate many incidents of interest connected with the early history of Chicago and Cook County. Mr. Snow attended a school in that city taught by Judge Sturdevant, and after removing to Wheeler, assisted his father in cultivating the home farm, there residing until reaching his twenty-first year.

On commencing life for himself, he of whom we write worked out on farms for $8 per month and continued to be thus engaged for five years, when he purchased the old home farm, upon which he lived until 1881. At that time coming to Rockford, Mr. Snow became the proprietor of the farm which is his present home, and soon afterward engaged in his present business. His farm is beautifully located and is cultivated in a most intelligent and profitable manner.

The lady to whom our subject was united in marriage, November 12, 1866, was Miss Naomi Perry, and to them eight children have been granted viz.: Anna, Clara J., Emily A., Maggie, Hiram P., Mabel N., June R., Junius Centennial. In his political belief, Mr. Snow easts his vote and influence with the Republican party, and, socially, is a member of Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M., and Winnebago Chapter No. 24, R. A. M.

ILES ELLIOTT, deceased. This name is known and honored throughout Winnebago County as one of the old pioneers, who had a hand in laying the solid foundation upon which has been erected the superstructure of its present wealth and prosperity, and although his earthly career has closed, his memory is still held in reverence in Pecatonica Township, where he located thirty-five years ago. His mantle has fallen upon worthy successors and it gives us pleasure to represent the family in this biographical volume.

The lady who became the wife of our subject was known in her maidenhood as Betsey Mitchell. She was born September 21,1846, in Oneida County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Charles and Patience (Ufford) Mitchell, the former of whom was a native of New York and of Irish descent, while the mother hailed from New England.

Our subject was a son of Charles and Lucy (Barber) Elliott, natives of Ohio, who departed this life in Mitchell, S. Dak., at the respective ages of seventy-nine and seventy-three years. He departed this life February 14, 1887, aged forty-eight years and four months and thirteen days. His marriage with Miss Mitchell occurred January 5, 1861, soon after which event they came to this county, and, as before stated, resided here for thirty-five years. Mr. Elliott had a well-cultivated farm, making a specialty of breeding thorough-bred cattle, of which he had some fine specimens.

To Mr. and Mrs. Elliott were born five children, as follows: Charles W., whose birth occurred June 26, 1865, resides with his mother; Ellen A., born May 4, 1867, married Patrick Reddy and lives in Ridott Township, Stephenson County; George II., who is also at home, was born September 27, 1868; Giles S., June 24, 1872; and William II., who was born July 28, 1875, is at present engaged with his brothers in carrying on the old home farm, which they do in an intelligent and profitable manner. They have all been given good educations in the Pecatonica schools and the youngest son will probably follow a professional life.

He of whom we write, socially, was a member of Eureka Camp No. 50, M. W. A., to which order his eldest son also belonged, the latter also being a member of the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association.

ETER PARSON. In compiling an account of the different business enterprises of Rockford, we must not lose sight of the cabinet-maker's industry, carried on very successfully by Mr. Peter Parson. This gentleman is still another of those prominent Swedish settlers of Rockford, and is possessed of all those characteristics of thrift and enterprise which make the people of that nationality so prosperous and successful.

Born in Wester Gothland Province, June 18, 1844, Mr. Parson continued to make his home there until 1860, when, with his parents, he took passage to this country. After a tempestuous voyage of over nine weeks, they landed in New York City, but subsequently settled in Fredonia, of that State, for about eight years. In 1868, the entire family came to Winnebago County, Ill., locating in Pecatonica Township, and there the parents reside at the present time, both quite aged, the father, Andrew Parson, born in 1813, and the mother in 1809. Both are quite active despite their years, and the mother often walks two miles to the Lutheran Church, of which she and her husband are members.

Three of the eight children born to this worthy couple are now living: our subject; Mrs. Chara Anderson, a widow, residing on South Fourth Street of this city; and Mrs. Christina Lundberg, wife of P. J. Lundberg, a wealthy farmer now retired, and residing at Orleans, Neb.

Peter Parson learned his trade in Fredonia, N. Y., and on the 6th of June, 1869, he made his first appearance in Rockford. He immediately began working at the cabinet-maker's trade, and has since devoted the principal part of his time and attention to it. He is, in every sense of the word, a skillful and practical workman, and the beautiful furniture and ornaments at his home testify to his ability with the tools. He has a delightful residence at No. 610 North Third Street, and is surrounded with all the comforts and conveniences of life.

He is a stockholder and Director of the Central Furniture Company established in 1879, with a capital of $125,000, and with a force of from one hundred and twenty-five to one hundred and lifty employes, and since then Mr. Parson has given all his attention to the factory, in which he is a heavy stockholder. His investment has paid him well, and he has accumulated considerable property.

Our subject was married, in Rockford, to Miss Anna C. Oberg, a native of Sweden, born October 10, 1851, and they have one very bright little girl, Cora J. C., who is receiving a thorough education in the city schools. Mr. Parson and his wife are very popular people of the city, and both are members of the First Lutheran Church. He leans toward the Republican party in his political views.

Mrs. Parson's father, Olof Oberg, started with his wife and family for the United States in 1854, and while on the ocean the mother died. She was buried in the Atlantic, and the bereaved husband and father with his five children, two sons and three daughters, after landing, came West and located on Government land in Martin County, Minn. He at one time owned an entire section of land, but the grasshoppers bothered him a great deal, and he has now been a resident of Rockford for some time. Although seventy years of age, he is still smart and active. Four of his five children are yet living in Martin County, Minn.

E. BENOIT, a successful jewelry merchant of Rockford, located at No. 310 West State Street, has for almost a quarter of a century made his home in this city and during much of this time has been engaged in commercial pursuits. He carries a large and complete stock of goods in this line, having one of the best houses in the city, and in connection with his jewelry trade has for the past five years also sold organs and pianos.

Mr. Benoit is a native of the Province of Quebec, Canada. There the days of his childhood and youth were passed and in part he there learned his trade. His parents were Oliver and Mary (Mosier) Benoit, also natives of Canada, the lady of English descent. The Benoits are of French descent and both families came to America about the time La Fayette crossed the water to aid the Colonies in their struggle for independence. The parents of our subject are still residing at the old home in Canada, the father at the age of eighty years, the mother now seventy five years of age. The father has been a carriage manufacturer, and is well known in his locality.

Under the parental roof, our subject was reared to manhood and ere leaving home he had become familiar with the trade of carriage-making and undertaking in all the details of the business. In 1869, he came to Rockford, and soon afterward began business as a jeweler, which trade he has since followed. He was married, in Vermont, to Miss Julia P. Chaffle, who was born and reared in Berkshire, Franklin County, that State, and is descended from an old New England family. She died at their home in Rockford, January 20, 1871, at the age of thirty-two years, on the birth of their only child, who also died. For his second wife, Mr. Benoit chose Mrs. Martha A. (Hobart) Thayer, who was born in Havana, N. Y., and when a maiden of six summers came to Rockford with her parents, John and Maria Thayer, who for many years were residents of this city but now reside in Alexandria, S. bak., where they have lived for the past eight years.

Mr. and Mis. Benoit are both members of the Christian Union Church, take an active part in its work and also in public interests which are calculated to benefit the community or promote the general welfare. Mr. Benoit has led a busy and useful life, giving strict attention to his business interests, and his efforts have been blessed with prosperity. He now not only has a good business but he is also a stockholder in the Forest City Insurance Company. Although of foreign birth, Rockford has no better citizen or one more worthy the esteem in which he is held. In politics, he is a stalwart supporter of Republican principles. He belongs to the Blue Lodge, the Chapter and Commandery of Rockford, and is also a member of the Elks' lodge.

ELS P. ROSANDER is one of the successful Swedish-American farmers of Rockford Township. Winnebago County. He resides on section 17, where he owns one hundred and twelve and a half acres of valuable land, all under a high state of cultivation. It has been his home since 1873, during which time he has transformed the land into rich and fertile fields and made many excellent improvements. There may be seen good buildings, a comfortable and commodious residence and all the accessories of a model farm. He also has the place well stocked, indeed, it is complete in all its appointments.

Mr. Rosander was born in Smoland, Sweden, March 21, 1835, and is a son of Swan C. Peterson, who lived and died on a farm in his native province, passing away at the age of eighty-one years. He was a jeweler and quite a prominent man in public affairs. He was officially connected with the Lutheran Church for many years and was one of its most active workers. He married Susanna Casries, who yet survives him and is now about four-score years of age. She, also, has been a leading lady in her neighborhood and a faithful member of the Lutheran Church. A daughter of the family is still living in Sweden, Johanna, wife of Gust Johnson, a Swedish farmer; Caroline is now married and resides in Chicago; John lives in Rockford, as does also Johannes, and Charles is a resident of Oregon.

Under the parental roof our subject spent the days of his boyhood and after attaining to mature years he was united in marriage in his native province with Miss Anna Johnson, who was born in Smoland, Sweden, in June, 1835. Her parents lived and died on the old homestead in that land. They were farming people, members of the Lutheran Church, and were highly respected. Their family numbered two sons and two daughters but Mrs. Rosander is the only one living in this country. She has proved a true wife and faithful helpmate to her husband. Mr. Rosander was the first of his family to cross the Atlantic, the year of his emigration being 1869, and on the 15th of May he landed in Rockford.

Nine children have been born to Mr, and Mrs. Rosander: Sophia, wife of Emil Nelson, a mail carrier of Rockford, died April 21, 1892; Tilda, wife of Walter Wilson, a mail carrier of Chicago; Lotta, wife of Albert Larson, a machinist in the Nelson Knitting Factory of Rockford; Charles A., who graduated from the Augustana College of Rock Island in 1891, and will complete a course of study in the Rock Island Seminary in 1893; Wendla A., wife of Reynold Winquist, a clerk of Rockford; Nellie, who is now employed in that city; Ida, a resident of Rockford; Theodore W. and Esther V. live at home.

Mr. Rosander has been very successful since coming to this country and is now numbered among the substantial citizens of Rockford Township. In addition to his farm property, he is a stockholder in the Union Grocery Store of Rockford and the founder and President of the Rockford Planing Mill Company, which was incorportationally and the substantial company.

ated with a capital stock of $50,000. He is a public-spirited and progressive man and has done much for the interests and upbuilding of the county. In polities, he is a supporter of Republican principles, and himself and wife are members of the First Lutheran Church of Rockford, in the work of which they have taken an active interest. Mr. Rosander served as one of the building committee during the construction of that large house of worship. His life has been well and worthily spent, thus winning him the confidence and high regard of all.

EVIN EKSELL. The Globe Clothing Man-@ ufacturing Company, No. 1105 Sixth Street, Rockford, standing prominently forth as one of the most notable business enterprises of the city, was established in May, 1890, with August Lundberg, President; Levin Eksell, Secretary, and August P. Floberg, Treasurer. They employ thirty men, their custom cutter being A. S. Charn, and their commercial cutter F. A. Nordell; they have five commercial men on the road and do a general pants manufacturing business for the trade chiefly. They have met with wonderful success in this enterprise. Mr. Eksell was one of the promoters of the business, has always been a stockholder and is now a Director. He came to Rockford in 1887 and since then has turned all his attention to this particular business, and has met with the success merited. He is a capable and trustworthy gentleman and universally popular in business and social circles.

Our subject was born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, born March 30, 1865, and received a good business education in his native land. From the age of ten until twenty-two, he was clerk and book-keeper for different enterprises, but when he reached the last-mentioned age he crossed the ocean to America, and made a permanent home in Rockford. He was for some time in the Nelson Knitting Factory, but subsequently became connected with the business in which he is now engaged.

Jours July Haines

The second in order of birth of eight children born to his parents, our subject was the only one of the family to venture on American land. The father, A. G. Eksell, is a practical farmer of his native country, Sweden, and is still living, as is also his wife, whose maiden name was Caroline Lindquist. They were old friends and neighbors of the late John Nelson, the inventor, of Rockford. (See sketch.)

Levin Eksell was married in Rockford to Miss Hildegard Djulang, a native of Stockholm, Sweden, in which city she was reared and educated. In 1888, she emigrated to the United States, and left home and friends to form new ties in a strange country. Her father, Eric G. Djulang, died in Stockholm in 1872, when about middle age. His wife and one daughter came to America in June, 1892, and are residing in Rockford. Mrs. Eksell came direct to Rockford on coming to the United States, and was subsequently married to our subject. They have two nice children, Esther E. and Anna C. (twins). Mr. and Mrs. Eksell are worthy and consistent members of the Mission Lutheran church and Mr. Eksell is now church Secretary.

NTHONY HAINES, Vice-President of the Manufacturers' Bank and an influential citizen of Rockford, was born in Marietta, Lancaster County, Pa., April 21, 1829. His father, Maj. Frederick Haines, was a native of Maytown, that county, his both occurring February 9, 1799. A. M. Haines, of Galena, Ill., has published a history of the family and from it we find that the name was originally spelled in many different ways. viz: Eines, Eynes and Eynns. At a later date the "H" was prefixed and the name has been spelled Haynes, Heines and Haines. The Haines families had their origin in Shropshire, one of the Western counties of England, and in Montgomeryshire, Wales.

The grandfather of our subject, Anthony, was born January 25, 1762. His ancestors undoubtedly first settled in Virginia, as in the "State Land Patent Books" of Virginia are found many entries of Anthony Haines as early as 1658. "Anthony" is a rare name in the Haines family, except in the Lancaster branch of the family, and in this Virginia family, where it has been preserved for more than one hundred years. The first settlement of the family was made in Chester County, Pa., whence they removed to Lampeter Township, Lancaster County, the same State. They owned the land which is now the site of Lampeter Square, and the village was first called Hainestown.

From there Grandfather Haines removed to Maytown, and purchased a large tract of land in the vicinity of that village and Marietta. He was married to Susanna Bauer, who was born in Maytown, April 9, 1765, and died about 1840. She was a sister of the grandmother of Bayard Taylor. They had a family of eight children, and spent their last days on the old homestead, where the grandfather died April 23, 1814. He was quite an extensive farmer for those days, and in physique was large and powerful, as were all the members of the family. His mother, Charlotte, was born in 1739, and died in 1793. His brother, Col. Henry, was a member of the Legislature in 1805, and built the present brick Reformed Presbyterian Church in Maytown. For many years the village of Maytown was famous for her militia, and the representatives of the Haines family were patriotic, and ready at all times to light for their country.

Frederick Haines was reared in his native town, and when choosing an occupation for himself began farming and stock-raising on a tract of three hundred acres of land which he owned in and around Marietta. There he remained until his decease which occurred in May, 1846. The maiden name of his second wife, the mother of our subject, was Sarah Guy. She was born in Lancaster County and departed this life in Philadelphia, about 1866. The parents of our subject were both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Anthony Haines of this sketch received a good education in Marietta and continued to reside under the parental roof until after his father's death, when, in 1848, he emigrated to Ohio and clerked in a general store at Bueyrus. He later formed a partnership with Theron Cummings (now President of the Grand Detour Plow Company) and others, taking a contract to build a part of the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago Railroad in Ohio, and after completing the first contract, took another, engaging to build the road from Chicago to Valparaiso. Mr. Haines continued in that line of work until 1854 when he came to Rockford and here formed a partnership with E. A. Kirk, buying and shipping the first grain on the Kenosha Railroad. He continued actively engaged in that business until 1878, and in 1880, with other gentlemen, organized the Rockford Street Railroad Company and commenced the building of the present system of street railways in Rockford. He was elected President and General Manager of the company, which position he occupied for ten years. He is at the present time a Director of the company and Vice-President of the Manufacturers' National Bank, and, aside from the duties imposed by these positions, lives retired.

April 25, 1854, Mr. Anthony Haines and Miss Adeline Rowse were united in marriage. The lady was born in Bueyrus, Ohio, April 18, 1832, and was a daughter of Zalmon Rowse, a native of Massachusetts. Her father later removed to Crawford County, Ohio, where he purchased a tract of land, now included in the city of Bueyrus, and resided there until his decease. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Haines was Mehitabel Kent, a native of Massachusetts, who departed this life at Bneyrus. Mr. Rowse was a Whig m his political relations and filled the various official positions in Crawford County, where he was one of the influential and prominent citizens.

The three children comprising the family of Mr. and Mrs. Haines are named, respectively, Laura, Jessie and Frederick. Laura married Wilfred F. Rivers, a resident of Calgary, Northwest Territory, Canada, and they have two children: Edwin and Climenia. Frederick married Minnie Bushnell and they have one son, Anthony. They reside in a pleasant home at Rockford.

Mr. Haines has served as a member of the County Board of Supervisors, to which position he has been elected for eighteen terms. His wife is a member of the First Congregational Church, and interested in all religious enterprises. Socially, our subject is connected with Rockford Lodge No. 102, F. & A. M. He has been instrumental in promoting the welfare of the citizens of Rockford, and, while a member of the Board of Aldermen, has aided the progress of the material interests of the city by the inauguration and vigorous support of important measures.

ARS M. NOLING, a real-estate dealer of Rockford, was born in Sweden, May 4, 1843, and spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native land. When twenty-one years of age he crossed the Atlantic, landing in New York on the 28th of June, 1864. He was the first of his family to come to this country, but later the father, mother, two brothers and three sisters sought homes in the New World. The father, John Noling, is still living at the age of eighty years. By trade, he is a carpenter and millwright and owned a mill in Sweden. In this country he followed that occupation throughout his active life. His wife, who was born March 18, 1816, died December 18, 1889. Like her husband, she was a life-long member of the Swedish Lutheran Church.

On landing in this country, our subject came at once to Rockford, and has since been one of its leading and influential Swedish citizens. He began by doing carpenter work for N. C. Thompson, and after two years entered the employ of his uncle, John Nelson, the great knitting machine inventor. He then went back to Mr. Thompson. in whose employ he remained for more than fifteen years, a fact which indicates his trustworthiness and faithful discharge of duty. Subsequently, he purchased eighty acres of land, all of which are now within the city limits, and has since been engaged in the real-estate business. The entire amount has been laid out in city lots, with the exception of thirty acres occupied by the Rockford Union Furniture Company. He has also erected many beautiful homes on the land he owns and has done much for the upbuilding of the city. He has been a leader among the Swedish people in this city and has been prominently connected with many enterprises in which his countrymen are interested. He is now President of the Mechanics' Furniture Company, which employs about one hundred men; President of the Forest City Bit and Tool Company, which was organized in 1889, and employs some twenty hands; President of the Union Grocery Company, and President and Director of the Rockford Manufacturing Company. He is President of the Rockford Posten Company, a Swedish newspaper; President of the Scandia Coal Company, and also the President of the Rockford Furniture and Undertaking Company; Vice-President and Director of the Royal Sewing Machine Company, and Vice-President of the Swedish Home and Building Association. In political affairs, he takes an active interest and is a stalwart supporter of the Republican party. He has been a member of the County Central Committee for some twelve years and does everything in his power to further and promote the Republican interests, but has never sought or desired preferment for himself, though his party has urged him to become a candidate for the legislature and the county conventions were instructed to that end.

In this city, Mr. Noling wedded Josephine Johnson, who was born in Skafde, Sweden, October 11, 1847, and is a daughter of Peter and Mary (Walgren) Johnson, natives of the same place. They were farming people in that locality, and in June, 1854, in a sailing-vessel crossed the Atlantic to Boston, landing on the 18th of September. They came at once to Rockford where the father is still living. He was born October 3, 1822. His wife, who was born September 15, 1822, died October 20, 1890. They were members of the First Lutheran Swedish Church of this city. Mrs. Nolan is the eldest of six children and the only one now living. By her marriage she has become the mother of two children, but the son, William A., died February 18, 1890, at the age of twenty-two. He was educated in the city schools, had graduated from the Rockford Business College, and was book-keeper in the Manufacturers' National Bank. He was a promising young man and had many friends in this city. Mary S., the daughter, is an accomplished young lady residing with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Noling and their daughter are members of the First Swedish Lutheran Church, of which he has been a Trustee for twenty-four years, and chairman of the board for twenty years. What Mr. Noling has done fo the city eannot be estimated in words. It will be seen that he is connected with many of the most important enterprises, and it is largely through his industry, good management and executive ability that these have been successful. Fair and upright in all his dealings, he has the confidence and respect of all who know him and is highly regarded. He came to this country a poor man but has worked his way upward to a position of wealth and affluence and his prosperity is truly deserved. Mr. Noling is erecting a handsome residence at the corner of Kishwankee and Fourteenth Avenue, at a cost of $8,000, which, when completed, will be the handsomest residence in East Rockford, it being all finished with hardwood-cherry, oak and sycamore.

NDREW C. JOHNSON, who is Superintendent and a Director of the Forest City Furniture Company, is one of the prominent Swedish residents of Rockford, where he has made his home since 1855. He was born in the Province of Blaken, Sweden, August 16, 1836, and when about eighteen years of age came to America with the family, consisting of parents and five children. They sailed on a two-mast brig, and after a wearisome and perilous voyage of ten weeks, landed at New York, but one of the children, Chesty, had sickened and died during the passage and was buried in the waters of the Atlantic. The family came on by the Lakes to Chicago and a week after landing in this country arrived in Rockford, where another daughter, Enga, died in 1855. The father, Carl Johnson, died in 1861, at the age of fifty-four years. He was a well-educated man and came of a wealthy and respectable family of Sweden. His wife survived him for four years and passed away in 1865, at the age of fifty-four. Both were members of the Lutheran Church. Two brothers of our subject are yet living: John, a farmer of Kansas, and Swan, a miner of Monmouth mines of Utah. One sister, Lissa, is the wife of Nels Pearson, an employe in the Forest City Furniture Factory of Rockford.

In his youth, Andrew Johnson of this sketch learned the cabinet-maker's trade and followed it in this city in the employ of others until 1865. In that year, in company with John Nelson and P. G. Hollom, he established a small furniture manufactory, and after three years became sole proprietor, running the business on his own account for eighteen years. He then formed a partnership with J. P. Anderson and together they continued operations until 1870, when their business was merged into the furniture business, with Mr. Johnson at the head. Mr. Johnson was at once made chief Superintendent, which position he still holds. He is also a Director and one of the chief stockholders. They employ from two hundred to three hundred men, and this industry is one of the leading enterprises of the city. The furniture interests have chiefly been developed by the Swedish people, not the least of whom is our subject. In fact, he has been connected with the business from its beginning in Rockford, all of the other factories having grown out of this or been established since it was started.

Mr. Johnson has been twice married. In this city he wedded Mary Hokinson, a native of Sweden, who came to the United States in 1854, and died twenty years later, leaving three children: Hilda S., who was married but is now deceased; Caroline, wife of Aug Sandeen, a clerk in the employ of Stewart & Co., and Theodore, a practical carver and designer, who is employed as foreman of the carving department of the Forest City Furniture For his second wife, Mr. Johnson Company. chose Miss IIIlma A. Zeleem, who was born in Sweden and when a young lady came to this country. Three children grace the second union: Alma O., Caroline and Dwinnie E. Mr. Johnson and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church, of which he served as Deacon for three years and is now Trustee. In politics, he is a stalwart Republican and has served as Supervisor of the Sixth Ward.

Other business interests, in connection with the Forest City Furniture Company, engross the attention of our subject. He is a stockholder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company and also in the Electric Manufacturing Company of this city. His business career has been a success and through his own efforts, good management and perseverance, he has worked his way upward to a position of affluence. He now has a valuable property and has built a pleasant home on the corner of Eighth Street and Ninth Avenue, where with his family he now resides.

LBERT G. WALKER. We are pleased to present the sketch of this honored resident of Rockford to our readers—one who has aided greatly in its growth and development. He was born in Foster, Providence County, R. 1., May 28, 1810, and is a son of Peleg Walker, also a native of that place, as was also his father, William Walker. The grandfather of our subject owned a farm in Foster and was engaged in its cultivation throughout life.

Peleg Walker was reared and married in his native town, which continued to be his place of residence until his decease in 1822. He was for a number of years a member of a company which manufactured cotton goods. He married Mary Potter, who was born in the same town as was her husband, and was the daughter of William and Mary (Arnold) Potter. Our subject began at the age of eighteen years to learn the trade of a millwright, which line of work he followed for two years, and then was employed in the capacity of a carpenter by one man for eleven years, in Brooklyn, Windham County, Conn. He later engaged as a contractor and builder there, where he was successfully employed until 1856, when he came West to visit this country, journeying through Wisconsin, lowa and Illinois, which trip occupied six weeks. After returning home, Mr. Walker received a letter from a friend who told him of a tract of two hundred and forty acres of land for sale in Scott Township. Ogle County, for a moderate sum. Our subject purchased the land, and made a location upon it in the fall of 1859. The land when it came into his possession was in its primitive condition, and he set industriously about clearing and improving it, erecting thereon a set of frame buildings, in which he made his home until 1877. At that time, he rented a farm and came to Rockford, where he purchased property and erected his present comfortable home.

Albert G. Walker and Miss Patience Remington were united in marriage in 1832. The lady was born in Pawtucket, R. I., and was the daughter of Peleg Remington. She departed this life on the farm in Ogle County, July 13, 1870, and our subject was again married, this time to Emily Bissel, the date thereof being 1872. Mrs. Walker was born m Andover, Mass., and died in Rockford in 1888. Our subject was again married, December 25, 1889, to Margaret L. (Ames) Rice; she was born in Onondaga County, N. Y., and was the daughter of John and Nancy (Wilbur) Ames, and the widow of Albert Rice. She died February 2, 1891. Mr. Walker became the father of the following children by his first union: Peleg R., who is the Superintendent of the City Schools; Martin, now deceased; John, who resides in Chicago, and Ann Eliza, who married Eugene Moore, and is now dead. Mr. Walker is a member of the Congregational Church, and in politics, is a Republican.

OHN H. HALL. The original of this biography, and of the accompanying portrait, was born in Connecticut, in 1808, and died at his pleasant home in Rockford, in 1882, at the age of seventy-four years, respected by all who knew him. He was a prominent and leading citizen, and his death proved a loss to the entire community. His father, a Connecticut farmer, died when John was a boy. His mother was afterward again married, and in 1832 the family removed to Kingsville, Ashtabula County, Ohio, where the mother and stepfather spent the remainder of their lives.

John Hall there grew to manhood and was first married, his union being with Miss Dickinson, an estimable young lady of Ashtabula County. He then engaged in business as a merchant and hotel-keeper in Conneaut, Ohio, until about 1855, when, with his family, he came to Illinois, locating in Rockford. Here he engaged in the grocery business for some years, and after acquiring a competency thereby, retired from active business life. He took quite a prominent part in public affairs, served as Alderman of the First Ward for some time and while a member of the City Council was on the Building and Bridge Committee. He was also one of the School Board and had the management of the school property under his administration. Nearly all of the trees that now shade and adorn the public school properties were set out under his instruction.

Mrs. Hall died in Rockford, leaving one daughter, Mary A., now the wife of H. N. Baker, a prominent attorney and real-estate dealer of Rockford. Mr. Hall was again married, in Kingsville, Ohio, his second union being with Mrs. Mary E. Mills, nee King, who was born in Ellington, Conn., and when eight years of age went to Kingsville with her parents, Jeremiah and Esther (Ward) King, who located on a farm, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. King was called to his final rest at the age of ninety years, and his wife passed away in the eighty-fourth year of her age. Their daughter, Mary E., was reared on her father's farm and became a teacher in the public schools. Later she gave her hand in marriage to William Mills, a merchant of Geneva, Ohio, who died in that place in the prime of life.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hall have been born two children: Henry, who was educated in the city schools, was formerly engaged in business as a real-estate agent in the West, but was injured by being thrown from a carriage, after which he returned to Rockford and now makes his home with his mother. He wedded Hattie E. Crosby, of this eounty, who was reared in this city and educated in the Rockford High School, the Female Seminary of Rockford, and at Bradford, Mass. Helen, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hali, acquired her early education in Rockford, was afterward a student at Gambier, Ohio, in Harcourt Place, a female seminary, from which she graduated. She is now a teacher in the primary department of Montague.

Mrs. Hall and her children are members of the State Street Baptist Church. Mr. Hall belonged to the First Congregational Church and took an active interest in its work. In polities, he was a Republican. A man of unimpeachable character, his integrity was above question, and he had the confidence and respect of his fellow-townsmen to the fullest degree. His wife is an estimable lady and all who know her learn to love her.

ALTER VAN ALSTYNE a successful and competent contractor and builder, located at No. 512 Elm Street, with a fine and commodious residence near, has made his home in Rockford the principal part of the time since 1861. As to his skill and ability as a contractor and builder, perhaps no greater compliment could be paid him than to point out those monuments of his handiwork which now grace so many of the streets of this city. He has been a carpenter, mechanic and builder from early youth, and is, as all will acknowledge, an adept of high order. For a short time he was a resident of Lincoln, Neb., and many of the fine buildings of that city were erected by him.

Filled with a patriotic desire to aid his country's eause, he enlisted in the Union army in the fall of 1862, as a private in Company D. Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, under Col. Marsh and Capt. Douglas. The regiment was in the Army of the Tennessee, and fought at the battles of Perryville and Stone River. Mr. Van Alstyne fought bravely in defense of the Union, was ever at his post, and escaped without injury. He was honorably discharged on account of disability, and at the end of one year of recuperation, he joined the Government Construction Corps, with which he remained in Virginia for some time, or until the war closed.

Mr. Van Alstyne claims Massachusetts as his native State, and was born at Walford, Berkshire County, in 1845. He remained there until about nineteen years of age, when he came to Rockford, having learned the carpenter's trade before he left Massachusetts. His father, Lawrence Van Alstyne, was a native of Dutchess County, N. Y., and came of sturdy Dutch ancestry, his forefathers being pioneers of the Mohawk Valley, N. Y., where the family was well known and very prominent, they having lived through the Indian troubles of that day. Lawrence Van Alstyne learned the mechanic's trade and builder while growing up, and followed this for a number of years in his native county. He selected his wife from Dutchess County, a Miss Eliza Crandall, who was born and reared in the same county, and who was a descendant of one of the old pioneer families of Dutchess County. Not many years after their marriage, Mr. Van Alstyne and wife moved to Berkshire County, Mass., and there the former breathed his last in 1864, when about sixty years of age. He had been a skillful mechanic, a quiet, worthy citizen, and one who was universally respected. His wife, who is yet living and who has remained faithful to his memory, is now living with a daughter, Mrs. Julius Corbett, of Canaan, Conn. She is now about eighty years of age and is prominently identified with the Methodist Church.

Our subject is the second son and child of eight children born to his parents, seven of whom are yet living and married. One resides in the Lone Star State and live make their home in the East. Walter Van Alstyne, of this sketch, was married in Rockford to Miss Mary Blanchard, who was born in Illinois, in the county of Joe Daviess, and who was reared and educated in Winnebago County. She is a lady possessed of many brilliant attainments and was a teacher for a number of years before marriage. Their union has been blessed by the birth of two children, both sons: Walter V., was educated in the High School and is bookkeeper in the Rockford City Railroad office, and Ray B., also educated in the High School.

Mrs. Van Alstyne's father, Rev. Richard Blanchard, was a native of New York, and a man of education. In early life he became a clergyman in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and emigrated to Illinois when that State was sparsely settled. He was a pioneer preacher and one of the early circuit riders, and followed his ministerial duties until his death, which occurred while he was in Belvidere, Boone County, although he was residing and preaching at St. Charles, Ill. He died very suddenly of paralysis of the heart. He was a man possessed of many virtues of mind and heart and had a host of acquaintances and friends in North Illinois, where his life work was performed. His wife, who is still living, finds a pleasant home with her daughter, Mrs. Van Alstyne, and is a well-informed lady, being an extensive reader. She is now about sixty-five years of age. Her maiden name was Mary E. Brooks. She has ever been a devoted Christian woman and is possessed of many virtues.

The original of this notice and his worthy wife are members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church and are well respected in the community. Mr. Van Alstyne is a Republican in his political principles, and is a member of the G. W. L. Nevins Post, G. A. R., No. 1, and is ex-Senior Vice-Commander. He is also a member of the Masonic order, Blue Lodge, Star in the East No. 166, and is High Priest of Winnebago Chapter No. 24, in which he has filled all the chairs. He is Past Eminent Commander of Crusader Commanderry No. 17, and is a member of the Woodmen and Workmen Insurance orders.

EORGE LEAMAN is classed among the leading agriculturists of Flora Township, Boone County, where he has a finely-improved farm. He was born in Licking County, Ohio, July 5, 1820, and is the son of Daniel Leaman who had his birth in Philadelphia, Pa., where also his father, Jacob Leaman, was born, and, as far as is known, spent his entire life.

The father of our subject learned the trade of a carpenter in the Quaker City and a few years after his marriage removed to Licking County, where he purchased a small farm seventeen miles from Newark. There he was engaged in carrying on his farm and prosecuting his trade until his decease. The lady to whom he was married was Miss Mary Waggner, also a native of Philadelphia, Pa., and the daughter of John and Polly Waggner; she departed this life in Licking County.

George Leaman of this sketch was reared and educated in his native county, and when twentythree years of age came to this county, starting hither on the 4th of September, 1843, in company with Benjamin Marble, who furnished the buggy while our subject supplied the horse. After driving a distance of fifty miles from home, they sent the horse back and started on foot with all their possessions in a satchel. They walked twenty miles to Lake Huron, where they embarked on a steamer which conveyed them to Canada. They then went by way of railroad to Windsor, from there to Detroit, then across the State of Michigan to St. Joseph by means of the railroad, and thence by steamer to Chicago. At that time the Garden City was little more than a village and as there were no railroads in the locality, the gentlemen hired a team to take them to Ottawa, Ill. The horses being mired before they got out of the city, they at once abandoned the teams and walked to that place, where they remained for four weeks. At the end of that time, Mr. Leaman and his companion came to Boone County, this time on horseback, Mr. Marble having borrowed an animal which one would ride two miles and then walk that distance while the other rode. In that manner they made the journey in one day to this county.

At the time Mr. Leaman came hither, the country was sparsely settled and the greater portion of the land was still owned by the Government. He had often heard of Hicks' Mills, which he supposed to be a village, but on going hither found it contained a sawmill and two log houses. Our subject and his friend Mr. Marble on arriving there were very hungry after their long journey from Ottawa and asked for something to eat at one of the houses. A lady took some cornmeal and mixed it with water which was placed on a board before the open fire to bake. That with some fried pork constituted their supper.

Our subject spent the first winter in Boone County with a brother and the following spring commenced to work in a gristmill on the Kishwankee River. About a year later, he bought eighty acres of Government land, on section 29, Flora Township, which he located upon and operated. He also worked at his trade as a millwright for two years, as he found farming very slow work there being no railroads for many years, so that the people were compelled to haul their grain to Chicago to market. Mr. Leaman later worked at the carpenter's trade, still residing on the farm, a part of which is still owned. In 1883, he rented his estate and purchased his present home on section 21.

January 1, 1811, our subject and Deborah Bennett, who was born in Genesee County, N. Y., were united in marriage. Mrs. Leaman was the daughter of Alva and Lottie Bennett and died June 5, 1858. Mrs. Lucy M. (Hungerford) Rossiter, the lady to whom our subject was united in marriage, December 30, 1891, was born in Carpenter, Chenango County, N. Y., March 15, 1835. Her father, Bele Hungerford, was a native of the Empire State and was the son of James and Rachel Hungerford, natives of Massachusetts. Her father in 1841 emigrated to the Territory of Wisconsin where he purchased a tract of land in Rock County. He improved a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, upon which he resided until 1882, when he went to Minnesota and there departed this life in April, 1884; his wife died in December of that year. Mrs. Leaman was first married in Wisconsin to Edward S. Rossiter, a native of England, who was brought by his parents to America when two years of age. He was a stone and brick mason by trade and died in 1880. By her union with Mr. Rossiter one daughter was born, Georgia L. The first marriage of our subject resulted in the birth of the following-named seven children: Chas. W., Charlotte, Silas, Francis, Mary, William and Fred.

HOMAS J. DERWENT. As an evidence of the immense strides of the manufacturing and commercial interests of the city of Rockford in the last decade or two, no better instance can be produced than the vast progress made by the T. J. Derwent Manufacturing Company, of which Mr. Derwent is President. This company produces sash, doors, blinds, etc., and all kinds of house-finishing supplies, and is run by water power. Twenty-five men are employed all the time and this is one of the leading industries of the kind in Rockford. The business was established by Mr. Derwent in 1866, and was carried on in his name until January 1, 1890, when it was incorporated and he was made President. His father, Thomas Derwent, was Vice-President until his death on the 9th of October, 1891, and a brother of our subject, Luther, is now Secretary and Treasurer.

Mr. Derwent was one of the promoters and is ex-President and Director of the Skandia Furniture Company, and a prominent stockholder in the same. He is also Alderman of the Third Ward, and is now filling his seventh consecutive term. He is one of the city's most progressive and public-spirited citizens, and one of its oldest settlers, having located here as early as 1859, and has been a resident of the county since 1842.

His birth occurred in Rochester, Yates County, N. Y., on the 11th of September, 1811, and he is of English descent, his father, Thomas Derwent, having been a native of Derbyshire, England, born April 8, 1809. The latter grew to manhood in Sheffield and Manchester, was married in the Old Country, and later, with his wife, father, mother and other members of the family, came to the United States, sailing from Liverpool and landing in New York City in 1840. There they remained about a year, and, then, in 1812, came Westward to Illinois, settling on a new farm in Pecatonica Township, where they soon had a comfortable home. Later, Thomas Derwent established a saw and grist mill in Durand Township and there remained until 1859, when he moved his business to Rockford, continuing the same until 1881, when he sold out. He was a well-known and prominent man of the city and was at one time Supervisor of the Third Ward. In politics, he was an active Republican, and, in religion, he was a worthy member of the Second Congregational Church. His parents both died in this county when full of years. Their names were Thomas and Hannah (Bradwell) Derwent, respectively, and they were classed among the best citizens of the county.

The wife of Thomas Derwent (father of our subject) was formerly Miss Betsy Garside, and she

RUFUS INGALLS.

U. B. INGALLS

now resides at the old home place, No. 310 South Church Street, Rockford. She was born in England and married there, and soon after emigrated with her husband to America. She is now eightytwo years of age. She was reared an Episcopalian.

Thomas J. Derwent was married in Rockford to Miss Emma Walling, a native of the Empire State, but who came to Rockford with her parents. Dewitt C. and Harriet A. (Boyce) Walling, when quite young. Her father was a builder and architect by trade and was an industrious, upright citizen. Both parents are now deceased, their deaths occurring in this county, and both held membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Derwent became the parents of one child, Albert, a bright, promising young man, who died when nineteen years of age. Both are worthy members of the Christian Union Church. Socially, Mr. Derwent is a member of the Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery, A. F. & A. M., of Rockford, and is also a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. In politics, he is a Democrat.

RRIN B. INGALLS, deceased, came to Boone County in 1851. He was a gentleman whose life demonstrated the fact that perseverance and zeal will prevail to conquer circumstances and gain a competence for him who exercises those qualities. He owned an excellent farm in Belvidere Township, which his son managed, and made his home in the village until April 10, 1889, the date of his decease.

The lady whom Mr. Ingalls married, December 25, 1845, was Miss Nancy H. Smith, who was born December 14, 1816, in Denmark, Oxford County, Me. Her father, John P. Smith, was a native of Exeter, N. H. where, it is supposed, his father, Rev. Joseph Smith, was born. He was a preacher in the Baptist Church and held a charge in Cornish, Me., where his decease occurred at the age of forty-five years.

The father of Mrs. Ingalls was a young man when his parents removed to the Pine Tree State, where he was given a good education and for a time was engaged in teaching school. Later he began farming and soon after his marriage engaged in the lumber business, in which he was more than ordinarily successful. From Cornish he removed to Denmark, where he was residing at the time of his death, in January, 1811. The maiden name of his wife was Nancy Hayes. She had her birth in Dover, N. II., and departed this life at Belvidere in 1865. John P. Smith was reared in a Baptist Church but later joined the Congregationalists and was an influential member of that body until his decease. The family, in which Mrs. Ingalls was the fourth in order of birth, bore the respective names of, Oliver M. P., Joseph, Elizabeth, Charlotte and Clarissa. She was given a good education in her native town and later attended the academy at Freyburg and also at North Bridgton, Me.

Our subject was born in Denmark, Me., November 26, 1810. He was one of the prominent merchants in his native place and resided there until 1851 at which time he came to Boone County. He and his wife became the parents of one son, Rufus, who was born June 11, 1817. He married Miss Emily Dunwell, and died April 7, 1889, leaving two children, Clara and Gertrude. Our subject was a prominent member of the Presbyterian Church in Belvidere, where he was held in high esteem by those to whom his character and attainments were known. Mrs. Ingalls is also identified with the Presbyterian Church and is a lady of kindly and hospitable nature.

Their many friends who hold their memory dear will be pleased to notice in this connection the lithographic portraits of Orrin B. Ingalls and his son Rufus.

RIN ST. JOHN, who for eight years has engaged in earrying on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Eating House, and who is numbered among the early settlers of Rockford of 1853, is a native of Weedsport, N. Y., born in 1816. He comes of an old New England family that was founded in America long prior to the Revolutionary War. His father, John St. John, was a native of Connecticut, but removed to Cayuga County, N. Y., where he died at the advanced age of nearly ninety years. As a farmer, he lived a quiet, unassuming life and was respected by all who knew him. In polities, he was a Whig and anti-Mason, and in religious belief was a Baptist. His wife, whose maiden name was Emmarilla Bristol, was also a consistent member of the Baptist Church, and her carnest Christian life won her the love of all.

No event of special importance occurred during the boyhood of our subject. After attaining to mature years in the county of his nativity, he led to the marriage altar Miss Eliza M. Baylis, who was there born and reared, and is a sister of Mrs. R. C. Jilson, whose sketch appears on another page of this work. Their union has been blessed with two children, who are yet living. Four others are deceased, three having died at about the same time of scarlet fever. Marshall B. is now a member of the firm known as the Rhodes-l'tter Manufacturing Company, of which he is Secretary. He was also private secretary to the late Levi Rhodes, of whose estate he is now administrator. He wedded Ella Day, of this city, and they have a pleasant home on North Court Street. Addie L., the only living daughter of Mr. and Mrs. St. John, is one of the finest vocalists in Rockford. She is now a member of the choir in the Second Congregational Church. For nine years she was a successful teacher in the Rockford Female Seminary. She received the best vocal instructions to be obtained in this State, and has just recently completed her musical education in a large conservatory of music in London, under the instruction of Prof. Shakespeare.

Mr. St. John first came to Rockford in 1853, and began business as a member of the grocery firm of St. John & Jilson. After some years the partnership was dissolved, and he began business on his own account. As before stated, he has run the eating house for the past eight years, and has met with most excellent success, his establishment being well worthy of the liberal patronage which it receives. Mr. St. John is recognized as one of the leading and valued citizens of the community, as well as one of the early settlers. He now resides at his pleasant home on Horseman Street, where he has a double house, part of which is rented. In politics, he supports the Republican party. His wife is a member of the Baptist Church, and both have many friends throughout the community and rank high in social circles.

ATTHEW BLAIR, who is engaged in the operation of his eighty-acre farm on seetion 31, Cherry Valley Township, was born in Scotland in 1828, and is a son of John and Jennie (Barr) Blair, both of whom were natives of Argyleshire, Scotland. They came to America in 1852. Two years previous, at the age of twenty-two years, our subject had bade goodbye to home and friends, and with seven young neighbors of Campbelltown, took passage on the sailing-vessel, "Sarah." They called the boat "The Lazy Sarah," as the voyage lasted for eight long weeks. From New York he and his comrades went by boat to Albany, and by canal to Buffalo. On one of these trips they saw for the first time a field of corn, then in silk, and one of the young men, plucking some of it, rubbed it in his hands as he would wheat or barley, to see what kind of seed it grew. At Buffalo, Mr. Blair and others of the party, took a steamer to Sandusky, Ohio, and from there went to Cincinnati by the Little Miami Railroad, then the only railroad into that city. Our subject there tried to find work, but failing, he walked to a country village named Reading, and hired to Richard Jackson, a Scotch farmer, for $10 per month. He worked for that gentleman for two years, and then spent about a year in the employ of Jerry Dunn, an extensive agriculturist.

In August, 1853, Mr. Blair was joined in wedlock with Miss Anna Clark, for whom he had sent to his own native heath. She is a daughter of Samuel and Margaret (Templeton) Clark, farming people of Argyleshire. The young couple removed from Ohio to Boone County, Ky., where Mr. Blair took charge of the farm of Isaae Stroub. Two years later, in 1859, he removed with his wife and two children to Middletown, Ohio, where he worked in a paper mill. He learned the business, and received $13 per week, but in 1880 he gave up that position, and, with his family, came to Illinois, locating upon his present farm in Cherry Valley Township. It has now been his home for about twelve years. In connection with general farming he raises some fine Durham cattle, and keeps on hand eight cows for dairy purposes. The butter made finds a ready sale in the Rockford market on account of the excellent quality.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair have lost two daughters: Margaret, who was born September 3, 1851, and died at the age of seven weeks; and Margaret, the second of that name, who was born November 14, 1861, and died March 11, 1864. The living children of the family are: John C.; Flora J., wife of Thomas Skinner, of Harlem Township; Jennic; Samuel, a machinist of Ohio; William A., a railroad agent of Irene, and Matthew, at home.

The parents of this family are members of the Presbyterian Church, and are highly respected people. In politics, Mr. Blair is a Republican, having supported that party since he east his first vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1861. He is a public-spirited and progressive citizen, and one who takes an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the community.

S. HOUGHTON, who is now practically living a retired life at his pleasant home at No. 601 Avon Street, is numbered among the honored pioneers of Winnebago County, where he located in 1841. He was born in Saratoga, N. Y., and is descended from good old Revolutionary stock. His grandfather, Nathaniel Houghton, was a Revolutionary soldier from Lowell, Mass., and his two brothers. Ephraim and Jonas, also aided the Colonies in their struggle for independence. The Houghton family came to this country from Lancaster, England, but they espoused the cause of their adopted land and proved themselves loyal American citizens.

The father of our subject, Tilley Houghton, was born in Massachusetts and removed to Saratoga County, N. Y., where he married Miss Lucy Mitchell, daughter of Thomas Mitchell, who served as a Colonel in the British army during the Revolution, and with Burgoyne was captured at the battle of Saratoga. She was born near Woodstock, Windsor County, Vt., where her girlhood days were passed, after which she went to New York with her parents,

Mr. and Mrs. Houghton began their domestic life in Corinth Township, Saratoga County, where he owned and operated a good farm for many years. He died at the age of seventy-eight years. In politics, he was a Whig and was a man of sterling worth. After his death, Mrs. Houghton came West and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dayton, in Rockford, at the age of sixty-nine years. In early life she was a Baptist, but afterward joined the Methodist Church. She lived a consistent Christian life and won the love of all who knew her.

As before stated, J. S. Houghton came to this county in 1841, and for a number of years gave his attention to farming and stock-raising. At one time, he was the most extensive farmer in the county, owning a farm of nine hundred acres. At length he abandoned that work and in 1866 removed to Rockford, where he has since resided. Here he has engaged in various kinds of speculation and in his undertaking has been very successful, accumulating thereby a handsome property which now numbers him among Rockford's wealthy citizens.

After coming to the West, Mr. Houghton was joined in wedlock to Miss Philomela Pettibone, a native of the Empire State, who came to Winnebago County when a young lady of twenty-one years. Her father, Doris Pettibone, was a native of New York. He had several brothers, all of whom were ministers and prominently connected with missionary work. Rev. F. 1. Pettibone is now Chairman of the Board of Missionaries and Translaters, with headquarters at Constantinople, and is well known in missionary circles throughout the world.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Houghton were born three children: Frances, who became the wife of John M. Cochran, died in Colorado, leaving one son, John, who resides with his father, a cattle-dealer and rancher of that State. The two living daughters, Florence and Kittie M., reside with their father. The mother of this family died November 17, 1884, at the age of fifty-four years. She proved a true and faithful helpmate to her husband and was also a consistent member of the Congregational Church. Her loss was mourned by many friends, as well as by her immediate family.

In politics, Mr. Houghton is a stalwart Republican. His success in business has been most marked, winning him a handsome property, and at the same time he has gained the confidence and good-will of all by his fair dealing and upright life.

RANK II. KIMBALL. M. D. The medical profession is ably represented in the city of Rockford by the gentleman whose name introduces this biographical notice and who has already a good reputation as a successful physician and skilled surgeon. At once after graduating from Chicago Medical College, he located in this city, and during twelve years he has devoted himself to his profession. Before entering upon the study of medicine, he received a liberal literary education. Those who are acquainted with him will bear witness to his being an honorable, conscientious physician, who, by hard study and indomitable energy, has become thoroughly conversant with the details of his profession.

For the history of the father of our subject, Henry P. Kimball, the reader is referred to his sketch, which appears elsewhere in this volume. He was a prominent and highly-esteemed citizen of Rockford, and his death, which occurred at the asylum in Elgin, whither he had gone for treatment for chronic abscess of the brain, at the age of fifty-nine years, was sincerely mourned by his companions of many years. He was liberal in his religious views, upright in his life, and inherited the thrift of a long line of New England ancestors.

A life-long citizen of Rockford, Dr. Frank II. Kimball was here born, July 13, 1855. His boyhood days were passed in the public schools of the city and in the High School, after which he entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and graduated from that institution in 1877. He at once commenced the study of medicine, entering the Chicago Medical College, from which he graduated in 1880. He is one of the promoters and managers of Rockford City Hospital and takes an active interest in the welfare of the city.

The marriage of Dr. Kimball to Miss Henrietta T. Kirk took place in Rockford, in January, 1881. The lady who on that day became the wife of our subject was born in Rockford, here acquired a good education in the city schools and is now numbered among the accomplished and cultured ladies of the place. Her father, E. A. Kirk, was born in Maryland, but removed West when a young man, late in the '30s, and improved a farm in Winnebago County. He was at one time a successful grain buyer and has been associated with the growth of the city. He was here married to Miss Rachel Dennis, a native of Canada, who came to the States and settled in Illinois about the time of her husband's removal. They are the parents of three children, but Mrs. Kimball is the only survivor. Josephine married Samuel Kerr, an attorney in Chicago and an ex-Alderman of that city. They became the parents of three children, one of whom is deceased. Mrs. Kerr is also deceased.

HARLES II. SPAFFORD, an old resident, is now living retired at his present home located at No. 206 Madison Street. He is an old settler of Winnebago County, having come here as early as 1839 and during most of that time has made the city of Rockford his home.

Previous to making a permanent settlement in this county, our subject had visited this locality, and was so favorably impressed with the outlook that he decided to make this place his home. He was accompanied hither by a friend, Volney A. Marsh, they making the trip via the canals and lake to Chicago. Here they secured a conveyance which took them to Joliet. They remained in that then village for a short time and then decided to take a direct route to Rockford. As before mentioned, deciding to make his future home in this county, Mr. Spafford returned home by the same route which he had taken when journeying hither, and in 1840, in company with his brothers, John and Catlin, and his brother-in-law, Jasen Marsh. returned to Illinois, making the trip overland from Adams, N. Y., and after a long and tedious journey located in Rockford. They purchased land in what is now known as the Grove Farm, which was three miles south of Rockford on the Kishwaukee Road, and which is now owned by Ed. Morley. Our party of young men formed a sort of syndicate and commenced cultivating the land, in which they were very successful. A few years later, they moved into the city of Rockford, where our subject has since made his home and has aided greatly in the development and upbuilding of the city. He became interested in many valuable enterprises, being one of the promoters of the seminary of this place which was organized in 1848 and conducted according to plans drawn by Miss Anna P. Sill, of New York. Mr. Spafford was elected the first Secretary and Clerk of the Executive Committee of what afterward became the Rockford Female Seminary, and was one of the first Directors.

Mr. Spafford was appointed Postmaster under Tyler and Grant and has always been active in political affairs, for many years voting a straight Republican ticket. Now, however, he is in sympathy with the Free Trade party. He has held many prominent positions within the gift of his fellow-townsmen and was elected Circuit Clerk of the county, which position he held for three suceessive terms, aggregating ten years. He has always been a careful, conscientious business man and was one of the prime movers in getting the Kenosha Railroad, which was later purchased by the Northwestern Road, to run through this eity. He served the company first as Director, then as Vice-President and later as Superintendent. He was public-spirited and gave liberally of his time and means in forwarding the best interests of his community. He erected the Commercial Block, and in company with others built the Metropolitan Block, in addition to which he was the owner of real-estate in the city and many farms throughout the county.

Charles II. Spafford was born in Jefferson County, N. Y., January 6, 1819, and was a son of Dr. John Spafford, who was a prominent physician of good old New England stock. The latter-named gentleman was a young man when he began life as a physician and surgeon in Adams, N. Y., and there departed this life at the age of forty-four years. The maiden name of his wife was Lucy Moore, a native of Vermont and also of English descent. She survived her worthy husband six years, and died firm in the faith of the Congregational Church.

He of whom we write was the eldest son and second child of his parents' family of four children. The eldest of the family, Harriet, died while residing in Rockford, having been married to Col. Jasen Marsh, who was for many years a prominent attorney in Rockford, and who obtained his title through valiant service in the rebellion, being a Colonel of the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. The brothers of our subject are John and A. Catlin, the latter the President of the Third National Bank, and the former President of the Rockford Wire Company, the Lubricating Oil Company, a lumber company and a suspender company.

Mr. Spafford received a collegiate education at Castleton, Vt., where he was prepared to follow the profession of a lawyer, but, deciding to come West, the current of his life was thus changed. He was married to Miss Abby Warren, a native of Maine and the daughter of Joseph Warren. Her father was a son of Dr. John Warren, who was Surgeon-General in Washington's army and a brother of Gen. Joseph Warren, of Revolutionary fame. Dr. John Warren was also a prominent physician and surgeon of Boston, Mass., where his decease occurred. His son, Joseph Warren, the father of Mrs. Spafford, received a fine education at Cambridge, Mass., and devoted the greater portion of his life to looking after the vast interests of his father, and died in the prime of life when his daughter Abby was but five years of age. Joseph Warren married Miss Abigail Whittier, a native of New Hampshire and a descendant of the same family as was John G. Whittier. She survived her husband and came to Rockford, where she departed this life in her eightieth year.

Mrs. Abby Spafford was given a good education and has aided her husband greatly in attaining his present high standing in financial circles. She has one sister living, Miss Mary Warren, who is residing in Arizona. Mr. Spafford is a prominent member of the First Congregational Church, of which he is a charter member. His wife, however. is a Unitarian. Of the four children born to them, one, Mary, died at the age of nine years; Carrie is the wife of Frederick E. Brett, a salesman for Marshall Field & Co.'s Wholesale House, of Chieago; Charles H., Jr., a most promising young man, is still under the parental roof, and is engaged principally in looking after his father's large real-estate interests in Rockford, the latter having property in the First Ward, known as Spafford's Addition; Eugenia is Mrs. Charles 11. Godfrey; her husband is a clothier of Rockford, in which business he has been very successful.

ILLIAM C. B. JAYNES, M. D. Although still quite young in his profession, and indeed in years, this gentleman is rapidly building up for himself a reputation as a skilled physician which gives promise of leading him to a front rank ere many years shall have passed over his head. He is a close student, and his quickness of apprehension, his mental culture and his honorable character, give him popularity in society and a reputable name among his fellow-men.

Dr. Jaynes has been a resident of Durand since June, 1888. He was born in Mobile, Ala., January 7, 1856, and is a son of Mortimer D. and Maria L. (Bartlett) Jaynes, natives of Vermont. His paternal grandfather, Daniel Jaynes, lived and died in St. Albans County, that State. The father of our subject came West when a young man, and was married in Beloit, Wis. He was also a physician, and was a graduate of the university at Burlington, Vt.

After his marriage, Mortimer D. Jaynes removed to Mobile, Ala., where he engaged in the insurance business, continuing to be so employed until the ou break of the Civil War. He then sent his family North, intending to follow them as soon as he could settle up his business. He never came, and it is supposed he was killed. The mother of our subject returned to Wisconsin and resided with her father, who was a farmer, and an early settler near Beloit. She makes her home at present on Locust Street in that city.

The early life of our subject was passed in Beloit, where he received an excellent schooling. and when fifteen years of age learned the trade of machinist, which he followed for seven years. He then entered the preparatory department of the college at Beloit, and followed the course of study in that institution for three years, with the exception of a short time each year when he worked at his trade in order to secure money to enable lnm to pursue his studies. Mr. Jaynes was graduated from the Chicago Homeopathic Medical College with the Class of '82, and immediately after rereceiving his degree located in Beloit and practiced medicine for four years. At the expiration of that time, he took a post-graduate course, and in the winter of 1886-67 devoted his entire time to the care of one patient at Eden Prairie, Minn.

In 1888, Dr. Jaynes located in Durand, where he represented the homeopathy school, being their only representative between Beloit and Freeport. Our subject was married, May 20, 1888, to Emma E., daughter of Henry P. and Paulena (Hawson) Johnson, natives of Denmark, where they were married, and in 1849 emigrated to the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson located in Wisconsin, where the former worked at his trade of a miller. He later moved to Sterling, this State, where he pursued his trade, and then making his home for a short time in Rockford, again returned to Beloit, which is his present place of residence. They are the parents of two children: Mrs Jaynes, and Victor A., who was born in Sterling, this State, August 7, 1856, and follows the trade of his father at Beloit. Mrs. Jaynes was born also in Sterling, April 3, 1859. She is a member in good standing of the Baptist Church, and is a lady greatly respected in society.

Dr. Jaynes, in his political views, is an adherent of the Republican party, and in local affairs is a member of the Village Board. Socially, he is identified with Durand Lodge No. 302, A. F. & A. M.; Beloit Chapter No. 9, R. A. M.; Beloit Council No. 9, R. & A. M.; Beloit Commandery No. 6, K. T.;

Temple Lodge No. 42, A. O. U. W., and Beloit Camp No. 348, M. W. A. He is also a member of the Homeopathy Medical Society of Wisconsin. and devotes his entire time and attention to the practice of his profession.

OHN P. CURTIS, dealer in old iron, rags, &c., &c., is doing business at No. 214 North Madison Street, and he also has a large vinegar manufactury, on Kishwankee Street, just outside the city limits. He owns valuable property on this street and a good, comfortable home. He gives his entire thought and attention to his business enterprises and is a man of character and energy.

Mr. Curtis claims New Hampshire as his native State, and was born in Winchester in 1835, being a descendant of New England stock. His father, Bradbery Curtis, died in his native county and State when fifty-two years of age, and was a farmer and lumberman by occupation. His wife, who recently died, lived in Sunderland, Vt., her maiden name being Harriet Codding. Her father served in the War of the Revolution. She had been a worthy member of the Methodist Church all her life.

John P. Curtis, the eldest of nine children, seven of whom are living, is the only one of the family to locate in Illinois. He first left the parental roof to enter New York State and remained in Cambridge, Washington County, of that State, for eighteen years. In 1882, he came to Rockford, established his present business, and has succeeded beyond his most sanguine expectations, keeping as many as twelve or fourteen wagons on the road all the time.

He was married near Cambridge, N. Y., to Miss Julia A. Cook, who was born and reared in Washington County. The father, Isaac Cook, a farmer, passed his entire life in that county, but the mother, after his death, came West and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Curtis, in the spring of 1891, when nearly ninety years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis are well and favorably known to the people of Rockford, and Mrs. Curtis is prominently identified with the Methodist church. In politics, Mr. Curtis is a Republican. Their children, tive in number, are as follows: A. B., who is the cider maker for the manufactory, married Miss Lillie Clark and they reside with our subject; John F. is doing business for a Kentucky tobacco house as a commercial traveler; Ida married Deforest Sweet, a tinker dealer of Des Moines, Iowa; Rowne Belle is the wife of William Smith, a junk dealer of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who, like the members of the Curtis family, is a very successful business man; and 8. Dexter, who is at home and at present in business with his father.

ICHARD KIMMEY. As might naturally be expected, mention is made in the present work of many citizens of Boone County one prominent in their different callings, but none more so than the unusually successful agriculturist, Mr. Richard Kimmey, who, although young in years, is old in experience and possesses more good, sound judgment on matters pertaining to the farm than many men much older.

His parents, Jacob F. and Catherine (Mead) Kimmey, were both natives of New York State and resided there many years. In 1857, they decided to move to the Sucker State, and after journeying thither, purchased ninety acres in Boone County, to which they added at one time forty acres and at another one hundred and sixty-five acres. They were industrious, upright citizens and succeeded in accumulating many of the comforts and conveniences of life. Both received their final summons in this State, the father dying at the age of eighty years and the mother at the age of sixty-two years. The father had always cultivated the soil, but at the same time was engaged in other occupations. For a number of years, he ran a barge on the Hudson River. In polities, he was a stanch Democrat.

The subject of this brief notice was born in the Empire State in Albany County, on the 7th of May, 1853. He was but four years of age when his parents emigrated to Illinois, and in this State he was reared and received his education. Like his father, he early evinced a liking for agricultural pursuits and became familiar with the duties on the farm when but a small boy. After reaching a suitable age, he branched out for himself and bought seventy-two and one-half acres of his father previous to the latter's death. He erected a fine residence on his well-kept farm about 1888, and now ranks among the most thrifty and progressive young farmers of Boone County. In the parlance of the present day, he might appropriately be called a "hustler" and one who is bound to become better known as the years pass by. Politically, he is independent, easting his vote for the man whom he thinks best fitted for the office in question, rather than one who promises to be a party tool.

The marriage of the gentleman of whom we write was celebrated on the 22d of August, 1877, his bride being Miss Laura E. Mayburry, a daughter of Jonathan and Desdemona Mayburry, who now reside in this county, where they have made their home for the past thirty-eight years. Mr. and Mrs. Kimmey are the happy parents of five children: Mabel, born June 17, 1878, is attending school at Belvidere; Lloyd R., born May 6, 1880; Maud, October 22, 1882; Bernice, April 22, 1886; and Bessie, May 25, 1888.

UTHER II. FASSETT, a well-known agriculturist of Winnebago County, residing on sections 28 and 29. Roscoe Township, has in many ways been identified with the history of this community and we feel assured his sketch will prove of interest to many of our readers. He was born in Cambridge, Rutland County, Vt., December 17, 1814. His grandfather, Dr. Nathan Fassett, was a lifelong practitioner of that State. His father, Nathan Fassett, Jr., a farmer of Rutland County, was born February 16, 1778, and in 1833 removed to Genesee County, N. Y., with teams. He afterwards sold out and purchased one hundred acres of land in the Empire State, where he made his home until 1854.

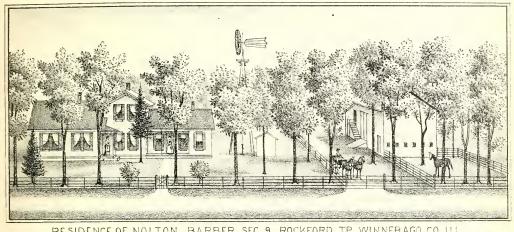

Through the misrepresentation of a party, Mr.

Fassett lost all that he had paid on his land but with the aid of his faithful wife, managed to rear his children and give them good school privileges. His wife died in Albion, N. Y., March 1, 1853, at the age of sixty-four, leaving three sons and two daughters: Luther II., born December 17, 1814; Azubah Matilda, September 11, 1816; Benjamin W., March 19, 1818; George M., August 27, 1820; and Mary Amelia, December 2, 1822. Our subject and Benjamin W., of Brighton, N. Y., are the only survivors. The latter has been a public official, Overseer of Public Construction, commanding large pay, and is a man of high standing, even among his political opponents.

Our subject began life for himself at the age of twenty-two, working as a farm hand by the month for six years, when he rented land. At the age of twenty-nine, he married Amanda Bates, of Barry, Orleans County, N. Y., daughter of Jesse and Anna (Miller) Bates. They were natives of Massachusetts and pioneers of New York, who made their way through the wilderness by blazing trees. The father died in 1869, at the age of sixty-three years, and his wife died in 1856, at the age of fifty-four years.

In the autumn of 1853, Mr. Fassett emigrated to this county and purchased forty acres of land. The next spring he brought his wife, his daughter and his aged father to his new home. The latter died in September, 1854, and was interred in Roseoe Cemetery. He lived a noble life and was a consistent Christian. The wife of our subject was ealled to her final rest August 22, 1888, at the age of sixty-six years, leaving two daughters: Emma M., wife of T. B. Moore, by whom she has one son. Frank Fassett, a bright boy of eleven years. Mary A. is the younger daughter.

Mr. Fassett attended the first county fair held in Rockford, in September. 1854, and heard the opening address delivered by ex-Governor Bebb from the steps of the old court house. He was one of the Directors of the Fair Association. In politics, he has been a lifelong Democrat, a stanch supporter of the party principles and has been a faithful member of the Universalist Church for many years. Mr. Fassett has a wide acquaintance throughout this community and is held in high regard by all who know him. He started out in life empty-handed and by his own efforts has worked his way upward until he is now numbered among the substantial citizens of this community.

In connection with his biographical notice is presented a view of Mr. Fassett's highly-cultivated farm.

OLTON BARBER, who follows general farming on section 9, Rockford Township-Winnebago County, claims New York as the State of his nativity. He was born in Fenner, Madison County, April 29, 1826, and is a son of Eli Barber, who was born in the same town. The grandfather, John Barber, was a native of Worcester County, Mass. At an early age he was left an orphan, and thus thrown upon his own resources. had to earn his own livelihood. About 1791, he accompanied a neighboring family to New York, and resided in Oneida County until 1799, when he went to Madison County, and in March of that year married Lovina Thompson, also a native of Woreester County, Mass. Her parents settled in Madison County, N. Y., when she was a child. Mr. Barber bought a tract of timber land in the town of Fenner, and in the midst of the timber built a log eabin and began the development of the farm, upon which he made his home until his death, November 30, 1869. In 1801, he and his wife united with the Baptist Church of Fenner, being among its first members.

The father of our subject was reared in his native county, in the midst of the wild scenes of frontier life. He bought a tract of timber land three miles from the old home, and there built the log house in which Nolton was born. He began the arduous labor of elearing a farm, but his health failed and he died in 1832, at about the age of thirty years. His wife, whose maiden name was Olive Nourse, was born in Madison County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Joel and Mehitable (Woodbury) Nourse, natives of Massachusetts, and pioneers of Madison County, N. Y. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Barber came to Illinois in 1865, and died at the home of our subject in 1888, at the age of eighty-five years and five months.

Nolton Barber was only six years old when his father died, and at the age of nine he was bound out to a farmer, Daniel M. Gillett, with whom he lived until he was fourteen years of age, when he spent eleven months with his paternal grandfather. He then returned to Mr. Gillett, working for him as a farm hand until he had attained his majority, when he started out in life with a capital of $108. After working by the month for some time longer, he purchased thirty-five acres of land in Fenner Township, where he made his home until 1855, when he traded his farm for a lease of a tavern in Perryville. He then engaged in keeping hotel until the fall of the same year, when he sold out and emigrated to Winnebago County, Ill. In this county he rented land for eight years and then purchased forty acres of his present farm, to which he has since added until now one hundred and five acres pay tribute to his care and cultivation.

On the 15th of March, 1849, Mr. Barber was united in marriage to Miss Emily Marshall, who was born in the town of Fenner, Madison County, N. Y., September 10, 1821. Her father, Thomas Marshall, was born near Albany, N. Y. and was a son of Caleb Marshall, who removed from Albany to Madison County, settling on a farm in the town of Sullivan, where he made his home until his death. He married Alcha Pinkney, a native of the Empire State, who also died in the town of Sullivan. Thomas Marshall was a mere lad when his parents removed to Madison County. After he had attained to man's estate, he bought a tract of timber land and built the house in which Mrs. Barber was born. He cleared quite a large tract, put up buildings and made a good farm, but after some time sold and purchased another farm in the same county, on which he lived until called to his final rest, on the 21th of May, 1863. He wedded Phobe Keeler, who was born in Sullivan Township, Madison County, and was a daughter of Nathaniel and Jemima (Barnum) Keeler. Her death occurred November 20, 1878, on the old home farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Barber have a family of three children. The eldest, Myron A., was born April 2, 1850, and on the 23d of November, 1882, married Anna Sloan, by whom he has five children: Willie N., John M., Emily P., Myron H., and May L.; Louisa M., born June 14, 1853, became the wife of Jerome A. Hudler, December 4, 1889. Ada I., born July 21, 1858, became the wife of Albert M. Truesdell. April 9, 1891. They have an infant daughter, born June 2, 1892, and as yet unnamed.

Mr. and Mrs. Barber both hold membership with the Methodist Church and are prominent and highly respected people of this community. In politics, he is a Republican and is recognized as one of the leading and enterprising farmers of Rockford Township.

A view of the tine farm belonging to Mr. Barber is presented on another page.

RS. SUSAN (HORTON) BLAKE, who is the owner of a splendid estate located in Flora Township, Boone County, was born in Cornwall, England, May 9, 1827. Her father. William Horton, who was the son of William and Betsey (Lob) Horton, was also a native of that shire in England, where he was a farmer and spent his entire life. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Blake was Nancy Lob, also a native of Cornwall, where she spent her entire life.

Mrs. Blake was the only member of her father's family to come to America. She was reared in her native shire, and resided there until 1856, when, in company with her husband and one child, she emigrated to America, setting sail from Paxton on the vessel "Capt. Mably." The party disembarked at Quebec, Canada, after a voyage of six weeks and five days. One week after landing in the New World, they came to Rockford, Winnebago County, where Mr. Blake found employment with Dr. Clark for a few months. He was later engaged on a farm in Cherry Valley Township for one year, at the expiration of which time he went to Newburg, whence he returned after a short time to Rockford. A few months thereafter, Mr. Blake went to Burritt and for one year worked for his brother-in-law on a farm. After renting land for a time, he went to Lee

County and became the proprietor of a quartersection of land five miles south of Dixon, upon which he resided for five years, and then renting that estate, leased a farm of six hundred acres for five years. He later traded his property for two hundred and twenty acres of land included in his present farm, to which he has added until the estate now comprises three hundred and twenty acres in one body and one hundred and ten acres on another section.

William Blake, to whom our subject was married in England, also had his birth in Cornwall, the date thereof being August 19, 1816. He is a son of William Blake, Sr., who came to America from England in 1867, and departed this life in Rockford. The mother also spent her last years in Rockford, having come to America from her native England in company with her husband and five children: John. Ann Bate, Mary Pooley. William and David.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake have a family of seven children living, viz: James, George, Charles, Frank, Fred, Fannie and Nannie. The eldest daughter, Mary, married Henry Luce and died while residing in lowa, leaving four children: Fannie married Ernest Minter and has one child; Nannie, the wife of Sylvester Bowley, is also the mother of one child.

VOHN SHAW, who is engaged in general farming on section 3, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, was born near Sheffield, Yorkshire, England, October 4, 1822. His father and grandfather both bore the name of John Shaw. The latter came to America and spent his last year in New York. Two of his children, John and Eliza Ryals, also located in this country, the daughter settling in Utica, N. Y., where her two sons now reside. The father of our subject was reared in New York, and served a seven-years' apprenticeship to the cabinet-maker's trade, which he followed in the Empire State until 1831. He married Ann Ashforth, a native of Yorkshire, England, and a daughter of George and Mary (Ward) Ashforth. In 1834, Mr. Shaw and his family sailed for America, and after eight weeks landed at Newport, R. I., from whence he went to Albany, N. Y. He spent a year in that place and afterward removed to Utica, where the death of his wife occurred. He there followed his trade for some time, but afterward operated a farm which he purchased. He then bought a home one mile from the city, where he lived retired until his death in 1885, at the age of eighty-four years. In the family were the following children: George, John, William, Helen, Henry, Mary, Eliza, Alfred, Franklin and Louisa.

Our subject was only eight years of age when he crossed the Atlantic, but well remembers the long ocean voyage. He was reared to agricultural pursuits, worked for his father until his marriage, and after that managed the home farm for one year. He then rented land, upon which he resided until 1853, when he came to Illinois. He then spent two years npon a farm belonging to his brother-in-law, after which he rented land in Harlem Township until 1863, when he purchased the farm which is now his home.

On the 16th of May, 1849, Mr. Shaw married Elizabeth Ward, who was born about ten miles from Sheffield, England, August 15, 1828. Her father, Thomas Ward, and grandfather, Richard Ward, were both born in the same house and were descendants of an old English family. The latter married Ann Mills, and they spent their entire lives in Yorkshire. Thomas Ward crossed the Atlantic in 1836, accompanied by his wife and eleven children. After five weeks they reached their destination and settled in Westmoreland, Oneida County, N. Y. After a year they removed to the western part of the same county, where Mr. Ward made his home until his death, May 1, 1870, at the age of eighty-four years. His wife bore the maiden name of Sarah Sanderson. She was born in Yorkshire, and was a daughter of Joseph and Ann Sanderson. Her death occurred September 28, 1836.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Shaw have been born four children, yet living: Frederick, Ward. Annie and Albert. One son, William, died at the age of twenty-nine. Frederick married Nora Taylor, and they have four children: Lloyd, Lila, Bessie and an infant; Ward wedded Lizzie Marsh and they have one son, Ellis. The Shaw family have a pleasant home on section 3, Guilford Township, where our subject owns a well-developed farm. It is well supplied with good buildings, is under a high state of cultivation and all the improvements of a model farm are there found. Mr. Shaw is a well-known and valued citizen of the community who stands high in the esteem of all, and his wife is a member of the Methodist Church.

ARED B. GOULD, a retired farmer and one of the honored pioneers of Boone County now residing at his pleasant home in Belvidere, was born in Warren County, N. Y., May 26, 1820. His great-grandfather, Solomon Gould, was an early settler of that county, and in the midst of the forest cleared and improved a farm, upon which he made his home until his death. Ira Gould, father of Jared, was born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., was reared in his native State and married Doreas Brace, who was also born in New York, and was a daughter of Jared and Joanna Brace. They began their domestic life upon a timbered farm in the town of Warrensburg, upon which was built the log cabin in which our subject was born. He made quite a good farm, upon which he resided until 1827, when he removed with his family to Montgomery County.

Three years later, Mr. Gould became a resident of Chantauqua County, and in 1836 he came to Illinois in search of a location. He visited Boone County, at which time all of the land was still owned by the Government, as the surveys were not yet completed. He made a claim in what is now the town of Spring, erected a small log cabin, and in the early winter left his son Ransom in charge of the claim, while he returned on horseback to the Empire State. In the spring of 1837, he brought his family to the new home, where they arrived after an overland journey of three weeks. Upon the farm which he there developed Mr. Gould made his home until his death.

Our subject was one of twelve children. At the age of seventeen, he came to Illinois, making the journey by way of the Lakes to Toledo. From there he came to Chicago on foot, where he overtook the family, who had traveled by land, he being sick at the time the family started and unable to start. He saw this county in its primitive condition, when there were no railroads, few settlements, and the work of cultivation and progress seemed scarcely begun. Mr. Gould remained with his father for two years, after which he went to Mineral Point, Wis., and secured employment in a smelting furnace, but could not stand that work, and after two weeks engaged in cutting cordwood at the head waters of the Pecatonica, receiving from seventy-five cents to $1 per cord. After six months, he returned with $100 in silver, which he had saved from his earnings, and with that sum entered eighty acres of Government land on sections I and 5, Spring Township.

In October, 1815, Mr. Gould and Miss Charlotte Blackford were united in marriage. She was born in Wiltshire, England, January 10, 1821, and is a daughter of Francis and Elizabeth Blackford, who are mentioned in the sketch of Stephen Blackford, on another page of this work. Ten Elizabeth graced their union, four dying in infancy. Those living are Harvey A., Ellen, Alice J., Fannie F., Lucius T. and Blanche.

Mr. Gould did not immediately locate upon his land, but engaged in making shingles and roofing buildings for new settlers, who were coming in large numbers to the county, but on his marriage he and his young bride began their domestic life upon the farm. He has been very successful and, as his financial resources have increased, he has added to his possessions until at one time he owned more than four hundred agres of highly cultivated land, and his farm was also well improved with good buildings. He there made his home until 1881, when he bought seven acres of land within the city limits of Belvidere, and in his pleasant residence on the bank of the Kishwaukee River expects to spend his remaining days. He is one of the honored pioneers of the county and can relate many interesting incidents of frontier life. On one occasion, they purchased a barrel of flour for $12, and when opened it was found that the flour had been wet, and when dried had hardened into a solid mass, which could be rotled over the ground like a rock. Wild game was in abundance and the table was thus supplied with meat, although breadstuffs were very scarce. Those early days have long since gone by, and the passing years have brought prosperity to Mr. Gould.

OHN A. NASH. It affords the biographical writer pleasure to be able to record in this volume the main incidents in the life of an honest and upright citizen, who, though formerly one of the prominent business men of Rockford, is now living retired in his pleasant home at No. 407 North Second Street. He is a native of this city, having been born January 23, 1853.

Martin Nash, the father of our subject, was born in County Galway, Ireland, where also his father, Martin Nash, a wealthy farmer, was born. Mr. Nash, Jr., was reared and educated in his native county, and leaving the parental roof when a young man still remained in the Emerald Isle until 1849, when, accompanied by his wife and two children, he came to America. Settling in Northampton, Mass., he made that place his home for two years, and then coming to Illinois, located in Rockford, where he was residung at the time of his decease in 1866. He was a man who possessed excellent judgment in business matters and at the time of his death had accumulated a handsome property.

Winnifred (Madden) Nash, the mother of our subject, also hailed from Ireland, being born in County Clare to Bartley and Winnifred Madden; she departed this life in the year 1888. Three of her children: John A., Margaret and Ellen, are still living. Being the fortunate son of educated parents, our subject became proficient in book lore, his early studies being conducted in the schools of Rockford, which were later supplemented by a sixyears' course at Notre Dame University at South Bend, Ind. After being graduated from that institution, Mr. Nash engaged in the boot and shoe trade, which he prosecuted for two years, and then selling out, established as a merchant tailor. A twelvemonth later, he sold out, since which time he has not been engaged in active work of any kind. In 1890, he was married to Mary Hargan, also a native of Ireland, and a member of the St. James Catholic Church, with which body our subject is also connected.

EUBEN HANKINSON. Among the intelligent and highly respected families of Rockford, we may well note the family of our Subject, whose pleasant home is located at No. 702 North Second Street, Mr. Hankinson was born in Johnstown, Montgomery County, N. Y., April 17, 1812, and died April 26, 1892, aged eighty years. He was the son of Frances Le Roy Hankinson, a native of New Jersey, from which State Reuben Hankinson, his father, hailed. After his marriage, the grandfather of our subject went to Nova Scotia where his decease occurred. The maiden name of his wife was Sally Le Roy, who, after the death of her husband, emigrated to Canada and departed this life in Middlesex County, province of Ontario.

The father of our subject was one of a family of eight children, and was quite young when his parents moved to Nova Scotia. Later, he returned to the States and made his home with an uncle in New York. After his marriage, he leased a tract of land in Montgomery County, and when purchasing property on his own account became the owner of a farm in Canajoharie Township. In 1835, he disposed of that estate and, removing to Middlesex County, Canada, there made his home until the fall of the same year, when he returned with his family. He purchased a tract of timber land, on which he erected a small frame house, and here the family resided for the succeeding three years. The father then sold the farm and, coming to Michigan. spent his last days in Oakland County.

Martha Jones was the maiden name of our subject's mother. She was born in New York State and was the daughter of Joseph Jones. She bore her husband eight children and departed this life on the farm in Michigan. Reuben Hankinson, of this sketch, was twenty-three years of age when he accompanied his parents to Canada, making the journey with one horse and a buggy. He resided with his parents until his marriage, when he rented land adjoining the old home and resided there until 1841, which was the date of his advent into Illinois. The journey hither was made with two wagons and four horses, the party starting from Oakland County in the mouth of April and reaching Winnebago County two weeks later.

On locating here, our subject purchased a tract of land in what is now Guilford Township. As there were no improvements on his place, he bought a log house of Judge Shaw, which he moved onto the land and occupied with his family until a few years later, when he was enabled to erect a comfortable brick dwelling. In 1859, Mr. Hankinson sold his estate and came to Rockford, where for a number of years he was engaged in the sale of tinware. Ill health, however, compelled him to retire a few years later.

The original of this sketch was twice married. His first wife, to whom he was united in 1836, was Miss Ruth Sovereign; she was born in Middlesex County, Canada, a daughter of John and Miriam Sovereign, and departed this life in 1812. Three years later our subject was married to Alvira Mason, whose birth occurred in Scipio, Cayuga County, N. Y. Her father, Milton S. Mason, was born in Connecticut and was the son of Daniel Mason, also a native of that State. The grandfather of Mrs. Hankinson was reared in Connecticut, from which State he removed to New York about 1800, and lived for some years in Dutchess County. Later, he moved to Cayuga County, and resided there until he died in 1842. He was a rapid reader, reading the Bible through in fortythree hours and twenty-three seconds.

The father of Mrs. Hankinson was a young man when his parents removed to New York State, and after his marriage went to Cayuga County, purchasing a farm in the town of Scipio, where he resided until 1835. Then selling his property, he came to Illinois, being accompanied hither by his wife and three children. He located about three miles west of Belvidere, making a claim to four hundred acres of Government land, on which he erected a double-hewed log house and commenced to improve his tract. For a number of years there were no railroads and Chicago was the nearest market place. Mr. Mason resided there until his death, which occurred in 1842. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Ingraham, a native of Rhode Island and a daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Swan) Ingraham. She was married a second time, this union being with John Sovereign, and spent her last days in Rockford. Mrs. Hankinson is probably one of the oldest settlers in Northern Illinois, having been a continuous resident of the State since 1835.

Of the first marriage of our subject, one daughter is living, Martha Hadley. Of the second marriage were born the following children: Francis M., Mason T., Mary E., Allie J., Willie H., Fred E., Kittie J. and Henry.

We are pleased to present on an accompanying page a portrait of the late Mr. Hankinson, whose death was widely and sincerely mourned.

AMUEL A. BLAIR. Although past the allotted age of man, three-score years and ten, Samuel A. Blair is one of the prominent men of the county and has ever taken a deep interest in her progress and development. He was born in Lebanon, Madison County, N. Y., on the 2d of October, 1817, of the marriage of Brown and Mary (Collins) Blair, the former a native of Worcester County, Mass., born in 1779, and the latter of Hamilton, Madison County, N. Y. The father died in Roscoe in 1855, when seventy-six years of age, and the mother died in Westfield, Chautauqua County, N. Y., when but forty-four years of age, leaving three sons and two daughters, viz: Samuel Alva, our subject; Albert, born in 1818, died in New York of quick consumption; Mary S., born in 1821, became Mrs. Gardner and died in the prime of life; Darwin, born in 1823, is a large farmer of California; and Ann became Mrs. Cheney, of Roscoe, and died of consumption.

In the spring of 1839, when in his twenty-second year, our subject, in company with Dr. B.

Bradley, of Beloit, eame overland with teams to Illinois. Reaching the Maumee River, they found the ice going out, and after waiting there about three days for the ferry-boat, that was ice-bound, young Blair decided to cross the river anyway. Disregarding the advice and counsel of older heads, he plunged into the turbulent waters and, contrary to all predictions, reached the opposite shore in safety. Such was the indomitable will and courage of this young pioneer. Including delays, etc., they were thirty-eight days in making the trip. They stopped for four days in Michigan, and here Mr. Blair saw the first individual shaking with the ague, and, though he laughed then, he found it no laughing matter in subsequent years. Mr. Blair first worked on a farm for Franklin Able (who was the founder of Roscoe) for one year at $16 per month, and then, learning of his brother's illness, he and Mrs. R. J. Cross and Mrs. Isaac Cole (sisters) went to Chicago. While there, our subject met an old friend, Hiram McHenry, captain of a brig on the Lake, and he took passage for Barcelona, N. Y., arriving only in time to see his brother die. Soon after he returned to Roscoe, but about a year later he went back to New York State and purchased a large drove of sheep, fourteen hundred head. After shearing them, he started back in June and, although he met with eold weather and storms and delays, he arrived in Roscoe in fairly good condition in August.

In 1841, our subject married, in Westfield. N. Y., Miss Mary Miniger, who was a native of that place and the daughter of Lowe and Martha (Martin) Miniger. Mr. Miniger became a wealthy farmer and died when eighty-two years of age. His wife died at the age of seventy-six, leaving six children. Our subject purchased his first farm of one hundred and two acres near his present home, in 1839, and later be purchased eighty acres, a part of his present farm. He sold the one hundred and two acres and thought seriously of going to Missouri, but the Dred Scott Decision caused him to abandon this project, and he purchased his present property. He now owns two hundred and thirteen acres in this farm and eighty acres one mile north. All his improvements are firstclass, and he is a representative farmer of the county. He keeps a fine flock of sheep and is engaged in general farming, although at present he is making a specialty of dairying, keeping about twenty-five cows. He sells all his milk to the creamery.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair have buried two childrenone an infant, and the other, Augusta, a daughter who died at the age of twenty-six years. They have six children now living, two sons and four daughters: Albert, a hardware salesman in Lincoln, Neb.; Julius, a farmer in Fremont County, Iowa; Frances, now Mrs. John (). Briggs, of Houston, Minn.; Ada, now Mrs. George B. Warner, of Page County, Iowa; Laura, Mrs. J. B. Hardy, resides on the home place and her husband carries on the farm, Mr. Blair making his home with them; and Nellie, wife of T. R. Field, a merchant of Houston, Minn. Mr. Blair's first Presidential vote was cast for William Henry Harrison, and he has held a number of township offices, such as Road Commissioner, School Director, etc. He is a Congregationalist in his religious views and one of the founders of that church in Roscoe. Mrs. Blair is a member of the Presbyterian Church. They have eleven grandchildren in Iowa and Minnesota.

DWIN DEAN. After long years spent in agricultural pursuits, the subject of this sketch has retired from the labors of life and is passing his declining years in a peaceful enjoyment of the comforts of life, surrounded by friends whom he has gained by his upright character, and blessed by the love of children whom he has reared to honorable and useful manhood and womanhood. He is the possessor of one of the finest estates which Flora Township, Boone County, boasts, comprising about two hundred and thirty-one agrees in three different bodies.

Mr. Dean is one of the oldest settlers now residing in Flora Township and was born in the town of Minot, Oxford County, Me., January 16, 1821. His father, Ira Dean, was born in Massachusetts, whence he moved to Maine and was an early settler in the town of Foxcraft. He resided there until about 1823, then again started Eastward and moved to Piscataquis County where he purchased a tract of timber land in the town of Foxcraft.

In 1843, Mr. Dean came to Illinois and remained for a few years in DeKalb County, then removed to Floyd County, Iowa, where he purchased and improved a farm and occupied it some years. He finally removed to the village of Rock Grove and lived there until his death. The maiden name of his wife, the mother of our subject, was Charlotte Hersey.

Edwin Dean was about two years of age when his parents removed to Foxcraft, Me., where he was reared and educated. His father was a blacksmith and our subject worked with him until 1813, when, with his wife, he started with a horse and buggy for this county and arrived within its limits after a journey of eight weeks lacking one day. He worked at his trade in Poplar Grove until the spring of 1844, then rented land in Flora Township one year, during which time he made claim to eighty acres of Government land on section 35. He located on the place in 1845 and soon purchased other property adjoining. The home farm contains one hundred and seventy acres, in addition to which Mr. Dean has a forty-acre tract on section 34 and another of twenty-one acres in the same section.

He of whom we write was actively engaged in farming until 1888, when he rented his property and removed to the home he now occupies on section 34. In addition to this, he has since purchased a residence in the city, which he proposes to occupy in the near future. Mr. Dean was married in April, 1843, to Rebecca B., daughter of Robert Lowe. She was born in Gilford, Piscataquis County, Me., and departed this life in 1887. The following year Mr. Dean was married to Mrs. Sarah (Swain) Hovey, who was born in Niagara County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Isaac Swain. Her father moved to this State in 1810 and was one of the early settlers in McHenry County, where he farmed until his decease. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Dean was Mary Bert. The wife of our subject was first married in 1854 to F. II. Hovey, who was a native of Broome County, N. Y., and departed this life in McHenry County, this State.

The original of this sketch by his first marriage became the father of four children: Oraville E., Henry E., Clarissa E. and William E. Mrs. Dean has three children living by her marriage with Mr. Hovey: Abner, Nettie and Mary. Carrie, the youngest, died when twenty-three years of age. Mrs. Dean is a member of the Free-will Baptist Church, and in politics our subject votes the Republican ticket.

LFRED PULS. Of the many substantial and progressive farmers of Belvidere Township, Boone County, none are more honest, industrious or more deserving of success than the German element, of which Mr. Puls is a representative. His parents, William C. and Hannah (Stonemiller) Puls, were natives of Mecklenburg, Germany, and came to the United States in 1857. They first settled in De Kalb County, Ill., and the father was engaged in farming there until about twenty years later, when he sold out and moved to Boone County, Belvidere Township, where his son, our subject, was living. There he and his worthy wife reside at the present time, honored and esteemed by all.

The paternal grandparents of our subject, Frederick and Louisa Puls, were also natives of Mecklenburg, Germany, but came to this country at an early date, and here the grandmother passed quietly away when eighty-three years of age. The grandfather is still living and is now in his eighty-second year. The Pulses were all farmers, and what they accumulated in the way of this world's goods was the result of their own energy and industry. Our subject's maternal grandfather, William Stonemiller, was born in Germany and is now a resident of De Kalb County, Ill.

The subject of this sketch was born in De Kalb County, Ill., on the 24th of June, 1864, and was here reared and educated. He was one of four children, two sons and two daughters, born to his parents. On the 1st of March, 1887, he was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Miss Louisa Koeneke, who was born in Bonus Township, Boone County, III., and here received all of her training and education. Her parents, Phillip and Sophia (Staas) Koeneke, were natives of Germany, but came to the United States and passed the closing scenes of their lives in Iowa. They were the parents of nine children, all now living but one.

The home of our subject and his young wife has ever been in this county, and by their industry and good management they have gathered around them many comforts and conveniences, Mr. Puls was always at home until after his marriage, and now rents part of his father's broad acres. Like his father, who came to this country without a dollar and subsequently became one of the most prosperous and wealthy farmers of Boone County, his fine residence, barns and outbuildings attesting what a man can do in America who has the will and disposition to work, our subject is energetic and enterprising and is sure to make a success of life. His union has been blessed by the birth of one child, Willard Grafield, whose birth occurred on the 19th of November, 1889.

Politically, Mr. Puls has not given any attention to office-seeking, but, like his father, he is a stanch Republican, and he is an earnest advocate of the principles of that party. He and Mrs. Pulse are worthy members of the Evangelical Church at Belvidere, Ill., and give their hearty support to all enterprises of a landable nature. They are highly esteemed in the community and have gathered around them many warm friends.

OHN B. BALL. The occupation which this gentleman is now following has received his attention the greater part of his life, and it is but the truth to say that in it he is thoroughly posted and well informed and his labors in this direction have contributed very materially to the reputation Boone Township enjoys as a rich farming region. Like many of the representative citizens of the county, he is a member of the old Bay State, born in Worcester County on the 14th of October, 1838, and, although still comparatively a young man, he has risen to a position in the agricultural affairs of the county which many men older in years and experience might envy. His life has been without material change from the ordinary pursuits of farm toil, but yet has not been devoid of substantial results.

yours truly Herry W. Hvery

Mr. Ball is a brother of Edward Ball (see sketch), and, like his brother, is thoroughly posted on all subjects relating to the farm. He makes his home with his mother in Poplar Grove. The residence is commodious and attractive, and his fine farm attracts general attention because of the extreme nicety with which it is kept. Politically, Mr. Ball is a Republican, but he takes very little part in political affairs, preferring to give his entire attention to his productive and extensive farm. He is engaged in general mixed farming.

A history of our subject's father will be found in the sketch of Mr. Wheeler, of Boone Township, the latter a brother-in-law of our subject.

EV. HENRY W. AVERY. This highly-respected citizen of Belvidere was born on the 31st of May. 1823, in Ledyard, New London County, Conn. The most authentic record which we can gain says that Christopher Avery was the founder of the family in America. He emigrated from Salisbury, England, on the ship "Arabella," in 1630, and settled in Gloucester, Mass. His son James came with him to America and, in 1651, removed from Gloucester to New London County, Conn., where he spent the remainder of his days. He married Joanna Greenslade, and afterward wedded Sarah Miner.

The next in direct descent also bore the name of James. He was born in Gloucester, December 15, 1646, married Deborah Sterling, and died in New London County, Conn., May 14, 1703. Their son James was born in New London County, April 20, 1673, and wedded Mary Griswold. Their son, Ebenezer wedded Lucy Latham, and afterward wedded Mrs. Rachel Denison, the widow of Daniel Denison. The next in direct descent was also named Ebenezer. He was born March 7, 1732, married Phebe Denison, and was one of the victims of the Ft. Griswold massacre, September 6, 1781.

Ebenezer Avery, the grandfather of our subject, was born in New London County, August 8, 1762, was a farmer and spent his entire life in Connecticut. His tirst wife was Hannah Morgan, and he afterward wedded Mary, a daughter of Charles Eldridge. His death occurred August 8, 1842. Henry W. Avery, father of our subject, was born in New London County, Conn., October 12, 1795, was reared to agricultural pursuits, and was a valiant soldier in the War of 1812. He engaged in farming on the old homestead until 1854, when he eame to Illinois and settled in Boone County. He married Betsey Denison, a lineal descendant of the sixth generation from Capt. George Denison, who with his wife, Ann Borodell, came from England and settled in Stonington, Conn., in 1645. She died at her home in Boone County in 1866, leaving two children. The elder son, Frederick, has been pastor of the Congregational Church in Columbia, Conn., for more than forty years.

Rev. H. W. Avery, of this sketch, spent his boyhood days in the Nutmeg State, and 1845 witnessed his emigration to Illinois. His uncle Sidney Avery had been here the previous year and entered Government land in Flora Township, Boone Connty, and our subject purchased forty acres in the same town. Fifteen acres of this had been planted, and a small frame house had been built. He paid $400 for the tract, and commenced life in the West as a farmer. For some years there were no railroads and he would haul his produce to market in Chicago. He was very successful, and as the years passed, he made many improvements, including the erection of good buildings, and added to his landed possessions until he now has more than three hundred acres. He resided upon the farm until 1881, when he came to Belvidere and built his present home, which is pleasantly located on Lineoln Avenue.

Mr. Avery has been twice married. His first wife, to whom he was married in 1844, was born in Sherburne, N. Y., and died in Flora Township in 1847. They had one daughter, Elizabeth, who became the wife of John C. Thompson, and died in 1880, leaving three sons, two of whom are living and make their home with their grandparents. They are named respectively, Edward Avery and Henry Sidney. In 1848, Mr. Avery was again married, his wife being Rachel P., daughter of Robert McCord, and a native of Carlisle, Pa.

In 1842, Mr. Avery joined the Congregational Church in Ledyard, Conn., and three years later united with the Presbyterian Church in Belvidere. In 1852, he was made a Ruling Elder, which position he has held continuously since, and in 1887 was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Freeport. He has always been an active worker in the Sabbath-school, in which he has been Teacher and Superintendent, and for ten years was President of the County Sunday-school Association. In politics, he is a Republican, and has served as Assessor, Justice of the Peace, member of the County Board of Supervisors, and of the School Board. He is a ready and forcible writer, a fluent speaker, and at the centennial celebration of the organization of the Presbyterian Church delivered the historical address. He and his estimable wife have many warm friends throughout the community, and are beloved by all for their many excellencies of character.

A lithographic portrait of Mr. Avery accompanies this sketch.

AMES S. REID is the oldest native-born citizen of Harlem Township, Winnebago County. He was born on the farm which he now owns and occupies, on the 12th of November, 1840, and is of Scotch descent. His grandfather, James Reid, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, was there reared and married, and resided in that country until about the year 1856, when he crossed the Atlantic to America and spent the remainder of his life in Guilford Township. His wife, Margaret Reid, died in her native land. The father of our subject, Hugh Reid, was born in Argyleshire and learned the trade of a weaver, which he followed in Scotland until 1836. In that year, he bade good-bye to his old home and crossed the broad Atlantic, accompanied by his wife and one child. After several weeks spent upon the water, he reached his destination, and resided for one winter in Ottawa, III. In the spring he was offered forty acres of swamp land, now included in the city of Chicago, but came to Winnebago County, and was the third Scottish settler in Harlem Township. He made a claim, and when the land came into market entered it at the land office in Galena. He at once built a log house, which in after years was replaced by a frame residence, which continued to be the home of Mr. Reid until his death, December 27, 1887.

The mother of our subject bore the maiden name of Mary Howie. She, too, was born in Argyleshire, and was a daughter of William and Janet Howie, both natives of Scotland, where her father spent his entire life. His wife came to America and died at the home of Mrs. Reid, who was also called to her final rest on the 11th of July, 1885. Three children of the family are still living: Margaret H., William H. and James.

Our subject was born in the cabin home of his parents, and has spent his entire life upon the farm which he now owns and occupies. As a companion and helpmate on life's journey, he chose Miss Mary Breckenridge, who was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, and was a daughter of Edward and Margaret Breckenridge. Their union was celebrated June 7, 1867, and her death occurred on the 14th of June, 1876. Mr. Reid was again married, October 12, 1882, his second union being with Jane Smith, daughter of John and Elizabeth Smith. By the first marriage three children were born: Edward B., Hugh F. and James M., and four children grace the second union: Russell S., Lulu I., William Robert Howie and Mary Iva.

Mr. Reid now owns one hundred and ninety-five acres of valuable land in this county, and his farm is under a high state of cultivation and well improved with good buildings. He also owns a good farm in Boone County of one hundred and sixty-three acres. He is recognized as one of the substantial farmers of the community and one of the public-spirited and progressive citizens. He and his wife are members of the Willow Creek

Presbyterian Church, of which his parents were among the founders. Our subject was a delegate of the Presbyterian Church to the General Assembly held in New York City in 1889.

TEPHEN R. GODFREY, of the city of Rockford, State of Illinois. The Godfrey Clothing Company was incorporated April 1, 1885, with S. R. Godfrey as President, and his son, Charles H., Secretary and Treasurer. With the same officers, the company is carrying on an extensive and lucrative business at No. 304 East State Street. In their establishment, which is one of the largest and finest in the city, they carry a complete stock of clothing, gents' furnishing goods, hats, caps, etc., and are known throughout Winnebago and adjoining counties as reliable, one-price and straightforward business men.

Mr. Godfrey was born in Johnstown, near the city of Providence, R. I. His parents were Elisha and Patience (Webber) Godfrey, natives of South Dennis, Mass., and the former a sea captain during his entire active life. At the age of thirteen years, our subject secured a situation with Edward Mason, in a dry-goods establishment in Pawtucket, R. I. Three years later, Mr. Mason failed, and William Knight, of Burrillville, R. I., bought the stock, and made Mr. Godfrey sole manager of the business. Some months afterward, our subject closed out the stock, and at the age of nineteen proceeded to Boston, where he clerked for the firm of J. R. Gardner & Brother. Later, he was engaged in the dry-goods business with W. D. S. Havens, of Pawtucket, R. I., the firm name being Havens & Godfrey.

Attracted by the discovery of gold in California, in the winter of 1849 Mr. Godfrey left his wife and child with her mother in Pawtucket, R. I., and sailed in the ship, "Charlotte," on Sunday, March 4,1849. After a long and tedious voyage, the ship dropped anchor in the bay of San Francisco on September 5, at 5 P. M. The passengers and crew numbered one hundred and thirty-five, among whom but one death occurred. The ship was a very poor craft, and had to be pumped twenty minutes every two hours during the entire voyage. This work was done by the passengers, who divided themselves into "messes" of twenty each, and took turns, two at the pump at a time. This, no doubt, was healthy exercise for the men, who, however, did not at all enjoy it. Twice the vessel caught fire, but the flames were extinguished without much damage, although not without causing great fear and consternation among all on board.

During the long voyage, the ship made the harbor of Rio de Janeiro, on the Atlantic, and the harbor of Valparaiso, on the Pacific coast of South America. At the former place they stopped about three weeks, during which time the Captain took on board a fresh supply of provisions and water. During the passage, Mr. Godfrey organized a mining company of sixteen persons among the passengers, and, after leaving the ship, they secured passage on board a schooner to Sacramento, taking with them their baggage, provisions etc. voyage of ten days, during which time the little party suffered intensely from mosquitoes, Sacramento was reached, and the freight unloaded. The objective point of the company was Hangtown, now called Placerville, and to get their baggage conveyed thither, they were compelled to pay $1 per pound, but, not having the amount required, they were forced to transfer the articles as needed.

The next move of the company, in a business way, was to investigate the price of oxen per yoke. Mr. Godfrey and another gentleman were appointed a committee to buy the cattle. After diligent search, they found three very poor voke of eattle, which had just been brought across the plains, and these they bought for $600. An old wagon was purchased for $200, and with the team they started for the city, six miles from camp. Mr. Godfrey thinks they were about eight hours reaching their destination, and, mean while, they underwent severe experiences. Part of the team moved forward, and at other times backward; sometimes the oxen, with the wagon bottom-side up, made quite rapid progress, and a constant "Whoa, boa!" failed to produce the desired effect. Finally, a Missourian came along and soon taught the amateur drivers how to He took a whip, with a handle handle the oxen. about eight feet long, and a heavy lash of braided leather, about fifteen feet in length, which he threw its full length, and, with a giant-like movement, brought it forward and down on the sides of the leading yoke of cattle with such a crack that the stubborn oxen started at a rate which raised the dust. The two gentlemen profited by their lesson, and reached the camp in safety about 7 P. M.

The company now had three yoke of oxen and nothing to feed them on. They cut down two or three live oak trees, and the cattle browsed on the Hay, being $600 a ton, was a luxury not to be thought of, but they secured an excellent substitute. Hiring a seythe at $16 per hour, they went along the banks of the American River, about three miles from camp, and cut some dry weeds and grasses, enough to supply the cattle for two or three days. They then started their first load for Hangtown, a distance of some forty-five miles from Sacramento, and, as the prairie fires had burnt the grass, they were obliged every night to fell live oak trees, on which their cattle might browse, and, in that way, reached their destination after a trip of four days.

After mining a short time, Mr. Godfrey sold out his interest to the company, and, returning to Sacramento with Capt. Charles Clark, of Providence, R. I., became proprietor of the Sacramento Hotel, While thus engaged, the city was inundated by the rising of the Sacramento and American Rivers, on the night of January 8, 1850. In the summer of 1851, Mr. Godfrey sold his interest in the hotel to his partner and returned to mining on the North Fork of the American River, twenty-two miles above Marysville, on what was then known as Owsley's Bar. In November of the same year, he went to Marysville, where he became acquainted with Charles N. Felton (now Senator from California) and soon afterward they commenced, as equal partners, in the business of running a packmule train from Marysville, and also trading in the mountains, having at one time a store in Downeysville and another at Gibsonville.

In the winter of 1852-53, Mr. Godfrey went to San Francisco and became a clerk in the clothinghouse of Strowbridge & Blake. During the following winter, he returned to New York via the Isthmus of Nicaragna, and after spending several months with his family, returned to San Francisco via the 1sthmus of Panama, his family remaining in Brooklyn, N. Y. In the fall of 1854, he formed a co-partnership with James C. Eddy, formerly of Fall River, Mass., and earried on a flourishing wholesale and retail clothing business in San Francisco until April, 1857. In the spring of 1855, Mr. Eddy went to New York City to attend to the manufacture of clothing for the firm, and returned to San Francisco May 1, of the same year, bringing with him Mrs. Godfrey and her two daughters, Emma F. and Annie R.

During his residence in the Far West, Mr. Godfrey was an active member of the vigilance committee which hung Casey for killing James King, of Williams; Corey, for the killing of the United States Marshal; Richardson and Hetherington, for the murder of Drs. Baldwin and Randall; also Brace, for highway robbery and murder. The committee, was formed of the best people of the new city, who took the law in their own hands, and wrested it from the grasp of lawless classes. It was probably the most sensational experience which San Francisco ever underwent. Mr. Godfrey relates many interesting reminiscences of those days, whose experiences stand out in startling distinctness, but space forbids us to make more extended mention of them.

In Pawtucket, R. I., Mr. Godfrey wedded Miss Mary A. Baker, who was born in Dennis, Cape Cod, Mass., and came of an old New England family residing in the Bay State. Her father was a seacaptain, and died of the vellow-fever when she was four months old. Her education was acquired in the academy of Pawtucket, R. I., where she resided from her girlhood until her marriage. was an accomplished and intelligent lady, who was held in high esteem by all who knew her. Her death, which occurred in January, 1855, was the result of a stroke of apoplexy. From her sixteenth year she was a member of the Congregational Church, and lived a devoted and consistent Christian life. A most affectionate and faithful wife and mother, her place in the household can never be supplied.

Four children were born in the family of Mr.

and Mrs. Godfrey. Emma, whose death occurred eighteen months before her mother passed away, married N. S. Robinson, formerly of Rockford, but now of Eugene, Ore. Anna is the wife of D. S. Hough, a prominent grocer of Rockford; Charles H., a young man of great promise and ability. married Eugenia Spafford, of Rockford, and is now Secretary and Treasurer of the Godfrey Clothing Company; Lulu, a very intelligent and beautiful young lady, died at the age of eighteen years, sixty days after the decease of her mother. Her death was a great loss to her father, sister and brother, as well as to her many friends. Emma and Lulu were actively identified with the First Congregational Church, at Rockford, and Annie holds membership in the Christian Church.

In December, 1857, Mr. Godfrey came to Rockford and the following spring began business as a dealer in clothing with his brother-in-law, John M. Tappen, now a farmer of Ottawa County, Kan. After some years, this connection was discontinued and Mr. Godfrey became manager of the clothing house of W. V. Webster. Some time later, he bought out Mr. Webster, and, after continuing alone for one year, formed a co-partnership with Charles Smith, doing business for two years under the firm name of Godfrey & Smith, when he became sole proprietor. Since the organization of the Godfrey Clothing Company, in 1885, he has been its efficient President. In politics, he is a stanch Republican, and, socially, is a Royal Arch Mason. He became a member of the Congregational Church in Pawtucket, R. I., in his youth, and now belongs to the First Congregational Church of this city. He ranks among the best citizens of Rockford, and occupies a high place in the regard of his large circle of acquaintances.

OHN A. PALM, a grocer of Rockford, was born in Sweden, August 17, 1849, and is one of eight children born unto P. M. and Eliza Palm. His father for forty years engaged in teaching and then retired on a full pension as a teacher. He is still living in his native land at the age of seventy-eight years, and is yet quite active for one of his age. He has been a life-long and leading member of the Lutheran Church. His wife, who was also a member of the same church, died July 28, 1891, at the age of seventy-eight years, one month and thirteen days. Of the family, two sons and the daughters are now deceased. Of the brothers who are still living in their native land, all are now married and are variously engaged.

The only member of the family to come to this country was our subject, who, after twenty years spent in his native land, sailed for New York in July, 1869, landing on the 2d of August of that year. He went at once to Chicago, where he arrived not only empty-handed, but was $65 in debt for his passage to this country. He worked in that city for a time for small wages, and then went to New Orleans, where he spent one winter. Since his return to the North he has had a successful business career. He worked in Chicago for three years as a brick and stone mason, which trade he had learned in that city, and on the 21th of June, 1874, came to Rockford. Securing employment with H. F. Peterson, he worked for that gentleman for nine years, and in 1878 began on his own account as a contractor. He has met with excellent success, securing a liberal patronage, and has done the contract work on hundreds of homes and buildings in this city. He is now a member of the firm of Olson & Palm, who are engaged in the grocery business at No. 511 East State Street. In company with Andrew Borg, he owns the large stores and flats on Seventh Street. His home is a pleasant and commodious residence at No. 210 Seventh Street, and he also owns the property adjoining.

Mr. Palm was married, in Rockford, to Miss Christina Shold, who was born in Sweden, February 24, 1858, and in 1867 came to Rockford with her parents, John and Anna (Anderson) Shold, both of whom are now deceased, having passed away at about the age of sixty years. Mrs. Palm is the only surviving child of the family. By her union she has had seven children, but one died in infancy. The living are: Rudolph, Cora A., Mabel A., Irvin A., E. Lawrence and Floyd R. The parents are both members of the First Lutheran Church, and Mr. Palm votes with the Republican party. He has been a hard-working man, but, as the result of his industry, enterprise and good management, supplemented by good business ability, he has made a small fortune, and is now enjoying the comforts and pleasures which a competence, well carned, brings.

CCIEN WILLIAMS, President of the Rockford Burial Case Company, is at the head of one of the most prominent industries of Rockford, with which he has been identified since its organization in 1883. The company employs more than thirty hands, and is represented by three commercial men. Operating with ample capital and in a systematic manner, this reliable firm is enabled to push its trade far beyond what is usually termed the local territory, and enjoys a lucrative and extensive business throughout the county.

Mr. Williams is also an original stockholder and Director and owns a one-fourth interest in the Overall Manufactory of Rockford, a successful institution which was established in 1883, and is now numbered among the moneyed concerns of the city. Some ten men and sixty women are furnished with constant employment, and six traveling men are employed by the company. Mr. Williams is also a stockholder in the People's Bank and the Manufacturers' Bank of Rockford, and in the successful conduct of the various establishments and institutions with which he is connected, finds sufficient to demand his undivided attention. He is an efficient business man, and a most affable gentleman, enjoying a high place in the regard of his fellow-citizens and an enviable reputation for integrity. Since he came to this city in 1882, he has served as Supervisor of the Seventh Ward for four years, and been otherwise closely identified with the progress of the city.

Born in Manlins Township, Onondaga County, N. Y., June 21, 1821, Lucien B. Williams is the son of Elijah and Lucy (Edwards) Williams. He grew to maturity in his native county, and in his early manhood became foreman for a large contractor on the Eric Canal, whom he later aided in building the railroad from York to Eric. Thus early in life he gamed a practical experience in undertaking and carrying out large contracts, and was one of a number of young men who familiarized themselves with railroad contracting. It was in order to accept a contract for seven miles of railroad, now the property of the Northwestern R. R. Company, that he came West with several others in 1852, and so satisfactorily did he fill the contract that he immediately secured another from the Illinois Central Railroad, for building the road between Freeport and La Salle.

Completing his contract in 1855, Mr. Williams settled in Harrison Township, Winnebago County, where he had purchased live hundred acres of land. He added to his landed property until he owned nine hundred acres, the most of which was placed under splendid cultivation, while the remainder was pasture land in the Pecatonica River bottoms. For twenty-seven years he lived and labored on his farm, giving his attention to general farming as well as to raising sheep and carrying on an extensive dairy business. He owned one hundred cows and shipped butter to Boston, St. Louis and other markets, and was the first large dairy farmer in the county, and the first man to use tile drainage here. This serves to illustrate his progressive ideas and his desire to promote the advancement of the agricultural interests of Northern Illinois. His popularity and large executive ability led to his appointment as a Director of the County Agricultural Society, and he was instrumental in securing its success, accomplishing much in behalf of the farmers of the county, and causing a more general interest to be aroused in the various departments of agriculture.

While he still resided in New York State, Mr. Williams was united in marriage with Miss Mary Arnold, who was born and reared in the Empire State and belongs to a good old family whose members have been distinguished for sterling traits of character and citizenship. In all his labors, Mr. Williams has received the devoted assistance of this wife, who has lightened his sorrows and doubled his joys, and who is now his comfort in his declining years. She is the mother of six children, namely: Fannie, wife of Walter W. Favor, a druggist in Rockford; Ida, who married Delos Barningham, a farmer of Harrison Township; Rosemond, wife of J. Barningham, also a general farmer of Harrison Township; Myra, Charles and India, who remain at home with their parents. The last-named are graduates of Rockford High School, and are bright, intelligent young people, whose position in social circles is high. Mr. and Mrs. Williams are members of the Christian Union Church, and in his political affliations, Mr. Williams is a sound Republican. favoring the principles and candidates of his party by his influence and ballot.

OHN P. NORDHOLM. Among the most important lines of commercial industry in any business community is that of insurance, which gives security to the merchant and the householder alike, and secures him from possible loss in case of fire, accident, etc. Mr. Nordholm, who is a representative Swedish gentleman, ranks high as a successful business man, and is engaged in the real-estate, loan, fire, life and accidental insurance business at No. 420 East State Street. He came to this city in 1889, has been closely identified with the progress of the city since, and is upright and honorable in all his relations with the public. For some time after locating in this city. he was engaged as clerk by the Central Furniture Company, but being progressive and enterprising. he subsequently took the general agency for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and since March, 1891, he has attached the various other enterprises to his chief business. He is also agent for the Rockford Swedish-American Labor Agency. He is hardworking, gives his best energies to his present business, and under his energetic management it can not fail to succeed. He is a stockholder in the Central Furniture Company, the Rockford Manufacturing Company, the Royal Sewing Machine Company, Rock River Planing Mill Company, and the Rockford Furniture and Undertaking Company, and was stockholder and Director from the start in the last-named concern, the same being incorporated with a capital of $50,000. Mr. Nordholm is also a member of the Skandia Land Association, which has a capital stock of $75,000, and takes an active interest in all these enterprises.

He was born in Skande Province, Sweden, May 30, 1860, and was thoroughly educated in his native country, where he continued under the parental roof until a young man. In 1888, he made his first appearance on American soil and is now the only member of the family in this country. He spent the first eight months as clerk in a mill and elevator at Wakefield, Neb., for J. O. Mulligan & Co., and later came to Rockford, where he has met with a more than average degree of success.

His parents were natives of Sweden and his father, Peter Person, was a successful agriculturist in that country. The latter was a man of excellent character and was highly respected in his section. He passed away in the year 1885, when eighty-one years of age, and had ever been a worthy member of the Swedish Lutheran Church. His wife still resides in Sweden, and is now in her sixty-ninth year. She is in every way a most amiable and pleasant lady, and, like her husband, has been prominently connected with the Lutheran Church all her days.

John P. Nordholm was the youngest in a large family of children, three sons and one daughter still living. He selected his wife in the person of Miss Nellic Felsenburg, a native of the Empire State, and their union was celebrated in Rockford on the 27th of October, 1891. She is a descendant of German-French ancestors and of a representative German family. Her father, Dr. Joseph Van Felsenburg, was born in Germany and educated as a physician in his native country. He was married to an Austrian lady of French ancestry. and they subsequently crossed the ocean to the United States, settling in New York City. There he practiced his profession very successfully until failing health caused him to abandon this and seek the Hot Springs of Arkansas to rebuild his shattered constitution. He was not successful and his death occurred in 1884, when in the prime of life. His wife died at the same place in 1890, when about thirty-seven years of age. Her maiden name was Fannie Rimmer. They were of the better class of German people and were educated and relined. Mrs. Nordholm's uncles and aunts were people of more than ordinary intelligence and were very prominent in Vienna, Austria, especially in educational matters. She was thoroughly educated in the convents of Cleveland and Cincinnati, Ohio, also of St. Louis, and has many brilliant attainments, being particularly good in art. Mr. Nordholm is a member of the Second Congregational Church and the Young Men's Christian Association, being a member of the financial board in the latter.

RANK G. STIBB, Government store-keeper and gauger for the city of Rockford, received his appointment to this responsible position in July, 1889, and was assigned to duty on the 1st of August of the same year. He had been connected with the city in other capacities previous to this, having been appointed East Side Street Commissioner in 1885 by (then) Mayor Taggart, and held that position and discharged the duties in a very satisfactory manner for two years. He has been an active worker for the principles of the Republican party, and is prominently identified with all enterprises of a laudable nature. He is a live, public-spirited citizen and is likely to make his presence felt in the near future.

He was born in Rockford on the 22d of May, 1856, and, as a consequence, his inclinations naturally tend toward the advancement and progress of his native town. He received a practical education and yet he is a self-educated and self-made man. Skilled as a mechanic and brick-layer, he has met with much more than the average amount of success and has accumulated considerable wealth. He owns some valuable property on Kishwaukee Street, about one hundred and seventyone feet, and about two hundred feet on May Street, making him a fine triangle block which is steadily increasing in value. He has lived at No.

311, on his property, and has erected three business houses and a residence on this fine block. He built one house himself, being an advanced and progressive architect and a student and patron of the Scientific American, Architects' and Builders' Edition.

His father, John Stibb (whose Swedish name was Larson), was a native of Oster Gothland, born April 30, 1815, and was taught the stonemason trade in youth. After reaching mature years, he wedded Miss C. Al, a native of Smoland Province, who was reared there by good Swedish parents. After the birth of two children, one of whom died in Sweden, and the other shortly after reaching America, Mr. and Mrs. Stibb took passage with their remaining child on a vessel, the "Hofland," at Gottenburg, and reached Boston, Mass., on the 10th of September, 1851, after seven weeks on the briny deep. On the 19th of that month, they reached the city of Rockford and this, from that time forward, became their permanent home. In this city the upright, honorable and esteemed citizen, John Stibb, passed away on the 11th of December, 1886. He followed his trade in this city and was accounted a skillful and reliable workman. His wife preceded him to the grave, having died on the 15th of December, the year previous. They were worthy people in every respect and were among the organizers of the First Swedish Church of Rockford, being members in good standing until the last. Mr. Stibb had been a stanch Republican and had taken out his naturalization papers immediately after his five years had expired and became a thorough American citizen. He was of much assistance to others who wished to secure their naturalization papers.

Mr. Frank G. Stibb selected for his life companion Miss Lena Peterson, and their union was solemnized in Rockford. She was born in Skane Province, Sweden, July 17, 1858, to the union of Nels and Sissa (Johnson) Peterson, natives of Sweden, who were reared and married in that country. After the birth of four children, or in 1866, Mr. and Mrs. Peterson took passage on a steamer for the American coast. After landing they came immediately to Rockford where the parents reside at the present time. The father is a mechanic and is working in the Forest City Furniture Factory. He and his estimable wife are sixty-two and fifty-eight years of age respectively. Both are devout members of the First Lutheran Church. Mr. Peterson is a Republican in politics, and is an honest, hardworking man. They are the parents of four children, all of whom are living. The eldest, Nels Peterson, is a molder by trade, and is a resident of Chicago. He married a Miss Hanson. The third child, Chestie, is at home and the youngest, Mary, lives in Chicago.

The original of this sketch is Secretary and Treasurer of the Scandinavian Cemetery Association, of which he was one of the organizers, and he is a director in the Union Grocery Company and the Swedish Mutual Fire Insurance Co. Soially, he is a member of the Unity Legion, No. 12, a Master Mason, Rockford Lodge No. 102, Scandia Lodge A. O. U. W., No. 54, the Odd Fellows' Society, and Social Lodge No. 140, Select Knights of America. Mr. Stibb and wife attend the First Congregational Church and are representative citizens. They have an interesting family of three children: May F., Harry T. and Lillie M. Mr. Stibb and his son, Harry T., are the only members of his father's family now living.

USEBIA N. HUNTLEY, M. D., is one of the successful physicians and surgeons of Rockford, where she has engaged in practice since 1873. She is a native of Herkimer County, N. Y., and a daughter of the Rev. Lyman Huntley, who for some years was a Baptist minister, but failing health caused him to withdraw from that work, and he engaged as a harness dealer in South Columbia, N. Y. He was born in Otsego County, that State, and is still living at the advanced age of eighty-five years, retaining his mental faculties to a good degree. His life has been well and worthily spent, and he has the respect of all who know him. He is an own cousin of Lydia Huntley Sigourney, the poetess.

The Rev. Mr. Huntley married Miss Elizabeth Tisdale, who was born and reared in South Columbia, N. Y., and died in that place at the age of seventy-five years. Like her husband, she was a life-long member of the Baptist Church. The Huntley family is of English origin and its people were all Baptists in religious belief, while the Tisdales were of Protestant Irish ancestry. Four sons of the Huntley family wore the blue during the late war. L. C. was killed at Ream's Station, Va., near Richmond, while on skirmish duty, May 16, 1865. J. W. died of consumption in the field hospital of Bowling Green, Ky., after two years of service. Hon. S. F. is a graduate of Cornell University, and is now a missionary of the Congregational Church, located in Alexandria, S. Dak. He has been a member of both the Constitutional Conventions of South Dakota and its first State Senate. His wife, whose maiden name was Abi Townsend, is also a minister of the Congregational Church and an ex-professor of the eollege in Union Springs, N. Y. The fourth son who followed the old flag was D. T., who married Annie Fosket, and is now living a retired life in Caldwell, Sumner County, Kan. Another brother of the Doctor is L. D., who wedded Maggie M. Davis, of the Empire State, and is now a harness-maker and dealer in South Columbia, N. Y. The only living daughter of the family, with the exception of our subject, is J. Cyrene, wife of O. P. Ayres, who is living a retired life in South Columbia, N. Y. E. E. Huntley, the eldest daughter, died of consumption at Miller's Mills, N. Y., in 1857. The youngest daughter, Mrs. L. A. McCutchen, wife of J. W. McCutchen, died at Norris, Ill., of pneumonia, in 1870.

After acquiring her literary education, which was completed in Whitestown Seminary, of Oncida County, N. Y., Dr. Huntley engaged in teaching school, and was thus employed in Fulton County, Ill., for about thirteen years, and for three years of that time was a teacher in the High School of Canton, Ill., for which responsible position she was fully prepared by her splendid education. The fact that she holds a State certificate fully attests her qualifications. At length, determined to study medicine and engage in its practice as a life work, she entered the medical department of the State University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, and later did clinical work in the hospitals at Chicago for three months.

Dr. Huntley came to Rockford in 1873, and has an office at No. 204 North First Street. She has built up a large and constantly growing practice. From her mother she inherited great energy and the determination to earry out whatever she undertook, so that she has been very successful, and her reputation as a physician and surgeon might well be envied by those who have longer followed this work. She makes a specialty of the diseases of women and children, and her patrons are from among the best class of people. She is a lady of truly progressive spirit, and has made many warm friends in Rockford. Her large practice has proved remunerative, and she is now the owner of considerable real estate. In religious belief, she is a Presbyterian.

The attention of the reader is invited to the lithographic portrait of Dr. Huntley, which appears on an accompanying page.

LBERT DICKINSON, a well-known business man of Rockford, who is engaged in the laying of concrete pavement, claims New York as the State of his nativity, and was the fourth in order of birth in a family of seven children, of whom he is now the only survivor. His father, Edwin Dickinson, was born near Attica, N. Y. The paternal grandfather of our subject reached the advanced age of ninety years, and his wife was ninety-two years at the time of her death. Edwin learned the trade of carriage-making and blacksmithing, and went to Oneida County, N. Y., where, being a skilled workman, he secured a good position in the New York Mills of that county. He there married Sarah Van Buren, who was born in Kinderhook, and was a daughter of Ephraim Van Buren, an own cousin of President Van Buren. The family had been slave holders in the Empire State in an early day.

After the birth of some of their children, Edwin Dickinson and his wife left Oncida County, N. Y., and removed with their family to Calhoun County. Mich., making the trip overland with teams in 1812. The father there secured some Government land in the oak opening, not far from Battle Creek, where he developed a farm, making it his home until 1818, when, having arranged to go into the carriage-making business in Battle Creek, he removed his family to that city, where he died a few months later in the autumn of that year. He was then forty-four years of age. In politics, he was a Whig; socially, he was a Mason, and in religious belief, was a Presbyterian. He was known as a worthy and upright man, highly respected for his excellencies of character. His wife long survived him, passing away in 1880, at the age of seventy-three years.

Our subject was quite young when his parents removed to Michigan. In that State, he was reared to manhood, his boyhood days being passed in the usual manner of farmer lads, while in the public schools his education was acquired. At Three Rivers, Mich., he married Miss Martha R. King, a native of that place, where her people had located in a very early day. Her father, Benjamin King, was born in New York and died in Three Rivers, at about the age of seventy-five. He married Miss Wetturbee, mother of Mrs. Dickinson, and after her death was again married, his second wife also being deceased. Mrs. Dickinson was one of eight children. She is an intelligent and cultured lady, and has proved a true helpmate to her husband. Their union has been blessed with two children: S. Isabella and Floyd E.

During the late war, Mr. Dickinson enlisted in the Michigan Battalion of Merrill Horse, which after some months became known as the Second Missouri Cavalry. With his command he participated in the battles of Memphis, Kirksville and Moore's Mills, together with minor engagements, and later went with the division that captured Little Rock, and raided the State of Arkansas. After three years of faithful service, he was honorably discharged in the fall of 1864. He saw much hard fighting, and had many narrow escapes. He was a few times hit by spent balls, but was never disabled, and it was very seldom that he did not report for duty.

On the 28th of June, 1882, Mr. Dickinson left Battle Creek, Mich., and in company with his family came to Rockford, where he has been engaged in business in the line above mentioned. The pavement known as the Staples cement pavement, which was invented by Mr. Staples, who is yet a resident of Battle Creek, was brought to this city by our subject, and has come into general use. Its value has been thoroughly tested, and it is found to be a reliable and lasting paving. His work being thus proven, he has received a liberal patronage, and is carrying on a successful business. An enterprising and industrious man, he well deserves the prosperity which has attended his efforts.

EORGE L. LUCE. Notwithstanding the rapid growth of the agricultural affairs of the county in the last few years, and the progressive ideas advanced, Mr. Luce has kept thoroughly apace with the times and is considered one of the leading farmers of the county. He is a self-made man, and principally self-educated, and all his accumulations are the result of honest work and unflagging industry.

Our subject first saw the light of day in Tolland Township, Tolland County. Conn., June 29, 1819, and his parents, Israel and Julietta G. (Ramsey) Luce, were also natives of that county and township. The father was born on the 14th of January, 1781, and died in his native county on the 23d of August, 1878. He was one of three children born to Joseph and Priscilla (Loomis) Luce, the former an Englishman, who came to this country with two brothers. One settled in Vermont. another settled in the Far West, and Joseph located in Connecticut, where his son, Israel, and his grandson, George L., were born. He died in Tolland Township, Tolland County, of that State, when a very aged man. He served five years in the Revolutionary War and was an officer in the same. Many of our subject's ancestors were professional men and prominent on land and sea. Joseph Luce's wife, Priscilla (Loomis) Luce, was born in Connecticut and there passed her entire life. The mother of our subject was born in Providence, R. I., and was the daughter of William Ramsey, a native of South Carolina, who followed the seas from early boyhood and became captain of a vessel. Later in life, he abandoned the sea and engaged in the wholesale grocery business. He died near Providence, R. I., from the effects of a sabre thrust received in a battle near Newport, when about seventy years of age. He was in the French Revolution. His wife was born near Providence, R. I., and there passed away when quite an old lady. Her maiden name was Dyer.

Our subject is one of five children, three sons and two daughters, four of whom are now living. and he remained with his parents until twentytwo years of age. From there he went to Alabama and worked at the carpenter's trade for a year or two, and then entered a machine-shop, where he continued for about five years. Later. he went to Mobile, thence to New Orleans, and then came up the Mississippi River to Galena, Ili. After remaining there a short time, he went by stage to DeKalb County, this State, and there bought two hundred acres of wild land. He subsequently invested in six hundred acres more, but he finally disposed of all his DeKalb County property. He had but a few dollars when he came to this State, and his nearest market was Chicago, where he could have purchased many acres of land for a mere song. However, by his untiring industry and excellent management, he has accumulated a comfortable competency and has little to regret in the past.

Mr. Luce selected his wife in the person of Miss Harriet Russell, a native of Ross County, Ohio, and their nuptials were celebrated on the 6th of January, 1853. She was one of thirteen children born to Laurence and Mary (Huff) Russell, but only five of these children are now living. Her father, Laurence, was a native of Virginia, but moved to Illinois, and died in DeKalb County, when seventy-three years of age. His wife was born in Virginia and died in DeKalb County, Ill., when seventy-seven years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Luce's union has been blessed by the birth of three sons, who are as follows: George E., born in DeKalb County, Ill., October 28, 1853, married Miss Ella Ward, and is the father of three children, a son and two daughters; Laurence R., born in DeKalb County, October 2, 1856, married Miss Ella Pritchard, and is the father of four children, a son and three daughters; and Osear L., born in Golden City, Colo., on the 21st of September, 1862.

In 1859, our subject and family went to Colorado and he was there engaged in mining and farming, and also worked some at the earpenter's trade for about ten years. He resided for some time at Camp Collins, Larimer County, and while there held the office of Justice of the Peace. From Colorado, Mr. Luce went to Olathe, Johnson County, Kan., and purchased a farm, but two years later he sold part of this farm, about two hundred and fifty acres, and one of his sons is residing on the remainder at the present time. In 1873, our subject came to Boone County and is now a resident of Belvidere, being practically retired. He owns village property in Olathe, Kan., also some of the finest city property in Belvidere, and other property in the county. Wherever he has resided, Mr. Luce has held local position and has discharged the duties of the same in a most creditable and efficient manner. Mr. and Mrs. Luce have been members of the Methodist Church for years and contribute liberally to all worthy movements. Mr. Luce first voted for a Democratic President, but since the formation of the Republican party he has advocated its principles.

ILLIAM J. CLEVELAND. The name which stands at the head of this biographical outline will be at once recognized as belonging to one of the most energetic agriculturists and business men in Seward Township, Winnebago County. He has one of the finest farms in Northern Illinois, in which region be commenced building his fortune and where he has gained a competence. Aside from farming, he is interested in the elevator and creamery at Seward, and his enterprise and ability in managing affairs have brought him success.

Born in Hebron, Washington County, N. Y., July 21, 1829, our subject is a son of Job W. and Almira Cleveland, the former of whom was born in the above-named State and town, August 7, 1796. The paternal grandfather of our subject also bore the name of Job and was born in 1757 in New York and died in Washington County. He was the father of eleven children, and, like all our subject's ancestors, was a farmer.

The father of our subject died July 7, 1870, in Wethersfield, Wyoming County, N. Y. His wife, Almira Fenton, was a native of Dorset, Vt., her birth occurring November 12, 1799; she died in Wethersfield on her eighty-seventh birthday. Her parents were also natives of the Green Mountain State and departed this life in Genesee County, N. Y., when very old people. The Fentons were mechanics and pioneers of Vermont, where they were recognized as honorable and Grandfather Fenton drew a upright citizens. pension from the Government, having been a soldier in the War of 1812, in which conflict the father of our subject was also a participant, and likewise drew a pension.

William J. Cleveland came to this county when twenty-two years of age and purchasing land in Seward Township, lived there for four years, when he sold his property to his brother S. H. and bought his present farm of two hundred acres, a portion of which is included in the town site of Seward. By persistent industry and enterprise, he placed his land under an excellent state of cultivation, erecting thereon all the needful buildings, and by properly cultivating the soil realizes handsome returns.

The lady to whom our subject was married July 3, 1851, was Miss Jane Curtis, whose birth occurred October 23, 1831, in Wethersfield, Wyoming County, N. Y. She was a daughter of Francis and Sylvia Curtis, natives of New York. The mother is at present living in Michigan, in which State the father died in 1860. Mrs. Cleveland was a member of a family which included eleven children, all of whom are living with one exception. Mr. Cleveland has five brothers and two sisters living.

Of the seven children born to our subject and his wife, six are living, namely: Albert W., born in Wethersfield, N. Y., August 27, 1852, is married and has four children; Maria A., a native of this county, was born August 26, 1854; Adela E., also a native of this county, was born June 10, 1857, and is married and has had five children, one of whom is deceased; Herbert W., a native of this county, was born August 8, 1860, is married and the father of three children; Clara R. was born on the 22d of May, 1864, is married, has one child, and resides in lowa; Wilson J. was born July 3, 1876, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of our subject's marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland are members of the Methedist Episcopal Church, in which denomination our subject has been Deacon for the past twenty years. He is a believer in the principles embodied in the Republican platform, and in all national elections supports it with his vote. His fellow-citizens, marking his ability in carrying on his own affairs, have called upon him to aid in the management of public business, he having filled many positions of trust and responsibility.

ANIEL DOW. The thrilling scenes through which the pioneers passed in the settlement of this portion of the State, must ever awaken emotions of warmest regard for them. To pave the way for those who followed, and to make settlement in the West a pleasure, they stemmed the floodtide wave of civilization, they endured all, they suffered all. Mr. Dow is one of those few spirits who now survive; many of them have passed away full of years and honor, leaving their children and children's children and strangers to succeed them and enjoy the fruits of their toil, privations and the savings of their long and eventful lives.

Daniel Dow, whose portrait accompanies this life sketch, was born in Perthshire, Scotland, and is a son of Alexander Dow, who was a native of the same parish. The latter-named gentleman was always engaged in agricultural pursuits, and spent his entire life in his native land. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Ann McEwen. She was a native of the same shire as was her husband and spent her entire life in Scotland. To them were born eight children, namely: John, Thomas, Jane, Alexander, Charles, Catherine, Daniel and Neal. Charles, Daniel and Catherine were the only members of the family who came to America, all settling in Winnebago County. Catherine became the wife of Robert Dow, who was also a native of Scotland.

Having heard wonderful accounts of the New World, the subject of this sketch, before reaching his twelfth year, made up his mind to come to this country. Before attaining his majority, he left the parental roof, and, going to Liverpool. took passage on a sailer, and after a voyage of seven weeks and four days, landed in New York. Having friends in that State, he spent a twelvemonth there, and in 1838 came to Illinois, via the Erie Canal to Buffalo, and thence by way of the Lakes to Chicago, which was then but a hamlet. He found business very dull there and soon after visited Peoria. He returned, however, to Chicago, where he arrived with but twenty-five cents in his pocket. He was fortunate in obtaining a situation in a general store, but as fever and ague were very prevalent in Chicago at that time, and as he was himself in poor health, in 1839 he determined to return to Scotland.

On informing his employer of his intentions, the latter tried to induce him to remain, but Mr. Dow was inflexible and a settlement was made. His employer was to be at the store the next morning to pay him the remainder of his earnings and bid him a farewell. However, he failed to keep the appointment and did not arrive until after the boat was gone. It being the last boat which left Chicago that fall, and as there was no railroad, young Dow returned to his position as clerk in the store. He occupied that position until 1841, which was the date of his arrival in Rockford, at that time a place of but a few hundred people. The surrounding country was very sparsely settled, deer, wolves and other wild game being very plentiful, and the land which was not yet opened up was owned by the Government,

On making his home in this now prosperous city, Mr. Dow established himself in business by opening a boot and shoe store, and in a short time put in a stock of general merchandise, buying his goods at St. Louis, Cincinnati and New York. His first trip to St. Louis was made with teams to Galena, thence by the Mississippi River to his destination. In later years he went by the way of Peru. He was very successful in business, and was prompt in meeting his obligations, never having to be sued or even dunned. He continued actively engaged as a merchant until 1859, when, on account of ill-health, he disposed of his business and crossed the ocean to visit relatives and friends in his old home. Remaining there for six months, he again came to Rockford and a short time after started for California, leaving New York and landing in San Francisco after being out thirtyfive days. He traveled quite extensively in the Golden State and then went to Oregon, where he visited the principal points of interest, and returned home via Panama to Aspinwall, and thence to New York. He then commenced dealing in grain in Rockford, and from that time has operated more or less on the Chicago Board of Trade.

A man of decided ability and genial temperament, Mr. Dow is very popular with his fellow-citizens. For six years he served as Alderman of the Third Ward, and upon retiring from the office received a gold-headed cane, upon which was the following inscription: "D. Dow, Alderman Third Ward, Rockford, from his constituents." In social life he is very entertaining, and is well calculated to aid in the building up of a new country, being energetic, affable and kind-hearted. As a splendid example of what may be accomplished by an energetic, determined and economical man, we point with pride and pleasure to Daniel Dow.

HOMAS DUNKLEY. Among the popular citizens of the village of Winnebago is the gentleman whose name introduces this biographical notice and who, since first he settled in Winnebago County, has been closely identified with its progress along the lines of agricultural, religious and educational growth. He inherits the sturdy qualities of his English forefathers and he himself is a native of England, born in Northamptonshire, January 14, 1818.

The father of our subject, Joseph Dunkley, was born in the same shire in which his son first saw the light, and was there reared to farming pursuits, in which occupation he spent his entire life in the shire of his birth. His wife, whose manden name was Sarah Cooper, was born in Northamptonshire, England, and became the mother of five children: William, Janet, Frances, Elizabeth and Thomas. The last-named was reared in the town of Chapel, Brampton, and entered the employ of Lord Spencer at an early age, remaining with him until his death.

The next employment of Mr. Dunkley was at the trade of a butcher, in which he was associated with his father, and he was also the proprietor of an inn and engaged in farming. In 1849, having resolved to seek a home in America, he took passage, June 14, at London on the sailing-vessel "City of Devonshire," and landed in New York after a voyage of nearly six weeks. He was accompanied by his wife and two children, and proceeded at once after landing to Illinois, via the Hudson River to Albany, thence by railroad to Buffalo, and from there on the Lakes to Chicago, and thence with a team to Rockford. The roads were very bad and the journey from Chicago required almost a week.

After settling in Winnebago County, Mr. Dunkley worked at various kinds of employment for one and one half years in Rockford, then feeling that it was time to secure a home for his family, purchased eighty aeres of fine prairie land in what is now Seward Township, paying $1.25 per acre. There was plenty more good land in the vicinity for sale at the same price, but he thought it would not all be taken up in his day and so did not buy for some time, and he paid $30 an acre for the first he bought after his original purchase.

On his new farm Mr. Dunkley first built a frame house, 12x18 feet in dimensions, which the family occupied until 1861, when he built a commodious, substantial, stone residence. As a farmer he was successful and purchased other land at different times until he became the owner of two hundred and forty acres of well-improved land, and still owns two hundred acres, but has disposed of the other property. He occupied the farm and engaged in actively tilling the soil until 1879, when he built the residence he has since occupied in the village of Winnebago. June 22, 1816, Mr. Dunkley was married, in St. George's Church, Hanover Square, London, to Miss Mary A. Withers, who was also of English birth, and born July 7, 1818. For more than thirty-six years the worthy couple lived together in happiness, sharing their joys and working for the accumulation of a competency and the training of their children, until October 4, 1882, when the beloved wife and mother passed from earth. She was a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church, to which Mr. Dunkley also belongs. They became the parents of eight children who now survive, with one exception, namely: Thomas W., Elizabeth, Joseph, Edward, John, William, George, who died March 2, 1892, and Lillie. Politically, Mr. Dunkley adheres to the principles of the Democratic party, and has always contributed his influence toward those measures which will benefit the community.

OHN SMITH, a citizen of thorough integrity, enterprise and intelligence, is highly prized in Winnebago County as one of the early settlers in Harlem Township. Born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, July 22, 1826, he is the son of Daniel and Mary (Montgomery) Smith. He attended the parish schools until fifteen years of age, then assisted his father on the farm until accompanying his parents to America in 1842. After the death of the father, our subject and his brothers worked together, and, as they were all very industrious, made considerable money, which they invested in lands, until they owned upwards of a section.

For many years after locating in this county, there were no railroads, all the grain being hauled to the Chicago market with ox and horse teams, our subject making twenty-five trips to that city in one year. He relates that at one time he drove in with a load of beef, and after selling all but one quarter, drove all over the city to find a customer for that. In 1852, the brothers divided their property, our subject locating upon the farm where he now resides. At that time the land was heavily timbered, but Mr. Smith set industriously to work to clear it, erecting buildings in accordance with his means. His frame house was 16x21 feet in dimensions and one story in height. A few years later he erected a large frame barn with stone basement, which was replaced by a larger one in 1873. A commodious frame house was built in 1868, and is now occupied by our subject's son James, our subject residing in a beautiful dwelling, into which the family moved in 1892.

The estate of our subject includes two hundred and forty acres in one body, besides which he owns sixty acres of pasture and timber land. The buildings, which are neat and substantial, are located on a rise of ground commanding a fine view of the surrounding country. December 12, 1852, Miss Elizabeth Montgomery, who was born in Kintyre, Scotland, was united in marriage with our subject. Mrs. Smith was a daughter of James and Jane (Caldwell) Montgomery, pioneers of Harlem Township. The five children comprising the family of our subject and his wife are: Daniel M., Jane, Flora, James M. and Mary E. Daniel married Catherine Brown and has one son, Charles; Jane is Mrs. James S. Reid, of Harlem Township, and has four children: Russel, Lulu, Howie and Mary I.; James married Mary Greenlee and is residing on the old homestead. The family of our subject are all members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, and, in politics, our subject is a member of the Republican party.

ARL J. SWENSON, a stockholder and Director and the Superintendent of the Skandia Furniture Company of Rockford, has been connected with this enterprise since the organization of the company, in February, 1889. The factory is located on North Second Street, on the east bank of Rock River, and business was begun in September of the year above mentioned. Employment has been continuously furnished to one hundred and fifty men, of whom Mr. Swenson has had the superintendency during the entire operation of the factory.

Our subject was born not far from Gottenburg,

Sweden, on the 11th of December, 1856, and there resided until fifteen years of age, when he began life for himself, since which time he has been dependent upon his own resources. Going to the city near his home, he there learned the cabinetmaker's trade, after which he crossed the Atlantic to America in 1879, following his brother E. M Swenson, who had previously emigrated to this country. He is now married and follows farming near Waterville, Minn. He also had one brother, Albin, who came to this country in 1880, and died in Rockford in 1882, and a brother August and sister Josephine, who came in 1881. This last brother is a cabinet-maker and is employed by the Skandia Furniture Company; the sister is the wife of E. A. Norrman, of the firm of Ullmark & Norrman, tinners. The parents came afterward to the United States, the year 1882 witnessing their arrival, since which time they have made their home in Rockford. The father, Swen Swenson, is a successful cabinet-maker, employed by the Rockford Co-operative Furniture Company.

The marriage of our subject was celebrated in this city, the lady of his choice being Miss Alma C. Olson, who was born in Sweden, on the 17th of August, 1857, and crossed the water in 1885, since which time her home has been in Rockford. Her mother died in Sweden, but her father, Olof Johnson, is now a resident of Rockford and a cabinet-maker, engaged with the Skandia Furniture Company. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Swenson has been blessed with two children: Thorborg and Carl E.

In connection with his other business interests, Mr. Swenson was one of the original stockholders in the Co-operative Furniture Company, and was the first eabinet-maker to draw a plane in its shops. He was also its Superintendent for three years, after working as a common employe for seven years. He was also employed for a time in the Forest City Furniture Factory and since 1889, as before stated, has been Superintendent of the Skandia Furniture Company. He has lived a busy and useful life, performing each task faithfully and well, and thus his merit has won him promotion. He is also a valued citizen of the community, interested in everything pertaining to the general welfare, and is of a progressive spirit. In this community he has made many friends, who esteem him highly for his sterling worth, and he is well deserving of representation in the history of his adopted county.

OHN A. BRANDSTROM, who is engaged in the boot and shoe business at No. 630 Seventh Street, Rockford, claims Sweden as the land of his nativity. He was born on the 10th of September. 1861, and is a son of John and Mary (Peterson) Brandstrom, both of whom are still living in the Old Country and are now past the age of three-score years. With the Lutheran Church they hold membership. They had several children, those who came to this country being Charles G., who is now in business with our subject, and three sisters: Amanda, now Mrs. Borg, of this city; Hulda, now Mrs. Lindburg; and Anna, who lives with her eldest sister.

Our subject spent his boyhood days under the parental roof and when thirteen years of age began serving an apprenticeship to the trade of a shoemaker, which he has followed throughout his entire life. He was the first of his family to eross the Atlantic to seek a home in the New World. Bidding good-bye to his native land, he prepared to sail, and the month of April, 1882, witnessed his emigration to America. He came at once to the West, locating in Oregon, Ill., where he spent two years, after which he came to Rockford in 1881. He began work in this city as a shoemaker until April, 1889, when he established his present store at No. 630 Seventh Street. He occupies a store-room, 10x50 feet, and has it well stocked with a good grade of boots and shoes.

A marriage ceremony performed in Rockford on the 28th of October, 1884, united the destinies of Mr. Brandstrom and Miss Gustava Anderson, who is a native of the same province of Sweden as her husband. Her father was a Swedish soldier and died in that country in the prime of life. Her mother is still living in Sweden and has passed her sixtieth birthday. She is a member of the Lutheran Church, to which her husband also belonged. In the family was one son, who resides in this country; August, a farmer living in Ogle County, and a sister, Matilda, makes her home in Rockford.

Three children grace the union of Mr. and Mrs. Brandstrom, a son and two daughters: Ellen T., C. J. Henry and Esther A. The parents both belong to the Swedish Lutheran Church, and in politics our subject is an independent Republican. Since he established business in 1889, he has built up a good trade and is now enjoying a well-deserved patronage. He is recognized as one of the successful Swedish merchants of the city and ranks deservedly high in business circles. In connection with his boot and shoe store, he is interested in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, which has a capital of $200,000, owning five shares of stock in the same.

ON. JOHN J. FOOTE. To be descended from ancestors whose names are inseparably associated with the annals of our country, is an honor in which one may take just pride, but it is equally gratifying to the biographical writer to record the deeds of those who, through long and honorable carcers, have preserved untarnished the good name they bear and have even added lustre to the ancestral history.

It is therefore a pleasure to record the life sketch and present the portrait of Hon. J. J. Foote, of Belvidere, for the benefit of this and coming generations. He was born in Hamilton, Madison County, N. Y., February 11, 1816, and is the son of John Foote, a native of Connecticut. The paternal grandfather, Ilon. Isaac Foote, was born in Colchester, Conn., January 4, 1745, and in 1776 settled in Stafford, the same State. In 1779, he was appointed Justice of the Peace, and was frequently elected to represent the district in the State Legislature. When the Constitution of the United States was drawn, he was chosen delegate to represent the town in the general convention appointed to canvass the Constitution in order for adoption, and it was unanimously adopted by the convention.

In 1795, Grandfather Foote removed West as far as Smyrna, in that part of Herkimer County now included in Chenango County, N. Y. Three years after settling there, he was elected to the State Legislature, in which position he was instrumental in securing the organization of the county of Chenango. He served with honor as the first Judge of the Court of Common Pleas and General Sessions. In 1800, he was elected Senator and occupied that honorable office for four years. In 1806, he resigned the position of Judge and retired from public life. His death occurred in Smyrna, February 26, 1842, when he had reached the venerable age of ninety-seven. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Kellogg.

The father of our subject was educated at Hamilton College, Clinton, Oneida County, N. Y., and studied law with Judge Hubbard, of Hamilton. In 1813, he was admitted to the Bar and practiced in the district and United States courts, becoming eminent as a counselor and a solicitor in chancery He was always a total abstainer and a great advocate of temperance. At the age of ninety-one years, he delivered an able address which was printed and had a large circulation. He was a charter member of the Congregational Church at Hamilton and served as Deacon and Clerk, remaining a faithful Christian until his death in July, 1884. He was first married, January 12, 1812, to Mary B. Johnson, the mother of our subject, who was born in New Canaan, Columbia County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Dr. Johnson.

In his boyhood days, our subject attended school until he was eleven years old, when he commenced to learn the drug and medicine trade, but attended Hamilton Academy during the winter seasons until sixteen. After that, he gave his time to business but devoted all his leisure hours to study until he had completed his education. The degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him by Madison (now Colgate) University. He engaged in the drug business at Hamilton until failing health compelled him to seek rest from business cares, when he came to Belvidere and located on a farm which he owned near the city. In 1883, he moved to the city of Belvidere, where he now lives retired.

The marriage of Mr. Foote in 1839 united him with Miss Mary, daughter of Amos and Mary (Owen) Crocker, and a native of Lebanon, N. Y. They have three children living, namely: Mary Annette, wife of Enos Clark, of Kirkwood, Mo.; John Crocker and Harriet, who reside in Belvidere.

In polities, Mr. Foote was formerly a Whig and while a member of that party was elected Supervisor of the town of Hamilton, Madison County, N. Y., and also served as Chairman of the County Board of Supervisors. At the time of the formation of the Republican party, he entered its ranks. In 1857, he was elected to the State Senate, representing the counties of Madison, Chenango, and Cortland, and introduced into the Senate the famous Personal Liberty Bill. He was well acquainted and in perfect accord with the leaders and stood high in the councils of his party. In 1860, he was Presidential Elector, representing Madison and Oswego Counties. Since coming to Illinois, he has twice been elected President of the Boone County Agricultural Society, for five or six years has represented Belvidere on the County Board of Supervisors and served as Chairman of the Board.

In 1873, Mr. Foote was invited to New York by Postmaster James to accept a position in the postoffice. There had been numerous defalcations previously and something had to be done to check it. He organized the Auditor's Department of that office, which was the first post-office in the United States to have such a department, and was acting Postmaster when Mr. James was absent. The duties pertaining to the office of Auditor are as follows: accounting with the post-office department, supervision of the cashier and money-order department, receipt and expenditures of all moneys, supervision of the unpaid postage department, collection of newspaper postage, and of quarterly rates, supervision of the repair of buildings, pouches and sacks, and supervision of the different stations and correspondence. He was Auditor of the Custodian Department, having charge of public buildings, and was very successful in the position, which he held three years, resigning in 1876, because of failing health. The rules and regulations he established for the reorganization of the New York post-office were introduced into many postoffices of the large cities by Gen. M. La Rue Harrison, of Washington, D. C., so that the reforms instituted in New York were not confined to that city.

Gen. Harrison was connected with the money order service at Washington, his duties calling him to large cities throughout the United States, reorganizing and reforming the service. After Mr. Foote had reorganized the postoffice at New York and provided "rules and regulations," which were printed in pamphlet form, the General adopted them as his guide. Referring to this in one of his letters to Mr. Foote, he says: "I have told postoffice men over and over again, that to you more than to all others combined the New York office owes its present state of efficiency. I am on the record and ready to fight for it." Being a business man, the reforms which Mr. Foote instituted were based on approved "business principles," and proved most beneficial.

OHN LEACH occupies an honorable position among the pioneers of Winnebago County, and as an active, intelligent, thrifty and practical farmer, has promoted its agricultural interests, and is classed with its most successful and wealthy farmers. He is a large landowner in this section, and his residence in the county dates from 1849. His home is located on section 36, Durand Township, where rich harvests have brought him wealth, so that he is enabled to spend his declining years at ease in a home that is replete with comfort.

Like many of the prominent residents of this county, our subject was born in England, August 7, 1824, and is a son of Jonathan and Catherine (Higginbottom) Leach, also natives of Lancashire, where the father was a dyer in a woolen mill. To the parents were born a family of seven children: Anna, George, Samuel, John, Levi, and two who died in infaney. Our subject was reared in Mosley, England, and worked at the trade of a spinner in a cotton factory. He was the only one of the family to come to the New World, and, setting sail from Liverpool, November 13, 1847, landed in New York after a journey of thirty-five days on the "Sheridan." Arriving in this country, Mr. Leach went to Rhode Island, and in March, 1848, to Waltham, Mass., where he pursued his trade. The following year he came to Illinois, and being pleased with the outlook in Winnebago County, remained two months in Durand, and during the time selected the land which is his present home. Returning to the Bay State, our subject resumed work at his trade until April, 1853.

In August, 1851, Mr. Leach and Miss Elizabeth Higginbottom were united in marriage. The lady was also a native of Lancashire, England, her birth occurring April 27, 1823. She was the daughter of Harlam and Anna (Lees) Higginbottom, and accompanied her parents to the United States in 1841. Her father located in Trenton, N. J., but not being able to find work at his trade of a spinner, did manual labor. In 1842, he removed to Rhode Island, where he resided until 1848, then removed to Waltham, Mass., where he made his home until coming to Illinois in 1849. Locating in Durand Township, Mr. Higginbottom departed this life when eighty-three years of age, and his good wife when three-score years and ten.

Mrs. Leach was one in a family of seven children, five of whom grew to mature years, namely: Samuel, who resides in Norborne, Mo.; Mrs. Leach, who was the second in order of birth; Allen, who resides in Holyoke, Mass.; Hannah, who married Isaac Walker, died at Cahoos Falls, N. Y.; and Ann, Mrs. John McMann, who resides in Harrison Township, this county.

The original of this sketch made a permanent location in this county in 1853, having purchased forty-nine acres of land which bore partial improvements. He has since given his attention to farming, and is the proud possessor of three hundred and fifteen broad acres, upon which he has placed first-class improvements. He also is quite successful in stock-raising, and ranks among the progressive farmers of this section.

To Mr. and Mrs. Leach have been born eight children, four of whom are deceased. Those living are Levi, who was born August 24, 1852, and resides in Anrora, Buchanan County, Iowa; he married Hulda Felts, and is the father of four children: Mamie, Edward, Stewart and an infant.

John S., who was born August 5, 1857, married Emma Hicks, and has two children, Donald and Leonard. Allen, who was born November 2, 1861, is the husband of Emma Nelson, and makes his home in this township. Lizzie, who was born December 4, 1866, is Mrs. Edwin Barningham, and lives in Harrison Township.

In his political relations, Mr. Leach voted the Republican ticket until 1890, since which time he casts an independent ballot. He was reared in the Episcopal Church, and gives liberally of his means toward its support. The accumulation of his handsome property has been by good management in all of his enterprises, and by the assistance of a devoted and helpful wife.

EORGE GREENLEE, senior member of the firm of George Greenlee & Son, hardware merchants at Belvidere, is of Scottish birth. He was born in Kintyre, Argyleshire, January 1, 1828, and is a son of Elder John and Helen (Brown) Greenlee, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. He was a lad of only eight summers when, with his parents, he crossed the broad Atlantic to America, but he distinctly remembers many incidents of the voyage and of early pioneer life in Winnebago County, where the family settled. It was some time after they had located here before there were any schools in this part of the county. Finally, a district was organized, and all the settlers joined together, cut trees and creeted a log building, which was located about eighty rods west of the present site of the Willow Creek Church. The floor was made of slabs and the benches of the same material. There were no desks in front; holes were bored in the logs on either side of the room, in which pins were inserted, and slabs laid upon these served for the larger scholars to write on. The building was heated by a fire-place, and it was in this building that the Willow Creek Church was organized.

When very young, Mr. Greenlee commenced to assist his father with the labors of the farm, and under the parental roof he remained until his marriage, when he located on the farm which he still owns in Harlem Township. He continued to actively engage in agricultural pursuits and devote his attention to the improvement of his land until 1876, when he rented his farm and removed to Belvidere. He embarked in the hardware business in company with his brothers, John and Charles. This firm continued operations until November, 1890, when Mr. Greenlee's son succeeded to the interest of his brothers, and the firm became George Greenlee & Son. They carry a full and complete stock of goods in their line, have worked up an excellent trade and are numbered among the leading merchants of the city.

In 1857, our subject was united in marriage to Martha Greenlee, also a native of Kintyre, Scotland, and a daughter of William and Martha Greenlee. Their union has been blessed by six children, three of whom are living: George, Martha and Lizzie, who are all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Greenlee are both members of the Presbyterian Church and are well-known people of this community, held in high regard for their many excellencies of character. In politics, he is a Republican, and is a public-spirited and progressive citizen who has ever borne his part in the advancement of those enterprises calculated to benefit and improve the community.

ESTER N. GALLUP, who resides at No. @ 102 La Fayette Avenue, Rockford, is a na-Tive of Cleveland, Ohio, but was chiefly reared in Newburg, that State, where he received a practical education. His parents, Jabez and Lucy (Meech) Gallup, were natives of Connecticut and of Scotch descent. In the Nutmeg State, they were married and came at once to Cleveland, Ohio. where the mother died at the age of thirty-seven years. Mr. Gallup was a second time married and removed to Denver, Col., where he died at the age of eighty-four years. He was a skilled mechanic and architect in house and ship building. In early life, he and his wife belonged to the Presbyterian Church but afterward became Congregationalists, He was a well-informed man, unvielding in support of what he believed to be right. In politics, he was a stanch Whig and afterward a Republican, and in the War of 1812 he served his country faithfully.

At an early age, our subject began to earn his own livelihood and for nearly three years served on a boat on the Mississippi River as a freight checker. He showed decided business ability in whatever he attempted to do and his life has been one of uprightness and honor. He became connected with the early development of the country west of the Mississippi River about 1850. In 1859, he crossed the American Desert and afterward became proprietor of trains that carried all the business which was done with the Far West. He conducted, and was proprietor of, different wagon trains which ran all the way to California, Few men are better acquainted with the early history of the West than Mr. Gallup. He saw Denver, Colo., when it was only a few log cabins, a mere Indian trading-post, and visited North Platte and Kearney before they were known as towns. He became well known among the frontiersmen and was a personal friend of many of the leading pioneers. He also became acquainted with the red men and their habits, and has helped to bury many massacred by the sayages, but his own judgment and care, supplemented by undaunted bravery, made him safe from their treachery. If it were possible to relate all the experiences of Mr. Gallup in his Western life, it would fill a volume and the story would be one of thrilling interest. Circumstances led him to become connected with the railroad interests and also the stock business. He is now actively engaged in looking after his stock in Gentry County, Mo., and is the live-stock agent for the railroad companies through the West.

In St. Louis, Mo., Mr. Gallup wedded Miss Rebecca Griggs, who was born in Illinois, and is a daughter of Albert and Laura (Judd) Griggs, natives of the Empire State, and of French and New England descent, respectively. Her father died at Glenwood, Mills County, Iowa, in 1861. He was a prominent man in that county and was serving as Sheriff at the time of his death. He was a soldier during the War of 1812. In politics, he was a Whig and afterward a stanch Republican. His wife now makes her home with Mrs. Gallup at the age of seventy-seven years and is yet remarkably well preserved. In religious belief, she is a Methodist and her life has been in harmony with her profession.

Mrs. Gallup is a cultured and refined lady and has been quite prominent in temperance work in the West. She was one of the pioneer temperance workers in Iowa and is a personal friend of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gallup give their support to whatever tends to promote the moral interests of the community, are consistent members of the Baptist Church and are Prohibitionists in political sentiment. They have a pleasant home at No. 402 La Fayette Avenue, which is brightened by the presence of two children: Lulu F. and Fred. Mr. Gallup is recognized as a man of sterling worth, is true to every duty and is of a genial nature.

OHN H. LINDERMAN. This gentleman has done much to forward the business interests of Winnebago County, and as one who is disposed to support all measures tending toward the continuation of its prosperity, he is well worthy of representation in this volume. He is at present residing on a good farm in Roscoe Township, where, besides being engaged in general agriculture, he make a specialty of stock-raising, feeding the greater portion of his farm products to his animals.

A native of Steuben County, N. Y., our subject, who is the son of Henry Linderman, was born in 1828. His father was also a native of that State, where he spent the first sixty years of his life, then came West to Roseoe Township, this county, in the fall of 1854, making the journey overland with teams. His father, the grandfather of our subject. S. Linderman, also hailed from New York, and after rearing a large family died at the advanced age of one hundred years. He was a patriot in the Revolutionary War and an industrious and reliable citizen.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Mary Sebring, a native of Newfield, Tompkins County, N. Y., and the daughter of Cornelius Sebring, one of the earliest settlers of that place, whither he had removed from Pennsylvania. He was a great hunter, and as bear, deer and other wild game were plentiful, thus kept the family larder constantly supplied with wild meats. He reared a family of three sons and four daughters and died in New York at the venerable age of seventy-five years. He kept a country tavern and was thus widely and favorably known throughout that section of the State, being one of the most prominent pioneers of his day.

John H. Linderman made his advent into Illinois in 1854, at which time he was accompanied by his mother and young wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Lucy, daughter of Simeon and Mary A. (Fargo) Church. Her parents were natives of Connecticut and later removing to New York were farmers, and there the father's demise occurred; Mrs. Church is still living. The first land owned by our subject in this county was one hundred and sixty acres on section 1, sixty acres of which were cleared, and an old house and stone hog pen completed the improvements. In 1876, he erected his present commodious and substantial dwelling where were born their seven children, two of whom died in infancy. Those living are: Arthur J., Ellen J., Cora B., Owen C. and Alice E.

Although reared a Democrat, Mr. Linderman casts his vote for Republican candidates. He has never identified himself with any church, but is a liberal contributor to the support of all worthy objects and has aided in no small degree the growth and prosperity of this county.

OHN R. JEWETT. In tracing the genealogy of the Jewett family in America, we find that three brothers of that name, all blacksmiths, emigrated from Wales to this country at a period antedating the Revolution, and tradition has it that, being without means, they agreed that one should black himself as a darky, and be sold as a slave by the others. He was afterward to run away and appear in his own proper character. They did this in order to procure money to buy tools, and, after earning enough money, they paid the man back. From these brothers sprang the Jewett family now scattered over the United States. They settled in different New England States, married, and reared large families. The grandfather of our subject, Benjamin Jewett, also followed the trade over which Longfellow and Schiller have thrown a veil of romance and heroism, the blacksmith trade, and this was his chief calling during life. He was an active participant in the French War, and was in the battle of Quebec. He also served in the Revolution for seven years. He married Miss Abigail Bates, of New England, and they reared a large family. His death occurred in New England, and his wife followed him to the grave in Genesce County, N. Y., a number of years later.

The father of our subject, and the son of Benjamin Jewett, Levi Jewett, was born in Windham County, Conn., and after reaching man's estate, he married an own cousin. Six weeks after the birth of their first child (the subject of this sketch), they went to Genesee County, N. Y., making the journey of about four hundred miles through a new and wild country, with a horse-team. This young couple started out with limited means, and thought to lay the foundation for future comfort and prosperity in this heavily-wooded country. They took one hundred and twenty acres of the Holland purchase, cut the first tree on the place in 1815, and soon had a comfortable log cabin. There they delyed and toiled for seventeen years, and there six of their children were born. They then sold out and removed to Attica, then in that county, but now in Wyoming County, and as Mr. Jewett had learned the blacksmith trade of his father, he followed this for many years on the farm. Although own cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Jewett reared eight bright, healthy children. Mr. Jewett died in Wyoming County, in 1839, of consumption, when in middle life, but the remainder of the family lived to be old people, and none died of that fell disease. His wife, the mother of our subject, died there when eighty years of age, and left seven children. She had buried one daughter, Eliza Ann, Mrs. Chancey Bykard, who died when thirty years of age. Since the death of the mother, Marietta, another daughter, widow of Bissell Parker, died in middle life. The remainder are living: John R.; Harriet, the widow of a Mr. Chadwick, resides in New York; Emma, Mrs. Jacob Young, resides in Michigan; Abigail, Mrs. Wilbur Washburn, resides in Attiea, N. Y.; Joel B., a farmer of Gainesville, N. Y.; and Josiah F., a mechanic in Attiea, N. Y., and the City Marshal.

John R. Jewett, our subject, was born in Windham County, Hampton Township, Conn., August 22, 1815, and, like Tubal Cain, should have been a man of might, for he followed the family trade of blacksmithing on his father's farm in York State until twenty-two years of age, when he left the parental roof to seek his fortune in the Far West. He left Buffalo for Illinois on the 15th of May, 1838, and came by way of the Lakes to Chicago on a vessel, the old "James Madison," After reaching the last-named city, he walked to Harrison, Winnebago County, where he had an aunt living, and later engaged at his trade in Rockton, where he made the sawmill irons for three sawmills, and the wrought iron works for the Talcott gristmill. In 1839, he staked a claim of a one-half section west of the river, now the Carpenter farm, and this he sold for $150, being sick and wishing to return to the East. He was taken sick while building a cellar for Stephen Mack, the first stoned cellar in the northern part of the county, and it is in good condition at the present time.

Mr. Jewett returned in the spring of 1840, with restored health, and worked at his trade and general mechanics, having inherited a natural taste for the same from both father and mother. In 1846, he took the contract to complete the work then under process of construction by others who were taken ill, and got this double sawmill up in good shape in 1847. This mill turned out much lumber for years. In 1845, Mr. Jewett had entered eighty acres of land, part of his present home, and bought the claim for $75, walking to Dixon to pre-empt it, and in due course of time he obtained a title. In 1848, he built a sawmill on his side of the river at the dam, and ran this in connection with a broom-handle and lath mill until 1854, when he sold it to Lucian Williams. Since then Mr. Jewett has been engaged in farming, erecting his dwelling, barn, and other buildings on the place, and to the original tract has added eighty acres, making a tract of one hundred and sixty acres in all.

He was married, in this county, to Elizabeth M. Gilmour, daughter of George and Mary A. (Wolfolk) Gilmour, natives of Kentucky, in which State Mrs. Jewett was born September 4, 1831, and their nuptials were celebrated on the 22d of May, 1851. Mr. and Mrs. Jewett have buried two daughters: Clara, who died in 1873, when in her twentysecond year; and Ella, who died in 1870, when fifteen years of age. They have three sons and one daughter now living: John Regulus, a mechanic, carpenter and joiner, in Nebraska, is married and has two children; George L., a carpenter in Council Bluffs, Iowa; Robert Burns, at home, but a natural mechanic, married Miss Winnie McMahon, of Harrison, daughter of John and Ann (Higginbottom) McMahon, and they have one son, John Robert Jewett. Mr. Jewett was at one time a Whig, and later he became a Republican, but of late years he has taken very little interest in politics. In 1836, he east his first Presidential vote for William H. Harrison. He assisted in building the new church in Harrison, and although he contributes liberally to its support and to all worthy enterprises, he is not a member of any church. He has held the office of Justice of the Peace a great many times, also other minor offices, and has discharged the duties incumbent upon them in a creditable manner.

In 1843, Mr. Jewett built the first bridge across the Rock River at Rockton, and this was the first bridge across the Rock River in Hinois. The next bridge was built at Rockford, in 1845. The bridge built by Mr. Jewett was at Mark's Point, and was carried away by very high water many years later. Mr. Jewett is practically retired from active duties but looks after the farm his son R. B. is now running. Our subject has a family relic in his possession which is a well-formed little hatchet, or tomahawk, which his grandfather made and stamped his initials, B. J., upon it. He wore it in his belt at the battle of Quebec, and this relic is a sacred one in the family. Mr. and Mrs. Jewett are both enjoying excellent health, and are very proud of the five grandchildren living, especially the little baby boy at home. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Jewett was an active participant in the Revolutionary Way.

SEORGE B. MOSS is a typical Illinois citizen. He is a man of education and learning, and as such is well known all over the county. Mr. Moss was born in Boone County, Belvidere Township, Illinois, on the 25th of September, 1845, and is a son of Andrew F. and Louisa (Bristol) Moss, both natives of New York, the father born in Kingsbury, Washington County, February 27, 1817, and the mother in Cato, Cayuga County, April 21, 1810. Andrew F. Moss was one of thirteen children, all of whom grew to mature years, born to Asa and Harriet (Sherwood) Moss, who were natives respectively of Connecticut and New York, the former born March 14, 1779, and the latter September 20, 1783. They moved to Boone County, Ill., many years ago and both died here, the father April 11, 1856, and the mother, August 17, 1846.

Andrew F. Moss, father of our subject, was one of the very first settlers of Boone County, Ill., making his appearance here in 1836, and lived to see that portion of the State grow up from its infancy, to be dotted with productive farms and thriving towns. He came here with the intention of working at his trade of carpentering, and when nineteen years of age he had charge of fifty men in that business. He took up land from the Government, and resided on the same until the time of his death, on the 21st of July, 1883. He was well known all over the county, was honored by all who knew him, and was one of the many who spent the greater portion of their lives in developing the country, that their children and grandchildren might enjoy the advantages which they themselves were denied. His wife died in this county on the 15th of November, 1891. Of the six children born to this much esteemed couple, only two besides our subject are now living, a brother and sister. Our subject's great-grandfather, Sherwood, was a native of England, and settled in New England when first coming to America.

Our subject passed his boyhood and youth in this county, and received a good practical education in the Belvidere schools. He subsequently spent two years in the Eastman Business College, at Chicago, and is considered one of the best-posted men in this section. He has gathered weather reports for the Government for fifteen years, and was statistical correspondent for the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C.—He remained with his parents until about 1882, and then bought eighty-two acres of land where he now lives, and thirty acres of his father's old homstead.

He was married on the 1st of January, 1878, to Miss Lydia M. Wood, who was born in Greene County, N. Y., and their union has been blessed by the birth of one child, a son. Hollie L., who was born in this county on the 26th of November, 1879. Mr. Moss is engaged in mixed farming and is successful in this as in every other enterprise to which he turns his hand. He is a Republican in politics, as was also his father, who, however, believed in electing good men for office, regardless of politics.

HOMAS N. MILLER, A. M., M. D., who is engaged in the practice of medicine in Rockford, was born in Oneida County, N.Y., August 21, 1849, and is descended from the Pilgrim Fathers. His grandfather, Eliakim Miller, was born in the Empire State, of Massachusetts parentage. Representatives of the family served in the Revolutionary War, and the eldest son of Eliakim was a soldier of the War of 1812. The grandfather spent his entire life as a farmer, and died in Madison County, N. Y., when about eighty years of age. His wife also reached an advanced age. The older members of the Miller family were members of the Congregational Church, and its male representatives were all Whigs.

Amos Miller, father of our subject, was born in Madison County, N. Y., and in an early day emigrated to Illinois, settling upon an unbroken farm of two hundred acres in Winnebago County. There he engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred in 1873. His wife bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Tyggert. She too was a native of Madison County, and proved a faithful helpmate to her husband, her efforts being largely instrumental in securing the success which he achieved. Mrs. Miller is still living on the old homestead in Winnebago Township, at the age of eighty-three years, and is yet remarkably well pre-With the Congregational Church she holds membership and to that society Mr. Miller also belonged. Her family is noted for longevity. Her father, David Tyggert, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, died in Madison County, N. Y., at the age of ninety-two years, and his wife was ninety-three years of age at the time of her death.

Our subject is one of a family of seven sons and one daughter, and with the exception of one son and the daughter, all are yet living and are married. Three sons are farmers of Winnebago Township; Josiah is an attorney of Springfield, Mo.; and Richard is a Congregational clergyman of Milton, Wis.

Dr. Miller was only five years of age when the family came to the West, and upon his father's farm in Winnebago Township the days of his boyhood and youth were passed. He entered Beloit College, from which he was graduated with the Class of '73, after which he returned to the farm, remaining at home for a few years. At length he determined to make the practice of medicine his life work and became a student under Dr. Clinton Helm. Later, he entered the Chicago Medical College, from which he was graduated in the Class of '80. He at once established practice in Winnebago, and after ten years came to Rockford, where he has since resided. He is now enjoying a good practice, which is constantly increasing and already he has a reputation of which an older practitioner might well be proud.

The Doctor was joined in wedlock in this county with Miss Arvilla A. Lane, who was born in Wisconsin on the 26th of February, 1852, and is a daughter of William II. and Emily N. (Weare) Lane. Her parents were natives of Maine, and after their marriage came to the West, locating in Wisconsin, whence they removed to Winnebago County in 1855, locating on an unbroken tract of land in Winnebago Township. It is now a highly improved farm, owing to the untiring efforts of Mr. Lane, who still resides there at the age of seventy years. His wife died in 1875, when past the age of lifty years. Both were members of the Congregational Church. Mrs. Miller was reared under the parental roof, was graduated from the Winnebago High School and afterward engaged as a teacher. She is a cultured and intelligent lady and has many friends throughout this community.

C. F. Anderson

Three children graced the union of the Doctor and his wife, but Mary E. died at the age of two and a half years. The living are Edith M. and Bertha A. With the First Presbyterian Church the parents hold membership. The Doctor is a stalwart supporter of the Prohibition party and is a warm friend to all enterprises calculated to promote the moral and educational interests of the city. He is recognized as a valued citizen as well as a skilled physician, and his aid is never withheld from anything calculated to promote the general welfare of his adopted county.

HARLES F. ANDERSON. President of the Union Furniture Company of Rockford, is one of the leading business men of the city, being connected with many of its most important industries. His portrait is shown on the opposite page and his life record is as follows: He was born in Sweden, April 16, 1840, and is a son of Andrew and Christian Nelson. His father, who is now about eighty years of age, has been a life-long physician and is well known in the community where he resides. Both he and his wife are adherents of the Lutheran Church. Three brothers of the family besides our subject came to this country: Gust, John and James, but none are residents of Rockford. The last-named is deceased, having been accidentally killed by falling from a wagon.

The education of our subject was acquired in the common schools of his native land, where he was reared to manhood. At the age of twentythree, he became superintendent of a large plantation and to that work devoted his energies for nine years, when he determined to seek a home in the New World. On October 18, 1872, he left Gottenburg, and landed in Boston on the 10th of November. He began life in this country as a day laborer and after a year found himself in Rockford, which has since been his home. Since locating in this city, he has acquired an excellent knowledge of cabinet-making, and yet devotes a part of his time to work in that line.

The lady who bears the name of Mrs. Anderson was in her maidenhood Miss Charlotte Gustafson. She was born and reared in Sweden in the same neighborhood as her husband, and was a passenger on board the same vessel on which he sailed. Her father, who was born in 1821, is still living in Sweden. His wife died in 1885. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have been born six children, but two are now deceased: Robert and Charles J. Those still living are Ida, book-keeper in the otlice of the Union Furniture Company; Betsy, Esther E. and Winfield L.

Mr. Anderson was instrumental in organizing the Union Furniture Company, which began business in 1876. He is a Director and one of its large stockholders and has been its President since 1887. This is one of the most important industries of the city and now employs about two hundred and twenty-five men. He is also a stockholder and Director in the Mantel and Furniture Company, the Royal Sewing Machine Company, Chair and Furniture Company, Excelsior Furniture Company, Skandia Brick Company, the Folding Bed Company and the Skandia Shoe Company. Mr. Anderson was a promoter and one of the first subscribers to stock in most of these leading Swedish corporations. He has done much for the business interests of the city and for the welfare of his fellow-countrymen.

A prominent and well-known Swedish capitalist and a representative citizen of Rockford, recognized as such by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, he has also won prosperity, and although he began life in this country a poor man, he has worked his way upward to a position of affluence. He and his wife are leading members of the Zion Swedish Church, of which he is Deacon, and have taken a most active part in its work and upbuilding from the beginning. In politics, he is a stalwart Republican, but has never sought or desired office, preferring to give his entire attention to his business, which he has followed with signal success.

AMNETT H. TRAVELLER resides in Cherry Valley and is engaged in general farming. He was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1853, and is a son of Reuben and Henrietta (Dow) Traveller. His father was born in Philadelphia, Pa., while his parents, natives of England, were on their way from that country to Canada. His death occurred about 1849, at the age of seventy years, and his wife died in early life.

Our subject was reared to agricultural pursuits, his childhood days passing uneventfully and his educational advantages being limited. He left his old home at the age of twenty-five years and emigrated to Dakota with his young bride. He had just wedded Miss Mary J. Heatherington, of Ontario, daughter of John and Harriet (Meach) Heatherington. The young couple reached their destination in April, 1879, and Mr. Traveller made a claim of three hundred and twenty acres near Grand Forks, N. Dak., where he built a house, a good barn and other outbuildings, and devoted his energies to the improvement of a farm. He there resided for ten years, and in January, 1889, went to Scattle, Wash., proposing to make that city his future home, but the business outlook was not good and he removed to Salem, Orc. After a little more than a year spent in that city, he removed to Eastern Oregon and after six months returned to Illinois, locating in Cherry Valley in June, 1891. He here purchased one hundred and eighty-one and a half acres of land at $73 per acre, a part of the Mackey farm, upon which was the old homestead that was erected in 1853 by J. Fitch.

Mr. Traveller takes delight in his chosen occupation and is therefore a successful farmer. In connection with general farming, he engages to some extent in the dairy business. In politics, he is an independent and has never sought or desired public office, preferring to give his entire time and attention to his business interests. Himself and wife are both members of the Methodist Church and are people of sterling worth, held in high regard by their friends throughout this community. They have a family of three children, two sons and a daughter: Teel Dow, who was born in North Dakota, November 28, 1879; Ethel C. N., also born in that State, February 2, 1881, and Douglas R., who was born in North Dakota, December 4, 1885. They are bright, intelligent children, of whom the parents may be justly proud.

ETER JOHNSON, who is now living a retired life at No. 503 South First Street, is numbered among the early settlers of Rockford, of 1854, and has here a wide acquaintance. Sweden has furnished a number of prominent citizens to Rockford, among the most worthy of whom is our subject. He was born in that country, October 3, 1822, and is a son of John and Carrie (Dawson) Peterson, both of whom spent their entire lives in their native land, the father dying at the age of forty-five years and has wife in the sixty-seventh year of her age. Both were members of the Lutheran Church.

Our subject was reared under the parental roof, and after he had attained to man's estate, was married in his native province to Miss Mary Walgren, who lost her parents when she was quite young. She was reared in the same neighborhood as her husband. After the birth of three children, they emigrated to America, sailing from Gottenburg to New York City, where they landed in the summer of 1851, after a voyage of seven weeks. Many on board the vessel died of the cholera, and Mr. Johnson himself had an attack of the disease, but his strong constitution and will pulled him through.

They came on at once to Rockford, and as Mr. Johnson was in very limited circumstances, he engaged in various kinds of labor in different parts of the county, so that he might provide for the support of himself and wife. For some years he worked as a farm hand for fifty and seventy-five cents per day, and afterward for eleven years was employed in the machine shops of N. C. Thompson and John P. Manney, formerly large manufacturers of this city. His life has ever been a busy and useful one, and his industry, enterprise and perseverance at length won him a well-deserved success. He thereby acquired the competence which now enables him to live retired, resting in the enjoyment of the fruits of his former toil.

In 1880, Mr. Johnson was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who died August 20, at the age of lifty-eight years. She was a true, faithful wife and mother, and a member of the Lutheran Church. She had six ehildren, but five are now deceased, three having died in early childhood, while Mary died at the age of seventeen years. Josephine, the only one now living, is the wife of L. M. Noling, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. Johnson has been a true, upright and honest eitizen, and is a faithful member of the First Lutheran Church. In politics, he is a stalwart Republican, and is a loyal citizen of his adopted land, for which he has the greatest love. This worthy gentleman is respected by all who know him, and it is with pleasure that we present his sketch to our readers.

LIJAH PURDY, one of the early settlers of Winnebago County, and a representative farmer of Guilford Township, residing on section 16, claims Vermont as the State of his nativity. He was born in Manchester, Bennington County, December 9, 1821, and is a son of Ira Purdy, who was born in the same locality. The grandfather, Benjamin Purdy, was a native of Connecticut but removing to Vermont became one of the earliest settlers of Bennington County. His son Samuel was the first white male child born in Bennington County. The grandfather there secured a tract of timber land and cleared and improved a farm and there made his home until his death. The father of our subject was reared and married in Manchester, wedding Prudy French, who was born in Bennington County. Her parents, Elijah and Abigail (Beardslee) French, were natives of Connecticut and pioneers of the town of Manehester.

Our subject was only two years old when his mother died, and at the age of six he began to earn his own living, going to reside with the family of Price Beardslee, a farmer of Manchester. with whom he lived for seven years, when he went to an uncle, living with him the succeeding seven years, and during this period assisted in the farm work and attended the district schools. In 1817, he came to Illinois, by way of the Erie Canal and the Great Lakes and by team from Chicago to Rockford, where he arrived on the 25th of September. The city was then a small hamlet and the surrounding country was in almost its primitive condition, few claims having then been made, Mr. Purdy at once began work upon a farm and was employed as a farm hand until 1850, when he located upon the land which is now his home. He had purchased eighty acres of the farm at $4 per aere during the fall succeeding his arrival here, but was able to make only a partial payment upon the land. After elearing it of all indebtedness, he extended the boundaries of his farm from time to time until it comprised three hundred acres. Upon it he erected good farm buildings, planted fruit and shade trees and made many other good improvements. In 1884, he went to Gerald County, Dak., where he purchased three hundred and twenty acres of land, built upon his farm and improved a portion of his land. He there resided two seasons, after which he returned to his home in Guilford Township.

On the 20th of September, 1848, Mr. Purdy was united in marriage with Melissa Wightman, who was born in Sandgate, Bennington County, Vt., August 6, 4827. Her father, William Wightman, was also a native of the Green Mountain State, and was of English descent. He learned the trade of a wheelwright, which he followed in Sandgate and later in Manchester, Vt. After the war he removed to Linn County, Iowa, and purchased a farm near Marion, and there spent his last days. His wife bore the maiden name of Martha Woodard. She was born in Sandgate, Vt., and was a daughter of Abram and Dinah (Green) Woodard.

Mr. and Mrs. Purdy have been blessed with five children, three sons and two daughters: Alice, wife of Alfred Martin, of Rockford; Albert, Ira; Martha, wife of William McCutchen, of Rockford; and Frank. The parents are both members of the First Congregational Church of Rockford, and, in policies, Mr. Purdy votes with the Republican party. For forty-five years he has made his home in this county, and in many ways has been identified with its advancement and upbuilding.

OSEPH MYERS derives a comfortable income from his farming operations, which he carries on successfully in Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County. He is a representative of the German element that has played so important a part in the settlement and development of Illinois, and was born in Sarnico, Germany, June 16, 1841. His home is most beautifully located, and the residence, which is a handsome modern structure, cost $3,000. The home is supplied with all the comforts and conveniences which stamp its owner to be a thrifty and well-to-do citizen of the county.

The original of this sketch is a son of John and Elizabeth Myers, and from the age of ten to sixteen years he was employed at herding cattle in the Old Country. In 1857, when his parents emigrated to the New World, he immediately found employment on farms, receiving as remuneration for his services $2 per month and his board. He also cut cord-wood for three shillings a cord, and later, going to Milwaukee, spent two years in the Cream City and then came to Winnebago County, where he did farm work for four years at from $10 to $17 per month.

Mr. Myers, of this sketch, was married February 26, 1864, to Miss Sophia Glawe, who died four years later, when twenty-four years of age. Soon after his marriage, our subject rented a farm, which he operated for twelve years, and in the spring of 1875 moved to his present property, which he had purchased the year previous.

He of whom we write was married a second time to Miss Charlotte Dethwiller, who was born in Stratford, France, August 21, 1847. She was the daughter of Henry and Charlotte Dethwiller, and was nine years old when brought to this country by her parents. By her union with our subject eight children were born, viz.: Eda, who was born January 27, 1871, married John Smoke, a farmer; John H. S., born February 27, 1871; Frank, November 13, 1875; Anna C., February 2, 1876; William C., April 16, 1878; Louisa A., February 12, 1880; Rosa C., December 5, 1881, and Albert, the eldest of the family, who died at the age of four months.

Our subject later added to his farm in Pecatonica Township, and is now the proprietor of as fine a tract of land as is to be found in the county. His first one hundred and sixty acres cost him $40 per acre, and the last eighty, $60 per acre. With his wife he is a devoted member of the Lutheran Church, and takes a deep interest in all church matters. He takes a prominent part in public affairs, and votes the straight Republican ticket.

EORGE H, CORMACK, Vice-President of the Oatmeal Company, is one of the repre-I sentative and prominent men of Rockford. For the past twenty years he has been connected with the interests of the city and was one of the originators of the business which is now one of its leading industries. He is a native of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, born in 1837, and is a son of James Cormack, also a native of Aberdeenshire, and a miller and millwright by trade. He came of a pure Scotch family and married a lady of his native land. His death occurred in Scotland at the age of eighty-six years, and his wife died in 1869, when well advanced in life. There are ten children of the family yet living, our subject being the youngest, and they are scattered to the four quarters of the globe, living in Europe, Australia, Africa and America.

In his native land G. II. Cormack became a millwright and thoroughly mastered the business in all its details. To that work he devoted his energies in Aberdeenshire until he came to Amer-

Jones truly J. Fletcher Weyburn ica, the year of his emigration being 1871. With the hope of benefiting his financial condition, he crossed the Atlantic and spent one year in the province of Ontario, Canada, after which he came to Illinois, locating in Rockford, where he has resided continuously since, a good citizen and successful business man.

Immediately after his arrival, in company with Mr. A. M. Johnston, who is a native of the North of Ireland, he established and began the operation of an oatmeal manufactory. These two gentleman continued partnership until 1882, when the company was incorporated, with R. H. Tinker as President and G. H. Cormack as Secretary. Mr. Johnston, his former partner, is a successful business man, connected with a large milling and seed business in Santa Cruz, Cal. From the beginning, the industry which was established met with success and was constantly increased in size and capacity until the morning of September 29, 1891, when the entire main building was destroyed by The successful operation of the business is due almost entirely to Mr. Cormack, who is its manager, and by his efforts it has been placed at the head of this line of business in the West. His trade of a millwright has been of great benefit to him in improving his processes. He has been the inventor of fifteen different processes, including the one now used in the factory for the manufacture of the meal. At first the meal was ground with mill stones and then cut with sharp steel knives, but this left the grain only coarsely cut and in 1874 this process was discarded, being supplemented by the practical and scientific process invented by Mr. Cormack, whereby the whole grain is rolled and made into a beautiful flake, easily cooked and very nutritious. For many years one of the best known brands on the market has been the Nudavene, which is the product of this factory. Its sales are constantly increasing and it is now being manufactured extensively in Cedar Rapids and Chicago. No one in this country or in Europe has done more to develop oatmeal than our subject. The Nudavene flake was first placed before the public at the New Orleans Cotton Centennial Exposition, where it was awarded the first price—the gold medal.

In 1880, Mr. Cormack and Mr. Johnston, who had for many years been a prominent wholesale grocery man in Buffalo, N. Y., established the glucose business in this city, a large concern, but after a time both withdrew and neither have any connection with it at the present time. Mr. Cormack is a man of sterling worth, upright and honorable in all the relations of life, and a straightforward business man whose worth is acknowledged throughout the city and county. In his political atfiliations, he is a Republican but has never been an office-seeker.

FLETCHER WEYBURN. Rockford cannot boast of a more prominent or worthy young man than the gentleman whose name introduces this biographical sketch, and whose portrait appears on the opposite page. His upright character and moral influence have been especially felt by his energy displayed in matters of religion and the advancement of Christianity. In 1876, when the opportunity was offered to organize a Young Men's Christian Association in this city, he was one of the first to lend a helping hand for the promotion of that noble cause, and became one of its organizers and charter members when it was founded here, and has since been one of its chief supporters and pillars.

As the association strengthened and it became apparent that better accommodations were needed, a subscription was started among those of a generous nature anxious for the welfare of the young men of Rockford. The appeal was readily responded to by donations from $1 to $1,000, except in the notable case of Mrs. D. S. Penfield, who gave $1,000 in each besides a part of the lot (representing $2,500) on which the building was erected at the northwest corner of Madison and East State Streets. About that time Mr. Weyburn was elected President of the Association, and continued in that eapacity during the critical times attending the erection of the new structure, and has ever served in the responsible position with fidelity and success.

The building, which was completed for occupancy in 1890, is one of the most elegant and imposing structures in the city, and in its architectural design and appointment is complete throughout and truly metropolitan. The basement and third stories of brick and terra cotta. The auditorium seats comfortably four hundred people; the reading rooms and gymnasium are beautifully furnished and fully equipped. The entire building represents a value of about $60,000, all of which was raised by private donations in the city of Rockford.

In business circles, Mr. Weyburn is prominent as a real-estate and insurance agent, with his office in the William Brown building. He is also one of the promoters and managers of the Rockford Security and Investment Company, which was organized in May, 1890, and is Secretary of the Rockford Building and Loan Association, which was organized in October, 1890. Both these organizations have done much for the advancement of the city, and the first-named does business quite extensively both in Rockford and Chicago. In addition to these responsible positions, Mr. Weyburn is Secretary of the Winnebago County Agricultural Society, to the welfare of which he has contributed his tircless exertions.

Since Mr. Weyburn located in Rockford in 1872, he has worked unremittingly for the good of the different enterprises of the city, with which he has been officially connected. His first occupation was in doing clerical work in business houses here, and between the years 1876 and 1881 he was book-keeper for the Winnebago National Bank. During the two ensuing years he was engaged in the real-estate business in Denver, Colo., whither he went in search of renewed health. In 1883, he returned to Rockford, having regained his health, and became Cashier for the Emerson-Talcott Manufacturing Company, where he remained until he established his present business in 1890.

In local orders, Mr. Weyburn is prominent as a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Crusader Lodge No. 17, K. T., also Knights of Pythias. In politics, he is a stanch Republican and takes an active part in the public affairs of the community. He was nineteen years old when he became a resident of this city, whither he came from Ontario County, N. Y., his birthplace. His education was received in the schools of that county and at Hobart College, in Geneva.

The marriage of Mr. Weyburn to Miss Flora M. Lyon took place in October, 1878, at Rockford. Mrs. Weyburn, who is one of the most accomplished ladies of Rockford, was born and reared in this city, and is the daughter of the late Isaiah Lyon, whose death occurred in 1883. Mr. Lyon came to this city at a very early day, and was a passenger on the only steamer that ever came here. He brought his family and household goods with him, and engaged in business as a merchant and hotel-keeper for several years. For forty years, he served as Justice of the Peace, and when he passed away at the age of seventy-nine years, was sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends. His wife died some years previous, while in the prime of life. This worthy couple were charter members and active workers in the First Baptist Church erected in Rockford, and politically, he was a firm Republican.

In their religious connection, Mr. and Mrs. Weyburn are members of the First Baptist Church, and he has been Sunday-school Superintendent for many years. With their two children, Lyon, aged nine years, and Elizabeth, four years old, they reside in their beautiful home at No. 209 North Church Street, and enjoy the high esteem of a large circle of personal friends.

HARLES F. WITT. In Spring Township, Boone County, may be seen a good farm adorned with a comfortable residence and tirst-class buildings. This is the property of the gentleman whose name we have just given and who was born in Hampshire County, Mass., September 11, 1811. He is a son of Thomas and Electa (Cole) Witt, also natives of the above-named county, the father dying in Schuyler, this State, when eighty-four years of age, and here also the mother departed this life in her fifty-second year.

Charles F. Witt was the eldest in the family of eleven children, five of whom are yet living. His paternal grandfather, Abner Witt, was a native of England, his birth occurring March 27, 1756. He was married October 8, 1778, to Mollie Rowland, and died May 13, 1812. The grandmother was of Dutch ancestry and was born June 11, 1760, and died October 3, 1845. Thomas Witt on emigrating to America in an early day, took part in the Revolutionary War, during which time he was shot in the leg and suffered amputation of that member, dying from the effects.

The mother of our subject was born January 5, 1791, and died February 19, 1813. She was the daughter of Amasa and Polly Cole, natives of England, where they were farmers. The first representatives of that name in this country probably came hither in 1650. He of whom we write left home when eighteen years of age, and going to Boston, was employed for two years in a tayern and a like period as driver of a stage coach between Brattleboro, Vt., and Boston, Mass. In the fall of 1833, he went West to Macomb County, Mich., and taking up a tract of timber land from the Government, cleared and improved the same.

The lady to whom our subject was married November 23, 1836, was Eliza A. daughter of William Brown. She was born in Washington County, N.Y., May 9, 1814, and departed this life December 23, 1883. Her father was a native of England and, so far as is known, was a farmer. Of the nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Witt, five are living, namely: William C., who lives in Belvidere, was born April 6, 1838, is married and has one daughter; Henry C., who was born August 13, 1814, married Miss Elizabeth Hill, who was born in Canada August 3, 1846, and has two sons: Horace F. and Henry N.; Isaae N. was born October 27, 1816; Marion was born November 16, 1848, and is now Mrs. H. Mott, has six children and resides in Marion, Kan.; Charles, the youngest son, was born July 18, 1856, is married to Lucy Brainard and has one son and one daughter.

Mr. Witt removed from Michigan to Ohio about 1838, where he ran an hotel until coming to this county in 1842. One of his boarders, who remained with him for two years, was ex-President Hayes. Our subject's cash capital when he arrived in this community was $2.80. He worked at cutting wood, and making rails for fifty cents per hundred, from which small earnings he saved a sufficient sum to invest in property of his own. His farm produce was marketed in Chicago and Green Bay, from which cities he returned with a load of goods, often making as much as $100 on a trip.

Our subject cast his first Presidential vote in Boston in 1832 for Andrew Jackson. He later became a Whig and on the formation of the Republican party joined its ranks. For sixteen years he was County Associate Judge and for eight years Justice of the Peace and for nine years filled the offlice of Supervisor in Spring Township. He was the recipient of nearly all the local offices, serving on the School Board, and is a man who is held in the highest esteem by all the people of his community.

ILLIAM REITSCH. The commodious residence at No. 107 North Horsman Street, Rockford, is owned and occupied by Mr. Reitsch, who is a carpenter and builder, and not only creeted the neat dwelling which he occupies, but also has superintended the erection of many of the most substantial buildings in the city. He is a native of Germany, born September 11, 1850, in Zittau, Saxony, and possesses the qualities of thrift and tireless energy which almost invariably characterize those who claim Germany as their Fatherland.

The father of our subject, Charles T., was a native of the same place as his son, and was born in 1798. He followed the trade of a carpenter during his entire active life, and passed hence in 1881, at the venerable age of eighty-six years. He had a family of fourteen children, twelve sons and two daughters, seven of whom grew to mature years, and four are now living. The youngest member of the family is the subject of this sketch, who grew to manhood in his native country, and having resolved to seek home and fortune in the New World, emigrated to America in the summer of 1870, proceeding directly to Rockford, where he has since resided.

Immediately after his arrival in Rockford, Mr. Reitsch commenced to work at the trade of a carpenter for his brother Henry, and so successful was he, that in a few years he began as a contractor and builder for himself. Since that time he has creeted many dwellings, churches and public buildings, and is well and favorably known as an honest and prosperous contractor and an upright man.

The marriage of Mr. Reitsch, in 1876, united him to Miss Jennie Simons, of Ogle County, the daughter of Henry and Anna (Zimmerman) Simons, She was born in Germany, whence, at the age of twelve years, she accompanied her parents to America, and settled with them in Ogle County, where they still reside, together with her only brother, Fred S. Mr. and Mrs. Reitsch are the parents of five children, as follows: Julius T., Arthur W., Cora E., George W. and Lillian J., and, more fortunate than many parents, they have not been bereft by the death of any of their loved ones. They are training their children for useful positions in the business and social world, and are rearing them under the salutary influence of the schools of Rockford, and the church relations of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church. In his political belief, Mr. Reitsch's sympathies are with the platform of the Republican party, and he is a man of public spirit and enterprise.

LFRED A. KLI'MPII. The farming class of Northern Illinois is notable for the degree of enterprise possessed by its representatives, and among the most successful and energetic of the younger farmers of Boone County is the gentleman whose name introduces these paragraphs. Although quite young, having been born April 11, 1866, he has attained a degree of success which is worthy of special mention, and he occupies a prominent position among the agriculturists of Le Roy Township.

Our subject belongs to one of those progressive families who aided in the development of the farming lands of Illinois, and is proud of the fact that his father was one of those fast disappearing landmarks of an heroic past—the pioneer. Certainly, in a volume of this character, special notice should be given of the life and character of Joseph K. Klumph, who settled in Boone County about 1842. The son of a farmer, Jacob Klumph, who lived and died in New York, he was born in the Empire State in 1820, and there grew to a stalwart man. On coming West, he was accompanied by his mother, who was in maidenhood Catherine Bauthall, and who died here at the age of seventy-two.

In Le Roy Township, Mr. Klumph was married to Miss Sardinia Austin, a native of New York, who came to Illinois about 1842. The young conple settled on the one hundred and twenty acre tract of land which Mr. Klumph had purchased, and in the midst of a dense wilderness, with no neighbors save the brothers of Mr. Klumph, who had settled on adjoining farms, they struggled against hardships and the discouragements of pioneer life, and from the unimproved place evolved a good farm. The father died in March, 1886, when sixty-six years old. His widow survives and makes her home in Beloit, Wis. This worthy couple were consistent Christians, striving to exemplify in their lives the principles of the Golden Rule. The father was enabled by his arduous toil to clear up a tract of fifty acres, which he cultivated. He planted apple trees which are now in fine bearing condition. In other ways he aided in developing the farm and also in advancing the interests of the community of which he was an honored resident.

The family of which our subject is the youngest member consisted of the following-named children: Jacob, a farmer in Le Roy Township; Catherine, who married Henry Jenkins, of Beloit; Sophronia, the widow of Charles lunghuhn, of Beloit; Elida, Mrs. Leander Junghuhn, of Beloit; Mary, wife of F. Lawshe, a farmer of Le Roy Township; and Alfred A., who was born on the place which has always been his home. After gaining a practical knowledge of agriculture through his early farming labors, and receiving a good education in the district schools, our subject was married, September 17, 1891, his wife being Miss Ruby Curtis, of Caledonia Township. Mrs. Klumph is the daughter of L. E. and Margaret (Landon) Curtis, natives, respectively, of New York and Pennsylvania. They were farming people, and emigrated to the West when quite young.

As did his father, our subject espouses the cause of the Republican party, and is a firm adherent to the principles of justice and equity in every relation of life. He and his wife are members of the Congregational Church, and are looked up to by the people of the community as worthy of their highest respect. In every measure which promises the advantage of the welfare of the community, they are acknowledged leaders, and enjoy great social popularity.

IBERTY WALKUP, President of the Air (a) Brush Manufacturing Company, at Rockford, and proprietor of the Illinois Art School, represents one of the leading industries of the nincteenth century. He is the sole manager and chief owner of the enterprise, which occupies a suite of rooms in the Henry Building, and, with the assistance of his wife, a skilled artist, teaches the use of that ingenious device, the air brush, in a most satisfactory manner. In 1881, after three years of ardnous and untiring study, he completed the invention which has since been sent into every country in the world except China, and which has wrought a great transformation in photography, lithography, water-color painting, crayon and pastel work.

The air brush is a device for applying liquid color by a jet of air, and consists of three parts, air-pump, air-reservoir and hand-piece, connected with the necessary rubber tubing. The distribution of color is entirely controlled by the thumb-valve, and the artist can produce the finest line, or instantly change to a broad shadow. These results, with a single stroke, have a finish that only hours of toil can produce by any other known means. It is especially used in working with India ink and water colors, and in applying lithographers' ink to the stone, also in monumental drawing, where it is remarkably successful.

The Illinois Art School was founded in 1888, and has since been very successful, being attended by a fine class of students from every State in the Union, Canada, and some countries in Europe. Many a young lady and gentleman have reason to be grateful to Mr. Walkup for aid given them in learning the use of this device, which now enables them to earn $100 per month with ease, and numerous testimonials have been given him from those whom he has helped personally, when they were not able to make any financial remuneration.

Mr. Walkup has been a resident of Rockford since December, 1880, when he came here in order to secure the use of tools whereby he could develop the invention since perfected. He has also made an improvement on the pantograph, which is meeting with success. A natural mechanic, his work is original and of unusual perfection of finish, and he will undoubtedly gain a large fortune from his letters patent. He was born on a farm three miles west of Oregon, Ogle County, Ill., July 14, 1814. His boyhood days were passed on his father's farm, and when he attained to his majority he enlisted in the defense of the Union as member of Company K, Ninety-second Illinois Infantry, and served until on account of ill-health he was honorably discharged.

After his return from the battle-field, Mr. Walkup attended school for two years, and, later, followed the profession of a teacher. He has never wholly regained his health since the war, but has been a tireless worker, notwithstanding his delicate physical condition. For some years, he operated a butter and cheese factory in Carroll County, but losing his property by fire, he has since devoted his time to his inventions. His marriage, which took place in Ogle County, united him with Miss Phœbe C. Johnson, who was born in Ohio and came to Ogle County when a young girl. She is a gifted artist, and has executed some fine work with the air-brush, besides assisting her husband in a material way in his discovery. Religiously, Mr. and Mrs. Walkup are identified with the Presbyterian Church, while he is a Republican in his political belief, although he has Prohibition proclivities. In his social connections, he is a member of G. L. Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., of Rockford. On an accompanying page will be noticed a portrait of this well-known inventor.

The father of our subject, Samuel Walkup, was a native of Pennsylvania, but passed his youth in Ohio, whence, in 1837, at the age of twenty-one years, he removed to Illinois and entered a tract of Government land in Pine Creek Township, Ogle County. He continued to make his home there, improving and cultivating the place, and there passed away in August, 1889. Her parents were Scotch people, and members of the Presbyterian Church, but he was identified with the Freewill Baptist Church, and always made it his endeavor to show his Christian sincerity by his upright and consistent life.

The mother of our subject was known in maidcallood as Sophia L. Ruggles, and was born in New England. She traces her lineage to the Pilgrim Fathers, who figured so extensively in the early history of New England, as well as in its later progress. She was a faithful member of the Freewill Baptist Church, and was a loving helpmate to her husband, and a wise, tender mother to her children, nine in number, of whom five sons and two daughters still survive.

ON. ALLEN C. FULLER, Adjutant-General of Illinois during the dark days of the Civil War, and one of the most prominent (9) citizens of the State, was born in the town of Farmington, Conn., September 22, 1823. His father, Lucius Fuller, who was likewise born in Farmington, spent his youth and early manhood in his native State, and removed from there to Towanda, Pa., when our subject was a small child. In 1846, having resolved to seek a home in the West, he came to Belvidere, where he resided until death called him hence. He was one of the most influential citizens of Belvidere during its early history, and served as Postmaster and County Judge, as well as in other positions of responsibility.

Unto Lucius Fuller and his wife, who was known in maidenhood as Candace Newell, and was a native of Farmington, were born the following-named children: Edwin, deceased; Allen C., the subject of this sketch; J. Ensign, who served in the Mexican War, and died in the army; Rebecca, Mary, Henry, Charles, Frank and Ann. The second son, our subject, received the rudiments of his education in the Towarda Academy, and afterward carried on his studies under private tutelage, his instructor being Prof. Nash, of Towarda.

The legal profession attracted the attention of the young student, who, in 1812, commenced to read law at Towanda with Judge Wilmot, author of the "Wilmot Proviso." In 1844, he went to Warsaw, N. Y., where he studied with Senator Doolittle, and in the spring of 1816 was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the State of New York. Immediately afterward, he came to Illinois, and opened a law-office at Belvidere, where he entered upon a successful and lucrative practice, having been admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of Illinois.

Having entered the political field as one of the organizers of the Republican party, his career was forthwith identified with the public history of the State. He served as Circuit Judge with credit to himself and satisfaction to his district, and, in 1860. "stumped" the State with Gov. Yates, in the interests of the Republican party. At the outbreak of the Civil War, he was serving as Circuit Judge, which office he resigned, and was appointed Adjutant-General, a position in which his distinguished abilities were used for the promotion of the welfare of the people, whose interests he ever had at heart. In 1864, he was elected Representative to the General Assembly, and resigned the position of Adjutant-General that he might devote himself exclusively to the duties devolving upon him, He was chosen Speaker of the House, a position in which he displayed shrewd foresight, indomitable energy and great executive ability. He was twice elected State Senator and served two terms, and several important laws upon the subject of railroad, State charitable institutions and revenue, now in force, were prepared by him.

While a successful politician, Gen. Fuller is equally capable as a financier, and is considered one of the best business men of this country. He is a large stockholder in the Northwestern Shoe Factory, and the National Sewing Machine Company, and has served as Director in both organizations. In addition to these interests, he has served as Director in both the First and Second National Banks, and as President of the First National at Belvidere. He aided in the organization of the First National Bank at Ashland, Wis., and for an extended period was President and one of its largest stockholders. In 1865, he assisted in the organization of the First National Bank at Elgin, of which he was chosen Vice-President, and he is still interested in the institution as a stockholder and Vice-President.

In 1819, Gen. Fuller was united in marriage with Miss Naney Benjamin, who was born in New York, and died in Belvidere in 1871. The second marriage of our subject united him with Mrs. Mary A. E. Willey, in 1880, whose first husband, Dr. Willey, of St. Paul, stood at the head of the medical profession in Minnesota. Gen. Fuller has one daughter living, Mrs. Kittie E. Rhein-His eldest son, Frank, died in 1864, aged fourteen years; the second son, Wilbur A., was graduated from Yale College in his twentyfirst year, and died of consumption in 1876; Ida, the youngest child, married A. T. Hovey, and died when only nineteen years old. The Ida public library of seven thousand volumes, which the General donated to the city, was named in honor of this daughter, and is a credit to him and an honor to the city, and highly appreciated by the citizens.

The life of Gen. Fuller furnishes an example worthy the emulation of the young. When he came to Belvidere he was without capital or influential friends, and had nothing on which to rely save an abundance of energy and enterprise. The success which came to him was not the result of fortuitous circumstances, but of patient and unwaried labor, while his close sympathy with, and patriotic participation in, public affairs made him conspicuous among the influential men of Northern Illinois.

In the work entitled "Patriotism of Illinois," edited by T. M. Eddy, D. D., the statement is made that the name of Allen C. Fuller has been more frequently mentioned in State military matters than that of any other man besides Gov. Yates. The following is quoted from the report of a committee appointed by the General Assembly to examine his office: "We have thoroughly examined the office of the Adjutant-General and find it a model in completeness; one that preserves in all its glory the proud records of our soldiery and refleets infinite credit upon the great State whose sons they are. In the judgment of the committee, the thanks of every patriotic citizen of the State are due to Gen. Fuller for the able and efficient manner in which he has discharged the duties of the office and for his indefatigable efforts in colleeting and preserving this glorious record of a glorious State." Gov. Yates, in his biennial message, was equally complimentary regarding the services of Gen. Fuller and acknowledged himself deeply indebted to him for his hearty co-operation and able management of the military affairs of the State.

RANK SEAVERNS is the proprietor of a fine tract of land, beautifully located in Owen Township, Winnebago County, which comprises one hundred and eighty-five acres. It bears all the improvements in the way of machinery and farm buildings found upon a first-class estate, and by a proper rotation of crops our subject reaps a handsome income. He is a native of the county, having been born in Rockford Township, December 13, 1850.

Isaac W. Seaverns, the direct progenitor of our subject, was born at Jamaica Plains, now a part of Boston, Mass., June 29, 1814. He is a son of Josiah Seaverns, also born in that locality, and a descendant of Samuel Seaverns, a native of England, and one of the carliest settlers of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. The grandfather of our subject, who took part in the battle of Lexington, was a farmer and spent his entire life in Massachusetts. He married Rebecca White, who was born on the farm at Jamaica Plains.

The father of our subject was reared and educated in his native town, and when about twenty years of age, formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, Joseph Merriam, and opened a market on Milk Street, Boston, where they continued successfully together until 1836. At that date, the elder

Mr. Seaverns removed to Ohio, and engaged in milling at Richmond, near Painesville, then in 1840 went to Cleveland and established a mercantile business. Six years later, he went to Wisconsin, located upon a tract of land eight miles north of Racine, and was engaged in its cultivation for two years. Disposing of that purchase, he came to Winnebago County, and became the proprietor of a tract of land in what is now Rockford Township, on which there was a small house, and but little improvement. He erected two barns on the place, and successfully operated it for ten years, when, selling out, he purchased the estate on section 24, Owen Township, where his death occurred October 24, 1889.

Our subject's father was twice married. The lady who became his first wife was Abba Eliza Winslow, a native of New York State, whose decease occurred in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Seaverns was then married, May 15, 1842, to Anna E. Titus, the mother of our subject. She was born in Middleburg, Genesee County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Horatio N. Titus, a native of Springfield, Mass., who went to New York State when eighteen years of age, and was married in Monroe County. There Mr. Titus lived for a time, and then removed to Genesee County, whence he later returned to Monroe County, and was engaged in farming on his father's farm in Brighton Township, and at the same time was employed in freighting on the Erie Canal. In 1836, be removed to Ohio, and located in Cleveland at a time when that city contained but a few thousand people, and there was not a railroad in the State. He was employed in freighting on the Ohio Canal, and resided there until a short time before his death, which occurred in Waterville. The maiden name of his wife, the grandmother of our subject, was Deborah Jones. She was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., and was a daughter of Elias and Abigail Jones. She survived her husband a number of years, and departed this life at the home of her daughter, in Marion, N. Y.

The parental family of our subject comprised eight children, five of whom grew to mature years, namely: Edwin M., Isabella M., Frank, Ella M. and George. Emma, Charles II. and Anna R. died when young. The father of our subject reared one son by his first marriage, Isaac W. Frank Seaverns was reared to farm duties on the old homestead, and resided with his parents until his marriage, when his father sold him sixty acres of the home farm, which is his present place of residence. He has added to his possessions from time to time, and now has a good estate, which is located on a slight elevation, from which an extended view of the surrounding country can be had.

The original of this sketch was married, September 22, 1875, to Lillie Wills, who was born at Mauch Chunk, Pa., and is the daughter of Charles Wills. Her father was a native of Hazelton, Luzerne County, that State, where also his father, Adam Wills, as far as is known, was born, and where he spent his last years engaged as a machinist and engineer. The maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Muma.

The father of Mrs. Seaverns learned the trade of a machinist and engineer, and removed from Pennsylvania to Wisconsin about 1860. Locating in Janesville, he followed his trade for a time, and in 1882 came to Winnebago County, residing for eight years in Owen Township. At the expiration of that time, he came to Rockford, and at the present time is residing in Rockford, Ill. The maiden name of the wife was Mary Blay, a native of Philadelphia. Pa., and the daughter of Richard and Sarah (James) Blay.

Mr. and Mrs. Seaverns have an adopted daughter, Ida B., who is the child of Mr. Seaverus' sister. In his political views, our subject is an independent Democrat. With his wife he is a member of the Christian Union Church. Under the administration of President Cleveland, he was appointed Postmaster, and served efficiently in that position. He has served as Justice of the Peace in Owen for four years, and has filled the position of School Director for nearly twenty years, as well as numerous local offices of trust. His mother still resides in Rockford. George, the youngest brother, resides on the home farm; Isaac W., the eldest brother, resided on the old home farm until 1857, then located at Cleveland, Ohio, and engaged as a machinist, serving an apprenticeship for four years, then, at his country's call, he enlisted, April 12, 1861, in Company A, First Ohio Regiment, for three months, and re-enlisted the following March, in the Eighth Ohio Regiment. The following September he received an honorable discharge, and engaged as an engineer on the Atlantic & Great Western Railroad, which is now the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio, and remained with that company until 1865, and continued in their service until 1870. In that year he removed to Oshkosh, Wis., and there engaged in the lumber business as General Superintendent of the Regan, Cheny & Pratt Manufactory. In the fall of 1872, he left their employment and formed a partnership with A. M. Woodman, in the lumber business, but before the new firm was ready for operation, they were burned out in the Oshkosh fire of 1873. May 1, he re-entered the service of the Northwestern company, and is still in their employ. May 28, 1863, he was united in marriage to Miss Julia Pinkney, at Cleveland, Ohio. She was the daughter of John T. and Julia (Taylor) Pinkney, who were natives of England. Of this union there have been born four children, three of whom survive: Frank T., Jessie C. and Florence M. Fred M., a twin of Florence, is deceased. The only sister, now Mrs. Dr. Charles H. Taylor, resides in Chicago, Ill. George A., William S. and Joel Seaverns, cousins of our subject, now reside in Chicago. They are the only relatives of the family this side of the Eastern States that our subject has any knowledge of.

EORGE OLIVER, a retired farmer of Rockford, Ill. A plain, unvarnished statement of the facts embraced in the life of Mr. Oliver, a man well and favorably known to the people of Winnebago County, is all that we profess to be able to give in this history of the county; and yet, upon examination of these facts, there will be found the career of one whose entire course through the world has been marked by great honesty and fidelity of purpose.

Our subject was a native of New York State, having been born near Utica, in March. 1842, but his parents, George and Sarah (Hale) Oliver, were natives of England, born near Lancaster, and of English ancestry. The parents were married in their native county, and the father worked as a laborer there until 1840, when he became convinced that there was a better opening for him in the New World. With his wife, he braved the tender mercies of Neptune and reached the States in safety. Locating near Utica, N. Y., he worked as a farm laborer for about eleven years, and then, desiring wider fields for his labors, came West to Wisconsin, in which State he remained for three years. From there he came to Winnebago County. Ill., settled in Pecatonica Township, and there farmed on shares for a few years. By economy and frugality, he had accumulated a sufficient amount of money to enable him to purchase one hundred and seventy acres of land, and afterward he increased this to two hundred and seven acres. As years passed over his head, he retired to Pecatonica, and there breathed his last on the 17th of December, 1891. He was then nearly seventy-nine years of age. He had always been a quiet, unassuming man, with but very little education, but he was as honest and upright as man need be. His worthy wife, who had been a true helpmate during the struggle for a livelihood, reeeived her final summons in Pecatonica, October 12, 1888, when over seventy-three years of age. She was a kind and loving wife and mother. They were the parents of three sons, our subject being the eldest. John is now a resident of this county, and James resides in Pecatonica and is the husband of Miss Elizabeth Downes, formerly of Rockford.

George Oliver, Jr., subject of this sketch, was about eleven years of age when he came with his parents to Illinois, and his early days were passed in assisting his father on the farm. The knowledge he thus obtained was of use to him in later years and paved the way to his subsequent prosperous career as an agriculturist. After the death of his father, he became owner of the fine farm, which was well improved, and on which were good substantial buildings, and on this he resided for many years.

Miss Ellen Downey, whom he married in Rockford, is a native of this city, born April 10, 1856, and here she grew to womanhood and secured a good education. Her parents, Daniel and Mary A. (Hart) Downey, were natives of Cork, Ireland, and of Irish descent. Mr. and Mrs. Downey came to America when young people and were married in Vermont. Later, they came to Rockford, Ill., and have resided in this county for a long time. The father cultivated the soil for many years but is now retired, and, with his amiable wife, resides at No. 1202 Elm Street, Rockford. He is now seventy-eight years of age, and Mrs. Downey is in her sixty-sixth year. Of the eleven children born to their marriage, ten are still living and five are under the parental roof.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver remained on the farm until a short time ago, when they sold out and removed to Rockford, where they have a good home at No. 1207 Elm Street. Mr. Oliver is a stanch Democrat in his political views, and his wife is an earnest member of the Catholic Church. Their mariage has been blessed by the birth of six children, who are named as follows: George J., Mary, Lizzic, Cornelius, John A. and Sarah, all at home.

ACOB M. HAMILTON. Among the well-regulated farms of Seward Township. Winnelago County, may be properly mentioned that of Mr. Hamilton, which stands as a fitting monument to his energy and industry. It is under good cultivation and embellished with all the buildings required by the intelligent and progressive farmer. The property has been in his possession since 1851, and he has effected most of the improvements now seen upon it.

Born July 11, 1823, in Oswego County, N. Y., our subject is a son of William and Nancy Hamilton, the former of whom was born near Glasgow, Scotland. He came to the United States with his parents when he was an infant, they settling in Albany, N. Y. William Hamilton, the grandfather of our subject, was a mason by trade, as was also his brother John, who was killed after coming to this country. The grandfather died when eightyfour years of age, two years after coming to the United States. Grandmother Hamilton reared a family of four children and departed this life in Seneca County, N. Y., at the advanced age of ninety-one years.

The father of our subject was obliged to work out when a lad of seven or eight years in order to aid his mother in supporting the family, taking his pay in grain, etc. He was employed in that way until eighteen years old, when, in company with a brother, he went to the northern part of New York and purchased a mill claim, upon which they erected a sawmill and were engaged in the lumber business a period of twenty-one years. In 1836, Mr. Hamilton went to Seneca County, and in the town of Lodi purchased a farm which he operated for eight years, and on selling out at the end of that time came to Winnebago County, On account of clouded titles, he lost nearly all his property in the Empire State and landed in Stephenson County with but $200 in his pocket, $100 of which he paid for eighty acres of unimproved land. Later, he purchased forty acres more in Winnebago County, which consumed the other $100.

The elder Mr. Hamilton was married in Williamstown, N. Y., in 1821, to Miss Nancy Miller, a native of Connecticut. Her parents were New Englanders, and his father, later in life, in company with his second wife and one son, came to Wisconsin, where he died. Mr. Hamilton died in this county when eighty-two years of age; his wife departed this life in her sixty-third year.

Jacob M. Hamilton was one in a family of nine children and remained at home until reaching his majority, when he took up a claim and removed upon it after his marriage, January 1, 1851, with Miss Sarah A. Derwent. The lady was born in Lancashire, England, February 9, 1833, and was a daughter of Thomas and Hannah Derwent who came to the United States in 1842, and, locating in Winnebago County, bought a "squatter's" claim for which Mr. Derwent paid three hundred sovereigns. The father was born in Derbyshire, England, February 9, 1781, and followed the trade of a wheelwright. His wife, whose maiden name was Bradwell, was born November 28, 1786, in the same place as her husband. They were married about 1803 and became the parents of six boys and four girls. Mrs. Hamilton's mother died when eighty-nine years of age. Her father worked at his trade near Shellield, England, where he was greatly esteemed as an upright and honest gentleman.

He of whom we write took up his present claim in 1845, but did not locate upon it until 1851, since which time he has been a resident here. In politics, Mr. Hamilton east his first Presidential vote for John C. Fremont. He is widely known throughout Northern Illinois as one of its most extensive agriculturists, and occupies a good position in his community as a man who has made for himself a good record and who gives support to the enterprises calculated for the good of the people around him, socially, morally and financially.

Ten children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, two of whom are deceased. Those living are William A., who resides at Devil's Lake, N. Dak.; Charles J., who is married and has one son, makes his home in this county; Ella M., wife of Charles Doty, is the mother of three children: Jay, Ward and Anna, who also reside in this county; Cora B., who is married to H. Houbson and is the mother of a son, Chester E.; Myron S., who resides at home, is married and has one son; Anna O., who is Mrs. Hobson, makes her home in this county; Raymond A. and Graee C., who are at home, complete the family list.

ALPH RULISON, a well-known and highly-respected resident of Belvidere, was born in Glenn, Montgomery County, N. Y., Jan-Guary 4, 1818, and is a son of Herman Rulison. The father was born in New Jersey, and was a son of Abraham Rulison, a native of Germany, who came to America with his parents, locating in New Jersey. By occupation, he was a farmer. He went to New York, becoming one of the early settlers of the town of Glenn, where he spent the remainder of his days.

Herman Rulison was a mere lad when his parents went to New York. He married Margaret, daughter of Christopher Fornicrook, who was a native of Germany. Both the parents of our subject spent their last days in Montgomery County, N. Y.

Ralph Rulison was one of ten children. In his youth he learned the trade of a tanner and currier, which occupation he followed until 1813, when he engaged in farming in the town of Glenn. Two years later, he came to Illinois, making the journey to Boone County by team from Racine. He purchased one hundred and sixty acres in Bonus Township at $3.80 per acre, of which fifty acres were broken. He built a small frame house and began the development and improvement of his land. Upon that farm he resided until 1883, and in his business dealings was quite successful. He sold out in that year and came to Belvidere, where he has since lived a retired life.

On the 26th of June, 1812, Mr. Rulison was united in marriage with Miss Maria Passage, who was born in Schenectady County, N. Y., April 9, 1820, and is a daughter of John and Eleanor (Correll) Passage. Their union has been blessed with seven children: George, who married Julia Wright, by whom he had four children: Blanche, Alta, Beth, and Emil, who is deceased: Emma. wife of Charles Howe and the mother of four children: Jay, Ralph, Maria, and one whose name is not given; Alice, wife of W. Herbert, by whom she has two sons: Ralph and John; Herman, who married Carrie Hammond and has seven children: Claude, Allie, Ralph, Lydia, Laura, William and Charlie; Frank, who married Nettie Powers, by whom he has four children: Estella, Eveline, Georgia and a boy not yet named; Elsie, wife of George Bassett, by whom she has a daughter, Alice: and Grant, who married Lillie Grant. They have one child. Genevieve.

In politics, Mr. Rulison is a stalwart Republican and has filled various township offices of trust. He was a member of the School Board for several terms. was Assessor, Road Commissioner, Town Clerk, and for eight years was Justice of the Peace. His duties were ever promptly and faithfully discharged and won him the commendation of all concerned. He has always been a great reader, is a well-informed man and an intelligent citizen, who well deserves the high regard in which he is held. He and his estimable wife have traveled life's journey together for fifty years. The family circle has never been broken except by the death of one grandchild, Emil, who was killed by being kicked by a horse, on the 26th of June, 1892, and altogether their lives have been blessed with happiness and prosperity.

DWARD B. BALL was born in Worcester County, Mass., March 17, 1840, and is a son of Edward and Harriet (Hapgood) Ball. The reputation he enjoys in Boone County is not only that of a substantial and progressive farmer but an intelligent and thoroughly posted man in all public affairs. His farm is one of the most finely improved in Boone Township, as the reader will conclude by a glance at the view of the place presented on another page.

The marriage of our subject on the 12th of June, 1867, brought him a faithful helpmate in the person of Miss Mary Cowan, who was born in Fall River, Mass., on the 8th of January, 1848. She is the daughter of Robert and Mary (Carmant) Cowan, natives of Scotland, the father born in Rothesay and the mother in Glasgow. The former emigrated to America when a young man and settled in Rhode Island where he followed the spinner's trade until 1851, when he came to Boone County, 1ll. They were the parents of eight children, four of whom are living.

Our subject has always been a resident of the old home place since it was purchased by his father in 1855, and after marriage he took his wife there. He is engaged in general mixed farming, and all his operations on the farm are conducted in a manner suggestive of thoroughness and enterprise. He has a substantial home and comfortable outbuildings, and is classed among the representative farmers of his section. He bought his father's interest in the home place and now has two hundred and three acres, all well cultivated, he and his father making all the improvements but those on sixty acres.

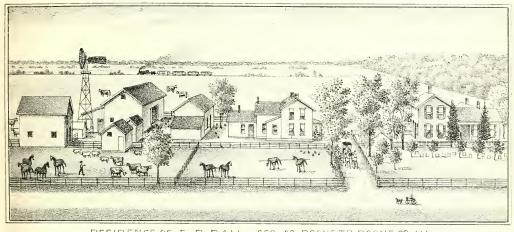

In his political views, Mr. Ball affiliates with the Republican party, and his first Presidential vote was for Abraham Lincoln, for the second term. He has never aspired to office but has been elected to a number of different local positions and discharged the duties incumbent upon them in a manner very satisfactory to all concerned. Socially, he is a member of the M. W. No. 675, of Poplar Grove, and the A. O. U. W. No. 158, Poplar Grove. Mrs. Ball is one of the educated and highly esteemed ladies of her township. She is a member of the Ladies' Aid Society, and was the first of her sex to be elected School Trustee in Boone Township. Her election bears testimony to her popularity, for she received every vote polled. It is hardly necessary to add that she is discharging the duties of that position in a very capable and efficient manner.

Mr. and Mrs. Ball became the parents of two children, one of whom survives, William D., born August 27, 1882. Edward A., born January 28, 1871, died when not quite two months old. The home life of this esteemed couple is full of sunshine and happiness, each member cultivating those qualities which are productive of the best results.

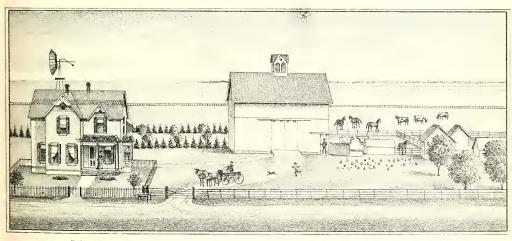

ILLIAM D. McCABE. Our subject is a fair example of many young Scotchmen, who are generously endowed by nature, and ambitious to grow to their fullest height in this land of great possibilities, and although he has had some drawbacks that might have discouraged a less constant nature, he has gone on undaunted in his career and is now one of the foremost farmers of Bonus Township, Boone County. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on the 18th of March, 1842, and is a son of George and Jeanette (Milligan) McCabe, also natives of that country, in which the father passed the closing years of his life. The mother is now a resident of Boone County, and is eighty years of age. The paternal grandparents of our subject came to America and died in Wisconsin at the age of seventy and eighty years, respectively.

Our subject was one of four children, but only he and a sister are now living. He was but four years of age when he was brought to America by his parents, and was a resident of the State of New York for five years. He then came to Boone County, Ill., and here grew to mature years. During the Civil War, he was filled with a strong desite to aid his country, and in 1861 enlisted in Company 1, Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, under Capt. R. Kennicott, and served not only through the entire war, but was on detail work for a year afterward. He was in active service from 1861 to 1865, as well as the winter following, and was in many of the bloodiest and most destructive battles. He was wounded at the battle of Prairie Grove, Ark., and took part in every battle and skirmish in which his company and regiment participated. It is only necessary to glance over the record of his company and regiment to understand what he had to go through with in fighting for the Union, and he has every reason to be proud of his career as one of the boys in blue.

In selecting his companion in tife, Mr. McCabe made a happy choice, for Miss Lucy A. Jackson, who became his wife on the 20th of May, 1869, is a lady of excellent judgment, refinement and culture and a noted housekeeper, as the interior of her fine home attests. Their happy union has been still further brightened by the advent of two children, both sons, who are as follows: Charles W., born in this county on the 28th of August, 1874, and George G., on the 15th of May, 1879. Our subject settled on his present farm after his return from Chicago in 1872, and is the owner of one hundred and forty acres of the best land to be found in the section. On another page may be found a view of his elegant residence which he erected at a cost of $2,500, and he is now about as pleasantly located as one would well wish to be. He has every modern improvement, and there is an air of refinement and comfort in this rural home that renders it attractive to all. Mrs, McCabe's aged mother, a cheerful and most agreeable old lady, makes her home with her daughter and is passing the sunset of her life in quiet and con-(For life of Mrs. McCabe's parents, Charles and Mary A. (Stowe) Jackson, see sketch of N. D. Jackson.)

Mr. McCabe east his first Presidential vote for Gen. Grant for the first term and has been an ardent Republican in his political views since. He has held several local offices and has been Secretary and Treasurer of the town School Board for years. He is a prominent G. A. R. man and a member of Post No. 161 (Camp Hurlburt), of Belvidere.

ONAS N. ANDERSON, who is now living a retired life at No. 130 Bremer Street, Rockford, has been a resident of this city since the spring of 1866. Of Swedish birth, he was born in the Province of Smoland, April 13, 1827, and came of an old Swedish family. His parents both died in their native land. His father, Andrew Nelson, reached the advanced age of eighty-three years. He was a mechanic and farmer. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Martha Hickstrom, was called to her final rest at the age of four-score years. Both were members of the Lutheran Church, and were highly respected people.

Our subject belongs to quite a large family, but is the only member that has made a permanent location in America. His boyhood days were passed uneventfully, and at the age of sixteen, he began learning the blacksmith's trade, which he has made his life work, and in pursuit of that occupation he has acquired a good competence. After attaining to mature years, he was married, in his native province, to Miss Ingra Nelson, who was born in May, 1828, and, like her husband, is the sole representative of her people in this country. All the other members of the family died in Sweden. Her parents, Nels and Gonda (Mangenson) Johnson, were farming people, and passed away at the ages of sixty-three and eighty-five years, respectively, Mrs. Anderson has proved a true and faithful helpmate to her husband, and is a most estimable lady, who in this community has many friends.

Thirteen children have been born to our subject and his wife, nine sons and four daughters, but only three sons are now living: Otto is a blacksmith in the employ of the Skandia Plow Company. He wedded Clara Anderson, and they reside on Fifth Avenue, between Fourth and Fifth Streets. August is a well-educated young man, and a skilled musician. He was graduated from the Conservatory of Music, and is an able teacher. He is also a member of the well-known Fitzgerald Band of Rockford, in which he plays the solo clarionet, and for some time has been a member of the church choir, and its organist. John, who is also quite proficient in music, completes the family.

Mr. Anderson and his sons all support the Republican party, and himself and wife are members of the First Lutheran Church, to which they have belonged since coming to this country. He began work in this city as a blacksmith, and for many years followed his trade in connection with leading manufactories of Rockford. His business career has been a successful one, and with the competence he has acquired, he is now enabled to live a retired life. Since the organization of the Skandia Plow Company, he has been one of its stockholders, and for many years was a stockholder in the Union Grocery Store. About three years ago, he laid aside all business cares, and is now enjoying the rest which he has so truly carned and richly deserves.

HARLES W. SHARP, house decorator, and a well-known business man of Belvidere, is one of the worthy citizens that Ohio has furnished to Boone County. His birth occurred on January 11, 1858, in Lake County. He is one of five children born unto David and Mary (Barker) Sharp: Hattie A., John W., Charles W., Nettie F. and Grace A. The parents, natives of England, emigrated to this country in an early day, and after some years spent in Ohio, came to Illinois.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who acquired his early education in the district schools of his native county and when a lad of ten years came with his parents to Livingston County, III. His education was completed in the schools of Fairbury, Livingston County, and at the age of twelve years he began to learn the trade of a painter and paper hanger. During vacations he followed that trade in Fairbury until eighteen years of age, when he started out in life for himself and went to California. He spent some time in the West, engaging in painting and paper hanging in California, Colorado and the Territory of Montana, until 1883, when he became a resident of Watertown, S. Dak.

The following year, Mr. Sharp was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie White, a native of Chicago and a daughter of Capt. White, who owned a vessel and was quite prominent on the Lakes. They resided in Dakota until 1887, when they came to Belvidere, where, in company with his brother John W., Mr. Sharp established a grocery store and soon built up an extensive trade. They still engage in that line and enjoy a liberal patronage. In 1890, our subject also began business as a house decorator, and to that branch of trade gives his personal supervision, while his brother manages the grocery store.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Sharp have been born two children, one living, Lon C. They have a wide circle of friends and acquaintances in this community and are highly esteemed. Mr. Sharp is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M.; Kishwaukee Chapter No. 60, R. A. M.; Big Thunder Lodge No. 28, I. O. O. F.; the Encampment and Belvidere Lodge No. 289, K. P. In his business career he has met with excellent success. He is sagacious and far-sighted, enterprising and industrious, and in both lines of his business has secured a liberal patronage.

SCAR F. HALSEY, who ranks among the well-to-do farmers of Seward Township, Winnebago County, had his birth in New York City, N. Y., May 27, 1827. His parents, Samuel and Mary Halsey, were born on Long Island and in Ulster County, N. Y., respectively. The mother, prior to her marriage, bore the name of Mary Wygant, the family being New Yorkers for several generations back, and originally from Germany.

The father of our subject is now living, at the advanced age of ninety-one years. His father, Jesse Halsey, was also a native of Long Island, where his decease occurred; he was a sea-captain. Our subject's great-grandfather came from England at an early day. Osear F., of this sketch, remained at home in Marlboro, N. Y., until attaining his majority, and from there in July, 1848, came to Illinois. He came to Roscoe, Winnebago County, and for two years worked out on farms by the month. In 1849, he purchased his present farm from the Government, upon which he removed a year later, and has placed upon it all the improvements which will be found upon the estate of an intelligent and progressive farmer.

The lady to whom our subject was married, May 4, 1855, was Miss Lydia Hawkins, a native of Ovid, Seneca County, N. Y. She was born March 1, 1827, and died in this county, November 18, 1888. Mrs. Halsey was the daughter of Jonathan Hawkins, who was a native of the Empire State, where his decease occurred.

To our subject and his wife have been born five children; Mary E.; William H. S., who is married and the father of two children; Anna M., also married; Nancy L. and Samuel P. The children have all been given good educations, and move in the best circles of Seward Township. Mr. and Mrs. Halsey are members of the Congregational Church, and, in politics, our subject was first a Whig, then a Prohibitionist, and now votes the Republican ticket.

SEORGE M. TUTTLE is one of the practical and representative agriculturists of this section, and from early boyhood was familiar with the occupation of farming, having learned the details of the work from his father, who was a worthy tiller of the soil. Our subject was born near Watertown, Jefferson County, N. Y., in 1827, and was the son of Chancy Tuttle, who was also born in Jefferson County, and who died in Beloit, Wis., in 1872, when seventy-five years of age. The elder Mr. Tuttle moved to Illinois, near Chicago, in in September, 1834, and came from Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., to Chicago by the Lakes, having a very rough trip of about three weeks. His wife and five children, four sons and one daughter, came with He made a claim of one hundred and sixty acres near Chicago, but having very little ready means, he sold this for $150, and took another claim of one hundred and sixty acres five miles north of the lirst. Within a year and a half, he sold that for $100, and subsequently moved to Rock County, Wis., near Beloit, where he took still another claim of a quarter-section, which he got entered at one-half per cent., a deed for which he obtained from the Government in due course of time when the land came on the market.

This settlement was made soon after the Black Hawk War, in 1836. They made this last move with ox-teams on the Government trail and were about six days in fording streams and worrying through sloughs. At one time they lost the way, got fast in a slough near Chicago, and were out all night, being obliged to sleep on the ground. The next day they reached the cabin that Mr. Tuttle had built the year before. He made a home here on three hundred and twenty acres, and erected good buildings, fences, etc., etc., and made his home here for thirty years. His wife, whose maiden name was Amy Weaver, of New York State, came of Dutch parentage. She died at her home near Beloit, Wis., in 1855, when fifty years of age. They were the parents of seven sons and three daughters, three of whom died young. Those now living are named as follows: Chester, Franklin. George M., Permelia, Julia M. and Jennie M.

George M. Tuttle was reared on the farm, and it was but natural, perhaps, that when starting out for himself he should choose agricultural pursuits as his calling in life. He received but a limited education, and when twenty-one years of age started out to fight his own way in life, working the first year for $12 per month. He was united in marriage to Miss Lydia Hallock, a native of New York, and a daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Rice) Hallock, both natives of New York State, and the father a tiller of the soil. Mrs. Hallock died when a young woman, and her husband when in the prime of life, on the Isthmus of Panama.

After his marriage, Mr. Tuttle and his young wife moved to Minnesota, but after three years spent in that State, Mr. Tuttle sold out and returned to Wisconsin. He was a volunteer in the Civil War, enlisting in the Forty-third Wisconsin Infantry as a private. After returning home, he came to Roscoe, Ill., and bought two hundred and fifteen acres on section 1, paying about $30 an acre for unimproved land. He made this his home for twenty-two years, erecting buildings and fences, and getting under plow about one hundred and forty acres of timber land. He is still residing on that farm, but has a fine new residence, which was erected in 1889. His son resides in the old house. Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle lost their only daughter, Amy Lillian, at the age of three years. Their four sons are named as follows: Chester L., William F., Eugene E. and Charles A., all now married but the latter, who is a student in Beloit College, preparing for the ministry in the Methodist Episcopal Church. For six years he has ridden his horse from his home place to Beloit, a distance of three and a half miles.

Mr. Tuttle has been a careful, industrious farmer, and has accumulated a comfortable competence, with the assistance of his industrious and estimable wife, both having worked hard for their comfortable home. Mrs. Tuttle's death occurred April 1, 1892, her health having been rather poor for some time. Mr. Tuttle is still actively engaged in his chosen occupation, and is strong and vigorous. He is a stanch Republican in his political views, and was once called an Abolitionist. He has held the office of Justice of the Peace for two terms, and holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Beloit. Mrs. Tuttle having also been a member of that church.

RANCIS BLACHFORD. In mentioning those of foreign birth who have become closely associated with the farming interests of Boone County, we should not fail to present au outline of the career of Mr. Blachford, for he is one who has fully borne out the reputation of that class of industrious, energetic and far-seeing men of English nativity who have risen to prominence in different portions of this county. There is a sterling quality about the nationality that particularly lits them for pioneers, and we, as Americans, are greatly indebted to settlers of English birth for the rapid advancement in our civilization. Mr.

Blachford was born in Wiltshire, England, on the 21st of July, 1819, and is a brother of Stephen Blachford (see sketch for family history). Now nearly seventy-three years of age, the progress that the country has made, and especially that portion in which he lives, is due to the energy and perseverance of such men as our subject. Like his brother Stephen, he has suffered all the hardships and privations of pioneer life, and the name of Blachford is already connected with the history of the country.

The subject of this sketch selected his wife in the person of Miss Jane Atkinson, who was born in Canada on the 1st of May, 1833, and their union was solemnized on the 29th of November, 1855. She was one of eleven children, six of whom are now living, born to the marriage of James and Margaret (McClatchey) Atkinson, the father a native of Lincolnshire, England, and the mother of Canada. The former was born in 1803, and died when eighty years of age, but the latter is still living, is a resident of this county, and is now eighty-four years of age.

To our subject and his wife was born an interesting family of seven children, all of whom are living but one. They are as follows: Francis, a native of this county, is now engaged in farming in Dakota; William R., also a native of this county, makes his home in Dakota; Margaret married L. Shattuck and has a son; Eli R., residing in Belvidere, married Miss Ann Gathen and is the father of two sons; Stephen D. is at home; Harvey is engaged in business in Belvidere; and Albert is at home. All the children were born in this county. Some of Mrs. Blachford's people were of Scotch-Irish descent.

Mr. Blachford, excepting a few years when he worked in the pinery, has always remained on the old home place, and hauled his grain and produce to Chicago, and is well known in the county where he has made his home since 1835. He is a Democrat in his political liking, and is not a member of any church, although quite a regular attendant. He is noted for his open-heartedness, geniality and the public spirit that distinguishes his countrymen, and is a fine specimen of the industrial class that Great Britain sends to our shores. He has ever been a loyal adherent of American institutions and his adopted country is to him, par excellence, the country of his heart. His well-cultivated farm attests his success in life.

HARLES F. BLOMBERG, Superintendent of the Union Furniture Factory of Rockford, one of the leading and largest enterprises of the city, is a gentleman whose abilities and sound judgment have no equal in this line. He was a promoter of the enterprise and is now a Director and large stockholder of the same. He is also a stockholder in the Chair and Furniture Factory, a stockholder and Director in the Mantel and Furniture Factory, and a stockholder in the Royal Sewing Machine Company. He is one of the successful and representative Swedes of Rockford, and is highly respected both in social and business circles. Since 1876, he has been identified with the furniture factories of the city, and especially with the Union, which was organized in that vear.

In the year 1874, Mr. Blomberg came to this country from Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, where he first saw the light December 26, 1850. As he grew to manhood, he learned the cabinetmaker's trade under his father, John Anderson, who was a skilled workman. The latter remained in his native land all his life and died when sixtyfive years of age. He was a man well respected and was a member of the State Church, as was also his wife, whose maiden name was Brighta Swesen. She died in her native province when fifty-five years of age. They were the parents of six children, all now living and all married: Sophia, now Mrs. Johnson, resides in Sweden; August A., a farmer of Sweden; Clause A., a farmer and carpenter of Sweden; Charles F., our subject; Emma, wife of Mr. Norstron, resides near Belvidere, Boone County, and Lotta, wife of A. Bargstrom, resides in Rockford.

Charles F. Blomberg is the founder of the family in America. He left his native soil on the 17th of July, 1871, and made his appearance in Rockford, Ill., on the 6th of August of the same year. September 14, 1875, he wedded Miss Christina J. Jasperson, a native of Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, born November 12, 1818, and a lady possessing many virtues. She came to this country in 1872 with her father and brother. The former, Jasper Carlson, was born October 17, 1820, and is now seventy-two years of age. He makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Blomberg, and is a member of the Lutheran Church. His wife died in Sweden in 1871, when past tifty-six years of age. She was also a Lutheran in belief.

Mrs. Blomberg's brother, Prof. John Jasperson, is a graduate of R. I. Augustana College, and is now at the head of that institution. He is also a minister of some note, and carried on his ministerial duties in Burlington for three years. Mrs. Blomberg has another brother, Charles Jasperson, who is in the employ of J. G. Chick. She has three sisters in this country: Mrs. Johanna Roman, of Rockford; Mrs. Lottie Frieberg, also of this city, and Mrs. Mary Liden, of Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. Blomberg are the parents of five children, only one now living, Clause E., a bright boy sixteen years old, who is attending the public schools. Those deceased are: Helga O. Albin and two infants. Mr. Blomberg is identified with the Republican party in politics, and he and his wife are members of the First Lutheran Church.

The attention of the reader is invited to a lithographic portrait of Mr. Blomberg which is presented on an accompanying page.

AMES PARTRICK. A stranger would not be in this section long without hearing the name which stands at the head of this biographical notice and learning that it is the cognomen of a prominent citizen of Winnebago. For many years an agriculturist, he is still the proprietor of a fine farm in Winnebago Township and another in Seward Township, and in addition to this property owns six houses in the village, where he ranks among its well-to-do citizens. He is self-made, for at the time he came to Rockford, many years ago, he was about even with the world, but his financial ability and integrity have aided him in attaining to his present high standing.

Born in Marston, Bedfordshire, England, in October, 1819, our subject is the son of Samuel Partrick, also a native of that shire, where he was reared, married and spent his entire life. The maiden name of our subject's mother was Elizabeth Cook, a most estimable lady, who bore her husband cleven children. James of this sketch, and his sister, Esther Chandler, now a resident of Pennsylvania, were the only members of the family to come to America.

The original of this sketch was reared to agricultural pursuits in his native land, and October 11, 1845, set sail from Liverpool on the vessel "Elsonora," being accompanied on the voyage by his wife. The young couple landed at New York on the 22d of December, whence they went to South Middletown, Orange County, and resided until October, 1816, when they started for Illinois. They journeyed by the way of the Lakes to Chicago, where Mr. Partrick was taken sick and was compelled to remain for two months, after which he came overland to Rockford in a lumber wagon, and found employment with a Mr E. Gregory, with whom he remained for two months. He was then engaged in doing various kinds of work, and chopping wood, for which he received $1 per cord, and $1 per hundred for splitting rails.

In 1847, James Partrick purchased one hundred and sixty acres of wild land in Seward Township, for which he paid $300. Locating on the place two years later, he was there successfully engaged in cultivating the soil until 1876, when he rented his property and came to Winnebago, where he is quite extensively interested in real estate.

Our subject was wedded to Rachel Faulkner, a native of Bedfordshire. England, in July, 1843. The lady was the daughter of John and Elizabeth Faulkner, who came to America in 1846, and departed this life in Winnebago County. Mrs. Partrick died in February, 1857, and in September of that year our subject was married to Clara M. Rundall, who was born in Herkimer County, N. Y., and is the daughter of Gibert Rundall, of New York State and of Euglish aueestry. The six children living were born of the second union and are: Lucy, Mrs. James Bryant; Ezula, Mrs. Levi Faulkner; Rachel, Theron, Martha and Edith. Mrs. Faulkner has four children: Fay, Susan, Herbert and Volney.

ACOB HAZLETT, now living retired at his pleasant home at No. 201 North Second Street, is one of the old settlers of Winnebago County, having come hither in 1853. On locating in this county, he brought with him a stock of dry-goods worth $5,000 or $6,000, and with these went to Rockton and established himself in business. Not finding it a good location, he disposed of his goods, and seeing a good opening in Rockford, came to this city and opened an hotel in the old Crystal Palace.

Mr. Hazlett later, in company with a Mr. Miller, opened up in the boot and shoe business, which they operated successfully together until 1866, when our subject conducted affairs on his own account, and buying out the stock of C. C. Briggs, followed that line of trade for twenty-two years. In the meantime, Mr. Hazlett purchased a portion of the block bounded by North First and Market Streets, where he erected a good residence, besides the one in which he makes his home. Since 1886, he has partially retired from active business life, having a fine income from the real estate which he owns. Mr. Hazlett is public-spirited and has always been deeply interested in the upbuilding of the city.

The original of this sketch, with Mr. C.C. Briggs and George Troxell, was one of the original stockholders of the building of the Kenosha Raihroad, in which venture he lost heavily. He was born in Preston County, Va., November 17, 1813, and was only four and a half years old when his parents came West to Allegany County, Md., where he grew to mature years and engaged in the milling business with his father for twenty-two years. He in the meantime built a saw and grist mill with a carding mill attached and later added to his possessions a store, all of which he operated for some time and then moved his stock of dry-goods to Fayette County, Pa., where he was successfully engaged in business for some time. He made his advent into Rockford in 1853, with whose interests he has been prominently identified since that time.

The father of our subject, Samuel Hazlett, was a native of Laneaster County, Pa., while his father was born in the North of Ireland, and emigrated to the United States during the Revolutionary War. He located in Pennsylvania, where he followed his trade of a millwright, and later being pressed into the service of the Colonists, became a soldier in the Revolutionary War. He later returned to Laneaster County, and again establishing himself at his trade, was thus engaged until his decease, prior to which time, however, his house was totally destroyed by fire.

The grandfather of our subject at his decease left one son, Samuel, and a daughter, Catherine. The son on attaining manhood learned the trade of a millwright under his father, remained in Lancaster County for a time and later became a miller and a well-known resident in Allegany County, Md., where he spent his last years, dying at the age of seventy-five. He was an honest, hardworking man and had a host of acquaintances in the county, where he had spent so many years. He was prominent in politics, casting his first Presidential vote for Thomas Jefferson. The maiden name of our subject's mother was Catherine Fike, a native of the same county and State as was her husband. Her father was a native of Hesse-Darmstadt and came to America as a soldier during the Revolutionary War. Her parents were John and Margaret Fike, who died at the home of Mrs. Hazlett in Allegany County, Md. Mrs. Catherine Hazlett survived her husband some years, her decease occurring in Fayette County, Pa., when seventyeight years of age. She was a member of the Dunkard Church, of which denomination her husband was a preacher.

Jacob Hazlett is the youngest but one of seven sons and two daughters born to his parents, and with the exception of his sister Susan, now Mrs. Samuel Welsh, of Winterset, Iowa, is the only one living. He was married in Somerset County, Pa., to Miss Jane Rush, who was born in that county in 1819, and was a daughter of John and Margaret (Hannah) Rush. Her parents were of Irish descent, who after their marriage lived in Somerset County, where the father carried on a farm until 1841, when they removed to Westmoreland County, that State, and in 1852 came to Illinois and purchased a home in Rockford. They both departed this life in 1858, the father dying in September and the mother in October of that year, firm in the faith of the Baptist Church. The grandfather of Mrs. Hazlett, Jacob Rush, was a patriot in the Revolutionary War, participating in the battle of Bennington, and died when past ninety years of age.

The wife of our subject is one of the five sons and seven daughters born to her parents, two of whom are deceased. The eldest is eighty-six years of age and the youngest sixty-five. Mr. and Mrs. Hazlett are active members of the Baptist Church, and in politics, though formerly a Democrat, now yous the Prohibition ticket.

EORGE II. BARBER is classed among the leading agriculturists of Shirland Township, Winnebago County, where he has a well-improved farm, and makes a specialty of dairying, keeping on his place about twenty milch cows, whose product he sends to the creamery at Shirland. Mr. Barber is a strong supporter of Republican principles, and has been prominent in local affairs, serving as School Director for fourteen years, and Highway Commissioner one term. His religious views find expression in the Methodist Episcopal faith, he and his wife being valued members of the society of that denomination in Shirland.

A native of New York, our subject was born in Westmoreland Township, Oneida County, January 30, 1826, and is a son of George Barber, whose birth occurred in 1803, in Washington County, that State. The latter-named gentleman was an agriculturist, and the son of John Barber, a native of Ireland. Our subject is one in a family of two sons and three daughters. His sister, Mary A., is now Mrs. Otis King, of Lockport, N. Y.; Sarahi is a resident of Clinton, Oneida County, that State;

William F. is a Justice of the Peace at the village of New York Mills, N. Y.; and Ellen, Mrs. John Barber, departed this life in Oneida County, when about forty years of age, leaving one son.

The father of our subject died in 1843, in New York, and his good wife, who survived him some thirty years, was seventy-seven years of age at her demise. Our subject grew up a farmer boy, and like many of the lads of that early day, had a limited opportunity for receiving an education, being compelled to assist his father in earrying on the farm. When twenty-five years of age, he started out in the world on his own account, and for five years was in the employ of the New York Central Railroad.

The lady who became the wife of our subject in 1857 was Miss Adeline, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Worrell) Bradley, natives of Niagara County, N. Y., where they were farmers, and reared two sons and four daughters. They died at the respective ages of fifty and seventy-three years. All the children are living with the exception of one sister, Abigail, who was the wife of James O. King, of Lockport, N. Y.

Our subject came West to Illinois in October, 1865, at which time he purchased ninety-one aeres of the land included in his present farm, for which he paid $9 per aere. Within two years he returned East for his bride, and since that time they have been permanent residents of Shirland Township, where they have reared six children, and buried one daughter, Jennic M., who died May 4, 1886, aged twenty-two years. Those living are Sarah, Mrs. Osear Boyden; Charles, who married Ada Bates, of Dakota; Carrie A., Nellic G. and Emory. They have all been given good educations, and litted to become useful citizens.

R.S. EMELINE (OLIN) JOHNSON.
Among the valuable and finely-improved farms of Winnebago Township, is the pleasant home occupied and owned by Mrs. Johnson, and comprising one hundred and nine acres, upon which the various improvements have been made which mark it as the abode of a refined and intelligent family. Although it has been in her possession but a short time, having been purchased in 1890, she has already effected considerable improvement in its environments and buildings, and is justly entitled to consideration among the representative residents of the township.

Born in Erie County, N. Y., Mrs. Johnson is the daughter of David Olin, who was born near Providence, R. I., and the granddaughter of Anthony Olin, who was born in the same place and there spent his entire life. He married Abigail Remington, who, like himself, lived and died in Rhode Island. The father of Mrs. Johnson was reared in his native State and removed to New York in his early manhood, locating in the town of Sardinia, and there engaged in farming until 1852, He then removed to Wiseonsin and settled in Spring Valley upon a tract of timber land, which he commenced at once to improve and which he continued to reside upon until his death. While a resident of Sardinia, he was united in marriage with Miss Eleth Chency, who was born in Chautauqua Connty, N. Y., the daughter of Daniel and Jane (Munson) Cheney.

When her parents removed to Wisconsin, our subject was only eight years old, and she made her home beneath the parental roof until her marriage to George Prior, a native of New York, who came West in his young manhood and settled near Janesville, Wis. He enlisted in 1864 as a member of the Twelfth Wisconsin Infantry and died while in service. On New Year's Day, 1876, our subject became the wife of Joseph Johnson, who was born in England and emigrated to America when a young man and located in Rockford. He engaged in farming and bought land at different times, until when he died he was the owner of three hundred and seventy acres of well-improved land, on which good buildings had been placed. His death occurred in November, 1883, mourned by a host of warm personal friends.

After the death of Mr. Johnson his widow made her home on the farm which he had purchased until 1889, when she rented it to tenants and removed to Rockford, buying a home in that beautiful city. In 1890, she traded her property in the beautiful city of Rockford and overlooking the Rock River, stands a palatial residence, one of the most elegant and attractive in the county, and crected by Mr. Blake in 1870. Nine happy years he passed within its walls and then, October 8, 1879, passed away from the busy scenes of earth. His life of seventy-one years was a busy and useful one, filled with successes and crowned with the friendship of the best citizens of Rockford.

Thutetur Blake

Forest City for a farm in Winnebago Township, where she now resides. She is the mother of two children, Ella and Harry, by her first union, and of her second marriage, one child, Myrtic, was born. The position occupied by Mrs. Johnson and her children in the social circles is prominent, while her management of the estate left by her husband proves the possession of great executive ability and remarkable judgment.

Born in Oxford County, Me., October 29, 1809, our subject was the son of Thatcher Blake, Sr. The father was born in Taunton, Mass., February 22, 1771. and died in Maine, October 29, 1839. On his mother's side he was a lineal descendant of the celebrated Edward Winslow, who came over in the "Mayflower" in 1620, and is known in history for the prudence, intelligence and wisdom which provided a means of securing the confidence of, and intercourse with, the Indians during the early settlement of this country. In the history of the development of the New England States the family took an active part, and possessed the hardy and sturdy character that had enabled their forefathers to get a foothold in the New World.

Imbued with the spirit of his ancestors, it is not strange that our subject sought a home in the wild and sparsely settled West. He was one of the three oldest settlers of Rockford and Winnebago County, being associated with Stephen Mack and Germanicus Kent in the pioneer task of improving the land. He possessed the courageous spirit which enabled him to undertake the hardships necessary to effect a settlement among not entirely peaceable Indians. Prior to coming hither, he had gained a practical knowledge of agriculture on the home farm, where he had been reared, and had also been a teacher during the winter season.

Upon attaining to his majority, Mr. Blake came West to Galena, this State, where he formed the acquaintance of Germanicus Kent, a native of Vermont, who had gone South, married a Southern lady, and returned North to Galena. The two gentlemen became close friends and purchased an Indian canoe in which they journeyed down the Mississippi River and investigated the lands on both sides, finally deciding to locate near the mouth of what is now called Kent Creek, a small stream emptying into the Rock River at Rockford. The name given to this city was suggested by the fact that at low water there was a good fording place where the dam now is.

No better men could found a city than Messrs. Kent and Blake. The latter gentleman had decided tastes for farming and made a claim to a large tract of land near the town. After improving the land, he retired to the city, where he engaged to some extent as a real-estate dealer and built some good houses. A man of noble character, he had a host of warm personal friends who honored him as one of the best citizens of the place. He was a member of the Unitarian Church, and, in his political belief, was first a Whig and later a Republican.

The marriage of Mr. Blake in Freeport united him with Miss Mary J. Goodhue, and this wedding ceremony, which was solemnized in November, 1836, was the first ever performed in Stephenson County, and the second in Northern Illinois. To Mrs. Blake belongs the honor of being the oldest living settler in Rockford or Winnebago Counties. She was born in Peterborough, N. H., August 29, 1813, and belonged to a worthy New England family. Her parents died when she was a child, and thus orphaned, she began to earn her living as a teacher when quite young. She came to Stephenson County, this State, where her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Sanborn, resided. The venerable lady still survives and resides at the old homestead in Rockford.

A lady of courageous disposition and sincere character, Mrs. Biake occupies a warm place in the affection of all who have ever met her, and she delights to relate incidents of old pioneer days, when few comforts were in the reach of the early settlers, and hardships and trials were innumerable. She belongs to the Unitarian Church and is everactive in charitable and benevolent measures. Her daughter Katic is the widow of Clarence Bean, formerly a prominent druggist, who died in Rockford in 1888. Mrs. Bean makes her home with her mother, as do also her three sons: Thatcher B., Winslow and Clarence, bright lads who are the pride and hope of both mother and grandmother.

The attention of the reader is invited to the lithographic portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Blake, presented in this connection.

ILLIAM DICKINSON was born in the village of Haywood, Parish of Bridwalaee, Yorkshire, England, July 23, 1822. He is at present residing on a farm in Burritt Township, Winnebago County, on which he has erected a comfortable stone house, and planted fruit and shade trees. He is making a success of his ealling and ranks among the well-to-do agriculturists of the county.

William Dickinson, the father of our subject, was a native of the above-named parish and shire, as was also his father, William Dickinson, and in turn, his father, the great-grandfather of our subject. The latter-named gentleman spent his entire life in that country, and dued when nearly one hundred years of age, being buried in Owston Churchyard. The grandfather of our subject was a carpenter, which occupation he followed until his death, in Yorkshire; his remains lie buried at Doneaster. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Pickering.

The direct progenitor of our subject always followed the trade of a carpenter, which he learned from his father, and at his decease was also buried at Doncaster. Rebecca Parkin, his wife, was born in Yorkshire, England, and bore her husband five children, Sarah, William, George, Charles and Lucy.

our subject being the only one who ever came to America. He commenced to learn the trade of a carpenter and wagonmaker when fourteen years of age, and when twenty-one did "jour" work until 1845, when he came with his wife to America, sailing from Liverpool August 6, in the vessel "Rochester," which landed them in New York after a voyage of three weeks. Coming directly to Illinois, Mr. Dickinson came overland from Chicago to Rockford at a time when this now prosperous city was a small village. He began life here working land on shares, and after the Mexican War he purchased a land warrant and secured a tract of land, which he now occupies.

There being no railroads in this locality, Mr. Dickinson marketed his grain in Chicago, Milwaukee and different points in Wisconsin. He had his wheat ground at Rockton, and disposed of his flour in the mining towns of Wisconsin. In 1841, he was married to Ann Coward, who was born in Yorkshire, England, January 10, 1833, and was the daughter of William and Ann (Cellars) Coward, also natives of Yorkshire, England, where their decease occurred. To our subject and his wife have been born ten ehildren. Those now living are Rebecca, now Mrs. Wallace Hooker; Emily, now Mrs. Frederick Milne; Frederick, George, Florence; Annie, now Mrs. James Robins; and Theodore. William, the third son, died in his twenty-fourth year, and Charles, the next in order of birth, when twenty-three years. In his political relations, Mr. Dickinson is a stanch Democrat.

NSEL SCHELLENGER. It is with sincere pleasure that the biographer responds to the call to give the life facts of any of our fellow-citizens who fought for the honor of the old flag during the dark days of the Civil War. The good gentleman whose name appears at the head of this sketch enlisted at Black River Falls, Wis., for three months, but as his company was dishanded, he again enlisted from Sharon, November 4, 1861, in Company C, Thirteenth Wisconsin Infantry, and going to the front in Kansas formed a part of the Western Army. Mr. Schellenger re-enlisted December 15, 1863, and was discharged on account of disability, July 29, 1865, from the general hospital at Prairie du Chien.

Our subject, who is at present engaged in farming in Manchester Township, Boone County, was born in Harpersfield, Ashtabula County, Ohio, March 15, 1841, while his father, Hector Schellenger, was born in Sheffield, Mass., August 11, 1792. The latter gentleman was the son of Giddeon Schellenger, who lived and died a farmer in the above-named place. The father of our subject came to Kaskaskia in 1813, in company with two brothers, where he remained about one year, during which period he made brick by hand. At the end of that time, he returned with his brother George to Ashtabula County, and the latter built a dam on Grand River and erected saw, grist and woolen mills. The father of our subject purchased a farm in that vicinity, which he cleared from heavy tim-

The lady who became the mother of our subject was prior to her marriage Cynthia, daughter of Archelus Parker, and was born June 23, 1809, in New York. The parents of our subject, in the fall of 1855, came to Roscoe Village, where Mr. Schellenger remained a short time; then coming to Manchester Township, he purchased a farm of two hundred and eighty acres, for which he paid $3,000. A part of the family still remained in Ohio, among them Ansel, our subject, and his elder brother, who was ill. Mr. and Mrs. Schellenger reared twelve children, viz: Elmina, Edmond, Nancy, Almon, Hector, Polly (deceased), Ansel, Phæbe Ann, Emcline M., Samuel O., Silas A. and Sarah E. Almon was a volunteer in the Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, leaving home with the commission of Lieutenant, and when Capt. Cornwell was killed was appointed to take his position. He served through the war, receiving a severe bayonet wound in the ankle. Previous to being discharged, he was breveted a Major for bravery and efficiency.

He of whom we write, on returning to civil life, engaged in farming on the old homestead, which has been his home since. He was married, October 25, 1875, to Miss Delphine E., daughter of David and Emeline (Glover) Willson, natives, respectively, of New Hampshire and New York. The parents of Mrs. Schellenger came to Manchester Township in 1817, where she was born. By her union with our subject, four children have been born: Alice Mande, Blanche Marie, Marcia E. and Ralph Wilson.

Mr. Schellenger, in 1877, erected a very fine brick residence which is finished in a modern style of architecture, and furnished in a most comfortable manner. He also has a large barn on his place, and all the other buildings which go to make up a most attractive home. His estate is supplied with ornamental shrub and fruit trees, having a welltrained arbor vitæ hedge in front of the house. He has added one hundred and thirty acres to the original tract, which aggregates four hundred and ten acres, the greater portion of which is under excellent cultivation. He has raised a great quantity of clover on his place, which nets him $15 per acre, or $1.50 per bushel. He is one of the most practical and thorough farmers in this part of Illinois, and is making a success of his calling. He plants from one hundred to one hundred and fifty acres of corn, and keeps from fifteen to thirtyseven head of cows on his place. He has some very fine sheep, of which the Shropshire are his favorites.

The mother of our subject is now nearing her eighty-third birthday, and makes her home with her youngest daughter, Mrs. Blodget, in Le Roy. Our subject and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics, he votes with the Republican party.

OSEPH S. CARPENTER is one of Boone County's popular citizens, and an agriculturist of excellent reputation. He was born in Truxton, Cortland County, N. Y., on the 21st of December, 1817, and remained under the parental roof until twenty years of age, when he started out to make his own way in life.

The parents of our subject, Abner and Lura (Haskins) Carpenter, were natives of the Nutmeg State, but later became residents of New York State where they passed the remainder of their days, the father dying in Orleans and the mother in Cortland County. They were the parents of seven children, but only our subject is now living. The paternal grandfather, Noah Carpenter, was also a native of Connecticut, but when about middle age he moved to the Empire State and there received his final summons when ninety years of age.

When our subject started out to fight life's battles for himself, he first began by hiring out by the month, and in this way, by his economical habits and good management, contrived to save much of his hard-earned money. He selected his wife in the person of Miss Clarissa Gilbert, a native of Livingston County, N. Y., born in the town of Sparta, October 18, 1824, and their union was celebrated on the 19th of March, 1846. Mrs. Carpenter was the daughter of Leonard and Elizabeth (Mitchell) Gilbert, the father a native of Connecticut and the mother of Pennsylvania, the latter of Ouaker ancestry. They were the parents of six children, five of whom are now living. Mrs. Carpenter, wife of our subject, is a descendant of English ancestors, and the first of her kinsmen to settle in this country were three brothers whose descendants are now scattered in the United States, many of them professional men. Quite a number were Methodist preachers who won fame and renown in their chosen calling. Mrs. Carpenter's father was a physician of considerable consequence and was educated at Hartford, Conn. He died in Genesce County, Mich., when about eighty-seven years of age, and his wife died in Orleans County, N. Y., when about fifty-four years of age. Mrs. Carpenter's grandfather, Gardener Gilbert, was in the Revolutionary War and was Secretary for Gen. George Washington.

After marriage, our subject settled in Orleans County, N. Y., and for some time worked by the month, but becoming impressed with the idea that he could better his condition by going West, he, in the year 1848, made his first appearance in Illinois. He bought forty acres of land in Boone County, but later bought sixty-five acres where he now lives, and has been a resident of the same for the past thirty-five years. During this time he has not been idle, as the present appearance of his well-regulated farm will show. Satisfied that he has accomplished his share of hard work, our subject is now practically retired and with his worthy wife, to whose help he in a great measure attributes his success, will settle down to enjoy the result of years of hard work. Although he has taken but little interest in politics, Mr. Carpenter has held a number of local offices and is well able to hold any and all. He is a Republican and his first Presidential vote was for William II. Harrison. He has voted for every Republican President since Fremont. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter are members of the Methodist Church and are liberal contributors to the same. Mr. Carpenter favors advancement in every phase of life, and is a generous contributor both of his time and means to every measure that promises to be for the benefit of this section of the country.

Winnebago County since the early date of its settlement and is a fine representative of the sturdy, intelligent and enterprising pioneers who have improved valuable and highly productive farms from the wild prairies. Our subject was born in Underhill, Chittenden County, Vt., October 31, 1831, and is the son of Oliver and Lemira (Lee) Wilder, for a further history of whom the reader is referred to the sketch of Seth

C. Wilder.

During the residence of our subject in Vermont, as there were no railroads in the vicinity of his home, it was the custom of the farmers to visit Boston every winter, making the round trip with teams and bringing back in exchange for their produce, fish and the merchandise needed in the family. Mr. Wilder came to Illinois with his parents and while en route saw the first railroad and first train of ears he had ever seen. He assisted his father in improving a new farm and was never separated from his parents until their decase. He now owns and occupies the old homestead and is one of the best-known and highly esteemed residents in this section. For a number of years he engaged in operating a threshing machine but now carries on general farming and stock-raising. Mr. Wilder has never married. In his political views he easts his vote and influence in favor of Democratic principles.

ICHARD GARDNER. Among those whose labors are ended, but who by their worthy lives still claim remembrance, may be properly mentioned Mr. Gardner, an early resident of Winnebago, who departed this life January 14, 1883. He was one of the old citizens of the county, within whose limits he owned a valuable and highly-improved tract of land, where he and his wife established a pleasant home and assisted in developing the land from a primeval wilderness.

Our subject was born in Malpas, Cheshire, England, in 1821, and was the son of Richard and Ann (Palin) Gardner, also natives of England, who came to America in 1831, and located in Florence, Oneida County, N. Y., where they spent the rest of their days. Mr. Gardner was one of a family of ten children born to his parents, whom he accompanied to America when a lad of ten years. He was reared in Oneida County, where he resided until 1849, then, with his wife, came to Illinois, and stopped for a time in the town of Rockford.

The year after making this county his home, Mr. Gardner purchased eighty acres of land which is now included in the farm upon which his widow resides, and for which he paid §3 per acre. In 1853, he sold his property, and moving to Lafayette County, Wis., there purchased a farm and resided for fourteen years, when he again returned to Winnebago Township, and bought the old home where he was residing at the time of his decease.

The lady to whom our subject was married bore the maiden name of Abigail C. Swezey, a native of Norway, Herkimer County, N. Y., where her birth occurred August 23, 1824. Her father, the Rev. Samuel Swezey, was a native of Long Island, and was a son of Daniel Swezey, whose sketch will be found in the biography of A. J. Swezey on another page of this volume. The latter-named gentleman was a lad of twelve years when the family moved to Herkimer County, and being converted in early manhood, became a preacher in the Presbyterian Church. He was for some time in the employ of the Home Missionary Society, and, after abandoning the ministerial work, removed to his farm in the town of Norway, thence to Florence, Oneida County, which was his home until 1855, when he came to Illinois, and bought property in Winnebago Township. Here his death occurred in 1861. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Gardner was Harriet Mitchell, a native of Meriden, Conn., and the daughter of Zenas and Abigail (Merriman) Mitchell. She died in the town of Camden, N. Y., in 1853. The wife of our subject was reared and educated in her native State and resided with her parents until her marriage.

He of whom we write was a member of Winnebago Lodge No. 745, A. F. & A. M., and possessed that upright character and intelligent mind which led him to success in business life.

ETER PETERSON. If the Old Country had not contributed to the population of the New, Illinois would not have reached its present high state of development. Sweden has furnished her full quota of excellent men, and among them Peter Peterson, a resident of Rockford, who is honored and respected by all his acquaintances. He has been a resident of Rockford since 1867, when he was but thirteen years of age, and has ever taken an active interest in its growth and development. For seventeen years, he has been working as a foreman in the machine shops of the Ward Pump Company, in which he is a Director and stockholder, and he is a stockholder in the Skandia Plow Company, which is also a flourishing concern. Mr. Peterson is a firstclass man of business, and is deservedly popular, bearing an honorable reputation.

Our subject was born in Blekinge, Sweden, on the 18th of May, 1854, and, like the majority of the youth of that country, while growing up was taught a trade. He became a machinist and this has continued to be his occupation up to the He is hardworking and industrious and a most skillful and intelligent workman. In September, 1867, he and his parents took passage for the United States and after an uneventful voyage entered the harbor of New York, in which city they remained but a short time. Rockford being the point of destination. The parents are now residents of this city and are classed among the honest. upright citizens. The father, Ingval Peterson, is working in the machine department of the Emerson-Talcott Manufacturing Company, and is now sixtyfour years of age, his birth occurring on the 3d of June, 1828. His excellent wife, who was born on the 25th of June, 1830, and whose maiden name was Chasta Hockson, has been a true Lelpmate to her husband and has stood faithfully by his side in sunshine and in shower. Lake the majority of their native countrymen, they are devout members of the Zion Lutheran Church.

Of the seven sons and three daughters born to this excellent couple, three of each are now living, all but two sons married. These. William O. and Victor A., are both machinists. The daughters are: Mrs. Christina Christranson, a widow, who resides in Rockford; Hannah, wife of J. H. Lynn (see sketch), and Sarah, wife of Herman Danilson, who resides in Sweden.

The happy marriage of our subject to Miss Anna Charlotte Lindberg occurred in Rockford. was born in Wester Gotland, Sweden, February 17. 1858, and came to the United States with the family in the early part of the year 1864. After a long, tedious voyage of seven weeks, they reached New York City and came direct from there to Rockford, where the mother died on the 10th of April, 1865, when but thirty-seven years of age. She was a most worthy and excellent woman and her death was a severe blow to the alllieted family. Her maiden name was Anna G. Johanasdauter, and she became the mother of four children, one, Elizabeth, having died when four years of age. Those living are Josephine II., wife of John J. Ferrel, now residing in Chicago; Anna C., wife of our subject, and John E., a molder for the Ward Pump Company, who wedded Miss Josephine Chinquist. The father of these children, Andrew Lindberg, was married in Rockford, on the 1st of January, 1867, to Miss Sophia Hanson, a native of Sweden, who was the mother of four children by a former marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Lindberg now reside on a farm in Wright County, Minn., near Delano, and have one living son. Alfred, by this union.

Mr. Peterson is a Republican in politics and has all faith and confidence in the future of his party. He and his most excellent wife are members of the Lutheran Church. Their fine residence at No. 607 Grove Street is arranged in the interior in a very tasty and superior manner by Mrs. Peterson, who is not only a lady of intelligence and culture, but an admirable housekeeper as well.

1CHARD P. LOVELAND, who is practically living a retired life upon his farm in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, was (9) born in 1818, and is the eldest child of David and Amy (Lowrey) Loveland, whose family numbered four children, three sons and a daughter, all of whom are yet living. The paternal grandfather, Aaron Loveland, was born and reared near Hartford, Conn. Their ancestors had for a number of generations resided in New England. When our subject was a child, his parents removed to Ohio. Their family consisted of the following children: Rosswell L., of Medina, Ohio; Amanda M., now Mrs. Dr. Cass, of Chicago; Seymour C., a resident of Union County, Ohio; and our subject. The youngest of the family is now sixty-three years of age.

R. P. Loveland was born January 29, 1818, was reared upon his father's farm and spent much of his time in his father's saw and grist mills. He possessed considerable mechanical genius and has engaged in that labor much of his life. As a helpmate on life's journey, he chose Miss Hannah M. Austin, their union being celebrated in Ashland, Ohio, December 15, 1841. She was born in New Hampshire, and is a daughter of Samuel Austin. They have resided in four different States: Ohio, Wisconsin, Missouri and Illinois. When in Missouri, Mr. Loveland responded to his country's call for troops in May, 1861, and did service for three years as a member of the Seventh Missouri Regiment, which was engaged in duty all of the time in that State. As the regiment was not mustered out at the close of the war, he was a member of it for seven years.

In 1874, Mr. Loveland came with his wife to Illinois, locating in Rockford, where he made his home for five years, being employed with the N. C. Thompson Company. At the expiration of that time he removed to his farm, a tract of one hundred and six acres under a high state of cultivation and well improved. He is practically living a retired life, his son-in-law operating his land. Mr. and Mrs. Loveland have the following living children: Charles A., Lewis B., Martin E., Mrs. Amy Wilkeson, Seymour H., John T. and Mrs. A. L. Tibbetts. They also lost two children, an infant, and Minerva, who died at the age of one year. They have thirty grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

In politics, Mr. Loveland was a Democrat until his experience with the rebel Democrats in the South, and since that time he has been an ardent Republican. Whatever success he has achieved in life has been due to his own efforts, for he began life empty-handed and has made his own way in the world. He is a well-known and highly-respected citizen of this community.

of Boone County since five years of age, and is counted one of the most substantial residents of Flora Township, where he is operating a fine farm. He was born in Guilford, Me., June 15, 1840, and is the son of Samuel Stillman Graves, who was born in the town of Litchfield, ten miles from Hallowell, Me., February 28, 1806. His father, Nathaniel Graves, was born in Topsham, that State, and his father, the great-grandfather of our subject, it is thought, hailed from Reading, Mass., and early in life moved to Litchfield, Me., where he was a resident until his death.

The grandfather of our subject was reared and educated in his native State, where he learned the trade of a blacksmith, following that occupation a number of years. In 1810, he removed to Guilford, Piscataquis County, and his was the fifth family to settle in that town. He purchased and cleared a farm from the wilderness, where his death took place. The maiden name of his wife was Abigail Palmer; she was born in Scituate, Mass., and also died on the old homestead.

Samuel S. Graves was four years old when his father removed to Guilford, where he was reared, and learned and worked at the trade of a stonemason and bricklayer until 1845, when, with his wife and family, he came to Illinois and located in Boone County. He landed in Flora Township with $54 m his pocket, at a time when the land in this vicinity sold at $1.25 per acre. His brother-in-law, Jonathan Young, resided here, and the family made their home with him for a time. The father of our subject soon bought forty acres of Government land, walking to Dixon to make his first payment at the land office.

The parents of our subject were united in marriage on the 28th of August, 1830, the maiden name of the mother, who was born in Avon, Somerset County, Me., December 1, 1809, being Hannah Young. Her parents, Abraham Dorrison and Hannah (Wright) Young, were natives respectively of Massachusetts and Maine. They reared a family of six children: Andrew J., Helen M., Theodore Wallace, George H., Huldah J., and Anna J. Theodore during the late war was a soldier in Company I, Ninth Illinois Cavalry, and died in the service. In April, 1861, our subject also enlisted in the War of the Rebellion, becoming a member of Company B, Fifteenth Illinois Infantry, which was the first regiment mustered into the United States service for a period of three years. He was with his regiment in its various marches and campaigns until honorably discharged in June, 1864. His only wound was received at the battle of Shiloh, at which time he was struck on the left elbow by a spent ball.

January 3, 1869, Mr. Graves was married to Miss Varena Haller, who was born in Canton Argovie, Switzerland, December 3, 1851. Her father, Gabriel Haller, was born in the same loeality and came to America in 1852, settling at Carter's Furnace, Ky. He served in an Illinois regiment during the late war, and after his discharge located in Franklin Township, De Kalb County, where he spent his last years.

Mrs. Graves died November 5, 1885, leaving two sons: Theodore K, and Thaddeus N. The former is the husband of Birdie Vistoria St. Peter, who was born at Columbus Junction, Louisa County, Iowa, and the daughter of Theodore and Harriet (Belknapp) St. Peter. Her father served in the late war in Company A, Thirty-fifth Iowa Infautry. Mr. Graves is a member of S. A. Hurlbut Post No. 161, G. A. R., and also of Flora Camp No. 621, M. W. of A. His sons are both members of the same camp and also of the T. G. Lawlor Camp, Sons of Veterans. Our subject is a Republican in politics, and in 1890 was appointed Census Enumerator in Flora Township. Graves was elected Treasurer of Flora Township in 1888, and served until 1890, and was also a delegate to the Third Biennial Session of Master Workmen of America, held at Springfield, 111.

AVID DANIEL, the pioneer shoemaker of Blaine, came to Boone County in 1842, leaving his Ohio home on September 27, and arriving at his destination October 14, following. At that early day settlements were few and far between, and the deep silence of the wilderness was unbroken, save by the occasional ringing of the pioneer's axe and at night by the howling of wild animals. Mr. Daniel can tell many interesting stories of pioneer life, illustrative of the various phases of self-sacrifice, pathos and mutual helpfulness. A skilled workman, he has for lifty years engaged at making shoes at Blaine, and his equal as a cobbler is rarely found.

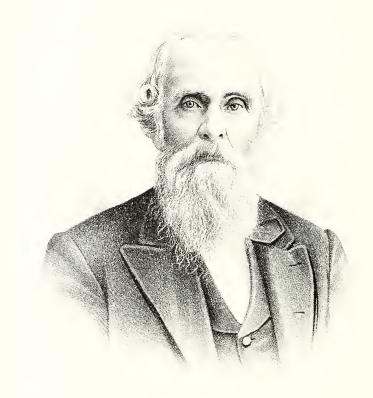

The father of our subject, John Daniel, was born in Pennsylvania and removed to Ohio when a young man. He was there married to Miss Margaret Heckathorn, and after residing many years in the Buckeye State, came West to Illinois, accompanied by his wife and eight sons. He entered Government land in Boone County and purchased other property until he became the owner of three hundred and twenty acres, where he resided until his death, August 3, 1850, at the age of fifty-nine years. David Daniel, our subject, was born in Franklin County, Ohio, April 8, 1820. He grew to manhood in his native State, where, in 1841, he married Miss Delilah Meck.

There is not one person now living in Boone County who was here at the time of the arrival of Mr. Daniel. The father of our subject, who came here in 1841, was identified with the early history of the county. He was an earnest Methodist, and his voice possessed such remarkable sweetness and power that he was called one of the "sweet singers of Israel." The members of the parental family are now widely separated and one, James, a blacksmith, mysteriously disappeared from Rockton about 1852 and nothing was ever heard of him afterward. Samuel is a minister in the Methodist Church and is at present a fruit-grower at Russellville, Ore. Wesley A. has been a practicing physician at Prior, Iowa, for thirty-eight years, and is especially successful as a surgeon, having served in that capacity in the Twenty-eighth lowa Regiment during the late war. George, who was a teacher, died in Boone County in his youth. John, who was learning the business of carriagemaking, was drowned in the Rock River at Beloit. Henry learned the trade of a cabinet-maker at Rockton, married the eldest daughter of Luther Lawrence, and died in Portland, Ore., in August, 1891. He started in life with limited capital, but when he died left his wife and two children property valued at $100,000. Jacob, the youngest member of the family eircle, is a contractor and builder, at present residing at Lake Charles, in Louisiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel are the parents of five children: Martha died at the age of two and one half years; Lucy A. married C. C. Leech, of Denver, and they have three children; Mary, wife of M. F. Duryea, resides in Iowa; Morris H., a farmer, resides in this county; Permelia H. is the wife of D. G. Webster, of Blaine, and their four children are as follows: Carrie D., wife of Wilson A. Chapell, of Iowa; Jennie R., Mrs. Romeo H. Leavett, of Blaine; Daniel W., at home; and Mary E., a bright child of nine years. Mr. Webster was born in Wyoming County, N. Y., January 14, 1837, and was brought to Illinois by his parents in 1842. In 1861, he went to California, where he remained three years, returning via the Isthmus in 1864, after having accumulated considerable property in the Golden State. He was married on New Year's Day following his return from the West and has since resided in Blaine, where he is well known as the inventor and patentee of the Webster Wind Mills.

After a long and happy wedded life, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel were separated by the death of the latter, June 21, 1875, when fifty-five years old. She was a faithful wife and loving mother, and her loss was deeply felt in the circle of loved ones to whom she was so tenderly devoted. Mr. Daniel is living retired in Blaine, where he has gained the reputation of being an energetic and public-spirited citizen. He has ever taken a deep interest in political affairs, first as a Whig and later as a Republican. As an honest man and good citizen, he justly receives the commendation and respect of all who enjoy his acquaintance. For twenty years he served as Justice of the Peace in the township, and never had a decision reversed.

SAAC BATES, a popular and substantial farmer and a man very highly respected in Boone County, is a native of Staffordshire, England, born November 6, 1818. He is a son of Benjamin and Sarah (Warton) Bates, both natives of Birmingham, England, the former born July 8, 1777, and the latter in January, 1774. They came to America in 1848 and first settled near where our subject now resides, and there established a permanent home. The father died on September 16. 1853, and the mother passed away when eighty-six years of age. Benjamin was a son of Benjamin, Sr., who was also born in Birmingham, England, and both were steel workers in their native country. Benjamin, Sr., died there when eighty years of age. His wife, Carrie Bates, was born within ten miles of Birmingham, and died when comparatively young. Our subject's maternal grandparents were born near Birmingham and died there when quite old people.

The original of this notice was one of ten children, and he and a sister who resides in Boston are the only ones now living. He came to the United States about 1845 and was twenty-nine days in crossing the Atlantic. After reaching New York, he came by eanal to Buffalo and thence by steamer to Chicago. He hired a team and brought about thirteen hundred pounds of freight out to Boone County, Ill. He first purchased eighty acres of land, but has added to this from time to time until he now has about three hundred and forty acres. He first took up his quarters in a little log cabin that was built by a brother-in-law and in that resided for some time. Afterward he erected a better house but only resided in it for two years, when he rented his farm and moved to Beloit to educate his children. There he worked at his trade as reaper manufacturer for six years, and then returned to the farm, where in 1861 he erected his present substantial residence. Mr. Bates had some means to start with when he came here and he has since been very successful.

Previous to leaving his native country, Mr. Bates was married in Birmingham, England, in a church that was erected in 1770, on July 27, 1840, to Miss Phœba A. Tongue, a native also of Birmingham, England, and a daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (Reeves) Tongue. Samuel Tongue was born in Bromsgrove, England, and there died when sixty-six years of age. His wife, who was the daughter of William II. and Sarah (Osborne) Reeves, died in her native town, Birmingham, when eighty-six years of age.

Mrs. Bates is a great-granddaughter and also granddaughter of a born heiress, who was of a noble family. She is one of seven children born to her parents and the only one surviving. Of the seven children born to our subject and wife all are living and are as follows: William H., born in England, is married and has one child; Charles, born in England, is at home and rents the farm; Josiah F., born in England, married and has three children, and resides in Iowa; Samuel (see sketch); Benjamin A., born in Illinois, resides in Iowa, is married and has three children; Ellen B., born in Beloit, Wis., married and has four daughters; and Albert E., born here, resides in Iowa, and to his marriage have been born two daughters. Our subject has been a Republican in polities ever since Pierce was elected. He voted for Fremont. He has held a number of local offices: Township Clerk, Highway Commissioner six years, Trustee for years and a member of the School Board. He is engaged in mixed farming, and his land, for which he paid $1.25 per acre, is worth from $60 to $80 per acre at the present time.

On an accompanying page will be noticed a hithographic portrait of Mr. Bates.

LEXANDER FERGUSON has been a lifelong resident of Harlem Township, Winnebago County and still makes his home on section 25, range 1. He was born on his father's farm on the 30th of June, 1842, his parents, William and Ellen (Picken) Ferguson, being numbered among the honored pioneer settlers of this locality. The Ferguson family is of Scotch origin. James Ferguson, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, and there spent his entire life. His son William was also a native of that locality. He and a sister, Mrs. Martha Greenlee, were the only members of the family that came to America and made a permanent settlement.

The father of our subject crossed the Atlantic in 1836, and settled in Ohio, where he married Miss Picken, also a native of Argyleshire, and a daughter of Alexander Picken. In 1840, they came to Illinois, making the journey with a horse and buggy, and Mr. Ferguson purchased a tract of wild land in what is now Harlem Township. He then returned for his family, whom he brought by way of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to Savanna and from thence by team to their future home. The land which he purchased was on section 24, a wild and uncultivated tract, upon which not a furrow had been turned or an improvement made. He there erected a log house and in true pioneer style the family began life in the West. There were then no railroads in the county, Chicago was the nearest market and that long distance had to be traversed every time supplies were needed. Mr. Ferguson developed and improved his land, resided upon the farm which he made until 1860, when he sold out and bought the farm on which our subject now resides, there making his home until his death. In the family were eight children, as follows: James. Alexander, Ellen, Mary J.. William, Thomas, Hugh and Charles.

Alexander Ferguson, whose name heads this record, first opened his eyes to the light of day in the cabin home of his parents, June 30, 1842, and was reared to manhood in the usual manner of farmer lads, no event of special importance occurring during his youth. He gave his father the benefit of his labors until after his marriage, when he settled upon that part of the old home which he now owns and occupies. As a companion and helpmate on life's journey, he chose Miss Margaret Ralston, daughter of Alexander J. and Margaret (McKerrel) Ralston, a native of Chatham, Canada. Their union was celebrated in 1877, and has been blessed with two children: William J. and Cora Ellen.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson are members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church and are worthy and respected people of this community who hold a high position in the social world. The husband owns a tine farm, well cultivated and improved with good buildings and other accessories of a model farm. His entire life has been passed in this county, and the fact that his oldest acquaintances are among his best friends shows that he has lived worthily and well.

ATHAN D. JACKSON. This representative farmer and excellent citizen of Bonus Township comes from good old New England stock on the paternal side, for his father. Charles D. Jackson, was born in Newton, Mass., on the 17th of October, 1810, and at the early age of seven years, engaged with an uncle to work for his board and clothes. For about eight years he continued with this uncle, and then attended the Portland, Mc., schools for a few years. After this he engaged with a wholesale grocery firm as shipping clerk, and after his time was up with this house, he was elected as grain and produce weigher of the city, filling that position in a very satisfactory manner for some time.

About this time, Mr. Jackson experienced a great desire to seek his fortune in the Far West, and gathered together his belongings, and in the fall of 1838, started for Illinois, which at that time was considered very far West, and where a brother, Cranston Jackson, had preceded him two years. He went by way of the Lakes and canal as far as Chicago, and from there walked out to Belvidere. After much searching and considerable trouble, Mr. Jackson found his brother domiciled in a little log cabin about one mile from our subject's present home, and there the two brothers lived until the marriage of Charles Jackson. The latter then built a house on the land he had taken up from the Government, and on the 28th of December, 1843, he brought his bride, Miss Mary A. Stowe, to his pioneer home. She was a native of the Empire State, born in Broome County, August 15, 1818, and by her he became the father of two children: Nathan D., subject of this sketch; and a daughter, Lucy A., who was born in this county, on the 28th of September, 1847. The latter married Mr. William D. McCabe. (See sketch.)

Mrs. Jackson was the daughter of Horace H. and Sally (Matthews) Stowe, who were natives of New York State, but who spent their last days in Mis-Our subject's grandfather Jackson was souri. one of seven brothers who were in the battle of Bunker Hill. Charles Jackson and his brother Cranston gave the money to build the first schoolhouse in the part of Boone County they first located in. The death of the former, which occurred when he was eighty years of age, took from Boone County one of its most worthy and esteemed citizens. He was ever ready to lend a helping hand to every good cause, and his purse was ever open to assist the struggling pioneer of early days. He was one of the most generous, self-sacrificing citizens the county has ever had.

Nathan D. Jackson was born in Bonus Township, Boone County, Ill., April 2, 1845, and is now residing on the old homestead his father had taken from Uncle Sam. Like his father, he is progressive and enterprising, and in other respects inherits the admirable characteristics of that much esteemed and respected citizen. He was married on the 3d of September, 1879, to Miss Ellen E. Ward, who was also a native of Bonus Township, Boone County, this State, born November 11, 1855. Five children have blessed this union, and are named as follows: Alfred B., Lotta H., Charles C., Mary A. J. and Neal D. Mrs. Jackson is the daughter of Christopher and Jeanette Ward, the father a native of Yorkshire, England, and the mother of Glasgow, Scotland. The former died here, but the latter is still living. Mrs. Jackson's maternal grandfather came to this country also, and settled in New York, where he lived to be quite old. Grandmother Ward lived to be nearly one hundred years old at the time of her death. Mr. Jackson is engaged in mixed farming, and no better farm than his two hundred and fifty acres can be found in Northern Illinois.

DWARD A. DUTCHER, dealer in general hardware, stoves, harness, paints, etc., in the village of Cherry Valley, is a native of Chautauqua County, N. Y., born in 1842. His parents, Dwight L. and Regina M. (Gilchrist) Dutcher, were both natives of Otsego County. The father followed farming, as did the grandfather of our subject, Gabriel Dutcher, who was also a native of New York. The maternal grandfather, Capt. Donald Gilchrist, was of Scotch descent, and his wife was one of the heirs of the famous Chase estate, valued at $60,000,000.

Our subject is the eldest of three children, having a brother Charles and a sister Alice A., now the wife of Frank Conant, a farmer of Summerdale, N. Y. Edward grew to manhood on his father's farm, and acquired his education in the district schools, and at the age of twenty years enlisted for the late war in August, 1862. He at once went to the front, and was in active service until the 1st of June, 1864, when at the battle of Cold Harbor he was wounded. His injuries disabled him for service for a year and seven months, and resulted in his discharge. It was a gun-shot wound in the left leg and from the effects he has never fully recovered. He first received a pension of $5.33\frac{1}{3}\text{ per month}, which was afterward increased to $8, and subsequently to $12, but this sum poorly requites him for all that he has suffered.

Mr. Dutcher left his native State in 1867, and went to Chillicothe, Mo., where he carried on a hardware and tinware store for about six months, after which he sold out and went to Mexico, Mo. He there established a hardware and agricultural implement store and carried on business successfully until December, 1877, when he again sold out, and thence came to Cherry Valley. He here purchased the stock of R. T. Connell and established his present business. His is the only store of the kind in the place. He receives a lucrative patronage and his trade is constantly increasing.

Mr. Dutcher was married in New York, in 1869, to Phoche Keyes, of Mayville, N. Y., daughter of M. T. and Mary A. (Blood) Bond. Unto them was born one child, Edna Alice, but her death occurred in August, 1875, at the age of six months. Mr. and Mrs. Dutcher are people of prominence in this community and rank high in social circles. In politics, he is a Republican and one of the stalwart supporters of the party, doing all in his power for its success. He is a man of commanding appearance, six feet tall and weighing two hundred and fifteen pounds, and is of a genial disposition.

Mr. Dutcher is a member of the Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., Cherry Valley Lodge No. 173, A. F. & A. M., Vesper Lodge No. 277, K. P., and Kishwankee Camp No. 101, M. W. A., in nearly all of which he has held office, being Past Chancellor in Knights of Pythias, and Past Sachem and Representative to the Grand Council of Illinois in the Modern Woodmen of America.

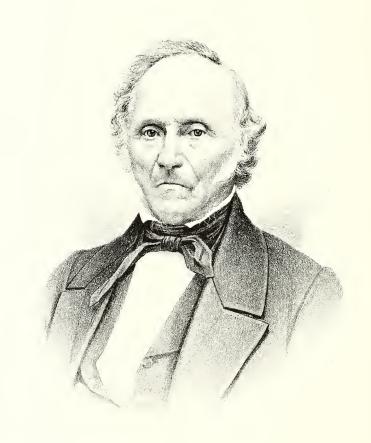

EORGE II. GRUMMON, one of the energetic agriculturists of Flora Township, is a native of Boone County, having been born in Belvidere, October 18, 1816. He is a son of Horace D. Grummon, who was born, reared and married in New York State. The father came to Illinois, in March, 1842, making the entire trip overland with team, and after six weeks' travel landed in Rockford, which was at that time a small village. He lived near that city for two years, and then located in Belvidere Township, this county, where he rented a farm. In 1851, he became the proprietor of a tract of wild land on section 19, Flora Township, which he sold two years later at a splendid advance. He next bought a good farm on section 17, where he was residing at the time of his decease in 1888.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Caroline Barton; she was born in England and was the daughter of Thomas and Angeline (Lawrence) Barton, who came to America and after residing a few years in the New World returned to their native home. They later emigrated to Canada, where they passed the remainder of their days, the mother dying November 24, 1861. She had reared a family of three children: Sidney L., Lorena and George II.

He of whom we write was given a good education in his native county and remained with his father until seventeen years of age, when, in February, 1864, he enlisted in Company A. One Hundred and Forty-seventh Illinois Infantry. Joining his regiment in Chicago, he went with them to Nashville, Tenn., then to Chattanooga, then to Dalton, and from there to Savannah, Ga., where he remained doing garrison duty until after the expiration of his term of service. Being honorably discharged, he returned home and began life for himself on a rented farm which he operated for two years. Mr. Grummon then purchased eighty acres on section 18, and after residing there for five years went to Chicago and entered the employ of the North Side Street Railway Company, Four years later, he returned and bought the farm which he now owns and occupies, and which includes one hundred and twenty acres of the southwest quarter of section 26, in addition to which he owns eighty acres, including the south half of the southwest quarter of section 22. Mr. Grummon has erected a comfortable residence on his place, also a large barn, and otherwise improved the estate until it ranks among the best in Boone County. Emma L., daughter of Truman and Eliza

HON. SPOONER RUGGLES.

(Drown) Buck, became the wife of our subject in 1876. She is a native of Eric County, Pa., and by her union with our subject became the mother of three children, two boys, who died in infancy, and Edna.

In his political belief, Mr. Grummon votes the Republican ticket, and socially is a member of Hurlbut Post, G. A. R., and is a demitted member of Cherry Valley Lodge, A. F. & A. M.

ON. SPOONER RUGGLES. Through his long and useful life, in every department of duty, this esteemed citizen of Rockford was kind and true—the generous neighbor, the patriotic citizen, the public servant of ability and incorruptible integrity. His death occurred at Rockford, March 7, 1874, when he had reached the age of seventy-nine years, and was mourned not alone by the people of the city and county, but by many in this and other States, whom he had met in the course of his life, and who had learned to respect the manly qualities which distinguished him. His friends will note with pleasure his portrait on the opposite page of the following record of his life.

Born in the town of Hardwick, Mass. August 4, 1795, Spooner Ruggles obtained a commonschool education in the home of his birth. He acquired knowledge readily, and once gained, it was never forgotten, a characteristic which was noticeable throughout his entire life. During the War of 1812, he was an active participant. He was married in 1816, and removed to Blenheim, N. Y., the following year, whence, in 1818, he proceeded to Richland County, Ohio, and there successfully engaged in farming pursuits.

Hearing of the advantages offered to settlers in Northern Illinois, and especially in the far-famed Rock River County, where public lands were just coming into market, Mr. Ruggles was induced to visit this portion of the State, and in 1836 disposed of his property in Ohio and removed with his family to this region, then a wild frontier. He purchased land and settled near Grand Detour, Ogle County, where he became prominent in public affairs, discharging the duties of County Commissioner and Justice of the Peace, and taking an active part in promoting educational and religious organizations, and all measures for the elevation of society.

In 1811, Mr. Ruggles was elected Senator, and faithfully performed his duties through his term of four years. He was noted for uniform punctuality and devotion to business and usefulness on committees. Subsequently, he was elected Judge of the Ogle County Court, and there, as elsewhere, was distinguished by the faithful and able performance of official duties. In 1867, he purchased a pleasant residence in Rockford, where he made his home until his death. He was an exemplary Christian and a member of the Congregational Church. At his demise, resolutions of respect were passed by the Rockford Society of Early Settlers, who felt that in his death they had lost one of their ablest and most honored members, and, as a last tribute of their respect, they attended the funeral services in a body.

Judge Ruggles is survived by his widow, a lady of superior refinement and known in her maidenhood as Miss Amanda Bennett. She was born in Ticonderoga, N. Y., October 12, 1812, the daughter of Zebulon and Sarah (Cooper) Bennett, natives of East Hampton, L. I. Her father was a farmer and manufacturer of shoes, having learned the shoemaker's trade when young. He also owned a tannery and manufactured much of his own stock. His family consisted of six daughters and five sons, all of whom lived to mature years, except Alonzo B., who died young. The only survivors now are: Ashley, a resident of Lawrence, Mich., who at the age of eighty-three is retired from farming pursuits; Adeline Johnson, two years his senior and a resident of Chautauqua County, N. Y., and Amanda, Mrs. Ruggles.

Amanda Bennett was first married to Francis Melvany, a native of Dublin, Ireland, with whom she came to Illinois in August, 1852, settling on a farm, where Mr. Melvany died September 4, 1861. By a former marriage he had two children: James, who is in Iowa; and Jennie, now Mrs. Alexander Owen, of Rockford.

In August, 1866, Mrs. Amanda Melvany became the wife of Judge Ruggles, and their happy wedded life was terminated by the death of the Judge about eight years afterward. By a former union, he was the father of one son, James M., who enlisted in the Civil War, serving with distinguished credit and valor, meriting his promotion to General, and is now a wealthy agriculturist in Hanna, Ill. Mrs. Ruggles still occupies the old home at No. 703 Peach Street, which is brightened by the presence of her daughter and two grandchildren. The daughter, Mattie, married George Hopkins, who for years has been a commercial traveler for the firm of Hess & Hopkins. Mrs. Ruggles is a faithful member of the Second Congregational Church at Rockford, and, although now eighty years old, retains her mental and physical faculties, and takes an active interest in the events that are transpiring in the world.

AMES M. ANDERSON. Probably a majority of the farmers of Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, are men well-to-do, and of that class who have been the architects of their own fortunes. Among them may be properly mentioned the subject of this notice, who was born in Lycoming County, Pa., February 22, 1831. He is a son of Robert and Elizabeth (Wynkoop) Anderson, the former of whom died when James M. was a lad of eight years. The mother departed this life in Pecatonica Township, at the advanced age of eighty years.

He of whom-we write was one of a family of eight children born to his parents, three of whom are now living. His brother William died in the army from the effects of the wound which he received in trying to escape from a prison at Blackshear, Ga. He participated in the battle of Kenesaw Mountain as a member of Company B, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, where he was also wounded. Our subject remained with his mother after the death of his father until December 24, 1861, when he was united in marriage to Miss Amelia Clark, who was born in Wyoming County, N. Y., December 8, 1836. Mrs. Anderson was the daughter of Roswell and Mary (Walton) Clark, and a sister of Mrs. J. R. Wells.

James M. Anderson had born to him three children, one of whom is deceased. Those living are: Blanch E., who was born March 12, 1866, and resides at home. She is a graduate of Pecatonica High School, and was a student in music for over eight years. She also took a course in the business college at Rockford, and at the present time is engaged in teaching school in Pecatonica Township. The son, Howard C., was born February 4, 1871, and resides with his parents, being a graduate of the Pecatonica High School.

After his marriage, our subject settled in Ridott Township, Stephenson County, where for six years he worked a rented farm, in the meantime purchasing one hundred and sixty acres in this township, where he made his home for six years and brought the farm to a good state of cultivation. Purchasing his present farm of fifty acres, Mr. Anderson removed here seventeen years ago, and erected all the buildings which are necessary for the carrying on of a first-class farm. He later added eighty acres to his estate, and now has one of the finest farms in the county. He is an attendant of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics, he is a Republiean, easting his first vote for John C. Fremont. He has held many offices of responsibility, having been School Trustee and Highway Commissioner, both of which offices he filled in a creditable manner.

EORGE C. CLEVELAND. This gentleman, the salient points of whose life history we shall endeavor to give below, is one of the most prominent residents of Rockford and has been one of the important factors in developing to so high a degree the resources which nature has so generously lavished upon this section. Our subject was born in Hebron, Washington County, N. Y., July 27, 1818, and is the son of Job W. Cleveland, who was born in Salem, Washington County, N. Y., August 7, 1796. The grandfather of our subject, who also bore the name of Job W., was a native of New England, his birth occurring March 27, 1757. The latter-named gentleman was of English ancestry and one of the pioneers of Salem, where he carried on agricultural pursuits, improving a farm upon which he resided until his death, April 5, 1825. The maiden name of his wife was Hannah Clark; she was born March 25, 1767, and departed this life on the old home farm in Salem, April 10, 1824.

The father of our subject located upon a tract of land which had been given him by his father, and which was located in the town of Hebron. He there resided and engaged in farming until 1835, at which time he removed to that part of Genesee County now included in Wyoming County, N. Y., where he purchased a tract of land in the town of Wethersfield. He continued to make that place his home until his decease, which occurred July 7, 1870. Miss Almira Fenton was the maiden name of our subject's mother; she was born in New Haven, Conn., November 12, 1799, and was a daughter of Jonathan and Rosalinda (Lueas) Fenton. She departed this life on the farm in Wethersfield, Wyoming County, N. Y., November 12, 1886.

George C. Cleveland was reared on the home farm, and growing up into manhood and passing onward in the rugged pathway of time, was disciplined in the stern school of experience and was prepared to meet every emergency with steady and ready hand. From what follows, it is obvious that he must have always fully availed himself of all the privileges of instruction to which he found access, and a distinguishing characteristic of his is the possession of a quickness of mind and talent. He remained with his parents in Wethersfield until reaching his majority and then engaged as clerk in a store for three years. In the spring of 1843, he emigrated West to Illinois, being accompanied hither by his bride. The young couple journeyed with a team to Buffalo and thence on the steamer "Illinois" to Chicago, where they again procured a team and drove to Winnebago County. The surrounding country in that early day was but thinly settled, the greater part of the land being still owned by the Government. Mr. Cleveland, however, purchased a tract of one hundred and seven acres, located in Cherry Valley Township, for which he paid $2 per acre. His land being entirely new, he rented property for a twelvemonth, and in 1844 erected a cabin on his purchase, into which he moved. There were no railroads in this locality and their nearest market and depot for supplies was Chicago. Our subject was industrious and economical and was more than ordinarily suceessful in his undertaking, adding from time to time to his property until he became the possessor of the magnificent estate of three hundred and fifty aeres, all of which was located in Cherry Valley Township. He always used the latest improvements and best methods in cultivating his land, believing that by so doing he reaped the largest returns. His place is improved with a fine set of farm buildings, not the least among which was a substantial farm residence in which the family resided until 1886, when they removed to Rockford. Here Mr. Cleveland erected his present fine dwelling and here he entertains his friends who are as numerous as his acquaintances.

In January, 1813, Miss Elvira Clark became the wife of our subject. Mrs. Cleveland was born in Manchester, Vt., February 23, 1820, and departed this life October 25, 1849. The second marriage of our subject occurred October 1, 1851, at which time Miss Cornelia Lewis, who was born December 7, 1823, in Orangeville, Wyoming County, N. Y., became his wife. She was the daughter of Truman Lewis, whose birth occurred in Hartford, Conn., November 5, 1784. He was a son of Oliver and Lucinda (North) Lewis, and on emigrating from the Nutmeg State removed to Vernon, N. Y., and in 1807 walked the greater part of the distance from Orangeville to Wyoming, that State. He purchased land on the latter-named place, which he eleared and improved, and for a number of years was agent for the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and was also one of the trustees of the will of James Lloyd, of Boston. These parties were surveyors to the Holland Land Company and held a large number of mortgages to many farms in Wyoming County. The father of Mrs. Cleveland held many offices of trust and was a member of the New York Legislature in 1834-35. He was also Treasurer of Wyoming County, and died at Warsaw, N.Y., September 15, 1865. Mrs. Cleveland's mother's marden name was Lucy Porter; she was born March 6, 1795, and was the daughter of Seth and Sarah (Cowles) Porter. She spent her last years with her children in Wmnebago County, departing this life December 13, 1866. Our subject became the father of a son, George C., Jr., by his first marriage. The four children born to him by his present wife bear the respective names of Frank L., Edward W., Willis P., and Carrie E. With his estimable wife he is an influential member of the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

LIN SMITH. This gentleman, who is one of the pioneers of Winnebago County, is at present residing on his fine farm in Rockford Township, upon which he has placed valuable improvements in the way of buildings and machinery. He was born in Swanton, Franklin County, Vt., March 14, 1823. His father, Martin Smith, was born in Connecticut, where his father, John Smith, as far as is known, was also a native. The latter-named gentleman removed from the Nutmeg State to Vermont, making settlement in the town of Swanton, where he made his home until his decease.

The father of our subject was eighteen years of age at the time of his parents' removal to Vermont, and when starting out in life for himself, purchased a tract of timber land in the town of Swanton, upon which he erected a log house, where our subject was born. There were no railroads in that locality for years, and the markets consequently being very inconvenient to reach, the people lived mostly off the products of their farm and the wild game which was very plentiful. The father raised sheep and flax, the latter of which the mother carded and spun and superintended its weaving, and in that manner all the clothing of the family was made. Mr. Smith cleared and cultivated a farm on which he resided until his death. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Prudy Percy, who was born in Highgate, Vt., and died on the old home farm in Swanton. To them were born six children: Plin, John, Session, Wallace, Mary and George.

The original of this sketch was reared and educated in his native town, attending the pioneer log schoolhouse, where the seats were made by splitting logs, one side of which was hewed and set on wooden pins for legs. The free-school system had not been inaugurated and each family paid according to the number of scholars sent. Our subject assisted his father in the duties on the farm and resided with his parents until 1844, in July of which year he started with his bride for Illinois, the journey being made with teams and by way of the Lakes. They were provided with cooking utensils and provisions and camped at night by the roadside, the trip consuming four weeks.

On arriving in Rockford, our subject found this now "Lowell of the West" little more than a hamlet, the surrounding country being sparsely settled. He rented land for a twelvemonth and during that time entered a tract of Government land near Durand, upon which he erected a log house. There were no railroads in this locality for a number of years after he located here, and Chicago, Racine, Milwaukee, and Mineral Point were the nearest markets, and the means of transportation were not what they are to-day, as all their products were conveyed to the above-named cities with teams. Mr. Smith resided near Durand until 1865, at which time he disposed of his farm and purchased the tract which he now owns and occupies, two miles west of the city of Rockford. Here he has a well-improved farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres, which he cultivates in such a manner as to bring him in handsome returns.

On April 9, 1841, our subject was married to Julia Campbell, who was born in Grand Island, Vt., October 21, 1825. Mrs. Smith was a daughter of William and Fannie (Allen) Campbell, whose grandfather, Samuel Campbell, was a resident of St. Albans, Vt., for many years. The latter-named gentleman came to Illinois and spent his last years at the home of his son, David Campbell, of Winnebago County. The maiden name of his wife was Grace Plumb. The father of Mrs. Smith always followed the calling of a farmer, and departed this life in Vermont in 1833. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Smith, Timothy Allen, was a son of Ethan Allen, of Revolutionary fame. On the death of her husband, Mrs. Fannie Allen was married a second time and coming to Illinois resided in Winnebago County for a number of years and then removed to Minnesota and spent her last years in Winnebago City.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have become the parents of four children, three of whom are living: Melvin A., Harriet A. and George E. The eldest son married Clarissa Hemenway and has one son, Melvin Harriet is the wife of John Ganoung. Her first husband was Miles J. Clark, by whom she had one child, Azra J. George Smith married Nellie Foote; they have two children, Florence and Harald. The youngest daughter of our subject, Amy J., is now deceased; she was the wife of George Crandall. Our subject and all his children are members of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and in his political relations Mr. Smith votes the Republican ticket.

J. SVANLUND. On the opposite page is presented the portrait of one of the most successful contractors of the city, who has accumulated a handsome competency in the last eight years, the result of skill and ability in his line of business. He takes large contracts for all kinds of fine residences, is his own designer and architect, and his name is actively and prominently identified with the progress of Rockford, and the erection of many of her largest and most stately edifices. His buildings are just ornaments to, and among the best equipped in the city, and he is rightly considered an important factor in the welfare, happiness and prosperity of this flourishing place. He has in his employ about fortyfive skilled workmen during the busy season and is known to his employes as a good paymaster and genial gentleman.

In addition to his beautiful home at No. 1611 Charles Street, Mr. Svanlund owns considerable improved property. He is a stockholder in a number of furniture factories in Rockford, is one of the promoters of and a stockholder in the Skandia Land Association, which owns much valuable property, and is a stockholder and one-fifth owner of Stockholm Park in East Rockford, on Charles Street. He is one of the hardworking and progressive young Swedish-American citizens of Rockford and is popular alike in both social and business circles.

The subject of this sketch came to this city in 1884 and has been engaged in business on his own account for seven years, making a small fortune in that time. Previously, he had been a resident of Geneva, Ill., where he was engaged at his trade for two years. He has won the confidence and esteem of all Rockford and is looked upon as a man trustworthy and honorable in all his dealings, He was born in Jonkoping Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, where he grew to manhood and secured good scholastic advantages. At the early age of eighteen, he became a mechanic and subsequently worked in that way in his native country until he decided to cross to the United States, being the first of the family to make the venture. He took passage at Gottenburg on the 11th of October, 1882, and landed in New York City on the 1st of November. He at once came to Geneva, Ill., and two years later made his first appearance in Rockford, the scene of his future success.

Mr. Svanlund's parents, Swan and Christian (Bengston) Munson, are still living in their native country, Sweden, and are engaged in tilling the soil. They are honest, industrious people, and are members of the Lutheran Church. Four of their sons, besides our subject, are in this country. Gus and Aaron are residing in Chicago, the former, a first-class stone cutter, and the latter a coachman. Two are living in Rockford: John, who is a skilled mechanic, is in the employ of our subject as foreman, and Charles is in the employ of John Lake.

Miss Christina Olson, whom our subject married in his native province in Sweden, was born, reared and educated in that province and in the same neighborhood as her husband. She possesses all the characteristics of thrift and integrity that make the Swedes so successful a class of people, and has been a true helpmate to her husband. Her parents, Olof and Anna (Peterson) Anderson, still reside in the Old Country and have been members of the State Church all their lives. Mrs. Svanlund, wife of our subject, has a brother in Sweden, Andrew, who is a farmer; another brother, Edward, is a farmer of California, and she has two brothers in Rockford, Aaron and Gustave, both hardworking young men.

Mr. and Mrs. Syanlund were the parents of six children, but the great sorrow of their lives overwhelmed them in March, 1890, when four of their children passed away within two weeks. They were taken with diphtheria, and although the best physicians were employed and everything possible done for the little sufferers, death claimed them for his own. They were named: Charles W., Anna A. M., David E. and Fred. The eldest was nine and the youngest two years and six months old. Anna and David were aged seven and five years, respectively. The two living children are George O. and Fred. Mr. and Mrs. Svanlund are active workers and members of the Swedish Mission Church, in which he has held many official positions, being Trustee at the present time. He is a Republican in politics.

LANSON J. BENHAM, deceased, was for many years one of the representative citizens of Winnebago village. He was born in Marcellus, Onondaga County, N. Y., August 2, 1814, and is a son of Isaac B. Benham, who it is thought was a native of Connecticut. The father, on removing to New York, located in Marcellus, and a few years later moved to the town of Dryden, where he purchased a farm and resided for a number of years. He later became a citizen of Sennett, where he improved a good farm, and finally removed to Auburn, where his decease occurred.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Eunice Ikaker; she also died in the above-named place in New York. He of whom we write was reared in Onondaga County, and subsequent to his marriage rented a farm in Cayuga County, and after a few years' residence there, lived for three years in Sennett, the same county. At the expiration of that time, he purchased and lived upon property for two years in Scipio, and in 1856 came West to Barry County, Mich., and became the proprietor of a quarter-section of land, forty other improvement being a log house. Battle Creek at that time was the nearest market place, and also the nearest railway station. Mr. Benham improved his property, erected thereon a fine set of frame buildings, and in 1870 sold the farm and came to Winnebago Township, this county. Here he purchased a farm one mile north of the village, where he made his home until 1881, when he became identified with the interests of the village until his decease, June 23, 1883.

Mr. Benham was united in marriage to Maria O'Farrell, January 8, 1837. The lady was born in the town of Spafford, Onondaga County, N.Y., April 12, 1816, and is the daughter of William O'Farrell, also a native of that State. Her father being orphaned at an early age, he was adopted by a Mrs. Parmalee, of Oneida County, with whom he resided until her decease. The maiden name of Mrs. Benham's mother was Diana Turbush, a native of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., whose decease occurred in Spafford, five years after that of her husband.

The four children born to our subject and his wife are George Edward, Mary F., John H. and Emma. George married Elizabeth Dickinson, resides in Winnebago Township, and has five ehildren: Mary A., Alanson J., Fred C., Maud M., and Aliee M; Mary is Mrs. Henry Newton, and makes her home in Hastings, Mich., being the mother of three children: Adelbert II., Fred and Frank; John married Christiana E. Cooper, and resides in Felix Township, Grundy County, Iowa, and has one child, Gertrude Maria; Emma A. is Mrs. Hiram Thorn, has one son, Ralph, and resides in California. Mr. and Mrs. Benham became members of the Methodist Episeopal Church in 1829, in which denomination our subject served as Class-leader for a number of years.

The father of our subject has been three times married, and reared five sons: John B. was a Methodist minister, and for seven years was a preacher and teacher among the Indians of Canada, and later went as a missionary to Africa; Vincent was a coppersmith residing in Albany, N. Y.; Asa B. was also a Methodist minister, and Daniel and Isaac, the former a carpenter and the latter a machinist. Mrs. Benham had five brothers: Francis E., a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church; William M.; a farmer, David McD., of whom a sketch will be found on another page of this work; John W., a farmer; Elihue A.; and Henry T., a physician.

OHN M. RHODES, of Roscoe, was born in the town which is still his home, on the 25th of August, 1840, and is a son of John J. and Permelia (Wilson) Rhodes. The former was born in Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1803, and was a son of John Rhodes, a native of Ireland. The grandfather of our subject came to America about 1792 with his wife and one son. He was a weaver by trade, and he established the factory for the manufacture of woolen goods in Onondaga County, where he spent the remainder of his life. He reared nine children: William, Robert, Joseph, John J., Thomas, Hannah, Mary, Deborah and Betsy. The grandmother was of English and Irish extraction.

The father of our subject learned the weaver's trade in his youth and also that of a wheelwright. At the age of twenty-two, he left home and went to Canada, and, in company with his brother Thomas, established a woolen and carding mill. He there married Miss Wilson, a native of Canada. Her parents, Crowel and Hannah (Crane) Wilson, were natives of New Jersey. Her father was a Member of Parliament for many years in Canada, and her brother, Benjamin Wilson, long served as Justice of the Peace. In 1839, they came by team to Winnebago County, landing in Rockford on the 3d of June. They made a claim on what is now section 33 of Roscoe Township, and lived in a little log eabin until a frame house could be built. The residence which was erected was considered one of the best in the community. It contained seven rooms and in the rear was a woodhouse and wheelwright shop. Mr. Rhodes built one of the first sawmills in this section, and on selling out his business, December 19, 1857, bought two hundred and nineteen acres of land at the Government price. His death occurred in February, 1859, and he left a widow and six children. His wife survived him some seventeen years and died in January, 1876. William, their eldest child, was born in Canada, and now owns a gristnill and five hundred acres of land in West County, Iowa; Hiram is living with our subject; Thomas is engaged in iron mining in Southwestern Missouri; our subject is the next younger; Laura is the wife of Amos Sammons, a farmer of Harlem Township; and Henry completes the family.

In the usual manner of farmer lads, Mr. Rhodes of this sketch was reared to manhood. In the spring of 1861, he enlisted in the Fifteenth Illinois Infantry, the regiment said to be the first sworn into the United States service, for three years. They went from Freeport to Missouri, where they remained from July until the following February, and then went to Ft. Donelson, arriving just after the surrender. At Pittsburg Landing they lost two hundred and sixty in killed and wounded out of four hundred and eighty-three, and this slaughter all took place in about twenty minutes. The Major and most of the officers were killed. Mr. Rhodes was on one oceasion thought to be dead. He had been suffering from a low attack of fever and it seemed at that time that life had entirely left him. He was mustered out at Springfield at the close of the war and returned home.

Soon afterward, Mr. Rhodes married Louisa Love, of Harlem Township, daughter of Jabez and Lydia Love. Her father was born in London, England, in 1817, and when a babe was brought by his parents to this country. His father, James Love, was a carpenter and builder. The mother died in Rochester, in 1829, leaving three children: Jabez, Jane and James. The last-named is in the insane asylum at Kankakee from softening of the brain. He is the only one of her father's relatives known to Mrs. Rhodes. Her father came West in November, 1842, locating on section 2, Harlem Township, on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres. He became one of the wealthiest men of the county and at one time owned five fine farms. His wife died in the spring of 1887, at the age of seventy years. She was the daughter of Joab and Eve Strawn; the father was born in New England, the mother was born in Canada, and her mother was by name Wintermute and was of German extraction. The father died in 1876, at the age of sixty years.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes have been born three children: James Arthur, born in 1865; Charles J., born in 1869, is a teacher, and remains at home; and Mary M., born in 1871. She is now the wife of Clifford Wilcox and they have one son, Harry. James A. is a farmer of Roscoe Township, and married Ella Cummings. by whom he has one son, Ralph M.

For eleven year Mr. Rhodes served as Supervisor of his township, and was Justice of the Peace for sixteen years, proving a faithful and efficient officer. He has been a life-long and inflexible adherent of the Republican party. Himself and wife are members of the Methodist Church. Since the above was written, our subject has been re-elected for Supervisor for two years. His father was the first Supervisor elected in this township and held the office for six years.

AMUEL NOBLE, who departed this life July 22, 1890, in Le Roy Township, Boone County, was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1819. His decease was greatly mourned by a large circle of friends and neighbors to whom he had endeared himself by his upright and honor-

Robert Noble, the father of our subject, was also a native of England, and died at an advanced age, leaving a family of eight children. He was a stone mason by trade, and Mathew, his second son, was a skilled and accomplished sculptor who lived in London. Our subject had been married a short time before leaving his native land, but his wife died while en route to America. Her remains were consigned to a watery grave.

Our subject was married to Miss Elizabeth Goodall, the daughter of William and Ann (Mow) Goodall, in July, 1812, in England. Miss Diana Goodall, a sister of his first wife, whom he chose as his second wife in 1815, bore him four sons and one daughter, only one of whom was spared to grow to mature years, the four remaining children dying in early childhood with diphtheria, two passing away on the same day. The parents of Mrs. Noble owned a small farm in England, and, falling heir to a legacy of £900, emigrated to America in the fall of 1812, being en route thirty-eight days.

Mr. Noble came from Oneida County, N. Y., in company with his father-in-law's family, in the fall of 1842, making the trip by way of canal and lakes to Chicago, where they hired three teams to bring the household goods to this county, being about one week on the way. Mr. Noble made a claim to one hundred and twenty acres of land, upon which he located a small log house, and lived until 1855. He then erected a more comfortable structure, and in 1865 built the present commodious and modern residence. The place is equipped with all the necessary buildings, and bears all the improvements to be found upon the estate of a progressive agriculturist.

He of whom we write returned to his native land in 1867, where he remained about four months, visiting his venerable mother, who died at the advanced age of eighty-four years. Our subject died July 22, 1890, when in his seventy-first year, leaving a widow and one son. Four of his children preceded him to the better land, namely: Harcourt E., an infant daughter, Wesley E. and Samuel.

John C. Noble, the eldest son of our subject, was born April 6, 1848, and was married to Sarah Jane, daughter of Henry Bird, also a native of England, and an early settler in this county. Her father died on the day following the death of Mr. Noble. Wesley E. and Ada May, the children of John Noble, are aged respectively seventeen and thirteen years. They make their home with their parents on a farm of one hundred and twenty acres, near the residence of Mrs. Noble. Our subject left an estate of one hundred and twenty acres to his widow, which is most efficiently managed by her son. In religious belief, he was a consistent and honored member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, having become a member of that denomination in 1843. Mr. Noble was a great lover of music, and in his younger days was an accomplished player on the clarionet. He was extremely conscientious and retiring in disposition, and a feeling of personal bereavement came to the large circle of his old friends when he was called to his long home.

OBERT C. LIND, Secretary and Treasurer of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company, has held that position for ten years, or since the organization of the company, and is also a Director and one of the leading stockholders. Our subject is another of the worthy citizens which Sweden has furnished to Rockford. He was born in Smoland, on the 7th of July, 1856, and is the youngest child of H. O. and Mary (Haraldson) With their five children, the parents left the land of their nativity in 1871, and crossed the broad ocean from Gottenburg to New York City, whence they came at once to Rockford. The mother died at her home in this city in 1874, at the age of fifty-eight years. The father is still living, at the age of seventy-two.

The educational advantages which our subject received were those afforded by his native land and the schools of this city. After attaining his majority, he was united in marriage with Miss Jennie Westholm, who was born in Sweden, and when quite young came with her parents to this country. They now reside in St. Charles, Ill., and are well advanced in life. Our subject has a pleasant home on Seminary Street, where hospitality reigns supreme and their many friends delight to gather.

Mr. Lind entered upon his business career in 1872, when he began working in the furniture factories of this city. He soon became a successful machinist and cabinet-maker, seeming to possess natural ability in that direction, and for nine years devoted his entire attention to his trade. For eleven years he worked untiringly. Subsequently he went upon the road, and for four years was employed as a commercial traveler by the Union Furniture Company, and also by the one of which he is now Secretary and Treasurer. As before stated, he has held that position since the organization of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company. He is also a stockholder and Director of the Rockford Union Furniture Company, the Royal Mantel and Furniture Company and the Royal Sewing Machine Company, also the Rockford Folding Bed Company, which uses a special patent. He has done much to promote the interests of these various companies, and is a representative and well-known business man of this city. His life is commendable in many directions. He has been energetic and industrious, and in all his business relations is upright and honorable. In politics, he is a supporter of the Republican party.

HLLIAM S. PORTER is a man whom nature seems to have especially designed to be a planter, for, owing to his desire to keep out of the beaten path, and to his adoption of new and improved methods, together with industry and good judgment, he has met with more than the average degree of success in pursuing his calling. He is a native New Yorker, born in Hamilton Township, Madison County, on the 2d of January, 1832, and the son of Roswell and Naney (Shattuck) Porter, both natives of Connecticut. The father was a mechanic by trade and assisted in building some of the fine residences in New York City. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, received a pension for his services, and his widow received one after his death. He died in Madison County, N. Y., at the age of sixty-seven, and his wife also passed away in that State, but had reached the unusual age of ninety-seven years and four months. Roswell Porter was one of seven children born to Eleza and S. (Rowley) Porter, who were natives of the New England States, the former dying in Madison County, N. Y., when seventy years of age.

Nancy Shattuck, mother of our subject, was one of seven children born to Robert, Jr., and Anna (Loomis) Shattuck. Robert, Jr., was the son of Robert Shattuck, Sr., the grandson of William Shattuck, Jr., and the great-grandson of William Shattuck, Sr., and the great-great-grandson of William Shattuck, who was an Englishman, and who came to this country in 1621 or 1622. The latter was about twenty years of age at that time, and died in Watertown, Mass., on the 14th of August, 1672. William Shattuck, Sr., married Susan Randall, and his sen, William Shattuck, Jr., who was a native of Plymouth, Mass., married Mary Pratt. Robert Shattuck, Sr., was also a native of Plymouth, Mass., and was there married to Ruhannah Cook.

The 9th of January, 1853, was rendered memorable to our subject by its being his wedding day, his bride being Miss Thresa Shepardson, who was born in Madison County, Hamilton Township, N. Y., August 12, 1834. The fruits of this union have been three living children: Geneva I, married O. G. Forrer, and they have three children; Maynard R. married Miss Agnes Burchfield, and is the father of one child, a girl; and Cora L., at home and a graduate of Belvidere school. Mrs. Porter's parents were Erastus and Tryphenia (Coleson) Shepardson, the father a native of Connecticut and the mother of Massachusetts. The former is still living, and a resident of this county, but the mother died here when sixty-one years of age. Mr. Shepardson is a son of William Shepardson, Jr., a native of Connecticut, and the grandson of William Shepardson, Sr., who was born in England and who settled in Connecticut at a very early date. Tryphenia (Coleson) Shepardson was the daughter of Ebenezer and Lavina (Packard) Coleson, who were of Swedish descent, and natives of Connecticut. Mr. and Mis. Coleson removed to New York, and died in Madison County, of that State, at the age of ninety-five and eighty years, respectively. Mrs. Porter comes of good fighting stock, for her ancestors were in the Revolutionary War, and she had two brothers in the Civil War. One of her brothers, William, died while serving his country, and Coleson, the other, lost a leg.

After his marriage, our subject settled in Spring Township, this county, but after six years as an agriculturist, he left the farm and went to the oil regions of Pennsylvania, where he remained eighteen years. Then selling out, he returned to Boone County, Ill., and bought one hundred and twenty acres of land belonging to the Colesons, and later bought the Shattuck farm of two hundred acres, besides ten acres of timber. He has made $1,000 worth of improvements and has four miles of tiling on the place. He is engaged in general farming and his home is a beautful spot, characterized by all the comforts of rural life. In politics, he is a Republican, voting first for Stephen A. Douglas, but after that for kincoln.

RS. HENRY KORTIE, Sr., who is living at her home, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, is a native of Germany. She was born in Minden, Berkhausen, in 1820, and is a daughter of Henry and Christina (Koch) Black. Her father died at the age of seventy-two years, and her mother at fifty-five. They reared one son and one daughter.

Mrs. Kortic was reared in her native land, and fifty years ago there gave her hand in marriage to William Kortic. They crossed the Atlantic to America in March, 1852, and, coming to Illinois. the husband purchased sixty acres of her present farm. His death occurred on the 4th of July, 1854, from cholera, and five other members of his family died of the same dread disease, all within two weeks of one another. His widow was a second time married, becoming the wife of Henry Kortic, brother of her former husband. His father, Henry Kortic, Sr., died of cholera at the time above mentioned, and his mother died in Germany, at about the age of sixty years, leaving four children, two having preceded her to the home beyond.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kortie lived together as man and wife for thirty-eight years, making their home upon a farm which he operated until it yielded him a golden tribute in return for his care and labor. His death occurred very suddenly. He was in the barn doing his morning work, and dropped down dead. This was on the 30th of November, 1891, in the seventy-first year of his age. He was a worthy and valued citizen, a man highly respected throughout the community, and his loss was deeply mourned by many friends. During the late war he had served his country as a member of Company A, Twelfth Illinois Cavalry. He enlisted on the 15th of December, 1861, and served as bugler for three years and three months, or until February 5, 1865, when he was honorably discharged. He was never wounded, but was injured by his horse falling on him.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Kortie were born seven children, three sons and four daughters, five of whom are yet living: Louisa, wife of William Ihrke, of Rockford; Amelia, wife of J. Bartholomew, a resident of Milford Township: Carrie, wife of H. A. Brown, who is living in Owen Township; Henry K., a resident of New Milford; and Minnie, wife of A. C. Thompson. The latter resides on the old homestead with Mrs. Kortie, Mr. Thompson operating the farm. The mother of this family is seventyone years of age. Since her husband's death, her daughter has resided with her. She is a most estimable lady, held in high regard by all, and has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances throughout the community.

ROWN C. ATKINSON is one of the oldest of the native-born citizens of Winnebago County, where he owns a large and valuable farm in Burritt Township. He was born on a farm on section 34, Harrison Township, September 30, 1841, and is a son of John Atkinson, who was born in Cumberland County, England, and he in turn was a son of James and Jane (Foster) Atkinson. The grandparents of our subject came to America in 1832, accompanied by their six children. They made the voyage on a sailing-vessel, which consumed seven weeks, and landed at Quebec. The family remained in Canada fifteen months, when they went to New York State, and thence came to Illinois in 1837. (For a further history of the family see the sketch of William Atkinson.)

The father of our subject was a young man when he came to America, and, in the year 1836, came to the Prairie State, spending the winter at La Salle, and the spring of the following year came to this county, where he became one of the early settlers of Harrison Township. At that time all the land was owned by the Government, and deer, wild turkeys, and other game were plentiful. He at once made claim to a tract of Government land on section 31, and there built the log house in which our subject was born. The father lived there about seven years, when he decided to remove to Burritt Township, entering a tract of land on section 1. This he improved and resided upon until 1870, at that time trading for land on sections 7, 8, and 18, of the same township, and residing thereon until his death, which occurred February 13, 1890.

For many years after the father came to this county there were no railroads, and Chicago was the principal market for grain, although he used sometimes to market at Racine, Milwaukee, Savanna, and the mining towns of Wisconsin. At one time the miller at Beloit sent for him to come and take a load of flour to Mineral Point. He started from home on Monday morning and on arriving at his destination found the man who had ordered the flour had gone. He tried to sell it, but could not dispose of it at any price, so he started to visit the various mining towns, and finally arrived at Savanna on the Saturday following. There he managed to sell his load, but after paying his bills, had only fifty cents left. After the railroad was built at Elgin, people teamed their grain and produce to that place, and our subject relates that in one instance he went with his father to take a load of pork to Elgin. The roads were so bad that they were compelled to unload in the mud, and consequently, instead of getting the contract price of $2.50, they got only $2 per hundred.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Nancy L. Conklin, a native of Wayne County, Pa., and a daughter of Benjamin and Mercy Conklin. She is now making her home with our subject. Brown C. Atkinson was about three years old when his parents removed to Burritt Township, and was here reared and educated, and with his parents made his home until his marriage. In August, 1862, our subject enlisted in Company A. Seventy-fourth Illmois Infantry. Going to the front with his regiment, he served faithfully until February 7, 1863, when he was honorably discharged, returned home and resumed farming. He rented land until 1865, when he purchased eighty acres in Harrison Township, and after three years' residence there, sold, and purchased where he now resides, on two hundred and forty-one and a half acres, twenty-two acres being in timber, and the remainder improved and pasture lands.

The year 1862 is the date our subject was united in marriage with Mary E. Henry. Mrs. Atkinson was born in April, 1845, in Bradford, Pa. Her father, John Y. Henry, was born in New York State, and early removed to Pennsylvania, where he lived until 1855, in which year he came to Illinois, making his home in Owen Township, this county, two or three years. He afterward removed to Rockford, and later located in Harrison Township. He was also a soldier in the late war, having enlisted August 6, 1862, in Company A, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. He died in the service at Nashville, Tenn., December 17, of the same year. The maiden name of his wife was Clara Adella Berry, a native of New York State, and who resides in the village of Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson are the happy parents of eleven children, all of whom are living, namely: Estella M., David H., George W., Frank B., Chara A., G. Albert, Edith A., Chester A., Foster L. Ethel C. and Evelyn L. Mr. Atkinson is a member of Ellis Post G. A. R., at Pecatonica, and in his political views casts his vote with the Republican party.

ONATHAN II. HALSTED, who is the owner of a fine tract of land, including one hundred and eighty acres located one and one-half miles from Rockford, was born in Somers, Westchester County, N. Y., February 28, 1819. His father, Samuel Halsted, was born and reared on the old farm in the above-named State, and when old enough to choose an occupation for himself, purchased a tract of land in the town of Somers, Westchester County, where he was engaged in general farming. His estate was situated forty-eight miles from New York City, and eleven miles east of Peekskill, the principal market. The maiden name of his wife was Rebecca Marshall; she was also a native of the Empire State and departed this life on the old home farm when our subject was very young. Mr. Halsted also died there, aged eighty-two years.

The original of this sketch attended the district school, where he gained a good education, and assisted his father in performing the duties on the farm until 1841, at which time he went to New York City and was employed by his brother-in-law, who owned a line of drays. In February, 1849, during the gold excitement, Mr. Halsted, in company with sixty-five others, started for California. They purchased a sailing-vessel, for which they paid $40,000, and stocked the same with provisions which would last them for two years. Leaving New York in February, they sailed around Cape Horn and arrived at the Golden Gate in the month of September. San Francisco at that time was a city built of tents, and sailing up the Sacramento River, they landed at the city of that name, where our party purchased a number of ox-teams, which conveyed them to the mines in Coloma on the south fork of the American River. They were engaged for about one month, when, the rainy season setting in, the company disbanded, selling their vessel and provisions for $20,000. Mr. Halsted remained in Sacramento for two or three years, then resumed mining until 1852, when he returned home via the 1sthmus of Panama. He was in ill health two or three years after coming home, and consequently did not engage in any active business.

In 1856, the original of this sketch came to the Prairie State and operated a farm south of Rockford for three and a half years, at the expiration of which time he purchased the place on which he at present resides. His estate includes one hundred and eighty acres, and is very valuable on account of its close location to the city, being only one mile and a half from the city limits. His place is improved with good buildings and the land so cultivated as to bring him in handsome returns.

In 1855, Miss Deborah Kennard became the wife of our subject. She was born in Sussex County, England, August 23, 1826, and was the daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Field) Kennard. Mrs.

MRS. SARAH TWOGOOD.

Halsted was brought to America by her parents when five years of age, they locating in the town of Somers, Westchester County, N. Y., where her father was engaged as a merchant tailor and there resided until his death. Mr. and Mrs. Halsted have become the parents of two children: Mary E. and Lester B. The daughter married Fred Brown, by whom she has three children: Lester, Clinton and Ernest. Lester Halsted married Louisa Foltz. Our subject and his wife are members in good standing of the Second Congregational Church, and are widely known and respected throughout their community. Mr. Halsted atfiliates with the Republican party.

HLIJAM TWOGOOD died at his home, at No. 106 North Fifth Street, in Rockford, on the 13th of April, 1874. He was originally from the Empire State, born in Pittstown, near Troy, July 27, 1794. He grew to manhood in his native place and became a mechanic and carriage-builder. He came of good stock and was the son of James and Deborah (Halstead) Twogood, natives of New York, in which State they passed their entire lives. They were the parents of fourteen children and, although all lived to a good old age, they are now deceased.

In Pittstown, William Twogood was married to Miss Sarah Vandercook, a native of that place, born July 24, 1803. Subsequently, he removed to Michigan City, Ind., coming overland with his family. He began looking for a suitable location, which he found in the beautiful Cherry Valley of Winnebago County, Ill., but not until after he had traveled many months over unbroken forests, where hostile Indians abounded. He crossed Rock River at Ottawa soon after the Indian massacre at that place and was sickened by the horrible sights that met his eyes. He pushed on to the Cherry Valley region of Winnebago County and located on a tract of land that had never been surveyed.

Shortly afterward, Mr. Twogood returned to Michigan City for lumber to make the doors, windows and floor of his log cabin, hauled it through the wilderness and, after all was ready, returned to Michigan City for his little family. He settled in this county on the 4th of July, 1837, and was among the tirst settlers, there being but two houses between his place and Rockford, which then consisted of but a few houses. He brought with him, hid away in the household goods, gold and silver sewed up in shot bags and this was never touched until the land on which he was living was placed on the market. He then went to Galena and paid for his claim.

Mr. and Mrs. Twogood experienced many hardships in their new home and for some time were obliged to live on potatoes and salt. However, brighter days were in store for them and they soon became the owners of eight hundred acres of land in the valley. Five hundred acres Mr. Twogood reserved for himself and wife and three hundred acres were deeded to other members of the family. While his children were growing up, he moved to Chicago to educate them and there remained five years. He became one of the well-known and wealthy men of Winnebago County and was a leader in all enterprises of a worthy nature. He was one of the original stockholders of the Northwestern Railroad before any of the road had been graded. He lived and died an honest man that no money or position could buy or flattery seduce from the path of duty and rectitude.

Mrs. Twogood, who was carefully reared and educated, was of old Knickerbocker stock and her ancestors on both sides were among the prominent families of New York State. Her father, Michael S. Vandercook, was born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., and was the son of Simon Vandercook, a prominent man of that county. The family name was originally Van Der Cook, but the descendants now spell it Vandercook. Michael Vandercook was a soldier in the War of 1812, fought as a Major in Col. Knickerbocker's regiment and was in many battles, including the engagement at Plattsburg. He was a merchant and also operated a sawmill for many years. Later, he was Sheriff of his county. and died on his large farm there, at the age of seventy-eight years. His father, Simon Vandercook, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, fought in many battles and was Captain of a company, Mrs. Twogood now has the commissions given him by Gen. Washington, and Gov. Clinton, of New York.

Michael Vandercook married Miss Mehetibel Haskins, a member of a prominent family and a native of Rensselaer County, N. Y., who died when in the prime of life, leaving four children. After her death, Mr. Vandereook was twice married. Mrs. Twogood is the youngest of the above-mentioned children. The attention of the reader is invited to her portrait on another page. Although time has touched her hair with frost, he has dealt leniently with her in other respects and she is yet bright and active, her hearing perfect and her mental faculties unimpaired. She is a very remarkable old lady and on the 24th of July, 1892, was eighty-nine years of age. Until recently, she has been able to do a great deal of light work around the house. Upon every Decoration Day since the late war she has attended the celebration, and her son's portrait is enfolded in the National colors. She resides in the old home at No. 106 North Fifth Street, and is spending the sunset of her life in peace and happiness. She owns large lauded interests in the West and bank stocks in this city and is also a pensioner of the War of 1812, receiving $12 per month for service rendered by her husband, who was drafted when he was eighteen years of age and who served as a drummer in Col. Jonathan Reed's regiment. He was a Republican at the time of his death.

Mr. and Mrs. Twogood were the parents of eight children: Orestes B. enlisted in the First Wisconsin Infantry, his company being the first offered to the Governor of Wisconsin. He was Captain of his company, but after the battle of Stone River, where he suffered much from exposure, he was taken sick, and died at his home on the 17th of December, 1863. Helen died in infancy; Emily is the wife of Merritt Satterlee, a pioneer of Chicago, who was formerly a large grocery merchant but is now retired; James II., a contractor and builder of Boise City, Idaho, married Miss Permelia Custer, of Pennsylvania; Elizabeth, wife of S. P. Jones, resides in Jacksonville, Ore.: Sarah became the wife of Col. Alfred Chapin and resides in Rockford. The Colonel was a prominent soldier of the Robellion and is now deceased; Belle became the wife of J. F. Hervey, who is retired and now resides in Chicago; William S., a very successful merchant of Marion, Iowa, has been twice married, his second wife having formerly been Miss Genevieve Alderman.

NDREW MONTGOMERY, a retired farmer who passed away May 4, 1892, and who resided at No. 902 Rockton Avenue, in Rockford, was of Scottish birth. He was born in Campbellton, Argyleshire, June 5, 1805, and comes of an old and respected family of that land. His father, Robert Montgomery, spent his entire life in Campbellton, where he followed the occupation of farming. He was straightforward and upright in all things, and was an active member of the Presbyterian Church. His death occurred at the age of sixty years. His wife, whose maiden name was Jennie Giffen, died in her native county at an advanced age. This worthy couple had a large family, but all are now deceased. Of their children, Andrew, James and William came to this country.

Andrew Montgomery spent his boyhood days in the usual manner of farmer lads, and in his youth also learned the trade of a distiller. After arriving at man's estate, he was united in marriage to Jennie Anderson, who died in the prime of life in Campbellton, Scotland, leaving four children, two of whom are now deceased: Robert died in Scotland when young, and William died after the family came to this country. The two living children are James, a resident farmer of Burritt Township, who married Annie Fleming, by whom he has four children: William, Jessie, Jane and James; and Jane, now the wife of James E. Langwell, an agriculturist of Owen Township. They have eleven children: Jane, Peter, Jesse, Andrew, Annie, Minnie, James, William, Robert, Martha and John S.

Mr. Montgomery of this sketch was a second time married in his native county, the lady of his choice being Miss Ann Templeton, who was born in Campbellton, December 3, 1819, and is a daughter of John and Ann (Colville) Templeton, who lived and died on the old homestead a few miles from Campbellton, Scotland, the death of the father occurring at the age of eighty-five years, while his wife departed this life at the age of eighty-seven. Both were members of the Presbyterian Church, and as farming people, lived a quiet, unassuming life. In their family were ten children, six sons and four daughters, and with one exception all lived to mature years, and were married, but, with the exception of Mrs. Montgomery, all are now deceased. Thomas, the eldest, crossed the Atlantic, and died in Chicago some years ago, when past the age of eighty years.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery resided in their native land until the spring of 1861, when they decided to try their fortune in America. Since that time they have resided in Winnebago County, and made their home upon a farm in Owen Township until 1882, when they came to Rockford, and for the past ten years have lived a retired life in this city. They are members of the Preshyterian Church, and are noble Christian people who well deserve the high esteem in which they are held throughout the community that has so long been their home.

ORENZO S. McDOUGALL is a practical and successful breeder of Morgan horses and has his fine farm located in Bonus Township. Boone County. It comprises two hundred and twenty-five acres that were selected with a view to their present use and are adapted by nature and improvement for the purpose. Mr. McDougall is well known throughout Northern Illinois as being a man thoroughly posted regarding the stock in which he takes such delight. He has all the necessary buildings on his farm, and these are well constructed and sufficiently large for the various purposes for which they were designed. He is the owner of probably the finest Morgan mare in the county.

He of whom we write was born on the 6th of March, 1827, in the town of Sherbrooke, Quebec, being the son of Charles and Fannie (Terry) McDougall. The father is of Scotch descent and was born in Argyle, N. Y., in 1796, being taken to Canada with his parents when an infant of one year. On attaining mature years, he operated a gristmill until May 4, 1836, at which time he sold out and came to Boone County and located upon the farm where he is at present residing.

The elder Mr. Me Dougall was interested in a claim of seven hundred acres of land, which he proceeded to improve, and when a division of the property was made, two hundred and twenty-five acres fell to his share, the same on which our subject is residing. Charles Me Dougall, about 1866, moved to Belvidere, where he spent his last days in retirement, dying at the age of eighty-two years. He was a Republican in politics, held many of the local offices, and in every relation of life was true to himself and those around him. He was an attendant at the Universalist Church.

Our subject is one of the family of four children, only two of whom grew to mature years. His sister, Mrs. H. Merchant, died April 2, 1886, about three miles from the old home in Spring Township, this county. When the father of our subject located upon his new farm there was an old log cabin on the place, whose floor was just large enough to stand a bed on. There they spent their early days in this county, using their trunks and old-fashioned chests for tables and chairs. Our subject says that he was very much discouraged at that time and often used to wish himself back in his native town. He is the only one surviving who surrounded that primitive table, and indeed is one of the very few living who came to Boone County in those early days. Deer, wolves and other wild animals would come up to the very door of their cabin, and wolves made night hidcous with their howls.

The first furrow of land plowed in Boone County was on the farm of our subject. The nearest market was at Chicago and the nearest postodice was at the same place, the postage in that time costing twenty-five cents a letter. The father of our subject proved up his land, for which he paid $1.25 per acre, and Lorenzo S. has in his possession the original deed from the Government. It is one of the few farms in this section which has never been out of the family who first entered it.

Fannie (Terry) McDougall,our subject's mother, was born in New England, and her parents were natives of Vermont, who spent a portion of their lives in Canada. Grandmother Terry hailed from Rhode Island. Mrs. Fannie McDongall departed this life in Spring Township, this county, in her eighty-fourth year. He of whom we write remained at home until twenty-nine years of age, when he spent a short time in Belvidere and thence removing to Garden Prairie, was engaged in a grain and stock business for nearly fifteen years. Then purchasing a farm of forty aeres, he operated it until nine years ago, when he moved onto the old homestead, having purchased his sister's interest after the death of the father, whose desire it was that our subject should own the old place.

To Mr. and Mrs. Mc Dougall have been born four children, three of whom are living, viz: Nellie, who was born in Belvidere, in 1860, married Frank Tanner and has a family of four children; Fannie, who was born in Garden Prairie, in 1860, is the widow of George Countryman, who died when twenty-seven years of age, leaving two children; Hazen, who was born in 1867, also in Garden Prairie, married Miss May Wait, and has one son.

Our subject is widely known among the farmers throughout Boone County, is a well-read man, and thoroughly informed on topics of general conversation. He is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry, and since the organization of the Republican party has voted that ticket. He has served his fellowtownsmen in the office of Assessor and School Director, and is one of those zealous men who devote much time and ability to the improvement of the town with whose citizens they have east their lot and to whom is due in a large measure the prosperity of the entire community. Mr. Me-Dougall in addition to breeding stock is engaged in mixed farming and his upright and honest dealings with his fellow-men have made him very popular.

Our subject relates that they were induced to come to this county by a man named Goodhue, who was a merchant in a small way in this place, and was the first man to bring merchandise to Belvidere. The family embarked on the steamer "Michigan," commanded by Capt. Newbury, with a Mr. Barker as first mate. At Detroit, Gov.

Duncan, who was then the Chief Executive of Illinois, came on board and after looking over the six or seven hundred passengers, cooly remarked, "Now, you people will all be disappointed in Chicago, as it is nothing but a mud hole, but I tell you now that it is bound to become the metropolis of the United States some day, as its fine location and central geographical position will make it such." Mr. Me Dougall's memory of early historical incidents is truly wonderful and makes him an interesting conversationalist.

EROY E. CHAMBERLAIN. This practical and intelligent young farmer is a native of LeRoy Township, Boone County, and makes his home on the splendid farm where his birth occurred June 3, 1854. He has been successful so far in his farming operations, which can be attributed to his persistent industry, his wise forethought and his prudent thrift.

The father of our subject, Joseph Chamberlain, was a native of Delaware County, N. Y., having been born May 7, 1813. The lady to whom he was married bore the name of Sallie P. Hovey, and is also a native of the Empire State, where she was born in April, 1822. They both accompanied their respective parents West when young, and were married in this county in October, 1839, and commenced life on a claim of one-half section of Government land.

Joseph Chamberlain, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Brattleboro, Vt., where he was an agriculturist, and a man of means. He lost his fortune, however, by going security for a friend. He removed to the Empire State in an early day, but died in middle life, leaving a family of five sons and one daughter, all of whom grew to mature years in New York State. In the fall of 1836, the widowed mother and three of her sons, Carman, Alfred and Lewis, came to Illinois and toeated on the place where our subject was born. The mother was Eunice Blakesley, of Connecticut, and lived to reach the advanced age of ninetyeight years. Her death occurred in 1875, in Le-Roy, this county, and her remains lie buried in Round Prairie Cemetery.

Respectfully J.J. Atwood

He of whom we write is one in a family of four sons and six daughters, two of whom died in infancy. Those hving at the present time are Helen M., Mrs. Owen Brown, who resides at Sterling, Neb.; Eliza, Mrs. E. Reve, resides in Nebraska; Harry D., a farmer in Dakota, and Horace M., who is engaged in the butcher's business at Byron, this State. One son, William Wallace, during the late war was a member of the Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, and died of smallpox in 1863, at Brownsville, Tex.

The father of our subject departed this life November 4, 1891, when seventy-eight years of age. He was a hard-working, industrious man, and by prudent management, accumulated a handsome property, and at his death left his family an estate valued at $10,000. Our subject was reared on the home farm, which has since been his home. He was married, in 1881, to Miss Kittie Brett, of White Water, Wis., and to them have been born five children, namely: Maude E., Harry, Selah, LeRoy and Floyd. Mr. Chamberlain has twenty acres of excellent land in this township, and one hundred and sixty in Dakota. The old home farm was sold by his father to a Mr. Hovey. In social matters, he is a member of the Odd Fellows, and has adopted the political views of the Republican party, being active in promoting its success.

HOMAS J. ATWOOD. Although the life of a farmer does not present the salient points that are to be found in the experience of a city resident, it is not therefore devoid of interest nor unworthy of being preserved in a volume of this nature. Mr. Atwood spent more than forty-two years in the quiet and consistent performance of the daily duties of farm life, and is now living retired in the village of Pecatonica, where his public spirit and agreeable manners make him one of its most honored citizens. Formerly the owner of five hundred acres of land, he has given his son eighty acres and rents the remainder.

Our subject was born June 14, 1818, in Bridgewater, Windsor County, Vt., a son of Thomas and Cynthia (Benson) Atwood. His grandfathers were both valiant soldiers in the Revolutionary War, and splendid types of our Pilgrim Fathers, who acquired independence as tillers of the soil. His parents were born near Plymouth Rock, Mass., and made their home in that State until they were married. Thence they removed to Bridgewater, Vt., where the father purchased a farm and resided until 1837. Afterward he made his home in Rutland, Rutland County. Thence he went to the town of Stowe, and in the fall of 1839 started for the Western country, driving to Buffalo with a four-horse team, where he embarked on a steamer and proceeded to Detroit, Mich. From that city he came overland to Winnebago County, whither his son Hiram had come in 1837, and purchased a section of land.

The elder Mr. Atwood lived with his son until the year 1840, when he purchased a farm of his own. His wife, who was born June 13, 1783, died July 29, 1846. After the death of his wife, he went to live with his son Hiram, where his demise occurred October 28, 1849. He of whom we write is one in a family of nine children, only two of whom are living. He remained with his parents until eighteen years of age, when he went to Rutland, Vt., in 1836. He was given a good education, being a graduate of the Rutland, Vt., Academy, He had only been in school two months and a half, however, when he was offered a school to teach, and accepted the position. After having been thus engaged three months, he returned to the Academy and was made an assistant teacher, graduating when twenty-one years of age. His first occupation on leaving school was in keeping books and collecting for a physician with whom he was engaged for three months. He then became clerk in a general store. and so well did he perform the duties devolved upon him that after a service of three years he was offered the position of junior partner in the firm.

Mr. Atwood, however, did not accept the position, as he had decided to come West. In September, 1841, he started for this State, being accompanied as far as Albany by a friend who made a trip to that city to buy a stock of goods. Our subject tarried long enough to assist him in making his purchase and was offered by the wholesale house which they patronized a position at $650 per year and board. Refusing this as he had the previous offer, he carried out his desire to come to Winnebago County, and on locating here purchased a claim to one-half section of land and also a timber claim. With his brother, who had preceded him hither, he succeeded in getting out enough logs for ten thousand rails, in the winter of 1841–12, which were used in fencing their farms.

May 4, 1817, Mr. Thomas J. Atwood and Miss Lois C. Cable were united in marriage. The lady was born November 19, 1826, in Litchfield County, Conn., and was a daughter of Ezra S. and Pamelia (Fenn) Cable. To them have been born six children: Albert J., whose birth occurred May 10, 1849, is married and the father of five children; Emma C., who was born September 13, 1855, is married and has seven children. The remainder of the family bear the respective names of Rollin C., Ella M., Ezra C. and Henry W., twins. The father of Mrs. Atwood was born September 24, 1797, in Litchfield County, Conn., and died on his old farm in this county, April 23, 1879. He was the son of Abijah and Ruth (Fairchild) Cable, the former of whom was born August 13, 1775, also in Litchfield County, and the latter June 7, 1769. Abijah Cable was one of nine sons who came from England, and departed this life April 13, 1825. His wife, Ruth Fairchild, died September 3, 1820. The mother of Mrs. Atwood was born in Litchfield County, Conn., February 15, 1802, and died in this county, January 3, 1888. She was the daughter of Job and Lois (Scott) Fenn, natives respectively of Connecticut and New York. The father died in Litchfield County, Conn., while Mrs. Fenn departed this life April 3, 1854, in Winnebago County, being eighty-four years of age.

Grandmother Fenn had a brother named Ezekiel Scott, who took part in the Revolutionary War. The father of Mrs. Atwood remained at home until his marriage, January 1, 1826, when he lived for two years at Stratford Point, Conn. At the end of that time his father's estate was divided among the children, and, going West to Portage County, Ohio, in the spring of 1828, he cleared a farm and resided until 1837, which was the date of his advent into Winnebago County. At the time of his death, which occurred April 23, 1879, he was the owner of four hundred and eighty acres of land. In politics, he was in early life an old-line Whig, later an Abolitionist, and afterward joining the Republican ranks, was looked upon as one of the active workers of that party. He was a County Commissioner and his vote decided the location of the present court house in Rockford. He filled the office three or four terms as Supervisor and for a number of years was Township Trustee and a member of the School Board.

Soon after his arrival in Winnebago County, in 1811, our subject located on the farm which remained his home for forty-two and one-half years. In December, 1841, he commenced to fence his land, and during 1843 raised his first crop, which consisted of fifty-five acres of winter wheat, thirty-one acres of corn and twelve of oats. The wheat crop was hauled to Chicago to the market, there being no railroad west of Buffalo, N. Y., at that early day.

After continuing to make wheat the principal crop for a few years, Mr. Atwood turned his attention to corn and clover, and also made a specialty of stock-raising, being particularly successful in raising draft horses and Holstein cattle, and his income from horses amounted to $1,000 per year. For his horses he had a home market; fat cattle were driven to Chicago; hogs were fattened, and killed during the winter months, the products being held for eight or nine months when they were hauled to Milwaukee for market and there inspected by the City Inspector. They brought good prices, pork being on an average $14 per barrel; hams $9, shoulders $7 and lard from $9 to $10 per hundred pounds.

Later Mr. Atwood became interested in raising sheep and for a number of years kept a flock of about seven hundred. When wool declined in price, he fattened and shipped the sheep to the Chicago market and in 1876 invested in Holstein cattle. He now has on his farm about one hundred head of Holstein cattle, the property of his son Albert J., who rents the farm of his father and continues the stock-raising business. In 1863-64, Mr. Atwood erected on his farm a fine residence costing $1,000 and a substantial barn, which cost $1,000. February 11, 1886, the residence was burned to the ground, and in just three months from that date he had an elegant house on the same site, completed from garret to cellar.

In his political belief, Mr. Atwood was a Whig in his school-boy days. In 1840, he voted for William Henry Harrison for President, and from that time until the formation of the Republican party in 1856, voted the Abolition ticket. Both in 1860 and 1864, he east his ballot for Abraham Lincoln and subsequently voted for U.S. Grant both times that he was nominated. In 1884, he became a Prohibitionist and has since been a stanch supporter of that party, representing it by serving six years as President of the Pecatonica Prohibition Club. Since the organization of that club at Pecatonica, in 1886, he has served as its delegate to county and State conventions of the party. He has held various township and county offices, and for one year was Supervisor and member of the School Board. With his wife he holds membership in the Congregational Church, in which he is a Deacon. He is a man of sterling attributes and undaunted energy, and it affords us pleasure to present to our readers his portrait and this sketch of his life.

ATHEW ROURKE, who owns and operates one hundred and sixty acres of land on section 14, Gnilford Township, Winnebago County, is a native of the Emerald Isle. He was born in County Down, in March, 1828. His father, Patrick Rourke, was born in County Down, and when a young man entered the British Army, serving for fourteen years. He participated in the Indian War and on being wounded was honorably discharged and granted a pension. He then settled on a farm in County Down, where he spent the remainder of his days. He wedded Mary McGannan, who also spent her entire life in County Down. Four of their children eame to America: Mary James, John and Mathew.

Our subject was essentially a self-made man. He left the parental roof at the age of eleven years and since that time has made his own way in the world. He went to Scotland and was there engaged in the construction of railroads until 1852, when he bade good-bye to the Old World and on the 22d of April sailed from Liverpool to The vessel was shipwrecked on the coast of the West Indies and Mr. Rourke remained at St. Thomas for three months, when he again embarked on the same vessel, and after a time reached New York. After a year spent in that vicinity, he came on to Illinois, making his home in Chicago for two years, when he came to Winnebago County. After locating here, he purchased five acres of land on section 21, Guilford Township, upon which a log house had been built, and there began farming.

In Brooklyn, N. Y., in October, 1852, Mr. Rourke was joined in wedlock with Catherine Drake. She also was a native of County Down, Ireland, and there her father, Patrick Drake, was born. He married Mary Kellogg, and they spent their entire lives in the county of their nativity. Only two of their children came to this country: Mrs. Eliza McCamman, who settled in Paris, Ill.; and Mrs. Rourke who came to America in the same ship with her husband. Our subject's union has been blessed with seven children, who are yet living: William, May, John, James, Lizzie, Henry and Frank. They also lost two daughters, Mattie and Catherine.

During the late war, Mr. Rourke enlisted on the 9th of August. 1862, as a member of Company A, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, and served until after peace was declared. He participated in a number of important engagements, including the battles of Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, Resaca, Peach Tree Creek, the siege and capture of Atlanta, Franklin and Nashville. He was honorably discharged on the 10th of June, 1865, after about three years of faithful service.

Not long after his return home, Mr. Rourke sold his farm on section 21, and bought where he now resides. It was at one time a tract of timber land, but he has transformed it into a fertile farm, and one hundred and sixty acres of highly cultivated land now pay tribute to his care and cultivation. His farm is complete in all its appointments. The fields are well tilled and good buildings stand as monuments to his thrift and enterprise. Mr. Rourke and his family are members of St. James Catholic Church. He has led a busy and useful life and by the exercise of good business ability, industry and enterprise, he has gained a comfortable property.

OHN BENSLEY, who is engaged in farming in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, claims Pennsylvania as the State of his nativity. He was born in November, 1830, and is a son of Adam and Anna (Impson) Bensley. His paternal grandfather, Israel Bensley, died in middle life, leaving but one child, Adam. The maternal grandfather was a Revolutionary soldier, and died in New York at a ripe old age. Our subject was one of eleven children, three sons and eight daughters, who grew to mature years, and with one exception all are heads of families.

John Bensley was the youngest of this family, and at the age of sixty-two years now has five surviving brothers and sisters. He acquired his education in the district schools, and at the age of twenty-three went from Pennsylvania to Cattaraugus, N. Y. In the autumn of 1855, he left the Empire State and emigrated to Rockford with the hope of bettering his financial condition by removing to the broad prairies of the West. About two years later, on the 20th of July 1857, he was joined in wedlock with Maria Davis, daughter of Benjamin II. Davis, who was born in the Mohawk Flats, where later he and his wife began their domestic life. He was a carpenter and builder and was the builder, owner and captain of the first line boat on the Eric Canal. To that business he devoted his energies for a number of years and laid the foundation for his future success. In 1836, he removed with his family to New York, after which he went to Waverly, Tioga County, at which time Mrs. Bensley was an infant. They had a family of three children who lived to be grown, two sons and a daughter. They also lost one son, John, who was drowned when a child.

In the spring of 1857, Mr. Davis came to Winnebago County, and settled on the west side of Rock River in Rockford. He engaged in contracting on the construction of the Eric Railroad and gave the site for the depot. He left behind him many other evidences of his thrift and enterprise. Many buildings of the city were creeted by him, including one of the oldest blocks, which bears his name. His death occurred in May, 1872, and his wife departed this life in 1870, at the age of sixty-nine years. They have one son still living, Angus Davis, a resident of Bradford County, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Bensley have had two children: Eva, who is yet at home and Benjamin who died in infancy.

Mr. Bensley has had a varied experience in life, but farming has been his chief occupation and he now devotes his time and attention to that line of work in Cherry Valley Township, where he owns eighty acres of land which yield to him a golden tribute. It has been his home since 1889, and is a well-improved farm.

LIAKIM S. BARTHOLOMEW, an enterpris-ing and intelligent farmer of Harlem Township, Winnebago County, residing on section 36, claims New York as the State of his nativity. He was born in Annsville, Oneida County, on the 18th of April, 1826. The family is of Scotch origin, and was founded in this country by Ebenezer Bartholomew, grandfather of our subject, who was born in Scotland and emigrated to America, settling in Connecticut, where he spent the remainder The father of our subject, Eben Barof his life. tholomew, was a native of Wolcott, Conn., and was there reared and married, the lady of his choice being Anna Simonds, who was born in Vermont, and is a daughter of Eliakim Simonds. From Connecticut, Mr. Bartholomew and his wife removed to Annsville, Oncida County, N. Y., where his death occurred in 1832. He was quite a prominent citizen of that community, and served as County Sheriff. His widow afterwards became the wife of David Hurlburt, and the year 1847 witnessed her arrival in Harlem Township, Winnebago County, Ill., where she spent her last days.

Chas m Huldh

The subject of this sketch was only six years of age when his father died. He remained with his mother until 1843, and then came to Illinois by way of the Erie Canal and the Lakes to Chicago, and by team to this county, which he found to be a sparsely settled region. There were no railroads, the nearest markets being Chicago and Milwaukee, and the work of civilization and progress seemed scarcely begun. Mr. Bartholomew began life in the West as a farm hand, working for his grandfather Simonds three years, after which he rented the land upon which he now resides. In 1817, he went to Joliet, where he spent a year, after which he returned to this county, where he has made his home continuously since, and during nearly the entire time his present farm has been his home. It is a well-developed tract of one hundred and sixty acres on section 36, Harlem Township. The land is very valuable, the rich and fertile fields yield him a golden tribute, and the improvements upon his farm are among the best in the township.

On the 15th of November, 1848, Mr. Bartholomew was united in marriage with Louisa L. Atwood, who was born in Middlefield, Berkshire County, Mass., and is a daughter of Phineas and Hulda (Haskell) Atwood, who are mentioned fully in the sketch of David Atwood, on another page of this work. Three children have been born unto our subject and his wife: Jay F., who married Belle Hart, by whom he has one daughter, Alice; Jennie, who wedded Monroe Clark, and has one son, Arthur, and Fred, who completes the family.

Mr. Bartholomew is a charter member of Harmony Grange No. 957, and has been a member of the County Agricultural Society since its organization. For twenty years he has been one of the officers of that society, serving for about half of that time as General Superintendent. He is Past Master of Rockford Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M., and is a member of Winnebago Chapter No. 21, R. A. M.; Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T., and of the Old Settlers' Society, of this county. In his youth he had no special advantages, but has made the most of his opportunities, and is now a well-informed old gentleman, highly respected by all who know him and very popular with his friends. He has long been identified with the history of Winnebago County, and has borne his share in its upbuilding and advancement. His duties of citizenship are ever faithfully performed, and he certainly is well deserving of representation in this volume.

HARLES M. HULDT, a popular Swede, doing business as a pattern-maker for the Utter Manufacturing Company, has been engaged in this connection for many years and is one of the most reliable, industrious men in the employ of the company. He came to Rockford in 1866, and has since been connected with the business interests of the city. He was one of the stockholders of the Central Furniture Company, and is also connected with other enterprises. His pleasant home is located on the corner of Second Avenue and Sixth Street. He has been a mechanic all his life and was a blacksmith in his native country, where he also owned a farm and followed agricultural pursuits in connection with his trade.

However, Mr. Huldt has spent the most of his life as a pattern-maker, and at this he is very skillful. To show that his work is appreciated, and that he excels in his line of business, it may be stated that in a contest at Rockford he received the largest number of votes east by the people as being the most popular wage-worker in the city. This entitled him to a free trip to his native land, and it is hardly necessary to add that he enjoyed his visit and appreciated the kindness of his friends.

Mr. Huldt was originally from Kalmar Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, born March 23, 1835, and, as he grew to manhood, learned his trade, which he followed until coming to the United States. He is the first of his kinsmen to come to America. His father, Nels P. Carlson, is still residing in Sweden and is now eighty-six years of age. The latter followed farming during his entire active life, but, in addition, was also engaged in blacksmithing. His mother lived to be ninety-two years of age, and his father nearly ninety. All the old stock were members of the Swedish Lutheran Church.

Since his residence in this country, Mr. Huldt has had brothers and sisters emigrate hither, and they are now living in the West and are all married. He himself was married in his native province to Miss Ullrica G. Carlson, who was born April 17, 1835, and whose parents, Carl and Anna G. (Hemingson) Johnson, were also natives of that Province, passing their entire lives there. Her father was a farmer. Mrs. Huldt has one brother in this country, now a resident of Omaha, Neb.

Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Huldt: Carl A., a farmer of Jackson County, Minn., married Miss Tilda Nelson, of Rockford, and they have three children: Maude, Edith and Florence; Sophia became the wife of Charles Nelson, a machinist for W. F. and John Barnes' Manufacturing Company, Rockford, and has one child, Rube E.; Amanda C. married Albert Hollem, of whom see sketch in another part of this work; John E. resides in Rockford and is foreman carver of a furniture factory. Of his marriage have been born four children: Ralph, Eben, Daisy and Stanley. Hattie L., educated in the business college, is book-keeper for Withrow & Baird, dry-goods merchants; Jennie L. is at home, and is being educated in the city schools.

In politics, Mr. Huldt is a stanch Republican. Socially, he is a prominent Mason, having occupied all the offices of the Blue Lodge No. 102, and has been Worshipful Master for two years. He is also a member of Winnebago Chapter No. 21, has filled a number of the chairs, and is a member of the Crusader Commandery No. 17. His portrait is shown in this connection.

ILLIAM BUSKE. With the rapid and steady advance of the city of Rockford, with the continual increase in her building operations, the trade of a mason-contractor is one of primary importance, and is one on which the first step of progress is dependent. To be a good mason requires years of experience, and Mr.

Buske has had this. He has done some fine contracting work for leading business houses, including the Rockford Opera House, the Rockford Burial Case Works, the foundation for the Young Men's Christian Association building, the Forest City Knitting Company's large establishment and two large stone banking buildings for Gilbert Woodruff, and has now under contract two large school houses, the Brown and Montague school buildings.

Mr. Buske came to this city in 1868, and was engaged in journeyman work for some time. He built the jail of this place and then went to Chicago, just after the great fire of 1871, and was engaged in following his trade at that place for two years. Returning to Rockford, he has since been actively engaged in contracting, and, besides the above-mentioned buildings, there are the Emerson & Talcott power-house, the large Germania Hall, besides many private buildings which he has erected. He owns a good business house at No. 505 West State Street, and a very fine brick residence at No. 712 Elm Street, besides other property in the city.

Our subject was born in Parmman, Prussia, on the 20th of March, 1841, and was the first of the family to take up his residence in this country. He took passage on the vessel "Schiller," and landed in Baltimore on the 2d of July. Six months later, he came on to Rockford, being obliged to tarry long enough in the former city to earn the money to bring him to this. He has been so successful since his residence in Rockford that his brother Albert came over, and is now running the rendering works of this city. The latter was married in his native country and brought his wife with him.

The parents of these children passed their entire lives in their native country, Prussia, and the father was a wagon-maker by trade. He was a hardworking, industrious man, and lived to be eighty-four years of age. His wife died in 1889, when seventy-two years of age. Both were members of the Lutheran Church.

Our subject was married in his native province two weeks before he came to America, and selected as his wife Miss Henrietta Hofbert, who was also a native of Prussia. Her father, August Hofbert, was the owner of a large farm, and was a very successful tiller of the soil. He and his wife passed their entire lives in Prussia, lived to be old people, and were worthy members of the Lutheran Church. One of their daughters, Mrs. Fredriea Gau, a widow, resides at 156 Union Street, Chicago, and runs a milk depot.

Nine children have blessed the union of our subject and wife, and are named as follows: Adolph, a plumber and tinner of the firm of Roger & Buske; Louie, now in the employ of a telephone company in Muskegon, Mich.; Anna, a seamstress; Eda, William, Hattie, Clara, Walter and Richard, all but one at home. Mr. and Mrs. Buske are possessed of all those characteristics that make the people of Germany so successful in their different occupations, and are surrounded by many warm friends. Mr. Buske served his native country in the regular army, and from 1861 to 1866 was in the rebellion against Austria, participating in some of the principal battles. He leans toward the Republican party in his political views.

LANSON STEWARD is eminently a selfmade man, and is a fine type of the class who, in building up their own fortunes, have been important factors in securing the prosperity and promoting the growth of their State, county and township. Mr. Steward came to this county more than forty years ago, a poor boy with scarcely a dollar that he could call his own, yet to-day he is numbered among the men of wealth in this part of the State. For many years he has been actively engaged in agricultural pursuits and owns one of the largest and most valuable farms in the county, which is divided into four parts, and includes a magnificent tract of one thousand acres. It is exceptionally improved, under perfect management, and is fitted with all the modern conveniences in the way of buildings and machinery.

Alanson Steward was born in that part of London District now included in Elgin County, Province of Ontario, Canada, February 20, 1823. His father, William Steward, was born in the Niagara District of Ontario, and of Scotch ancestry. He learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, and went to London District when a young man, where he was one of the pioneers in what is now Elgin County. Securing a tract of Government land which was heavily timbered, he cleared his acreage and erected thereon a log house, in which our subject was born. There was no sawed lumber used in the house, and the chimney was built of sticks, with mud on the outside. There were no convenient markets for some time, and the products of the farm provided the family with the necessaries of life. The children of the family were dressed in homespun material, which the mother carded, spun and wove.

The father of our subject worked at his trade the greater part of the time until 1846, when, with his wife and seven children, he came to Illinois, making the journey overland with teams, and cooking and camping by the wayside. The two youngest children were born in this county, one having died in Canada. There were ten children. On his arrival in Winnebago County, Mr. Steward settled on what is now Owen Township, purchasing a tract of wild prairie land on section 15. There being no house on the place, he rented a cabin, in which he resided until the spring of 1847, in the meantime erecting a comfortable structure on his new farm. His wife bore the maiden name of Sophia Long. She was born in the neighborhood of Simcoe, Canada, and was the daughter of Abraham Long, of German ancestry. She departed this life at the old home farm.

Alanson Steward was a lad of thirteen years when he came to Illinois with his parents, and as there were no railroads here for some time thereafter, he hauled the products of the farm to the Chicago market, which was one hundred miles away. Our subject continued to reside with his parents until 1854, when he went to California, via New York and the Isthmus of Panama. He was there employed on a farm in Monterey County for a twelvemonth, then went to Coos County, Ore., and was employed in the lumber woods for a like period. Returning home at the expiration of that time, Mr. Steward again engaged in farming with his brother on the old homestead. Four years later, he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land where he now resides, eight acres of which were broken, but which contained no other improvements. He creeted thereon a line set of frame buildings, planted fruit and shade trees, and otherwise improved the farm. His acreage at the present time includes nine hundred and sixty acres of prairie land, besides forty acres of timber in Harrison Township.

The day and year on which our subject was united in marriage to Miss Malinda Welton was June 18, 1856. The lady was born in Elgin County, Ontario, Canada, and was the daughter of John and Christiana (Barstido) Welter, on the father's side of the house, natives of Pennsylvania and of German ancestry. To Mr. and Mrs. Steward have been born ten children, viz.: Ella S., Nelson F., William J., Mary A., Hattie M., Alanson G., James E., Charles A., Nora B., and Bird. Mrs. Steward is a member in good standing of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, in politics, her husband is a stanch Republican.

OBERT HENDERSON. This prominent resident of the farming community of Boone County is at present residing in a pleasant home on section 21. Caledonia Township, where he has an estate which bears evidence of the enterprise and progressiveness of its owner. He was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, November 12, 1832, and is the son of Lionel Henderson, who was also born in that country. The grandfather of our subject, Archie Henderson, and his wife spent their entire lives in Scotland, where they were well-to-do people.

Lionel Henderson was reared and educated in his native shire and was trained in early life to agricultural pursuits. He resided there until 1841, then, in company with his wife and two children, set sail from Glasgow and landed in Quebec, whence he went directly to Gananoque. Mr. Henderson remained in Canada for two years, and as he was very poor and the times exceedingly hard, he saw little chance of bettering his condition in the Dominion and in 1813 came to Illinois. On his arrival in Boone County, he had $10 worth of leather and $5 in Canadian money, which was positively worthless. He made a claim to a tract of Government land on section 28, Caledonia Township, which is now occupied by his son John. Many people who, like himself, were too poor to enter their land, were holding their claims in the vicinity, while those who had money were entering good claims, regardless of the fact that they were occupied. Mr. Henderson gave a gentleman to understand it would not be safe for him to enter his claim and so was unmolested. He borrowed the money to pay for his property for which he was taxed fifty-nine per cent, interest. The corn which he raised on his place he shelled by hand, and was only able to get twelve and a half cents a bushel for it, and in this way he paid the interest on the borrowed money. Wheat, which sold at from fifty to sixty-two and a half cents a bushel when hauled to Chicago and twenty-five cents at home, paid off the principal, and thus by good management and perseverance, Mr. Henderson accumulated a fair competency. He died on the old home farm Angust 26, 1874, when ninety-one years and ten months of age.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Margaret Ralston, who departed this life April 26, 1878, when eighty-four years of age. She was a daughter of John and Belle (Brown) Ralston and became the mother of two children, John and Robert. The parents of our subject were both members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church. The father first voted with the Democratic party, but being opposed to the extension of slavery, on the formation of the Republican party voted for its candidates.

Robert Henderson was a lad of eleven years when he came to Illinois with his parents, and acquired a good knowledge of the English language in the log schoolhouse of that early day. On his arrival in Illinois, he worked out on farms during the summer months, for which he received $6 per month and board. When not otherwise employed, he assisted his father in conducting the farm and drove the ox-team to Chicago to market their grain. In 1859, our subject caught the gold fever and started overland to Pike's Peak. Crossing the Mississippi River at Fulton and Missouri River at Omaha, Mr. Henderson journeyed to Ft. Kearney where he met relatives who were returning and who gave such discouraging reports that he concluded to turn about and return home.

In 1862, he of whom we write and Miss Ellen Ralston were united in marriage. The lady was born in Watertown, Washington County, Ohio, and was a daughter of Robert Ralston, who had his birth in Argyleshire, Scotland. Her father commenced clerking when fourteen years of age at Greenock and continued so employed until 1832, when he came to America and located in Watertown, where he was engaged in teaching school until 1850. He then came to Illinois and locating in Harlem Township, Winnebago County, purchased a tract of land, the operations of which he superintended, and resided there until his decease July 18, 1890. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Henderson was Naney Biggins and she is still living at the old home. She was born in Watertown, Ohio, and was the daughter of John and Sarah (Orrison) Biggins, the former of whom was a native of Virginia. They were members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, and the father in politics was a Republican, serving on that ticket as a Justice of the Peace for thirty-six years.

To Mr. and Mrs. Henderson have been born four children: Belle, Maggie, Robert H. and J. William. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church. In 1878, Mr. Henderson visited his old home in Scotland, and in 1886 with his wife left Caledonia Township and crossed the Atlantic, visiting Edinburg and Glasgow the second time. In his political belief, our subject is a stanch Republican, in which party he is an active worker.

LEXANDER CAMERON, one of the prosperous and well-known farmers of Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, was born in Scotland, in 1833, and is a son of James and Sophia (Skinner) Cameron. His ancestors were farmers and mechanics. His parents had a family of four sons and one daughter: Christian, now deceased; Mrs. Alexander Skinner, who died in Scotland; Alexander, James; William, who died in his native land; and Andrew, who died in Rockford, in the spring of 1882, leaving a family.

Our subject spent the days of his boyhood and youth under the parental roof, and on attaining his majority emigrated to America, in April, 1854, settling in Ashland County, Ohio. He there learned the blacksmith's trade, and before coming to this country had learned the trade of shoe-making with his father. In 1857, we find him a resident of Rockford, and he opened a blacksmith shop at No. 115 South First Street, where Sackett's store now stands. He was in partnership with William Ryburn, his wife's brother, and they did a large business, having two shops on opposite sides of the street.

In 1860, Mr. Cameron was united in marriage to Miss Jane, daughter of William and Ann (Mitchell) Ryburn. She was also a native of Scotland, and came to this country during the same year in which her husband crossed the Atlantic. They began their domestic life in Rockford, where Mr. Cameron continued to engage in blacksmithing for twenty-one years. However, in the fall of 1862, he purchased his present farm of one hundred and seventy acres on section 28, Cherry Valley Township, removing to it on the 11th of March, 1878. He has since extended its boundaries until it now comprises three hundred and five acres of valuable land, all of which are under a high state of cultivation, and well improved. He came to this country almost empty handed. On landing in Ohio, he had only $5, yet few men have been more prospered than Mr. Cameron, who now owns one of the best farms in this community, supplied with good buildings and all the accessories of a model farm. He also raises a good grade of stock, and the neat appearance of everything upon the place indicates his thrift and enterprise,

Mr. and Mrs. Cameron have three sons and one daughter: James, William, Mary T. and Alexander. They also lost one son, John, who died September 1, 1872, at the age of seven months. The three sons aid the father in the operation of the home farm. The daughter is now the wife of William Vogt, a resident farmer of Ogle County. They have one son and have buried two daughters are some son and have buried two daughters.

ters. This family is one widely and favorably known throughout the community, and held in high esteem by their many friends. Mr. Cameron cast his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has since supported the Republican party.

OHN JACOBSON. That flourishing business enterprise, the Rockford Painting and Decorating Company, of which Mr. Jacobson is a prominent member, was established March 1, 1888, and has since been in successful operation at No. 111 South Third Street. This firm earries a stock valued at $10,000, and has a branch office at No. 613 Seventh Street. Both stores are filled with a choice line of goods, and the members of the firm are men of experience and ability.

John Jacobson came to Rockford in 1871, and began business as a painter and decorator, meeting with success from the beginning. He gave his entire attention to his business since the time he was fourteen years of age, and with such substantial results that he is now the owner of a pleasant home at No. 1000 Ninth Avenue, Rockford. He was born in Wester Gothland Province, Sweden, October 6, 1848, learned his trade in Falkoping, and afterward worked as a journeyman for four years. Then, with his mother, two brothers and a sister, he sailed for the United States, reaching New York City on the 5th of January, 1871. The little family came direct to Rockford, to which city the father, Joseph Jacobson, had come in 1868, and here made their home. The mother, whose maiden name was Mary Krus, passed away in the fall of 1891, when seventythree years of age. She was a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and her husband, who is still living and a resident of Alta, lowa, held membership in the same. He is now seventy-two years of age.

John Jacobson was the second in order of birth of five children, three sons and two daughters, all of whom are living and are as follows: Henry resides in Rock Island, where he was graduated from college June 18, 1892, as a minister of the Lutheran Church; he married Miss Hattie Anderson, of Iowa. Rev. Fritz, a graduate of the same college in June, 1894, also of Yale College, and now Professor of Philosophy in a college of New Haven, is pastor of a Swedish Lutheran Church and married Miss Othelia Holland, daughter of the Rev. M. Holland, of Stanton, Iowa. Tilda became the wife of Alpha Bodin, and they now reside on a farm near Alta, Iowa. Amanda narried Charles J. Larson, who is also a farmer of Alta, Iowa.

The gentleman whose name heads this sketch was married in Rockford to Miss Carrie Buckland, a native of Sweden, born February 13, 1852. She came to America alone in May, 1868, and joined a brother, John, who is now a shoemaker in Rockford, whither he came in May, 1854, being one of the first Swedish settlers. Their parents died in Sweden, where the father was a successful tiller of the soil.

Of the eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson, three died young, viz: Carl, Herman and Otto E. Those living are: Alga O., Ellen II., Evan C., Carl W. and Julius E., all at home. In politics, Mr. Jacobson is a Republican, and in religion he and his wife are exemplary members of the Zion Lutheran Church.

OHN A. BROWN. During the '50s there was an immense emigration to the United States by residents of that grand old country, Sweden, which seems somehow to instill into her sons and daughters the traits of character that make them successful and popular wherever fate leads their footsteps. Among those who sought out new homes for themselves in this country, was John A. Brown, who made his first appearance in Rockford, in May, 1856. He came here a poor man, and what he has accumulated in the way of this world's goods has been the fruits of his own exertions.

A native of Smoland Province, born October 5, 1829, Mr. Brown became inured to hard labor at an early age, and after reaching mature years, he determined to try his fortune in the States. He took passage at Gottenburg, and after spending the first winter in New York State, subsequently went to Connecticut, and thence to Rockford, Ill., where his parents and a sister were then residing. The father, Andrew Anderson Brown, after spending a number of years in this country, longed for one more glimpse of his native soil, and returning, died there when eighty years of age. His father bore the name of Brown, which was the real family name, and our subject had it transferred to himself. The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Sarah Johnson, quietly passed away in Rockford, at the advanced age of eighty-two. Like very many of the Swedish people, they were members of the Lutheran Church. Three of their daughters are living, and two, Mrs. Spherf and Mrs. Lilleblad, are much esteemed citizens of Rockford. The other daughter, Mrs. John Johnson, is a resident, it is thought, of Wisconsin or Minnesota.

Before leaving his native country, Mr. Brown selected as his companion in life Miss Emily Lilleblad, a lady of much culture and refinement, who was born in Jonkoping Lan, Smoland Province, Sweden, on the 14th of August, 1830. She was the only child born to her parents, and her father, John Lilleblad, died when she was very young. The mother died a number of years later, while on her way to the United States.

Mr. Brown's political attiliations are with the Republican party, and he takes an active interest in local and county politics. He is public spirited and enterprising, and is prominently identified with all movements of a laudable nature. He and his wife are very devoted Christian people, in the true sense of that word, and active working members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, of which both are old and prominent members. Of the six children born to their union, only three are now living: Ida M., wife of L. F. Johnson, a successful merchant at Crystal Falls. Mich., is the mother of six children; Huldah C., widow of Albert Larson, resides with her parents, and has one son, Harold H. C.; and Frank H., a watch-maker by trade, and a commercial traveler for the Star Furniture Factory of Rockford, makes that city his home, and resides with his parents. The children deceased were named as follows: Frank G., Henry and George. Mr. Brown is now engaged in the machine shops of the Utter Manufacturing Company, and has a comfortable and commodious home at No. 1203 Third Avenue.

IMMONS P. TERWILLIGER, deceased, was born in Preble, Cortland County, N. Y., June 17, 1820, and was a son of Green and Martha (Pearsol) Terwilliger, both natives of the Empire State. They spent their last days in the town of Preble, where the father cleared and developed a farm from the wilderness. His wife died in 1864, and two years later he came to Belvidere, where his death occurred.

Our subject supplemented his early education by study in the Homer Academy, and afterward took up the study of medicine. He later attended the medical college in Buffalo, and in 1847 visited Chicago, where he continued his studies and was graduated. He commenced practice in Algonquin, McHenry County, Ill., where he resided until 1849, when he came to Belvidere and engaged in the drug business. A few years later, he opened a hardware store, which he carried on for some time.

In 1849, Mr. Terwilliger wedded Frances Mitchell, who was born in Peterboro, Hillsboro County, N. 11. Her father, Jonathan Mitchell, and grandfather, Benjamin Mitchell, were both natives of the same town, and Samuel Mitchell, the greatgrandfather, was a native of Londonderry, N. H., it is thought. He became one of the first settlers of Peterboro secured a water-power in that locality, and erected one of the first gristmills in that section of the country. The grandfather spent his entire life in Peterboro as a farmer. He married Martha Steele, who was born in that locality, and never left it until called to the home beyond. The father of Mrs. Terwilliger was reared and educated in his native county, and in 1839 removed to Cortland County, N. Y., where he purchased a farm, making it his home for three years. He then removed to the village of Preble, upon which he resided until 1850, when he came to Illinois, and spent the remainder of his days in Belvidere, his death occurring October 20, 1853. He married Sarah White, a native of the Granite State, and a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Smith) White. Her death occurred in Belvidere, January 26, 1861.

Mr. Terwilliger of this sketch continued business in this city until 1883, when he was called to the home beyond. He was a Universalist in religious belief, and one of the leading members of the organization here. His wife, a most estimable lady, is a member of the Presbyterian Church. She has three children: Irving, Cashier of the Second National Bank of Belvidere; Helen A., wife of Lewis A. Seaman; and Alice at home. The family is one widely and favorably known in this community, the members of the household ranking high in social circles. The death of the husband and father was deeply regretted by a large circle of friends, for he was one of the valued citizens of the community.

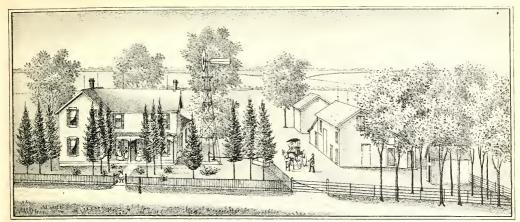

RS. ANNA CHESTER, who is at present residing on a splendid estate on section 10, LeRoy Township, Boone County, is the daughter of Ole and Betsey (Sondreson) Oleson. She was born in Norway in 1835 and came to America in the fall of 1849, in company with her parents. The party set sail on the brig "Uno" from Arndahl and landed in New York six weeks later. They went by water to Milwaukee, where they secured a team which took them to Blue Mound, Wis., where the father purchased eighty acres of land. After a residence there of one winter, Mr. Oleson sold his property and removed to Rock County, Wis., where he became the proprietor of eighty acres and resided until his decease in 1856. While making her home at Ft. Dodge, Iowa, with her daughter Helen, Mrs. Edwin Haatvedt, the mother died June 1, 1892, at the advanced age of ninety-seven

Our subject was married in Rock County, Wis., May 16, 1856, to Lawrence Chester. He was a son of Chester and Nellic Chesterson, who came from Norway to America in 1819, when their son was fourteen years of age. The father, who had been an invalid for many years, died while en route to this country and was consigned to a watery grave. Mr. and Mrs. Chesterson were the parents of four children and were accompanied on their removal to America by a son and daughter, one having been left in their native country. The eldest son had preceded them two years to their new home.

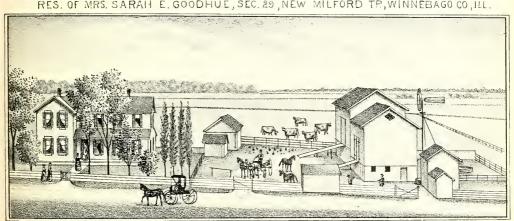

Mr. Chester located with his widowed mother on forty acres of land in Boone County, soon after which he added forty acres more. A few years later, he purchased one hundred and twenty acres. and in 1876 added to his already splendid estate eighty acres, for which he paid $2,200. His mother departed this life in the fall of 1872, when eighty years of age. Our subject brought her husband at the time of her marriage a dowry of $400, one eow, one sheep and one horse. To Mr. and Mrs. Chester have been born twelve children, all of whom grew to mature years with the exception of four. Nellie died when tifteen years of age; Nellie (second) died at two years; Betsey when eighteen and Julia at the age of sixteen years. The living are Charles, Osear, John Severt, Edward, Martin William, Frank Theodore, David Samuel and Henry Bennett.

Lawrence Chester was one of the early settlers of this township and passed through many of the hardships which beset the path of a pioneer. As before stated, he was fourteen years of age when locating here and for the first tive years in his new home worked out on farms by the month. The first land of which he became the owner was a timbered tract, which by persistent industry he cleared and placed under excellent cultivation. He met with a severe accident when twenty-seven years old by losing his right arm in a threshing machine, and for twenty-five years thereafter performed more hard farm labor than most men with both their arms. When tifty-two years of age, he broke his leg, which accident finally resulted in his death, July 30, 1883.

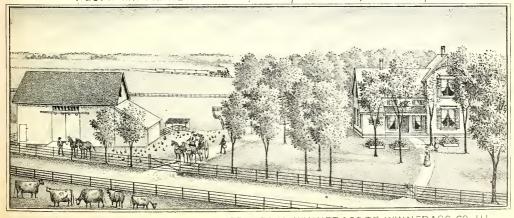

Mr. and Mrs. Chester were members in good standing of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, of which body the children are also members. Mr. Chester erected a house valued at $2,000 which was the result of honest toil and economy. His handsome farm gives abundant evidence that he understood business as a farmer and possessed the enterprise and energy essential to keeping his estate in good shape and making it abundantly productive. A view of the residence and surroundings on the farm of Mrs. Chester appears on another page.

ARAH E. GOODHUE, who is living on a farm on section 29, New Milford Township, is numbered among the early settlers of Winnebago County. She is a daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Lawrence) Goodhue, the former a native of Cheshire County, N. H., and the latter of Weston, Windsor County, Vt. were married in Weston, and spent two years in that locality, where Mr. Goodhue owned a timber tract, from which he made shingles. He afterward sold out and removed to Elyria, Ohio, whence they emigrated to Illinois in the spring of 1836. They made the journey with two yoke of oxen and a yoke of cows, and after ten weeks of travel, arrived at their destination on the 4th of March, 1836.

Settling on section 29, New Milford Township, Mr. Goodhue made a claim, which he improved, obtaining the deed to the land in 1842. He and his family bore many hardships and trials incident to pioneer life and oftentimes had bardly anything to live on except what they gained from hunting and fishing, but as the years passed their farm became productive and they were in more comfortable circumstances. The father died September 9, 1869, at the age of sixty-nine years, and his wife was called to her final rest in January, 1871, at the age of seventy-three years. They were buried in the cemetery near their home. They had lost three children in infancy, their daughter Sarah being the only surviving member of the family.

The lady whose name heads this sketch has always resided upon the old homestead, a view of which accompanies this sketch. She has been twice married. On the 13th of January, 1856, she became the wife of William H. McCammond, and in September, 1858, she gave her hand in marriage to Edward E. Price, a native of Montgomeryshire, Wales. She has lost three children who died in early youth, and one son, Daniel L. McCammond, died October 4, 1880, at the age of twenty-four years. She has seven children yet living: Margarey E., Edward J., Thomas C.; Albertie E., now Mrs. Van Fleck; Lillian F., Lenora L. and Leora E., twins.

Mrs. Goodhue has led a busy and useful life. She now owns two hundred and eight acres of land in the home farm, beside thirteen acres of good timber land in Noble Grove, and her property yields her a good income. She has many friends throughout the community where she has long made her home and is both widely and favorably known.

LEXANDER FALCONER. One of the finest farms within the limits of Winnebago Township is owned and occupied by Mr. Falconer, and is represented by a view on another page of this volume. The main points in the history of the subject of this notice are as follows: He is the son of Hugh Falconer, and was born in Ross-shire, Scotland, May 8, 1836. His father was also a native of that place, and followed his trade of a carpenter and joiner in Scotland until 1817, when, accompanied by his wife and four children, he emigrated to America, embarking at Liverpool in the sailing-vessel "Kalamazoo," They landed in New York twenty-eight days later, and, coming directly to Winnebago County, located in that part of New Milford Township now included in Rockford Township, where they resided for five years. At the end of that time the father purchased property in Winnebago Township, where he remained until his decease.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Catherine McDonald; she was also born in Rossshire, and died on the home farm in this township. Our subject was the third in order of birth in the parental family of four children, his brothers and sister being Robert, James and Catherine. Alexander, our subject, was a lad of eleven years on taking the ocean voyage to the New World and resided with his parents until his marriage; afterward he continued to farm with his brothers for four years, and then, removing to Rockford Township, rented property for two years, when he returned and managed his father-in-law's farm for six years, during which time he purchased the place which he now owns and occupies on section 14.

April 4, 1866, Miss Ann Elliott, a native of Yorkshire, England, became Mrs. Alexander Falconer. Her father, John Elliott, was also a native of the same shire, and the son of Joseph Elliott, who spent his entire life in England. The father of Mrs. Falconer was reared to agricultural pursuits, and followed farming in his native land until 1842, when, with his wife and seven children, he took passage in a sailing-vessel "Prince Edward" and landed in New York after a voyage of eight weeks and two days. They came to Illinois by the most convenient route, and on coming to Winnebago County, found Rockford to be little more than a hamlet. Most of the land in the western part of the county was still owned by the Government, and deer could be seen from the doorway roaming over the plains. Wolves would often come into the yard and make night hideous with their howls. Mrs. Falconer vividly recalls the hard times that her people had to contend with in evolving a home out of the primitive wilderness,

Mr. Elliott made a claim to the northwest quarter of section 14, in what is now Winnebago Township, but when it came into market, speculators getting ahead of him, made him pay double price for the land. He at once built a frame house on the place, and as there were no railroads in the county, for several years after locating here he conveyed his grain to the Chicago markets with ox-teams. In the warm weather he took provisions along and camped by the wayside, but during the winter season was obliged to put up at the taverns. Mr. Elliott improved a farm of two hundred and forty acres, on which he resided until his decease, December 23, 1883. The maiden name of his wife was Susannah Dawson, a native of Yorkshire, England, who departed this life on the home farm in 1862. He reared two sons and eight daughters: Sarah, George, Elizabeth, Hannah, Susan, Emma (who died February 18, 1892). Ann, John, Esther and Ellen. John served in Company C, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, during the late war, and died in the service.

The six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Falconer are Hugh (who died at the age of eleven years), Susan, George, Kate, Alexander and Florence.

ILLIAM II. MILLER, who is one of the well-known citizens of Rockford, was born at Mt. Morris, Livingston County, N. Y., May 13, 1835. His father, the Hon. Horace Miller, was a native of Berkshire County, Mass., where he was born in 1798, and was a son of Jonathan Miller, who removed from Massachusetts to New York and for a time resided in Albany before removing to Mt. Morris, where he resided during his later years. The maiden name of his wife was Case.

The father of our subject was quite a young child when his parents changed their home from Massachusetts to New York. He married in Amsterdam. Montgomery County, and removed to Livingston County in 1817, becoming an early settler there. Upon the tract of timber land which he bought, he erected in the midst of the wilderness a log house, in which most of his children were born. For many years after making his home in Western New York, there were no railroads or canals, and transportation and communieation from one part of the country to the other were difficult and slow. He cleared quite a tract of land and resided there until 1839, during which year he removed with his wife and six children to Illinois. The removal was made by team to Buffalo and from there teams and all were shipped by steamer to Chicago, where they disembarked and teamed it from that city to Winnebago County.

The Hon. Horace Miller had visited this section of the county the winter previous to his removal, and his brother, E. G. Miller, had bought him a claim to a tract of Government land near the mouth of the Kishwaukee River. At that time, there was a village located very near the junction of that stream with the Rock River, which was for some time quite a flourishing settlement. The father of our subject bought a house in that village and moved it on his land. There were then no railroads here and the markets were Chicago, Galena, Dubuque and Milwankee. He dealt largely in live stock in addition to carrying on farming, and was a successful man, adding to his landed estate until at one time he had twelve hundred and fifty acres. He resided on the farm until about the year 1861, when he came to Rockford and lived a retired life until his death in 1864.

Hannah Clark was the maiden name of the mother of our subject and she was born in Amsterdam, Montgomery County, N. Y., February 2, 1800, and was a daughter of William Clark. She lived until 1877 and died in Rockford, leaving the following children: Clark: Sarah, who married Hiram Waterman; N. Eliza, who is the wife of Philip W. Marsh; Horace, who resides in Mt. Vernon, Iowa; II, Caroline, who married the Hon. William Brown, of Rockford, and William II. All reside in this city with the exception of Horace. The father was in his political sympathies first a Whig and later a Republican. He filled various offices of trust and responsibility in Winnebago County and represented the county in the State Legislature, being elected thereto in the fall of 1850.

He of whom we write was but four years old when he made the famous journey with his parents from the East to the West and he remembers distinctly the difficulties of that trip and the ineidents of change and the new home. For some time after their settlement here, deer and other kinds of wild game were plentiful. He early commeneed making himself useful on the farm and attended school also during a part of each year, He resided with his parents until they removed to the city and then assumed the management of the home farm until 1865. During that year, he took a trip West and spent nearly a year traveling. In 1866, he bought fourteen acres of land in the city and later bought thirty-one acres of the Churchill farm close to the city and engaged in dairy farming. In 1877, he built his present residence, a commodious brick house in modern style of architecture, occupying ample and delightful grounds on a site that commands a pleasant view.

The marriage of Mr. Miller in 1859 united him with Jennie E. Phillips, who was born near Platteville, Grant County, Wis., and whose father, Henry B. Phillips, was born in New York State, November 8, 1810. He was a son of William Phillips, who was born in Canada and who came to Illinois during the year in which it was admitted as a State into the Union. He served in the interests of this country as a Lieutenant in the War of 1812, and received a land warrant in payment for his services. With that land warrant, he located a tract of one hundred and sixty aeres of land in Henry County, where he resided until his death. which occurred about a year later. The maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Baxter. She was born in Connecticut and died in Grant County, Wis., in 1837.

The father of Mrs. Miller soon after his father's death was apprenticed to a tanner in Pittslield. Pike County, Ill., and lived with him until 1830, when, not liking the trade, he went to Galena and from there, with others, sought that part of the Territory of Michigan now included in lowa, and engaged in mining on or near the present site of Dubuque, where the land was at the time owned by the Indians. The red man asserted his rights and drove them away and for some time they were prisoners on an island near by. In 1832, he served under Capt. Hathaway in the Black Hawk War. He was with the troops in pursuit of Black Hawk through Illinois and Wisconsin and was present at Bad Axe when that wiley chief was captured.

After the war, Mr. Phillips settled near Platteville, Grant County, Wis., and having purchased a tract of Government land erected a log house, in which Mrs. Miller was born, but which was abandoned some six weeks later by the family, who moved to a frame house. For many years, there were no railroads in Wisconsin and the nearest markets of any size were Galena and Milwankee. He was one of the earliest agents in that section of the county for the McCormick Reaper and other kinds of farm machinery. He resided on his farm until 1861, after which he resided ten years in Platteville and then removed to Independence. Iowa, where he remained until 1886, at which time he went to Atlanta, Ga., where he still lives.

The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Miller was Lucinda Sloan. She was born in Mt. Vernon, Ky., and her father, John Sloan, removed from his native home in Virginia to Kentucky and thence to Missouri, living at St. Charles for a time, and then going to Dubuque, Iowa, where he was one of the first permanent settlers. He bought a farm two miles from the city and there spent the remainder of his days. His wife before her marriage bore the name of Jennie Boatwright. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have two children: Ella G., who is now the wife of Robert B. Whipple, and Mabel J. The political views of our subject are in accordance with Prohibition doctrines, and he and his good wife are active and earnest members of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church.

SEORGE M. HAINES, M. D., now one of the leading physicians of Durand, has been a resident here since November, 1877. He was born in Orleans County, Vt., September 9, 1846, and is the son of Moses and Deborah W. (Clark) Haines, natives respectively of Vermont and New Hampshire. Samuel Haines, the progenitor of the family in the United States, was born in Shrewsbury, England, in 1603. He was a son of John Haines, Sr., and in 1635 saited with a party to America, at which time the vessel was wrecked off the coast of Maine. The survivors made their way by land southward toward the Massachusetts Colony. They located, however, in Portsmouth, and thus was founded the first settlement in New Hampshire. Samuel Haines was a Deacon in the Congregational Church and died about 1686.

The second son of the above-named gentleman was also called Samuel and had his birth in Portsmouth in 1616. He was married to Mary Fifield, who was also born in New Hampshire, and died in 1688. They were the parents of three sons and three daughters, one of whom, William, was born in Portsmouth, January 7, 1678, and died in 1760; he was married to Mary Lewis, of Caseo Bay, and to them were born five sons and four daughters. Of these, Mathias was born in Greenland, N. II., March 17, 1712, and died March 28, 1795, having been married to Abigail Sherburn, also of Greenland, that State. Of their sons, Mathias was born October 11, 1711, and died August 22, 1808. His wife, Sarah Hall, of Chester, N. H., was born September 11, 1753, and departed this life September 4, 1844, after having become the mother of nine children. Of that family, Moses K. was born in Raymond, N. H., February 13, 1774, and died January 15, 1856. He had been thrice married, his first wife, to whom he was united in 1797, bore the name of Abigail May and died, leaving three children. His second union, which occurred in 1814, was with Jemimah Leach, by whom he became the father of two children. His last wife was Rachel Babbitt, to whom he was married in 1838.

The youngest son of Moses K. Haines by his second marriage was also named Moses, and was born on the 29th of December, 1818, and married March 8, 1842, to the lady who bore the name of Deborah W. Clark, who was born May 31, 1815, and died March 13, 1882. They became the parents of five children: Abigail D., who was born March 22, 1843, married J. D. S. Olmstead and makes her home in Greensboro, Vt. George M., our subject, was the second in order of birth; Cephas C., who was born October 3, 1849, married Clara E. Calderwood and also resides in Greensboro, Vt.; Sumner C., who was born January 23, 1852, died in 1886, unmarried; Alma J., who was born February 8, 1854, married Austin Rich and is living in Glöver, Vt.

The original of this sketch passed his early life on the home farm and in attendance at the different schools in his vicinity. When reaching his majority, he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. S. R. Corey, of Craftsbury, Vt., as his preceptor. He later took a course of lectures at the University of Vermont, and was subsequently graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York City. Dr. Haines then located near his native place, where he practiced his profession for three years, and then, going to Orford, N. H., remained for four years, at the end of which time he came to Durand and, with the exception of two years spent at La Harpe, Kan., has been a resident of this place.

Dr. Haines and Miss Octavia L. Goodrich were united in marriage September 28, 1870. The lady, who was born in Greensboro, Orleans County, Vt., October 21, 1811, was the daughter of J. A. and Octavia A. (Wright) Goodrich. To them have been granted a family of five children, viz: Mary, who died when two years of age; Emma L.; Fred, who died when nine months old; George C. and Helen W.

The Doctor is not interested in politics other than to cast a Republican vote at elections. He is a member of the Winnebago and Stephenson Counties Medical Societies, and for many years was an active member of the Odd Fellows' lodge. He has always been a firm supporter of religion and is a member of the Congregational Church. He is justly regarded as one of the ablest general practitioners in this section of the State. Beginning his medical career with a fine theoretical knowledge, he has been studious, discriminating, and desirous of adding to the store of his learning all that modern investigation has to enrich the fields of therapeutical science.

EWIS P. ANDERSON, Superintendent and Manager of the Derwent sash, door and blind factory, is numbered among the early settlers of Rockford, where he has made his home since 1854. In the years that have since followed, he has been prominently connected with the business interests of the city and is now one of the leading members of the company before mentioned. He is also a stockholder in the Excelsior Furniture Company, of which he was Vice-President, and has also been a Director of the Union Grocery Company, in which he still holds an interest.

Mr. Anderson, whose portrait accompanies this sketch, was born in Smoland, Sweden, June 15, 1829, and is a son of Andrew and Anna (Larsdant) Peterson, who spent their entire lives in their native land. The father was a farmer and died at the age of ninety years. His wife survived him some time and passed away at the advanced age of ninety years. They held membership in the Lutheran Church, and were highly respected people.

In his youth, our subject learned the trade of a mechanic and builder. At length, he determined to seek a home in the New World, and in the month of June, 1854, his name was enrolled among the passengers on board the sailing-vessel "Levi Woodbury." After a voyage of five weeks and two days, he landed at Boston and came at once to Hlinois, settling in Elgin, where he spent one year. He was the first of the family to cross the ocean, and is the only one now living in this country.

Mr. Anderson was married, in Rockford, to Miss Anna Anderson, who was born and reared in Sweden and when a young lady came to this country. She died at her home in Rockford in 1867, at the age of thirty-three years. For his second wife, our subject chose Miss Mary S. Noling, who was born in Sweden on the 11th of December, 1840, and came to this country in 1866, since which time her home has been in Rockford. The history of her parents is given in the sketch of L. M. Noling, on another page of this work. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have four bright and intelligent children, who were educated in the city schools of Rockford and are an honor to their parents, namely: Frank A., a wood-carver by trade; Anna J., a dress-maker; Lydia E. and Osear F. The parents hold membership with the First Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Anderson is a Trustee. For many years, he has been connected with that congregation, is one of its leading workers and a liberal contributor to its support.

During the late war, when his adopted country was in need of troops, Mr. Anderson enlisted in 1862, as a member of Company C. Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. He participated in the battle of Perryville, Ky., and was there taken sick, being confined in the hospital for some time. After two years of faithful service, he was honorably discharged in Indianapolis, Ind., on the 14th of January, 1864. He is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., of this city. He takes quite an active interest in public affairs, and is a stalwart Republican in politics. His character is unimpeachable, his life above reproach, and his upright career has won him the confidence and regard of all. He is recognized as one of the leading and influential gentlemen of this city and an honored early settler. His comfortable home, which was built by himself, is located at No. 1005 Sixth Avenue.

REDERICK SANDS, a retired farmer living in Belvidere, is numbered among the early settlers of Boone County. For many years, he has been an eye-witness of its growth and upbuilding and has aided in its progress and development. He has seen its towns grow into cities, and many of its villages spring into existence. He has ever borne his share in promoting those interests calculated to prove of public benefit and well deserves representation in its history.

Mr. Sands was born in Tompkins, Delaware County, N. Y., March 20, 1833. His grandfather, Judge Obadiah Sands, was a large real-estate owner in Delaware County, and spent his last years in the town of Oxford. Obadiah Sands, Jr., the father of our subject, was born and reared in Delaware County and wedded Mary Orr, a native of that county and a daughter of Walter F, and Mary E. (Craig) Orr. Mr. Orr spent his last years in Delaware County, but his wife came to Illinois and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sands. In 1836, Obadiah Sands, accompanied by his wife and seven children, started for Illinois. He left his family in Chicago while he came on in search of a location and made a claim on sections 7 and 8, Bonus Township, Boone County. After building a log cabin, he returned to Chicago where he had left his family and brought his wife and children to the new home in a large covered wagon, drawn by five yoke of oxen. He purchased his land at the land sale in Chicago when it came into market and began the development of a farm. His wife died July 4, 1840, leaving the following children: Maria, Betsy, Mary, Olive, Frederick, Odessa and William D. Olive died in 1868, and George died in Cleveland, Ohio, when the family were en route for the West. The others are still living.

Mr. Sands was a second time married and by that union had three children: Melinda A., Obadiah and Dianitia. His death occurred in 1856. He was a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M., and in politics was first a Whig. He became a strong anti-slavery man, and supported Gen. Fremont in 1856.

With his parents, Frederick Sands came to Illinois when only three years of age. He acquired his education in the primitive log schoolhouse with its slab seats, puncheon floor and huge fireplace, and aided in the labors of the farm through the summer months. Many incidents of pioneer days are still fresh in his mind. In 1851, he started on a trip to the West. On reaching St. Joe, Mo., he made arrangements to go to California, but was taken sick, and his trip in consequence had to be abandoned. In 1855, he went to Stevens' Point, Wis., where he was employed for a year. He then floated down the Wisconsin and Mississippi Rivers to Quincy on a raft and then returned to his home in Boone County. From that time, he devoted his entire energies to farming and as a result won prosperity. He still owns the old homestead farm containing two hundred acres of highly cultivated land, well improved with good buildings.

In 1857, Mr. Sands was joined in wedlock with Henrietta Brink, a native of Union, Broome County, N. Y., and a daughter of Whiting F. and Lydia R. (Chambers) Brink. Her father was born in the town of Union and was a son of James and Cornelia (Giltner) Brink, farming people of Broome County, who spent their entire lives on the old homestead. Her mother was born on the west shore of Seneca Lake, and was a daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Van Zant) Chambers. They were married in Union, N. Y., where Mr. Brink followed the trade of a carpenter and joiner until his death in September, 1839. His widow afterward became the wife of Stephen Sweezey and emigrated to Illinois in 1855. She now resides in Boone Township, Boone County.

Two children grace the union of Mr. and Mrs. Sands: Fred Beecher and Bessie. Fred Beecher took for his wife Miss Hattie Vinton and they have one child, Fred Vinton. The members of the family rank high in social circles and the Sands household in the abode of hospitality. Socially, our subject is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M.; and Kishwaukee Chapter No. 90, R. A. M., while in politics he is a Republican. His industry and enterprise in former years secured him a comfortable competence which now enables him to spend his declining days in retirement from all labor.

LINTON G. SHELDEN, a retired farmer residing in the village of Winnebago, was born in Granger, Medina County, Ohio, May 17, 1832. He is the son of David Shelden, who was born in Schoharie County, N. Y., October 19, 1794, and who in turn was a son of Johnson and Abiah (Northrup) Shelden. From the best information we have at hand, our subject is a direct descendant of William Shelden, who came from England to America in 1634, and settled in South Kensington, R. I. The next in line was John, the son of William; the next Isaac, and the next Joseph. Then came Jonathan, the grandfather of our subject, whom it is supposed was born in New England, whence he emigrated to New York State, and later to Richfield Township, Summit County, Ohio, where he spent his last days. His wife was born April 16, 1770, and died on the home farm in Richfield.

The father of our subject was reared in his native State, and when about eighteen years of age started out to explore the Western country. He went overland to Erie, Pa., and there embarked on a boat bound for Cleveland. On account of a severe storm, they landed before they reached that city and journeyed on foot to Summit County. Mr. Shelden remained there for a time, when he returned to New York and was married. With his young wife, he went back to Ohio and purchased a tract of timbered land, upon which he erected a log house and occupied it for some years. He continued a resident of that place until his decease, March 31, 1873.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Anna Sarles, a native of New York State, and the daughter of Isaiah Sarles, whose birth occurred April 7, 1759. The grandfather served in the War of 1812, was wounded in the battle of Chippewa, Canada, September 14, 1814, at which time he was taken prisoner to Montreal, where he died in the latter part of that year. He had been married to Anna Dean, who was born July 19, 1762, and died at Royalton, Medina County, Ohio. The mother of our subject departed this life on the home farm, August 6, 1855.

Clinton G. Shelden spent his early days on the farm, and when twenty-two years of age taught his first term of school. After being thus engaged for one term, he advanced his education by attendance at Delaware College. After this he taught two terms of winter school and remained on the home farm until 1863, at which time he came to Illinois and purchased a farm in Winnebago Township, including the northeast quarter of section 15. A small frame house, straw stable, and a portion of the land broken and fenced, constituted the improvements at that time. Mr. Shelden planted fruit, shade and ornamental trees on his estate, erected a good set of frame buildings, and was actively engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1885, when he removed to the village and has since lived retired.

In 1861, he of whom we write was united in marriage to Rachel Spensley, who was born in the northern part of Yorkshire, England, and was a daughter of James and Anna Spensley. The parents were also natives of Yorkshire, and on coming to America in 1848 located in Granger, Medina County, where her father died. Mrs. Spensley survived him some time and spent her remaining years in Cleveland. Mrs. Shelden died at her home, February 18, 1883, and in November, 1884, our subject was married to Mary Eveline Phelps. The lady was born in Volney, Oswego County, N. Y., while her father, John Phelps, was a native of Tolland, Conn., where also his father, Eleazer, as far as is known, was born. The latter-named gentleman removed from the above-named place to Berkshire County, Mass., and spent his last years in Lennox.

The father of Mrs. Shelden was twelve years of age when his parents removed to the Bay State.

On reaching mature years, he enlisted as a soldier in the War of 1812. July 17, 1821, he was united in marriage with Miss Fannie Sears, the ceremony being performed at Lennox. Mrs. Phelps was the daughter of Calvin and Mary (Paddock) Sears. In March, 1822, the parents of Mrs. Shelden started for the then Far West, making the journey to Volney, Oswego County, two hundred miles distant, with a team. They had quite a load of provisions, and the roads being very bad they had to leave a portion of their supplies, among which was a barrel of pork, by the wayside. Mr. Phelps purchased a farm in the town of Volney, where he resided until 1811, and then again started Westward, emigrating to Medina County, Ohio. There he purchased a farm in Wadsworth Township, which he sold in 1853, and bought another in Granger Township, upon which he resided until his decease in 1874; the mother died on the same farm in 1885. They were the parents of four children: Franklin E., Hannah M., Helen M. and Eveline, Mrs. Shelden was reared in Medina County and commenced teaching school at the age of sixteen years, which occupation she followed until her marriage.

Mr. Shelden became the father of six children by his first marriage: Artis L., who was married to Christme Hansen; Edward C., who married Nellie Smith, has three children: Nettie E., Archie B. and Mark S.; J. Winfield, who married Emily Manning, has two sons: Ralph E. and Howard G.; and Edith, Ralph E. and Anna E. died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Shelden are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The parents of our subject reared eight children, viz: Phebe A., Ezra D., Edward G., Isaiah J., Clinton G., Myron S., Albert D. and Francis E.

RS. LOVINA LIVINGSTON. This lady, one of the oldest and most esteemed in Boone County, is the widow of Hugh Livingston, and the daughter of Elijah and Elizabeth (Byce) Dickinson. Mr. Dickinson was a native of Worcester, Mass., and was a shoemaker by trade, although he had received a good education and followed teaching for some time. He met his future wife (who was a native of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.), in Schoharie, that State, while teaching school, and after marriage they moved on a small farm, where Mr. Dickinson worked at his trade for many years. To them were born twelve children, six sons and six daughters, two of whom died when young, but the remainder reached mature years and became heads of families. The mother died first, when sixty-nine years of age, and left ten living children. The father survived her many years and died in the same place, when nearly eighty-three years of age. These children have all passed away except Mrs. Livingston and her sister Sarah, Mrs. Dexter McClintock, of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, now seventy years of age. Mr. Dickinson was one of the drafted soldiers of the War of 1812, and a drummer.

Mrs. Livingston was born in Schoharie, N. Y., in 1808, and was married in Middleburgh, that State, in February, 1827, to Hugh Livingston, son of Jacob and Sarah (Van Cleek) Livingston, of New York State. His parents reared fifteen children and lost two infants. Mr. Livingston, husband of our subject, followed the carpenter trade in the early part of his life, but later gave that up and engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1853, he and his wife sold their farm in New York State and emigrated towards the West with their children, ten in number. They resided in Ohio for a few months, while Mr. Livingston came on to Illinois to select a location. He bought one hundred and sixty acres where his widow now lives and paid $1,300 therefor, and subsequently purchased eighty acres more, on which he lived until he could get possession of his farm then occupied under a lease. Here they located and began making improvements. They had buried twin infants, daughters, in New York, and lost one son in the Civil War, David, born in 1842. He was a brave and faithful soldier, and served through almost the entire war, being shot down while in action. Another son, Solomon, served about nine months in the army and returned home in safety; Isaac W. died at his home when in his twenty-third year. There are four sons and four daughters still living. One daughter is in New York; two sons and one daughter in Iowa; a daughter, Sarah, is with her mother; J. H. works at the mason's trade, and Arthur has followed the carpenter's trade; and Elizabeth, Mrs. Marvin Ables. Mrs. Livingston has twenty-eight grandchildren and eighteen great-grandchildren. Mr. Livingston was born in April, 1803, and died in November, 1869. He left a fine estate of one hundred and sixty acres under a good state of cultivation and well stocked. He was a member of the Baptist Church.

YLVESTER TALCOTT. There is probably no family in Winnebago County better known for integrity, fair dealing, enterprise and intelligence, than the one represented by the name at the head of this paragraph. It is one of those which have helped to make this county a center for all good influences, and one of the most enterprising sections of Illinois. Mr. Talcott, whose portrait is shown on the opposite page, died at his home in Rockton, in January, 1885. He was for many years one of the most prominent merchants of the city, and was active in political affairs, having been the incumbent of the office of Supervisor for a number of terms. He was deeply interested in every movement which tended to secure the best interests of his community, and with this end in view he was a hearty worker in all elevating movements.

The subject of this sketch was Justice of the Peace in Rockton in an early day, and married the first couple in the section. When locating in this vicinity, there were only twelve houses on the present site of this now prosperous village, but he lived to see its phenomenal growth in population and improvement in every aspect in life, and did his full share in its development.

We must here introduce in this sketch the name of her who became the companion of our subject, Miss Mary W. Westlake, who was born in Chemung County, N. Y., in 1820. Her father, Col. Jacob Westlake, was a native of Newburg, Orange County, that State, and died at Brooklyn in his fifty-second year. Her mother, who bore the maiden name of Lanah Smith, was born in New York City, and departed this life in her forty-second year, when residing near Almira, Chemung County. They were the parents of three sons and three daughters, namely: Margaret, who was born in 1815; Benjamin, who died in Brooklyn after having attained his three-score and ten years; Mary, George, Henry and Melissa.

Mrs. Mary Talcott came West in company with her sister, Mrs. Roland Smith, in 1838, and married our subject in Rockton in June, 1840. The young couple located at this place, where Mrs. Talcott has lived since 1843. To them was born one child, Lissie W., now the wife of William Smith, but who first married Martin Rockwell, and became the mother of one son, Fred W., who makes his home with Mrs. Talcott. Our subject was engaged at an early day as a general merchant in Rockton, in company with Philander Bird. Later, dissolving that connection, he associated himself with Rumsey Hatch, and with him carried on a prosperous business and showed himself to be a man worthy of esteem and regard.

For many years Mrs. Taleott has been a great sufferer from rheumatism. She is an active and conscientious member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, while her husband, during his life, was a communicant of the Congregational Society. Mr. Taleott was an excellent financier, and at his death left considerable property, which his excellent wife is using in doing good to those about her. She is a most intelligent and estimable lady, and is classed among the most honored and highly respected members of society in Winnebago County.

ENRY M. COOKE, one of the progressive and well-to-do agriculturists of Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, was born in Atwater, Portage County, Ohio, March 18, 1848. He is the son of Friend and Sarah F. (Folger) Cooke, the latter of whom is a relative of exsecretary Folger and also of the mother of Benjamin Franklin, who also bore that name. The father of our subject was born in Wallingford, Conn., November 29, 1798, and died in his fifty-ninth year in Atwater, Ohio. The mother was born on the isle of Nantucket in 1808, and died in Massillon, Ohio, when sixty-six years of age, whither she had removed in 1814.

The paternal grandparents of our subject were Samuel and Mary Cooke and the father of our subject was a grandson of Col. Thaddeus Cooke, who was present at the capture of Burgoyne and participated in the battle of Freeman's Farm in 1777. The old Cooke homestead in Wallingford, Conn., is still in possession of the family. The father of our subject was given an excellent education, being a graduate from the Schenectady Union College and also of Yale College, in which latter institution he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He practiced in his native town for two years, when, his health failing, he removed West to Ohio, in 1823, and practiced for a time at Atwater, Portage County, thence, later, went to Charleston, N. C., on account of ill-health.

Henry M. Cooke remained at home until sixteen years of age, at which time he enlisted in Company I, One Hundred and Eighty-eighth Ohio Infantry, and served under Capt. P. H. Smith until September 29, 1865, when he received his discharge at Nashville, Tenn. He was the only child of his parents and was married, January 27, 1869, to Miss Mary Silasbury, who was born in Erie County, N. Y., February 15, 1847. Mrs. Cooke became the mother of five children, three of whom are living, as follows: Albert E., who was born November 17, 1876; Frank E., August 23, 1880; and Henry M., March 16, 1887. The father of Mrs. Cooke, Francis Silasbury, was born August 2, 1823, in Hamburg. Eric County, N. Y., and was the son of Smith and Roena (Parker) Silasbury, both of whom were natives of New York and died in Hamburg, N. Y., at the respective ages of forty and seventy years. The grandparents of Francis Silasbury on both sides of the house were of English descent. Four brothers originally came to  $\Lambda$ merica.

The father of Mrs. Cooke remained at home until nineteen years of age, assisting his father to carry on the home farm, when he went to Louisiana. He did not remain there long, however, as he was called home on account of his father's death. Purchasing one hundred and forty-four acres of Indian land, he cleared it of the timber, and in a few years a plank road was built through his land, which joined the city limits of Buffalo. He later disposed of his tract to a Catholic bishop. Mr. Silasbury was married, about two years after buying the above-mentioned property, to Miss Jane Scott, who was born September 11, 1822, in Rome, Oneida County, N. Y., and departed this life November 11, 1891, in Pecatonica, Ill. She was the daughter of Thomas and Martha (Lindsay) Scott, of Scotch-Irish descent. After disposing of his property, Mr. Silasbury came West to StephensonCounty, Ill., and in 1853 purchased a tract of one thousand acres of partially improved land in Ridott Township. There he resided until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he disposed of two hundred acres of his estate and removed to Pecatonica, where he has been a resident for over thirty years. In the meantime, he visited the oil regions of Pennsylvania and three years later returned to this place and engaged in the stock and grain business. About twelve years ago, he sold his estate and now lives a retired life. In addition to the property above mentioned, the father of Mrs. Cooke purchased lands in Iowa, which he has since divided among his children. He still has, however, forty acres within the city limits of Pecatonica and at one time owned the southern portion of the village.

The father of our subject was a Democrat in politics, until the organization of the Republican party, when he joined its ranks. He was a member of the convention of 1850–51 which framed the Constitution of Ohio, and was a great anti-slavery worker. He stood very high in his profession and died February 8, 1857, in the prime of life. The mother of our subject was a member of the Congregational Church, while his father was an Episcopalian.

Henry M. Cooke after the war was engaged in farming for his brother in-law until his marriage, when he located on property of his own. Nine years ago he purchased his present estate and is making a success of his calling, being extensively engaged in the sheep-raising industry. He is a member of Ellis Post No. 320, G. A. R., in which body he is Senior Vice-Commander. He is also a member of Eureka Camp of Modern Woodmen and in local affairs has served his fellow-townsmen for five years as Commissioner of Highways. His education was received in the district schools, and what he has of this world's goods has been the result of his untiring industry and perseverence, as he had very little monetary assistance from his father.

The Cooke family in America are direct descendants of Francis Cooke, who landed in Plymouth from the "Maytlower" in 1620, and erected the third house in that place. One branch of the family located in Connecticut and one in Norway, N. Y., our subject being a descendant of the former.

ACOB MABIE is perhaps as well known as any man in Boone County, as he was born in Bonus Township August 26, 1816, and has always been highly respected here as a thorough-going farmer and business man. His wife, too, shares in the esteem which is given to him and has a high standing in the most cultured circles in this part of the county. Mr. Mabie, in addition to cultivating his farm, is a stockholder in the People's Bank at Belvidere, and beloved, honored and trusted by everybody who knows him.

The parents of our subject, Aaron and Amy (Turneaure) Mabie, were natives of New Yo k, the father being born in Delaware County. He was the son of Jacob and Mary (Tollman) Mabie, who were also natives of the above-named State and county, but who departed this life in Boone County, whither they had removed in the '10s. The grandfather of our subject was born June 9, 1781, and died July 15, 1846; his good wife, who was born January 16, 1781, departed this life February 20, 1851.

The mother of our subject was one in a family of six children and also had nine half-brothers and sisters. She was the daughter of Peter and Lydia Turneaure, natives of the Empire State. A brother of her father was taken prisoner by the Indians in an early day. The Mabies were of Dutch ancestry, one of that name having come to this country as a privateer from Holland in the sixteenth century. Abraham Mabie was a son of that gentleman, who, in turn, had three sons: Abraham, Peter and John. The brothers located in the vicinity or New York City, where Abraham was married to a French lady, by whom he had the following sons: Stephen, Abraham, Joshua, Samuel and Solomon. Daniel Mabie was a grandson of Peter, one of the three brothers above referred to, and was the great-grandfather of our subject.

Aaron Mabie was married when nineteen years of age, when he was employed in operating a mill for his father. In 1812, in company with his wife and six children, he came to Boone County and settled on the property which is the abiding-place of our subject, and for which he traded a team of horses. The elder Mr. Mabie lived in a log house on that tract for some time, in which humble abode two of his children were born, Julia and our subject. His sister had her birth November 21, 1843, and is still residing in this township. The brothers and sisters of our subject are wellto-do and prominent business men in the Western States. Mr. Mabie has several cousins who are active workers in the Baptist Church, one of them having visited many heathen countries in the enpacity of a missionary and is the author of a splendid book bearing on that subject. He was one of the most prominent missionaries sent out by the Baptist Church of Minneapolis, Minn.

Jacob Mabie was married December 25, 1867, to Miss Mary W. Morgan, whose birth occurred October 21, 1838, at Niles. Mich. She was the daughter of Erastus and Nancy (Spaulding) Morgan, who trace the Morgan history back to 1607. Mrs. Morgan was a daughter of John and Julia Spaulding, natives of New York. The father of our subject's wife emigrated to Michigan in 1837, where he resided for two years, and then, returning to his Eastern home, there departed this life near Buffalo, at the age of seventy-one years. The mother is still residing with a son in Bonus Township.

The original of this sketch inherited one hundred and forty acres of land on the death of his father, to which he has since added, until he is now the possessor of an estate comprising two hundred and twenty acres and, in addition to that, has a lot in Belvidere. His father made most of the improvements on the estate and was successful at his calling of a farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Mabie are members of the Baptist Church, and, in politics, our subject east his first vote for Grant, of whom he was a great admirer. He has never held office of any kind, preferring to give his time to his private interests.

August 26, 1864, he of whom we write became a member of an independent company of the Fifth Illinois Light Artillery, commanded by Capt. A. W. Wood. After several months of brave service, he was discharged June 13, 1865, at Chester, Pa., and, returning home, has since devoted his time looking after his own affairs. Their only child, Fred M., died when three months old.

HARLES E. CLARK. The business men of Durand recognize in Mr. Clark a man who pursues the even tenor of his way, and who exercises a considerable influence in his community. He is engaged in carrying on a splendid business in retailing furniture, and is looked upon as one of the most reliable men in the community. Ilis straightforward methods of doing business, his genial disposition and his courtcous treatment of all with whom he comes in contact, is a matter that is often made the subject of remark.

The original of this sketch was born in Newark Township, Rock County, Wis., July 20, 1861. He is the son of Benjamin Clark, who hailed from Vermont, and was in turn the son of Judge Spencer Clark. The father of our subject came West to Hilinois when a young man, and at Beloit was married to Maria Gunderson. In 1864, he enlisted and was mustered into service in Company M, Eighth Illinois Cavalry, and served with the Union ranks for ten months, when he was taken sick with typhoid fever and returned home July 4, 1865. He died thirteen days later at his home in Laona Township, Winnebago County, when in his forty-sixth year.

The mother of our subject was born in Cambridge, Mass., and in 1840, when ten years of age, came to Beloit, Wis., in company with a family named Spaulding, with whom she resided until her marriage in 1858. She survived her husband many years, her death occurring in 1886, when fifty-six years of age. The two children born of her union with Mr. Clark were Charles E., our subject, and Benjamin, the latter of whom is a hardware merchant in Wayne County, Neb. Benjamin Clark was a prominent member of the Congregational Church, and occupied a high position in local affairs.

He of whom we write was reared on the home farm, and educated in the schools of Durand. When fourteen years of age, he left the farm, and, working at whatever he could find to do, proseeuted his studies in the higher branches. He purchased his present business in 1888, and besides earrying a full and complete line of household furniture, does an undertaking business. Although never learning a trade, he is quite a genius with tools, and can do anything in the line of eabinet work. When a boy he saw some of the work of a taxidermist, and being delighted with it, engaged in that business, and has done considerable work in that line. In addition to the different branches of work in which Mr. Clark has been engaged, he is an expert in penmanship, and in pen drawing has no equal in his vicinity. A peaceable and law-abiding citizen, he has contributed his full quota to the general welfare of the community, and is numbered among the best citizens of this county, having an unusual degree of intelligence, good breeding and honorable principle.

CATLIN SPAFFORD. In scanning the lives and enterprises of the citizens of Rockford, it is pleasant to note the enterprise in every walk of life, and the achievement of success in every department of business. This we are able to discern in the career of our subject, who is President of the Third National Bank at Rockford, and ranks among the wealthy and public-spirited residents of the city. He has been interested in various corporations and manufacturing institutions in this section, and has watched with interest the gradual evolution of this portion of the county from its original wild state into beautiful farms and thriving villages.

The original of this sketch was born in the town of Adams, Jefferson County, N. Y., September 14, 1824. He is the son of Dr. John and Mary Spafford, receiving his early education in the public schools of his native place, and later supplemented the knowledge gained therein by attendance at Castleton (Vt.) Academy, and at a select school in Watertown. In the fall of 1839, he came to Rockford, joining other members of the family, who had come here the previous spring. The journey hither was made by the most convenient and expeditious route, which was by team to Syracuse, then by way of the Eric Canal to Buffalo, where they embarked on the steamer "Illinois," commanded by Capt. Blake, which conveyed them to Chicago. In that then village they secured a team and came over land to Rockford. The first seven years of our subject's life in Winnebago County were passed for the most part on a farm, and in 1846 he formed a partnership with B. G. Wheeler, and for two years was engaged in the mercantile business, prosecuting a successful trade. At the expiration of that time, he became connected with L. B. Gregory, and erected a sawmill, which was the first of the kind to utilize the water of Rock River. They continued thus for two years, when in 1850, Mr. Spafford went to California in company with twenty other gentlemen, leaving home with teams, in the month of March. They crossed the Mississippi River at Rock Island and made their way tediously through the dangerous country, there being no white settlers between the Missouri River and California, except the Mormon settlement at Salt Lake, and United States soldiers at different points. Deer, antelopes, coyotes and buffaloes were very numerous on the plains, and the party arrived at Hangtown, near Placerville, in the month of August. From that place they went to Sacramento, thence to Nevada City, where Mr. Spafford was engaged in the mercantile business the first year. In January, 1852, he started on his return trip, via the Nicaragua route, crossing the Isthmus on horseback. He again engaged in the mercantile business, and two years later, in 1854, formed a partnership with

C. C. Briggs and D. S. Penfield in the banking business. One year thereafter, Mr. Briggs withdrew, and our subject, with his partner, carried on the business until 1861, when with others he aided in organizing the Third National Bank, of which institution he was elected President, and has been the incumbent of that honorable position since.

March 25, 1852, Miss Elizabeth B. White, who was born in Peterboro, N. H., became the wife of our subject. Mrs. Spafford was the daughter of Robert White, and by her union with our subject became the mother of four children, namely: Isabella, Lucy Antoinette, Jessie and George C. In social matters the original of this sketch is a member of Lodge No. 2, A. F. & A. M. Mr. Spafford has been a prominent factor in the development of Winnelago County, and is a splendid example of what may be accomplished by an energetic, determined and economical man. The present commercial importance and prosperity of Rockford is unquestionably the result of the wisdom, foresight and enterprise of her business men, and it is a fitting tribute to those who have honorably distinguished themselves in the commercial arena, that their names and career should be commemorated among those of the leading men in all branches.

ILLIAM C. McCAUGHEY is now living retired in the city of Rockford. He was born in Ottawa, LaSalle County, Ill., March 8, 1838, and is a son of Thomas M. McCaughey, whose native place was Mt. Pleasant, Jefferson County, Obio. The paternal grandfather of our subject was a native of Scotland, and came to America when a young man, being one of three brothers who made their home in this country.

James McCaughey, the grandfather, resided for a time in Pennsylvania, and then went to Jefferson County, Ohio, where he purchased a tract of timber land and cleared a farm upon which he resided until his decease. The father of our subject learned the trade of a cooper, which he followed in his native State until 1833, when he came to Illinois and resided for a time upon a tract of Government land near Ottawa. He later sold that claim and made another near by, where he made his home until 1810, and then spent some time in Rockford.

From this city the elder Mr. McCaughey removed to Highland Prairie, Dodge County, Wis., where he was among the earliest settlers, and located upon land one and one-half miles from the present site of Juneau. Making that place his home until 1855, he then sold, and, removing to Appleton, opened a general store, and five years later came to Rockford, where he engaged in farming on an estate located six miles south of the city, where his death occurred January 5, 1866.

Our subject's mother was known in her maidenhood as Ruth N. Noble, and she belonged to the Society of Friends. She was a native of Maryland, and the daughter of Charles and Margaret (Ellis) Noble, natives also of that State, and of English ancestry. She died in California in 1873. William C. McCaughey was only two years of age when his parents removed to Wisconsin, the journey being made with ox-teams. He attended the pioneer schools in Dodge County, and assisted his father on the farm. After removing to Appleton with his father, he attended a four-years' course at Lawrence University. In 1860, they removed to Rockford, from which city he enlisted, August 5, 1862, in Company D, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. and served his country until June, 1864. He was discharged from the service on account of disability, and returning home later, purchased a farm near the city, which he still owns, and engaged in market gardening. Before enlisting, Mr. Mc-Caughey belonged to the Rockford Zouaves, commanded by Capt. Nevius. During 1861, he was employed in drilling companies for the service. In 1887, Mr. McCaughey purchased his present home on Second Street, where he has since lived retired from the active pursuits of life.

Miss Mary E. Kettlewell became the wife of our subject in 1870. She was born in London, Middlesex County, Canada, and was a daughter of Thomas Kettlewell, a native of Yorkshire, England, where his father, also named Thomas, was born. The latter-named gentleman came to America in 1810, and located near London, Canada, where he resided on a farm until 1865, and then came to Rockford, where his decease occurred in the year 1871. His wife was Mary Pinkney, also a native of Yorkshire, who departed this life in Rockford in 1868. The father of Mrs. McCaughey was seventeen years of age when he came to the New World with his parents. He followed agricultural pursuits in Canada until 1850, when, coming to Rockford, he has since been a continuous resident of this city. He was for a number of years engaged in butchering and dealing in live stock, but is now practically retired. His wife bore the name of Susannah (Horton) Kettlewell, her native place being near St. Thomas, Canada. She was the daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Ramsey) Horton, natives respectively of New Jersey and Canada, and of English and Scotch ancestry.

To our subject and his wife have been born two children: Hallie Pauline and Eva Louise. The parents are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in his political relations our subject votes the Democratic ticket. He has been elected to various positions of trust, being Deputy-Sheriff, Coroner and Collector for the town of Rockford. He is a member of Conomac Lodge No. 147, L. O. O. F., at Appleton, Wis., and is also connected with Nevius Post, No. 1, G. A. R.

DWIN WARE, a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., was born in Hancock, Hillsboro County, N. H., January 31, 1842. He is at the present time residing on an excellent estate in Winnelago Township, which is located on sections 24 and 25, and where he is engaged in general farming.

Ebenezer Ware, the father of our subject, was also born in the above-named town, March 8, 1806, while his father, who also bore the name of Ebenezer, was born in Needham, Mass., in 1770. The great-grandparents of our subject moved to Hillsboro County, N. II., about 1790, where they were pioneers of Hancock. The grandfather was reared in his native State and on going to Hancock with his parents, purchased a farm in the southern part of that place, where he spent the remainder of his life. The maiden name of his wife was Alice Eaton; she was born in Massachusetts and died on the home farm.

The father of him of whom we write learned the trade of a carpenter and was engaged as a contractor and builder for a number of years. Later, he devoted his entire time to the cultivation of his farm, he having inherited the old homestead, where he spent his entire life, dying July 24, 1888. The lady to whom he was married was known as Martha E. Lakin, a native of Hancock, N. H., and the daughter of Simeon and Betsey (Dennis) Lakin; she died January 15, 1880. Simeon Lakin, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was a soldier in the War of 1812.

Ebenezer Ware, Jr., was a Democrat in early life but opposed the extension of slavery and when the Democratic party championed the Missouri Compromise he left his ranks and voted the Republican ticket until his decease. He was a great reader, a ready debater and filled various offices of trust, serving on the School Committee, also as Selectman, and Representative in the Legislature.

Edwin Ware received his early education in the district school, which was supplemented by attendance at Hancock Academy. When seventeen years of age, he went to Wisconsin and resided with a brother in Waushara County for three years, when he returned to New Hampshire. Our subject enlisted in August, 1862, as a member of Company G, Thirteenth New Hampshire Infantry and served until after the close of the war. From the history of the regiment written by S. Millet Thompson and from the history of Hancock, which was published by William Hayward, we extract the following:

"Edwin Ware was disqualified for military duty by reason of malformation of ankle. He managed to conceal this from the surgeons and passed examination. Though suffering severely from the long marches, he was never off duty a day except by wounds received in battle. The regiment participated in fifteen battles, the more important of which were Fredericksburg, Suffolk, siege of Petersburgh, Cold Harbor and Ft. Harrison. He was wounded twice at Fredericksburg, one at Cold Harbor and again at Ft. Harrison. Mr. Ware was mustered in as Third Corporal, promoted to be first Sergeant and was later commissioned Lieutenant by the Governor. His commander says of him that he was an intelligent and a brave soldier, popular with both privates and officers."

He of whom we write has a very fine collection of War relies, among which is a copy of the Richmond Whig, the first issue after the surrender of that city, and he also has the largest collection of Indian relies in his neighborhood. He was honorably discharged with his regiment in June, 1865, and on returning home one year later went to the town of Dublin, N. H., where he was engaged in farming for six years, then returned to the old homestead, where he lived until 1876. December 16, 1866, Mr. Edwin Ware was united in marriage to Agnes Mc Quaters, a native of Fairfield, Conn., her birth occurring January 6, 1845. She was the daughter of John and Agnes (Mc Naught) Me-Quaters and departed this life May 24, 1883. Our subject was again married, January 31, 4886, this time to Mary E. Miller, a native of Vernon Center, N. Y., who was born January 31, 1842. Mrs. Ware, who was a member of the First Congregational Church of Winnebago, passed away April 20, 1892. Our subject has three children by his first marriage: Winefred Agnes, Ernest Edwin and John Clifton. He and two of his children are connected with the Second Congregational Church at Rockford. He is a Republican in politics and a member of Rockford Camp No. 51, M. W. A.

DWIN II. KEELER, a wide-awake and enterprising young business man of Rockford, is now Secretary of the Rockford Lumber and Fuel Company. His life record is as follows: He was born in Janesville, Wis., and is a son of C. C. Keeler, a native of Vermont, born of New England parentage, who when a young man emigrated Westward, locating in Rock County, Wis. He was one of the first to establish the lumber trade in Beloit. In that county, he married Katherine M. Spaulding, a native of the Old Granite State. Mr. Keeler took quite a prominent part in local affairs and for some years was Chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Rock County. In politics, he was a supporter of Republican principles.

The education of our subject was chiefly acquired in Beloit and later be became associated with his father in the lumber and fuel business, owning an interest in the same from the time he was twenty-two years of age. He is yet connected with that business in Rock County, but has never given it his personal attention since coming to Rockford in 1887. He is Vice-President of the company known as the Keeler Lumber and Fuel Company, which is doing business at Beloit, Wis., and Rockton, Ill. Under the care and teaching of his experienced father, Mr. Keeler became thoroughly acquainted with the business of which he has been so successful a manager. About four years ago, he became a member of the firm of Lawler & Keeler, which did business at Rockford as dealers in general fuel until the present company was organized about two years ago, with Seely Perry as President, Col. Thomas G. Lawler, Vice-President, Thomas D. Reber, Treasurer, and E. H. Keeler, Secretary. They are the sole proprietors and do a large business, having a main office at No. 201 East State Street. They also have another fuel yard on West State Street, near the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad tracks. They have the largest trade in lumber and coal in the city and do an immense business, both as wholesale and retail dealers. Their lumber yard is one of the largest in the State outside of Chicago.

In lowa, Mr. Keeler led to the marriage altar Miss Clara Reitler, a native of Chicago, and unto them have been born two children: Edwin R. and Katherine. The parents attend the Congregational Church and are respected people of this community, ranking high in social circles. Mr. Keeler is a Mason, a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Order of Elks, all of Rockford. He exercises his right of franchise in support of the Republican party.

Mr. Keeler is yet a young man, but has shown himself possessed of much natural business ability and sagacity and in connection with his other interests he has been President of the Rockford Building and Loan Association since its organization in 1890, and President of the Superior Brick Company since it was organized in 1891, it being the successor of the II. A. Block Brick Manufacturing Company, which carried on business for fifteen years. He is also a stockholder and Director of the Forest City National Bank, which was organized about two years ago.

AMES W. HODGSON, deceased, was a well-known grocery man of Rockford and deserves representation in the history of his adopted county. He was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, and was a son of Thomas and Sarah A. (Dawson) Hodgson. The family is of English descent. The father died in the Province of Ontario, in middle life; his wife died recently in Grand Rapids, Mich., at the age of seventy-four. They were industrious, honest people, highly respected for their sterling worth.

Our subject was reared to manhood in his native Province and there acquired his education in the public schools. He was married in Brooklun, in the Province of Ontario, to Miss Elizabeth Pentecost, who was born in England. By the union of our subject and his wife were born five children, but Arthur died in childhood. Carrie, Walter D., F. William and Bessie are still at home with their mother.

Mr. Hodgson came to Rockford in 1867, and began business in the city as a grocer at No. 327 East State Street. From the beginning he met with good success, working up a large trade, which yielded him a nice income. He was industrious, enterprising, and these characteristics, combined with good management, won him a well-deserved prosperity. He lived a quiet unassuming life, was upright and honorable in all things and had the confidence and regard of all with whom he was brought in contact. He took a commendable interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the community and his aid was not withheld from those enterprises calculated to promote the general welfare. In politics, he was a Democrat but never sought or desired public office, preferring to give his whole time and attention to his business and the enjoyment of home life. He died at his home at No. 405 South Third Street, March 28, 1883, and many friends shared with the family in their loss.

Mrs. Hodgson is still hving at the old home with her children. She has been a devoted and loving wife and mother, a good neighbor, and to her husband was indeed a faithful helpmate, doing everything in her power to advance his interests and aid him in his work. She has a large circle of acquaintances in this community and is highly esteemed for her many excellencies of character.

UST E, OLSON, a member of the firm of Palm & Olson, dealers in staple and fancy groceries, queensware and glassware, at No. 511 East State Street, Rockford, was born in Oland, Sweden, in 1857. He is a son of Pear Olson, who in 1889 started for this country to visit his sons, but while on the way died in New York City of inflammation of the lungs. He was then sixty-five years of age. His wife, whose maiden name was Wilhelmina C. Bjarklund, had died in Sweden some years previous, at about the age of fifty-five years. Both were members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Our subject has a brother, Uno Olson, who still resides in Sweden. A half-brother, Victor, resides with him in this city, and Edward, another brother, resides in Butte City, Mont. He is a molder by trade, but for a time engaged in clerking, and is now manager of a prominent clothing store in that city.

Our subject acquired a good practical education in his native land, and at the age of eighteen started for Germany and England. He became a sailor boy, and for four years followed the sea. He was the first of the family to come to America, crossing the Atlantic in 1878. Two years later, he came to Rockford, and for a time was connected with the furniture factories of this city.

In 1886, the firm of Palm & Olson was formed as successors to the firm of Johnson & Hugh, for whom our subject had formerly clerked. He afterward bought out Mr. Hugh and was a partner of Mr. Johnson, who subsequently sold out to Mr.

Eskelsen, but a few months later Mr. Palm bought the interest of the latter in the business. They carry a full and complete stock, and by their good management and courteous treatment have built up an excellent trade, of which they are well deserving. Mr. Olson is also connected with other interests. He is a stockholder in the Mantel and Furniture Company, the Rockford Manufacturing Company, the Rockford Baking Company, and a Director and stockholder in the Rockford Posten.

During his life as a sailor, Mr. Olson visited many of the leading ports of Europe, also landed on the shores of South America and West Africa. The vessel on which he sailed was a merchant vessel from a German port. During that period of his life he learned much that has been of pleasure, profit and importance to him. It was a fortunate day for Mr. Olson when he came to America, for he has here met with prosperity, and is now well-to-do. Politically, he is a Republican, but has never sought or desired public office. In his religious belief he is a member of the First Lutheran Church. A lithographic portrait of Mr. Olson is presented in this connection.

EVI B. FULLER. Prominent among the wealthy residents of Rockford, whose long and useful life has enabled him to retire and enjoy the recompense which he so justly deserves, we are pleased to mention Mr. Fuller, whose successful career stands forth as a fitting example of what can be done by earnest and constant effort. He is residing at a comfortable home in the city and for a number of years has been extensively engaged in buying and shipping poultry during the winter season, operating under the title of Read & Fuller. Prior to that, however, he conducted an extensive farm until 1865, since which time he has only devoted a part of his time and attention to its cultivation.

He of whom we write has been a resident of Winnebago County since 1839, with the exception of a few years spent in the West. Mr. Fuller came to this State from New York, where his birth occurred in 1831, in Genesee County. Being quite young on making his home here, he grew to mature years on his father's farm. He is the son of John Fuller, a native of Massachusetts, where his father, Lemuel Fuller, lived and died. The latter-named gentleman was called Capt. Fuller, but it is not known that he had a regular military record.

The father of our subject removed to New York State when a young man, where he was for some time connected with his brother, Judge Henry Fuller, the well-known founder of the horse street car railway in Chicago, III. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Lucy Wilder, a native of the Bay State, where her family were well and prominently known. After the birth of four children, the parents of our subject came to Illinois in 1839, and located on a farm in this county, which the father had purchased from the Government the year previous. This now prosperous city was little more than a hamlet in that early day, consisting mostly of log houses, and here it was that the family were subjected to all the inconveniences and privations incident to pioneering in a new country. He lived to see the country built up, contributing his share to every good cause, and at his death, which occurred in 1858, had secured a competence as a product of personal industry and good judgment. In his political relations, he was a Whig, and held many of the local offices within the gift of the people. His good wife is yet living on the old homestead at an advanced age, and can tell many a tale of interesting pioneer times. She is widely known in this county as a lady possessing a kind and generous heart and a cheerful disposition.

Levi B. Fuller is the second child and son of eight children born to his parents, six of whom are yet living, and are well-to-do in this world's goods. Miss Anna A. Thomas became the wife of our subject in Chickasaw County, Iowa. Her birth occurred in Pennsylvania May 16, 1842, which was also the native State of her parents. Her father died in Iowa, where he was a farmer in good circumstances. The parents bore the names of Zenith and Martha (Carpenter) Thomas, the latter of whom is living in the Hawkeye State. Mrs. Fuller was a young girl when she went to that State with an elder brother, Levi S., where she received her education and taught school prior to her marriage. She is a consistent member of the Congregational Church and takes an active interest in all religious affairs.

Mr. Fuller of this sketch has served as Alderman of the Fifth Ward on the Republican ticket, the duties of which office he has performed in a most creditable manner. Of their family of five children, three are deceased, viz: Franklin S., Emma and Ida E. Levi S. is engaged in the clerical department of the Price Glove Factory, of Rockford. Frances is a student at Mt. Holyoke (Mass.) College.

UDSON DAY, one of the prominent farmers of Durand Township, Winnelago County, makes his home on section 28, and is justly regarded as one of the substantial young men of this section. He was born in Washington County, Ohio, March 7, 1857, and is the son of Daniel and Arvilla (Lackey) Day, natives of Pennsylvania and Vermont, respectively. They were married in Ohio, and in the spring of 1865 made their advent into Illinois and located upon the farm which is the present property of our subject. The elder Mr. Day became the owner of a tract of one hundred and fifty acres, which he placed under good tillage and which was his home until his demise, which occurred April 10, 1887. He was followed to the land beyond by his wife, who passed away February 21, 1891.

He of whom we write was a member of a family which included nine children, viz: Frances, who died when young, as also did Sarah and Mary (twins); Amanda departed this life in her eleventh year. The next in order of birth was an infant who died unnamed. Abbie married Calvin Smythe and died in Stephenson County, this State, May 18, 1880. She left at her death a daughter, Abbie H., 1890. In the family of our subject. Hugh makes his home in this county, and Daniel.

The parents of our subject at their decease were in the possession of two hundred and thirty acres of land. In politics, the father was a Democrat and on that ticket was elected to serve in the position of Highway Commissioner and also School Director. Judson Day was reared to perform the duties of a farmer lad and being an apt pupil obtained a good education in the district schools. Maria Hoyt, who became his wife, December 9, 1879, was the daughter of Heman and Sarah (Thorn) Hoyt, and was born in Minnesota, December 15, 1857.

To our subject and his most estimable wife have been granted a family of seven children, viz: Nellie, Dudley, Myrtle; Sarah, Daniel and Harold are deceased and Gladys. Our subject is engaged in general farming and is the proprietor of a magnificent estate of three hundred and eighty-six acres, which by persistent industry and good judgment he has placed under excellent cultivation. He is a believer in and a supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and at the present time is classed among the wealthy and popular members of the agricultural community in this county, which rank he has attained by hard work and economy.

and enterprising agriculturists of Boone County, Ill., and a man well and favorably known over its length and breadth, is of English origin and a descendant of one of three brothers who left England and settled in America as early as 1650. Very little more is known of these brothers but that their descendants have ever been loyal and upright in every walk of life there is every evidence. Mr. Merrill was born in the Empire State, Herkimer County, near the town of Litchfield, on the 8th of September, 1836.

Our subject's father, Asel Merrill, Jr., was born in Exeter, N. Y., on the 29th of March, 1806, and was married in his native State, to Miss Auretta Smith, also a native of New York State. He followed agricultural pursuits in his native State until September, 1845, when with his wife and four children he started from Herkimer County with a two-horse wagon, and reached Chicago after a journey of twenty-one days. They shipped their goods by water. During the following winter. they remained in the vicinity of Chicago, and in the spring of 1846 they made their first appearance in Boone County, settling on land taken up from the Government in the fall of 1815 by Mr. Merrill. The latter hauled lumber from Chicago for his tirst house and commenced improving the one hundred and twenty acres he owned. He became one of the foremost farmers of his section and died here on the 16th of August, 1886. He was one of eight children born to the marriage of Asel Merrill, Sr., who was a native of the Nutmeg State, and who died in Oneida County, N. Y., when well advanced in years. His ancestors were in the Revolutionary War and fought bravely for independence.

When Asel Merrill, Jr., purchased his farm of one hundred and twenty acres, our subject and his brother Richard bought three hundred and twenty additional acres and, although it was without buildings of any kind, these young men went to work and soon made vast improvements in their place. In 1858, our subject was taken with the California fever and went to that State to engage in mining, Five years later, he returned to Illinois, and on the 7th of March, 1870, was wedded to Miss Louisa Daggett, who was born in New Hampshire and died on the 23d of December, 1881, leaving two daughters: Maud E., who was born in this county and township, on the 26th of March, 1873, and who is now teaching here, is a graduate of the Belvidere schools. The other child, Blanche A., is also a native of this county and township, and was born on the 12th of October, 1875. She is now in the Belvidere High School, Mrs. Merrill was a daughter of George W. and Sarah L. (Cole) Daggett, also natives of New England. (See sketch of Mrs. S. L. Pratt for further history of the Daggett family.)

On the 9th of May, 1883, Mr. Merrill was married to Miss L. E. Maynard, who was born in Rome, Bradford County, Pa., on the 25th of January. 1812, and whose parents. Pierpont E. and Laura M. (Washburn) Maynard, were natives of the Empire State. Both parents are now deceased.

the father dying in Pennsylvania and the mother in Belvidere, Ill., aged fifty and eighty-two years, respectively. Although no politician, Mr. Merrill, like his father before him, advocates the principles of the Democratic party. The latter cast his first Presidential vote for Andrew Jackson. Our subject attends regularly the Universalist Church. He is acknowledged by all to be a man of unquestionable honesty and is universally respected throughout the county.

ARL A. NEWBURG is a member of the firm of Newburg & Nygren, dealers in real estate; they also conduct an insurance and loan business. This firm was organized in the spring of 1892, and is already winning a liberal public patronage. Mr. Newburg was not unknown to the citizens of Rockford, as for seven years he had engaged in business as a contractor and builder.

Our subject was born in the Province of Smoland, Sweden, on June 2, 1859, and was reared and educated in his native Province. He was the first of the family to come to this country. He sailed for New York in the spring of 1880, and, after reaching his destination, went to Ridgeway, Pa., where he had learned the trade of an architect and house builder. In May, 1886, he came to Rockford and has since resided in this city. For some years he earried on business in the line of his trade, was a stockholder in the Manufacturers' National Bank and was also interested in other corporations. He owns a half interest in a promising patent known as a rotary loom for rapid weaving, both for factories and for home use. In this he is associated with Jacob Peterson, of Putnam, Ill. They expect soon to establish a factory and begin business in the manufacture of this loom.

Since coming to this country, Mr. Newburg has been followed by three of his brothers, Swans A., Elof and Frank P. The former is a contractor and yet resides in Pennsylvania. Elof is a clergyman of the Free Mission Swedish Church, and Frank is a carpenter of Rockford. The parents, Solomon and Elin (Swenson) Nelson, are still living in Sweden and both are now past the age of sixty years. They are members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. The father has made farming his life occupation.

In Ridgeway, Pa., Mr. Newburg was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Johnson, who was born in Holland, Sweden, February 20, 1858. When a young woman, she came alone to this country in 1880, the first of her family to cross the Atlantic. The parents never came to this country. The father, Johan Johnson, died in his native land when past the age of sixty years. His wife is still living and is a member of the Lutheran Church, to which her husband also belonged.

Mr. and Mrs. Newburg both hold membership with the Free Mission Church of Rockford. Their home has been blessed by the presence of five children who are yet living: Gertie J., Carl O., Nannie E., Carl E. and Arthur S. They have also lost two children, Carl H. and Carl E. In politics, Mr. Newburg is a Republican and is Alderman for the Sixth Ward. He has become quite well known in business circles and is held in high regard.

ILL J. JOHNSON, Secretary and business manager of the Republican Printing Company, has made a success of newspaper work, as he has been engaged in that business during the greater part of his active life. At the organization of the company, he became city editor, from April 10, 1890 to February, 1891. He was then made Secretary and manager. He is well and favorably known throughout this portion of the State and it is due in a great extent to his acquaintance, ability, industry and enterprise that the Republican of this city has reached its present position in the newspaper world.

The original of this sketch was given a good education, being a graduate of the East Side City High School in the Class of '81, after which he at once became connected with the home newspapers as city reporter. With the exception of the two years when he edited the Beacon at Aurora, this State, he has been actively employed in newspaper work in Rockford. He combines in a happy degree marked ability as a writer and business man.

Mr. Johnson was born December 9, 1863, in Cherry Valley, Winnebago County, and resided with his parents until starting out in life on his own account. The latter were natives of Sweden and on emigrating to America, located in this county, where they were married and resided on a farm in Cherry Valley Township. In 1865, the father was accidentally drowned in the Kishwaukee River, leaving his wife and four children. Our subject's mother had previously married, in her native country, a Mr. Johnson, who left at his decease three children, who came with their widowed mother to the United States. She is still living and makes her home at the present time in the city of Rockford.

Miss Tillie Olson was united in marriage with our subject. Mrs. Johnson accompanied her parents on their removal to the United States when quite young; they still reside in this city, and like the Johnson family are active members of the Swedish Lutheran Church. To our subject and his wife have been born two children, Hazel and Sidney. In his political relations, Mr. Johnson is a sound Republican, and socially, is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

ON. ROBERT SIMPSON. This great Republic owes a larger debt than she can ever pay to the loyal citizen-soldiers who rallied to her defense in the darkest hours of the Rebellion and heroically fought and suffered until the glorious Stars and Stripes once more waved over an undivided country. As a representative of those heroes, it gives us pleasure to present the portrait and record briefly the life of Robert Simpson, who did honorable service in the Union Army during the late war. He has acquired a fortnne by a persistent course of industry and economy, and is therefore enabled to spend his later years in comfort in the city of Rockford.

Our subject was born in Yarmouth, London District, Province of Ontario, Canada, on the 15th of March, 1836, and is a son of Peter Simpson, a native of Edinboro, Scotland, where also his father, Robert, Sr., as far as is known, was born. The grandfather of our subject came to America in 1833, settling in the above-named district of Canada, where he resided for six years, then came to Illinois and bought a "squatter's" claim in Rockford Township, Winnebago County, which was located on section 6, Township 13, Orange 1, East of the third principal meridian. He improved and resided upon the tract until his decease. The maiden name of the grandmother of our subject was Mary Knox; she also was a native of Scotland, and departed this life in Centerville, Winnebago County.

Peter Simpson was reared and married in his native Scotland, where he practiced as a physician in Edinboro until the year 1833. He then emigrated to America and located in Yarmouth, Canada, and came to Illinois the same year as did his father. With his family, he made the entire journey overland, crossing the Detroit River on the 4th of July, 1839, and in the latter part of the same year landed in this county. At that time all the land in this vicinity was owned by the Government, and the few settlers in the county were living in or near the timber, it not being thought possible that the prairies would ever be settled upon. The timber land was held by claimants who were glad to sell their rights, so they could move farther Westward.

The father of our subject purchased a claim to a tract of land in Rockford Township, and when the land came into market bought it from the Government. The maiden name of his wife was Henrietta Currie. She was a native of Edinboro, Scotland, and bore her husband two children: Susan and Robert. He of whom we write was three years of age when he came to Illinois with his parents and resided with his father until 1862. August 6th of that year, he enlisted in Company C. Seventyfourth Illinois Infantry, and was mustered into the regiment as Corporal. He was soon promoted to be Lieutenant and participated in the following named important battles: Perrysville, Nolansville, Stone River, Liberty Gap, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, and with Sherman in his Atlanta campaign, taking part in the battles from Chattanooga to Atlanta and in the siege and capture of that city. After its fall, he went with his regiment in pursuit of Hood and fought in the battles of Spring Hill, Franklin and Nashville. He was honorably discharged with his regiment and was mustered out June 10, 1865, when he returned home and engaged in farming.

Previous to entering the army, our subject purchased eighty acres of land, located on section 5, and included in his present farm. He has at different times purchased property until his estate now includes four hundred and fifty acres in Rockford Township. He has been more than ordinarily successful in agricultural pursuits, and in the fall of 1891 he rented his farm and purchased a home in the city of Rockford, where he now lives retired.

The date of our subject's marriage to Eliza Davis, a native of New Brunswick, was April 17, 1867. She was the daughter of John and Ellen Davis and departed this life in 1872. Mr. Simpson the following year was married to Catherine Spottswood, a native of Kemptville, Grenville County, Province of Ontario, Canada, and the daughter of Robert and Mary (Graham) Spottswood. The father was born in or near Roxboro, Scotland, where also his father, Robert Spottswood, was born, and came to America in 1833, settling in Grenville County, Canada. He had married Elizabeth Frater, also a native of Scotland, who died in Canada in June, 1866.

The father of Mrs. Simpson was a blacksmith by trade, and on coming to America in 1833, landed in Quebec, whence he went to Kemptville and was engaged in the mercantile business. Later, he removed to St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and after a few years' residence there, returned to Kemptville, where he followed his trade of a blacksmith until 1867, the date of his arrival in Illinois. He is now engaged at his trade in Westfield Corners. Mrs. Simpson's mother is the daughter of James and Catherine (Clinkscales) Graham, and was born in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and is still living. The only daughter of our subject by his first marriage died when twelve years of age. The two children born of his second union are still living and named respectively Mary II, and Arthur G.

The Hon. Robert Simpson was elected to the State Legislature on the Democratic ticket in 1888. He has also served his fellow-townsmen in other capacities and for a period of ten years was Supervisor of Rockford Township.

*HOMAS D. REBER, Treasurer of the Rockford Lumber and Fuel Company, of which business he was one of the promoters, has filled his present position since the organization of that company in April, 1890, and is one of the leading business men of the place. He was formerly a member of the firm of Perry & Reber, lumber dealers, the company being formed on the 6th of January, 1885, and he is now a Director and President of the Rockford Driving Club, in which he is a large stockholder. This club was organized in 1890 and has since laid out a park and built a mile-race track. Mr. Reber, who is deeply interested in the breeding and raising of standard-bred horses, is the owner of the wellknown horse "Independence," record 2:30, and also owns other promising animals. He is a stockholder of the Ingersoll Milling Company, organized in the early part of 1891, is a Director of the same, and he is also Vice-President of the Board of Control of the Rockford Commercial Club, organized in February, 1891. He is a stockholder in the Excelsior Furniture Company, was President of the same in 1890 and Vice-President in 1891, and he is also a stockholder and an ex-Director of the Rockford Paint Company. He is a stockholder in both the Manufacturers' National Bank and the Forest City National Bank; the latter was organized in the early part of 1890. He was an original stockholder in the Superior Brick Company, organized in 1891, and a stockholder in the Nelson Hotel Company.

Mr. Reber was born in Reading, Pa., on the 11th of December, 1863, passed his boyhood and youth there, and received his education in the Reading Business College. He subsequently attended the state Normal near Lancaster, Pa., and in April, 1883, with very little means to assist him in the struggle for a livelihood, he came to Rockford, Ill., and began working for the modest sum of $1.25 per day. He is of Pennsylvania Dutch stock, and his parents, B. B. and Mary E. (Dechart) Reber, were natives of the Keystone State. The father died when our subject was eighteen months old, but the mother, who is still quite active although well along in years, resides in Reading, Pa.

Mr. Reber was married to Miss Lydia Logue, a native of Chicago, but who was reared and edueated in Rockford, where her parents are still living. He has just completed a $6,000 residence at No. 305 South Third Street, and a $2,000 barn at the same place. He is a live man and full of energy and business. He and Mrs. Reber are classed among the leading young people of the city and regular attendants at the First Christian Union Church. Socially, Mr. Reber is a Thirtysecond degree Mason, a member of the Consistory of Freeport, charter member of the Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias, the Improved Order of Redmen, of Rockford, and of the German society, Germania. He is also a charter member of the Royal Areanum. In politics, he is a Democrat in national affairs. He was formerly a member of the local militia, the Rockford City Grays, and was First Lieutenant of his company for two years. Although not at all superstitious, Mr. Reber regards the 7th of each month as his "lucky day," and really has been very fortunate on those days. To his marriage have been born two interesting children, Helen J., about three years old, and Edwin Perry, six months old.

RANK WARD, President of the Ward Pump Company, of Roekford, was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, and was a son of Mark Ward. His grandfather and father were both natives of the Empire State. The latter learned the trade of a molder when a young man, and was thus employed when, with his parents, he went to Ontario, where he worked as a molder until 1854. In that year he brought his family to Rockford, Ill., afterward removing to Milford, where he died at about the age of fifty years. His wife, whose maiden name was Ann M. Johnston, was born in Canada, but her parents were natives of New York, and were of Dutch descent. She is still living in Rockford, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years, and is a member of the Baptist Church, to which Mr. Ward also belonged.

In the family of this worthy couple were six children. Our subject remained under the parental roof until he attained his majority, and under his father, learned the trade of a molder. At the age of seventeen, he came with the family to Rockford in 1854, and in this city was subsequently married to Helen Wortman, who was born in Pennsylvania, and when a child, came to Illinois with her parents, William and Mary (Milleck) Wortman, who were also natives of the Keystone State, and were of Pennsylvania Dutch descent. On coming to the West, they located on a farm in Scott Township, Ogle County, where both Mr. and Mrs. Wortman spent the remainder of their days. His death occurred at the age of seventy-seven years, and his wife died in her fifty-second year. They were members of the Presbyterian Church, and were highly respected people. In their family were three sons and four daughters, who are yet living.

Five children have graced the union of Mr. and Mrs. Ward: Elmer, who married Anna Wetenhall, and is a molder in his father's shops; Mary E., an intelligent young lady, occupying the position of Treasurer of the Ward Pump Company; Mark A., a molder by trade, employed as shipping agent in his father's shops; Belle and Carrie, at home. All of the family are stockholders in the Pump Company. The mother and children are members of the Centennial Methodist Church. The father and sons are stanch Republicans in politics. The family have a pleasant home at No. 302 Third Street, and is well and favorably known throughout the community.

After coming to Rockford, Mr. Ward was employed as a molder for some time, and later became connected in that capacity with Emerson & Talcott, continuing with those gentlemen for some years. In company with M. D. Gebler, he then established business as a molder and foundry man, and after three or four years became sole proprietor. That was the beginning of his present business. He commenced the manufacture and sale of pumps, and in August, 1889, the company of which he is president was incorporated. They now do a successful and rapidly growing business, and in connection with the manufacture of pumps, now do repair and job casting. The officers of the company are Frank Ward, President; George S. Stanley, Vice-President; Frank Lane, Secretary; and Miss Mary E. Ward, Treasurer. Our subject is an enterprising business man, sagacious and farsighted, and by the exercise of good business principles has steadily worked his way upward to a position among the leading manufacturers of this thriving city.

NOT BY THE BURN BY SHELDEN. Among the many prominent agriculturists of Winnebago County who are now living retired in the village of that name, we are pleased to mention Mr. Shelden, who ranks among the well-to-do and progressive citizens of this section. He was born in Granger, Medina County, Ohio, and, it is supposed, is a direct descendant of the seventh generation from William Shelden, who emigrated from England in 1634, and located at South Kensington, R. I. The line of ancestry is as follows: John, son of William; Isaac, son of John; Joseph. son of Isaac; Jonathan, son of Joseph; David, son of Jonathan, was the father of our subject. He was born in Schoharie County, N. Y., October 29, 1794.

Jonathan Shelden, the grandfather of our subject, was born June 21, 1770, probably in New England; he resided for a number of years in Schoharie County, N. Y., thence moved to Ohio and located on a farm in Richfield Township, Summit County, where he was living at the time of his demise. The full name of his wife, and grandmother of our subject, was Abiah Northrup, who was born April 16, 1770, and died on the home farm in Richfield Township.

The father of our subject was reared in his native State, and when eighteen years old went to Ohio, his destination being Cleveland. There being a severe storm, the passengers on the vessel on which he had taken passage were obliged to land, and he made his way on foot to Richfield Township, Summit County. He resided there for a time and then returned to the Empire State and was married, whence he again came to Ohio and purchased a tract of timber land in what is now Granger Township, and there erected a log house, in which our subject was born. His decease occurred March 31, 1873, and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Anna Searles, also died on the same farm.

The parental family of our subject included eight children: Phœbe A., Ezra D., Edward G., Isaiah J., Clinton G., Myron S., Albert D. and Frances E. Our subject was reared in his native town and attended the pioneer log schoolhouse, which contained slabs set on wooden pins for seats. He assisted his father in carrying on the farm in the woods until 1851, when he paid his first visit to Illinois. At that time Cherry Valley was the Western terminus of the railroad, and Rockford was reached by stage. Our subject started on foot to explore the country, and, returning to Ohio, resided there until June, 1853, when, accompanied by his wife and one child, he started to Illinois. Mr. Shelden purchased a tract of wild prairie land on section 1, Seward Township, for which he paid $5 per acre. After improving his property, he sold it and bought two hundred and forty acres on sections 11 and 23. He later removed to the farm which he still owns and rents.

In October, 1818, the original of this sketch was married to Aurenda M. Stimson, who was born in Mendon, Monroe County, N. Y., January 29, 1829. Her father, Jason Stimson, was a native of Vermont, whence he removed to New York State, residing for a time in Mendon, when he removed to Granger Township, Medina County, Ohio, and for a number of years was engaged in the mercantile business. During that time, he studied medicine, and when completing a course in the college and ready to practice, he was taken sick and died.

The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Shelden was Mary J. Phelps. She is now living at the age of eighty-seven years, and makes her home with her sons, Milton and Jason, in Iowa. Mr. and Mrs.

ROBERT COLTON.

Shelden have four children, namely: Elwin, who married Rosepha Copeland, has two sons, Frank and Homer; he resides in Topeka, Kan. George E. married Artelissa Bentley, has three children, Leua, Elmer and Clarence, and also resides in Topeka. Clara, the wife of Edward L. Copeland, has two children, Harold and Malcolm, and also makes her home in Topeka. Mary J. is the wife of Walter Whittlesey and lives at Oak Park, Chicago.

The maternal grandfather of our subject, Isaiah Searles, was born April 7, 1759, and served in the War of 1812. He was wounded in the battle of Chippewa, Canada, September 17, 1814, taken a prisoner and carried to Montreal, where his death occurred in December, 1814. The maiden name of his wife was Anna Dean, who was born July 19, 1762, and died at Royalton, Cuyahoga County, Ohio.

OBERT COLTON. The English-American citizens of Winnebago County have an excellent representative in the person of Mr. Colton, whose portrait and life sketch are here presented. He is one of the pioneers of 1846, and his splendid estate in Durand Township, which consists of three hundred and twenty-five fertile acres, is supplied with all the needful buildings, erected substantially and designed attractively. He has put forth his best efforts to make of it a home suited to his tastes and the needs of his family, and well has he succeeded.

The natal day of Mr. Colton was October 15, 1819, and his birthplace, Nottingham County, England. He is the youngest child in the family circle, that included three children, the others being Ann, who married John Ballader, and John. Our subject was a lad when his parents died, at which time he was compelled to start out in life on his own account. He resided with one man three years, and, when old enough to receive wages, hired out to a man named Richard Scott, whom he served five years, receiving as compensation for his labors, from $10 to $75 per year.

In the spring of 1813, Mr. Colton concluded to try his fortune in the New World, and, setting sail in the American vessel "Mississippi." after a voyage of twenty-three days, landed in New York Harbor. He at once proceeded to Steuben County, N. Y., and worked by the day, job, and month, at anything he could find to do. He was thus employed for two years, and during that time saved $201, which served to start him in life. Coming to Winnebago County, he purchased from the Government a tract of one hundred and twenty acres, located on section 29, Durand Township.

January 17, 1818, Robert Colton and Miss Martha Jane Himes were united in marriage. The lady, who was the daughter of Kingsley and Lucinda (Campbell) Himes, was born in New York State, and came to Illinois with her parents. Mr. Colton finally sold the farm above referred to, and purchased one hundred and sixty acres, located on section 28. The land was covered with timber and underbrush, and here our subject settled, and soon placed it under excellent tillage, and creeting good buildings on the place, resided there until October, 1889, when he removed to another farm on section 21. His property in the county aggregates three hundred and twenty-five acres.

Mrs. Martha Jane Colton departed this life at her home in April, 1858, leaving five children: Letitia C., Mrs. George Krone, makes her home in Monona County, Iowa; Elizabeth L. resides in Durand Township, and is the wife of George Cole; Grace A. married Warren Pettingill, and lives in Green County, Wis.; Anna E. is the wife of Charles Hammond, and makes her home in this township; one son died in childhood.

The lady whom our subject chose for his second wife was Mrs. Ann Ranney, nee Jayne; she was born in New York, and was a daughter of William Jayne. By her marriage with our subject she became the mother of two children: George Robert, who died in infancy, and William Walter, a graduate of Rush Medical College, at Chicago, and engaged in the practice of his profession in that city. After the death of Mrs. Ann Colton, our subject was married, October 10, 1887, to Mrs. Carrie A. Moore, nee Bradley. The lady was born in Highgate, Franklin County, Vt., June 5, 1847, and was a daughter of Stephen and Phoebe Bradley. She was reared to womanhood in the Green Mountain State, and was there married to Richard Moore, by whom she became the mother of six children, viz.: Phoebe, Frederick, Jennie, Richard, May and Stephen.

He of whom we write is Democratic in his political affiliations. During the war he was a strong Union man, and a member of the Union League. He has become fully identified with the interests of the county, and has contributed in no small degree to its growth and prosperity. His present large property has been acquired through excellent judgment, and his position is among the foremost agriculturists of the county.

IRAM C. PHILLIPS, a successful patternmaker and mechanical draughtsman, of Rockford, was born in the Empire State, and is descended from English ancestors. His parents, Jarvis and Nancy J. (Campbell) Phillips, were also natives of New York State, the father born in Saratoga and the mother in Albany County. The elder Mr. Phillips was reared on a farm, and was married in his native county to Miss Campbell, whose grandfather was a Scotchman. After all their children were born, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips came West to Black Hawk County, Iowa, settled on and improved a fine farm, and there his death occurred when nearly three-score years and ten. He was quiet, industrious and thrifty and accumulated a comfortable fortune. In politics, he was a Republican, and, in religion, he was liberal. llis wife, who survives him, is now a resident of Waterloo, lowa, and is sixty-seven years of age.

Our subject, the only son of his parents, has three sisters, who make their homes in Iowa and Nebraska. He came West with his parents in 1865, and, later, went to Moline, Ill., where he learned his trade. He subsequently spent one winter in the "Lone Star State," but returned to lowa, and was engaged in superintending the building of the Insane Hospital, at Independence. Early in the '70s, he came to Rockford, and for about twelve years he has resided on his present property. For some time, he has been an experimental pattern-maker, and most of the time has been engaged in business on his own account. He is thoroughly familiar with his business in every detail and is a skillful mechanic and pattern-maker. Since his residence in this city, Mr. Phillips went to California, and for some time was in Los Angeles and San Francisco, working while in the latter place on the cruiser "Charleston" as a pattern-maker. After this, he spent one year in Milwaukee, Wis, with the Milwaukee Harvester Company, and then returned to the thriving little city of Rockford.

Our subject was married in this city to Miss Libby Shearer, a native of Winnebago County, Ill., who received her schooling and attained her growth in Rockford. Her father, George Shearer, came to Winnebago County at a very early day, and died here when about sixty years of age. He was a wheelwright by trade. His wife, whose maiden name was Lizzie Whisen, is still living, and makes her home with her children. She is about sixty-four years of age. They were natives of Wheeling, Va., and both were strict Methodists in their religious views.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are pleasantly located on a very valuable tract of land on Corey's Bluffs, South Main Street, and are well respected in the community. They are the parents of four daughters: Eva, Myrtie, Cora and Florence, all at home.

OSEPH W. FAULKNER died at his home in Rockford, February 21, 1888, having removed here from his farm, which was located in Rockford Township, about one year prior to his decease. He was a very old resident of this county, having come hither when a youth of seventeen years with his parents, and when attaining his majority secured land in Seward Township and was engaged in its cultivation for a number of years. He later became the owner of a fine piece of improved land, located three miles from Rockford, which he made more valuable by the erection thereon of first-class buildings. He left at his death an excellent estate of one hundred and three acres, which is now in the possession of his widow and children,

Mr. Faulkner was born in Bedfordshire. England, January 3, 1834, being the son of John and Mary (Read) Faulkner, also natives of that shire, where they were farmers. After the birth of seven children, the parents of our subject came to America early in the '50s, making the journey on a sailing-vessel, which landed them in New York after a tedious ocean voyage of seven weeks. They came direct to Chicago, thence overland with teams to Winnebago County, where they were among the early pioneers of Seward Township. The father entered a tract of Government land, which he improved and brought to an excellent state of cultivation, and ranked among the well-to-do agriculturists of this section.

Our subject, as before stated, was a young man when coming to this county, and assisted his father in developing the new farm and was frequently sent to Chicago where all their farm products were marketed. John Faulkner, the father of our subject, departed this life at his home in Winnebago village in 1884, after having attained to the age of three-score and ten years. His wife is still surviving him at the age of eighty-four years, making her home at No. 704 Winnebago Street, Rockford. Like her husband, she is a member of the Methodist Church, to the support of which she is a liberal contributor. The father of our subject was known in this locality as "Uncle Johnny," and was active in all good work which tended to the upbuilding of his community. He erected the first warehouse in Winnebago and was held in high esteem for his honorable and upright life.

The parental family of our subject included lifteen children, of whom two sons and seven daughters are living. Joseph W. is the eldest son and second child, and on attaining mature years was married in this city to Miss Catherine Faulker, spelled in Scotland Falconer. She was born in Ross-shire, Scotland, in 1836, and was only six or seven years old when she accompanied her parents on their removal to America, where they located near Rockford. This was early in the '40s, and as this vicinity was sparsely settled and most of the land in its primitive condition, they endured all the hardships and privations incident to pioneer life. They made their home for some time in a hut which did not even boast the luxury of a floor. This rude structure, however, later gave way to a comfortable residence, and the father, Hugh Falconer, later removed to Winnebago, where he died in advanced life. He was widely and favorably known throughout the county, being one of those sturdy Scotch citizens who have contributed so much to the upbuilding of this section. Mrs. Falconer died twenty years after her husband's decease, passing away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Faulkner. She was at that time seventy-three years of age and a consistent member of the Congregational Church, with which denomination her husband was also connected. Our subject's wife has three brothers, all farmers, now living in this county, where she was reared and has always resided.

To Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner two daughters have been born: Mary, who is the wife of James Bennett, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, who is conducting a fine tailoring business at No. 210 West State Street, is the mother of two children, Ethel F. and Josephine; Katie L., the second daughter, resides at home with her mother.

ENRY FISHER, one of the prominent business men and representative citizens of Rockford, died on the 21st of January, 1871, at Fennville, Mich., where he had been on business. He was originally from Vermont, his birth occurring in Springfield of that State, and his parents, Isaac and Harriet (Johnson) Fisher, were natives respectively of Massachusetts and Vermont. After their marriage, this worthy couple resided in Vermont, where Mr. Fisher, who owned woolen mills and who was a skilled machinist, had a very extensive business. As the years passed by, they retired from the active duties of life, moved to Rockford, Ill., and there the mother's death occurred a few months later, when seventy years of age. The father survived her only a few years. Both were exemplary members of the Congregational Church and active workers in the same. He affiliated with the Republican party in his political views. Their son, Henry Fisher, received a good common-school education in his native State and subsequently went to Allegan, Mich., where he met and married Miss Alma L. Parkherst, a native of Bethel, Vt., and the daughter of Judge Ebenezer and Lucy (Cushing) Parkherst, both natives of Windsor County, Vt. Early in the '40s, Mr. and Mrs. Parkherst moved to Michigan, making the trip overland with teams, and located at Allegan when it was but a hamlet. They had the first frame residence in the place, and there the father received his final summons, his death occurring when sixty-four years of age. For years he was one of the leading men of the county and held many positions of trust and honor, the duties of which he discharged with ability, fidelity and excellent judgment. He was Probate Judge, County Treasurer and Register of Deeds for a great many years. He had taken decided views as a Whig in politics and was known as a live and active worker for his party. He was a descendant of an old and prominent Vermont family, the members of which suffered much from the Indians during the War of 1812, and his brother was captured and held by the savages for some time. After the death of Judge Parkherst, his widow moved to Iowa and there died at the age of sixty-four. Both were Congregationalists in their religious views. Mrs. Fisher was but twelve years of age when her parents moved to Michigan and in that State she made her home until 1854, when she came with her husband to Rockford. Since his death, she has resided at the old home, No. 107 South West Street, where she owns a comfortable residence and a valuable lot. After locating in Rockford, Mr. Fisher became connected with the lumber business and owned large yards in that city and Cherry Valley. He also owned a sawmill at Oconto, Wis., and was engaged in the lumber business there and at Fennville, Mich. Aside from this, he owned some valuable property in Rockford, and was considered a very successful and prosperous business man. He had for partners such well-known business men as Phineas Howes and John Lake, both prominently connected with the business interests of the city at the present time. For a number of years, Mr. Fisher was Superintendent of the Third Ward, where he had made his home since his residence in that city, and was holding that position at the time of his death, which occurred when he was fifty-four years of age. In politics he advocated the principles of the Republican party, and in religion he was identified with the Congregational Church. He had a host of warm firiends and his death was the occasion of universal sorrow. Mrs. Fisher is well preserved for her years and still takes much interest in passing events. She has a brother living in Baltimore and a sister in Chicago. To her marriage were born four children: Alice, the wife of George Eking, a prominent banker, Alderman of the Third Ward, a member of the School Board and one of the live men of Rockford, and they reside with Mrs. Fisher; G. J., at home; William II., with the firm of Holland & Ferguson, real-estate dealers, married Miss Rosemond Littlefied, and Frank P. married Miss Lena Cammon and is now a resident of Rockford.

ETH C. WILDER, who has long been engaged in farming on section 29, Harlem Township, was born on the 5th of December, 1819, in Jericho, Chittenden County, Vt. Tradition says that the great-grandfather was born in London, England, and came to America in Colonial times, settling in or near Lowell, Mass., and at one time he owned a tract of land now included in Lowell. The grandfather, Oliver Wilder, was born in Massachusetts and was a blacksmith by trade. He married Huldah Cutter and spent his last years in Jericho, Vt. His wife afterwards again married and, having survived her husband some years, died in Franklin County.

Oliver Wilder, Jr., the father of our subject, was born in Townsend, Mass., and was reared on a farm. After the death of his father he located on the old homestcad and settled up the estate. Subsequently, he purchased a farm in the town of Underhill, where he made his home for twelve years, when he bought land and located in Jericho, there making his home until 1844, when he disposed of his property in the East and came to Illinois. At that time, Winnebago County was sparsely settled and the work of civilization and progress seemed scarcely begun. He bought a farm on section 29, Harlem Township, at $16 per acre, upon which a log house and stable had been built, while twenty-five acres of the land were broken. He there resided until called to the home beyond, April 6, 1863. His wife bore the maiden name of Lemira Lee. She was born in Jericho. Vt., and was a daughter of John and Sarah (Cochran) Lee. Her grandfather, John Lee, Sr., was born in Connecticut, and afterward became one of the first settlers of Jericho, Vt., where he secured a large tract of timber land, cleared a farm and made his home until his death. His son, after his marriage, removed on a part of his father's land and also followed agricultural pursuits throughout his entire life. Mrs. Wilder, the mother of our subject, died in May, 1865. She reared a family of ten children: Channeey, Sarah, Lemira, Huldah, Seymour, Page, Van Buren, Mary and Laura.

We now take up the personal history of Seth C. Wilder, who spent his boyhood days in a manner not unlike that of other farmer lads. In 1843, he bade good-bye to his old home in the East, and in the autumn of that year came to Illinois, locating upon the farm which is yet his home. Soon afterwards, he was joined by the rest of the family, who came in the spring of the following year. With his parents he remained until 1853, then spent one year in the East, and since that time has never left the old homestead. With the history of the county from a very early day, he has been prominently identified and deserves no little credit for the part he has taken in its upbuilding and advancement.

In 1861, Mr. Wilder led to the marriage altar Miss Polly Ann Sherman, who was born in Fairfield, Franklin County, Vt., and is a daughter of William Sherman, a native of Connecticut. His father was also a native of the Nutmeg State and after his marriage removed to Vermont, becoming one of the pioneers of the town of Fairfield. Upon the farm which he there purchased and improved he made his home until his death. His wife bore the maiden name of Polly Phelps. Their son William was only two years old at the time of their removal to Vermont, where he was reared and educated. Inheriting the old homestead, he spent the remainder of his days upon it. He was one of the prominent citizens of that community and represented his district in the State Legislature. He passed away November 1, 1857. His wife, Betsy Lee, was a daughter of John and Sarah (Cochran) Lee. She was born in Jericho, Vt., and died in May, 1882, having long survived her husband.

As before stated, during his entire residence in this county, Mr. Wilder has resided only on the one farm. Nearly all the improvements upon the place are his handiwork and its neat appearance tells of the thrifty and industrious life which he has led. To the duties of citizenship he is ever true and since the formation of the Republican party he has been one of its stanch supporters.

HOMAS LANCASTER. In noting the leading ing incidents in the life-record of this gentleman, who is numbered among the leading men in Shirland Township, Winnebago County, we find that he was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1821, and is a son of Thomas Lancaster, who lived and died in his native England. His mother bore the maiden name of Mary Clark.

The parental family of our subject included fourteen children, twelve of whom grew to adult age, our subject being the fifth child and second son of the family. He has one sister, Mary, Mrs. George Lockwood, whose husband is engaged in ranching and goldmining in Tasmania, whither they were taken free by the English Government, to aid in the settlement of that country.

The original of this sketch, when twenty-five years of age, embarked on a sailing-vessel, "The Garrick," and after a tedious voyage of five weeks on the water, landed on the American shore, at New York City, whence he went to Albany, and thence by way of the canal to Buffalo, and sailed thence by the lakes to Southport, now Kenosha. Wis. He had been preceded to the New World by his twin brother, who died a few months after our subject located here. The brothers settled upon a tract of one hundred and sixty acres in Newark, Wis., which they had purchased from the Government, and the abundant products of their farm were marketed at Beloit, eight miles distant.

Living a single man eight or nine years after coming to this country, our subject, in February, 1856, was married to Sarah, daughter of John Hydes, who was killed in a public house in England, when Mrs. Lancaster was two years of age. She took passage for this country in 1855, when thirty-three years of age, and, after her marriage, resided on the farm in Newark, Wis., until 1882, when, with her husband, she came to Winnebago County, where Mr. Lancaster purchased one hundred and sixty-four acres, where they at present reside, for which they paid the sum of $29 per acre. Their property in Wisconsin was disposed of at the rate of $30 an acre.

Mr. Laneaster was thrown upon his own resources when a lad of twelve years, and was given the advantages of only a few months' schooling. By energy and perseverance united with economy and good business qualifications, he has secured a handsome competency, and is now living in the enjoyment of the comforts and luxuries which wealth affords, being worth at least $12,000. Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster have had no children of their own, but have taken into their home and hearts a young man, who bears the name of Frank; he is married to a niece of Mr. Lancaster's, and is working the farm on shares. In politics, our subject is, and always has been, a Republican, and, although not identified with any church organization, gives liberally of his means to all denominations.

HLJAM II. POLLOCK. This gentleman of whom we write, whose pleasant home is to be found in Shirland Township, is descended on both sides from heroic and high-minded people. He was born in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., September 25, 1811, and his father, Samuel Pollock, who was born in Ireland in 1801, and who was of Scotch descent, came to the United States when sixteen years of age, and after reaching mature years was married to Miss Betsey A. Sackett, a native of New York State. Mr. Pollock was a farmer all his life but also followed the trade of a mason. His wife died at the age of forty-eight years and he followed her to the grave when about seventy-two years of age.

The subject of this sketch was the first son and tifth child of eight children born to his parents. He was the first one of this family to make his way Westward, and he came to Winnebago County, Shirland Township, April 12, 1866. For the first five years he worked on the farm and in the lumber regions, and in December, 1870, he was wedded to Mrs. Phoebe Strail, nee Lippitt, afterwards loeating on the farm where his wife was reared. She is the daughter of Dr. John W. and Almira (Yarrington) Lippitt, the father a native of Rhode Island and of English descent, and the mother a native of New York, and of Scotch parentage. The Lippitts are of the English nobility. Mrs. Pollock's parental grandfather was London Lippitt, who came from England and settled in Rhode Island at a very early date. He had two sons and a daughter: John Wesley, Daniel, who was a school teacher and later a farmer of Pennsylvania, and Nancy, who passed away.

John Wesley Lippitt was thoroughly educated for the medical profession and was an eminent practitioner in his native State. He came to Illinois at a very early date, probably about 1836, and obtained one-fourth section of Government land where his daughter now lives. He came first from New York prospecting in 1835, and traded his team and outfit for a claim in Rockton Township, after which he returned on foot to New York, and the following year returned with an oxteam bringing his family, consisting of his wife and four children, back with him. On arriving here, he found his claim covered by a Government claim, known as Indian Float. He then purchased another claim of one hundred and sixty aeres of one Baker and moved into a new log house erected by himself. Three years later, his wife died, leaving him with the four children above mentioned: Maria, a resident of Beloit; Jane, Mrs. W. A. Phelps, of Rockton Township; Ann, Mrs. C. B. Ayer, of Beloit, and Francis, who died at Rockton when twenty-seven years of age. The father was again married, in 1843, to Mrs. Almira Warren, nee Yarrington, who was a native of Chautauqua County, N. Y., but who came to this State about 1840. She bore him one daughter and four sons: Phobe A., born in February, 1844, now Mrs. William Pollock; Loudon, the second son, enlisted in the army when but eighteen, where he served one year in Company A, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Illinois Volunteers, coming home on account of failing health, and died at the age of twenty; John and Albert Wesley, both drowned, and Ira, who died when two years of age. Albert Wesley and John were promising boys and were drowned in Sugar River in 1856. The body of the former was not found by the family, although anxiously searched for, but about thirty-five years later, Mrs. Pollock learned that Deacon Patten Atwood had taken the body from the Rock River at Roscoe, many miles below, and buried it there. Dr. Lippitt died in Shirland Townskip, where his daughter now lives, in 1863, when sixty-nine years of age. His wife followed him to the grave one year later, when fifty-eight years of age.

To Mr. and Mrs. Pollock were born eight children, one of whom died in infancy, and they now have four daughters and three sons: Cora at home, a graduate of the Beloit High School when nineteen years of age, and now conducting a class in instrumental music; Samuel E., a student in the Beloit Preparatory Department; Wilbur II., attending the district school; Alice L., attending the home school; Mary Agnes, also in the home school, as are Clara M. and Truman A., the two youngest of this bright and interesting family. Mrs. Pollock has one child, Hattie Strail, by her first marriage. This daughter is now Mrs. Samuel Bennett, her husband being a photographer in Wisconsin. Mr. Pollock has been Commissioner of Highways for nine years and has been School Director for some time. The past spring he was elected Supervisor of the township. He and wife are worthy members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he has ever been a liberal contributor, and in which he has served officially for some time. Mr. and Mrs. Pollock have one hundred and sixty-five acres free from all encumbrances, and they are keeping twenty cows, selling the milk to the creamery in Shirland. They are wide-awake and enterprising and have been successful.

ORNELIUS E. KNI'DSON, the efficient and well-known Superintendent of the Cooperative Furniture Company, was born in Norway, October 16, 1846. He lost his father, Knutson Olsen, when he was only four years of age. Mr. Olsen left a widow with ten small children to support. Of this family two brothers and a sister are married and reside in Norway, being well-to-do people. Crist, a brother of our subject, emigrated to this country. The mother, who was born in 1801, died at her old home in 1888, at the age of eighty-seven years. The parents and children all held membership with the Lutheran Church and were worthy people.

Our subject is the youngest of the family. At a very early age, he was thrown upon his own resources and since that time has made his own way in the world. In his native land, he served a full term of apprenticeship to the trade of eabinetmaking, after which he ran a lathe for some time on his own account. At length, he bade good-bye to his old home, with the intention of trying his fortune in the New World. He sailed in April, 1871, and landed at Quebec, Canada, from whence he came to Illinois, and afterward went to Kentucky. He was a resident of Paducah, Ky., for two and a half years, following his trade at that place, and then removed to Chicago, where he resided only a short time. He then came to Rockford in the fall of 1873, and has since made his home in this city.

Mr. Knudson began working here as a cabinetturner and was thus employed for several years before becoming connected with the Co-operative Furniture Company. He is not only Superintendent and manager of that company and a stockholder and Director, but is also a designer and draughtsman. He is a skilled workman, as his work in the different departments shows, and is a most industrious and energetic man. For four years, he was on the road as a commercial traveler for this company and traveled extensively, especially on the Pacific slope. In this way, he became acquainted with the country, its people and its business methods, and the experience was very valuable to him.

In Chicago, Mr. Knudson was united in marriage with Miss Randia Brondstad, who was born near the old home of her husband and was reared and educated in the same school district. With her sister Maggie, she came to the United States in May, 1871, locating in Chicago, where a brother, Lars, had settled a few years previous. He and Maggie are still living in that city and the former is married. The father died when Mrs. Knudson was quite young. He was long survived by his wife, who departed this life a few years ago in Norway. They were both Lutherans in religious belief.

Unto our subject and his wife were born four children, but three are now deceased: Carl J., Anna D. and Anna E. O., all of whom died in childhood. Rose E., an intelligent maiden of thirteen summers, is still with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Kuudson are well-known people of this community and have the respect of all on account of their many excellencies of character. In politics, he is independent, voting for the best man, regardless of party attiliations.

ENRY BROWN. In the monetary and mercantile fields, our subject is known to be a man of undaunted integrity and substantial ability. He is careful and conscientious, ever adhering to the dictates of his conscience in matters both of a public and private nature. After removing to Rockford in 1869, he was for ten years actively engaged in the livery business and was one of the prime movers in the organization of the Co-operative Furniture Company, with which branch of business he was interested for eight years. Since that time, however, he has lived retired from active labor.

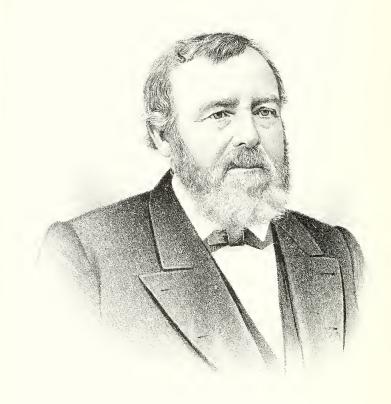

Our subject was born in Springfield, Windsor County, Vt., March 26, 1826, and was a son of Jonathan Brown, who was also a native of that place. His grandfather, Elisha Brown, hailed from Cohasset, Mass., and was active in the cause of American liberty, having participated in the battle of Bunker Hill and served through the entire Revolutionary struggle. His father served in the French and Indian War and bravely endured all the privations which fell to the lot of a soldier. He, in company with his brother Abel, and a Mr. Stevens were the third settlers in Springfield, Vt. The grandfather secured a large tract of timber land, which he cleared from the wilderness and resided upon for many years. There being no railroad in the vicinity of his home, the farm products were conveyed by team to Boston, ninetytwo miles away. The maiden name of his wife was Merrill Bates, a native of Cohasset, Mass., who lived to the advanced age of one hundred years, lacking four months. The father of our subject was reared on the old home farm and when starting out in life for himself, settled on a tract of land owned by his father, which was located one mile from the village, on which he made his home until a short time before his death, when he removed into the village. The mother of our subject bore the maiden name of Hannah Stocker, who was born in Springfield, Vt., and whose father was a Revolutionary soldier, having participated in the battle of Bunker Hill and was present at the surrender of Cornwallis. Our subject removed to Winnebago County, where he was among the early settlers. Mrs. Hannah Brown, his mother, died in Springfield, having borne her husband six children: Horace, Henry, Homer, Augusta, Abbie and Emily.

Henry Brown was reared in Springfield, Vt., and resided with his parents until reaching his twentieth year, when he removed to Lausingburg, N. Y., and engaged in the manufacture of oilcloth. In 1849, he came to Roekford by way of the Lakes to Chicago and overland to this city. After spending a few months here, he returned to the Empire State and was again engaged in the manufacture of oilcloth at Lausingburg. In 1869, however, he made permanent settlement in Rockford, where, as before stated, he conducted a livery stable for ten years.

In December, 1819, Miss Ellen Brooks, who was born in Lausingburg, N. Y., became the wife of our subject. To them have been born two sons, Harry W. and Howard B. The former married Fannie Gaskett and is the father of three children: Clara, deceased, Chessic and Sarah A.

UTHER LAWRENCE. The family to which this gentleman belonged traces its ancestry to Sir Robert Lawrence, of Ashton Hall, who was knighted about 1190. John Lawrence, of Suffolk, England, came to America in 1635, settled in Watertown, Mass., and died at Groton, in 1667. A descendant of that gentleman in the eighth generation, Luther Lawrence was born at Groton, Mass., July 29, 1812. He was reared on his father's farm, and after having acquired his education in the district and village schools, learned the trade of a miller, which he followed for several years with success.

In company with six young men, Mr. Lawrence left Groton October 26, 1837, for the new West. The journey was slowly made, the first part being by stage and railway; then passing through the Erie Canal, they finally resorted to horses and wagon, and lastly to ox-teams as they neared their Western goal. Our subject reached his destination amid the same difficulties experienced by the men and women who often left peaceful homes to become the brave pioneers of Illinois. He had heard of the far-famed beautiful valley of Rock River, and forthwith set to work with youthful ambition and manly integrity to aid in the start of one of the most fertile and prosperous countries the world possesses. Sufficient wealth crowned his effortsthe result of success in business. No notable event or grand achievement occurred to give special tone to his life, as he was one of the few who never eraved public office. He gave generously of his means for the support of every good cause in a Christian way, and in his home was courteous and most hospitable.

It cannot be said of Mr. Lawrence that he was a hero worshipper, although he cherished a sincere admiration for true, manly worth in all men, and, in short, was a good friend, and at the same time a strong enemy to self-conceit. The last years of his life were spent in the village where he died, and in the house he built nearly a half-century ago. This structure of stone, the first of any consequence in the village at that time, was considered quite "recherche." The facilities for transporting building material being somewhat limited, it became necessary to employ a local mechanic to make by hand the various parts of the house—the blinds, mouldings, stair-rails, etc.—all of which were neatly executed in a praiseworthy manner.

Of the personal characteristics of Mr. Lawrence, one deserves special mention: he had a tenacious memory, and late in life was never more at ease than when exploring the halls of memory, recalling events iong past, and dwelling on genealogies with guarded care. Perhaps his chief fault was in living over the past. Shortly before his death, he remarked to a friend: "The outlook of the new countries, Alaska and Africa, of which I have been reading, is most promising, but of their possibilities and probabilities, we may only judge by the past; that we absolutely know. We may safely predict for them, by comparison with the wonderful progress our own country has made."

In politics, Mr. Lawrence was always a Republican; his first vote, in 1833, was for Andrew Jackson, the last one he heartily gave for Benjamin Harrison. His love of nature was somewhat unsual, and through nature he would moralize and prophesy to his nearest friends. He was an earnest member of the Congregational Church, which he joined in early manhood.

The friends of Mr. Lawrence who cherish his memory will welcome his portrait, which appears on an accompanying page.

LEXANDER JOHNSON, Superintendent of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company, was born on the 24th of December, 1839, in Sweden, where his parents spent their entire lives. His father, Johanns L. Johnson, was a cabinet-maker by trade, and died at the ripe old age of eighty-four years, in the faith of the Lutheran Church, of which he was long a member. His wife, who was born in 1807, is still living and is also a member of the Lutheran Church. Three members of the family reside in this country: our subject; Frank, a cabinet-maker by trade, who is married and works in the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company, and Carrie, wife of C. J. Johnson, who is also an employe of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company.

No event of special importance occurred during the childhood of our subject which was passed in his native land, where he learned the trade of a cabinet-maker. He was the first of the family to come to the United States, sailing from Gottenburg in May, 1869. He landed at New York City and after his arrival in America learned the machinist's trade, becoming a practical and efficient workman in that direction. He possesses much mechanical skill, is a man of good judgment and executive ability and is physically very strong. For a time after locating in Rockford, he worked at his trade but for the past nine years has been Superintendent of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Company. He was one of the criginal stockholders and organizers of this company, which began business in 1882. They now employ about two hundred men and do a large and constantly increasing business, theirs being one of the leading industries of the city. Mr. Johnson is also a stockholder in the Union Furniture Company and in the Mantel and Furniture Company.

The wife of our subject bore the maiden name of Miss Clara Johnson. She too was born and reared in Sweden and her parents there spent their entire lives. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are members of the Mission Lutheran Church. Their union has been blessed with seven children and the family circle yet remains unbroken. In order of birth, they are as follows: Tilla, Elmer, Enoch, Anna, Cora, Eli and Florence, all of whom are still under the parental roof.

Mr. Johnson is a self-made man. Although now one of the prosperous citizens of Rockford, he came here empty-handed, but his industrious and enterprising efforts in the legitimate pursuit of his business has won him a well-merited success. He takes an active interest in all that pertains to the growth and upbuilding of the city and gives his support and co-operation to those enterprises calculated to prove of public benefit. Public-spirited and progressive, he is one of the valued residents of Rockford and holds a high rank among his fellow countrymen.

HARLES F. TRITLE, editor and proprietor of the Reflector, at Winnelago, is a native of this county, having been born in the town of Seward, June 19, 1865. His father, Franklin Clay Tritle, is a native of Philadelphia, Pa., and the son of Daniel and Mary Tritle, also natives of the Keystone State. There the father of our subject was reared, and when twenty-five years of age eame West and after spending some time in travel, finally located in Rockford.

The lady to whom Franklin C. Tritle was married in 1858 bore the name of Caroline Faulkner. After their marriage, the young couple lived in Rockford, where they were classed among the respected and honored citizens. Mrs. Caroline Tritle was born in Marston, Bedfordshire, England, August 10, 1832 and is the daughter of John Faulkner, a native of that shire, whence he came to America in 1845. The trip across the Atlantic was made on the sailer "Eleanor," which landed its passengers at New York after a voyage of eleven weeks and three days. After a stay there of six weeks, Mr. Faulkner went to South Middletown, Orange County, that State, and in August, 1846, came to Illinois, where he remained at Chicago for two months and then removed to Rockford on the 20th of November. For four years, he was employed at various kinds of work, when he removed to what is now Seward Township, and purchased land warrants of the Mexican soldiers, which cost him $1 per aere. There the father of Mrs. Tritle improved and resided upon his land until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Two; she also hailed from Bedfordshire, and died at the home of her daughter in Winnebago. The grandparents reared seven children: John, Mary, Joseph, George, Rachel, Samuel and Caroline.

Charles F. Tritle of this sketch was a lad of ten years when taking up his abode in Winnebago. Here he attended the district school and for a time was employed as a clerk in the different stores in the place. In 1887, a stock company was formed and opening a printing-office established the Reflector. Our subject was appointed business manager of the concern and for the past three years has had sole charge of the establishment and, if we may judge from the circulation and reading matter of the paper, is making a success of his undertaking. In political matters, he votes the Republican ticket and for three years served his fellowtownsmen as Justice of the Peace and for a like period was Mayor of the village. He is at the present time Secretary of the Winnebago Memorial Society and was appointed Notary Public by Gov. Fifer.

ETER H. PALMER, Vice-President, stockholder and one of the directors of the Standard Furniture Company of Rockford, was born April 25, 1861, in Wester Gothland, Sweden, and is a son of Andrew and Nellie (Bowman) Palmer, who are now residents of Rockford, as is their daughter and all of their five sons. Our subject is the eldest of the family; Paul F., the next in order of birth, is now married and works for the Standard Furniture Company; John E. is in the employ of the same company; Aaron J. is engaged with the Rockford Electric Manufacturing Company; Carrie D. and Simon E. are still at home.

Under the parental roof, our subject spent the days of his childhood, no event of special importance occurring during that time. On attaining his majority, he determined to seek a home in the New World, where he believed better opportunities were afforded young men, and on the 15th of April, 1881, he sailed from Gottenburg, landing at Boston three weeks later. Since that time, all the family have come to this country. He learned the cabinet-maker's trade and became a skilled workman, being employed for some seven years by the Union Furniture Company of this city, his long-continued service giving proof of his faithfulness and prompt discharge of duty. Since that time, he has been connected with the Standard

Furniture Company, one of the leading industries of the city, which was established in 1887, and is now doing an excellent business, furnishing employment to some two hundred men. He is both Vice-President and Superintendent, having held the latter position for three years and the former for two years.

The marriage of Mr. Palmer and Miss Amanda O. Swansen was celebrated in this city. The lady was born in Sweden, near the old home of her husband, in October, 1862, and when a young lady of twenty summers crossed the broad Atlantic to America in 1882, since which time she has resided in Rockford and Belvidere, Ill. Both of her parents died in Sweden. One sister, Emma, is now the wife of John C. Osburg, who is in the employ of the Mechanics' Furniture Company, of this city. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Palmer has been blessed with one daughter, Rachel.

This worthy couple hold membership with the Swedish Baptist Church, in which our subject served as a trustee. He is independent in politics, voting for the man whom he thinks best qualified to fill the office, regardless of party atilitations. He has devoted his entire energies to his business since 1887, and the result of his efforts is shown in the success with which the business has been earried on. Mr. Palmer is one of the well-known Swedish residents of Rockford and, although his residence here is of comparatively short duration, he has already made many warm friends, who esteem him highly for his sterling worth and upright life.

ILS J. HANSON, one of the mail carriers of Rockford, was born in Southern Sweden, June 10, 1853, and the days of his boyhood and youth were spent in the usual manner of farmer lads. His parents were Hans and Mattie (Hockinson) Johnson. The father was born on the 17th of November, 1819, and now lives with his son Andrew in this city. His wife died in Sweden in 1869, at the age of forty-nine years. Like him, she was a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church. The first of the family to cross the Atlantic was Andrew, before mentioned. Two sisters are also living in Rockford: Hannah, wife of J. M. Manson, who is employed by the Union Tea Company; and Alice, wife of Peter Nelson, a farmer of Boone County. One brother, Martin, died in Wichita, Kan., at the age of twenty-five.

On the 3d of May, 1872, at the age of nineteen, Mr. Hanson bade good-bye to his old home and sailed for the New World. He landed in Quebec, Canada, whence he came at once to this city. On the 2d of December, 1875, he was united in mariage to Miss Clara S. Bengtson, who was born in Sweden in the year 1850, and came to this country in 1870. She has since resided in Rockford with the exception of one year spent in Chicago. Her father, Andrew Bengtson, had previously come to the United States, and his death occurred in October, 1886, at the age of sixty-two. His wife is still living with her sons at the age of seventy-three.

When Mr. Hanson came to America, he was not only empty handed, but was $40 in debt for his passage. He came on to Rockford in 1872, and began to earn his livelihood as a day laborer. For some time, he worked near Rockford, but his industry and enterprise soon made it possible for him to engage in business for himself, and for ten years he was a leading grocer of this city. For six years, he was also engaged in the manufacture of furniture and met with excellent success in that venture. He also organized the Skandia Coal Company, which has been a decided success. For some years, he engaged in business on Seventh Street and built what is known as the Hanson Block, at No. 701 Seventh Street, a large three-story building with store rooms beneath and flats above. During the administration of President Harrison, he has served as one of the city postal deliverers. Great credit is due Mr. Hanson for his success in life. The obstacles and difficulties in his way he overcame by persistent effort, and has arisen by his own merit to a position of which he may well be proud. He is a prominent Swedish gentleman of this community and well deserves representation in the history of his adopted county.

In politics, Mr. Hanson is a Republican, a stalwart advocate of party principles, and, socially, he is a Master Mason. He and his wife are leading Swedish people. They have had a family of six children, but Alice died at the age of six years. The living are: Nellie C., Oscar W., Julian N., George A. and Leona E.

NDREW J. ANDERSON, a real-estate loan and insurance agent and Notary Public, claims the honor of being a native of Rockford. He was born in this city, June 7, 1862, and is of Swedish descent. His father, Jonas R. Anderson, a native of Rydaholm, Sweden, grew to manhood in that country, and while a young man sailed for America, in 1854, landing in New York City after a voyage of six weeks. By way of the Hudson River and Canal he went to Buffalo, and thence by the Lakes to Chicago, and on to Geneva, Ill., where he resided for some months. Subsequently he came to Winnebago County, and turned his attention to farming. He was then in limited circumstances. terward came to Rockford, learned the trade of a blacksmith, and secured the position of foreman in the shops of F. H. Manney, which position he filled for seventeen years. He later aided in the organization of, and became a stockholder in, the Central Furniture Company, and for some years has been one of its Directors. He is now living a retired life at No. 906 Kishwaukee Street, at about the age of sixty years. In politics, he is a stalwart supporter of Republican principles.

Jonas Anderson was married in this city to Miss Helen Stockenburg, also a native of Sweden. When a young lady, she came to this country with friends in 1856, and resided in Rockford until her marriage. By this union were born five children, but Jennie died at the age of eighteen years, and Olivia died in infancy. Those who still survive are Marie, wife of A. J. Enstam, a Lutheran clergyman of Minneapolis; Andrew J., of this sketch; and Amanda, who was for some years a dry-goods clerk, and now owns an interest in a store in Wakefield, Neb. The family are all members of the Lutheran Church.

JAMES H. BONNEY

We now take up the personal history of our subject, who has spent his entire life in this city, acquiring his education in the public schools and the Rockford Business College. He is a young man of excellent ability and good habits, temperate and upright in all things. Soon after starting out in life for himself, he became connected with the Rockford Watch Company, becoming employed in the motion mechanical department, where he remained for some years. In 1881, the Excelsion Furniture Company was organized with a capital of $50,000, and for eight years Mr. Anderson was its Secretary and Treasurer as well as a stockholder and Director. He yet holds stock in the company, but gives the greater part of his time and attention to the real-estate business. In 1890, he opened an office at No. 421 East State Street, as a realestate, loan and insurance agent, and is doing an excellent business. His success is assured, for he possesses the qualities essential to a successful career, and his course already has a bright outlook for the future. Those who have known Mr. Anderson from his boyhood, know him to be a young man of sterling worth, deserving of the confidence and respect of all, and his best friends are among his oldest acquaintances, a fact of which he may well be proud. At present he is Alderman from the Second Ward, having just been re-elected to that position. In his political affiliations he is a Republican.

AMES II. BONNEY. For twenty-five years prior to his death, the original of the portrait on the opposite page resided in Rockford, where he was known as a quiet, unobtrusive and upright citizen. He was born in Massachusetts, November 16, 1812, and died in Rockford, March 25, 1891, aged seventy-eight years, four months and nine days. To the last he retained considerable activity and mingled with the business men of the Forest City, attending to his financial affairs, which consisted mainly in loaning money.

Harvey Bonney, father of our subject, was born in the Bay–State, September 23, 1786, and died September 26, 1850. His wife, whose maiden name was Hannah Fish, was born May 22, 1790, and died October 1, 1871. Their family consisted of twelve children, nine sons and three daughters, all of whom attained to mature years and still survive, excepting two. Enos T., who was born November 25, 1834, died in Galveston, Tex., shortly after the close of the Civil War, in which he had been an active participant as surgeon. His only son, Evans, now makes his home in Hattiesburg, Miss. Charles W. died in Osccola, Iowa, at the age of sixty-one years.

The surviving members of the parental family are as follows: A. Il., who was born December 1, 1808, and now resides in Farmington, Me., a retired merchant, vigorous in mind and body; Sarah A., born October 27, 1810, now of Portage, Wis.; our subject: Hannah, Mrs. Snow, born December 27, 1814, and now residing at Cambridgeport, Mass.; Hiram B., born April 22, 1817, and at present living in Missouri; Emily B., Mrs. Prentice, born April 24, 1819, a resident of Portage, Wis.; Dr. Stephen F., born April 5, 1821, now practicing his profession at Taylor, Mo.; William L., born September 27, 1823, and a resident of Boston; Dr. Joel W., born February 23, 1826, and a leading physician of Quincy, Ill.; and Perez F., born March 14, 1828, now in Cambridge, Mass.

Although a native of Massachusetts, Mr. Bonney received his education mostly in Maine, where he learned the carpenter's trade of his father and followed that occupation during the summer seasons while he taught school in the winter. At the age of twenty-three, he went to Boston and a few years later proceeded South; from there he returned North to Illinois and remained at Quiney for a time. Afterward he resided for a time in Davenport, Iowa, where he married Miss Sarah Ann Parker, who died two years after their union, leaving an infant daughter, now Mrs. James H. Winn, of Rockford.

After residing for a short time in Galena, Ill., Mr. Bonney returned to Maine, and there was married to Miss Betsey Sylvester, who survives him, residing in the old home at No. 204 South West Street. In 1816, Mr. Bonney settled on a farm in Wisconsin, where he remained some twenty years and became closely identified with local and State affairs. At the breaking out of the Civil War, he was a member of the legislature and he also served as Chairman of the Board of Supervisors. When he came to Rockford, he made his home on Avon Street for two years and later purchased the property which his widow still owns. He was one of the organizers of the Burial Case Company, in which he was a stockholder and Director and also served as President for a time. Generous and kind, ready to bear his part in the church of his choice—the Congregational—active in support of the Republican party in his early life and later a strong Prohibitionist, a man of wide travel, having visited almost every State in the Union, it is not strange that at his death he was widely and sincerely mourned.

ILLIAM THRONE, deceased, was one of the prominent early settlers of Winnebago County, where he located in 1836. He was a native of County Derry, Ireland, and a son of John Throne, also a native of the Emerald Isle. The grandfather, William Throne, was born in that country, and was a descendant of one of three brothers who went to Ireland with William the Prince of Orange. He followed farming throughout his entire life, and was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

The father of our subject never left his native land. He wedded Rebecca Stephenson, and she spent her entire life in County Derry, the place of her birth. Both were members of the Presbyterian Church, and in that faith they reared their family. Five of their children came to America: William, Margaret, Robert, John and James.

The subject of this sketch acquired his education in the public schools, and spent the days of his boyhood and youth in the land of his nativity. At the age of twenty, he crossed the broad Atlantic, and the vessel in which he sailed was wreeked, the passengers being detained on an island for two weeks. For some time he resided in Lower Canada, the year 1836 witnessing his arrival in Illinois. He became one of the first settlers of Harlem Township, Winnebago County, and securing a tract of Government land on section 36, erected a log cabin, in which he and his bride began their domestic life. He was an industrious and enterprising man, and to the occupation of farming successfully devoted his energies until called to his final rest on the 27th of December, 1880.

Mr. Throne was married, January 30, 1847, to Elizabeth J. Jack, who was born in Canada in 1826, and is a daughter of James Jack, a native of County Tyrone, Ireland. His father, Archibald Jack, was born in the same county, and throughout his entire life there followed the occupation of farming. James Jack crossed the Atlantic to America about 1835, and in Canada made his home for twenty years, when he came to Illinois, traveling by team to Montreal, and thence by the Lakes to Milwaukee, where he procured a lumber wagon and thence journeyed to Beloit, Wis. About three miles east of that place, he bought a tract of land and engaged in farming. He was one of the pioneer settlers of that region, and was a prominent and highly respected citizen. Upon his farm he resided until his death. His wife, Elizabeth Jack, was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, and died on the old homestead near Beloit. In the family were nine children, as follows: William, Rebecca, Sarah, Mary, Archibald, Elizabeth, James, Joseph and John.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Throne were born ten children, but only three are now living: William, Clarinda and Edward. John, who was born December 26, 1847, died October 7, 1860; Elizabeth, born April 4, 1849, died October 5, 1860; Mary Rosanah, born April 5, 1851, died November 10, 1860; Sarah M., born July 3, 1853, died October 19, 1860; Frances, born September 10, 1855, died October 5, 1860; Margaret F., born October 4, 1858, died April 27, 1887; and James M., born October 22, 1861, died on the 26th of August following.

Mr. Throne was a life-long member of the Presbyterian Church, and lived an upright and bonorable life, which won him the respect of all who knew him. He was an intelligent citizen, and a prosperous man, who by his own efforts acquired a handsome competence. He left to his family one of the most highly improved farms in the county. Mrs. Throne has also long been a member of the Presbyterian Church, and her daughter has united with the same organization. They are worthy people, highly respected in this community, and it is with pleasure that we present the record of their lives to our readers.

1LLIAM E. CANNIFORD. Many of the leading men of Winnebago County have been born across the Atlantic, as in the case of Mr. Canniford. His native place was Devonshire, England, and his natal day February 7, 1836. He is at the present time residing in Winnebago Village, engaged in the manufacture of pumps, windmills, etc., and is making a success of this line of work.

William Canniford, the father of our subject, is a native of Exeter, Devonshire, where the grandfather was also born and spent his entire life. The latter-named gentleman was a contractor on public works, and apprenticed his son, the father of our subject, to a farmer, when a lad of seven years. After reaching his majority, William Canniford was turned out into the world penniless, and with no education, having had to work on the farm both summer and winter. Being desirous of gaining an education, he secured books and taught himself. Later he filled the position of a teacher in his native shire for two years, and then going to Gloucester, taught in the National school at Ebrington for fourteen years. He was then appointed city missionary to Cheltenham and Bristol, which position he resigned and became conneeted with the Ratcliff Gaslight Company, of Wapping, London, as inspector of gas meters. He continued in the employ of that company for twenty-two years, when he was retired on half-pay for life, his decease occurring in 1888, when seventy-nine years of age.

The mother of our subject was known in her maidenhood as Elizabeth Every, also a native of Devonshire. Her father was a farmer, in addition to which he also kept a public house. Mrs. Canniford died in Bristol while her husband was engaged as a missionary. She reared three sons, of whom our subject was the oldest, the others being named John and Herman.

The father of our subject, appreciating the value of a knowledge of books, gave his children a good education, teaching them himself. Our subject at the age of fourteen was apprenticed to learn the trade of a carpenter and joiner. He served until he was twenty years and six months of age, when, being given the last six months of his time, he went to London, and was engaged in journeyman work until 1857. On Good Friday of that year, he set sail in the vessel "Pearl." commanded by Capt. Davids, and landed in Quebec eight weeks later. From that place he went to Ottawa, where he was engaged at his trade for two years, when he came to the States, and at Whitewater, Wis., worked at the carpenter's and joiner's trade until 1860.

Returning to London in the above-named year, our subject spent two years in his native place, and then accompanied by his bride, returned to America, and came immediately to Illinois, stopping for a time in Chicago. In May, 1863, he came to Rockford and devoted a part of his time to his trade until February, 1871, when he came to Winnebago, and engaged in his present business, that of making pumps. He ranks among the well-to-do upright and honest citizens of the county, always easting his influence on the side of progress and reform.

Mary A. Gardner became the wife of our subject at Shadwell Church, East London, in 1862. To them have been born three children: William J., Lizzie and Ada.

SAHEL HOWARD, deceased, was born in the town of Sherburne, Chenango County, N. Y., September 24, 1821, and was a son of John Howard, a native of Rhode Island, in which State the grandparents were also born. The latter removed to the Empire State, and were pioneers of Chenango County. John Howard was quite young when, with his parents, he went to New York. He was reared to manhood upon his father's farm, and followed that occupation in the town of Sherburne until 1826, when he removed with his family to Eaton, Madison County, and purchased a farm, which he occupied some years. On selling that place, he bought other land in the same township, and there made his home until the death of his wife, when he removed to the village of Oneida, and there remained until called to the home beyond.

Mr. Howard, whose name heads this sketch, was a lad of twelve years when he went with his parents to Madison County, N. Y. He there attained his majority, and on the 21th of January, 1848, was united in marriage to Lavina Sexton, who was born in Plymouth, Chenango County, December 9, 1820, and was a daughter of Pliny Sexton, a native of Connecticut. His father, George Sexton, was also born in Connecticut, but removed to the Empire State, where he spent the remainder of his life. Pliny Sexton was a young man when he went to New York. He was married in the town of Lebanon, Madison County, to Clarissa, daughter of Constant and Chloe (Bisbee) Crandall, and a native of Connecticut. They began their domestic life upon a farm in that locality, and there resided until called from this life.

Mr. Howard continued to engage in agricultural pursuits in the State of his nativity until 1850, when he came to Boone County, Ill., by way of the Eric Canal and the great Lakes to Detroit, then crossed Lake Michigan to Chicago, and from Elgin came with teams to Boone County. He had visited in this locality the year previous and purchased a tract of land in Flora Township, at $6.50 per acre, upon which was a small frame house. He was an enterprising farmer, successful in his business dealings, and placed all of his land under a high state of cultivation. He also erected good buildings, made other necessary improvements, and set out shade and ornamental trees, which added greatly to the value and attractive appearance of the place. He died on the old homestead May 11, 1890, respected by all who knew him.

The family continued to reside on the home farm until 1892, when they removed to Belvidere. Mrs. Howard has four children: Emory L., who married Laura M. King, lives in Iowa and has two daughters; Frank L., Addie and Gertrude are at home. Mrs. Howard is a consistent member of the Methodist Church, to which Mr. Howard also belonged. He took a great interest in the work of the Sunday-school, and did much for its advancement. In politics, he was a Republican from the formation of the party. The upright life which he lived is well worthy of emulation.

ZRO M. LA PORTE, an enterprising farmer residing on section 8, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, was born in Jefferson County, N. Y., April 10, 1833. His father, Nacis La Porte, was born in Toronto, Canada, there reared and educated, and learned the blacksmith's trade. He went to New York when a young man, and was there married to Minerva Gardner, who was a native of the Empire State, and a daughter of Silas Gardner, who was of English descent. He was a millwright, and removed from New York to Illinois in 1830, becoming one of the first settlers of Kane County. He improved a farm four miles west of Aurora, and there resided until his death. His wife was in her maidenhood Catherine Garner. She was born in the Mohawk Valley of New York, and died on the home farm in Kane County.

Mr. La Porte, father of our subject, followed his trade in New York until 1837, when he emigrated to this State by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and arrived at his destination after ten weeks. He bought a farm four miles west of Aurora, upon which he resided for nine years, and then removed to Paw Paw Township, De Kalb County, where he purchased land and followed farming until his death. His wife now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Minerva Faile, in De Kalb County.

Our subject was only four years of age, when, with his parents, he came to Illinois. He acquired his education in Kane and De Kalb Counties, and was reared amid the wild scenes of frontier life, sharing with the family in all its bardships and its experiences. He remained under the parental roof until twenty-two years of age, and then began life for himself in De Kalb County, working by the day and month. In 1857, he came to Winnebago County, and took up his residence in Guilford Township. A few years later he purchased the farm on which he now resides, and to its cultivation and improvement has since devoted his energies, being recognized as one of the leading and successful agriculturists of the community.

A marriage eeremony performed in 1858 united the destinies of Mr. La Porte and Elizabeth Benjamin, who was born in Orange County, N. Y., and is a daughter of John Benjamin, who, like his father, Silas Benjamin, was also a native of the Empire State. The former learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, and followed his chosen occupation in New York until 1835, when he removed to Canada. Three years later, he decided to try his fortune in Illinois, and coming to Winnebago County, purchased the farm on which his daughter is now living. He entered the land from the Government, buying it when it came into market. His first home was a log cabin, which he afterward replaced by a commodious frame residence which he made his home until his death in November, 1858. His wife bore the maiden name of Esther Mapes. She was born in Orange County, N. Y., and died on the home farm in 1856.

Since she was a very young maiden, Mrs. La Porte has resided upon the farm where she is now living, and has been an eye-witness of almost the entire growth and development of the county. Our subject and his wife have a pleasant home, and are highly respected in this community, where they have many warm friends.

LISHA C. DUNN, M. D. In the line of history, science, and religion, this gentleman possesses an inexhaustible fund of information, and, as a lecturer, has won a national fame. He has a practical knowledge of every country, its people, politics and religion, and has been a thorough student of languages, speaking several different tongues with fluency. A man of fine physique, with military carriage and genial face, he has a welcome grasp of the hand for his many friends, and is most companionable. It is our privilege and pleasure to present his portrait to our readers. Of recent years, he has given special attention to the study of the sagacity of the lower animals, particularly the horse and dog, and not long since edited a remarkable work, published by a Boston firm, entitled "The Sagacity of Dogs." The volume is beautifully illustrated, and is so arranged with attractive stories as to be a most popular juvenile work.

Now retired from the active duties of life, Dr. Dunn resides in his palatial home at No. 807 West State Street. This residence, which was erected by an architect from New York, is of an oriental design of architecture externally, with an interior Queen Anne finish, and is a model of elegance, fitted with the most complete modern improvements, such as steam-heating, gas and water accommodations. The parlor is finished in ebony and gold. and is furnished with light through double French plate glass windows. The octagon dining-room is finished in .walnut and cherry, and the windows are of opalized glass, while the other rooms contain all the conveniences desirable. The residence is a delightful combination of comfort and magnificence, and is an important addition to the architectural beauty of the Forest City.

The Doctor has made his home in Rockford since 1863, although many of the intermediate years have been spent either in the lecture field or in travel. He has lectured on scientific and political subjects, and on the human anatomy and diseases, and has addressed audiences as small as twelve persons (in Saugatuck, Mich.) and as large as five thousand people (in Prince Albert's Hall, London, England). He often relates in a bright and interesting manner, stories of his travels, which have extended into every habitable country of the globe, except the Arctic regions, and he has lectured in most of the large cities of the world. While abroad, he collected gems and precious stones, some of which, worth at least $9,000, were destroyed in a museum, in the great fire at Chicago. He has come in contact with many of the greatest minds of the world, and numbers among his friends many of the leading men of different kingdoms.

In social organizations, the Doctor has for years been very prominent. He is an Aide-de-Camp of the Supreme Commander, Gen. Carnahan, of the Knights of Pythias, and meets with the Order in their State and National conventions. He is also a Knight Templar, belonging to Crusader Commandery No. 17, and is well known to the members of State and National lodges. In the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, he takes an equal interest, and is a member of the Encampment at Rockford.

While visiting in Palestine, with the intention of collecting material to assist him in his lectures against religion, he became thoroughly convinced of the Divinity of the life of Christ, and has since been a consistent and faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He advocates Prohibition principles, and has never drunk liquors or used tobacco in any form. In his political belief, he adheres to the principles of the Republican party, and takes the stump in its behalf whenever necessary.

When seventeen years old and a wild, reckless lad, our subject was taken into the home of Dr. Peebles, whom he calls his benefactor, and was given a thorough education, being a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. He remembers his benefactor with an affection which will last as long as life itself, for he owes him a debt of gratitude which naught can efface. He was young when he began the study of medicine, and soon afterward was able to support himself, although he resided with Dr. Peebles for fifteen years. Although a native of New York, he spent only a few years of his life there, and has resided in Illinois during the most of his life.

In Marshall, Mich., the Doctor was united in marriage with Miss Carrie Etts, a native of the Empire State, and a member of a worthy family. Early in life, she displayed great ability as an artist, and has in later years executed some very fine pieces, which in style and coloring are far superior to the work of amateurs. Her work has received the commendation of the best artists, and her last effort, "Pythias Before the Block," a painting six feet by four feet and six inches, is valued at more than $1,000. She devotes much time to her artists studies, and is a lady of dignity of presence and noble character. Dr. and Mrs. Dunn are the parents of two children. Aeola, wife of Richard Hamlyn, resides in Rockford, where her husband is a member of the firm of Hamlyn & Bingham, in the meat-market business. James married Emma Patterson, and resides in Rockford.

ALLIAM UTTON, the owner of one hundred and thirty acres of fine farming land near Manchester, Ill., is entitled to a prominent place in this history, for he has been usefully and honorably identified with the interests of this county, and with its advancement in every worthy particular. He was born in England, in the town of Gissleham, Suffolk County, in the year 1821, and his father, John Utton, as well as his grandfather, John Utton, Sr., were natives of that country also. Both father and grandfather followed agricultural pursuits for a livelihood.

When twenty-two years of age, our subject was led by the prospects of the Western prairies of this country to cross the ocean to the United States. He took passage at Liverpool on the sailing-vessel in Rusush, "commanded by Capt. Eldridge, who was afterward on the steamer "Pacific," which was lost at sea. Our subject's brother-in-law, John Balls, who was assistant engineer on that vessel, was lost at that time. William Utton was five weeks in crossing the ocean but at the end of that time landed safely in the city of New York. He had very little means to assist him, and going to Geneva, of that State, he worked for a wealthy gentleman, Dr. G. L. Rose, whose farm he carried on.

In April, 1851, our subject was married, in the city of Geneva, to Miss Hannah Balls, of the same place. Her parents, Samuel and Jemima (Auldis) Balls, were both natives of England, and in that country the mother passed away. Mr. Balls then brought his family to America (this was about 1841), and followed farming on the Hudson River for two years. In 1855, he came to Manchester and bought sixty acres of land and resided on the same for many years. His death occurred in Michigan, in 1882, leaving a wife and three children. Mr. I'tton lost his wife on the 17th of January, 1892, when in her seventy-first year. She was a most excellent lady, and her death was a severe blow to her afflicted husband and devoted children. They were the parents of two children: Mary Jane, who married John Grout, is deceased; the son, William S. Utton, married Mrs. Hannah North, nee McNally, of Illinois, and is now engaged in carrying on the farm for his father, who is crippled with rheumatism.

On first coming here, in 1855, our subject bought one hundred acres of land, with but very few improvements, and for this paid $12 per acre. He has since added to the original tract thirty acres, for which he paid $1,000, and now has one of the finest farms in his section. He is engaged in general farming, raises all the cereals and is also engaged to some extent in raising stock. He built his present fine, substantial residence in 1862, and in 1866 he erected a good barn, and another in 1872. He is an enterprising, progressive, well-todo farmer, who is respected by the community at large. He has served the town as pathmaster and also as School Director, and is well qualified to fill any of the township offices. He votes the Repubhean ticket, and is a member of the Anti-Horse Thief Association. He is an attendant of the Episcopal Church and his wife held membership in this church.

OBERT B. COLEMAN. Probably few of the enterprising farmers and merchants of Winnebago County have met with more uniform success in their business undertakings than this gentleman who is now living in retirement at Pecatonica. For thirty years a general merchant, the inception of his business during the early history of the village was marked by success, which constantly increased with the progress of the community and the increase in number of its inhabitants.

Mr. Coleman was born in Chester Township, Morris County, N. J., December 22, 1824, and is the son of Jabish and Sarah (Bunn) Coleman. His father was born on Long Island and came to this county in October, 1839, entering land with his son at Dixon and remaining on the farm thus purchased until he died, at the age of seventy-live. Mrs. Sarah Coleman, who was a native of New Jersey, was a daughter of John Bunn, who came from Germany to this country when quite young and entered the army during the Revolutionary War, serving until its close and receiving a pension on account of a wound received in the hand; he died at the age of ninety. The mother of our subject attained to the venerable age of nearly ninety-live years, when she passed away at the home of a daughter in Hancock, Hl. Her family included five children, three of whom are living at this writing (1892).

When his father sought a home in Northern Illinois in 1839, our subject accompanied him hither, and for three years thereafter carried mail on what was known as the Rockton & Sayanna route. His journey to this State was made overland with a team from New Jersey to Wellsville, Ohio, thence by steamboat down the Ohio and up the Mississippi River to St. Louis, thence to Galena, where a team was hired at $5 per day to convey the family to Winnebago County. In that early day, Chicago and Mineral Point, Wis., were the principal markets for produce, and journeys to those places were frequently taken. It was by no means easy to exchange grain and vegetables for good cash, and the mining towns were the best places to go for this purpose, as gold and silver could be there procured.

The wife of our subject was known in her maidenhood as Miss Emily F. Thompson, and was born near Hudson, Ohio, in 1828, and died in Pecatonica March 25, 1878. Her parents, J. W. and Emily (Mills) Thompson, were pioneers of Winnebago County, and died at the home of Capt. A. W. Thompson when about ninety years old. They were the parents of eleven children, six of whom now survive. Mr. and Mrs. Coleman had three children, but one alone survives—Lizzie, who was born in 1860; she married Joseph Wright and has one daughter, named Berdena.

After his marriage, Mr. Coleman resided on the land which he entered from the Government and continued to devote his attention to its improvement until 1856, when he removed to Pecatonica and, buying a stock of goods, entered the mercantile business. He continued thus engaged with marked success until a number of years ago, when he disposed of his store and retired from active business interests. Formerly, he was an extensive property owner, but at present has sold all his landed possessions, excepting one and one-half section in Missouri, his home in Pecatonica, and several other lots in this thriving village. In his social connection, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the A. W. Rawson Lodge, F. & A. M.

IMEON SPENCER, after many years spent in agricultural pursuits, is now living a retired life in Belvidere, enjoying the rest which he has so truly earned and richly deserves. He was born in Greene, Chenango County, N. Y., on the 1st of August, 1840, and is a son of Darius and Annie (Walker) Spencer, both of whom were natives of Chenango County. The grandfather, Jesse Spencer, was a native of New England, and became one of the early settlers of the town of Greene, where he spent his last years en-The father of our subject was gaged in farming. reared in the usual manner of farmer lads, and made his home in the Empire State until 1843, when, with his wife and four children, he cmigrated Westward to Illinois, making the entire journey overland. They traveled for six weeks, and at length reached Boone County. Mr. Spencer secured a tract of land near Marengo and afterwards traded it for a tract of land in Belvidere Township, of which seventy-five acres had been broken, while a log house constituted the improvements thereon. Into this the family moved, but the eabin home was afterwards replaced by a substantial frame residence, wherein Mr. Spencer continued to reside until his death in August, 1878. His wife long preceded him, having departed this life March 18, 1847. She reared a family of six children, as follows: Louisa, Lorenzo, Sylvester, Simeon, Cyrenus and Cyrena. The two last named are twins.

Our subject spent the first five years of his life in the State of his nativity, and was then brought by his parents across the country to Illinois. He was reared amid the wild scenes of frontier life, sharing with the family in the hardships and trials of the pioneer, and also experiencing the pleasures of those days. He conned his lessons in the log school house, furnished in a primitive manner, and when his time was not occupied in this way, assisted his father in the cuitivation and improvement of the farm. He remained with his parents until their death, and then continued to operate the old homestead for two years, when he sold and purchased a place in Bonus Township, three miles east of the city. Upon that farm he continued to reside until 1888, when he sold and has since been a resident of Belvidere.

A marriage ecremony, performed January 27, 1862, united the destinies of Mr. Spencer and Miss Helen, daughter of John and Caroline (Barton) Powell, who were natives of the Empire State, and came to Illinois in 1847. The lady was born in Oswego County, N. Y., and has two children: Leonice is now the wife of Charles Bruce and they have two children: Zora and Elmer. Jesse is still with his parents.

Mr. Spencer cast his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has since been an advoca'e of Republican principles. However, he has never sought or desired public office, preferring to devote his entire attention to his business interests, in which he has met with signal success. He has worked his way upward from an humble position to one of affluence, and is now numbered among the substantial citizens of the community.

ENRY E. HARRIS, the present popular Postmaster of Durand, is well and favorably known in this county, as he was born November 27, 1842, in the village where he makes his home. He is a son of Elisha and Calista C. (Robb) Harris, the former of whom was born in Chenango County, N. Y., July 19, 1817. He was a son of Joseph and Julia Harris, natives of Connecticut.

The father of our subject, in 1837, came to Illinois and purchased a claim to a tract of land in what is now Durand Township, Winnebago County. His marriage occurred in 1842, and with his wife he continued to reside for a number of years on the farm which he improved with all the necessary farm buildings and machinery, and which included one hundred and forty-five acres. Mrs. Harris died in 1885, and a few years later her husband retired from active life and is now residing in Durand with his second wife.

The parents of our subject reared a family of ten children, of whom Henry E. is the eldest. Erastus P., during the late war, became a member of Company H, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, and died while in the service at Murfreesboro, Tenn. in March, 1863; William Eugene resides in Greenwood County, Kan., where also Lewis F. makes his home. Julia departed this life in November, 1869, when in her eighteenth year; Charles is residing in Durand; Joseph Scott departed this life February 2, 1892, when thirty-four years of age; Willis S. makes his home in Syeamore, this State; Elmer E. occupies the old homestead and Jesse F. is a teacher in the schools of Durand.

Henry E. Harris had his birth in the old log house on the home farm, and attended the best schools which the country district afforded. He was prepared to enter an academy at the outbreak of the Civil War, but on August 10, 1861, became a member of Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry, and with his regiment was sent to Bird's Point, Mo. He participated in the following important battles: Port Henry, Ft. Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Jackson (Tenn.), Paducah, and was on the expedition with Grant to Coffeeville, Miss. Thence he returned to Memphis and camped at Lake Providence, La., as a member of the Seventeenth Army Corps, and in August, 1864, was mustered out of service. He was very fortunate, and only received one wound during his entire service.

At the close of the war, Mr. Harris returned to Durand and continued his occupation of a farmer for three years. Then, on account of ill-health, worked at the carpenter's trade until 1889, when he received his present appointment. The lady to whom he was married, December 29, 1864, was Miss Ann C., daughter of George Fritz. She is also a native of this township, and by her union with our subject became the mother of four children: Frederick, Lewis, Raymond and Lillian.

Our subject has always been deeply interested in politics, and on the Republican ticket has been elected to fill many of the local offices. Socially, he is a member of Durand Lodge No. 302, A. F. & A. M., and Ellis Post No. 320, G. A. R. His maternal grandfather, Scott Robb, came to Hlinois in 1836, and located in Durand, where he died.

ALVIN WELTY. Among the many beautiful farms for which Winnebago County is so justly celebrated, conspicuous mention belongs to the estate of Mr. Welty, which is located on section 19, Guilford Township. It combines all the pleasures to be derived from rural life and surroundings with the advantages of city life, for it is only two miles distant from the courthouse, and its value is considerably enhanced by its proximity to the thriving city of Rockford.

One of the pioneers of Winnebago County was the father of our subject, John Welty, who was born in Frederick, Md. He was the son of Jacob Welty, who, so far as is known, was born in Maryland and followed the trade of a miller in his native State, Pennsylvania, and New York. Coming to Illinois about 1845, he located in Du Page County, where he engaged in farming until his death at an advanced age. The father of our subject was about twelve years old when he accompanied his parents to Pennsylvania, where he grew to manhood and was married. He came to Illinois in 1811, locating in Cherry Valley Township, and purchasing a farm where he remained until 1872. His next removal was to Rockford, where the closing days of his life were passed.

The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Leinheart, was born in Switzerland, and came to America with her parents when she was seven years old. She now resides in Rockford, and at the age of eighty-two still enjoys good health as well as the full possession of her mental faculties. Her children were as follows: Mary, who died at the age of twenty-nine; Elizabeth:

Calvin, of this sketch; Timothy, who died when ten years old; Jefferson; Erastus, who passed from earth when twenty-four. Sarah and Alsetta died at the ages of twenty-six and twenty-three, respectively.

Calvin Welty was born in the town of Liberty. Tioga County, N. Y., December 2, 1836. He was fifteen years old when he came to Illinois with his parents, and he remembers well the incidents of pioneer life in this section of the State. October 1, 1861, he enlisted in Company L, Eighth Illinois Cavalry, serving until the close of the war, and with his regiment participating in the following battles: Fair Oaks, Turkey Creek, Malvern Hills, Poolsville, Barnstown, Catoilin Pass, Middletown, South Mountain, Antietam and Martinsburg. In the last-named engagement he was captured by the enemy, but was at once parolled and sent to Annapolis, Md., thence to Parole Camp, at Springfield, where he was granted a furlough of twenty days. He then returned to the parole camp and remained there until exchanged.

After his exchange, Mr. Welty was an active participant in the following battles: Beverly Ford, Kelly's Ford, Rapidan Station, second battle of Beverly Ford, Upperville, Fairfield, Gettysburg, Williamsport, Boonesboro, Funkstown, Falling Waters, Chester Gap, Culpeper, Madison Court House, Raccoon Ford, Stevenburg, Brandy Station, Bull Run, Beattown Station and Hazel River. In January, 1861, he veteranized and was granted a furlough of thirty days, at the end of which time he returned with his regiment to Washington. After doing garrison duty there some time, they were sent in pursuit of Moseby's band of guerrillas, captured a portion of them and drove the others out of Maryland, where they remained doing garrison duty until after the assassination of President Lincoln. They were then sent in pursuit of Booth, and after his capture they returned to Maryland. and shortly afterward were sent to St. Louis, where they were mustered out of service. They were honorably discharged in Chicago in 1865.

Soon after his return from the war, Mr. Welty purchased a farm in Monroe Township, Ogle County, and resided there until 1876, when he sold it and purchased the place he now owns and occupies. After engaging in general farming for four years, he embarked in the dairy business, which he has since successfully followed. In 1867, he was united in marriage with Trocelia, daughter of Robert Dawson, and a native of Belvidere, Ill. They are the parents of four children: Grace D., Genevieve L., John R. and James E. Mrs. Welty is a prominent member of the State Street Baptist Church, and a lady of refinement and kindliness of heart. Mr. Welty is identified with Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and, in his political sympathies, is a firm Republican.

ANIEL B. REDINGTON. It is said of the subject of this notice that he has been one of the most useful men in the community. He has certainly been very active and industrious and maintained a uniform interest in the welfare and advancement of his township, and at the present time occupies the honorable position of Supervisor of Rockford Township, Winnebago County, where he was born July 21, 1814.

Henry P. Redington, the father of our subject, was one of the early settlers in this county, where he watched with interest the growth and development of this section and where his name is held in kindly remembrance. He was born in Keene, Christian County, N. II., and was a son of Isaac Redington, who, as far as is known, was also a native of that place, where he was engaged for a number of years in the mercantile business and spent his last years. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Dana.

The father of our subject was reared and educated in his native town, where he resided until 1836, at which time he came to Illinois, which was then considered the Far West. He arrived in Rockford in September of the above-named year, when most of the surrounding country was owned by the Government. He, however, made a claim to a tract of land in the northern part of Rockford Township, and, as he was a single man, kept "batch" with Ephraim Wyman. When finally making a permanent location, he settled upon the farm which is now the property of our subject, where he erected a small frame house which later gave way to a comfortable farm residence. There he made his home until his decease, which occurred August 21, 1887.

The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Jerusha Bradford, who was married to Mr. Redington in Rockford in 1838. She was born in Keene, N. H., and was a daughter of William Bradford. Her death occurred in California, whither she had gone in 1879, in search of health. The parental family included five children: Caroline D., who died in her twentieth year; Charles H., who is Paymaster on the Southern Pacific R diroad; Daniel B., our subject; Louisa, the widow of S. S. Montague, of Oakland, Cal.; and Sarah, Mrs. M. T. Morse, of Leominster, Mass.

The original of this sketch in his youth attended the district school, and when old enough assisted his father in performing the duties of the farm. He remained with his parents until 1864, when, June 23 of that year, he enlisted in Company M, Eighth Illinois Cavalry, and in August was sent to Washington and saw service in the District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia, until the close of hostilities. He was honorably discharged in June, 1865, and, returning home, resumed farming on the old homestead which he now owns and occupies and which is pleasantly located four miles northwest of Rockford. He has added to his acreage from time to time, until he is now the possessor of an estate including three hundred and six cultivated acres.

Miss Louisa Steward became the wife of our subject in 1871. She is a native of Owen Township, Winnebago County, and is the daughter of William and Sophia (Long) Steward. To them have been born two children: Alice and Leta. Our subject and his worthy wife are influential members of the Christian Union Church, and, socially, Mr. Redington is connected with Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R. He is also a member of Farmers' Lodge No. 616, M. W. A. He votes the straight Republican ticket, and, in 1888, was elected Supervisor of his township, which position he now holds. He is a very prominent business man and is Director of the Forest City National Bank. In the early days when his father first came to this county, all the letters addressed to the people of this section were sent to Chicago. It was through such efforts as those put forth by the elder Mr. Redington that this section was transformed from its original drearmess to its present prosperous condition.

ILLARD CONVERS, one of the pioneer settlers of Guilford Township, Winnebago County, residing on section 9, was born on the 20th of January, 1822, in Litchfield Township, Bradford County, Pa., and is a son of Henry and Susanna (Latham) Convers, both of whom were natives of New England. The father was born April 30, 1779, and removed from Vermont to Pennsylvania, residing in Bradford County for a few years, after which he became a resident of Machias Township, Cattaraugus County, N. Y. In 1832, he emigrated to Ohio, accompained by his wife and five children. Locating in Portage County, he there made his home until 1839, when he came to Illinois, settling in Winnebago County. He spent a few days on the Pecatonica River, and then located on section 9, Guilford Township, where he rented a log cabin and made his home until 1844. In that year, he removed to section 16 of the same township and there lived until ealled to the home beyond, January 3, 1853. His wife died on the old home farm September 15, 1859. Their children were Reuben, Betsy R., Polly, James and Willard.

The subject of this sketch accompanied his parents on their various removals and was a young man of eighteen years when he came to Illinois. This county was then sparsely settled; the greater part of the land was still in the possession of the Government, and deer and other wild game roamed at will over the prairies. There were no railroads and the nearest market was Chicago. In 1844, Mr. Convers made his first purchase of land, a tract on section 16, Guilford Township, now included within his present farm. Upon it, he erected good buildings and has made many other improvements which add greatly to its value and attractive appearance. It continued to be his home until 1886, when he purchased adjoining land and upon that farm has since lived a retired life. He still owns one hundred and sixty-two acres of arable land, supplied with two sets of farm buildings.

On the 23d of August, 1855, Mr. Convers wedded Matilda (Beers) Whittle, who was born in Orleans County, N. Y., January 22, 1831, and is a daughter of Daniel and Mary (Herrick) Beers, who are mentioned in the sketch of Russell Marsh on another page of this work. Mrs, Convers was only five years old when, in June, 1836, she came with her parents to Winnebago County, and without doubt has resided longer in the county than any other lady living within its borders. She was first married, on the 25th of March, 1849, to Frederick Whittle, who was born in Canada, September 5, 1818, and came to Illinois about 1840, locating in Guilford Township. His death occurred on the 26th of April, 1851. By that union were born two daughters: Emily J., who was born February 28, 1850, became the wife of Leonard Marsh, and died September 17, 1885; and Amelia B., who was born December 15, 1853, is now the wife of George A. Stevens, of Rockford.

This worthy couple have a pleasant home and have a wide circle of friends and acquaintances throughout the community who esteem them highly for their sterling worth. Mr. Convers is a self-made man, who by his own efforts has worked his way upward to a position of allluence and is now enjoying a well-curned rest. Politically, Mr. Convers atilliates with the Republican party.

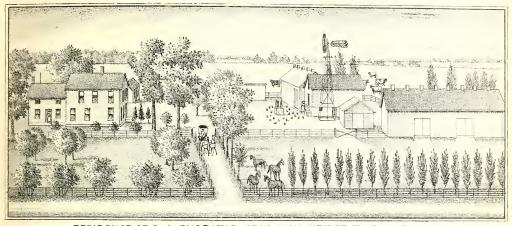

EORGE A. BURRITT, an extensive farmer and resident of Owen Township, Winnebago County, was born in Ira, Cayuga County, N. Y., June 17, 1810. His father, Charles Burritt, was born in Roxbury, Litchfield County. Conn., in 1812. Grandfather Lewis Burritt was also a native of Connecticut and was there reared to agricultural pursuits. At an early day he removed from the Nutmeg State to New York, and bought a farm in Ira, Cayuga County, where he followed agricultural pursuits several years. He spent his last days in the village of Weedsport, dying February 8, 1873, aged eighty-four years. His wite, whose maiden name was Polly Warner, was born in Connecticut, and spent her last years in Sennett, Cayuga County, N. Y., where her death occurred October 21, 1865, at the age of seventy-six.

When about twenty years old, Charles Burritt accompanied his parents to New York State. He was principally reared to agricultural pursuits but did not always follow farming. He purchased an interest in a machine shop at Weedsport and was connected with that business for three years, After serving for two years as Superintendent of the County Infirmary, he pursued farming in Cayuga County, but in 1855 sold his interest there and removed to Winnebago County, Ill. The winter following his arrival he passed in Rockford and during that time purchased a tract of land in Owen Township. A portion of it was broken and fenced, and a log house was on it, these constituting the sole improvements. He placed the land under good cultivation, planted fruit and shade trees, erected a nice set of farm buildings and continued to own and reside upon the place until his death, March 12, 1885.

The mother of our subject, whose maiden name was Laura M. Remington, was born in 1816, the daughter of Rufus and Deborah (Olmsted) Remington, and died at the home farm in April, 1877. She was the mother of seven children, all of whom are still living, namely: Lucy A. Moore, George A. Rufus II., Francis M. Brown, Dwight N., Ida M. Knapp and Charles L. At the time the family removed to Illinois, George A. was fifteen years old and he has been a resident of the old homestead since his parents settled here in 1856, with the exception of five years spent in Rockford.

At the time of his marriage, Mr. Burritt bought sixty acres of the home farm and soon after purchased one hundred and sixty acres adjoining. Since that time he has purchased the old homestead and is now proprietor of three hundred and twenty acres of well-improved land. Elsewhere in this volume will be found a view of the place, which is one of the finest in this section of the county. In 1866, he was united in marriage with Harriet M., daughter of Royal and Sophronia (Dunshee) Drake, and a native of Vermont. Mr. and Mrs. Burritt are the parents of five children, namely: Lewis L., Jessie M., Neenah S., Roy W. and Frank C. In his political belief, Mr. Burritt is a stanch adherent of the principles of the Republican party but is not active in political affairs, his time being wholly occupied with the duties of farm life.

RESIDENCE OF O.J. SKOFSTAD, SEC.1, MANCHESTER TP, BOONE CO, ILL.

RESIDENCE OF G. A. BURRITT, SEC. 26, OWEN TP, WINNEBAGO CO, ILL.

LE J. SKOFSTAD. Among the foreign-born citizens of Manchester Township, Boone County, who have established reputations as farmers of thorough-going enterprise and system, we are pleased to mention the name which we have now given. This gentleman was born in Norway, June 1, 1835, and was the son of Johanes Evenson, who was also a native of Norway and emigrated to the United States, settling in Racine County, Wis., in 1840. He was accompanied on the journey by his wife and three children, of whom our subject is the first-born.

Johanes Evenson took up six hundred acres of Government land in Wisconsin, upon which he built a good hewed log house, 30x49 feet in dimensions, and became one of the pioneers of that State. Several of his fellow-countrymen emigrated to this country at the time he came hither, and the entire party set sail from Drammond, Norway, on the "Captain Onkerson." The fare was $80, and Mr. Evenson, being a man of means, paid his own passage and that of many of the emigrants, whom he also loaned money to buy their first forty acres of land. He lived in Racine County for ten years, and at his death left a widow and five children.

On the outbreak of the Civil War, three brothers of Mr. Skofstad, Evan, Albert and Martin, together with their cousin, Hans C. Heg, enlisted in the Firteenth Wisconsin Infantry, of which Hans was the organizer and Colonel. Evan was taken prisoner, and while being conveyed from Andersonville jumped from the car with many others and made good his escape by reaching the army of Gen. Sherman. At the close of the war, the young men returned home in fair health, having never been wounded in battle. Albert served as a Captain throughout the struggle; he was married to a lady from his native land, Miss Cornelia Germanson, and died in Lawrence, Kan., in the fall of 1873, leaving a widow and three children.

Ole J. Skofstad lived on the old homestead from 1840 to 1860. He was married there in September, 1857, to Miss Anna M. Anderson, who was born in Norway, in April, 1839, and by her union with our subject has become the mother of nine children, four of whom are living. John Edward is married and resides in Bessemer, Mich.; Annia E., Mrs. Henry S. Anderson, makes her home in Wisconsin; Orville M. B. is a young farmer and resides at home; Albert Leander has been given a common education and aids in conducting the home farm.

The father of Mrs. Skofstad emigrated from Norway to America in 1813, and died at his home in Greenwood, this State, while his good wife passed away in Chicago, being a victim of cholera. They were the parents of two children: Mrs Skofstad and Anna, who died at Sharon, Wis., when sixteen years of age.

Among the finest farms in the township may be mentioned that of Mr. Skofstad, a view of which adorns another page.

OHN BURCH. He with whose name we introduce this biographical outline was one of the pioneers of Winnebago County, and may be properly designated as a "gentleman to the manor born." He is in the enjoyment of large means and has a pleasant home in Winnebago, where he is surrounded by all the comforts of life and lives in a manner much less pretentious perhaps than his means might justify.

Our subject was born in what is now the city of London, Province of Ontario, Canada, August 3, 1823, and is the son of John Burch, Sr., whose birth occurred in Woodstock, Windsor County, Vt. The grandfather of our subject, who was also a native of the Green Mountain State, was of English ancestry and spent his last years near Kensington, Canada. John Burch, Sr., was a lad of fourteen years when his father removed to Canada, where he grew to manhood and was married. He then removed to London District and purchased a tract of timber land, which is now included in the city of London. He erected a log house on the place, in which our subject was born, and, as the markets were very inconvenient to reach, the family lived mostly off the products of the farm.

In 1834, the father of our subject sold the property above mentioned and removed to Port Stanley, where he bought a farm and resided until 1839, which was the date of his advent into Illinois. He was accompanied on the journey to this State by his wife and seven children, and made the entire journey overland with teams, the trip consuming four weeks. On locating in Winnebago County, Mr. Burch found the land still owned by the Government, and making a claim to a tract, he purchased it when it came into market and erected thereon a double log house. Commencing at once the improving of his new home, there the father resided until 1848, when he sold out, and removing to Guilford Township, lived there for ten years. His last days were spent in Fayette County, lowa, whither he went in 1858, and purchased property in the city of Fayette, where he was engaged in the combined occupations of druggist, shoe merchant, money-lender and a tanner.

The maiden name of our subject's mother was Lydia Hogaboom, whose birth occurred in Saratoga County, N. Y. She was of German ancestry and accompanied her parents on their removal to Canada when quite young, the journey being made in the winter with teams. When crossing Lake Champlain the ice broke and her mother and one sister were drowned. She resided with her father until her marriage, and departed this life at her home in Fayette County, Iowa. The father of our subject was a Whig and joined the Republican ranks on the formation of that party. He filled various positions of trust and was the first Justice of the Peace in Winnebago Township. With his wife he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and before a building was erected meetings were frequently held in his home.

John Burch had seven brothers and sisters: William, Benjamin, Levi B., Laura Samantha, Hiram, Henry and Charlotte. He had reached his sixteenth year when he came to Illinois with his parents and with them he remained until reaching his majority. Starting out in life on his own responsibility, he purchased three yoke of cattle, for which he went in debt, and engaged in breaking prairie for $1.75 or $1.50 with his board. Mr. Burch was thus occupied for two seasons, and then having saved a sufficient sum of money, purchased a tract of land which is included in his present farm. The grain raised on his place was marketed at Chicago, and on the return trip our subject would bring back a load of goods for the merchants at Freeport, Galena or Rockford.

In 1850, the original of this sketch went to California, starting with teams from Westfield, this township, on the 4th of April and traversing Iowa to the present site of Council Bluffs, which was then called Kanesville, where he was taken sick with smallpox. He had made a contract to take two men through to the Western coast and board them on the way, for which he was to receive onehalf of what they made in two years. Council Bluffs was a Mormon town at that time and the party secured a vacant Mormon cabin, in which our subject and one of the gentlemen, who was similarly afflicted, lay during their sickness, cared for by a Mormon doctor and nurse. His companion, Daniet Case, died and the remainder of the party carried out their plan of visiting the Golden State, leaving a team of horses and a wagon for our subject to return home.

On recovering his health, Mr. Burch joined another party of emigrants bound for the Western country, led by Capt. Duncan from Michigan. They landed in Nevada City in September, where our subject engaged in mining and resided until 1853. In June of that year, he started home by the way of the Isthmus, and had his first ride on the railroad, paying $11 for eleven miles. Again coming to his old home, he resumed farming on the old place and at the time of his marriage located on the farm which is his present property, and which includes seven hundred and fifteen acres of land, besides which he owns a quarter-section in Greene County, lowa, and fifty-tive acres in Ogle County.

The lady to whom our subject was married January 22, 1866, was Sarah Martha John, a native of Northumberland County, Pa., and the daughter of Jehn and Patience (Housewert) John. The father was a native of the Keystone State, of Welsh ancestry, while the mother was born in New Jersey, of German stock. Mr. and Mrs. Burch have been granted a family of seven children: Georgiana, Judson, Willard, Preston, Nellie Thressa, Jessie and Mildred. Our subject east his first Presidential vote for Henry Clay and since the formation of the Republican party has been a firm adherent of its principles. When Mr. Bareh crossed the Missouri River on his California trip, buffalo were seen in great numbers and he says the only way to compute their number was to estimate how many would stand on an acre, and in that way calculate how many acres a herd covered.

A portion of the house in which our subject lives was the first frame building erected in Winnebago County.

VERILL MARSH, one of the early settlers of Winnebago County, residing on section 16, Guilford Township, is one of the worthy citizens that the Keystone State has furnished Illinois. He was born in Bradford County, Pa., December 14, 1822, and is a son of Russell and Abigail (Averill) Marsh, a sketch of whom appears on another page of this work. Our subject was in his sixteenth year when he came to Illinois with his parents, but remembers well the incidents of the removal here, and the experience of pioneer life in Winnebago County. At that time there were no free schools or public school buildings, but the teacher was paid by subscriptions, and school was held in any unoecupied building which could be secured.

Mr. Marsh remained with his parents until twenty years of age, and then engaged in farming for himself. In the early spring of 1849, in company with two companions, he started for California, going in a skiff down the Rock River to Rock Island, where they boarded a steamer, and by way of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, reached St. Joseph. Mo. There they bought four voke of oxen and a wagon and started across the plains. There were then no white settlers between the Missouri River and California, except the Mormons, at Salt Lake. In August they arrived at Hangtown, now Placerville, and Mr. Marsh went to the mines near Coloma, where he engaged in digging gold for two years, when he went to Sacramento, and formed a partnership with an experienced blacksmith, Mr. Marsh furnishing the capital. They opened a shop and confinued in business for one year, when he resumed mining, and to that occupation devoted his energies until 1853, when he started on the return trip by way of the 1sthmus of Panama and New York.

On the 28th of February, 1851, Mr. Marsh was joined in wedlock with Frances Robinson, who was born in Paris, Oxford County, Me., September 30, 1831. Her father and grandfather both bore the name of Stephen Robinson. The latter was a farmer of Paris, and spent his entire life in the Pine Tree State, He married Jemima Haskell, who also lived in Maine until called to the home beyond. Stephen Robinson, Jr., was reared in Paris. and there married Sophrona Cushman, a native of Buckfield, Me., and a daughter of Caleb and Polly (Buck) Cushman. In 1844, they emigrated to Illinois, by way of Buffalo and the Lakes, and, on reaching Winnebago County, purchased a farm on section 8, Guilford Township, where both Mr. and Mrs. Robinson spent their remaining days.

Five children were born unto Mr. and Mrs. Marsh, but only one is now living: Lizzie, wife of Ward Shaw, by whom she has one child, Ellis. Eva. their first-born, became the wife of Byron Meech, and died in 1891, leaving four children, Lloyd A., Anna, Frank and Ralph; Bruce died at the age of six months; Dora died at the age of twelve, and Clinton died in his third year.

On his return from California, Mr. Marsh located upon the farm which he now owns and occupies. Within its boundaries are comprised one hundred and eighty acres of valuable land under a high state of cultivation and well improved with good buildings. He is recognized as one of the leading agriculturists of this community and is a public-spirited and progressive citizen who manifests a commendable interest in all that pertains to the upbuilding of the county and the promotion of the general welfare. Politically, Mt. Marsh is a stalwart Republican.

E. BENSON, a veteran of the Mexican War, was born in Cazenovia, Madison County, N. Y., March 10, 1826. His father, Isaac Benson, was a native of Albany County, N. Y., and was of Prussian descent. When a young man, he went to Madison County, and, after a short residence in Cazenovia, removed to Fayetteville, Onondaga County, where he followed the blacksmith's trade until 1845. He married Julia Thomas, a native of Williamstown, Mass., and with his wife and seven children emigrated to Illinois, making the entire journey overland with teams. He located in the village of Belvidere, opened a smithy and followed his trade for a number of years, after which he lived retired until called to his final rest. Both Mr. and Mrs. Benson died in this eity.

Our subject was an infant when his parents removed to Fayetteville, where he was reared and educated. At the age of sixteen, he commenced working with his father at the blacksmith's trade. and continued with him until 1847, when he enlisted in Capt. Shepherd's Company of the Sixth Illinois Infantry, and went with the command to Mexico, where he participated in several engagements, serving about a year and a half, when he returned to Alton, and was honorably discharged. His health was greatly impaired during his service. On the 3d of March, 1849, he started with a company for California, making the journey across the plains with ox-teams. At that time there were no white settlers between St. Joseph, Mo., and the Pacific Slope, except the Mormons at Salt Lake. Large herds of buffaloes were seen on the prairie, also deer and antelopes. After one hundred and eighty days of travel, the party arrived at Bidwell's ranch, in Butte County, whence they went to the Feather River country. Mr. Benson continued to engage in mining in California, with the exception of two winters spent in Illinois. In 1862, he returned to Belvidere, where he made his home until 1870, when he purchased a farm in De Kalb County.

On the 8th of January, 1860, Mr. Benson married Adeline A. Harper, who was born in Huron County, Ohio, and was a daughter of Joseph Harper. She died in 1887, leaving five children: Frank, Eben, Cora, Mary and Jessie. In his political affiliations, our subject is a Republican, and has served as Street Commissioner for the past three years. Socially, he is a member of the Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M.; Kishwaukee Chapter No. 90, R. A. M.; Crusader Commandery No. 17, K. T.; Freeport Consistory and La Fayette Garrison No. 27, K. G. His life has been a varied one. There are few men who served in the Mexican War, and also made the trip to California among the '49ers. He has likewise borne the experiences of pioneer life. In every community where he has resided he has been recognized as a valued citizen, and wherever he goes, he wins friends.

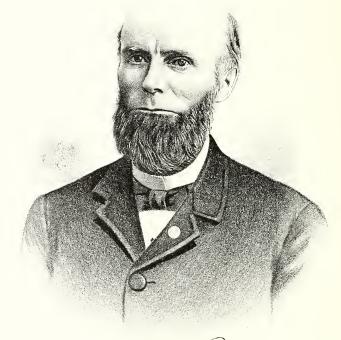

ATTHEW McMHLLAN. We are gratified to be able to present the life history of this progressive, intelligent and thrifty agriculturist, who enjoys the confidence of the business community and resides on section 21, Caledonia Township, Boone County. Both he and his worthy wife are highly esteemed among their neighbors, and in the accumulation of his farm he has been ably seconded by his faithful helpmate.

The original of this sketch was born in Kintyre, Scotland, December 25, 1815, and is a son of James McMillan, who was also a native of that portion of Scotland, where he spent his entire life. The maiden name of his wife was Mary McLain, who departed this life in her native shire. Matthew, of this sketch, was reared and educated in Scotland and served an apprenticeship of four years at the shoemaker's trade, but did not follow that branch of work, preferring to give his time and attention to agriculture.

Desiring to see something of the New World, of which he had heard so much, he of whom we write,

Yours Truly Hobert Ridge in 1852, came to America, accompanied by his wife and two children, setting sail from Glasgow in April on the vessel "Conrad" and landed at New York seven weeks and three days later. Our subject immediately went to Cincinnati, where for five years he was engaged in teaming and at the end of that time came to Illinois and, locating in Caledonia Township, rented land until 1878, when he became the proprietor of the two hundred and ten acres which he now owns adjoining the village.

The lady to whom our subject was married. December 28, 1841, was also born in Kintyre, Scotland, and bore the name of Agnes, daughter of John and Mary Kelly. They have become the parents of eight-children, namely: Mary, Barbara, James, John, Matthew, Libby, Nettie and Charles. Both Mr. and Mrs. McMillan are carnest and active members of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church, and their influence in every way is used for the upbuilding of society and the forwarding of the interests of morality and religion.

OBERT RIDGE. Among the most highly esteemed and respected residents of the village of Capron, Boone County, III., there is not one who has been a more faithful soldier and pleasant member of society, or a more thorough and sagacious business man, than the original of this notice, whose portrait is shown on the opposite page. His life of industry and usefulness and his record for honesty and uprightness have given him a hold upon the community which all might well desire to share.

The parents of our subject, George and Eliza (Crozier) Ridge, were natives of Ireland, in which country the mother died when comparatively a young woman. In 1850, the father came to the United States, settled in New York State, at Lawyersville, Schoharie County, and two years later sent for his family of five children. In 1874, he came to Illinois and made his home with his son, our subject, until his death, when eighty-three years of age. He was a hard-working man, a tiller of the soil, which occupation most of his ancestors had followed, and was honest and upright in every walk of life. Of his children, only three are now living: Robert in Capron, III., and Thomas and James in New Hayen, Conn.

Our subject was born in County Cavan, Ireland, June 1, 1839, and when but an infant was sent to his grandparents, with whom he remained until twelve years of age, or until coming to America. When thirteen years old, he began working out by the month for Horace Wakeman, but received little compensation. From 1858, when he came to Boone County, Ill., until the opening of the war, he received more substantial returns for his services, and his prospects were brighter in every respect. Although he worked on the farm during the summer seasons, he was in school during the winter months, and attended the South Belvidere school for one term. On the 12th of August, 1862, he enlisted in Company B, Nmety-fifth Illinois Infantry, under Capt. C. B. Loop, and was with his regiment until after the siege of Vicksburg. when he was taken siek and confined in the Mc-Pherson Hospital for about three months. Recovering, he went to the front and joined "Sherman's dashing Union boys," at Kenesaw Mountain, remaining with them until after the capture of Atlanta, when he returned to his own regiment at Nashville. He was mustered out at Springfield, Ill., August 17, 1865, after being in many prominent engagements, and having his hat shot through twice-once at Vicksburg and once at Spanish Ft., Ala.

Returning to Boone County after cessation of hostilities, Mr. Ridge began clerking in a store at Capron for Stow & Lambert, and this continued until his marriage, November 21, 1867, to Miss Hattie A. Scott, a native of Canada, and the daughter of Francis and Mary Scott. The mother died in Canada, but the father moved to Hilinois in 1857, and became quite an extensive landowner. He died in Capron when eighty-three years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Ridge became the parents of four children: The eldest, Alice, born January 1, 1871, died March 22, 1874; George S., born in Capron, Boone County, June 2, 1871, died June 1, 1892, aged eighteen years; Clara B., born January 5, 1876, and Benjamin Harrison, born June 26, 1888, are the surviving members of the family circle. After his marriage Mr. Ridge engaged in general merchandising, in company with William Andrews, for eighteen years, and at the same time carried on a successful grain business; then dissolving partnership with Mr. Andrews, he bought the Capron elevators, and has been in the grain and feed business exclusively for the past six years. He is now interested in tile works and also owns a good farm of two hundred and tifty-three acres in Le Roy Township. He is a self-made man, and all that he now owns is the result of hard work and unceasing industry.

In politics, Mr. Ridge is a Republican. He has been School Treasurer for sixteen years, and has held other local positions in the township. He has been a member of the Christian Church for many years, and had charge of the township bible depository for over twenty-three years, resigning that position about two years ago. He also gave up the position of School Treasurer, which he had held for sixteen years. Socially, he is Adjutant of Cornwall Post No. 311, G. A. R., of Capron, and was one of the charter members. He is a member of Camp No. 623, M. W. A.

A conscientious and devout Christian, Mr Ridge is honored and esteemed by all who enjoy his acquaintance, and the family is one of the most prominent in the township. He is public-spirited, and is actively identified with all good movements. He is President of the tile and brick works of the village of Capron, and was largely instrumental in establishing that enterprise in the village.

LEXANDER RALSTON. This gentleman, though born across the ocean, was one of the early pioneers of Winnebago County, and has given the best efforts of his life to its development, and, as a reward for his industry, has accumulated a handsome competency. In Mr. Ralston, we find a splendid example of what may be accomplished by an energetic, determined and economical man. His birthplace was Argyleshire, Scotland, the date thereof being

May I, 1808. His father, David Ralston, was also born in that place, where he was reared to the ealling of an agriculturist and spent his entire life.

Our subject's mother, Helen Ralston, was born in the same shire as was her husband, coming to America in 1842, and departing this life in Winnebago County. She became the mother of five children: Robert, Alexander, Margaret, Jane and David, all of whom came to America. Robert settled in what is now Harlem Township, Winnebago County, where his decease occurred; Margaret was married to John Caldwell, and makes her home in Caledonia, Boone County; David resided in this county until his decease.

Alexander Ralston was reared and educated in his native shire, and when fifteen years of age went to Greenock and was engaged for four years as a clerk in a hardware store. After that he emigrated to St. Johns, Newfoundland, and was in the employ of the same man for five years. Returning to Scotland, he remained there until 1834, at which time he sailed from Greenock on the "Roger Stewart," and six weeks later landed in New He came directly West to Ohio, where he engaged to work out by the month for a time. Later, being enabled to become the owner of property on his own account, he seenred an eightyacre tract of timber land, upon which he erected a log house and there resided until 1843. On the above-named date, Mr. Ralston came to Winnebago County, making the journey lither by teams, and settled in what is now Harlem Township. At that time Northern Illinois was very sparsely settled, the greater portion of the land being in the possession of the Government. Our subject, however, made a claim to eighty acres, upon which he creeted a small frame house, doing the earpenterwork himself, and going to Chicago with a team for the shingles. He from time to time added to his farm, until his estate included one hundred and eighty acres, well improved with good buildings. In 1879, Mr. Ralston disposed of his property and came to Rockford, where he has since lived retired from active labors.

Mr. Ralston was married in Scotland to Jane Gordon, who was a native of the same shire as was her husband, and died after coming to this country, in 1836, in Washington County, Ohio. In 1852, our subject was again married, this time to Elizabeth Harvey, a native of Argyleshire, Scotland, and the daughter of William and Mary (Greenlees) Harvey. She came to America with her parents, where she died. Two daughters were born of that union, Charlotte E. and Nellie. The first union of Mr. Ralston resulted in the birth of one son, John C., who resides in St. Louis.

The original of this sketch was reared under the influence of the Presbyterian Church, with which denomination he became connected in early life. He is at the present time a member of the Westminster Church, at Rockford, to the support of which he is a liberal contributor. He stands very high in business circles, being a founder of the People's Bank of Rockford. In 1875, Mr. Ralston returned to Seotland, after an absence of forty years, and visited friends and relatives. Our subject is a Republican, and has held various offices, among them that of Justice of the Peace for three terms.

HLHAM C. CHAPMAN, a successful pattern-maker of Rockford, who has been in the employ of John and W. F. Barns since March, 1866, is highly esteemed for his ability, enterprise and integrity. He has been a resident of the city since 1852, except about four years that he spent in Chicago, Ill. He learned the trade of a cabinet-maker and designer, and was in the employ of J. G. Marsh, a furniture-maker in this city, for sixteen years. While in Chicago, he also followed his trade.

Our subject was born in Greenwich Township, Washington County, N. Y., November 15, 1830, and received his rudimentary education in the common schools of that county. He afterward attended Unionville Academy, where, during the four years of his attendance, he was a schoolmate of Ex-President Clester A. Arthur. Later, he was under the tutelage of his father in learning to be a mechanic, and when twenty-one years of age, came West to Rockford, Ill., and grew up with this city. His record as a citizen and business man is very good indeed, and he is a man of excellent habits, never touching whisky or tobacco in any form. He has been a member of the First Congregational Church nearly all his life, and is a strong supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

Miss Linda Neal, whom our subject married in this county, was a native of the Province of Ontario, Canada, and came to the States, and to Winnebago County, Ill., when twenty years of age. She died March 27, 1876, when thirty-three years of age, leaving the following children, all now living: Frank W., now a resident of Southern Dakota; Le Roy, a railroad man, residing in Rockford, who married Miss Hattie Andrews; Lucy E., engaged with the Rockford Watch Company; and Charles H., residing in Minnesota.

Mr. Chapman's second marriage occurred in Guilford Township, this county, to Miss Andrews, who was born, reared and educated in that township. She died at her home in this city in October, 1878, when thirty-three years of age, leaving one child, Albert II., who is at home.

The third marriage of our subject occurred in Rockford, and the lady of his choice was Mrs. Elizabeth Warner, nee Judd. She was also born, reared and educated in Guilford Township, her birth taking place on the 4th of May, 1851. She was the daughter of old settlers of this county, both of whom died here. The parents, Benjamin and Mary A. (Carman) Judd, were natives of Canada, but after marriage they came to the States, settling in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, Ill. Later, they removed to Guilford Township, located on a farm, and died when quite aged.

Mrs. Chapman, the present wife of our subject, was first married in her native township to Mr. Alexander B. I. Warner, who was a brick-molder in Rockford for many years, but subsequently went to Michigan. He was in Antrim County, of that State, until his death, on the 25th of December, 1878, when forty-two years of age. He was a soldier in the Civil War, enlisting in the Eleventh Illinois Infantry and serving three years, and was in many prominent engagements. He veteranized after serving the last of four years in the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, and his discharge was covered with the battles in which he engaged. He escaped with only a slight flesh wound on the left cheek, but was the hero of many a battle. He died leaving five children: George A., in the employ of the Rockford Street Railroad; Ida P., wife of John Robinson, a farmer of Nelson, Neb.; Clara M. and Dora E. at home, both having received good educations at the Business College; and Benjamin J., at home. To the present union have been born two children, Chester A. and Darwin E.

ENRY A. LATHAM. Prominent among the pioneers of Winnebago County stands the name of our subject, who has resided for the last thirty years on the old homestead in Owen Township. His estate includes two hundred and fifty-two aeres located on the Rock River, and the honorable and successful career of Mr. Latham stands forth as a fitting example of what can be attained by persistent and carnest effort.

Our subject had his birth November 12, 1843, in Scholarie County, N. Y., while his direct progenitor, Francis E. Latham, hailed from Connecticut. Darius Latham, the grandfather of our subject, was also born in the Nutmeg State, whence he removed to Albany, N. Y., and later came to Rockford, where he remained a short time and then went farther West to Kansas. Returning to Illinois, he departed this life at the home of his son in Lincoln.

When the parents of Francis E. Latham removed to Albany, N. Y., he was a lad of about twelve years, and when attaining mature life learned the earpenter's trade, which he followed for a time and then entered the employ of the New York & Erie Railroad, being engaged in building bridges. He continued to make his home in the Empire State until 1854 when he came to Rockford and was engaged in contracting and building for about three years, at the expiration of which time he purchased his farm in Owen Township and cultivated the soil until his decease. The maiden name of his wife was Maria Zimmer; she was born in New York

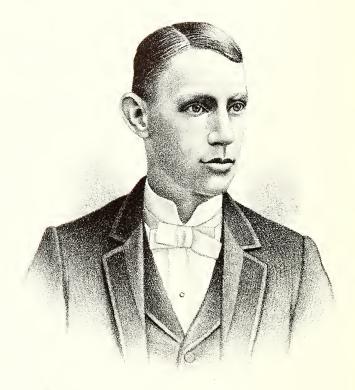

State and died on the home farm, after having borne her husband four children: Henry A., Sarah, Abbie and Emma.

The original of this sketch was a lad of ten years when he accompanied his parents on their removal to the Prairie State. He attended school during the winter months and assisted his father in performing duties on the farm, then on the outbreak of the late war enlisted at the first call for volunteers. His company, however, was not accepted, their services not being needed. Our subject again enlisted in August of that year, joining Company D, Eleventh Illinois Infantry, and served with his regiment until July, 1863, and was then transferred to the navy. He participated in many important battles while a member of the Eleventh Regiment, among which were Ft. Donelson and Shiloh, while in the navy he fought on the gunboats "Cincinnati," "Lexington," "Hastings," and the "Mortar Fleet," serving under Commodores Foote and Porter. The principal naval battles were Snyders Bluff, Arkansas Post, Yazoo Pass. On the 25th of May, 1864 the vessel on which our subject was aboard, the "Cineinnati," was sunk, and forty-two of the ninety-five men were lost. Mr. Latham was put on board the "Mortar Fleet" and later participated in the siege of Vicksburg, after which he was transferred to Lexington and went on the Red River expedition.

His term of service expiring in the fall of 1864, our subject received his homorable discharge and returned home. In February, 1865, he again enlisted, becoming a member of the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, serving his country until October of that year, and then returning home was engaged with his father until the death of the latter, which occurred in 1880. The original of this sketch then went to Benton County, Mo., where he purchased an unimproved tract of land, upon which he resided for three years. Then returning to Illinois, he bought the interest of the other heirs of the old homestead which he at present owns and occupies.

Mrs. Elizabeth Rice and Henry A. Latham were united in marriage in 1865. The lady, a native of New York State, bore her husband two children, Francis E. and Elwilda. Mr. Latham is a Grand Army man being a member of Nevius Post No. 1 at Rockford. He is also connected with Winnebago Encampment No. 44, 1, O. O. F., and the Farmers' Camp M. W. A. and the Kishwaukee Tribe No. 34, Independent Order of Redmen. Our subject is a member of the Illinois National Guards. Third Regiment, and has filled the office of Commissary Sergeant for four years, and has belonged to the Regiment for seven years.

Yours Truly Willard A. Brolin

ILLARD A. BROLIN, Secretary and Treasurer of the Skandia Furniture Company, has the honor of being a native-born citizen of Rockford, his birth having occurred in this city on the 2d of January, 1865. His parents, Charles and Eva (Carlson) Brolin, were both natives of Sweden, and when young people came to the United States. After locating in Rockford, they were married and have since been residents of this city, where they still make their home. For some time the father was employed in the machine department of the N. C. Thompson Manufacturing Company, but has subsequently been a finisher in the cabinet works of the Skandia Furniture Company of Rockford. He and his wife are members of the First Swedish Lutheran Church, and, in politics, he is a supporter of the principles of the Republican party. Unto them were born a family of six children, but only two are now living: Willard and Arthur.

We now take up the personal history of our subject, whose portrait appears in this connection, and who is known as one of the enterprising young business men of Rockford. His education was acquired in the city schools, and since he has attained his majority he has been engaged in doing clerical work. He was employed for a time as agent for the East Side Illinois Central Railroad, and has been connected with several local enterprises. He is a stockholder in the Skandia Loan Association, and for the past three years has held the position of Secretary and Treasurer of the Skandia Furniture Company, and is also one of its Directors.

This corporation has its factory on North Second Street, on the east bank of the Rock River. The business was established in 1889, and has been carried on successfully since. They manufacture hall-trees, book-cases, cylinder desks, ladies' secretaries, extension-tables, etc., employing one hundred and fifty men. They have a constantly increasing trade, of which the members of the firm are well deserving. Mr. Brolin is also a stockholder and Director of the Royal Mantel and Furniture Company; stockholder and Director in the Rockford Furniture and Undertaking Company; and has a third interest in the Oscar Larson Company, wholesale and retail dealers in fruit and confectionery.

Our subject and his brother reside at home with their parents. They hold membership with the First Swedish Lutheran Church and both exercise their right of franchise in support of the Republican party. Our subject is an energetic and ambitious young man, and though now only twenty-six years of age, is already regarded as one of the leading young business men of the city. Following out the course which he is now pursuing, he will undoubtedly make his life both useful and successful.

AVID A. ELMORE, dealer in wood, coal, flour and feed, fire-proof brick, roofing material, etc., carries on a flourishing business at No. 516 South Main Street, Rockford, where he established in business in 1875. He is a man of superior attainments and accurate principles, and to this fact, coupled with industry and energy, is due the prosperity by which his enterprise has been attended. He came to Rockford from Rochelle, where for lifteen years he was engaged as a coal-dealer, his efforts there being so satisfactory as to favor the removal to the larger city.

Mr. Elmore is a native of Ohio, and was born in Columbus, December 25, 1829. When about one year old, he was brought by his parents to this State, settlement being made at Beardstown, Cass County. His father, Jacob Elmore, was born at Cobleskill, N. Y., and was a son of Daniel Elmore, who passed his entire life in the Empire State, dying at an advanced age. In his youth, Jacob Elmore learned the trade of a cabinet-maker, and after he came to Illinois, engaged as a mill-wright. He was thus employed when he was accidentally drowned in the Illinois River, at Beardstown, leaving a widow and one child.

A few years after the death of Jacob Elmore, his widow became the wife of John Acker, and, in 1837, removed to Ogle County, which remained their home for some years. Later, they removed to Pottawattamic County, Iowa, where Mrs. Acker died at the age of seventy-six, leaving five sons and two daughters by her second marriage. Mr. Acker died May 16, 1892, at the advanced age of ninety-two years. His entire life had been spent in farming pursuits.

In the home of his mother and stepfather, our subject grew to man's estate, coming with them to Ogle County in 1837, and attending the commonschools of that county. When twenty-one years and three months old, he started out to earn his own living, and since that time he has not only been self-supporting, but has accumulated a comfortable property through shrewd business management and judicious investments. He is genial and whole-souled, and never forgets, either in business or society, that the duty one man owes to another is courtesy. He has in his possession some highly-prized keepsakes in the shape of old letters written to his father in the days when postage was twenty-five cents and envelopes were unknown.

The lady who, February 11, 1857, became the wife of Mr. Elmore was Miss Addie E. Reynolds, She was born in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., in 1839, and was quite young when she accompanied her parents, James S. and Rosamond (Geer) Revnolds, to Illinois. They were natives of the Empire State, passed their entire lives on a farm, and now lie buried side by side in Ogle County, where they died full of years. Mr. and Mrs. Elmore are the parents of seven children, of whom the following is noted: Addie was for same years a teacher, but is now a stenographer, in Chicago; Kate is saleslady in a State Street millinery store, in Chicago; Grace is the wife of E. M. Burns, a druggist at Mason City, Iowa; Arthur E., Secretary for his father and the company, is a graduate of Evanston College, and a young man of great promise; Isabelle is stenographer for the Rockford Watch Company; Helen M. is an accomplished and gifted pianist and a music teacher; Anna R. is a student in Rockford High School.

AVID J. ANDERSON, who has been a resident on his fine farm in Winnebago Township since 1854, was born in Essex County, N. J., October 30, 1822. He is a son of John Anderson, who was born in Hunterdon County, that State, January 15, 1796. Capt. Jacob Anderson, the grandfather of our subject, was also a native of the above-named State, and received his title while a soldier in the Revolutionary War; he died in Hunterdon County about 1838, and his widow drew a pension of $800 during her last years.

John Anderson was one of triplets born to his parents, one of whom died in infancy and one when six years of age. He was reared on the farm and died in June, 1850, in Hunterdon County. The maiden name of his wife was Eleanor Johnson, whose birth occurred in the same State, November 1, 1795. She came to Hinois in 1852, and died in Winnebago Township, August 7, 1874.

The parental family included the followingnamed children: Davld J., Catherine, Rachel, Ruth T., Hannah M., Mary M., Wesley B. and Henry M. He of whom we write was very young when his father removed to Hunterdon County and as soon as old enough began to assist in the cultivation of the home farm. When seventeen years of age, he served an apprenticeship of three years at the blacksmith's trade, and, in 1840, went to Tioga County, N. Y., where he was engaged as a smith for six years. At the end of that time, he came to Illinois, locating in Rockford, where he entered the employ of Frink & Walker, proprietors of the stage line, as their horse-shoer. As there were no railroads in Rockford at that early day, all transportation was made with teams.

In the fall of 1851, Mr. Anderson returned to New York State, and the following spring, accompanied by his mother, brothers and sisters, came to this county, where he purchased, two years later, the farm which is his present home, and on which may be found all the improvements which go to make of it a first-class estate. Fruit, shade and ornamental trees enhance its beauty and value and not the least among its good buildings is a comfortable farm residence.

February 23, 1869, Elizabeth Forester, who was born in Northumberland County, Pa., March 21, 1834, became the wife of our subject. Her father, James Forester, was born in New Jersey, October 17, 1796, and was a lad of ten years when he removed with his parents to Pennsylvania. When starting out in life for himself, he purchased a farm in Northumberland County, which he cultivated until his decease, March 7, 1872. The maiden name of Mrs. Anderson's mother was Sarah Mettler, also a native of New Jersey, where her birth occurred March 24, 1798. She departed this life, February 7, 1885, when eighty-seven years old. Her thirteen children bore the names of Francis, George, William, John, Samuel, Henry M., Jane, Ira, Elizabeth, Philip, Charles, Sarah A., and James.

Two children have been granted our subject and his wife: Sarah Eleanor, who was born December 23, 1869, died January 1, 1873; and Gertrude, born June 20, 1874. Our subject and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics Mr. Anderson votes the straight Republican ticket, with which party his wife is in full sympathy although not permitted to vote.

contractors and builders of Rockford, Ill., is pleasantly domiciled in one of the fine residences of his own building, at No. 114 Whitman Street, and at the head of Grant Avenue and Thomas Street. This is one of the many beautiful building spots of the thriving city of Rockford. Since 1881, Mr. Thornton has been a resident of this eity. He has attended strictly to his business, winning a just reputation as to his ability as a contractor and builder. He was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, and his parents, Bowler and Hannah (Blackburn) Thornton, were natives of England.

Bowler Thornton was born in Yorkshire, in the year 1816, and comes of an old Yorkshire fam-He grew to manhood there, and learned the blacksmith trade of his father, John Thornton. In 1829, the family came to America, settled at Port Hope, Province of Ontario, and in Clark Township, of that province, Bowler was united in marriage with Miss Blackburn. She was also a native of Yorkshire, England, born in 1821, and in 1832 she came with her parents, James and Rachel (Ware) Blackburn, who were natives of Yorkshire, to Canada. They settled on a timbered farm in Clark Township, Province of Ontario, and there the parents spent the closing years of their lives, having passed the allotted age of man. Both were prominent members of the Methodist Church. Of their eleven children, Mrs. Thornton was the youngest in order of birth. Her last remaining sister died in the Province of Ontario, March 14. 1892.

After his marriage, Mr. Thornton followed blacksmithing for some time, but later engaged in the grain business, and made a fortune at this. He was also actively engaged in merchandising, but soon met with reverses and lost all. In 1865. he came to Illinois and settled in Winnebago County, where he became manager of a sheep and stock farm of six hundred and forty acres in Owen Township, known as the L. W. Owen farm, and received as compensation $65 per month. years later, he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of wild land in that township, and resided on the same, making many improvements, until his death in August, 1876, when nearly fifty-nine years of age. Although he met with many discouragements and reverses, he was never disheartened, and at his death left a fortune of $12,000. His wife, who is still living and who is seventy years of age, has a comfortable home with a daughter, Mrs. II. H. Wilcox, in Burritt Township. She is a member of the Methodist Church, and her husband was also associated with that church.

George J. Thornton was one of eleven children. and was seven years old when he came with his parents to Illinois. He remained in this State until seventeen years of age, and then returned to Canada. Later, he entered the Medical Department of the University at Ann Arbor, Mich., and then the Chicago Medical School, after which he went West. He had followed the drug business in Canada for some time before going to Ann Arbor, and in 1881, as before mentioned, he returned to Illinois. He was married in Rockford to Miss Ida J. Corlett, a native of Guilford Township, this county, where she was reared and educated. Her parents, James and Emma A. (Wood) Corlett, were natives of the Isle of Man and New York State, respectively. Mr. Corlett came to the United States with his parents when a child, settled with them in Ohio, and, later, came to Winnebago County, where he followed farming in Guilford Township. He was first married to Miss Mary A. Von Alstein, who died when a comparatively young woman, leaving four children. His second marriage was with Miss Wood, by whom he became the father of nine children. Mr. Corlett died at his home in Guilford Township, December 21, 1885, when sixty-three years of age. He was a very successful and popular business man, and left at his death an estate valued at $75,000. Mrs. Corlett is a resident of this city, and is now not quite fifty years of age. She resides at No. 412 Whitman Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thornton became the parents of two children: Birdie A., who died at the age of about five months, and Bessie A., a bright little girl of six years. Mr. and Mrs. Thornton are members of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Thornton is a Republican in politics. Socially, our subject belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America.

ENRY A. POSSON. There is no doubt that a sketch of this popu'ar citizen of R ekford will interest all the residents of this part of the county, as he is a very prominent man in social and be siness circles. Orleans County, N. Y., is the place of his birth, the date thereof being July 8, 1836. Jacob Posson, his fa her, was one of the first settler; in Rockford.

and it is thought he was born in Schoharie County, N. Y. He was the son of Frederick and Kate Posson, and was reared and married in New York State, where he learned the trade of a cooper. He removed to Niagara County soon after his marriage, where he was employed until 1836, the time of his coming to Rockford. In that early day all the surrounding country was owned by the Government, and but few families resided in this now wealthy city.

The father of our subject purchased a lot on the northeast corner of Second and Market Streets, and made his residence on the south side of Second Street, which property he also owned. In the fall of the above-named year he was joined in his new home by his wife and child, who came hither from the East by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and was twenty eight days in making the journey. They were met in Chicago by Mr. Posson, and were conveyed by a team to Rockford. In 1837, he bought a claim to a tract of land four miles from the city, on which he creeted a log house and commenced at once the improvement on his farm. As there were no railroads in the vicinity for a number of years and Chicago was the nearest marke and depot for su-plies, the pioneers were compelled to haul their products to that city, and on the return trip brought back necessary articles for the family.

Jacob Posson resided for five years on the farm above mentioned, when he rented his estate and, coming to Rockford, creeted a shop on the southeast corner of Second and Market Streets, where he intended to engage at his trade of coopering. His decease occurred, however, November 1, 1842, before the sliop was completed. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Mary Sherwood. She was born in Salem, Washington County, N. Y., November 7, 1806, and was the daughter of James and Sarah (Smith) Sherwood, natives respectively of New York City and New Hampshire. Mrs. Posson is still living, at the advanced age of eighty-five years. She became the mother of three children: our subject, Frederick L. and Mary A. Frederick L. resides at Portland, Ore., and Mary A. married James M. Forbes, and makes her home in Santa Barbara.

Henry A. Posson, of this sketch, was an infant when his parents emigrated to Winnebago County, and at that time was the first white babe in the county. He attended the early schools of Rockford, and at the age of twenty years went to Medina, N. Y., to learn the trade of house and earriage lainting. After spending three years in the Empire State, he returned to Rockford, where he prosecuted his trade until 1861, when, in September of that year, he enlisted in Company G, Fortyfifth Illinois Inf ntry, and participated in he battles of Ft. Henry, Ft. Donelson and Shiloh, He was wounded at the latter-named conflict on Sunday, April 6th, receiving a gun-shot wound in his right arm, which was amoutated the following week at the Central Hospital, Paducah. Our subject was honorably discharged July 2, 1862, and on returning home resumed work at his trade, which he followed for six years. He has been in the postal service in Rockford since January, 1890.

Miss Hannah McClafferty became the wife of our subject September 19, 1867. She was born in Annapolis, Nova Scotia, and was the daughter of Roger and Mary McClafferty, and by her union with our subject has become the mother of two children: George A. and Mary A. Mrs. Posson is a member of the Baptist Church and her daughter is connected with the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church. Our subject is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., and is greatly respected by the entire community.

ICHARD MOORE. The occupation which this gentleman now follows has received his attention the greater part of his life, and it is, perhaps, not to be wondered at that he is meeting with success in his chosen calling, for he has always attended strictly to the details of farm work, and is one of the intelligent and enterprising class of citizens who would give life to any community in which they might settle. He was born in Clarion County, Pa., on the 25th of May, 1826, to the union of John and Mary (Moore) Moore, natives of Ireland and Centre County, Pa., respectively. They were the parents of twelve children, four of whom are living at the present time.

The parents both died in this State, the father when sixty-two years of age, and the mother at the age of seventy-one. Both were worthy people and highly esteemed in the community in which they lived,

The paternal grandfather came from Ireland to America at an early date, and met with some exciting adventures in crossing the Atlantic. The captain of the vessel in which he took passage became drunk, the vessel was wrecked, and of the three hundred passengers who started, only about twenty-five were saved. The grandfather of our subject succeeded in reaching land, and was finally rescued and landed in Philadelphia, where he passed the remainder of his days, dying at the age of sixty-two. He lost all his belongings and was obliged to commence at the beginning again.

The subject of this sketch remained under the parental roof, working for himself and his father, until October 25, 1855, when he was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Gordon, a native of Clearfield County, Pa., born May 21, 1832. She is the daughter of Patrick and Elizabeth (Cook) Gordon, the father a native of Scotland, and the mother of Centre County, Pa. Mr. Gordon came to this country when a young man, and here married. His death occurred in Illinois, when fifty years of age. His widow was married the second time, her husband being John Fleming, and by this union became the mother of one child. She received her final summons in Oregon, her death occurring when eighty-eight years of age. Mrs. Moore's grandmother, Margaret Cook, died in Illinois, and was a very old lady at the time of her demise. Her husband was in the Revolutionary War, and was a brave and gallant soldier. The Gordons and Cooks were for the most part agriculturists by occupation, there being but few exceptions. Mrs. Moore has four brothers and sisters living, and one brother, William Gordon, has been identified with the interests of Winnebago County, Ill., for many years, and has a street in Rockford named after him. Both Mr. and Mrs. Moore had brothers in the late unpleasantness between the North and South.

To our subject and wife have been born six children, five sons and one daughter: John A. is in Iowa engaged in farming; he married Miss Minnie Norman, and they have five daughters. William A., who is in Spring Township, this county, married Miss Mina Wilcox, and has four daughters. George G., in this township, married Miss Ida Wilcox. James T., who resides in South Dakota, married Miss Jennie Stanton; they have one child, a son. Lizzie married Frank Tanner, a contractor and builder of Belvidere; and Clarence R. married Miss Phila Case, and resides in Belvidere.

Mr. Moore came to Boone County, Ill., in 1854, and for some time rented land. By industry and good management, he accumulated enough means to invest in land, and bought eighty acres, paying $1,400 for it. He erected a small but comfortable and convenient house, also a small barn, and thus equipped he began to gather around him many of the comforts and conveniencies of life. He subsequently purchased fifty acres more, paying $45 per aere for this, and it is now valued at $65 per aere at least. Mr. Moore was formerly a Republican in his political views, and east his first Presidential vote for Col. John C. Fremont. He is now a Prohibitionist, and an active worker in the cause of temperance. He is a member of the Baptist Church, while Mrs. Moore leans toward the Methodist Episcopal Church.

UGUSTUS NELSON, a successful dealer in gents' furnishing goods, hats, caps, etc., located at No. 320 East State Street, is a man of energy, push and enterprise, and is thoroughly conversant with every detail of his business, of which he has made such a pronounced success. This enterprise was inaugurated by Mr. Nelson in 1877, and at once bounded into popular favor and confidence, securing a flattering and steadily increasing patronage from its inception. He has a large room, 20x80 feet, and the secret of his success is not far to seek, as he handles none but strictly first-class and reliable goods, and gives prompt and polite attention to all customers.

Like many of the representative business men of Rockford, Mr. Nelson is a Swede, his birth occurring on the 13th of October, 1831, and he was the first of his relatives to come to America. After reaching this country, he resided for a short time in Indiana and Michigan, thence he went to Chicago, where he was engaged in different occupations until 1861, when he made his first appearance in Rockford. Here he has since made his home. He was engaged as a carriage-maker for some time, but in 1870, he embarked in the merchant tailoring trade with Messrs. Erlander & Johnson, with which firm he continued for seven years. He then withdrew and established business on his own account. Shortly after coming here, he enlisted as a mechanic in the Rebellion, and was in service seven months.

Mr. Nelson is in every respect a self-made man, and worked hard to lay the foundation to his subsequent prosperous career. He learned his trade in Batavia, Kane County, Ili., although when he first came to this country, in June, 1854, he resided in Chicago for some time. He has since been joined by two brothers, Lars P. and Carl J., the latter now deceased, dying at Garfield, Kan., from injuries received by his team running away. He was a farmer, Lars P. is also a farmer, and was married at Hobart, Ind.

The parents of these children died in their native country, Sweden, where the father, Nels P. Olson, followed agricultural pursuits. Both were quite aged, and both were members of the State Church.

Augustus Nelson was married in Geneva, Ill., to Miss Christina M. Peterson, who was born in Sweden, and who came to America with her father. The mother died while crossing the ocean, and was buried in the deep. The father, Carl Peterson, and only child, came to Geneva, Ill., and, later, the father found a home under the roof of his daughter, Mrs. Nelson, remaining with her until his death, in 1888, when seventy-nine years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are the parents of four living children: Alice M. at home; Ada T., wife of Fred W. Blake, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Della E. at home; and Carl A., a book-keeper in the Rockford National Bank. Mr. Nelson is a member of the Masonie fraternity, and, in politics, is a Republican. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are members of the Emanuel Lutheran Church, and he has been Trustee in the same for some time. They have a good home at No. 203 North Third Street, Rockford.

SCAR B. HARDING. The dealing in groceries, flour and provisions is an industry that occupies the attention of no inconsiderable portion of our mercantile community, and employs a capital aggregating a very large amount. A leading house in that line is that conducted by Oscar B. Harding, located at No. 305 East State Street, where he has been in business for the last five years. The store is very tastefully fitted up, admirably arranged and well stocked with a fine line of staple, and fancy groceries, teas of the finest brands, canned goods in great variety, table delicacies of every description, etc. The store is now conducted under the title of the Great Western Tea Company.

A native of Sweden, born January 8, 1854, young Harding was but fifteen years of age when he came with his parents, John and Anna C. Harding, to American soil. He first came to Rockford and there finished his growth, after which he went to Omaha, Neb., where he was in the grocery business for five years. Returning subsequently to Rockford, he embarked in his present enterprise and conducted the business with so much vigor and push, and accorded his patrons such prompt and courteous service, that he soon became a leader in his line. He is also interested in other enterprises, and is classed among the substantial men of the city. Mr. Harding is a Director in the Skandia Plow Company, Rockford Baking Company, of which he is also a promoter, a large stockholder in the Union Furniture Company, Folding Bed Company, Mantel Company, Royal Sewing Machine Company, Rockford Manufacturing Company, Third National Bank, of Rockford, and is also a member of Peterson Land Company, and North Chicago Land Syndicate. By his energy and economy he is now worth from $40,000 to $50,000.

The father of Mr. Harding followed the occupation of a farmer, and made his home in Rockford until his death, in 1872, when fifty years of age. He was a hard-working, industrious citizen, and a member of the Lutheran Church, in which his wife, who is now living and sixty-nine years of age, also holds membership. Their family consisted of four sons and two daughters. One daughter, Mrs. Selma Nelson, is now deceased; Albert, a molder in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, married Miss Carrie Thurston; Claus, now a painter with the Rockford Manufacturing Company, wedded Miss Ida Ekeberg; Oscar B., our subject; Matilda, wife of John Bumberg, a farmer near Stone Lake, Iowa; and Theodore, a molder by trade, married Miss Nettie Blunt.

Our subject has never married. Mr. Harding and his brothers are Republicans in politics, and all the members of the family hold membership in the First Lutheran Church.

day life, with its duties and cares, affords a splendid opportunity for acquiring practical experience, and its most common and oft-traveled highroads give to the earnest worker available openings toward success. The honored position occupied by Mr. Hance in business and social circles is not the result of accidental fortune or what is usually termed "luck," but has been secured by a life of industry, in which he has ever displayed toward others the spirit of the Golden Rule. Now in the prime of a stalwart manhood, he is in the possession of a competency, and, what is better, has gained the confidence of his fellowmen.

For an account of the parentage and descent of Mr. Hance, the reader is referred to the sketch of his brother Ogden, which appears in another portion of this volume. In Pecatonica Township, Winnebago County, where he was born June 6, 1819, Eugene C. Hance grew to manhood amid such surroundings as prevailed here during the middle of this century. His home was with his parents until he was married, March 22, 1875, to Miss Mary A. Morrison, a native of Canada, and the daughter of Moses and Lucinda Morrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Hance are the parents of two children: Gertrude A. and Susie E., accomplished young ladies, who are at home.

For one year after his marriage, Mr. Hance resided in the village of Pecatonica, and then removed to a farm which was originally a part of the land entered by his father. Here he purchased three hundred and five acres, which are devoted to general farming and stock-raising. For several years, he resided on that place, which he brought to a high cultivation and embellished with substantial buildings. In January, 1892, he rented the farm and purchased a residence in Pecatonica, where he has established a comfortable and attractive home.

In his political belief, Mr. Hance is a Democrat, and, although he is by no means a partism in public affairs, he pays considerable attention to the prominent questions of the age, and is careful to deposit his ballot in favor of what he deems right and true. Socially, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Farmers' Alliance, and is influential in both organizations. Mrs. Hance was born in the town of Waterloo, Canada, November 17, 1854, and is one of eight children, five sons and three daughters. She is a sincere Christian, and a lady whose generous disposition and hospitality are widely known.

HARLES H. MELLEN, one of the influential citizens of the village of Winnebago, lives just outside the corporation, on a beautiful tract of eighty acres of land, which is cultivated in the most intelligent and thorough manner. Born in Skancateles, Onondaga County, N. Y., December 11, 1829, he is the son of Erastus Mellen, whose birth occurred in Franklin County, Mass., October 12, 1800. His father, Jeremiah Mellen, was also a native of the Bay State, and of Scotch ancestry.

There is a tradition that two sons of the Mellen family accompanied their parents to America, where they were among the first settlers of Massachusetts. There they secured a tract of timber land and commenced to clear the property. One son was killed by the falling of a tree, so the other was the ancestor of all the Mellens in the United States. The grandfather of our subject removed from Massachusetts to New York State, where he was a pioneer in the town of Skaneateles. Purchasing a tract of partially cleared land, he resided upon it for a number of years, and died October 15, 1826, in Mottville. The maiden name of his wife was Nancy Lindsey, who was born March 4, 1771, and died May 4, 1841.

Erastus Mellen was twenty years of age when his parents removed to the Empire State, where he met and married Sarah Mandevill, a native of Canterbury, that State. Her father, Jacob Mandevill, was born in New York, on the 22d of April, 1752, and was of Huguenot ancestry. He was a patriot of the War of the Revolution, being Commissary under Gen. Putnam. His last years were spent in Sennett, Cayuga County, where his death occurred January 19, 1839. He had married Sarah, the daughter of Jeremiah Clark, who was born at Cornwall, N. Y., March 5, 1774, and died in Sennett.

The father of our subject lived for a time on a farm in the town of Skaneateles, thence removed to Sennett, Cayuga County, and after a stay of two years there went to Tompkins County, where he purchased a tract of partially improved timber land. In 1834, he located on the Mandevill Homestead in Sennett, which he sold in 1853, and became the owner of a farm near Auburn, where he lived eight or nine years, then, also disposing of that tract, purchased a smaller farm near Palmyra, N. Y. Residing upon that estate until 1875, he came to Winnebago County, and made his home with his children until his decease. June 1, 1890; his wife had died September 30, 1876.

The six children reared by the parents of our subject were as follows: Jeremiah Clark, Charles II., Eliza, Judson, William and Albert, William served as a soldier in Company C, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, during the War of the Rebelion, and fell mortally wounded before Kennesaw Mountain in 1864. His remains now lie buried in the National Cemetery at Chattanooga. Charles II. Mellen, of this sketch, was given a good education, and, when old enough to do so, assisted his father in carrying on the home, residing under the parental roof until 1851, at which time he came to Illinois. Four years later he purchased a tract of land in Ogle County, which he farmed until 1876, and then, disposing of it, was engaged in the drug business at Winnebago until going West to Nebraska a few years later. In the Western country, our subject purchased six hundred and forty acres of land in Fairmont, Fillmore County, to the cultivation of which he gave his attention for one year and then rented it to tenants. He is still the owner of that tract, and in 1880 purchased the property spoken of in our opening paragraph.

Tho.B. Tale of

September 5, 1858, Mr. Mellen was united in marriage to Annis St. John, whose birth occurred in Weedsport, Cayuga County. N. Y. To them have been born three children: Elmer, Elida and Clarence. Mrs. Mellen is a member of the Congregational Church, in Ogle County, and, in polities, our subject is an out and out Republican. He has managed his affairs shrewdly and well, and may well be pleased with what he has accomplished by his own hands and steady persevering toil. He and his wife are greatly esteemed in the neighborhood, and cordially support all enterprises calculated to aid the social, moral and financial progress of their community.

ON. THOMAS B. TALCOTT, who is undoubtedly the oldest living settler of Winnebago County, was born in Hebron. Conn., April 17, 1806, the son of William and Dorothy (Blish) Talcott. When a child of five years, he accompanied his parents in their removal to Rome, Oneida County, N. Y., where the father settled upon an unimproved tract of land in the midst of a sparsely settled country. Amid such pioneer seenes, the lad grew to a rugged and stalwart manhood, well fitted to bear his part in the battle of life.

In 1830, our subject was elected Major of the One Hundred and Fifty-seventh New York Militia. One year later, he went to Horscheads, Chemung County, the same State, and engaged in the mercantile business in partnership with his brothers, Wait and Sylvester. With his father, he came West in 1835, driving all the distance from Rome, Oneida County, N. Y., with a horse and buggy, and arriving on the east bank of the Rock River, near the present site of Rockton, on Saturday, July 23. The only white man then in the vicinity was Stephen Mack, an Indian trader, who many years before had come from Boston in the employ of a fur company. At that early date there were not more than six families in the entire territory now embraced in Boone and Winnebago Counties.

Shortly after coming hither, the father of our subject returned to his home in Rome, N. Y., but in October, 1835, he was joined by his brother Henry, and, aided by him, he commenced to prepare the untilled soil of the prairie for their farms. It required arduous labor and great energy to bring the land to a state of cultivation, and none but a man of heroic nature would have braved the hardships attendant upon pioneer life. Mai. Taleott became closely identified with the public affairs of the community, and was elected a member of the first Board of County Commissioners. In connection with William E. Dunbar and Simon P. Doty, he organized the County of Winnebago, which then included all of Boone and half of Stephenson County.

In 1849, a still greater honor was conferred upon Mr. Talcott, by his election to the State Senate, and he was the first Whig candidate elected to that body from this Senatorial District. During his term in the Senate, the Illinois Central Railroad was chartered, with the condition of paying the State seven per cent. of its gross earnings. He was greatly interested in the Civil War, served as Assistant Revenue Assessor through the four years of the conflict, and gave his best efforts to aid in the preservation of the Union. In 1870, he took the census of the northern part of the county. He has also held various township offices in Rockton.

His portrait, on an accompanying page, perpet uates the lineaments of one of the best-known citizens of Winnebago County.

June 5, 1843, the marriage of Mr. Talcott to Miss Sophia E. Willard was solemnized in Rockton. Mrs. Talcott was born in Vernon, Oncida County, N. Y., November 11, 1821, the daughter of Asa and Lucy (Whiting) Willard. She is a descendant of Rev. Samuel Whiting, D. D., and Elizabeth St. John, his wife, who came to America in 1636, and through them her genealogy is traced back to William the Conqueror in two distinct lines. She has been the cheerful and efficient helpmate of her husband, and occupies a warm place in the affection of her acquaintances.

IHLANDER COPELAND, M. D., is familiar to most of the residents of Winnebago as one having his full share of business and who has attained to a good position in the medical fraternity of the county. He has a fine office, thoroughly equipped with everything pertaining to the profession, while his prompt attention to the ealls made upon him and his conscientious methods of practice have fully established him in the esteem and confidence of the people.

Our subject was born in Bridgewater, Mass.. March 6, 1811, and is a son of Alfred Copeland, also a native of that place as was his father, Daniel. Jonathan Copeland, the great-grandfather of our subject, was also born in the above-named town and State, and his father, the great-great-grandfather of the Doctor, William Copeland, was born in Braintree, Mass., and his father, Lawrence Copeland, was one of the passengers who came over in the "Mayllower" in 1620. The latter-named gentleman settled in Braintree, Mass., was married to Lydia Townsend and died in 1699, aged one hundred and ten years.

The great-great-grandfather of our subject married Mary, daughter of John Alden, the Pilgrim, and died in 1716, in his sixtieth year. Jonathan Copeland was a farmer, and spent his entire life in Bridgewater, Mass., dying in 1790 in his ninetieth year; he had married Miss Betsey, daughter of Thomas Snell. Daniel Copeland, the grandfather of our subject, was married to Susan, daughter of Joseph Ames. He was a farmer by occupation and with this he combined the trade of a carpenter. His farm is now owned and occupied by a grandson, he dying in 1827, at the age of eighty-six years; his good wife died when ninety years of age in 1834.

Alfred Copeland was reared a farmer, and when starting out in life for himself engaged in the mercantile business, residing in Bridgewater and Taunton until 1840, when he emigrated to Illinois and spent his last years in Byron Township, Ogle County. This decease occurred in 1871, when seventy-live years of age. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was May Williams, a native of Taunton, Mass., and the daughter of Nathaniel and Lucildia (Hodges) Williams; she departed this life in 1860, when seventy-eight years of age.

The parental family included ten children, all of whom were well educated. Our subject was reared in Taunton and early in life turned his attention to the study of medicine, reading with Dr. Bayles, of Taunton and afterward commenced practice at Fishkill, N.Y. After remaining there a short time, he went to Poultney, and after a stay of seven years in this city, came West to Michigan and was graduated from the Detroit Medical College. In 1853, he came to Winnelago County, and has been a resident of the village since 1866.

The lady to whom our subject was united in marriage in 1836 bore the name of Louisa Watkins and to them were born ten children, eight of whom are now living: Philander W., Louisa, Elizabeth, Frances, Rosephia, Nettie, Jessie and Edward L. Joseph, the first-born, served during the late war in the Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry for a period of two years, and at the end of that time was transferred to the First Tennessee Artillery and received the commission of First Lieutenant. served as Adjutant on the staff of Gen. Kepner at Ft. Pickering. He departed this life in 1881. Philander W. was also a soldier, enlisting September 17, 1861, in the Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry, and served in his regiment as principal musician until July, 1865.

Mrs. Copeland was born in the town of Spaulding, Dutchess County, N. Y., in May, 1816. Her father, Joseph Watkins, was a native of New Jersey, and was a tailor by trade, which he followed the greater part of his life together with farming. His place of business was in the town of Matteawan, near Fishkill, and he departed this life at the home of his son in Prattsburg, Steuben County, N. Y. His wife was known in her maidenhood as Abigail Watts. She was also a native of Dutchess County and died in Prattsburg. Her father was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and his demise occurred on the farm in Dutchess County. Mrs. Watkins was a decendant of Dr. Watts, the celebrated author of some of our popular hymns. The Doctor and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, in politics, he casts his vote in favor of Republican candidates.

P. NELSON, who has been Secretary. Treasurer and manager of the Skandia Boot and Shoe Company since the 1st of July, 1890, claims Sweden as the land of his nativity. He was born on the 27th of January, 1855, and when quite young lost his parents. Thus at an early age he was thrown upon his own resources, and his success in life has all been due to his own efforts. One brother, Louis, resides in Rockford, as do two of his sisters, Tilla and Sophia. The latter is the wife of Frank Coburg, of this city.

Our subject was the first of the family to emigrate to America. He took passage on a vessel which left Liverpool. During the voyage, they encountered very severe weather, and at length the ship struck on the rocks of Newfoundland. Thirteen minutes later it sank with five hundred and eighty on board. Only two hundred and thirteen of the passengers were saved, and most of these were young men who were better able to withstand the eold and exposure. The accident occurred at three o'clock in the morning, and it was not until six that they were rescued. As it was night time when the vessel sank, the passengers were in their night clothes, and thus attired, our subject hung on the rigging for three hours, beaten by the cold and merciless waves. At length, he with the others was landed on the bleak rocks and taken to Halifax, but they did not receive very humane treatment at that place. The few survivors finally reached Boston, which seemed to them a blessed haven after all they had undergone. Here they were treated in the kindest manner, fed and clothed, and societies in New York City sent them on to Chicago. The generous people of the latter place gave them money and other aid, and in that city Mr. Nelson got his start in life. He has never yet fully recovered from the exposure and hardships of that awful experience. He spent a year in Chicago, and then came to Rockford, where he has since resided.

Mr. Nelson was married in this city, to Abertena Johnson, who was born in Rockford, October 23, 1859. Her father, Andrew Johnson, who died some years ago, was a soldier of the late war, having served in Company K, Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. He participated in many engagements, and was wounded at Mission Ridge. He died in this city at the age of fifty-three. His wife is still living at the age of sixty-eight years. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have been born two children: George L, and Elsie M. The parents are both members of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and in polities, he is a Republican.

Mr. Nelson has led a busy and useful life, and by his own efforts has worked his way upward. He has become thoroughly acquainted with the boot business, and is now the efficient manager of the Skandia Boot and Shoe Company, which was organized in 1880. Its prosperity is largely due to his labors, for he has worked untiringly in its behalf.

UGUST HOLMIN. In the complexities of city life the business of merchant tailoring may be regarded as one of greatest importance in furnishing those evidences of refinement and taste that are represented in fashionable and well-fitting garments. Few establishments in mercantile life attract more general attention in these days of tasteful attire than those devoted to the manufacture and sale of gentlemen's garments, for at no period during its entire history has the tailor's art been so highly appreciated or better understood than at the present day. Among the most popular and prosperous houses devoted to this important branch of industry in Rockford, and well worthy of more than passing notice, is the concern of Marsales & Holmin, located at No. 111 South Main Street. This firm has been at this number since the spring of 1891, when they became sole proprietors of the Mcrehant Tailor Stock Company, of which Mr. Marsales and Mr. Holmin were members, the same being in existence for lifteen years. They earry all the latest and most fashionable styles and do first-class work.

Mr. Holmin, who has been a resident of Rockford since 1869, began here as a tailor and, with the exception of about eighteen months, has been a resident of the city ever since. He became one of the promoters and organizers of the Merchant Tailor Stock Company, was President and Treasurer for many years, and a Director of the company from its organization. Experienced and progressive, he is well and favorably known all over the city.

A native of Wester Gothland, Sweden, our subject's natal day was the 8th of January, 1849. As he grew to manhood, he received a common-school education and learned the tailor's trade in Sweden. and has followed this trade ever since he came to America in 1869. He was the first of his kinsmen to come to this country, but one year later his parents and other members of his family joined him. His parents, John and Bertha S. (Larson) Holmin, now reside on South Sixth Street, and although both are over seventy years of age, they are comparatively free from the ills and pains usual to their years. They are excellent citizens and have been members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church for years. The father has been a tailor all his life. In politics, he has affiliated with the Republican party since coming to this country. He has another son, Frank, who is a resident of Rockford, and a tailor by trade, working for the firm of which our subject is a member. Frank married Miss Anna Liud, a Swedish lady, and they now reside on South Sixth Street. A sister of our subject, Tilda, married S. Rybbum.

He of whom we write was married in Rockford to Miss Tilda Johnson, a native of that city, where she was reared and educated. Their union has resulted in the birth of three children: Oscar S., educated in the city schools; Esther A., and Joseph Rudolph. Mrs. Holmin's father, August Johnson, was a native of Sweden, but died many years ago in Rockford, where he was one of the early Swedish settlers. The mother is still living and finds a comfortable home with her daughter, Mrs. Holmin, She is now sventy years of age and a worthy and consistent member of the Lutheran Church.

In his political views, Mr. Holmin, like his father, leans to the Republican party and gives that the weight of his influence and vote. He has a pleasant residence at No. 107 South Second Street, and is one of the prosperous and much-esteemed citizens.

AMES WHITTLE. This gentleman, who has been actively engaged in agriculture for a number of years in Caledonia Township, Boone County, is now living retired in the village of Poplar Grove. He was born in Mercer, Essex County, Ontario, Canada, April 16, 1823. His father, Thomas Whittle, was also born in Canada, while his father. John Whittle, it is thought, had his birth in Ireland and was of Scotch ancestry. The latter-named gentleman came to America when a young man, and spent the remainder of his life in Canada.

Thomas Whittle came to the New World when a young man, and was married in Quebee, soon after which he went to Ontario and became a pioneer in Essex County. He purchased timber land and built a log house, in which our subject was born. His death occurred on that place in about 1855. The maiden name of our subject's mother was Betsey Levi, the daughter of Thomas and Betsey Levi. She was born in Quebec, Canada, and died on the home farm in Mercer, in 1837.

The parental family included thirteen children, of whom our subject was the ninth in order of birth. He remained in Mercer until 1843, then, in company with his brother Charles, came to Hlinois, making the entire journey overland with teams. The trip consumed thirteen days, and on arriving in Winnebago County, our subject found

John Hoodruft

Rockford to be little more than a village. He immediately commenced working out on farms in the vicinity, and a few years later was enabled to purchase a tract of partly improved land near Caledonia Village, this county, where he made his home for seven years. Then selling out, Mr. Whittle removed to Guilford Township, Winnebago County, where he cultivated the soil for six years, and then removed to near Somonauk, De Kalb County, and four years later purchased property southeast of Rockford. That was his abiding place for two years, when he sold his farm and returned to Caledonia and purchased the Early homestead, upon which he resided for twelve years. He is now living retired in Poplar Grove, fully enjoying the ease and comfort which his life of industry so well deserves.

In June, 1851, Miss Josephine, daughter of John and Julia Early, became the wife of our subject. She was born in Gossiled, Canada, and departed this life in March, 1887. The lady whom our subject chose as his second wife, in 1889, was Miss Minta Webster. She was born in this county, and is the daughter of Willet S. and Mary (Wheeler) Webster. Our subject reared a family of four children, only one of whom is living, E. J., who married Alice Hillyer, and has two children, Cora and Fred. Philetus, the second son, died when twenty-six years of age. Cora departed this life at the age of fifteen years, and Fred when a infant of nine months. Our subject is a Republic n in politics and is well respected in his community.

OHN WOODRUFF. There is probably no family in Boone County better known for intelligence and character, or more universally respected than that which is represented by the name just given. Our subject was born in Middlebury, New Haven County, Conn., July 9, 1813, the son of Philo and Lucy (Tuttle) Woodruff, natives also of the Nutmeg State, born in the town of Waterbury. Philo Woodruff's parents, Jonah and Mabel Woodruff, were born in New England and died in Connecticut when very old.

Like most of his ancestors, Philo Woodruff was a prosperous farmer and followed that occupation in his native State for many years. He subsequently moved to Broome County, N. Y., and there he and his esteemed wife received their final summons, the father dying at the age of eighty-seven, and the mother at the age of seventy-three years. Of the cleven children who blessed this union, all grew to mature years and three are yet living. The eldest child was a carpenter, the next a farmer, the third (our subject), a tailor, the next two (twins) became tinners, and the youngest son became the editor of a paper at Johnstown, Pa. He was living there at the time of the great flood, but escaped without injury. He still edits a paper, the Democrat, at that place. The father of these children hired a substitute for the War of 1812.

The original of this notice remained at home until fourteen years of age, and then learned the trade of a tailor, which he followed in Broome County, N. Y., until 1819. In the fall of that year, he decided to push further West, and reaching Illinois, settled on his present property. He purchased one hundred and sixty acres, erected a small house and there resided, engaged in tilling the soil, until 1860, when he bought his present town property. He was married on the 21th of April, 1834, to Miss Lucinda M. Dimick, who was born in Livingston County, N. Y., December 29, 1816. Her parents, Nathan C, and Temperance (Russell) Dimick, were natives of the Excelsion State, but her father spent the closing scenes of his life in Madison, Wis., dying at the age of sixtyfive. The mother passed away when eighty-seven years of age, in Wyoming, N. Y. They were the parents of two children, but only Mrs. Woodruff is now living.

The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Woodruff were Riverius and Charity (Hotchkiss) Russell, natives of England and America, respectively. When Riverius Russell came to this country during the Revolutionary War, he forsook the English vessel and joined the Colonists in their struggle for independence, fighting all through the war, and afterward receiving a pension for his services. He had a brother who also fought bravely for the Colonists. He and his wife passed their last days in

New York. The representatives of the Dimick and Russell families were originally for the most part farmers and mechanics, but in subsequent generations there were many professional men. The Dimicks were of Welsh descent and settled in Vermont.

The family of our subject consisted of eleven children, four of whom are living at the present time: Russell D., born in Broome County, N. Y., on the 11th of January, 1843, married Miss Laura Ball and is the father of two children, a son and daughter. During the Civil War, he enlisted in the Fifteenth Illinois Infantry and served all through the war. For seven months he was in Andersonville Prison, and only those who were in that horrible place can understand what he suffered during that time. A wonderful constitution alone brought him through. He is now residing in Rock Springs, Wyo., and is a painter and decorator. He is prominent in Grand Army circles and is Commander of the post at Rock Springs, and Quartermaster of the State troops of Wyoming.

Our subject's second child, John D., was also born in Broome County, N. Y., December 20, 1847, and took for his wife Miss Josephine Doty, who bore him three sons. He is now residing in Lander, Wyo., and is engaged in raising sheep, of which he owns between thirty and forty thousand head. He was one of the first State Senators elected in Wyoming, and there was considerable talk of running him for Governor of the State, of which he is one of the most prominent men.

The third child born to our subject, Edward D., M. D., is a resident of Salt Lake, but has retired from professional life on account of being overworked. He married Miss Minnie M. Roberts and is the father of a little daughter. Our subject's other child, Mary K., was born in this county, on the 20th of December, 1852, and became the wife of Payson E. Lamb, a farmer of Iowa, and they have four children, three daughters and a son. The subject of this sketch has one graudchild married, a daughter of Russell D. All these children are well educated and are intelligent and excellent people.

John Woodruff and his wife are regular attendants at the Methodist Episcopal Church when able, and their children are nearly all members of the same. He was formerly an old-line Whig in polities, and his first Presidential vote was east in 1836. Later, he voted for Fremont, and since then has athliated with the Republican party. He has been Justice of the Peace for twenty years and has held nearly every local office in the township.

of Poplar Grove are a class of whom the city may well feel proud, as they have added greatly to her financial strength and also to her reputation among the cities of Northern Illinois. Our subject, who is deceased, was a man of genuine and widespread popularity, was self-made and a worthy representative of the business community.

The original of this sketch was born in East Hamburg, Eric County, N. Y., March 7, 1819, and was the son of William Webster who, like his father, Joseph, was born in New Jersey. The latternamed gentleman on removing to the Empire State, purchased a tract of land in the town of East Hamburg, where he made his home until his decease. William Webster remained on a farm in his native State until removing to New York when a young man and was one of the pioneers of East Hamburg. He also purchased a tract of timber land, upon which he built a sawmill, and was engaged in its operation with his farming pursuits. About 1850, he came West to Boone County and died in Poplar Grove.

Miss Catherine Willet, the maiden name of our subject's mother, was born in New Jersey and died in Poplar Grove. He of whom we write was educated in East Hamburg, and when sixteen years of age commenced clerking in a store in Buffalo, where he was employed for five years. He was then engaged in the mercantile business in his ative place until 1845, when he sold out and came to Illinois. They came from Buffalo by way of the Lakes to Chicago, and by team to Poplar Grove, and purchased three hundred and twenty acres of land in this county. He farmed for about fifteen years, at the expiration of which time he removed to the village of Poplar Grove, and launched out in the lumber and grain business, from which he retired with a handsome competence, and lived retired until his death in 1885.

September 20, 1842, Mr. Webster was married, in East Hamburg, N. Y., to Mary J., daughter of Thomas Wheeler, who is a native of Massachusetts. She was born in East Hamburg, February 16, 1821, and by her union with our subject has become the mother of the following children: Katherine B., Mrs. Harry M. Hudson; Minta, who married James Whittle; Julia, the wife of D. C. Cowan; Elida M., the widow of A. O. Woodard; Albourne L., who married Edwin Willet; Warren M., the husband of Edith Clark; Adelbert, who married Eulia Miller; and two children Albourne and Warren A. are deceased.

The father of Mrs. Webster, on removing to New York, located in East Hamburg, where he followed his trade of a blacksmith until his death, in 1829. His wife, who was born in Rhode Island, was known in her maidenhood as Martha Baxter. She came to Illinois and died at the home of Mrs. Webster in Poplar Grove. Our subject was a stanch Republican.

ENJAMIN B. HOVEY, of Cherry Valley, was born January 16, 1825, in Washington County, Ohio, and is a son of Harvey C. and Clarissa (Stanley) Hovey. His father was born in Vermont, in November, 1793, and was a son of William Hovey, a native of Rutland, Vt., and a farmer, who served through the Revolutionary War. He was born in 1748, and died October 20, 1831, at the age of eighty-six years. His family numbered three sons and six daughters, all of whom grew to mature years and became heads of families. The mother died January 20, 1853, at the very advanced age of ninety-three years. Her last days were spent at the home of her son, Harvey C., in Ohio.

The parents of our subject were married in Fearing, Washington County, Ohio, November, 14,

The lady was a daughter of Thomas and 1822. Mixenda (Dix) Stanley, natives of New England, who emigrated to Ohio in an early day. Our subject was the second child in the parental family, as follows: William T., B. B., Lucy, Edmund D., George S., Selden C., Mary Ann, Simon, Lucinda, Mixenda, Angelina, who died at the age of three years; Esther C.; Joseph R., who died in infancy, and Charles C., who was blind from early childhood, and after being an inmate of the blind asylum of Columbus, Ohio, two years, fell from a third-story window and died April 6, 1860, at the age of thirteen years. The only brother of our subject yet living is George S., a resident of Ohio. His sisters who are living are: Lucy, wife of Jonathan Alden, of Hollenburg, Washington County, Kan.; Mary Ann, wife of H. A. Stiles, of California; Lucinda. wife of Hiram Kyes, a farmer near Los Angeles, Cal.; and Mixenda, wife of Melvin True, an architect and builder of Lower Salem, Ohio.

The subject of this sketch was married on Christmas Day, 1850, to Miss Elizabeth Farley, of Lower Salem, a daughter of James and Ellen (Taylor) Farley. Her mother was a native of England, and her father of Washington County, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Hovey, as children, were reared near each other. When a young man, he learned the carpenter's trade, and did business for himself in Ohio for four years before coming to Illinois in 1856. In the spring of that year, he settled in Cherry Valley and bought a house upon the grounds where his present residence is now located. He built a store soon after locating here, and, filling it with a stock of hardware, did business in that line until 1859, when he was burned out. He then embarked in the grocery and provision trade, and, during the war, did an immense business, but after the close of the war he purchased a large stock of merchandise at inflated prices, which soon depreciated, and he was forced to the wall. He did not take advantage of the bankrupt act, and has never regretted his course, for he and his wife braved this adversity and at length paid off the indebtedness of $12,000. In the spring of 1880, Mr. Hovey became an employe in the land department of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, and has since been actively employed in that line. During this time, his sales of the lands belonging to the company will aggregate $100,000,000. On one occasion he made a sale of $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Hovey have one son and seven daughters: Edward H., born December 3, 1851; Mary F., Minnie F., Josephine L., Esther C., Nellie H., Clara S., and Nina Blanche. They were all given good educational advantages, and some of them have received instruction in music. All have now left the parental roof. Mr. and Mrs. Hovey also had another son: James Harvey, who died July 8, 1859, at the age of four years. The little fellow was playing in the hay-loft of his father's barn, and, with matches picked up from the factory close by, he probably set the hay afire, and was burned to death.

Mr. Hovey was Justice of the Peace one term, and was a Notary Public for about twenty years. His last commission was given him by Gov. Fifer, and expires in 1893. In his early manhood he was an Abolitionist, and for many years was an ardent supporter of the Republican party, but is now a stalwart Prohibitionist. He was reared in the faith of the Presbyterian Church, but for many years he and his wife have been active members of the Methodist Church.

OHN C. STARR, who is engaged in the manufacture of harness and saddlery in Belvidere, is a wide-awake and enterprising business man of this city. His life record is as follows: He was born in Whitehall, Washington County, N. Y., March 16, 1839, and is a son of Humphrey G. Starr, who was born in County Cavan, Ireland, April 10, 1810. His father, Thomas Starr, and the great-grandfather of our subject, Jeremiah Starr, were both born in the same locality, and followed the occupation of farming. In 1824, Jeremiah Starr, accompanied by his wife and five children, sailed for America, and after a voyage of thirty-three days landed at Quebec. He located thirty miles east of Montreal, where he purchased land and engaged in farming until his death, which occurred at the advanced age of eighty nine years. He married Sarah Nesbitt, who was born in County Cavan, and was a daughter of Humphrey and Catherine (Knight) Nesbitt, natives of Ireland, and of English descent. The grandparents of our subject were Episcopalians in religious belief.

Humphrey Starr was only fourteen years of age when he crossed the briny deep, locating with the family in Canada. The following year, he began to learn the trade of a harness-maker in Montreal, serving a five years' apprenticeship, after which he went to Whitehall, N. Y., where he was employed at his trade for five years. He then began business for himself in Hartford, Washington County, N. In the autumn of that year, he came to Belvidere, and after a few months went to Forreston, Ogle County, where he carried on harness-making for four years. The succeeding year and a half of his life were passed in Freeport, after which he returned to Belvidere, where he still makes his home. He first married Lucy M. Black, who was born in Vermont, and was a daughter of Asa Black. Her death oecurred in Whitehall in 1816, after which Mr. Starr wedded Harriet J. Wicker, a native of Rutland County, Vt., and a daughter of B. P. Wicker.

He remained with him until he had attained his majority, when he came to Belvidere and commenced business for himself in company with his brother George II. They continued to engage in the manufacture of harness and saddlery for four years, when our subject bought out his brother's interest, and has since been alone. He has built up an excellent trade and secured a liberal patronage as the result of his persistent industry, good management and fair dealing.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Starr has always been a Republican, and has filled several offices. He served for four years as Alderman of the First Ward, four years as Assistant Supervisor, and at the present time is a member of the City School Board. Socially, he is a member of Belvidere Camp No. 52, M. W. A. In business and social circles, he ranks high, and is well deserving of the warm regard in which he is held.

Mrs. Starr bore the maiden name of Angeline E. Pendleton. She was born in MeHenry County, Ill., and is a daughter of Chancey and Eliza Pendleton. Their union was celebrated in November, 1863, and unto them have been three sons and a daughter: Chancey, Mary E., William and John Irvin. The family circle yet remains unbroken.

EORGE S. CATE. The gentleman whose portrait and biography are here presented is a prominent citizen of Spring Township, Boone County. He is a general farmer and the owner of a fertile and productive estate, located on section 3. Born in Salem, Mass., November 2, 1816, he is the son of Samuel and Mary (Stacey) Cate, natives respectively of New Hampshire and Massachusetts. The father departed this life in Ohio when eighty-seven years of age, and the mother died in Salem, Mass., in her forty-fifth year.

Both the paternal and maternal grandfathers of our subject were patriots in the War of the Revolution, one of them being crippled for life in that struggle, and in prison for eleven months in New York City. George S. of this sketch was one in a family of seven children, of whom he is the only survivor. He remained at home until fifteen years of age and then, learning the trade of a currier, followed that occupation for eleven years. He had resolved to seek a home in the Far West, and accordingly took passage on a boat at Buffalo, landing in Cleveland and proceeding thence in a canal boat to Chillicothe, where he again embarked on a steamer. After sailing down the Ohio River and up the Mississippi, he arrived in St. Louis, from which city he traveled to Galena, Ill., and there met a gentleman, who, for a small compensation, gave him a ride to Boone County. Arriving here, he purchased a farm consisting of one hundred and forty aeres and at once commenced its improvement. The old log house which stood on the place remained his home for ten years, when he erected a more substantial residence.

Miss Marille Heaton, who was born in 1821, in New York, became the wife of our subject in 1853. She bore her husband two sons, who are now deceased, and departed this life in February, 1891, in her sixty-ninth year. Mr. Cate is one of the largest landowners in the county, his estate including at the present time three hundred broad acres. He has recently creeted a handsome farm residence and has improved his estate with all the necessary buildings and machinery which make of agriculture a pleasant as well as profitable business. He came to Boone County with no knowledge whatever of cultivating the soil, and to-day is known throughout Northern Illinois as the owner of one of the best estates in this section.

For four years he filled the office of Justice of the Peace and has been the incumbent of various other positions of honor and trust. Modest and unassuming, his sturdy integrity has won the confidence of all with whom business or social intercourse has brought him in contact, and his place is among the most successful and prominent residents of Boone County.

EROME B. ELLSWORTH was brought up to the life of an agriculturist by his father, Sherwood A. Ellsworth, and like the majority of boys, has followed in his ancestor's footsteps, and is now one of the leading farmers of Boone County. His line farm attests his thrift and industry and his success in life. He is a native-born resident of Boone County, Ill., born in Manchester in March, 1851, and the son of Sherwood A. and Sarah J. (Sherman) Ellsworth.

Sherwood A. Ellsworth was born in New York State in 1814; when an infant he was taken by his par-

Mr. Ellsworth's second marriage was to Miss Sarah J. Sherman, of Bennington, Vt. In 1842, Mr. Ellsworth left the Green Mountain State and with his wife and four sons came by water to Chicago. From that city they walked out to his eighty-acre farm, or claim, which his father had purchased for him, and which is now one-half of the present farm owned by our subject. Here Mr. Ellsworth passed away on May 15, 1883, when sixty-nine years of age. widow and our subject carry on the farm at the present time. Mr. Ellsworth was active and industrious and worked hard all his life.

Our subject was reared on his present farm and has ever attended strictly to his chosen occupation and with such substantial results as can be seen by glancing over his fine farm. He has traveled very little, and was never in a railroad coach nor had he been to Chicago until twenty-seven years of age. He has seldom been farther from home than Rockford, Beloit or Belvidere. On April 2, 1872, he was married to Miss Catherine Campbell, daughter of Alexander J. and Ann (Mc-Eachren) Campbell. She was one of nine children.

He also has a good barn, 24x40, and has a granary and tool house combined, one and a half stories high, 24x40. He also has other substantial outbuildings. He keeps about a dozen cows, twentyfive head of horned cattle, ten or twelve horses, and annually sells about forty hogs.

DONIRAM JUDSON SWEZEY, a horticulturist residing on section 16, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, was born in the town of Harmony, Chautauqua County, N. Y., February 22, 1836. His greatgrandfather, Daniel Swezey, was born in Suffolk County, Long Island, N. Y., in June, 1753, and was a son of Christopher Swezey, and a grandson of Stephen Swezey, one of six sons who lived in Swezeytown, Suffolk County; he there spent his entire life, as did also Christopher. Daniel was there married, and in 1796 went to Norway, Herkimer County, N. Y., where he bought four hundred acres of land, erected a log cabin and made a farm. The grandfather of our subject, Daniel Swezey, was born on Long Island, December 25, 1778, and was eighteen years old when his parents went to Herkimer County, where he resided until 1836, when he removed to Chautauqua County, and purchased a farm, upon which he spent the remainder of his days. He married Clarissa Sherry, who was born in New Haven, Conn., September 15, 1789. She was descended from an old family of English origin, founded in Massachusetts in 1635.

The father of our subject, Darius A. Swezey, was born in the town of Russia, Herkimer County, N. Y., August 15, 1808, and in 1833 became one of the early settlers of Chautauqua County, where he bought a tract of timber land and erected a substantial log eabin, in which our subject was born. In 1845, he sold his farm and removed to Erie County, Pa., where he bought land, upon which he resided until 1851, when he emigrated to Winnebago County, Ill. Purchasing the farm upon which our subject now resides, he there made his home until his death. His wife bore the maiden name of Esther Brooks. She was born in Cortland County, N. Y., September 30, 1815, and was a daughter of James and Rhoda Brooks. The former was born in New Marlboro, Berkshire County, Mass. He went to New York when a young man and resided in Cortland County until 1827, when he went to Chautaugua County, where he made his home until 1854. He then sold out and removed to Eric County, Pa., where he spent his last days. In the Swezey family were six children, one of whom, Edward, enlisted in the Seventyfourth Illinois Infantry and was afterward transferred to the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Regiment. He died nine days after his discharge.

Mr. Swezey whose name heads this record acquired his early education in the public schools of Chautauqua County, N. Y., and Erie, Pa., and later attended Waterford Academy, of Pennsylvania, and the National Normal School, of Ohio. When a young man, he commenced teaching and followed that profession until his marriage. The latter part of the time he occupied the chair of languages and literature in Elgin Academy, but on his marriage resigned that position and bought the home farm in Guilford Township. For some years he engaged in general farming, but now gives his attention almost exclusively to horticultural pursuits.

In 1866, Mr. Swezey led to the marriage altar Miss Melinda Bruner, who was born in Canada and is a daughter of Philip Bruner, who is mentioned in the sketch of M. L. Bruner on another page of this work. Four children have been born to our subject and his wife: Etta, Otto, Royal and Fannic.

The parents are both members of the State Street Baptist Church, of Rockford. Mr. Swezey is a member of Grange No. 6, with which he has been connected since its organization, seventeen years ago, and for three years he managed a store in the interest of the Grange. Throughout life he has been a strong advocate of temperance principles and since 1884 has affiliated with the Prohibition paty. In 1889, he was its candidate for the State Legislature and received a larger vote than any other candidate of his party. He is a public-spirited and progressive citizen, prominent and influential, and has the high regard of all with whom he has been brought in contact.

ICHARD E. BROWN was born on the farm in Owen Township, Winnebago County, where he is at present residing. September 8, 1858. Before giving a notice of his life, we deem it our duty to first briefly advert to the life history of those of whom he draws his origin. His direct progenitor, Mowry Brown, was born in Burrillville, R. L., December 29, 1813. His father, Joseph Brown, was also a native of that State, where he carried on farming. He passed his last days in Winnebago County, dying at the home of his son Mowry.

The maiden name of the grandmother of our subject was Elsie Mowry, who, as far as known, was also born in Rhode Island, where she spent her entire life. The father of our subject was reared in his native State, and, when starting out in life for himself, served an apprenticeship at the earpenter's trade. In 1835, he came to Illinois and worked until 1839 in Alton, at the end of which time he came to Winnebago County, accompanied hither by his wife, who made the journey by steamers on the Mississippi and Rock Rivers to Rockford Township. Here Mr. Brown purchased an aere of land on North Main Street, on which he erected a small frame house, and began working at his trade. His first contract was building a house for Dr. George Haskell. He made his home in the city until 1840, then moved to a claim which he had made on section 26, in what is now Owen Township. He bought a log house, which he moved on to his land and occupied until able to replace it with a more comfortable edifiee. Mr. Brown prosecuted his trade a part of each year until able to give his entire time and attention to the cultivation of his land. His death occurred on the farm June 4, 1879.

The lady to whom Mowry Brown was married, February 26, 1837, was Miss Lucy Pease. Her birth occurred in Lyons, Wayne County, N. Y., March 31, 1815. Her paternal grandfather was Ebenezer Pease, a native of Ballston, Saratoga County, N. Y., and the son of Abel Pease, a native of Massachusetts, who went to New York State when a very young man, where he was married in Saratoga County, in 1785, to Lucy Martin, also a native of the Bay State. On her death, Abel Pease married Mabel Campbell, a widow, Ebenezer M. Pease was a natural mechanic and was employed in various lines of work in New York State until 1834, when, in company with his wife and seven children, four sons and three daughters, he came to Illinois via the Eric Canal to Buffalo, and by way of the Lakes and Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to Alton. They made their home for a number of years in the latter-named city, and then removed to Jersey County, where the father passed his last days. The maiden name of his wife was Pamelia Wandell; she was a native of New York State, where her decease occurred.

The mother of our subject was eighteen years old when she came to this State, and resided in Alton until her marriage. She is now residing on the old homestead which her husband entered from the Government. Seven of her eleven children grew to mature years: George S. and Charles E. reside in Rockford Township; Mary E. married Eghert Phelps and makes her home in Owen Township, as does also Henry A.; Fred O. lives near Fairbury, Neb., and Richard E. is on the old homestead. William C., the fifth child, died when nineteen years of age, Florence E. when twelve years old and Ellen M. in her tenth year.

Emeline, the first-born, died in infancy, and Harriet E. is also deceased.

Richard E. Brown, like many of the farmer lads, was educated in the district schools and later prosecuted his studies in the Rockford schools. He was reared to agricultural pursuits and for a number of years managed the old homestead, which has always been his place of residence. He devoted his entire time on the farm until 1890, when he engaged in the manufacture of brick. December 7, 1880, Miss Fannie Martin, who was born in Rockton, became his wife. She was the daughter of Edwin and Caroline Martin, and by her union with Mr. Brown has become the mother of two children, Gertie E, and Clifton Martin. Our subject and his estimable wife are devoted members of the Christian Union Church, and in his social relations, Mr. Brown is connected with the Farmers' Mutual Benevolent Association.

ACOB ROSE. About three miles from Rockford is a splendid farm, embellished with good buildings and brought to a fine state of improvement. This was the home of the late Jacob Rose, who, after cultivating the soil for many years and introducing modern machinery and methods of agriculture in his farming operations, there passed away December 12, 1887. A man of great industry, unflagging perseverance, the soul of honor, scorning deceit in every form, he was beloved by all with whom he came in contact and his death was mourned as a public calamity.

This pioneer of Winnebago County was born in Pennsylvania, the son of St. Clair Rose, who, as far as is known, spent his entire life in the Keystone State. Early orphaned, our subject became self-supporting when quite young and when about seventeen came to Winnebago County, where he resided until his death. By industriously saving his wages, he was enabled to purchase a farm in 1859, five years after his marriage with Catherine Scougall. This estimable lady was born in England, and was the daughter of James Scongall, a native of Edinboro, Scotland, and the granddaughter of James Scougall, Sr., who probably spent his entire life in the Land of the Thistle.

James Seougall, Jr., learned the trade of a stonemason, which he followed for a time in Liverpool, then returned to Edinboro. In 1846, accompanied by his family, he emigrated to America, taking passage at Glasgow in the sailing-vessel "Sault Anna," and landing in New York six weeks later. From there he proceeded by the Hudson River, Erie Canal and Lakes to Chicago, then a small village, and followed his trade in the last-named place for a few years. Coming thence to Rockford, his remaining years were passed here. The maiden name of his wife was Margaret Blair; she was born in England and died in Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Rose became the parents of seven living children, namely: Walter, Jessie, Jennie, Harry, Laura, Kittie and Lucius. Since the death of his father, the eldest son superintends the farm, which under his capable supervision is kept in the high state of improvement to which it was brought by the father.

ENRY ROLFE, now retired and residing at No. 710 North Second Street, where he owns a comfortable home, was born in Tompkins County, Endfield Township, N. Y., on the 13th of August, 1833, and was reared and educated there. His father, Chester Rolfe, and his grandfather, Samuel Rolfe, were natives of New Jersey, and of English descent. Samuel Rolfe passed his boyhood and youth in his native State and was there married to Miss Hannah Ellison. After the birth of several of their children, they moved to New York State, where Samuel and a brother, Jonathan Rolfe, made a settlement in the wilds of Endfield Township, Tompkins County. There they began clearing their land of the heavy timber with which it was covered, and after years of hard labor became the owners of comfortable homes. Samuel Rolfe and wife lived long and prosperous lives and died on the home place. They were well-known pioneers and representative citizens, Mr. Rolfe holding the oflice of Justice of the Peace for many years. Their son, Chester Rolfe, was one of a large family of children, all of whom lived to be grown, and one, George, is now engaged in farming in Endfield Township, that being the occupation of most of the family.

Chester Rolfe was married in Endfield Township to Miss Matilda Corkendall, who was born and reared there and who was of Pennsylvania-Dutch extraction. After marriage, Mr. Rolfe and wife began life on a farm in Endfield Township, and there they lived and labored until the death of Mrs. Rolfe in 1863, when fifty-five years of age. Mr. Rolfe survived her many years. He came West to visit his son in 1881 and died on the last day of that year. His body was carried back and interred in the old family graveyard in Endfield Township. He was then about seventy-six years of age. In his early life he was a Whig and later a Democrat. He held a number of local offices in his township, and was a man of well-rounded character. He left a large family, five of whom are yet living.

Henry Rolfe was reared to the arduous duties of the farm and it was but natural that when starting out in life for himself he should choose agricultural pursuits as his occupation in life, for his ancestors had all been tillers of the soil. When a young man, he came to Ogle County, Ill., and was married, in Scott Township, to Miss Adelaide Ashton, a native of Mt. Morris, Livingston County, N. Y., born May 19, 1844, and the daughter of Sidney and Eliza (Downs) Ashton, natives, respectively, of Pennsylvania and Vermont. Mr. and Mrs. Ashton resided on a farm in Mt. Morris Township for many years and the mother died on the 27th of September, 1866, her birthday, while returning from a visit to Illinois. She was just fifty-five years of age.

Mr. Ashton spent the last years of his life with his daughter, Mrs. Rolfe, in Rockford, and received his final summons on the 7th of March, 1887, when over eighty-eight years of age. He and Mrs. Ashton were members of the Universalist Church, and, in politics, he was a Democrat. Their children, eight in number, are all living but one. Mr. and Mrs. Rolfe have no children. They attend the Christian Union Church, take an active interest in all worthy movements and are classed among the best citizens of the county. Mr. Rolfe is the owner of three hundred and twenty aeres of good land in Scott Township, Ogle County, this State, and has good, substantial buildings on his place. He also owns some property in West End addition to the city. He came to Rockford in 1877, and since 1883 he has made his home at No. 710 North Second Street.

UST JOHNSON. In 1877, or fifteen years ago, Mr. Johnson began his business in the bus and express line with a single horse, and by his industry and excellent business acumen soon accumulated a handsome competence. He now does a large and lucrative business, employs three men and has three or four good outfits. The result of his industry and able management is that he now owns a fine double house at Nos. 116, and 118 North Third Street, and is also a stockholder in the Skandia Plow Company, the Rockford Furniture and Undertaking Company, the Skandia Hardware Company, and is interested in the Union Grocery Store and other institutions.

Mr. Johnson was born in Jonkoping Lan, Sweden, September 26, 1852, and remained there until fifteen years of age, or in 1868, when he came to this country by way of Quebec, Canada. He subsequently came to the States, passed the first two years laboring on a farm, and with the money thus earned brought his parents to this country, He made a home for them and later learned the trade of a gardener and florist, being in the employ of G. A. Sanford & F. H. Manney for a number of years. His father, John Grabrilson, was a tiller of the soil and died in Rockford, in 1875, when tiftyeight years of age. His mother was also of that age when her death occurred, on the 18th of October, 1883. Both were members of the Lutheran Church. Of their large family of children, Gust Johnson was the eldest. He was married in Rockford to Miss Anna Olson, a native of Wester Gothland Province. Sweden, who when five years of age was brought to this country by her parents, Olof and Mariah (Bringlesdauter) Olson. The mother, who had always been a member of the Lutheran Church, died when sixty years of age, but the father is still living and is now residing on Fourth Avenue. He, also, has ever been a deyout Lutheran in his religious belief.

Of the five children born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson two are deceased, one who died in infancy, and a daughter, Edna L. Those living are William G. and Ernest V. (twins), who so closely resemble each other that is difficult to tell them apart. They are bright and healthy, and about twelve years of age. Arthur L. is an intelligent little fellow of seven.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are active members of the First Swedish Lutheran Church and are worthy and esteemed citizens. Mr. Johnson is a sound Republican in his political views, and in public movements he has ever taken a deep interest, but has never been an office-seeker.

ETER A. LARSON, who does an extensive business as a plaster contractor, was born on the island of Orland, near Sweden, February 7, 1819. His father, Lars Pearson, died when our subject was only nine years of age. His mother is still living at the age or sixty-four and yet makes her home in Sweden. She is a member of the Lutheran Church, as was her husband. Three children of the family are living in this country. A. O. Larson works for his brother and is married. The sister, Louisa, is the wife of August Johnson, a tailor on Second Avenue.

No event of special importance occurred during the childhood of our subject, which was passed in his native land, where he partially learned the trade of a plasterer. The year 1871 witnessed his emigration to America. He sailed in the spring and landed in New York City, whence he made his way to Chicago, where he resided for two years, there completing his trade. He then came to Rockford, in 1873, and has since made his home in this city. From the beginning, his trade has constantly increased and by good work and moderate prices he has secured a liberal patronage and acquired a handsome competence. His handiwork is seen in many of the leading homes in this city and compares favorably with any done. In connection with work at his trade, he is interested in the Rockford Manufacturing Company, is a stockholder and Director in the Union Grocery Company and holds some $2,000 worth of stock in the Swedish Building and Loan Association. He owns a large three-story brick store and flats, a valuable property, located at No. 303 Seventh Street, and a fine brick residence at No. 1103 Third Avenue, the family residence.

A marriage ceremony performed in this city united the destinies of Mr. Larson and Mrs. Oleda C. (Lundwall) Borg, who was born in Sweden, May 17, 1853, and when a maiden of fourteen summers came to this country. She afterwards gave her hand in marriage to S. A. Borg, a Swedish gentleman and a mason by trade, who died in 1877, at the age of twenty-seven years. One child was born of this union, A. Leonard, who is a graduate of the Rockford Business College and now occupies a position as book-keeper with the firm of Carlson & Co., on Seventh Street. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Larson was born a family of seven children, three of whom are now deceased, two named respectively Arthur, and Harold. The living are Ellen C., Gertie A., Elmer E. and Hazel V., and all under the parental roof. With the First Lutheran Church the parents hold membership and in social circles they rank high. In his political views, Mr. Larson is a Republican.

ANIEL BEERS, deceased, was one of the first settlers of Winnebago County, and it may be truly said that he was one of its most esteemed citizens. He came to this county when there was one store and a few log cabins in Rockford, and the same year took up Government land in what is now Guilford Township, his house being one of the first in that township. There, with the boundless prairie stretching on every side and with neighbors many miles distant, Mr. and Mrs. Beers settled down to the duties of life. For a number of years they experienced many hardships and privations, but they finally got a start, and their subsequent prosperous career was the result. In those early days, they took all their grain to Chicago with ox-teams and many were the mishaps that occurred in crossing streams, for there were no bridges. There were no churches, but it must not be supposed there were no meetings, for the few neighbors would meet at each other's homes and have a season of prayer and thanksgiving. Mr. Beers' log house was the scene of many a religious gathering, and his good wife would get supper for the whole congregation. All in the community were Methodists and when they met together they enjoyed themselves as only Methodists can.

Mr. and Mrs. Beers resided for many years on the farm they had improved in every way, and then moved to Monroe, Wis., where they resided for seven years. They owned a farm near that city. About 1866, they came to Rockford and here Mr. Beers' death occurred in 1880, when seventy years of age. Liberal, generous, and high-minded his life was filled with good deeds. He was a model American citizen. A Methodist in his religious belief, he was one of the leading men of his church, and was Class-Leader for many years. He was a Republican in politics and a strict temperance man. In pioneer days, when his first barn was to be raised, and whiskey was expected on such occasions, he informed his neighbors that no whiskey was to be given, but that his wife would give them a fine supper.

Mr. Beers was born in Pennsylvania and reared on a farm in that State. When a young man he went to LeRoy, N. Y., and was married there to Miss Mary Herrick, a native of that city. She is now past the eightieth milestone of her life but is still quick and active, and is one of the most pleasant and agreeable old ladies to meet. She has endeavored to make her life a useful one and to follow the teachings of the Golden Rule. She yet lives in the kind remembrances of the good old days of yore and her reminiscences of them are very interesting.

Mrs. Beers became the mother of a large family of children, and of them these are deceased: John, William D., James, Henry and Lucius. All died young but Henry, who was married. The children now living are Matilda, wife of Willard Convers, a farmer of Guilford Township; Louisa M., wife of Russell Marsh, a farmer of Guilford Township; Richard, a wealthy farmer of Nebraska, married Miss Rhoda Marsh; Ella is the wife of a Mr. Campbell, a farmer of Nebraska; Sarah, wife of Alfred Ufford, now resides on a farm in Iowa; Flora, wife of David Ralston; Lucy, wife of Henry Thompson, a farmer of Nebraska, and Olive resides in Butte City, Mont., and is a dressmaker there.

NDERS J. ANDERSON, a successful farmer, who rents and operates two hundred and seventy acres of well-improved and valuable land in Rockford Township, was born in Sweden, October 28, 1818. His mother died in that land when our subject was only fourteen years of age. His father was born in the same province as Anders and followed the occupation of farming throughout his entire life. He was a second time married and some eight years later the family emigrated to the New World, in 1875. The father is now living at the age of eighty-two years and his wife is about seventy-six years of age. Both have been life-long members of the Lutheran Church.

Our subject is the eldest of the family and was the first to come to America. One brother, Claus II. Anderson, is now a farmer of Cherry Valley Township, where he resides with his family. Gust and August both died in childhood. Anders crossed the Atlantic in 1870, and for a time resided in Chicago, III., after which he made his home for one year in Stephenson County. He has been a resident of Winnebago County for seventeen years and for thirteen years has resided upon the farm which he now occupies. He is an enterprising farmer and industrious man and is widely known in this community.

Mr. Anderson was married in the city of Rockford to Mrs. Johanna Hallgren, nee Johnson. She was born in Sweden. October 9, 1832, and when a young lady came to this country. Her parents, Joseph and Anna (Swanson) Johnson, were natives of Sweden, where they spent their entire lives as farming people, dying at the ages of eighty-two and eighty-seven years, respectively. They were members of the Lutheran Church and were worthy and respected people.

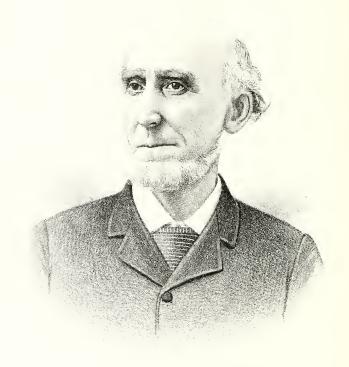

Mrs. Anderson is the youngest of three daughters. Charlotte, who came to the United States in the year 1861, is now the wife of John Lidell, a cabinet-maker in the employ of the Standard Furniture Company; Mary came to the United States and located in Rockford in 1879, and is now the wife of Gust Rappson. The wife of our subject crossed the water in 1868, and has since resided in Rockford. She was first married to John Hallgren. who was born and reared in Sweden, and in 1868 emigrated to this country. He became a resident of Rockford and after his marriage settled upon a farm near that eity, where his death occurred at the age of thirty-seven. In politics, he was a Republican, was a member of the Lutheran Church and a good eitizen. He died respected by all, and at his death left a daughter, Ellen, an accomplished and intelligent young lady, who resides with her mother. Mr. Anderson takes an active interest in political affairs, votes with the Republican party and is a stalwart supporter of its principles. He and his wife both hold membership with the Lutheran Church and are active workers in its interests, aiding in its upbuilding in all possible ways.

OYAL HANCE, widely and favorably known throughout Pecatonica Township, is one of the well-to-do farmers of this section. The family occupies a high position in social circles, and Mr. Hance may be properly classed among the representative men who are uniformly found on the side of enterprises calculated to promote the best interests of the community.

Our subject was born November 30, 1834, in Seneca County, Ohio, and is a son of Thomas and Phoebe (DeWitt) Hance; his mother was born in Cayuga County, N. Y. The paternal grandparents of our subject were Adam and Elizabeth (Bunn) Hance, the former passing away in his seventy-seventh year, and his wife when seventy years of age.

D P. Mesick

The life of Ogden Hance, a brother of our subject, will be found portrayed on another page in this volume, to which sketch the reader is referred for the family history. He of whom we write remained at home until twenty-three years of age, when he was married, November 12, 1863, to Libbie Kellogg, who was born July 2, 1812, in St. Lawrence County, N. Y. Mrs. Hance is the daughter of Albert and Nancy (McDonald) Kellogg, the McDonalds coming from Scotland. The father of Mrs. Hance was a son of David and Henrietta (Wells) Kellogg, both of whom died in Messina, N. Y., aged respectively ninety and eighty-four years.

Royal Hance is one of the best-known men in Winnebago County, as soon after his marriage he located on a part of the land his father had taken up from the Government, which has been his home up to the present time. His estate comprised sixty acres, to which he has since added thirty-four acres and has the entire amount under the best of cultivation. Mr. and Mrs. Hance have become the parents of four children, one of whom died in infancy; Earl C., who was born December 8, 1864, married Miss Hattie Martin and has one son; Ray D., who was born August 15, 1872, is a graduate of the Pecatonica High School, and resides with his parents; LaMont, who was born November 12, 1876, is also at home.

AVID P. MESICK, who is at present residing in Rockford, was born in Athens, Greene County, N. Y., January 2, 1824. His father was a native of that State, where, as far as known, his grandfather was born. The latter named gentleman was a farmer, and departed this life in Albany County. Peter Mesick was reared in his native State and followed the occupation of a farmer until reaching forty years of age, when he learned the trade of a stonemason. He later removed from Albany to Cayuga County, where he made his home till the fall of 1851, at which time he came to Illinois and located in Rockford, where he died.

The mother of our subject was known in her maidenhood as Sarah Remer. She was born in Albany County, N. Y., and became the mother of thirteen children, viz: Catherine, Henry, Jacob, David P., Andrew, Margaret, Sarah, Joseph, Lydia J., Peter, Chauncey, William L. and Kate R. Jacob served in the late war and died soon after its close; William was also a soldier in that struggle.

The original of this sketch was very young when his parents moved to Albany County, and was a lad of seven years when they made their home in Cayuga County. There he was reared and educated, and in early life learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, serving an apprenticeship of five years. He worked as a journeyman for a time and afterward became a contractor. In 1854, he came to Rockford, arriving here on the 16th of November. He at once began his trade of contractor and builder, at which business he was employed for seventeen years. At the expiration of that time, he purchased a farm in Cherry Valley Township, and was engaged in its cultivation for twelve years. Then, making his home in Rockford, he has resided since that time in a pleasant residence on Catlin Street.

Susan Cram, who was born in the town of Keysville, Clinton County, N. Y., February 25, 1829, became the wife of our subject October 5, 1862. Mrs. Mesick was the daughter of Jacob Cram, a native of New England, where his father, Ebenezer Cram, was also born. The grandfather of Mrs. Mesick was a shoemaker by trade and spent his last days in the town of Sennett, Onondaga County, N. Y. Her father removed from Vermont to Clinton County, N. Y., and thence to Onondaga County in October, 1833, the journey being made via Lake Champlain and Eric Canal. He resided in the town of Elbridge until 1846, when he came to Illinois, accompanied by his wife and five children.

At that time Rockford was little more than a village and neighbors in the surrounding country were few and far between. Mr. Cram settled on the west side of the river, where he made his home for a few months, and then leased a farm, which he cultivated one year. Then, on account of ill-health, he returned to Rockford and resided there until his decease. The maiden name of the mother of Mrs. Mesick was Armina Perry; she was reared in Clinton County, N. Y., and was the daughter of Eli Perry. Our subject and his wife are members of the State Street Baptist Church. Mr. Mesick voted the Republican ticket until the organization of the Prohibition party, when he joined its ranks.

The portrait of Mr. Mesick adds value to the record of the county which he has aided so materially in developing.

ILLIAM ATKINSON, a well-known resident of Rockford and an honored pioneer of the county of 1837, was born in Cumberland County, England, January 11, 1813. His father, James Atkinson, was also born in that county and married Jane Foster, a native of the same locality. After the birth of six of their children, they emigrated to America, sailing from England on the 8th of May, 1832, and landed in Quebec, Canada, after a voyage of seven weeks. They spent a little more than a year in that country, after which they became residents of Syracuse, N. Y., where the father and his son followed the carpenter's trade. The year 1837 witnessed their arrival in Winnebago County, Ill., and a settlement was made in Harrison Township, where the father died some eight years later, at the age of fifty-eight years. His wife survived him two years, dying at the age of sixty-two. In politics, Mr. Atkinson was a Whig. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Church, and lived quiet, unassuming lives, worthy of the esteem in which they were held. Our subject is the only son of the family now living. However, he has four sisters, all married, one residing in Marengo, another in Iowa and the remaining two in this county.

William Atkinson of this sketch remained in the land of his birth until twenty years of age and learned the carpenter's trade under his father, with whom he worked in Syracuse, N. Y., for some years, as before stated. For more than half a century, he has resided in this county and has been prominently identified with its upbuilding. His first location was in Harrison Township, where he obtained Government land, and after building a log cabin, began life in true pioneer style, experiencing many hardships and trials of frontier life. In those days their market was Chicago or Milwaukee, and as roads were poor it was often a hard task to reach those places. About 1839, he formed a partnership with Mr. Elwood, an Englishman, and they began operating a distillery, but were unsuccessful, and Mr. Atkinson lost all he had and was forced to begin life anew. From that time, he gave his entire attention to agricultural pursuits and improved nearly three hundred acres of land. This is divided into two farms, furnished with two sets of buildings and is highly cultivated and improved. The old home is situated on section 26, Harrison Township, and there Mr. Atkinson resided until September, 1890, when he came to Rockford, and has since lived a retired life at his present home at No. 1110 West State Street, He built this residence and four other nice places on the same block, including a compartment house.

Mr. Atkinson was first married, near Syracuse, N. Y., to Miss Nancy Bebee, who was born in England, and during her childhood came to this country with her parents, who died in the Empire State. Her death occurred in La Salle County, Ill., at the age of twenty-seven. She died in the faith of the Methodist Church. The second wife of Mr. Atkinson was Miss Lucy Phillips, a native of Ohio, who was a true helpmate and companion to her husband for forty years. She died when past the age of sixty, leaving twelve children, two of whom are now deceased: Hiram, who died in childhood: and George, who was killed at the battle of Chickasaw Monntain while fighting for the Union during the late war. Nancy is the wife of II. Collins, of Rockford; James, who wedded Miss Gaylord, resides in Beloit, Wis.; Charles, a farmer of Sheldon Township, wedded Zetta Conklin; Jane, who married Robert Oliver, lives in Rockford; Marilla is the wife of David Kinney, a farmer of Rock Rapids, Iowa; Mary A. is the wife of H. Douglas, of Rockford; Thomas, who married Mary Shepardson, is a farmer of Harrison Township; William, a resident of Rockton, married Lydia Leffenwell; Frank, a commercial traveler residing in Racine, Wis., married Minnie Baker, who is now deceased, and Lucy, who married Fred Morgan, lives in Rockford.

For his next wife, Mr. Atkinson chose Maggie Miller, who died a few years later. His present wife was Mrs. Elizabeth (Van Dike) Wishop, who was married, in New Jersey, to Samual Van Arsdale, who died fighting for his country. She then came to Illinois, and in this county married Andrew Wishop, who died in middle life. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson attend the Court Street Methodist Church, of which Mrs. Atkinson is a member. He is a stanch Republican in politics, and voted both for William Henry Harrison and Benjamin Harrison. He has held many local offices, including that of Supervisor, which he has held for seventeen years, and his public duties were ever promptly and faithfully discharged. As an upright man, a valued citizen and an honored pioneer, he well deserves representation in this volume.

OEL B. POTTER (deceased) was born in Sherman Township, Fairfield County, Conn., July 25, 1810, and died in Rockford, November 30, 1880. He was sixteen years old when his parents, William C. and Anna (Hubble) Potter, moved to Orleans County, N. Y. Agricultural pursuits had been the father's chief occupation in life and at that he prospered. The father and mother were members of the Congregational Church in Fairfield and members of the Presbyterian Church of Orleans County, and both were worthy and exemplary people. They passed the remainder of their days in that county, the father dying when over eighty years of age and the mother when over seventy. They reared a large family of children, a number of whom are still residing in Orleans County.

Joel B. Potter received the advantages of a good collegiate education and had prepared himself to enter the Presbyterian ministry. Failing health, however, caused him to abandon this, and although in after years his health was restored, he never entered the pulpit. He came to Rockford, Ill., in 1839, and after some years purchased a drug store on East State Street, and was thus engaged for a number of years, having for a partner J. F. Harding. This business prospered until the death of Mr. Harding, about 1867, when Mr. Potter withdrew from the business and retired. During his early days in Winnebago County, he had been the owner of a good farm and this he carried on for some time before he went into the drug business. He took much interest in polities and supported the principles of the Republican party. He was a man of excellent business qualifications and good habits, and a citizen who had the highest regard of all who knew him. He witnessed many changes in the country and was a potent factor in its growth and development. He had two brothers, Hubble and Herman Potter, both now deceased, who were early settlers of Winnebago County. The former was a prominent dry-goods merchant and later a banker of Rockford. He was one of the pioncers of the city and was a well-known business man. The latter was a prosperous farmer. Joel B. Potter selected as his companion in life Miss Adaline Lathrop, a native of Vermont, born May 18, 1813, and their nuptials were celebrated in Genesee County, N. Y., in July, 1836. Mrs. Potter was reared and edueated in Genesee County and there made her home until her marriage. She is a lady of much business ability and since the death of her husband has managed his affairs with excellent judgment. Her parents, Adgate and Martha (Moss) Lathrop, were natives of Connecticut, but emigrated to Vermont in early life and were there married. Mr. Lathrop followed the combined business of earpenter, joiner and farmer, and was fairly successful in all. In 1816, the family moved to Genesee County, N. Y., and there the parents died when seventy-five and eighty years of age, respectively. They were Baptists in their religious views. Mrs. Potter is one of ten children, but only a brother, Harry Lathrop, of Otsego, Mich., and a sister, Mrs. Orange Sherman, of Buffalo, N. Y., besides herself, are now living. Mrs. Potter is the mother of seven children; two died in infancy, and Mrs. Mary Willis died when twenty-two years of age. Those living are: Caroline A., who was the wife of Col. C. M.

Brazee, now deceased, formerly an attorney and an ex-soldier; Harriet J., widow of J. F. Harding (formerly a partner with our subject), is now residing on Oak Street, Rockford; Francis L. has been a teacher in the High Schools in Chicago for the past twenty years and is a prominent educator; and Laura J. is the wife of Edward S. Gregory, who owns a wholesale and retail store in sanitary goods and heating apparatus on State Street, Rockford. All his life Mr. Potter was a consistent member of the Westminister Presbyterian Church and Mrs. Potter is a worthy member of the same. The Potter family occupies a leading position in Rockford society. Mrs. Potter is well preserved for her years, her hair is scarcely tinged with gray and she walks with the elasticity of youth.

OBERT M. BRANTINGHAM. The commodious, two-story brick residence at No. 401 Horsman Street is owned and occupied by the gentleman whose name introduces these paragraphs, and who has become welto-do through judicious investments in real estate. Coming to Winnebago County in 1855, he has since been an important factor in the growth of the county, and especially in the progress of Rockford, which he has seen change from an unimportant village, to a city numbering twenty-live thousand people. In addition to valuable land in Rockford, he owns considerable real estate in South Chicago.

The father of our subject, Robert M. Brantingham, Sr., was a native of Staten Island, where he grew to man's estate. He engaged for some years in business in New York City, meanwhile continuing his residence on Staten Island. He was married on the island of his birth to Miss Jane Simonson, who was there born and reared, her parents being New York people and well-to-do. The parents of our subject had a family of three sons and seven daughters; of these two sons and two daughters are deceased. All of the children have married excepting the subject of this sketch, who is the eldest member of the family.

When the parental family sought a home in Winnebago County, our subject was a lad of eight years and he has spent almost his entire life in this county. His father was the owner of about eight hundred aeres of land in this vicinity; he also had large possessions in lowa, and in Staten Island. His various financial enterprises proved remunerative and placed him on a solid footing as a capitalist. He died at his home, two miles south of Rockford, in 1865. His wife survived him many years, passing away January 1, 1890, at the age of seventy-five years, at the home of her son, our subject. Mr. Brantingham, Sr., was a firm Republican in his political affiliations, and with his wife held membership in the Episcopal Church.

All the local interests of Rockford have been heartily promoted by Mr. Brantingham, who has endorsed all measures having for their object the progress of the religious, educational, moral and philanthropic status of the city. He is a pronounced Republican in his political belief, and invariably easts his ballot and gives his influence to the support of the principles which he considers best adapted to our Government. He is a stockholder of the Rockford Watch Company, and is interested in various other establishments and organizations which have been of great value to the city.

ARTLEY S. GIELDSETH. During the comparatively brief time in which our subject has been engaged in business in Durand, he has built up a fine trade as the proprietor of a meat market, being a member of the firm of Funnell & Gieldseth. He was born in Hammerfest, Norway, February 28, 1857, and is the son of B. H. and Eliza (Patterson) Gieldseth. The family resided in Norway until 1872, where the father was a baker by trade, which business our subject also followed together with that of a printer. The elder Mr. Gieldseth died in his native country in 1870, in his sixty-first year.

lle of whom we write was the eldest but one in a family of five children, his brothers and sisters being Thomas; Nicoline, who is a teacher of music; Christine and Amanda, the two latter of whom keep house for our subject. The family set sail for the New World in 1872, and arriving here located in Durand, where the mother departed this life May 21, 1891.

Upon locating in Winnebago County, Mr. Gieldseth purchased land in Laona Township, and followed farming for twelve years, during which time, by the quiet course of persistent effort and constant devotion to duty, he left poverty far behind and accumulated a handsome property. In 1886, our subject engaged in his present business in company with James Funnell. They also deal extensively in live-stock and do a general packing business.

Hartley S. Gieldseth and Miss Anna Garder were united in marriage in 1878. The lady was the daughter of Ole Garder and was born in Rock Grove, April 23, 1859. She bore her husband three children, Raymond, Earl and Anna, and departed this life July 2, 1884. Our subject, religiously, is an influential member of the Lutheran Church. In politics, he votes with the Democratic party but does not aspire to office as he prefers to give his time to his private interests. He is a member of Durand Lodge No. 302, A. F. & A. M., and is also connected with Durand Camp of the Modern Woodmen. Mr. Gieldseth still owns his farm property of eighty acres in Laona Township, which is under an excellent state of improvement, and in addition to that has considerable real estate in Durand.

TIS EDDY. In point of energy, enterprise and determination, the subject of this notice is looked upon as one of the leading men of Rockford, where he has a beautiful home located on Main Street. He was born in Burrillville. R. I., August 28, 1804, and is a son of John Eddy, a native of that place, as was also his father, Stephen Eddy. The latter-named gentleman was a farmer and spent his entire life in Burrillville. The father of our subject inherited a portion of the old homestead and there resided until his death. The maiden name of his wife was Marcy Sayles, who was born in the same town as was her husband and departed this life on the old home farm.

The parental family of our subject included five sons and one daughter, namely: Celia, our subject, Esten O., Elliott E., John S. and Marcius. The original of this sketch was reared and educated in his native town, where he attended the common school, and after reaching his majority engaged in the mercantile business in the village of Pascoag, and continued to be so employed for thirteen years. In 1840, he removed to Mobile, Ala., of which city he was a resident for four years, during the greater part of that time being engaged as a wood merchant. From there he went to New Orleans in 1844, and was engaged on a levee for a twelvemonth, returning thence to Rhode Island and locating at Blackstone. In 1851, he went to California via the Nicaragua route, being a passenger on the second boat which ever made the journey over that route. For two years he followed mining pursuits in the far West, and afterward engaged in the real-estate business at Downieville, where he has built and sold several houses at a handsome advance. Later, in 1856, he returned to Panama, and from there pursued the homeward journey.

In 1861, Mr. Eddy came West to Illinois and purchased one hundred and twenty acres of land near the city of Rockford, and three years later became the owner of the farm which he now owns and occupies and which is pleasantly located onehalf mile from the city. Our subject has been twice married; his first wife, Azubah Mathewson, was born in Burrillville, R. I., and departed this life in Blackstone in 1850. Mr. Eddy was then married to Lucy Carpenter, a native of Charlton, He became the father of the followingnamed children: Welcome J., Warren O. and Mathewson, all of whom are deceased, excepting Warren O. Welcome J. married Isabel Severans. and both have passed away, leaving four children: Lillie M., Ella, Ida and Walter L. Warren O. married Augusta Willoughby, by whom he became the father of two children: Flora and Alice. Mrs. Eddy is an active member of the Presbyterian Church.

When the "boom" struck the city of Rockford, our subject sold the greater portion of his land, reserving only a few acres for himself. He has a pleasant home and, surrounded by all the comforts of life, is passing his last days in that case and comfort which his early industry has won. He has attained the advanced age of eighty-eight years and is widely and favorably known throughout the county.

OMER DENTON. The career of a self-made man is finely illustrated in the history of Mr. Denton, who commenced the battle of life dependent upon his own resources and who through the difficulties and draw-backs common to most men has achieved successs. Upon coming to Winnebago County, he in due time acquired a large amount of real estate, and as the property increased in value, he, of course, grew in wealth and has become one of the most prosperous men in the county. He has been an energetic, wide-awake man, keenly observant of what is going on around him and has contributed his full quota to the growth and development of his adopted county.

The original of this sketch was born in Middlefield, Otsego County, N. Y., December 19, 1812. He is the son of John Denton, a native of Dutchess County, N. Y., where his father, Joel Denton, as far as is known, was born. The latter-named gentleman served as a patriot in the Revolutionary War, for a period of seven years. He was a farmer by occupation and removed from Dutchess to Otsego County in about 1825, spending his last years in Middlefield. The maiden name of his wife, grandmother of our subject, was Harriet Brown.

John Denton was reared to the life of a farmer and removed to Otsego County in 1805, where he was one of the early settlers in Middlefield. He there purchased a tract of timber land and erected a log cabin, which was the birthplace of our subject. He was then employed in subduing nature, clearing land, breaking prairie, etc., but with all this labor was social and happy, having a care for the morals and education of his children. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Hannah Hubbell, who was born in Connecticut and spent her last days in Middlefield, N. Y. The parental family consisted of eight children, one of whom is deceased. Those living are Amanda, Ambrose, Homer, Theron, Richard H., Rollin and Joel.

Homer Denton, of this sketch, was reared on the old homestead and remembers when there were no railroads nor canals near his home and Albany, which was sixty five miles distant, was the nearest market and depot for supplies. He resided under the parental roof assisting his father in carrying on the farm work until 1835, when, having been married, he came with his wife to Indiana, making the journey overland with teams to Ft. Plain. from there by canal to Buffalo, where they boarded a lake steamer, which conveyed them to Detroit, thence by team to La Porte. He purchased, at a Government sale, eighty acres of land which was located three miles from La Porte. The place bore but few improvements, and Mr. Denton began industriously the work of cultivating the soil, and resided in the log cabin for two years. In 1837, he started overland with his family in an ox-team, his destination being Rockford, which was at that time little more than a hamlet, containing but twenty families. The land in the vicinity of this now prosperous city was owned by the Government, and our subject, locating in the northwestern part of Winnebago County, made a claim on what is now the site of Durand. He there erected a log house and a barn and by his persistent industry and perseverance brought his estate to good cultivation. For a time the emigrants coming into the county bought all the surplus grain. Afterward, Chicago becoming their place of marketing, Mr. Denton sold his produce there, the city being one hundred miles distant and the trip consuming the greater part of a week.

The original of this sketch lately purchased one hundred acres of land, which is now included in the city of Rockford. With the exception of twenty-three acres, he laid out the entire acreage into lots, which he sold at a good profit. In 1871, Mr. Denton erected a commodious residence on North Main Street, where he made his home for twenty years. He is at the present time residing with his granddaughter, Mrs. Lockwood.

In 1834, the gentleman of whom we write was united in marriage with Miss May, daughter of James and Sallie (Harrison) Van Volkenburg. She was born in Middlefield, N. Y., and departed this life in March, 1883, greatly beloved by all who knew her. Of that union was born one son, De-Los H., who married Martha Thomes. She died three years later. He was a second time married, this time to Ann Lambert, by whom he became the father of five children. One daughter, May, was born of the first union of De Los H. Denton, who is the wife of Elmer E. Lockwood.

Our subject easts his vote and influence in favor of Democratic principles and candidates. He east his first vote for Martin Van Buren. His career has been one eminently worthy and useful to the community in which he has resided, and his neighbors and old friends unite in their testimony to his sterling worth, integrity and valuable services as an old resident of Rockford.

The father of our subject was a member of the New York militia, and as a non-commissioned officer in the War of 1812 for some months commanded a company. He with a company of others was captured by the British and imprisoned in Canada, having crossed into that country from Lewiston, N. Y.

LIVER N. DRAKE, who is now living a retired life and spending his last days in his pleasant home on First Street, in Rockford, was born four miles from Cooperstown, N. Y., July 23, 1808. That was the home of J. Fenimore Cooper, the noted writer, and our subject was an old friend of the author. Mr. Drake grew to manhood under the parental roof. He was one of two sons born unto Clinton and Nancy (Newell) Drake. His father died in the prime of life when Oliver was less than two years old. His mother was again married, becoming the wife of Homer Beadle, and her death occurred in Otsego, N. Y., at the age of fifty-four years. By her second marriage she had six children.

Our subject in his youth learned the shoemaker's trade and has been a merchant in that line throughout almost his entire life. In the county of his nativity, he married Harriet Waterman, who was born in Otsego Township, July 25, 1811, and there spent the days of her maidenhood. She was a true and affectionate wife and tender mother. Her death occurred at Cooperstown, N. Y., at the age of forty-two years. Soon after his marriage, our subject moved to Auburu, N. Y. He was keeper in the prison for several years. There were five children born of this union, but only one is now living: Oliver, who is a hardware merchant of Rockford and a prominent and successful business man, doing business on West State Street, opposite Court House Square. He is a Knight Templar Mason and a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R., of Rockford. He married Miss Alice Cobb, of Creston, Ill. In the late war, he served as a member of the Fifty-eighth Illinois Infantry, enlisting when merely a boy. His brother, George W., also were the blue as a member of the Fifteenth Illinois Infantry. He served three years with his regiment, then veteranized and became First Lieutenant of Company B, One Hundred and Eighth Regiment United States Colored Troops. After serving more than four years, he was honorably discharged, and went to New Orleans, joining the police force of that city. He died very suddenly in 1868.

Mr. Drake, whose name heads this record, came with his family to Hlinois in December, 1855, locating in Belvidere, where he resided for five years. He then came to Rockford, but one year later, removed to Princeton, thence to Bloomington, and later to Decatur, where he spent seven years. His next place of residence was Clinton, where he resided for twelve years, and there, as in other places, he was a boot and shoe merchant. He has followed that business throughout his entire life and in its pursuit has achieved success, gaining a competence which now enables him to live in retirement. His business career was marked by straightforwardness and fair dealing and he won the confidence and regard of all with whom he came in contact. About three years ago he came to Rockford, purchased his pleasant home on First Street and has since lived in retirement. He is a member of the Universalist Church, to which his wife also belongs, and, in politics, he has been a stanch Republican since the organization of the party.

USSELL MARSH, a well-known farmer residing on section 17, Guilford Township, Winnebago County, is a native of the Keystone State. He was born in Bradford County, December 19, 1819, and was one of seven children in the family of Russell and Abgail (Averill) Marsh. His grandfather, Eliphalet Marsh, was born in New England, of English ancestry, and spent his last days in Vermont. Russell Marsh, Sr., was born in the Green Mountain State, whence he removed to Pennsylvania, and after a few years spent in Bradford County, went to Tompkins County, N. Y.

Five years later, Mr. Marsh, Sr., became a resident of Cattaraugus County, and afterwards spent three years near Hudson, Ohio. Removing to Canada, he there resided a year and a half, after which he came to Illinois, locating in what is now Guilford Township, where he purchased a tract of Government land on section 8, and began its development. The last years of his life were spent at the home of our subject. His wife was also a native of Vermont, and a daughter of Thomas Averill. She died at the old homestead. Their children were: Maria, George, Rhoda, Richard, Lucy, Russell and Averill.

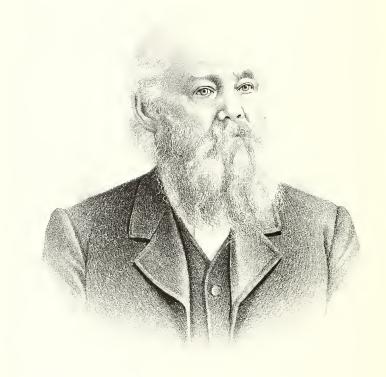

Russell Marsh, whose portrait and life-sketch are herewith presented, accompanied his parents on their various removals, and with them came to Illinois when nineteen years of age. This county then seemed to be on the borders of civilization. It was an unimproved tract of wild prairie; Rockford was a mere hamlet and many of the towns and villages had not sprung into existence. Farming was done with very crude implements as compared with the improved machinery of to-day, and the products were hauled to market in Chicago, eighty-five miles distant.

Mr. Marsh remained under the parental roof until his marriage. On the 10th of February, 1845, he wedded Mary A. Hayes, a native of Canada, and a daughter of Samuel B. Hayes. Her death occurred October 5, 1857. She left three children: Lucy A., wife of William Kane, of Kansas; Rhoda E., wife of Richard Beers, a resident of Syracuse, Neb., and George W., who married Emily Snow, and is living on the home farm. Mr. Marsh was again married, March 16, 1864, to Mrs. Maria (Beers) Haley. They have an adopted daughter, Flora. Mrs. Marsh was born in Guilford Township, May 22, 1837. Her father, Daniel Beers, was born in Northampton County, Pa., August 6, 1806, and was of German descent. At an early age, he was left an orphan, and for a time lived with an uncle. When a young man, he went to New York, and was there married, February 11, 1830, to Mary Herrick, who was born in Batavia, N. Y., and was a daughter of Luther and Mary (Johnson) Herrick.

In 1836, Mr. and Mrs. Beers came to Illinois, few pioneers having preceded them to Winnebago County. They found here an almost undeveloped tract of land, the Government surveys not having yet been made, and the few settlers were widely scattered. Mr. Beers made a claim on what is now section 20, Guilford Township, and built a log cabin, which was the birthplace of Mrs. Marsh. He afterwards sold this farm and bought another tract on the same section. In 1855, he removed to Green County, Wis., where he made his home for ten years, and then returned to Illinois, becoming a resident of Rockford. He afterwards spent three years upon a farm in Harlem Township, and then returned to Rockford, where his death occurred, April 3, 1880. His widow is still living in that city, and undoubtedly has longer resided in this county than any other of its residents at this time. She and her husband were members of the first Methodist class organized in the city, and she is its only survivor. Her long life has been well and worthily spent, and she has won the love and esteem of all with whom she has been brought in contact.

Her daughter Maria became the wife of Osear Haley, September 25, 1856. He was born in Chatham, N. H., August 18, 1833, and emigrated to

Richard March

yours Jauley Ripell Marsh

Wisconsin in 1855. In the summer he worked at farming and in the winter season he taught school. During the late war, he enlisted September 12, 1861, in the Fifth Wisconsin Battery, and died during the service at Jackson, Tenn., November 13, 1862, thus giving his life in defense of his country.

Immediately after his first marriage, Mr. Marsh located upon the farm which is still his home, including one hundred and sixty acres of highly improved land on section 17, Guilford Township. He is an industrious and enterprising agriculturist and a worthy citizen. In politics, he is a Republican.

A 1CHARD MARSH, who has long been a resident of Guilford Township, Winnebago County, and now resides on section 16, elaims Pennsylvania as the State of his nativity. He was born in Litchfield Township, Bradford County, and is the second son of Russell and Abigail (Averill) Marsh, who are mentioned in the sketch of Russell Marsh, Jr., on another page of this work. Our subject came to Illinois with his parents in 1838, and has been a resident of Guilford Township since that time. He has witnessed the development of the county from an almost unbroken wilderness, has seen its wild lands transformed into beautiful farms, while cities and villages have spring up and the work of progress and civilization been carried forward until Winnebago County ranks among the best in the State.

On starting out in life for himself, Mr. Marsh began working as a farm hand by the month. He was industrious and enterprising and by 1841 had saved enough from his earnings to purchase a forty-acre tract of land, a part of his present farm. He has been very successful as an agriculturist and from time to time has added to his landed possessions, until now two hundred and ten acres of highly improved land pay tribute to his care and cultivation. His improvements are among the best in the township, including good buildings and all the accessories of a model farm.

On the 12th of September, 1842, Mr. Marsh was joined in wedlock with Miss Sarah C. Watson, who was born in Lyth, Yorkshire, England, September 12, 1824. Her father, Leonard Watson, was born in the same county and in 1832 came with his family to America, locating in Toronto, Canada. He participated in the Patriot War of the rebellion of Canada in 1837, was captured, taken as a prisoner to England, tried for treason and was sentenced to banishment in Van Diemen's Land. He was pardoned, however, on condition that he would not settle within fifty miles of the British possessions in America, and so he returned to this country in 1839 and became a resident of Guilford Township, where he purchased a tract of land on section 8, and engaged in farming until his death, which occurred in 1811. He was killed by the falling of a tree. His wife bore the maiden name of Ann Hill. She, too, was born in Yorkshire, England, and there spent her entire life. After her death, he wedded Sarah Hill, a sister of his first wife, who survived Mr. Watson some years and passed away in 1867.

The union of Mr. and Mrs. Marsh has been blessed with three children: Leonard, Averill A. and Fannie A. The parents have a pleasant home and are people held in high regard throughout this community. In politics, Mr. Marsh is a stalwart Republican. An enterprising and progressive farmer, a public-spirited and valued citizen, he justly deserves mention in the history of his adopted county, where he has so long made his home, and we are also pleased to present his portrait to our readers.

LEXANDER C. LANSING, Rockford, Ill.

Among the popular grocers doing business in this section of the eity none enjoy a better reputation than Mr. Lansing, who is a member of the well-known firm of Lansing & Fiddock, whose business quarters are at No. 517 East State Street. This establishment, which was started under its present title in 1891, could not be more admirably arranged and provided with every convenience for business purposes, and contains one of the finest lines of staple and faney groceries to be found in this part of the city. The firm was originally Swets & Lansing, continuing so for two years, when Mr. Swets retired.

Mr. Lansing came to Rockford in 1871, and was engaged for about eighteen years in the flour and feed business, and has been all these years on East State Street, near his present place of business. He is an excellent business man, looks after the interests of his customers with zealous eare, and guarantees all orders being filled with the best in the market. As might be supposed, he has met with well-merited success.

Our subject was born in Saratoga County, N. Y., January 12, 1840, and was eight years old when his parents removed to Montgomery County, of that State. He there grew to manhood, and became familiar with the duties of farm life, his father being a successful agriculturist. He was carefully reared by good Christian parents and he has ever endeavored to follow in their footsteps, being at the present time a worthy member of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he has been Steward for six years.

Our subject's father, Cornelius Lansing, was born in the Empire State and was descended from a long line of agriculturists; he himself followed farming all his life. He was a much esteemed citizen, and his death, which occurred when he was seventy-one years of age, was the occasion of universal sorrow, He had married Miss Lydia Reed in Saratoga County, N. Y., of which place she was a native. Her death occurred in Lewis County in the summer of 1883, when seventy-eight years of age. She was a Methodist in her religious belief and her husband attended the same church. Of the large family of children born to this worthy couple, two sons and six daughters still survive.

Alexander C. Lansing took for his life companion Miss Sarah E. File, and their union was celebrated in New York State. She was born near Troy, of that State, on the 12th of January, 1844, but was reared in Montgomery County, whither her parents, Joshua and Mary File, removed when she was quite young. Both parents, who are now deceased, were exemplary members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Lansing of this notice is a prominent member and worker in the same church as her husband. He is a strong temperance advocate. The only child born to Mr. and Mrs. Lansing, George, died when cleven years of age. He was a bright, promising boy and his death was a severe blow to his parents, whose hopes were all centered upon him.

ANIEL BARNUM, deceased, well deserves representation in this volume, for he was one of the most honored pioneers and oldest settlers of the county. He was born in the Empire State, not far from the boundary line of Connecticut, in 1778, and was a kinsman of P. T. Barnum. His father, Elias Barnum, was also born in New York and there spent his entire life, following the occupation of farming.

Our subject passed the days of his boyhood and youth in the State of his nativity, and when a young man went to Connecticut, where he met and married Lorana Hoyt, a native of that State, and a descendant of a prominent Connecticut family. After their marriage, they began their domestic life in the township of Danbury, Fairfield County, Conn., and upon that farm all of their six children were born, viz: Adelia who died in Rockford at the age of eighty-two years, at the home of her sister Cynthia; Maria B., wife of Phenias Howes; Emily died in early maidenhood, in 1838; Hoyt B., a retired citizen of Rockford, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work; Harrison is living a retired life on East State Street; and Cynthia is living at her palatial home at No. 113 East Street. She also owns a farm in Cherry Valley Township and other valuable property.

In 1838, Mr. Barnum came with his wife and family to this county, and purchased a claim of one hundred and sixty acres belonging to a Mr. Jewett in Cherry Valley Township. As soon as the land came into market, he went to Galena, and purchased it of the Government. The family bore all the hardships and trials of frontier life and met with all the experiences of the pioneer, but as the years passed by and the county became more thickly settled, those early difficulties passed away and they enjoyed prosperity. In his agricultural pursuits, Mr. Barnum was quite successful and at length accumulated a comfortable competence. His wife, who proved a true and faithful helpmate to him, died in 1849, at their home in Cherry Valley Township, at the age of sixty-eight years, and was mourned by many friends.

Mr. Barnum afterwards came to Rockford and spent the remainder of his life in retirement, enjoying the rest which he so truly carned. He lived to a very advanced age, but retained his mental and physical faculties to the last. He passed away November 8, 1870, at the age of ninety-two years. He had long been a resident of the county and had borne an important part in its upbuilding and advancement in an early day. His success in life was all due to his own efforts. He left to his daughter a handsome property and a fine home. Miss Barnum is a kind and sympathetic lady, well known throughout this community and held in high esteem for her sterling worth.

AVID W. EVANS, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits on section 31. Harlem Township, has been a resident of Winnebago County since 1856, and is numbered among its honored early settlers. He has, therefore, been an eye-witness of its growth and development, and has participated in its upbuilding and advancement, so that he is well worthy of representation in this volume.

Our subject was born in Grenville, Argenteuil County, Canada, November 30, 1840, and is of English descent. His grandparents, John and Jane Evans, were both natives of Hull, England, and the latter died in that country. Mr. Evans afterwards married again and came to America, settling in Canada in 1820. He there spent the remainder of his days. The father of our subject. James Evans, was also born in Hull, England, and was quite young when his mother died. He was afterwards apprenticed to the wagon-maker's trade, serving a term of six and one-half years. On attaining his majority, he crossed the broad Atlantic to Canada, and engaged in farming in Grenville until 1856, which year witnessed his arrival in Illinois. He bought a tract of land in Cherry Valley Township, Winnebago County, and there engaged in farming until his death. He was married in Canada to Ann Campbell, who was born in 1802, and was a daughter of Robert Campbell, who was of Scotch-Irish parentage. She still survives her husband and makes her home in Rockford. The family numbers eight children, as follows: Rebecca J., James, Ephraim, John, Robert, David, Joseph and Janet.

We now take up the personal history of Mr. Evans whose name heads this record. He spent his early boyhood days in his native land, and at the age of sixteen came with his parents to Illinois. He aided his father in the farm work until the spring of 1861, when he rented land and engaged in farming on his own account, but in September of that year he abandoned his work in the field and enlisted in the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, serving in the Army of the Potomac until after the close of the war. He participated in all the campaigns, marches and battles of the regiment and served under MacClellan, Burnside, Hooker, Mead and Grant, and the following cavalry officers: Pleasanton, Bufert and Sheridan. He participated in the Grand Review at Washington at the close of the war, and, with his regiment, was honorably discharged on the 25th of July, 1865. He proved himself a faithful soldier, ever found at his post of duty. He also had two brothers in the army-one who died in Tennessee, and the other who was killed in Virginia.

During his service, Mr. Evans had purchased a farm in Cherry Valley Township, and on his return engaged in its cultivation. On the 27th of April, 1868, he married Emma J. Conklin, a native of Oneida County, N. Y., and a daughter of James S. and Theresa J. (Martin) Conklin. Their union has been blessed with seven children. They are as follows: Jesse R., Olive G., Nettie N., Ruby F., Alice J., Harry G. and Florence.

The family continued to reside on the farm in Cherry Valley Township until 1883, when Mr. Evans purchased a tract of land on section 31, Harlem Township, where he has since made his home. He is a progressive and influential citizen of this community and is widely and favorably known throughout the county where he has resided since a lad of sixteen years. He is highly esteemed for his sterling worth and the upright life he has led. Socially, he is a member of Nevius Post No. 1, G. A. R.; Harmony Grange No. 957; and Harlem Camp No. 661, M. W. A.

that we recount the history of this gentleman, who is at present residing in Rockford. He has undergone many hardships and privations that he might bring about the prosperous condition of this section which we see to-day. He has been very successful in his business interests and for the past two years has lived retired from active life.

Lanarkshire, Scotland, was the native home of our subject, his birth occurring in the village of Shotts in May, 1835. His direct progenitor, John Buchanan, was a native of that shire, as was also his grandfather, Thomas. The latter-named gentleman was a molder by trade and spent his entire life in Scotland. His wife bore the maiden name of Ann Glen; she was born in Scotland, and there her decease occurred.

The father of our subject also followed the occupation of a molder, and in his native town married Miss Agnes Black, the mother of our subject, who was born in the parish of Shotts and is a daughter of William Black. To them were born a family of five children, namely: Thomas, Agnes, William, John and Robert. Our subject and his brother John are the only members of the family who came to the New World. The latter resides in Sacramento, Cal.

The original of this sketch commenced at the early age of ten years to learn the trade of a molder, which occupation he followed for seven years in Glasgow, then, in 1817, he set sail from that city on the packet "Henry Clay," and landed in New York after a voyage of thirty-three days. From that city he went to Woonsocket Falls, R. I., and was employed until 1855 with the Woonsocket Furnace Company.

On the above-named date, Mr. Buchanan came to Illinois and located on a farm which he had previously purchased eight miles north of Belvidere. There he was engaged in cultivating the soil for a twelvemonth, and in the spring of 1856 came to Rockford, at once entering the employ of Emerson, Talcott & Company. Remaining with them a few weeks, our subject engaged to work with Clark & Utter, by whom he was employed until 1858, when he went to California via New York and the 1sthmus of Panama. He worked in the mines for seven months, then started a foundry at Downieville, Sierra County, where he remained until 1862, and then returned to Rockford and worked for F. H. Manny, with whom he continued for twenty-six years, the greater part of the time acting as foreman of the foundry. As before stated, Mr. Buchanan has retired from active work and is residing in his present home on the street which bears his name.

Our subject and Miss Jane Smith were united in marriage in July, 1847. Mrs. Buchanan was born in Renfrewshire, town of Neilston, Scotland, and departed this life in 1878. To them was born one son, Thomas J., who married Alice Brownell and is the father of two children, Jennie and Bertha. He of whom we write is an Elder in the First Presbyterian Church and, in politics, votes with the Republican party. For six years he was a member of the School Board and has been otherwise very actively interested in local affairs. The present wife of our subject, to whom he was married in 1878, was Miss Mary Cunningham, a native of Renfrewshire, Scotland.

AMUEL C. WINTHROW. In the line of fine carpets, draperies, brass goods, etc., etc. the city of Rockford stands second to none, a fact in which its citizens may well take pride in these days of intense competitive effort. In this age of refinement, wealth, and enterprise, the demands of all classes for artistic productions are more exacting than ever before, and in no branch of trade is this more evident than that in which the firm of Winthrow, Baird &

Co. is engaged. This firm make a specialty of interior decorating, the same introduced lately, and are located in the Stewart Block, where they have a fine room, 135x44 feet. Winthrow & Baird have been in business together since April, 1889, and have, until quite recently, been located at No. 122 South Main Street, where, besides doing a decorating business, they carried a large and full line of dry-goods. Seeing the need of a house in Rockford that would make a specialty of interior decorating, they established themselves in the most favorable location for the business, and have been rewarded by the signal success they have achieved.

Mr. Winthrow has been actively engaged in business in this city for many years, while Mr. J. N. Baird, who came here from McGregor, lowa, where he was engaged for a number of years as a dry-goods merchant, has only resided here since 1889. During that time, however, he has impressed the people as a man of sound judgment, excellent taste, and much energy. Mr. Winthrow came to Rockford in June, 1861, and engaged in the drygoods business on his own account, but at the end of ten years, having a true artist's eye for harmony of colors and beautiful effects, he connected with his business a line of house decorations, which he carried on jointly and successfully with his former business until 1892. Since that time, the firm has established the latter line of business entirely. With the exception of a Mr. Dennett, who is still in business in this city, Mr. Winthrow is the oldest dry-goods merchant in Rockford. The honorable and equitable methods of this gentleman and his partner inspire the utmost confidence, and their energy and enterprise are reaping a well-merited reward.

Our subject came to this city from Cincinnati, Ohio, where he had a thorough training as a seller of dry-goods, in both the retail and wholesale departments, being connected for some time with the old dry-goods firm of Shaw, Buel, Barber & Co., and having a natural aptitude for that business, he has been unusually successful. He was born in London, Madison County, Ohio, and there passed his boyhood and received his education. At an early age, he began clerking in a dry-goods store in his native town and subsequently went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he remained, actively engaged in business, until coming to this city.

Prominent in all enterprises of a laudable nature, Mr. Winthrow is particularly so in educational and religious matters, having been one of the greatest, if not the greatest, Sunday-school worker in the county. Out of the thirty years he has been a resident of this city, twenty years have been spent as Superintendent of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal Church and he has been an official member of the same for years, lle has been a delegate to the State Sunday-school Convention a number of times and when the National Convention met at Newark, N. J., he was one of the delegates from this State. He has been an energetic worker in this direction and has been in every church and schoolhouse in the county. He gives new impetus and life to old Sunday-schools and organizes new ones; he seems never to tire, and still the good work goes on. A stanch Republican in his political views, Mr. Winthrow works hard for his party, and is a live man in all local affairs.

The parents of our subject, Robert and Ann (Carr) Winthrow, were natives of Madison County, Ohio, and there passed their entire days. The father was a prominent farmer of his native county, but the last twenty years of his life were spent as ashipper of eattle. He died when seventy-seven years of age. His father was a Virginian, of English descent, and became an early settler of London Township, Madison County, Ohio, where he took up and improved Government land. He assisted in building the old National Road and was a prominent man in his day. The wife of Robert Winthrow died when seventy-two years of age. Her parents had come to Ohio from the Old Dominion at an early day, improved Government land. and were well known to the people of that county. Both the Winthrow and Carr families were Methodists in their religious views, and were Whigs and Republicans in polities.

Samuel Winthrow was married, in Peoria, III., to Mrs. Sallie Irwin, nee Me Farland, a native of Pittsburg. Pa., who came of Scotch-Irish ancestors, inheriting her thrift and industry from the former and her wit and sociability from the latter. She was reared and educated in her native city and was there married to Maj. S. C. Irwin, who was in an Ohio Regiment and who was killed at the battle of Lookout Mountain, when in the prime of life. He received his regular promotions, was a brave and gallant officer and fought bravely in defense of the Union. He left no children.

Mr. and Mrs. Winthrow are without children of their own but they have adopted one son, christened Fritz, who is now in the fruit business in Galt, Cal., and who is a promising young man. Mr. and Mrs. Winthrow are prominent in social and religious matters, and are pleasantly located on Remington Bluff, south of the city.

ARMON B. SOPER, who is now living a retired life at his pleasant home at No. 703 East State Street, has been a resident of Rockford since 1862. He is a native of Oncida County, N. Y., born in 1819. His father, Philo Soper, was a native of Connecticut and married Hannah Goodwin, who was also born in that After their marriage, they removed to Oneida County, N. Y., locating in the wilderness of Vernon, and there made their home until called to their final rest. The death of the father occurred at the age of seventy-eight years, and his wife died in the sixty-sixth year of her age. They were both members of the Congregational Church and highly respected people. Mr. Soper served throughout the War of 1812 as Fife Major and was stationed at Sackett's Harbor. His parents were also natives of the Nutmeg State, and both lived to an advanced age. The husband, who followed farming throughout his entire life, reached the advanced age of ninety-six years.

Our subject is the only surviving member in a family of seven children. He made his home in the county of his nativity until his emigration Westward. For eight years he had served as a clerk in a large mercantile establishment of Syracuse, N. Y., and there gained an excellent knowledge of business and its methods. On coming to Rockford, he opened a fancy-goods store and did business in that line until 1880, at the same time keeping wagons on the road as dealers with country merchants. For some years, he has also sold goods, as a commercial traveler, for the Rockford Clothing Company, the Rockford Overall Company and the II. W. Price Mitten Company. He has an excellent reputation as a successful salesman and much of his life has been devoted to that business.

In the township of Vernon, Oneida County, N. Y., Mr. Soper was united in marriage with Miss Susan P. Brown, daughter of Leonard and Phebe (Snow) Brown. They were early settlers of Oneida County, and there her father developed and improved a farm, upon which he made his home until his death at the age of three-score years and ten. His wife had also reached the age of seventy years at the time of her death. Both were members of the Congregational Church and were descended from old New England families. Their children were nine in number, but Mrs. Soper is the only one now living By her marriage she has become the mother of three children: Elizabeth, who died at the age of fourteen; Nellie B., wife of H. A. Leland, of Portland, Ore., an employe of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and Mattie G., wife of George W. Leach, of Philadelphia, Pa., an employe of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Soper hold membership with the Methodist Church, and, in politics, he is a supporter of Republican principles. His life has been well and worthily spent and the success with which it has been crowned is entirely due to his own efforts.

LIZABETH S. (FOX) WHITTLE is numbered among the early settlers of Winnebago County. It was the husbands and fathers who cleared the land, made the farms and in that way developed the county, but the wives and mothers also bore an important part in its upbuilding, and among these should be mentioned the lady whose name heads this record. She was born in Porter, Oxford County, Me., and is descended from an old New England family. Her father, Luther Fox, was also born in Porter and was a son of Edwin Fox, a native of New England and of English descent. He followed farming throughout his entire life, served in the War of 1812, and died in the town of Porter. His wife also passed away in that locality.

The father of Mrs. Whittle was reared to agricultural pursuits, and to that work devoted his energies throughout life. He continued to make his home in Maine until 1869, when he came to Illinois, his death occurring at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Whittle, in 1889, at the age of eighty-five years. He married Betsy Sawyer, also a native of the Pine Tree State and a daughter of the Rev. James Sawyer, a Baptist clergyman of Maine, who preached in various places and died in Buxton, Mc. The Fox family numbered six children, namely: Mrs. Whittle, of this sketch; Thaddeus, Abigail, Mitti, James and Marcia.

Elizabeth Fox spent the days of her maidenhood in the county of her nativity, and in 1855 became the wife of Hiram H. Cole, also a native of Maine, and a son of Hiram and Sophronia (Warren) Cole. He had previously engaged in teaching in that State, but after his marriage emigrated Westward, accompanied by his young bride. They came to Rockford, where they resided until 1858, when they removed to Arkansas, and in that State Mr. Cole engaged in teaching school until his death, which occurred in August, 1862. His widow afterward returned to Rockford, and in January, 1865, became the wife of Charles Whittle, an honored pioneer of Winnebago County and an extensive and wealthy farmer of Guilford Township. He was born in Canada, about twenty miles east of Detroit, and was a son of John and Betsy Whittle. His boyhood days were spent in his native land, where he resided until 1837, when he came to Illinois and spent one season in Winnebago County. He then returned to Canada, but in the year 1838 again came to this State. Nearly all of the land was still in its primitive condition and yet in possession of the Government. Mr. Whittle purchased a squatter's claim in Guilford Township and at once began the development and improvement of a farm. He hauled his grain to Chicago, for no railroad had been built at that time. He was industrious and enterprising, a man of good judgment and excellent business ability, and became well-to-do. At the time of his death, which occurred in 1881, he was the owner of a valuable farm of two hundred and forty acres, under a high state of cultivation and well improved with good buildings.

Mrs. Whittle is still living on the old homestead and is one of the highly esteemed ladies of this community. She has three children. Charles S., who was born of her first marriage, is now a resident farmer of Guilford Township, and the children of her second marriage are Carrie A., wife of Abram Davis, of the same township; and Fred J., who operates the home farm.

AVID A. MOORE, late of Caledonia Township, Boone County, was born September 18, 1836, in Taunton, Mass. His father, Alexander Moore, was born in Ireland, of Scotch ancestry, and on coming to America located in the Bay State, where he made his home for a number of years, and later, coming to Boone County, died on his farm in Boone Township. The maiden name of his wife was Ellen Kirk, also a native of Ireland, who died on the home farm in this county. Like her husband, she was a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church in early life, but during her last years united with the Methodist Episcopal denomination.

David Moore was quite young when brought to the Prairie State by his parents, and was reared on the farm, and educated in the schools of his district. Soon after his marriage, which occurred in September, 1861, he settled on the farm where his family now reside, it being a portion of the old Cornwell homestead. The maiden name of the wife of Mr. Moore was Fannie Cornwell, a daughter of William Cornwell. She was born October 3, 1813, in this township, while her father, and grandfather, Thomas Cornwell, were natives of Canada. The latter-named gentleman came to Illinois about 1816, and, locating in Boone County, purchased a large tract of land, upon which he was residing at the time of his death. The grandmother of our subject, prior to her marriage, was Chloe Emery; she was also a native of Canada, and died on the home farm in Boone Township.

William Cornwell was married in Canada, where he resided until 1844, at which time he came to Illinois, making the removal overland with oxteams. He located a tract of Government land on what is now section 25 of this township, and erected the log house in which Mrs. Moore was born. Here he made his home until his decease in 1849. His wife, who was born in New Jersey, was Miss Sarah, daughter of Christopher and Fanny (Barcroft) Little, the latter of whom is still living in Poplar Grove. To our subject and his wife has been born one son, Will A. Our subject is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

ARTIN B. NEFF. Among the well-to-do farmers of Flora Township, Boone County, who have been the architects of their own fortunes, we may properly mention the subject of this notice who was born in Antis Township. Blair County, Pa., October 31, 1841. He is the representative of a substantial old family of German ancestry, being the son of John and Mary Neff, also natives of the above-named State and county. The grandfather of our subject, Jonathan Neff, was likewise born in the Keystone State and on removing from New York to Blair County purchased a tract of land in the latter place which he farmed until his decease.

The father of our subject was reared in his native county, where his decease occurred in 1855. He had been married to Mary Chrisman, whose birth occurred in the county of which he was a native. Prior to her marriage with Mr. Neft, she was the wife of Lewis McCartney. In 1861, she came to Illinois and spent her last days in Flora Township, dying in 1865. She was the mother of three children: Jonathan, David, who died in infancy, and Martin B., our subject. The surviving brothers are associated together in farming and are more than ordinarily successful in their calling.

He of whom we write was a lad of twelve years when his father died and he continued to reside with his mother and attend school in seasons when not engaged upon the farm. When nineteen years of age, he came to Illinois and located on section 27, which is his present farm. In December, 1865, he was married to Martha E. McKee, who was born in this county, the daughter of Samuel McKee.

Mr. and Mrs. Neff are the parents of seven children: Zilda M., Mary, Bernice, Gertie, Wallace, Ralph and Harry. The mother is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and with her husband is connected with the Royal Neighbors' Lodge, Mr. Neff is a Republican in politics, and in social matters is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M., Flora Lodge No. 621, M. W. A., Excelsion Lodge No. 2654, P. of L. and during the war was a member of the Union League.

Elsewhere in this volume will be noticed a view of the attractive homestead of Mr. Neff.

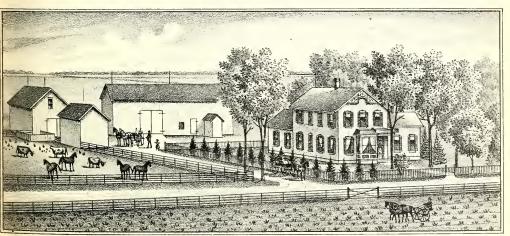

RANK E. HOLMES. This gentleman needs b little introduction to the people of Winnebago County, as he has long been recognized as one of the leading citizens of Rockford, where his birth occurred May 7, 1855. He is universally popular in both social and business circles and is possessed of more than ordinary ability, together with the energy and enterprise which seldom fail to win. He is at present residing in a beautiful home located at No. 1802 East State Street, a view of which is shown on another page, and which is finished and furnished in a manner that indicates its inmates to be people of education and means. The home farm of Mr. Holmes has been laid out in city lots, but has not yet been annexed. It is located in what is conceded to be the finest suburb of Rockford, and it is only a question of a short time until it will become a portion of the city.

Hollis II. Holmes, the father of our subject, was one of the pioneers of Rockford, having been a resident here since 1839, at which time he made the removal from Sparta, Elgin County, Canada. He was born in North East, Putnam County, N. Y., April 15, 1810. His father, William Holmes, was born in Greenwich, Fairfield County, Conn., on the 1st of June, 1779, and died in Danbury, the same State, when advanced in years Hollis II. Holmes when a young man went to Canada, where he learned the trade of a shoemaker, and was engaged in that business until his removal to Rockford, as above stated.

At the time the elder Mr. Holmes located in this county, the city of Rockford was little more than a hamlet and the surrounding country was mostly owned by the Government. Mr. Holmes followed his trade in the town for a time and in 1845 purchased a farm near the city, for which he paid $12 per acre and which includes one hundred and twenty acres. Chicago and Savanna were the nearest markets of the settlers, and they were thus obliged to live mostly off the products of the farm. The father of our subject soon established a nursery in this county, which he successfully operated until his decease, August 2, 1859. He was married, June 15, 1837, to Sarah Moore, a native of Sparta, Elgin County, Canada. Her father, John Moore, was a native of New York City, as was also the grandfather, who was a real-estate dealer. The latter-named gentleman removed from New York to Canada, where his decease occurred in Sparta.

The maternal grandfather of our subject went to Canada when a young man, where he was one of the pioneers of Elgin County. He purchased two thousand acres of land in Norwich, Oxford County, and eight hundred acres in Yarmouth Township, Elgin County. Upon the latter tracthet erected a log house, where he resided with the family until 1836, when a comfortable brick residence was constructed. Mr. Moore cleared six hundred acres of the estate where his decease occurred. In addition to farming, he dealt extensively in live stock, driving them through to St. Catherines, to Buffalo, and occasionally to New York City.

The maiden name of his wife, the grandmother of our subject, was Deborah C. Stockton, a native of New Jersey, and the daughter of John and Hester (Wilson) Stockton; she died at the home of her daughter in Norwich, when seventy-one years of age. The mother of our subject passed away in 1885 after having reared a family of three children: George House, Edward Moore and Frank E.

He of whom we write was educated in Rockford. which has always been his home. In 1890, the home farm was laid out in city lots and is now known as the "Highlands." Mr. Holmes was married, September 21, 1876, to Clara Wiley, who was born in Hanover, Jo Daviess County, III., and a daughter of Mead and Jane (Johnson) Wiley. The father of Mrs. Holmes was born in Philadelphia, Pa., and his father, Henry Wiley, hailed from Ireland and when making his home in this country located in Philadelphia. He finally came to Illinois and departed this life at Galena. The maiden name of his wife was Catherine Leighey, who died in Hanover, this State, firm in the faith of the Methodist Church. Mead Wiley was reared in Pennsylvania and going to Galena when a young man resided there for a few years and then settled on a tract of land in Hanover. In 1873. however, he went to Washington Territory, and now resides at San Juan, where he has a fine fruit farm. He was prominent in local affairs and served his fellow-townsmen as Justice of the Peace.

The mother of Mrs. Holmes, who was also born in England, came to this country when quite young, both of her parents dying while en route on the ocean. The mother died in Hanover, this State, at a good old age. To our subject and his wife have been born three children: George Edward, Hattie Wiley and Harry Ellsworth. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and, in politics, our subject votes with the Republican party. Socially, he belongs to the Riverside Camp No. 20, M. W. A.

WEN A. JOHNSON, one of the well-known Swedish residents of Rockford, and President of the Rockford Central Furniture Company, was born on the 12th of November, 1831, in Sweden. In his youth he learned the tailor's trade, which he followed until coming to America in the year 1852. Bidding good-bye to his old home, he sailed on the 13th of April, and, after a long and tedious voyage of forty-seven days, landed in New York City on the 30th of May. He afterward started Westward to Rockford, and along the way did journeyman work at Geneva and Elgin, arriving at his destunation in November. His parents never left their native land, but lived and died in Sweden. The father was eighty-four years of age at the time of his death. A sister and two brothers, however, followed our subject to this country and lived in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Mr. Johnson was married in Rockford to Miss Emily Peterson, who was born in Sweden in 1842, and when a maiden of ten summers came to this country and to Rockford, with her parents, C. N. and Johanna Peterson, who settled on a farm in Seward Township, where they made a good farm. Subsequently, they removed to Pecatonica, where Mr. Peterson is still living at the age of seventyfive years. His wife died in 1891, at the age of eighty years. They were both members of the Lutheran Church, and the parents of our subject were of the same belief. Nine children graced the union of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson: Hilma; Amanda, wife of August Peterson, of Rockford, Secretary of the Central Furniture Company; Eda D., bookkeeper for that company; Armer E., book-keeper in the Third National Bank; Victor M., a graduate of the High School, now assisting his father in business; Cora, Edmund M., and Maud and Linus (twins) are still under the parental roof. children have all been provided with good educational advantages, and their family is one of which the parents may well be proud.

Mr. Johnson is connected with many leading business enterprises of the city. In 1879, the Rockford Central Furniture Company was organized, and he has since been its President. They employ one hundred and twenty-five lands in the factory, and two commercial travelers are on the road selling their goods. Mr. Johnson is also a stockholder in the Star Furniture Company, the Royal Sewing Machine Company, recently organized, and has been Treasurer of the Swedish Building and Loan Association since it was established. He is a member of a land syndicate in this city, and other local enterprises, and is a stockholder in the Third National Bank. In 1862, he opened a merchant tailoring establishment, and some time later formed a partnership with John Erlander. About 1870, he established a gents' furnishing goods store, and in 1885 admitted to partnership G. A. Wanstrom, who had purchased John Erlander's interest. They now have a fine and well-kept store, 80x22 feet, located at No. 420 East State Street. Mr. Johnson is a man of excellent business ability, enterprising, sagacious and far-sighted. He has been successful in almost everything that he has undertaken, yet hard work has been required to achieve this prosperity. Upright and honorable in all things, he is a worthy and valued citizen, and too much cannot be said in praise of what he has done for Rockford and its interests. Himself and family are members of the First Swedish Lutheran Church, of which he was one of the organizers. It now has a membership of over two thousand, and is the leading church of its denomination in the city. He has also been its Trustee for many years. In politics, he is a stalwart Republican, and has served as Alderman of the Sixth Ward, He owns a comfortable residence at No. 402 Kishwankee Street. With his family he holds a high position in social circles, and well deserves the warm regard tendered them. This work would be incomplete without the sketch of Mr. Johnson, who is indeed one of the most prominent and influential citizens of Rockford.

OHN THORESON, the well-known and prosperous Norwegian citizen of Rockford, has now retired from the active duties of life, and is spending the remainder of his days in the enjoyment of the accumulation of former years. He resides at No. 330 South Main Street, and there enjoys the rest and quiet becoming his years. He also owns other property on that street, and recently refused $20,000 for it.

Our subject was born in Christiana, Norway, April 16, 1820, and, as he grew to manhood, learned the wagon and carriage makers' trade, following business on his own account for five years before coming to the States. He was seven weeks in crossing the ocean, and after reaching this country he located in Chicago, Ill., where he was engaged in business for two years before coming to Rockford. He was the only one of the family to come to the United States. His only brother, Fredrick Thoreson, was born in 1815, and was a Lutheran elergyman until his death, in 1876. He was a prominent man in his native province, and carried on his ministerial duties in Trondhjem all his life.

The parents, Thor and Adelaide (Olson) Syverson, were natives of Norway, and there passed their entire lives, both living to a good old age. The father was a shoemaker by trade, a good and worthy man, and a quiet and unassuming citizen. He and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church of their native city, and were active workers in the same.
